Now let us make an application, and see whether it harmonizes with the order of baptism. Faith, as defined by lexicographers is given as follows. Active belief; trust in God; trust in Christ as the Savior; doctrine or tenants; believed creek; fidelity; constancy; confidence; sincerity; hope. Now according to the divine will of Heaven, we can believe in the trine God, which characterizes this one faith. Then we ask, why should not an immersion in each of these names of the Holy Trinity constitute one baptism? If the former is logical, the latter certainly is. If any should inquire, how can three immersions constitute one baptism? we answer, how can three persons exist in the godhead?

Before we close our remarks on the order of Christian baptism, we feel to present a few biographical sketches of ancient writers.

Turtullion, the oldest of the latin fathers, says: "We die symbolically in baptism."

Chrysostom says: "To be dipped and plunged into water, and then to rise up out of it again, is a symbol of our descent into the grave, and our ascent out of it."

Gustin Martyr, in his Apology before the Roman Emperor, says of those who dedicate themselves to God through Christ: "Upon their commission they are brought to a place of water, and washed in the name of God the Father. Moreover the person baptized and illuminated, is baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus, and in the name of the Holy Ghost. Basil, Arch-bishop of Cesar, puts the following question, in his last sermon to the Catechumens before baptism. "How can we be placed in a condition of likeness to his death? Answer: by being buried with him in baptism. How are we to go down with him into the grave? By imitating the burial of Christ in baptism; for the bodies of the baptized are in a sense buried in water. By thrice immersions we administer this important ceremony of baptism, that death may be represented in a figure." Dupin says: "In the first three centuries they plunged those three times in water."

Chysostom claims that the commission plainly taught us, three dippings in baptism; for he says: "Christ delivered to his disciples three immersions in one baptism, by dipping the body thrice, face forward, under the water."

Thus you see we might present a host of witnesses in favor of trine immersion, by those who practice single immersion themselves; and we truly feel to tender our thanks for the correctness of the language. May we all learn to cultivate a close intimacy with Jesus, is my prayer.

JACOB T. MYERS.

Somerset, Pa.

HOW TO ENJOY LIFE.—It is wonderful to what an extent people believe happiness depends on not being obliged to labor. Honest, hearty, contented labor is the only source of happiness, as well as the only guaranty of life. The gloom of misanthropy is not only a great destroyer of happiness we might have, but it tends to destroy life itself. Idleness and luxury induce premature decay much faster than many trades regarded as the most exhaustive and fatal to longevity Labor in general, instead of shortening the term of life, actually increases it. It is the lack of occupation that annually destroys so many of the wealthy, who, having nothing to do, play the part of drones, and, like them, make a speedy exit, while the busy bee fills out its days in usefulness and honor.

That conduct sometimes seems ridiculous, the secret reason of which may perhaps be wise and solid.

We use riches as children use toys — to amuse us till we fall asleep.

The Last Good Night.

Close her eye-lids, press them gently
O'er the dim and leaden eyes,
For the soul that made them lovely
Hath returned in to the skies;
Wipe the death drops from her forehead,
Sever one dear golden tress,
Fold her icy hands all meekly,
Smooth the snowy little dress;
Scatter flowers o'er her pillow—
Gentle flowers, so pure and white—
Lay this bud upon her bosom:
There—now softly say, Good night!

Though our tears flow fast and faster,
Yet we would not call her back,
We are glad her feet no longer
Tread life's rough and stormy track;
We are glad our Heavenly Father
Took her while her heart was pure,
We are glad he did not leave her
All life's trials to endure;
We are glad—and yet the tear drop
Falleth: for, alas! we know
That our fireside will be lonely,
We shall miss our darling so.

While the twilight shadows gather,
We shall wait in vain to feel
Little arms all white and dimpled,
Round our necks so softly steal,
Our wet cheeks will miss the pressure
Of sweet lips as warm and red,
And our bosoms sadly, sadly
Miss that darling little head,
Which was wont to rest there sweetly,
And those gentle eyes so bright,
We shall miss their loving glances,
We shall miss their soft Good night.

When the morrow's sun is shining,
They will take this cherished form,
They will bear it to the church-yard,
And consign it to the worm;
Well—what matter? It is only
The clay dress our darling wore;
God hath robed her as an angel,
She had need of this no more;
Fold her hands, and o'er her pillow
Scatter flowers, all pure and white,
Kiss that marble brow and whisper,
Once again, a last Good night.

For the Companion.

Gog, the Man of Sin.

(Concluded.)

By making the Roman Pontiff, the prototype of Gog, and commencing his reign at A. D. 612, 1260 would fall in with 1872. But the Turk or Sultan, the prototype of Gog, and commence with the year A. D. 636, and 1260 more will fall in with 1896; add 75 days more, and we hav 1971, which is 99 years difference between us. This no doubt will take us not far from the end, and, is time sufficiently long for God to lead the old Sultan out of Palestine, and make room for Jacob in the land of Israel, for the rebuilding of his country.—When nations or kingdoms stand in the way of the fulfilment of God's word, he can overthrow or move them around very quickly; as in the case of France, Prussia, and Italy, in the overthrow of the Pope's temporal power. So when the time fully arrives, God will put hooks into the old Sultan's jaws, and lead him back out of the land of Israel. Ezek. 38: 4. When God puts his hook into his jaws, however stubborn he may be, he must lead right along out of the way, and Israel will return home and build up his father-land, that always, or for many years, has been laid waste. Ezek. 38: 8. All the wealth that Israel has accumulated from us Gentiles, for the last 1800 years, will be carried there; those waste places re-inhabited; towns and villages built up; the city rebuilt; the Jews all again and forever at home. Enjoying the fat of their land, which is in the greatest degree of prosperity.

But Israel must have one more trial. And the covetous Gog, who is close by and sees the many towns and unwalled villages, (for they have not yet had time to wall them,) and the immense wealth and prosperity of the land, "An evil thought," will now enter his mind, to take a great prey. The Lord will turn him back again. (Ezek. 39: 2.) He shall ascend and come like a storm—like a cloud shall they cover the land, he and all his bands with him, to take a spoil and great prey, and turn his hand upon the desolate places that are now uninhabited, to the people that are gathered out of the nations, that have gotten cattle and goods: "I will go up to the land of unwalled villages to take a great prey." Ezek. 38; 9–12. And Gog "shall come up against my people Israel, as a cloud to cover the land: it shall be in the latter day." (16th verse) Israel will fight, but very soon is driven back into the city. Gog with his forces enter and take half of the city forth into captivity. (Zech. 14: 2.)

Dear reader, why did not Gog take the other half, also? Ah! the earth begins to shake and quake; the heaven opens, and the Lord roars on high, he utters his voice from his holy habitation. He shall mightily roar: a noise shall come even to the end of the earth. The Lord shall go forth and fight against those nations. His feet shall stand on the mount of Olives, east of Jerusalem, in that day." (Zech. 14: 3, 4.) The tide of battle is turned; the Lord fights for Israel; Gog is slain on the mountains of Israel, all but a sixth part of him. Israel shall take a great prey; he shall rob those that robbed them. Thus this mighty host of Gog, fell on the mountains of Israel, all but the sixth part of him.—Ezek. 39th chapter. This ends the career of Gog, until after the millenium.

Israel is now converted: "I looked and, lo, a Lamb stood upon mount Sion, with him an hundred and forty-four thousand, having their Father's name written in their foreheads."—These follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth." Rev. 14: 1, 4. These are Jewish Christians: twelve thousand of each of the twelve tribes of Israel. Rev. 14: 4—8. These, in our opinion, will take an important part in the conversion of the Jews, which will be now and forever complete. But the battle of the great day of God Almighty, which, when done, will forever set aside the power of the sword. The Lord has come, and "a noise shall come even to the ends of the earth; for the Lord shall have a controversy with the nations."

Evil shall go forth from nation to nation; and the slain of the Lord be from one end of the earth to the other: "they shall not be buried, but shall be as dung upon the ground." Jer. 25: 31—33. Gog was destroyed and buried on the mountains of Israel, while these, including the man of sin, were destroyed and left long unburied in the open world, and devoured by the fowls of the air, &c.—This conflict, is, as it were, heaven and earth engaged in battle; for the Lord is represented as coming with the armies of heaven, all riding upon white horses, to make war against the beast and kings of the earth, when the beast and the false prophet, will be cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, and their armies he destroyed by the sword of him that sits on the white horse, and the blood will flow to the horses bridles, (Rev. 19: 19—21; 14: 19—20) for 1600 furlongs, or 258 miles Here is the end of the power of the sword; the victory of Christ is complete: he is the only potentate King of kings & Lord of lords.

But now the old Turkish Magog that at first in the shape of locusts came up out of the bottomless pit, (Rev. 9: 1, 3,) and was afterwards destroyed on the mountains of Israel, all but the sixth part of them—these together with the dragon, the devil and Satan, will be again consigned to the bottomless pit, where Satan will be bound and have power to deceive the nations no more, until the thousand years are ended. Rev. 20: 1, 3. Here he will be cooped up; the world will be free from his satanic power; when the seventh trumpet angel will declare the kingdom of this world, to have become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ. Rev. 11: 15. The powers of the sword are fallen; the glorious era of a thousand years of universal peace begins. Here an angel is seen flying through the midst of heaven, having the everlasting Gospel to preach to all nations, "Saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come. Babylon the great city is fallen,"—Rev. 14: 7, 8.

Brother and sister, cheer up; stand fast to your integrity, always abounding in the love of God; for we are nearing the times when we shall be priests of God and of his Christ; and we shall reign with him a thousand years. But the world is to have one more scourge of the devil and his hosts. "And when the thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison. And he shall go out to deceive the nations of the earth. Gog and Magog, to gather them to battle." "They went up on the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city, and fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them." Rev. 20: 6, 9.—Here is the end of the opposers of God. "The devil that deceived them was cast in the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and false prophets are, and will be tormented, day and night, forever and ever."—The man of sin was destroyed at the commencement of the Millennium, and Gog not until after. This shows the difference again, between the man of sin and Gog.

Brethren and sisters, as our esteemed brother D. P. S. has admonished us, let us be up and a doing for important things are not far off. But let us do as the Lord commanded Daniel "Go thy way till the end be; for thou shalt rest and stand in thy lot at the end of these days." Dan. 13: 13. A. LEEDY JR.

Antioch, Ind

"Whose is This Image and Superscription?"

BY H H HALL.

Christ put this question to the Pharisees. They had made effort to entangle him in talk. But he saw into their vile and deceitful hearts, and frustrated their designs. They wished to prove him a traitor to his country. He had often rebuked them severely on account of their prejudices and sins. He endeavored to impress upon them vital truths and secure their loyalty to the Father. They supposed if they plied him therefore with the question, "Is it lawful to give tribute unto Cæsar, or not?" he would give them an opportunity to bring a charge against him of being an enemy to the government. But how sublimely he steers clear of the snare they set! They bring to him a penny. And, as if to make them condemn themselves, he says to them, "whose is this image and superscription?" When they answer, Cæsar's, he says "Render, therefore, unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's and unto God the things that are God's." Of course they left him and went their way. Everything has upon it an image or impress. That impress it receives from its author or architect. A book has something in it which enables us as we read, to learn much of the life and character of the man who wrote it. The mechanic leaves upon his work a mark which causes us often to say, "It looks like him." Much of a man's inner life we may also know from what he does. If he is sloven in his appearance and habits he is apt to be so in his very thoughts. In every way it is true that we can know a tree by its fruits. We remember just now of having stood by a man who was opening a box of goods which he had received from one of the eastern cities. As he removed one article after another from its safe and careful enclosure we heard him remark, "I like that house I know how they do business their from the way they pack their goods." Those men in New York city did not imagine perhaps that while they were in the act of packing those goods they were at the same time putting away into that box their image, and that the clerk in a far distant town would read their true character in that box.

God's image is also upon all His works. "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork" "For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead. "The Psalmist had been contemplating the wonders of the creation and was struck with the mighty power therein manifested, when he exclaimed, "When I consider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which thou hast ordained, what is man that thou art mindful of him? and the Son of man that thou visitest him? Who, as he looks upon this beautiful earth, can help being impressed with the infinite wisdom and beneficence which the Creator everywhere manifests. Nature images forth the character of the Almighty, and by frequent and close communion with her we become acquainted with God and with His attributes. The flowers are tinted by Jehovah's pencil. He fringes them and gives them their fragrance. He causes the mountains to bring forth food, and the beasts of the field to play. The bottom of the sea he paves with shells, and the wilderness is caused to sing forth his praise. The infidel, as he pauses to reflect upon the things that are about him, cannot help wondering at the goodness and the intelligence they indicate. And whether he takes into his view only the beautiful landscape, or whether he lifts his vision higher and peers through the illimitable space above and beyond him, in his innermost being, the question arises, "Whose is this image and superscription?" But the grandest of all God's works is the regeneration of the human soul. Hence we have there the most sublime portrayal of His image and likeness. The Christian is like God. He has His impress upon him. And the more complete the work of renewal and regeneration in the soul has been, the more fully does God's image and likeness shine forth in the individual. Christ gets into men and prevades their very being, so that they gradually partake his nature The follower of Jesus is loving and kind, gentle and meek, as he was like the Man of Nazareth he sets his face in the direction of duty and truth and all the powers that be, cannot swerve him from them.

Every man has upon him the impress of God or the devil There will be a time when the inquiry will be made, "Whose is this image and superscription?" Reader, whose?

Common sense is nature investigated and obeyed.

MISCELLANEOUS.

An Impromptu.

And aged man lay dying!
Beside his couch stood one
On whom he'd lavished wealth & love,
It was his only son!

He stood unmoved, and gazed awhile,
And then he turned away;
Matters of worldly interest,
Forbade his longer stay.

He left his aged parent
With menials alone to die!
While he went forth to business,
With a bright and tearless eye.

And when again he saw that face
The vital spark had fled;
The father that so loved his son,
Was numbered with the dead!

But yet no tender feelings
Seemed to pervade his breast,
His mein was high and haughty,
And his mind seemed quite at rest.

Perhaps he might be thinking
Of the GOLD there was in store,
Instead of the poor, shriveled form,
That he was standing o'er.

But well could he remember
That form in manhood's prime;
So full of life and vigor,
Ere touched by frosts of time.

And soon his own bright manhood,
Must wither and decay;
And like his angel parent,
In death's embrace he'll lay.

Will HE not want affection shown
In that sad, bitter hour;
When early things are fleeting,
And GOLD has lost its power?

Ah! what is like affection
From those we hold most dear;
When hues of earth are fading,
And death is drawing near.

How a Preacher was Bothered By an Auditor.

A Wisconsin paper tells the following story:

One who does not believe in immersion for baptism, was holding a protracted meeting, and one night preached on the subject of baptism. In the course of his remarks, he said some believe it to be necessary to go down into the water and come up out of it, to be baptized. But this he claimed to be a fallacy, for the preposition "into" of the Scriptures should be rendered differently, as it does not mean into at all times. "Moses," he said, "we are told, went up into the mountain, and the Savior was taken into a high mountain, etc. Now, we do not suppose that either went into the mountain, but upon it. So with going down into the water—it means simply going down close by or near to the water, and being baptized in the ordinary way by sprinkling."

He carried this idea out fully, and in due season and style closed his discourse, when an invitation was given to all who felt so disposed, to rise and express their thoughts.—Quite a number of them arose and said that they were glad that they had been present on this occasion; that they were well pleased with the sound sermon they had just heard, and felt their souls greatly blessed.—Finally a corpulent gentlemen, of Teutonic extraction, a stranger to all, arose, and broke the silence that was almost painful, as follows:

"Mister Breacher, I ish so gladt I vash here to-night, for I has had explained to my mindt some tings dat I never could pelief pefore. Oh, I ish so gladt dat into does not mean into at all, put shust close py or near to, for now I can pelieve manish tings vot I could not pelief pefore. We read, Mister Breacher, that Taniel vas cast into the ten of lions, and came out a life. Now I neber could pelief that, for de wilt peasts would shust eat him up right off; put now it ish ferry clear to my mindt. He vas shust close py or near to, and tid not get into the ten at all. Oh, I ish so gladt I vas here to-night!

"Again we read dat de Hebrew children vas cast into de firish furnace, and dat air alwish lookt like a peeg story, too, for they would have peen purnt up; put it ish all plain to my mindt now, for they were shusts cast close py or near to de firish furnace. Oh, I vash so gladt I vash here to-night!

"And den, Mister Breacher, it ish said dat Jonah vas cast into de sea and take into de walesh belly. Now I never could pelief dat. It alwaysh seemed to me to pe a peeg feesh story, put it ish all plain to my mindt now; he vash not taken into de whalesh pelly at all, put shust shumped onto his pack and rode ashore. Oh, I vash so gladt I vash here to-night!

"And now, Mister Breacher, if you will shust explain two more bashages of Scriptures, I shall pe, oh! so happy dat I vash here to-night! One of them is vere it saish de vicked shall pe cast into a lake that purns vish fire and primstone always. Oh, Mister Breacher! shall I pe cast into that lake if I am vicked? or shust close by or near to—shust near enough to pe comfortable? Oh, I hope you tell me I shall be cast shust py a good vay off, and I vill pe so gladt I vas here to-night! The other bashage is that which saish, 'Plessed are they who do these commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, an enter in through the gates into the city.' Oh, tell me I shall gets into the city, and not shust close py or near to—shust near enough to see vat I have lost—and I shall pe so gladt I vas here to-night!"

He sat down, with the impression made on many minds present, that it would do to take the Bible for only what it clearly says.

Lowliness of Jesus.

Jesus was the highest in the heavensand yet he was the lowliest of all on earth. The spirit of pride, of self-exaltation, to him was unknown, whether receiving the adoration of heaven's hierarchs or mingling with the lowliest of earth. And it was not mere humility in word and action, but he was "lowly in heart."

In his primal exaltation, he counted it not robbery to be equal with God; he created all things, and in him did they consist; he upheld all things, by the word of his power; he received the worship of all the heavenly host. After his resurrection all power was committed to his hands, he was styled the King of kings, and at the right hand of the Father he receives worship which is to be eternal. If the spirit of exaltation common to man could prevail with Jesus in a degree corresponding with his real elevation, how great, how insupportable great, would be the pride and arrogance of the immortal King. But the highest of all, alone of all on earth, never, in the least degree, cherished this pride. Never in the least did it have dominion over him. With him their was never contempt for the weakness of man; never was he indifferent to the wants or woes of fallen humanity. In true happiness of man he rejected, and over their real woe he wept. The condescension of his companionship was, and still is, astonishing. Never has friendship known his like; and who among the myriads of earth has ever been so companionable as he? But how low did he descend? Not lower than he was lowly in heart. The child of poverty, born in a stable, cradled in a manger, his first earthly habiliments rags, he became the son of toil and afterward the weary traveler; and though the Maker of the universe, he was not even tenant enough on earth to have where to lay his head. What he wanted in wealth he made up in the plenitude of his labors, sorrows, wrestling prayers, and sympathizing tears. How precious is such an example. How rebuking to our pride is such a life as his, and such a character.

Honor is a blessing which God has conferred on many for a reward; but in what spirit should it be received and worn? The example of Jesus alone will tell. In what spirit does he wear his glories upon the throne, and in what spirit do saints and angels receive their honors from his hand? May we not rejoice that the pride which cleaves so tenaciously to fallen humanity is unknown among the inhabitants of the celestial city? Of true exaltation pride is neither a component nor attendant. What a rebuke does vanity receive from Christ's example and teachings, and how free from it must we be before we are fitted for his eternal companionship. How despicable, how contemptible, is that pride, that self-exaltation, which is ever as ready to betray as it is to degrade us.

Is any one afflicted with this pride of heart? Does he inquire how it is to be cured? We can only refer him to the great Physician who can cure the heart's maladies. Christ can show him the plague of his soul, reveal the loathsomeness of all that pertains to his heart outside of grace. His shortcomings and his positive wickedness will furnish a lesson before which self-exaltation will retire, rebuke, and be ashamed. If any would not cherish this pride, he must be careful to hinder its being fed. Not only must he not feed it himself, but he must, as far as in his power, prevent others from feeding it. Many pamper it and yet fancy themselves model Christians. If we would properly consider our follies, we should diminish both it and them. It is to be feared that many who make pretensions to Christianity are radically wrong in their views with reference to this vanity. Jesus said, learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart." A disciple of Christ is a learner; and this precept for the government of the heart is one of those most essential to be learned. In Christian character there is no purer, lovelier gem than lowliness of heart. Excellence in it is as precious as it is rare.

The Workingman's Home.

A pleasant, comfortable Home it seems. A large room, with a blazing in the grate, and the clock ticking on the wall, the looking-glass and pincushion hanging over the table, and the mother with her baby in her lap, listening to the eager story the children are telling her about a poor, dead bird.

The workingman himself, is away at his work. He is one of the "tin kettle brigade." We see them every morning, if we are up early enough, going to their work, carrying their noon lunch. For twenty years the owner of this pleasant home has gone and come, scarcely missing a day in all that time; always with plenty of work on hand, and strength to do it; always with a good dinner in his tin pail. Why shouldn't he be contented? He has a cheerful home, a good wife, and loving, healthy children.—Some one was asking him one day, how it was that he was so much better off than many of his fellow-workmen. His answor is worth remembering,

"Since I was of age, I have saved enough to buy this little homestead. It is a little house, plainly furnished, but it is a home to me; and it is all paid for. I have one little room in my cottage which I call my 'snuggery.' In it I have two or three hundred good books. You see, sir, twenty years ago, when I was beginning life, I calculated how much it cost a moderate drinker a year for liquor, and made up my mind to spend that sum for books. I made the same calculation about cigars and tobacco, and about theatres and Sunday pleasures. And now, sir, I have a valuable library and a good home out of these savings."

Out of these savings! Did his pleasant home come by chance? No, it has been purchased by temperance, industry, and good sense, and God's blessing crowns the whole.

Economy in a Family.

Their is nothing that goes so far towards placing the young people beyond the reach of poverty as economy in the management of household affairs. It matters not whether a man furnishes little or much for his family, if their is a continual leakage in his kitchen or parlor; it runs away, he knows not how, and that demon, Waste, cries, "More!" like the horseleech's daughter, until he that provided has no more to give. It is the husband's place to bring into the house, and it is the duty of the wife to see that none goes wrongfully out of it. A man gets a wife to look after his affairs and assist him in his journey through life; to educate and prepare their children for a proper station in life, and not to dissipate his property. The husband's interest should be the wife's care, and her greatest ambition to carry her no farther than his welfare or happiness, together with that of her children. This should be her sole aim, and the theater of her exploits in the bosom of her family, where she may do as much towards making a fortune as he can in a counting house or workshop. It is not the money earnd that makes a man wealthy, it is what he saves from his earnings. Self gratification, in dress, or in appetite, or more company than his purse can well entertain, are equally pernicious. The first adds vanity to extravagance, the second fastens a doctor's bill to a long butcher's account, and the latter brings intemperance, the worst of all evils.

DYING.—Their is a dignity in going away alone, which we call dying, that wrapping of the mantle of immortality about us; that putting aside with a pale hand the azure curtains that are drawn around this cradle of the world; that venturing away from home for the first time in our lives, for we are dead, and seeing foreign countries not laid down on any maps we have read about. There must be lovely lands somewhere strayward for none ever return who go thither, and we very much doubt if any would if they could.

The Narrow Way.

Far from my heavenly home,
With young and careless feet,
Thro' life's bewildering ways I roam,
Where sin and pleasure meet.

I love the narrow way,
By holy pilgrims trod;
Nor ever, willingly, would stray
From duty and from God.

But ofttimes, alas!
In my unthinking hours,
Beyond the sacred bounds I pass
To pluck forbidden flowers.

And yet, full well I know
Sharp thorns those flowers conceal,
And tears of penitence must flow
Before their wounds will heal.

And ofttimes I creep,
With slow and painful tread,
Along some bare and rugged steep,
Whence every joy seems fled.

And that full well I know,
That angels round me throng,
And should my footsteps backward go,
'Twould sadden their sweet song.

Thou who wert once a child,
Where'er thou leadest me,
O'er flowery slope or rugged wild,
I still would follow thee.

No earthly joy can charm
If far from thee I rove,
And not an ill my soul can harm,
When sheltered by thy love.

—Little Corporal.

CORRESPONDENCE

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

To a Sister in the Lord.

Dear Sister in the Lord: after I came away from your house this evening, and mused over our conversation, I thought of a great many things I should like to have said but sometimes it seems as though we cannot think of the right words in the right place.

My heart was rather heavy this morning when I started over to your house; in fact, I went to bed with a heavy heart last night. In the evening I had heard of some remarks made against the faith we love, and try to practice, by persons whom I have a great desire, and sometimes a faint hope, that they may see better. And being necessarily kept awake by my little boy, I thought a great deal about it; it seemed as though we were evil spoken of on every side—that our faith was misrepresented by our enemies, through envy and malice. This was a pretty hard trial to me; as I am almost too desirous of having the good will of everybody. I felt as though we were despised upon the earth; and then my thoughts turned to him who has said: "Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake;" and I prayed for an increase of faith and strength, that I might be better enabled to bear these trials.

But when I came to your house, and saw your affliction, and heard your grievances, I forgot my own; I felt as though your's were greater than mine. As you cannot often meet with the brethren and sisters in public worship, it deprives you of a great deal of comfort and encouragement. The disease you are afflicted with, is very apt to cause melancholy and low spirits; and that makes it harder for you to bear other trials.

You know my husband and I both started in the good cause at the same time; and he being brought up in the faith, was much stronger in the same than I was; and I have often though, if it had not been for his firmness, my faith might have been shipwrecked long ago. You have not that comfort; although I believe your husband fully sympathizes with you, in your trials, and is just as kind as a man can be to his wife, yet he cannot be the same comfort to you that he would be, if he were united in the same spirit with you.

But do not give up hope; it is an anchor to the soul. You have recourse to prayer; and the prayers of the righteous availeth much. Paul says: "For how knowest thou, O woman, but that thou mayest save thy husband." I believe he already has the faith; and the time may come, when he will be persuaded to be a christian. Think of sister D. F. I suppose she has told you how anxious and troubled she was, and how she almost gave up hope, of winning him over to the fold of Christ; but at last her desires were granted, and her trouble about that was over.

But we must expect trials and afflictions here; as it is through much tribulation that we shall enter heaven. I always feel upon examining myself, that I do not deny myself enough—that I do not take the yoke fully upon me. We must bear the cross, if we expect to wear the crown; in order to enjoy rest we must be weary. The greater our tribulations here, the greater will be our happiness there. I believe it would be easier for us to bear trials, if we would keep in mind what our Savior bore for us. His bodily suffering was great; but the minds of us poor mortals, cannot conceive what his mental agony must have been, when in the garden of Gethsemane he sweat as it were great drops of blood falling to the ground.

You spoke of love; and I have often thought about it. We may live a life of self-denial, and suffer afflictions, and even give our body to be burned, and if we have not love, it will avail us nothing. We must have love to God and man. We must not only love our brethren, and our neighbors, but our enemies also. It seems to me this is the hardest thing for the Christian to do. Love our enemies! it is not possible for us to do it, unless we draw daily and hourly from that fountain of love, which upon the cross could say: "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." And I believe that if there were more of the fruits of the Spirit, manifested among the Brethren there would be more sinners constrained to glorify God.

LUCINDA WEAVER.

Brother Henry: In Companion, No. 10, I find the question asked: "Who are the least esteemed in the Church?" The passage referred to, we find in 1 Cor. 6: 4, where the Apostle rebukes the Corinthians for going to law before the unjust, and not before the saints." "But brother goeth to law with brother, and that before the unbelievers." In the 4th verse, he finds fault with them, where he says, "If then ye have judgments of things pertaining to this life, set them to judge who are least esteemed in the church. In the 5th verse, he says: "I speak to your shame. Is it so, that there is not a wise man among you? no, not one that is able to judge between his brethren?"

Now if we read the whole connection, from the beginning of the chapter to the ninth verse, I think it is very plain that the apostle means those unbelieving judges, whom they

"set," or appoint, to judge or settle their difficulties

The apostle does not say that they shall "set them to judge who are least esteemed" &c.; but rebukes them for so doing; and in the first verse, gives them to understand that they should go before the saints, instead of the unjust, or unbelievers. The unbelievers are least esteemed in the church, because of their unbelief: they are children of the world, and therefore, not in favor with God; and consequently esteemed less by God's people than the saints.

Some of the German translations make it very plain that such is the meaning.

JOSEPH MYERS.

East Berlin, Pa.

Brother Holsinger: I thought that money was so scarce it was not worth while for me to try to fill my quota, but after seeing repeated solicitations, I thought I would try, and if I did not get any, it would be but little labor lost, and I would feel like as if I had done my part. So I have tried. Some said they would like to take the Companion, but did not have the money; we told them you sometimes sent the paper to brethren on time, they said they would take it if you would wait on them until after harvest. So I have got four subscribers, hope it will make up for long delay.

S. E. CART.

Dear Brother: Enclosed you will find one dollar and fifty cents, for which please send me the Companion for a year, as I cannot do well without it, after being used to reading it since I was a child; and now I am a weak member of the church, and like to hear from my dear brethren and sisters, and the prosperity of the Church, and the holy doctrines of our blessed Savior, as I think it a blessing to the children of God, and will aid and strengthen us in the faith and knowledge of our blessed Master.

ANNIE K. MEYERS.

Somerset, Pa.

Announcements.

Black River, Mich, June 17th and 18th.
Otter Creek, Ill's, June 18th and 19th.
Sandy Creek, W. Va., June 24th, 2 P. M.
Near Rivers Falls, Wis., June 18th.
Near Menomonie, Wis., June 20th.
Near Rock Fal's, Wis., June 22nd.
Thorn Apple, Mich., June 11th.

LIST OF MONEYS received for subscription, books, &c.,

Levi Gockley,	$0.90	S. Leckron,	.75
John Keim,	1.50	Hannah Knauff,	,75
Annie K. Myers,	1,50	Mrs. S. E. Cart,	2,00
L. Longanecker,	2,25	D. Blickenstaff,	,75

Advertisements.

WE will admit a limited number of select advertisements at the following rates.
One insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.
No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations.

BOOKS
GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with Interlineary Word for word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price, $4.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave" and "How to do Business," in one vol., $2.25. Indispensable.

Life at Home; or the Family and its MEMBERS—Including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed. The Altar in the House, etc. By Wm. Aikman. $1.50; full gilt, $2.

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. THOMPSON. Fancy Cloth $1.00.

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand-book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners, with a Chart for recording the sizes of the different Organs of the Brain, in the Delineation of Character, with upwards of 170 Engravings. $1. Muslin, $1.25.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50. Extra gilt $2.

Oratory Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary Rules. By W. PITTENGER. $1.50.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Beautifully illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth, gilt, bevelled boards. Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth 75 cents.

Any of the above sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

The Phrenological Journal, An Illustrated. First Class Family Magazine devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $2.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL and CHRISTIAN FAMILY COMPANION together for $2.50 or with the PIOUS YOUTH for $2.50. We commend the JOURNAL to all who want a good Family Magazine and who does not?

All orders should be accompanied with the money, and in case of personal remittances, carefully and clearly written, to insure prompt attention. Address H. L. HOLSINGER, Tyrone, Pa.

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid	0 75
12 copies, post paid	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	$0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN & ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid	$1.00
Per dozen,	10.30

Turkey Morocco, Ger. & Eng.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	13.30

Plain Single German

One copy, post paid	.50
Per dozen" "	$5 50

The Christian Harp, containing 32 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP.

Per dozen, post paid.	$0.30
Per hundred, post paid,	1.50

Marriage Certificates.

On good, heavy paper, per doz., post paid,	0.30
" " per hundred, "	2.40
COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.70
Reserved at the office,	2.25
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40

BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.

Single copy, Post Paid	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express,	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	60
German & English Testaments,	.75

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Revised New Testament.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25

32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid	25
25 copies to one person, by express,	5.00
Roan binding, red edges, post paid	50

Where one or two dozen is wanted, in places adjacent to Railroads, they may be sent cheaper by express.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price $6.00 per dozen. One copy 60 cents.

Sure Cure for Gapes.

I have discovered a sure cure for gapes, in chickens and turkeys, which I have tested for two years. Costs a mere trifle. No more dusting, worm catching, &c. I will send the recipe, with a number of practical hints on poultry raising, post paid, for one dollar, and if applied as directed, and no benefit is derived from it, I will refund the money.

Address LEVI ANDES,
Lewistown, Pa. 13-4tc. pd.

TRACTS.—Religious dialogue, 12 pages five cents single copy; thirty cents a doz. All orders should be accompanied with the money, and the name of person, postoffices county & state written in unmistakable letters

Address,

H. R. HOLSINGER, Tyrone Pa

The Great Remedy.

Those who are prejudiced against anything new should know that Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea was used in practice by old Dr. P. Fahrney of Washington county, Md., as far back as 1789. It is now put up in bottles but the medicinal properties are the same. Unlike anything else in market it can be taken with benefit in all diseases from a bad cold to a violent fever From a ringworm to a bad case of scrofula or cancer. Infants can take it as well as the aged and feeble, and sells readily wherever it is known. Will be sent upon the most liberal terms to those who will introduce the same among their neighbors. Many have done well by ordering. For particulars and references address Dr. P. Fahrney, No 30, North Dearborn St. Chicago, Illinois, or

The "Health Messenger" a medical circular to any address upon application to

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.
Waynesboro, Pa.

To Nebraska, California, and Kansas, and the B. & M. R. R. Lands.

The "Burlington Route," as called, lies right in the path of the Star of Empire. It runs almost immediately in the center of the great westward movement of emigration. Crossing Illinois and Iowa, it strikes the Missouri river at three points.

These three points are the gateways into three great sections of the trans-Missouri region.

The Northern gate is Omaha, where the great Pacific road will take you to the land of gold and grapes, sunny mountains, and perpetual summer.

The middle gate is Plattsmouth, which opens upon the south half of Nebraska, south of the Platte river, a region unsurpassed on the continent for agriculture and grazing. Just here are the B. & M. Railroad lands, concerning which Geo. S. Harris, the land officer at Burlington, Iowa, can give you all information, and in the heart of them is Lincoln, the State Capital and present terminus of the road.

The Southern gate leads to Kansas, by connections with the St. Joe Road at Hamburg running direct to St. Joe and Kansas City

The trains of the Burlington run smoothlyq and safely, and make all connections. It runs the best of coaches, Pullman Palace and Pullman dining cars, and should you take the journey for the journey's sake alone, you will be repaid; or take it to find a home or a farm, and you cannot find either better than among the B. & M. lands, where you can buy on ten years' credit, and at a low price.

Tyrone Bank.
TYRONE, Pa.

This Bank, intending to do a general banking business, solicits accounts from Banks, Bankers and others. Collections made on all points. Interest allowed on DEPOSITS left on time. Paper discounted on liberal terms

Wm. P. Orbison,	D. I. Gwin,
John Scott,	H. G. Fisher,
Thomas Fisher,	J. H. Glazier,
Wm. Dorris,	G. C. Wilrins,
G. W. Garretson,	and others.

Beers' Expanding Scroll Water-wheel.

[Patented 1868] This wheel is now running with the overshot, in a Flouring Mill, and is using less water than the overshot. Inventor being a Millwright, and having seen and used all the new waterwheels, does not hesitate to say it is the first iron wheel that can compete with the overshot, and is one half cheaper, simpler and better. For farther information address J. L. Beers and Sons, Millwrights and Manufacturer's of wheel shafting and mill gearing of all kinds, continued Sawmill feed and Sawmill irons.

J. L. Beers & Sons

Cocolamus, Juniata Co. Pa.

THE PIOUS YOUTH.

A MONTHLY PUBLICATION

Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.

It comes about as near pleasing everybody as any paper published.

One dollar a year in advance.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,

ALDEN'S READY BOOK BINDER.—An article for universal use! For filing or Binding Books, Magazines, Papers, Music, Sermons, Manuscripts, etc., etc. See them at Book Stores and News Stands, or send stamp for circulars, or 25 cents for sample, saying where you saw this advertisement, to BRIGHT SIDE CO., Manufacturers, Chicago, Ill.

SHORT HAND WRITING.—Students of Phonography and all others who are interested in the art can obtain instruction books. Send stamp for price list and tracts.

"AMERICAN PHONETIC DEPOT.
Tyrone, Pa.

J. S. THOMAS, & CO.
WHOLESALE GROCERS
and
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

No 305 Race St. above 3rd, Philadelphia,
N. B. Country Produce taken in exchange for goods or sold on commission.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine,

with Drop Feed, new Take-up, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted First Class, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted traveling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $200 per month. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. Co.

Union Square, 33 East 17th St., New York

Universal Guide for Cutting Garments.

By which every family may cut its own garments for men and boys, of twenty six different sizes; for Coats, Pants, Vests, and Shirts, and Ladies' Dress Bodies. Agents wanted to sell State, County, and Family Rights. For Particulars address

Miller & Quinn,
Tyrone, Blair Co., Pa.

Wm. M. Lloyd,	D. T. Caldwell,
Altoona, Pa.	Tyrone Pa.

LLOYD, CALDWELL & CO.,
BANKERS,

Receive monies on deposit, and pay interest if left 6 months, at 4 per cent per annum, or 5 per cent. if left one year.

Special contracts made with parties acting a administrators, executors, guardians, and persons holding monies in trust. Dealers in every description of Stocks and Bonds.—Government Securities made a speciality.

Gold and Silver bought and sold, and a general Banking business transacted.

CABINET MAKING & UNDERTAKING

The undersigned keeps on hand and manufactures to order all kinds of Furniture. He is also neatly fitted out for conveying the dead to their last resting place.

Manufacturer of the Common Sense Dasher Washing Machine. Shop at the Cross Roads, near Warrior's Mark, Pa.

JAMES S. COX.

A Washing Machine may be seen and purchased at this office. v6n48tf.

A Card.

Drs. D. Fahrney & Son, Uroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.

7-10-1 yr. pd.

Excelsior Bee Hive.

This hive being now well established is extensively manufactured, and for sale. $3 for single hive, also Bee-keepers Instruction, 15 cents single copy. Liberal inducements to agents. Address S. B. REPLOGLE,

RoaringSpring,
7-12-ms. Blair Co. Pa.

THE
Christian Family Companion

Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements; that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
Tyrone, Pa.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum

VOLUME VII. TYRONE, PA. TUESDAY, JUNE 13, 1871. NUMBER 24

Preaching Vs. Practice.

BY EDWARD P. NOWELL.

As buds on the tree and fruit in the hand,
As clouds in the sky and rain on the land,
As glances of love and marital r ings
So preaching and practice are different things.

The tree may bud out and bear us no crop,
The sky may be sombre and shed not a drop,
The maid may be loved aud yet never wed,
And man point the way he fails e'er to tread.

How easy to say, but oft hard to do;
We promise things good,and great, it is true,
But can we affirm our word and our deed
Are true to each other, like flower and seed?

The beggar is told, "be ye clothed and fed,"
But hungers he still, and bare is his head?
The sick may o'erhear, "what pity I feel,"
Yet words won't suffice his sorrow to heal.

To pray without faith, is prayer best unsaid,
And faith without work is verily dead;
Profession is folly if practice be shunned--
The bank of the heart is despoiled of its fund!

If all would do right, as brother to brother,
If words of true love of each act were the mother,
Then,then should we dwell in peace through this life!
And bury forever, hate, evil, and strife!

For the Companion.

EVENING.

How admirably is this portion of time adapted to meditation. When the toils of the day are over, the sable mantle of night is thrown around the earth,and all nature is hushed to rest: it is then we call to mind scenes of pleasure which we have enjoyed, or pain which we have experienced. And how often, in the lone hour of evening, do our thoughts wander back to the days of our childhood, and perchance to the old school-house, where we had many hard tasks to perform, and to the social gatherings, which seem like so many bright spots in our pathway. But oh! how soon the scene is changed! Some that were active and gay, have been laid beneath the clods of the valley, and the wintery winds sigh a requiem over the graves of those we loved; others have sought a home in the far West, and are toiling amid privations, which none but those who have experienced them can know. How few in this wide world, who, if they turn from the noise and bustle of life, ere they are aware will not find themselves thinking of some friend that has gone to the spirit land; it may be a dear mother or a kind and indulgent father,who provided for their wants, or an affectionate companion who was near and dear, or a sweet and idolized child, whom they have watched over with all a parent's solicitude. Amid such reflections, how appropriate are the lines:

"Silently the shades of evening,
Gather round my lonely door,
Silently they bring before me,
Faces I shall see no more."

But again, we not only reflect on scenes that are past, but we form plans for the future; and if our hearts have been renewed by divine grace, our thoughts will not be confined to things of earth; but in the stillness of the evening, while we may be admiring the heavens as declaring the glory of God, and the firmament as showing forth his handy work, we shall, by faith, view the Star of Bethlehem as infinitely surpassing in splendor, the starry orbs which we behold with our natural eye. And how happy are we if its blessed light is shining upon our pathway through this dark world, and leading us to adore that Being who made all worlds and keeps them in existence, and to think of that world above all others, where they need not the light of the sun or of the moon, and where not one thought of separation from friends, shall disturb the peace, or mar the enjoyment of those who are of rest in that world of bliss which has no evening, but where the inhabitants experience one eternal day.

Written in love, by your weak sister in Christ. ELLA SLONER.

Mt. Morris, Ill.

Good advice is better than scolding

THE PREACHER.

He took a shaft both strong and straight,
A shaft he had polished with labor great.
He winged it with sweet eloquence,
With learning and with subtle sense.
Boldly he drew, and he aimed with care;
But it wounded only the idle air.
A second he took, both straight and strong,
Winged with a passionate sense of wrong.
He drew it stoutly and aimed it true;
The mark he aimed at was plain in view.
Swift it fled, yet it lighted wide;
For it touched on a rock, and it swerved aside.
He reached his hand, and took from above,
A slender arrow, barbed with love.
He aimed it with a little art,
Yet it touched and wounded a human heart.
His last, his lightest, was winged with prayer,
And he shot it forth through the yielding air.
No careful aim the preacher took,
For he turned to Heaven his upward look;
Yet it pierced a heart both hard and proud,
The hardest heart in all the crowd.

—Sunday at Home.

For the COMPANION.

LOVE AND LABOR.

I, feeling somewhat lonely this Sabbath morning, thought it would not be amiss for me to employ a little time in trying to encourage my dear sisters, who, with myself, like to read communications written by our own, the weaker sex.—With sister Rohrer, I see a lack of duty on the part of some of our sisters; for there are a great many of us too neglectful about writing for our periodical. We should all try and do our part. I always think there are others who are more capable of writing for the public than myself, and I presume it is the case with a great many others, and this is why there is a lack of duty performed by the sisters.

This should not discourage us, for all that is lacking is energy and a good will, and if we have a desire to do good, such little trifles will be no great hindrances or excuses.

We find it a very hard thing to live a christian life among so much wickedness; for there is to much of it going on at the present time. But this should make us feel more humble, for this life is fleeting, and we know not how long will be our stay here.

Yes, dear Sisters, we have many troubles, trials and temptations to encounter, and many obstructions cast in our pathway. We are often looked upon with contempt, because we do not follow every vain and foolish fashion, and are often called old-fashioned, and such like; but we can expect nothing else. This should make our faith much stronger; and we should never get discouraged, but offer up our prayers much oftener; "For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears are open unto their prayers; but the face of the Lord is against them that do evil." "But and if ye suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye." Then, dear sister, let us be on our guard, and not care what the world may say about us. There is one thing I wish to present to your minds before I close, and that is, I fear there is a lack of love among some of us. I was much pleased with brother A. Cost's article in last week's Companion (No. 19). I think if we should read that and study it well, it would do much good, and cause a great reform among us. Yes, "Let brotherly love continue." "Love the brotherhood." How painful it is to go to our council meetings, (or any other meeting,) and see some of the members so cool to each other. It makes me feel miserable to be slighted by a member, especially by those that are connected in the flesh. "See that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently." "He that loveth not, knoweth not God; for God is love." "Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought to love one another." And again we read: "If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar; for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen? And this commandment we have from him, That he who loveth God, love his brother also." Now we see we cannot be Christians and hate our brother or sister. We all have our faults; some have greater faults than others. Therefore we must bear with one another. Weep with those that weep and rejoice with those that do rejoice.

Now I will say in conclusion: Press onward and upward. "Humble yourselves, therefore, under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time." "Cast all your care upon him, for he careth for you." "Be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord; forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord.

LOUISA J. BASHOR.

Eternity.

It is beyond the stretch of our finite imagination, to conceive the immensity of boundless eternity.—We may calculate and speculate upon the subject until the powers of the human mind are lost—utterly lost—in scanning the wide expanse of the eternal world, and yet eternity, in its fullest sense, still lies beyond.

So the glory that is in reservation for the righteous, far exceeds the powers of our imagination; it not having entered into the heart of man what God has laid up for the righteous. We may look over the elysian fields of eternal blessedness, as brought to view through revelation, with a far penetrating eye, grasp within the bounds of our comprehensive mind the glories of the celestial world, and yet we know nothing, comparatively, of the beauties of the eternal heavens, where God in his infinite majesty and glory dwells, and to which he has invited man to come, for "now are all things ready."—Thanks to God and our blessed Savior, who has opened up the way from this world of sin and sorrow to such a world of grandeur and to such realms of bliss.

Despondency.—To be despondent in any undertaking causes unhappiness; but to be despondent in religious matters, is bad indeed. Why should we harbor in our bosom such companions, when God's promises are so refreshing, and, we know, sure and steadfast. Activity in our christian duties, and an abiding faith in God, is the best cure for despondency. Away with doubts and fears and lay hold with a will to do whatever your hands find to do, and away will flee despondent thoughts.

J. S. Flory.

Fayetteville, W. Va.

Work To-Day.

Work while it is called day. Religion is a life, and life in its highest development of earnest activity.—Christ wants workers, and he calls, "Go, work to-day." If you are a Christian, you are a partaker of his anointing. He has ordained you that you should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit shall remain. The influence of many men seems to die with them, and though it does, no doubt, survive them, still its power is not apparent. He will have your fruit remain. Live for him, work for him, so that even when you are dead you shall still live and work in the manifold influences that are pleading for that blessed Lord, and winning new trophies from the world that hates him. Christ wants you, to-day. The time is short; you have no hours to lose. All through the week you can work for him. He will not have you throw aside your implements of toil, or your pen, or any lawful work. Only set him before you and it will all be done for him.

Work to-day, whether a week day or a Sabbath; it is God's accepted time, and the loving heart is always full of zeal, and has ready plans for doing good. In the Sunday-School, in the prayer meeting, in tract distribution, at home, in your counting room, in the street, there is work for you, and if you live for Christ, you lead a holy life, and this is of all work the hardest and best, for it is one continued testimony for him who died for you and rose again. The time of rest is coming, and it will be long; but the time for work is now, and it is short.

"Not at our Savior's feet would we lay down
Talents that yield us no stars for our crown.
He gave us his life that we sinners might live
What can life yield us that we would not give?
Take us, dear Savior, we are not our own
Help us to live for thy glory alone.
Thine we are now: and forever would be—
Help us, O help us, to labor for thee."

Little by Little.

We can do but little, at most; but we can do that little, constantly.—Little by little does God elevate us to himself. He calls daily, weekly, yearly. Neglect one call after another, and we become reprobates. A mason builds the wall, stone by stone. And just so are saints built. God knows this, and therefore accommodates himself to our condition by affording us opportunity and material as we need them. I have heard of the "droppings of the sanctuary," and so have we all. But is there such a thing as a flooding of the sanctuary? Save the drops then, and you will have caught up and drunk in all the distillations of Grace.

A white man once complained to an Indian of a want of time. "Why," said the red man, "have you not all the time there is?" The pale face became flushed and confessed that he had learned something from his companion. We too can learn that time is given to us all—all the time there is, but it is given to us, just as every thing else is measured out for us—in fragments. To take care of the fragments—to gather them up is to be sure of filling our twelve baskets sooner or later.

How Rain Drops Are Formed.—To understand the philosophy of this phenomenon essential to the very existence of plants and animals, a few facts derived from observation and a long train of experiments, must be remembered. Were the atmosphere evrywhere, at all times, at a uniform temperature, we should never have rain, hail or snow. The water absorbed by it in evaporation from the earth's surface, would descend, in an imperceptible vapor, or cease to be absorbed by the air when it is once fully saturated. The absorbing power of the atmosphere, and consequently its capability to retain humidity, is proportionably greater in warm than in cold air. The air near the surface of the earth is warmer than it is in the regions of the clouds. The highesr we ascend from earth, the colder we find the atmosphere. Hence the perpetual snow on very high mountains in the hottest climates. Now then, from evaporation, the air is highly saturated with vapor—though it be invisible—if its temperature is suddenly reduced by cold currents descending from above; or, rushing from a higher to a lower latitude, its capacity to retain moisture is diminished, clouds are formed; and the result is rain. Air condenses as it cools, and, like a sponge, filled with water and compressed, pours out water which its diminished capacity cannot hold. How singular yet how simple an arrangement for watering the earth! —Scientific American.

It is always in our power to make a friend by smiles, what a folly then to make an enemy by frowns.

Employment is to a man what oil is to machinery; it makes the wheels of existence run smoothly.

Truths are first sown, then reaped, then harvested and used. The philosophy of one century is the common sense of the next.

For the Companion.

Family Prayer.

What is family prayer? It is not simply individual prayer, nor the altar of the closet, but the home altar around which all the members gather morning and evening, as a family unit, to commune with God and supplicate his mercy.

What scene can be more loving on earth, and pleasing to God, than that of a pious family kneeling with one accord around the home altar, and uniting their supplications to their Father in Heaven! How sublime, the act of those parents who thus pray for the blessings of God to rest upon their household! How lovely the scene of a mother gathering her little ones around her, and teaching them the privilege of prayer! And what a safeguard is this home devotion against all the machinations of Satan! And yet the neglect of family prayer is very frequent and general. Some attend to it occasionally; some, only in time of affliction and distress, as if then only they needed to pray. Some perform it only in a formal way: having the form without the spirit of prayer, as if God did not require the fervent, in order to the effectual prayer that availeth much. As a general thing at the present day, not more than three or four families out of a congregation have established the family alter. And in fact, a great many pretending to be followers of Jesus, do not even give thank's when they sit down to recieve their daily food, which they recieve from God's bountiful hand. I, for one, do not believe that we can be followers of Jesus, if we do not give thanks when sitting down to our table spread with the comforts of this life; for we find by examining the scripture, that Christ always gave thanks before eating. And we, as servants of Christ, are no more worthy of recieving these blessings, without thanks than he, our Master, was.

Parents may engage in closet prayer, but their children are strangers to the fact. Their devotions they seem zealous to conceal, as if they were ashamed of their piety. Is this the will of God? No! It cannot be. If the parent is faithful to the duty of private prayer, he will not omit the privilege of family devotion.

Many make the most frivolous excuses, to justify their neglect of prayer. Some will say that other engagements prevent it. But this is false. God lays upon you no engagements that are designed to supercede the necessity of prayer. But another pleads incapacity: he has not the gift of speech to make an eloquent prayer. But this is no excuse. If we have the spirit of prayer and a willing mind, we will find words for its utterance. "Where there is a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a person hath, and not according to that he hath not." Let me, therefore, urge you, christian parents, to make your home a house of prayer. Lead your little flock in sweet communion with God. Establish in them the habit of devotion. Shape their consciences by prayer.

MAGGIE WALDSMITH.

North Liberty, Ind.

For the Companion.

Sinners Talking about Death.

I have frequently listened with awe and astonishment to sinners—old, hoary headed sinners—talking about death. And what is still more shocking, they form part of that class who positively believe that nothing short of repentance and faith of the gospel will fit and qualify men and women for heirs of glory. Is it possible? Can it be that such will shut out the light of Heaven from their hearts, until the grim monster, death, lays firmly upon them his icy fingers, and beckons them away to a vast eternity? Surely they never look deep down into the dark, silent tomb, as the only gateway to eternity. Certainly, they, while traveling to and fro through this wide world, forget, or do not actually think, that their winding course will one day lead them speedily down into that narrow cell—the still, cold grave.

Quite recently I heard an aged sinner speak about death. That man may well term this world "a vale of tears." In his old age he was laid low upon his couch by the hand of affliction. And now, that he has somewhat recovered, his days on earth at farthest can be but few. Though, friendly reader, rest assured that he speaks more frequently and with more pleasure about his former illness than about the trying hour of death. The grave is what he, with all other aged persons whether they be saints or sinners, must soon—oh! very soon enter. But my young friends, questions similar to the following may continually arise in your minds.

Why is it that aged sinners, whose locks are silvered over for the grave, whose tired and faltering steps will soon cease to bear up a weary and jaded body, do not adhere to the counsels, obey the commandments of a just God, and live out the remainder of their days in his service? Why do they not, as they planned in youth, give Jesus their hearts and live the remnant of their days in his service? Why will they speak of death and not prepare to die? Because they too long have both slighted the unceasing warnings of conscience and the counsels of a kind Savior.

When, after they had once left "life's crossway, Jesus did kindly knock at their hearts and plead for admittance, they turned him away, waited for a "more convenient season," but that season never came—perhaps never will come. And now it is enough to terrify one to hear them talk of death in their unsaved conditions.

Dear reader your time is swiftly gliding by. The grave shall one day be occupied by you. Swiftly you are hastening unto it. And will you die contaminated with sin? or will you die in the arms of a once crucified but now risen Savior? If you wish to die "in the Lord," you must, of course, live for him. If you wish in heaven to wear a crown of glory, you must in this life bear the cross. If you wish to look calmly down into the lonely grave as a beautiful gateway into the celestial city, you must live for heaven and its bliss.

F. M. Snyder.

For the Companion.

The Lord Seeketh the Lost.

By Emmanuel Umbaugh.

This language portrays to the mind, with what unceasing care and perseverance the Savior of the world awaits, not only the sinner's acceptance of the terms of salvation, but also the prodigal's return. His long forbearance with the human family is set prominently before us, and we should with a ready mind, accept his easy terms, when these properties of a loving Savior are made known to us. But alas! How often, instead of acknowledging the goodness of our blessed Savior, we allow the frost of ingratitude to chill the meritorious blood! How often we reach forth, with puny arms, and close the Savior's wounds with ugly wads of sin! Is this not enough to cause the gloomy clouds of sorrow to enshroud the humble Christian, through which to look with pity upon those who fail to pity themselves? Yes, the Christian who is fully converted looks with pity upon the erring soul, and the Savior stands at the door and knocks. Have we never known the Savior's plan of redemption? If not, he knocks. Have we formerly accepted the terms and yet retain some darling sin? If so, he still continues to knock for admisson. Have we, like the prodigal, strayed away? If so, the Savior, full of pity, still knocks to ask if we will not return to him. He knocks and if we hear his voice and open the door, he will come in to us. The voice of the Savior, what a treasure! It is our only wealth. If he should cease to call, we would lose our all. If we should disregard the day of grace, we would be left in eternal poverty, although in possession of millions of dollars of this world's goods. The voice of our Savior! It is the richest of treasures. Who can willingly disregard it? Although it is our duty and conducive to our best interests to come to Jesus, he will in case of negligence come and stand at the door of the heart and knock for admission, and if we allow him to enter with his Holy Spirit, he will banish Satan with all the spirits of wickedness that may be hidden there. If he does not, it will be because we have given him a cold reception; that is, our reception of the Savior has only been a formal one. We have opened the door to the Savior, but have scarcely noticed his entrance, hence he, perhaps, will leave, and we give way to some idol that is more highly prized by us than he. Let us yield and consecrate ourselves entirely to God, give our power to the good of the cause of Christ, and throw all our influence in the right direction and then will be for us a promise of a crown to enjoy forever which crown is eternal life.

Collamer, Ind.

Sick Headache, hysteria, nervousness, and constipation may be cured by retiring early, omitting tea, coffee, pastry, and confectionery, eating substantial food at regular intervals, plenty of out-door exercise, a draught of cold water the first thing on rising in the morning, and the reading of substantial literature instead of the light, trashy stuff.

By Sunday-Schools, I mean the prevailing custom of calling and sending children together on Sundays, to one place and teaching them.

The most important question concerning this custom is, of God or of men. My answer is, that it may be of men only, or it may be an institution of God; that it certainly depends altogether upon the principle which actuates men to follow it; that if men have the mind of Christ, they will follow it; and that there is consequently such a custom whose originator is God.

The are probably as many, perhaps more, different kinds of Sunday-schools claiming to be institutions of God, than there are different church organizations, also claiming to be orthodox. Yet no one either in the Church or in the Sunday-school is accepted with God, only so far as he "worketh righteousness."

A large number of the children of of the present generation, attend these schools regularly, especially during the warm seasons of the year. Of those who do not attend, a large majority spend their Sundays, as well as other days, in harmful indulgences.—A few however are kept both from these evils and from Sunday-schools, still, brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, by their parents or some one else at their homes when they cannot be sent to the Sunday-schools.

There are a great many persons in the world, who do not concern themselves about these schools at all; saying or doing nothing either for or against them, excepting the hindrance which their influence in such a course causes. Others speak and do all against these schools that they can. Through ignorance they speak against things which they do not understand, and thus fight against God. But there are others, again, who act presumptuously against their own better light and knowledge; pretending that the encouragement of Sunday-schools will do much harm to the cause of Christ, when the harm done will be to themselves, and not to Christ. They know full well that the encouragement of Sunday-schools will be equivalent to making their children wiser and better than they themselves are. To allow this would mind me very much of Cain who slew his brother Abel because he was better. Cain thought he would destroy him, so that he could be best without exerting or troubling himself. They bear a strong resemblance to those of king Herod, when he attempted to destroy the child Jesus.—He knew that Christ was better than he was; that he would consequently teach the people better than he taught them, and consequently wrest the honor and authority out of his proud heart. He could not think of being humbled so. He therefore concluded to destroy the young child Jesus, and thus nip the fruit in the bud, before the tree bloomed. And among those who are in the Sunday-school, soul and body, apparently, just as in the church, "there must also be heresies that they which are approved may be made manifest." These heresies are sins. To mention all of them here, time, space, and prudence would not permit. Suffice it to say that they are the same sins that are spoken of in the Bible.

The conclusion therefore, of the whole matter, briefly expressed, is: That the primary and sole object of Sunday-schools. as well as that of all other institutions, ought to be to prolong and save life, This is the object of the mission of Christ into the world. Any institution then, without regard to its name or the name of its originitors or conductors, having this great work in view, will bring to its abettors a reward in proportion to its success. And those who hinder its progress will also be punished according to the proportion of failures which they have caused—in proportion to the ignorance, sin, and misery which they have been influential in bringing about. Then dear brethren and sisters, let us try to be careful not to speak against things which we do not understand.

JOHN B GARVER.

Shirleysburg, Pa.

To all Whom it may Concern.

Having heard at our late Annual Meeting, through some of the brethren from the West, that there is a "bug" at the "Potato," in same section of the West, which appear to make perfect havoc of the potato crops. I would say, about as good a fires of straw, or corn stalks, which are better about dusk, and a little after, for several evenings, or even a few weeks if necessary, in the patato patches. Keep the fire blazing for ½ hour or more, by still putting on small quantities of corn stalks. The idea in this is, when it is dusk or dark, the bugs will start up at the light of the fire and fly into it; and then, of course, are burned. This same method will destroy moths, and other insects injurious to fruit.

"DUNKERS."

Annual Meeting of the National Conference of the German Baptists.

Special correspondence of The Press.]

Three and a-half hours ride from the heat and dust of Philadelphia over the Reading and Lebanon Valley Railroads brings us to Myerstown, a pleasant village of 1,300 inhabitants nestling in the choicest part of the Lebanon Valley, surrounded by beautiful fields and hills crowned with the richest verdure. It is just now a point of some interest as the place chosen for the meeting of the National Conference of the religious society properly denominated German Baptists, but better known to the outside public by the name of Dunkers. Delegates and others began to assemble during the latter part of last week and with those who will arrive to-day a large congregation of many thousands is expected at the opening of the conference to-morrow. All the States east of the Rocky Mountains in which there are churches of this denomination will be represented.—Devotional meetings, led by the ministers and elders from abroad, were attended by large congregations of the denomination and others drawn by the reputation of the speakers.—The services were generally in German, or in both German and English.

THE DENOMINATION.

There is probably no denomination in the United States that has been more grossly misrepresented and maligned, and concerning which so many erroneous opinions prevail. Even the encyclopediæs, books of theological literature, and other works that are supposed to be standard authorities on the subjects of which they treat, have generally gone wide of the facts in their notices of this denomination. One reason for this probably is the lack of a denominational literature of their own, giving their history, views, and practices, and, till within a comparatively few years, of a proper periodical literature. And some peculiarities in their ordinances have made them unusually liable to misrepresention and ridicule, especially by those who have no respect for religious ordinances of any kind.

ORIGIN AND HISTORY.

There are few published accounts of the origin and history of the denomination, but the present organization undoubtedly dates from the religious movement of Alexander Mack, in Germany, in 1708. Mack, with seven others, undertook the study of tha Bible for the purpose of forming an opinion of its teachings. The result of their deliberations was the adoption of trine immersion and some other peculiar ordinances.—Their views spread rapidly, and churches were formed. But they were not allowed to enjoy their views in peace, and, after many persecutions and shiftings from place to place, they began, about 1719, to emigrate to America, and between this date and 1729 the entire Church left Germany and established itself in the United States. They came principally to this State, and have gradually extended to others, but principally West. Peter Baker was among the first of the immigrants, and was the first proctor of the Church of America. Alexander Mack came over about 1729, and was elder for a church at Germantown. The venerable elder, John Fox, minister of the congregation that meets every Sunday morning in the meeting-house in Crown street, above Callowhill, Philadelphia, is a great-grandson of Mack.

But while the present organization dates from the movement of Mack and his coreligionists, many of the principles of faith and practice, and some of the ordinances, have been derived from the Waldenses, but to what extent cannot be very certainly determined.

THE FIRST SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

One of the important early settlements was at Mill Creek, Lancaster county. After some years a division occured in the church at that place.—Several members of the church, led by a minister, adopted the seventh day of the week for their Sabbath, instead of the first,and for this heresy were excommunicated by the German Baptists. There is an interesting incident connected with the history of those who were thus cut off too important to be passed over.

These excommunicated brethren formed a Church of their own views at Ephrata, not far from Mill Creek, and now on the Reading and Columbia Railroad, and here one of their number established a Sunday-school, about 1735 or 1740, which was regularly kept up for about thirty years. As it was not until 1781 that Robert Raikes hired his room and his teachers for his Sunday-school, at Gloucester, England, Lancaster county, in this state, has the honor of having the first Sunday-school, more than forty years before it was thought of by Raikes. Had it been established in a larger place, or brought prominently to public notice, without doubt it would have become the nucleus of that mighty religious organization that must now date from the enterprise of Robert Raikes, and Gloucester, England, instead of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania.

PRESENT CONDITION OF THE DENOMINATION.

In attempting to give the present condition of the denomination throughout the United States, some difficulty is experienced from the fact that they have never published or collected denominational statistics.—They have been opposed to this as a matter of principle, regarding the parade in print of their numbers, and wealth, and growth, as calculated to foster pride rather than to subserve any useful purpose. But as there are delegates here from nearly all the districts, it has been possible to form tolerably correct estimates.

The number of churches cannot be much less than five hundred. There are certainly from fifteen hundred to two thousand ministers and elders, while the membership is about one hundred thousand. There are single churches having as many as six hundred members. They are most numerous in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, and Virginia — There are churches in nearly or quite all the Wester States—even the newest. Kansas and Nebraska having churches—and in some of the former Slave States, especially Tennessee, Missouri, and North Carolina. West of the Rocky Mountains, churches have been formed in California and Oregon. The denomination is steadily extending itself in the West.—Missionaries are appointed to travel over new sections of the country, and to organize churches wherever proper fields can be found: and in this way they are likely to more than maintain their present strength in the country.

THE NAME.

The name which they use much among themselves, and which is a favorite among them, is "Brethren," taken from the remark of Christ to his disciples on one occasion, "All ye are brethren." But as this is not sufficiently distinctive for public purposes, they still use as their proper denominational name that of German Baptists. The term Dunkers did not originate among themselves, nor did they use it, although they do not particularly object to it. It is a slight corruption of a German word meaning "to dip," and is expressive of one of their important ordinances.

FAITH AND PRACTICE.

The denomination has no published creed of any kind. It is a principle with them to take the Bible as their rule of faith and practice,without any comment whatever. But in all organizations there will always be some fundamental, settled principles, and such is the case with this Church.—In theology they are evangelical. They believe in Christ as a Savior, and in the Trinity, and also in the absolute necessity of repentance, faith, and baptism. As to original sin,they believe that but for the redemption by Christ, all infants would be lost, as well as adults; but that as the redemption of Christ is just as far reaching as Adam's sin, original sin has been fully atoned for; hence, infants, idiots, and all other persons dying before the commission of actual transgression are saved by virtue of that atonement, without the necessity of faith and baptism

They give a greater importance to baptism than other denominations, regarding it as essential to salvation, under ordinary circumstances, as repentance and faith But as the thief on the cross was saved without it they admit that in circumstances where baptism is impossible there may be salvation without it, but only when the impossibility is absolute. They do not admit anything but trine immersion to be baptism. They insist on a holy living; that the life must conform to the teachings of Christ, and that without this the observance of the ordinances of the Church are void and of no effect, but teach also that all true disciples must observe the ordinances strictly.

Ordinances.

First in order of the ordinances is baptism, which is to be observed immediately after the exercise of true repentance, according to the command "Repent and be baptized." The mode of baptism is peculiar, and is called trine immersion. After prayer the candidate kneels in the water, and is plunged forward, and in this way immersed three times, once for each name of the trinity. After this, and while the candidate is still kneeling in the water, there is prayer and laying on of hands. Baptism makes the recipient a member of the Church, and is never repeated for the same individual. Excommunication does not impair the validity of the baptism, so that they can be received again, on proper repentance and reformation, without the readministration of the ordinance.

Next in order is the ordinance of feet-washing; the authority is from the incident of Christ washing his disciple's feet, narrated in John xiii. They believe the command in the 14th and 15th verses of this chapter to be as literally binding as the commands elsewhere for the observance of the communion. It is observed as a preparation for the love-feast and communion, according to the statement of Christ to Peter in the 10th verse. In the observance of the ordinance the brethren wash the feet of the brethren only, and the sisters of the sisters. The sexes never, under any circumstances, wash the feet of each other, as has sometimes been charged. Everything connected with the ordinance is done decently and in order. It is observed at every love-feast and communion.

Next is the love-feast. The authority for this is the fact that before Christ instituted the communion, on the night of his betrayal. He first partook of a supper with his disciples. They make this a real meal. There is no limit as to kind or quality of food. In some places it is customary to use meat and vegetables, with coffee or tea; and in others a simpler meal is prepared. The only requirement is, that it be a real supper. After this, and immediately preceding the communion, is the salutation of the kiss, which they claim was observed under both the Law and the Gospel. In this ordinance the brethren salute each other, and the sisters the same. The sexes do not interchange salutations.

In the observance of the communion, which is the ordinance next in order, the members are seated at tables, the sisters all having their heads covered with plain caps, and the brethren with heads uncovered.—Thanks are given both for the bread and wine. The minister breaks the bread to the brethren, and they to each other. The minister breaks to the sisters also, but they do not break to each other; and the same is the case in passing the wine. The communion and its attendant ordinances is always observed at night, as this was the hour of its institution by Christ. It is observed usually once or twice a year in every church.

In addition to these ordinances is that of the laying on of hands and annointing the sick with oil, founded on James v 14, 15. It is done only at the request of the sick person, and always by an elder if one is within reach, but if it is not possible to secure the presence of an elder, the ordinance is then administered by a minister.

Church Government.

The Church government is republican in form. Each church has its council, to which all matters of difference and questions of difficulty must first be submitted. If not settled here they are carried to the council of the district. These districts generally include about twenty churches, and the council is composed of delegates (who are not necessarily ministers or elders) from each church. If not settled here, and is a matter of general interest, it is taken to the National Council or Conference, but no local matter is allowed to come up before this body. In some cases the National Council appoints persons to confer with the local councils, and in this way assist in the settlement of hard matters.

The National Conference is composed of two delegates from each district. One of the two serves on the standing committee, which has important offices to perform, and the other attends more particularly to the matters before the conference, though both are equal in this respect, except so far as the duties of the one on the committee may interfere with his participation in general exercises of the conference. But while these delegates constitute the official conference, opportunity is given to all members present to speak and participate in the proceedings.

In the lower councils all matters are decided by vote, and the sisters are allowed the same privileges as the brethren in this respect, but in the National Conference the decisions are by common consent, and the sisters do not participate in the official deliberations.

The special object of this National Conference is to decide matters for which no "Thus saith the Lord" can be found. Questions naturally arise which cannot be decided by reference to the Bible teachings, and the object of this annual conference is to take all such questions into consideration and decide upon them. A clerk keeps a careful record of all the proceedings, and at the close the record is printed and sent to each church, and becomes the final authority on all the subjects considered.

Mode of Worship.

The mode of worship does not differ particularly from that of many other denominations. At the meeting on Saturday evening the service was opened by singing the hymn, "How sweet the name of Jesus sounds." It was lined by the minister, and sung by the whole congregation. After the hymn, prayer was offered, the minister and the entire audience kneeling. The text was I Cor. i. 30. The sermon was a sound evangelical discourse. The speaker was followed by another in German, and the meeting closed with singing and prayer. As a rule they do not use the benediction. The minister may say, "We are dismiss ed in the name of the Lord," or some similar phrase. If the words of the benediction are used, the elder or minister is not allowed to lift his hands over the congregation. The men do not wear their hats during worship, but the sisters are required to have the head covered with a plain covering on all occasions of worship.

Ministers and Elders.

Ministers are chosen by election. When any brother appears to have the proper gifts for the office he is selected to preach by the church to which he belongs. After he has proved himself worthy he is set apart by the laying on of hands, and is then called elder or bishop, the terms being synonymous. No course of training or literary preparation is required. No salaries or support of any kind is given to the ministers or elders, nor are they required to give up their business pursuits. A church usually has several ministers, but the elder is always the presiding officer of the church to which he belongs.

Peculiarities.

They have many peculiarities which they strictly observed. It is to some extent their intention to be a "peculiar people," believing it both a privilege and a duty. They are non-resistants and will not bear arms under any circumstances. They believe in implicit obedience to the Government. They were the staunchest of Union people during the late war, and contrived to find ways to manifest their sympathy, although they would not fight. They vote, but do not generally take a very active part in politics. They do not approve of going to law against persons not members of their church, and will not allow one member to go to law against another, on any pretext whatever.—All matters between members, of whatever kind, must be settled in the church councils. They have no peculiarities of speech, except that they do not use titles, and avoid by-words. The terms "Brother" and "Sister" are very general, but not universal. They never recognized slavery, nor at any time allowed any person interested in or upholding it to become or continue a member of their Church. Their record on this subject is very commendable. They have no peculiar views concerning marriage, and do not restrict their members to their own Church. They are strongly opposed to secret societies, and make membership in them a cause for excommunication.

Dress.

The prevailing style of dress among them is somewhat similar to that of the Friends, but variations have crept in, more among the brethren than the sisters. There is no positive rule as to style or color, the fundamental principles being that of entire plainness and abstinence from useless ornament. No jewelry, or anything merely for adornment, is allowed.—The dress of the elderly ladies is black alpaca or stuff of similar sort, with white half handkerchiefs and plain caps, and is exceedingly neat. The prevailing colors among the men are brown, gray, and black, but occasionally other shades are seen.

Temperance.

On the subject of temperance they are the strongest of teetotalers and claim to be the oldest temperance society in the United States. They forbid the use of all alcoholic or malt liquors as a beverage, in public or private, and have a decision of the National Conference that it shall be a cause for excommunication. They permit the use of it for strictly medicinal and mechanical purposes only. They go further than this and forbid members to be in any way interested in the traffic in liquors of any kind, or to sell any grain or other article used in spirituous liquors to any manufacturer or to any person that will use it for manufacturing purposes.

The Poor.

They make ample provision for the support of their own poor, and never allow them to receive aid from town or country. All their indigent are well cared for, and suffering from poverty among them effectually prevented, as should be the case in every religious denomination.

Literature.

They publish several periodicals and a few standard works, but admit themselves to be deficient in a proper Church literature; but now that the want is felt and acknowledged, active measures will probably be taken to supply it, and give to the Church the means of information concerning their past and present history and Church polity, and give also to the public an opportunity for more extensive and correct information concerning the denomination than is yet accessible.—Important questions connected with this subject, and especially with the cause of education, will be considered at this conference.

Other Similar Denominations.

There are in some of the States denominations that have some things in their faith and practice and ordinances in common with the German Baptists, and are sometimes confounded with them. How many of these other denominations there are, or where they are strongest, cannot be ascertained from any authorities now at hand. An enumeration of them would be a fitting finale to this article, and it is a matter of regret that a correct list cannot be obtained.

Explanation

The facts here given have been prepared with great care and under the supervision of those well versed in the matters of their Church, and will be found the most complete and authentic account of the German Baptists that has ever been published.

The Conference.

To-morrow the conference will open its deliberations. The place for holding the business meetings is at Millersburg, eight or nine miles from this village, and reached only by carriages. Ample accommodations have been made for the entertainment of the large company that will be in attendance during the day. The boarding tent is 120 by 40 feet, and there will be no lack of such bountiful provisions as the good sisters of this vicinity know so well how to prepare. For the meetings of the conference one of the huge barns that abound here has been fitted up. It will accommodate a large company and be convenient for the purpose.—The conference will probably continue through to-morrow and Wednesday, and close its deliberations on Thursday. No religious meetings are held on the ground, nor do the congregation remain there at night as no sleeping tents are provided.—Meetings are held in the evenings in all the churches of the region.

The exercises are of much interest to the members of the church as the large attendance shows, and will, as they are held from year to year, have a strong tendency to bind them together in that brotherly love which it is their great aim to cultivate.

Tyrone City, Pa., June 13, 1871.

Report of the Annual Meeting.

We are sorry to inform our readers that the Editor of the C. F. C was sick when he arrived at home from the Annual Meeting; and for nearly a week he was unable to do anything in the editorial line. This accounts for the non-appearance of the usual report of the proceedings of the Annual Meeting. We know that many are anxiously waiting for it, and are sorry that it must be delayed so long. Be patient a little longer, and you will be favored with an interesting report. We think the meeting with but very little exception, (and that such as might be expected,) was both pleasant and edifying. The deliberations of the meeting were conducted with a zeal, and the greater part, with that prudence, which becomes the Lord's people.

J. W. B.

Our Late Annual Meeting.

We are very reluctantly compelled to defer the publication of our report of the proceedings of the Annual Meeting, for several weeks. We were taken with a severe spell of sickness upon our return home, so that we were unable to do any work for four or five days. Then we had made arrangements and promises to attend a lovefeast at Plum Creek, Pa., on the 10th inst, and to pay a visit to our Brethren at Meyer's Mills, Pa., on the 12th, and can therefore not write out our report until upon our return. We regret the delay very much, but trust the lengthy article from the Philadelphia Press, and the notes of brother P. H. Beaver, will partly make up for the absence of the report for a few weeks. We exceedingly regret that we cannot be permitted to employ a clerk who can write the short hand, so that we would not be required to ruin our health by such constant application, and exposure, while at the meeting, as well as upon our return home, and that we could the more promptly and accurately lay before our readers the doings of the Annual Council. Surely we ought to have as much liberty as the secular and political papers, whose reporters are allowed to work unhindered and unmolested, except by quizzing individuals.

Quotas.

It is indeed gratifying to see that many of our agents, brethren, sisters, and friends are making commendable efforts to enlarge our list of subscribers. It is two weeks since we made our last report, so we now add the following:

Joseph Fritz,	1	W. C. Roach,	1
John Everett,	2	J. R. Holsinger,	2
C. Mustin,	2	R. Studebaker,	1
A. K. Myers,	1	D. Bulsbaugh,	1
L. Longanecker,	1	R. K. Burkley,	2
S. Leckron,	1	Isaac Eby,	2
Hannah Knaff,	4	J. J. Cover,	3
Mrs. S. E. Cart,	4	Magaret Deardorff,	5
J. Evert,	2	C. C. Campbell,	1
A. Trostel,	2	Brice Sell,	2
J. E. Bowser,	6	J. M. Wolf,	1
Isaac Lutz,	1	J. H. Hockenberry,	2
Jacob Mohler,	8	Susan Gitt,	1
L. M. Emmert,	1	David Clem,	1
D. N. Wingert,	1	M. T. Baer,	1
D. M. Miller,	1	J. H. Steger,	1
R. Gallaher,	1		—
F. P. Loehr,	2		72
George Long,	4	Reported before,	143
John Beeghley,	2
Mary J. West,	1	Total.	215

Seventy two names in two weeks! To these we might add a number of names added to our list during the A. M. This is certainly encourging as it seems to say that our efforts to do good are appreciated.

At first sight it would appear that seventy more of our readers have filled their quotas in the call for 1.000. This is a mistake, as some have sent two, some three or four, one six and another eight. We expect to hear favorably from many others soon. Shall we realize our expectation, or must we suffer disappointment? This is for you to determine.

Having now been engaged as assistant in the publication of the C. F. C. and P. Y. a little over a year, and having a pretty correct knowledge of the labor, care, responsibility, and expense connected therewith, we feel like urging our readers to do what they can to encourage the Editor in his worthy, but arduous work.

We are not so arrogant as to claim perfection for ourselves or our work; and we presume that there are few of our readers who assume to be perfect; and hence it is necessary for us to bear with one another. It is our aim to do the best we can under previling circumstances: and we hope, as these become more favorable, and as experience may teach, to improve in our good work. Let all who feel an interest in the defense and promulgation of the faith delivered to the saints and held by the Brethren, join in with us and labor with a ready will—heartily, as unto the Lord, and not unto men; let all who feel their own imperfections, be willing to bear with us in ours; and if there be any perfect let them first cast stones.

Remember our terms, 75 cents for the Companion for the remainder of this volume; or $ 1.50 per year commencing with any number.

J. W. B.

Visit.

On Friday, the 9th inst., the Editor of the Companion and his companion, started on a visit to Armstrong and Somerset counties, this state. Their first point was the Plumcreek congregation, in Armstrong county, where there was a lovefeast on the evening of the 10th. On the 12th they aim to stop off at Dale City, (Meyer's Mills,) Somerset county. Here they expect to spend a few days to hear what may be heard and see what can be seen in regard to its being a suitable location for the future home of the Companion Family. They expect to return home on the 15th inst. We hope they have a pleasant and profitable visit; and that they may have a safe return.

J. W. B.

John J. Cover. You are entitled to the C. F. C. the balance of the year, and $1.50.

We have a number of orders for books which we cannot fill till we recruit the stock. This fact is mentioned, so that those who have sent in orders may know the cause of our delay. J. W. B.

Throng.

We have been very throng since our return from Annual meeting.—Seventy letters were awaiting our return, and every mail has been largely adding to the number. We also brought with us quite an amount of business to be attended to; new subscribers by the scores. Please friends, be very patient with us until we can catch up.

Answers to Correspondents.

D. Blickenstaff. The $ (?) came to hand. Thank you for mentioning the matter so kindly (?); and we assure you that the Companion was sent according to your order.

Lewis Shidler. All right. Your Companion is paid for to the close of Volume 8.

W. W. Hoover. We have no knowledge of it. We will send the Companion. The letter containing the money, may yet come.

B. F. Kittinger. Right.

I. Kulp. Yes: see moneys received, page 159.

Joseph Zahn. J. J. Cripe's C. F. C. cost 75 cents, as we could will not sell all the back Nos.

C. R. Bucher. The Debate on Immersion referred to is not published in German.

H. G. Pobst. The $4.00 came to hand.

C. U. Gates. The Hand-book — How to read character. costs $1.25.

Henry Ebee. You sent us $2 25. What was it for?

Martin Witter. We have no remembrance of the notices you mentioned.

Angel Watchers.

Earth hath her mysteries,
Round which eternal shadows ever blend;
And life is mantled in a darksome guise,
Mortals can never rend.

Could we have vision clear,
As one of old, touched by the Prophet's hand,
How closely would this world of ours appear
Linked to the Spirit Land.

We, mortals, see it not,
Yet sometimes on imagination's wing,
We almost reach some fair, seraphic spot,
And hear its music ring.

Through golden gates ajar,
At times, we hear some broken, thrilling strain,
That sweetly floats down to this world afar,
To soothe its grief and pain.

We seem at such a time
Akin unto that brighter world that lies
Beyond the misty river's marge—that clime
Unseen by mortal eyes.

Oh! when the lonely heart
Grows weary of earth's hollow hopes and fears,
When all its clinging ties are torn apart,
And graves grow thick with years,

'Tis then the soul doth feel
A longing for a better world than this;
And shining messengers at times reveal
Its dream of lasting bliss.

We never are alone—
E'en when bereft, we weep beside our dead,
For there is round us many a watchful one,
With soft and loving tread.

Punctuation.

The following short article, without points, cut from a newspaper, can be read in two ways—making a very bad man or a good man—the result depending on the manner in which it is punctuated; it shows the importance of correct punctuation.

He is an old and experienced man in vice and wickedness he is never found opposing the work of iniquity he takes delight in the downfall of the neighbors he never rejoices in the prosperity of any of his fellow-creatures he is alway ready to assist in destroying the peace of society he takes no pleasure in serving the Lord he is uncommonly diligent in sowing quaintances he takes no pride in laboring to promote the cause of Christianity he has not been negligent in endeavoring to stigmatize all public teachers he makes no exertions to subdue his passions he strives hard to build up Satan's Kingdom he lends no aid to the support of the Gospel among the heathen he contributes largely to the evil adversary he pays no attention to good advice he gives great heed to the Devil he will never go to heaven he must go where he will receive the just recompense of his reward.

Love and Passion.—These are too often confounded. Love elevates and refines, passion degrades and depresses; love, enlarges the heart, passion narrows the mind. And often in the case of what is called passionate love there is too much which is of the earth earthly. Pure affection is a sentiment free from taint of any kind, and is as rare as pure charity.

It is one of the worst of errors to suppose that there is any path of safety except that of duty.

Mankind love mysteries,—a hole in the ground excites more wonder than a star in the heaven.

The chains of habit are generally too small to be felt, till they are too strong to be broken.

A man may well bear his cross patiently while on the road to wear his crown.

A distinguished educator defined genius to be "the power of making effort."

Those people whom we do know flatter our pride less than those whom pretend to know

One of the sublimest things in the world is plain truth

It seems as if we kept part of that happiness which we give away.

Rest satisfied with doing well, and leave others to talk of you as they please.

Sophistry is like a window curtain.—it pleases as an ornament, but its true use is to keep out the light

That conduct sometimes seems ridiculous, the secret reasons of which may perhaps be wise and solid.

CORRESPONDENCE

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as a guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Sketches Outside

ANNUAL COUNCIL. }
May 29th 1872. }

Dear Brother: We propose giving you a few familiar sketches of our impressions and emotions, as well as some of our experience in getting here. Some of our brethren took the first forenoon train from Lewisburg this morning, and some of us took the second or eleven o'clock train and beat the rest of the company to Harrisburg by about five minutes. Here we found an excursion train making up to take the Brethren to Meyerstown the place of A. M. which would be ready to move out of the Lebanon Depot at 2 o'clock one hour after our arrival, so we hada very agreeable hour for interchange of greetings amongst brethren, and the formation of new acquaintances, then at the appointed hour we sped away in the direction of Meyerstown through as beautiful and fertile a valley as ever our good Father laid down anywhere in America, or elsewhere. This was our first experience upon a R. R. train overflowing withbrethren and our reflections soon resolved into poetry of music. One hour brought us to our stop-off—Meyerstown. Here we found about forty wagons of all conceiveable patterns from the lightest to the most heavy and capacious. We learned that there were ten miles of country road lying ahead of us to the place of Annual Meeting, which is being held at the house and upon the spacious premises of brother Joseph Merkey, near the village Bethel, in Berks Co. Pa. Our trip from the Rail Road Station to this place was full of unusual experience to a north Pennsylvanian. In many respects it was pleasant. Perched high upon the top of an old fashioned wood & eather spring four horse Stage Coach, we enjoyed a fine view of the magnificient country through which we passed, to the grateful emotions to our great, good Father, which a sight of these golden grain fields inspire in our hearts; But darkness—deference. So we delay our scribbling until morning, and look about for quarters over night which at first appears to be a discouraging undertaking, judging from the dense mass of human figures moving about in the twilight. As the shadows of night crept over landscape; a sense of loneliness appeared to settle down upon our heart—loneliness in the midst of a multitude, the first thought appears like a paradox yet when you are a stranger in a strange place, your affections naturally reach out in quest of familiar evening scenes and evening customs, and faces at home.

In the midst of our mental everies we hear a welcome voice, we have room for some more Brethren, who are willing to sleep on the garret. This was a good" show" and was gratefully accepted. We were soon decoyed into the arms of, "Nature's Sweet restorer, balmy blessed Sleep. Two ranks thirty feet long, add very sensibly to the heat of a warm garret. This is true without any controversy; but the whippoorwill in an adjacent tree did his utmost to make us forget the rough grating of untoward circumstances.

The morning bright with rosy light and the familiar feathered songsters of Summer mornings waked us out of sleep, and back into the world to serve out our probationary state. After the morning ablutions, the morning service to the Father of all, and the morning meal, we again ply our pencil and now the brethren announced that they want help to move the seats out of the Barn into the grove, a most beautiful and delightful grove, a very "nature bower," canopied all over with stately widespreading oaks, there is indeed agreable to the sweltering mass. Thither we resort by and by. Here comes the Standing Committee, and occupy the Stand erected for them. O the scene and the occasion. Proceedings open by singing "Komm O Komm du Geist des Lebens,&c. Behold the true foundation stone".

Exhortation by brother S. Lehman followed by prayer. What an impressive occasion. Truly numbers add eloquence and inspiration to such a meeting. It being no part of my design to report the regular proceedings we will here rest till noon. Here comes the Dinner hour and Summons; and so we repair to the tent of refreshments, with no disposition to play reporter of the regular proceedings again. Now let us look through this tent constructed of fine boards, about Ten Hundred feet having been consumed in its construction. One hundred and ten feet long and about forty feet wide; extending from the pump and back porch of the Dwelling house eastward to a large open wagon shed. In this latter building were stowed away when not in use all the table parapharnalia. Dishes almost by the cord, knives, forks, spoons, literally by the bushel basets full. Three tables through the entire length of this tent accommodated from three fifty to four hundred persons, and on Tuesday at noon very nearly two thousand brethren and sisters were supplied with dinner. The number of persons attending the council on this day reached three thousand. The floor of the boarding tent was nicely carpeted with tan bark which answered well for wet or dry weather. A brick cooking rague, about Six feet square, covered with four square cast iron plates each having a circular opening sufficiently large to receive a large iron kettle, such as commonly used to render lard, all of which were used at times, to their utmost capacity in the preparation of meat soup and coffee. Nine churches furnished the labor of cooking and serving tables, forty males and fifteen females. This labor was furnished on monday and Tuesday by the Lancaster churches proper, and on Wednesday and Thursday by the Berks, Lebanon & Dauphin Churhes. Three thousand dollars were contributed toward defraying the expenses of holding this meeting, which it is supposed will be ample to cover the fills. From the way the brethren have gone about this work, it is clearly presumeable that they either have money in sufficient abundance ,or that they are not seriously cursed with the "love of money." On Wednesday morning the sky looked lowering, with a light sprinkling of rain, and threatening more ; So the congregation "took up" their boards and benches , as well as their " line of march" to the spacious barn upon the premises.

The council was held in the little Swatara congregation , about a mile from their meeting house, and here as well as at all other accessible points , in the neighborhood the brethren held meeting for public preaching every evening at 6 o'clock , which arrangements had the effect of very materially scattering the members and securing for them comfortable quarters to lodge at night.

We supposed that on Wednesday the general attendance would not be so large , but the falling off, if any, is very slight. The Peanut and Panacea venders , are also still on hands. Just here let us notice a circumstance which proves the influence for good that the discussion of the tobacco question has exerted. We saw some brethren, and a number of our always dear sisters literally hidd themselves for the purpose of enjoying and regaling themselves with the peculiar sweets to be extracted from cigars and"meerschaums"after their kind.

Now we will again look in upon the council and see what we can see there. Evidently there are some "Characters" whose "points" and foibles as well as other peculiar traits might be sketched with telling zest and relish, if it were considered profitable to do so ; but to faithfully delineate "Points of character," with the mention of names are matters too personal to be edifying to the more conservative portion of the brethren, of whom a majority of this council is evidently composed; but the liberalists have still an immense advantage, because they hold within their ranks a greater amount, height, and depth, and width of intellectual grasp—not to put too fine a point on it—and questions are not decided by numbers,but by weight of counsel. So we find some of the brethren to be great sticklers for technical formalities of the most minute, not to say trifling character upon the one hand, and upon the other side the opposite extreme. Those liberal, easy, indulgent and sometimes impulsive, who look much less to form than substance, these are mostly the zealous, earnest evangelists or revivalists of the Church, who carry their points and their audiences by a storm of eloquence and fervent pathos.

Here we must conclude our sketches and get ready to leave for "Home sweet home," before the meeting is over. Good by.

P. H. Beaver.

Brother Holsinger : According to promise, I will send you some church news. Our beloved old brother Jacob M. Thomas had some meetings at the Baltimore and Ohio R.R. near Deer Park and Summitville , Alleghany county. Md, several days at different places , about the middle of May. At the close of the meeting there was application made for daptism , by an old grandmother about 72 years of age. It was nearly night when the request was made ; so he promised to send some one from the District meeting in the German Settlement , Preston Co, W. Va. The brethren in the council sent brother Jacob M Thomas and the writer to attend to the request ; which was done on the 23rd day of May on our return home , when we had meeting on that day , and four more made application , and the same day were added to the church by baptism five members; and we believe a good prospect for some more. The old sister said she would have been a member long before this time if she had had an opportunity. So dear brethren , it shows we ought to take the Lord's advice. "Go, teach all nations." Jacob Beighly.

Brother Holsinger : One of the chief advantages, derived from the publication of our periodicals is, the affording of a means of communication with one another, in which we can express our "joys and sorrows, hopes and fears," and thereby are enabled to "rejoice with those who do rejoice, and weep with those who weep." And if there is more joy in Heaven over one sinner that repenteth, than over ninty and nine just persons that need no repentance," we also should feel to rejoice when sinners come to the fold of Christ and vow allegiance to King Immanuel.— And now, we of the Lewistown Congregation feel encouraged, as the "Ark of the Lord" is once more moving amongst us; some having professed to be tired of sin, and have united themselves with the professed followers of the "meek and lowly Jesus" May they have strength to sustain them in the trials and afflictions they shall meet with, in their pilgrimage here on earth, and then finally enjoy the rest that is in reservation for all of God's people

We were permitted to attend to the ordinances of the Lord's house at the time we had appointed, on the 22nd inst. Brethren F. P. Loehr of Michigan, and Samuel Mohler of Ohio, together with other brethren from neighboring branches, were with us, and labored earnestly for the cause of their Master. Our prayer is that we may not soon forget, nor fail to appreciate their labor of love among us, and that as we one by one leave the scene of this mortal life, we may be prepared to meet on the shores of Immortality, and enjoy the sweet fellowship of "those who have come up through much tribulation ;" and so "may we ever be with the Lord."

Geo. S. Myers

Lewistown, Pa.

Brother Henry : As some of the brethren want to know who to send money to, for my expenses to Oregon, I will say, please send it to brother Michael Forney, or to brother Samuel Forney, Parkersburg, Ill. There has been some paid in I do not know how much, but the brethren will make a report of what is paid in

J. B. Ellenberger

The Brethren of the Panther Creek Church, in Dallas county, Iowa, intend, the Lord willing, to hold a communion meeting at brother Robert Badgers on the 10th and 11th of June, commencing at 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

Also, the brethren of the Coon River Church, Guthrie county, Iowa, near Panora, on the following Saturday and Sunday, the 17th and 18th of June. A general invitation is extended to all that can be with us. It is especially desired that ministering brethren who can do so, will come to the first, and remain until the second communion, and hold meetings in both churches during the week between. Brethren coming to Panther Creek by Railroad, will stop off at Dallas Centre, and those coming to Panora by Railroad, can come to Jefferson, by N. W. R. R. and by giving information to brethren Long or Badger will be met at Dallas Centre: or to the writer, will be met, and conveyed to the last named place, from either of the last named stations. The two meetings will be held about 12 miles apart.

By order of the brethren.

B. E. PLAINE.

Dear Brother: By your permission I will give you and the readers of the C. F. C. a short sketch of our travel to the West. On the first day of May I left my home, was met at Lima by brother Abraham Sumey, took Cars for Sturgis Mich. then the 1 o'clock A. M. train for Chicago; were met at White Pigeon, by friend Hezekiah Davis. Reached Quincy Ill. Thursday evening about 6 o'clock. Wednesday morning took the train for Hamilton, Mo. on the Hannibal & St Jo. R. R. Reached brother Geo Witmer's in the evening at 5 o'clock. Sister Witmer had just got home in the morning from a visit to her parents and relatives in South Bend, Ind. Found brother Geo. and family all in good health; and were received with gladness by all the family. Next day, the 4th, we parted; Sumery and Davis went for North, to Mercer Co. and I went with brother Witmer and daughter for place of District meeting. Reached brother C. Root's in good time. Had meeting in the evening in a school house near by. Brother Jacob Ullery & brother Pipinger from Clay Co. met with us. How we [illegible] for the first time [illegible] Root: fare well. Next morning, May 5th, fine pleasant weather, we went to the place of meeting, some 4 miles distance. Soon the brethren gathered in from the different parts of the State. The meeting was organized appointing Brother John Hershey foreman, and brother Geo. Witmer & S. S. Mohler, Clerks.

Had a good representation: if I mistake not, 23 churches were represented. The brethren conducted the council in good ordor. Many queries: a few were sent to A. M. probably being in council while I am writing. I have left the brethren with a high regard, and am confident that the Gospel will be preached in Mo. and carried out in its primitive purity.

Went home with the brethren of Clinton Co. Had meeting on Sunday at 10 A. M. also at 4 P. M. near the residence of brother P. B. Shoemaker's. Here I must omit names for the sake of brevity; but I got quite well acquainted with the brethren and Sisters for the short time I stayed. Went home with old Sister Shoemaker.

On Monday morning, May 8th, visted the grave-yard, where brother I. Shoemaker lies buried. The brethren have built a nice plain meeting-house close by. Same day took train at Plattsburg for St. Joseph, thence for Forest city. Stopped off; went to brother Joseph Click's; made acquaintance; found them in good health. Also went and made a short acquaintance with brother A. J. Correll, who moved there lately, from Tenn. Thence for Hamburg Iowa, where I met my company again.—Had meeting in Hamburg; a good turn out, and the best of order.—Brother John Syter lives here, who moved here from our district, Fawn River, Mich. Thence crossed the Missouri river at Nebraska city.—Went to Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska, thence to Omaha, to Council Bluff; thence to Missouri Valley.—Stayed 3 days with the brethren in Harrison county Iowa. Had three meetings; one was added to the church by baptism, and one more made application. Here lives our brother I Dell, with whom we have been acquainted many years. Made acquaintance [illegible] there Fill...ore.—Arrived safe [illegible] day the 17th, found [illegible] well. Thanks to the Lord.

GEO. LONG.

Mechanicsburg, Ind.

Disappointed but not Discouraged.

Disappointed again; but not discouraged; for our disappointments, are God's appointments, provided we are submissive. I came here to Tyrone to-day, with the expectation of remaining three days with the COMPANION family; but circumstances cause me to leave to-morrow morning, for Bourbon, Indiana. I defer therefore giving an account of my journey, which was very profitable and pleasant to me, from first to last, and trust that no one with whom I had an interview, of the many of my dear brethren and sisters, especially the younger part of them in whom I feel a special interest, shall have cause to be displeased with me; if so, I will try to do better hereafter; certain it is, I feel very grateful for all the kindness shown me, a fellow pilgrim to the land of rest, and remain as ever, your's in love.

F. P. LŒHR.

Tyrone, June 12th, 1871.

Editors of the Companion. Seeing two applications in the last No. for free copies of the Companion, and as I think both to be real worthy ones, I hope both are granted; and I send herewith 75 cents for the payment of one, hoping and trusting that some other Reader feels himself able to follow my humble example and defray the expenses of the other.

Fraternally yours.

C. S.

Our lovefeast in Shelby county, Iowa, will be on the 26th and 27th of August, if the Lord will; and we hereby give a general invitation to the Brotherhood. Avoca, on the C. R. I. and P. railroad, is our station. If notified by mail at Harlen, Iowa, conveyance will be furnished.

Visitor please copy.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with obituary notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In Morfordsville, Pleasant Valley township Johnson county, Iowa, CAROLINE E. GREEN.

She was born in Augusta, Oneida County, New York, and died March 12th, 1871, aged 38 years 1 month and 14 day.

Though not a member with us, she was the wife of our beloved brother Eden Green; has two children numbered with us, and was only prevented the enjoyment of full fellowship herself by her protracted affliction. She died in anticipation of a happy rest with the people of God.

J. L. SWITZER.

In the Snake Spring Valley congregation, April 24th, our beloved brother WILLIAM CLAPPER, son of sister Mary Clapper, (widow); aged 46 years 10 months. Funeral services by Jacob Steel, Andrew Snowberger, and Henry Hershberger.

GEORGE CLAPPER.

In the Bachellor Run branch, Carroll Co., Indiana, May 30th, sister ELIZABETH WIATTE, of a short illness of one week;—aged 61 years 1 month and 23 days. She bore her affliction with great patience, and was followed to the grave by a very large concourse of people. Funeral services by Hiel Hamilton, and Isaac Ikenbe , from Revelations 14 : 13, to an attentive audience.

Jacob B. Landis,

Visitor please copy.

In the bounds of the Smith Fork church, Clinton county, Missouri, ANDREW J. BIRD; aged 47 years 2 months and 12 days. Disease Consumption. He lingered long, waiting patiently for his day, which was on the 4th of June. He put off mortality to put on immortality. Funeral services by the Brethren.

D. D. Sell.

LIST OF MONEYS received for subscription, books, &c.,

B. F. Kittinger,	$0,75	A Cocanower,	,50
J. Everet,	1 50	S. Lutz,	8,50
J. C. Naylor,	1,00	K. K. Sprinkle,	1,60
Isaac Kulp,	3,00	D. Balsbaugh,	1,00
A. Trostel,	1,50	R. K. Binkley,	1,50
J. E. Bowser,	4,50	C. Royer,,	1,50
Isaac Lutz,	,75	J. Harshey,	1,50
A. Puterbaugh,	1,25	D. H. Fahrney,	4.50
C. U. Gates,	1,75	Isaac Ebey	1,50
Daniel Wolf,	1,60	J. J. Cover,	6,00
L. M. Emmert,	1.00	J. R. Royer,	6,00
X	1.65	D. C. Moomaw,	9,35
H. Ebee,,	2,25	J. S. McFadden,	1,60
D. N. Wingert,	5,75	M. Deardorff,	1,00
D. M. Miller,,	,75	C. C. Campbell,	,75
W. C. Rench,	75	M. A F. Kirksey,	,50
J. D. Arnest,	60	D. D. Sell,	1,50
R. Studebaker,	75	J. B. Landis,	1,00
C. Shank,.	75	J. M. Wolf,	,75
J. H. Caylor,	1.50	D. Gindlesperger,	5,00
R. Gallagher,	1,50	D. Clem,	,75
Joseph Fritz,	,75	M. T. Baer,	1,75
D. Province,	,50	J. H Stager,	,50
J. Everett,	1,50	M. A. Replogle,	1,75
Mrs. H. Smelker	1,00	L. N. Showalter,	5,00
D. Province,	,50

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid	0 75
12 copies, post paid	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	$0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN & ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid	$1 00
Per dozen,	10.50
Turkey Morocco, Ger. & Eng.
One copy, post paid,	1.75
Per dozen " "	18.00
Plain Single German
One copy, post paid	.75
Per dozen"	$5.50

For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with Interlinear Word for-word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price, $4.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol., $2.25. Indispensable.

Life at Home; or the Family and its Members—including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed. The Altar in the House, etc. By Wm. Aikman. $1 50; full gilt, $2.

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. Thompson. Fancy Cloth, $1.00.

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand-book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners with a Chart for recording the sizes of the Different Organs of the Brain, in the Delineation of Character, with upwards of 170 Engravings. $1. Muslin, $1.25.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S. R. Wells. $1 50; Library Ed. $2.

Oratory Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Clergymen's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary Usage. By W. Pittenger. $1.50.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Beautifully Illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth gilt, beveled boards. Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75 cents.

Any of the above sent by mail, post paid, on receipt of price.

The Phrenological Journal, An Illustrated Five Cents Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $2 00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50, or with the New Year's, for $4.00. We commend the Journal to all who want a good Family Magazine and who do not.

The Christian Harp, containing 32 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP.

Per dozen, post paid.	$0.25
Per hundred, post paid,	1.50

Marriage Certificates.

On good, heavy paper, per doz., post paid,	0 75
" " per hundred, "	2 40
COMPANION Volume 8, bound post; paid,	$2.70
Record at the office,	2.25
Smith's Theology, Post Paid,	1.50
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.50
EBERSOLE'S HARMONIA.
Single copy, Post Paid	$1.50
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid.	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder.
Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express,	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	.60
German & English Testaments,	.75

OCTAVO, PICA EDITION.

Revised New Testament.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50
18 MO. EDITION.
Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25
32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION
Plain Cloth Binding, post paid	.75
25 copies to one person, by express.	5 00
Roan binding, red edges, post paid	.50

Where one or two dozen is wanted, in places adjacent to Railroads, they may be sent cheaper by express.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, post paid.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price $6 00 per dozen. One copy 60 cents.

1780 1871

ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK?

Use Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

CLEANSE YOUR BLOOD!!

An Alterative and Cathartic, or Tonic and Purge combined, for diseases arising from bad blood; such as Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Erysipelas, Worms, Chills and Fever, Scrofula, Pimples, Tetter, &c. TRY IT.

Established 1780 in package form. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form, which was brought to its present state of preservation and perfection some years later by Dr. P. Fahrney, Chicago, Ill's, who conducts the trade west of Ohio. Great reputation! Many Testimonials! Ask for that prepared at Waynesboro, Pa., and Chicago, Ill's. Beware of imitations. Genuine retails at $1 25 per bottle. Druggists and Medicine dealers sell it.

Dr. P. Fahrney's "Health Resorer" gives the history and uses of the BLOOD CLEANSER, testimonials, and other information, sent free of charge. Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.

WAYNESBORO, PA.

BEES.

Pure Italian Queen Bees for sale, at $2.25 each. Full directions sent with each order.

J. S. HEDDINGS.
Box 22. LEWISTOWN
24,1mo. Mifflin Co., Pa.

Sure Cure for Gapes.

I have discovered a sure cure for [illegible] chickens and turkeys, which I have used for two years. Costs a mere trifle. No [illegible] during warm weather, &c. I will send [illegible] with a [illegible] [illegible] on receipt of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

FACTS.—Religious dialogue, 12 pages 4 cents single copy; thirty cents a doz. All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, postoffice county & state written in unmistakable letters

Address,
H. R. HOLSINGER, Tyrone Pa

The Great Remedy.

Those who are prejudiced against anything new should know that Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea was used in practice by old Dr. P. Fahrney of Washington county, Md., as far back as 1789. It is now put up in bottles but the medicinal properties are the same. Unlike anything else in market it can be taken with benefit in all diseases from a bad cold to a violent fever From a ringworm to a bad case of scrofula or cancer. Infants can take it as well as the aged and feeble, and sells readily wherever it is known. Will be sent upon the most liberal terms to those who will introduce the same among their neighbors. Many have done well by ordering. For particulars and references address Dr. P. Fahrney, No 30, North Dearborn St. Chicago, Illinois, or

The "Health Messenger" a medical circular to any address upon application to

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.
Waynesboro, Pa.

To Nebraska, California, and Kansas, and the B. & M. R. R. Lands.

The "Burlington Route," as called, lies right in the path of the Star of Empire. It runs almost immediately in the center of the great westward movement of emigration. Crossing Illinois and Iowa, it strikes the Missouri river at three points.

These three points are the gateways into three great sections of the trans-Missouri region.

The Northern gate is Omaha, where the great Pacific road will take you to the land of gold and grapes, sunny mountains, and perpetual summer.

The middle gate is Plattsmouth, which opens upon the south half of Nebraska, south of the Platte river, a region unsurpassed on the continent for agriculture and grazing. Just here are the B. & M. Railroad lands, concerning which Geo. S. Harris, the land officer at Burlington, Iowa, can give you all information, and in the heart of them is Lincoln, the State Capital and present terminus of the road.

The Southern gate leads to Kansas, by connections with the St. Joe Road at Hamburg running direct to St. Joe and Kansas City

The trains of the Burlington run smoothly and safely, and make all connections. It runs the best of coaches, Pullman Palace and Pullman dining cars, and should you take the journey for the journey's sake alone, you will be repaid: or take it to find a home or a farm, and you cannot find either better than among the B. & M. lands, where you can buy on ten years' credit, and at a low price.

TYRONE BANK,
TYRONE, PA.

This Bank, intending to do a general banking business, solicits accounts from Banks, Bankers and others. Collections made on all points. Interest allowed on DEPOSITS left on time. Paper discounted on liberal terms

Wm. P. Orbison,	D. J. Gwin,
John Scott,	H. G. Fisher,
Thomas Lyon,	J. H. Glazier,
Wm. Dean,	C. C. Wilhite,
C. W. Carrigan	and others.

Beers' Expanding Scroll Water-wheel.

[Patented 1868] This wheel is now running with the overshot, in a Flouring Mill, and is using less water than the overshot. Inventor being a Millwright, and having seen and used all the new waterwheels, does not hesitate to say it is the first iron wheel that can compete with the overshot, and is one half cheaper, simpler and better. For farther information address J. L. Beers and Sons, Millwrights and Manufacturer's of wheel shafting and mill gearing of all kinds, continued Sawmill feed and Sawmill irons.

J. L. Beers & Sons
Cocolamus, Juniata Co. Pa.

THE PIOUS YOUTH.

A MONTHLY PUBLICATION

Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.

It comes about as near pleasing everybody as any paper published.

One dollar a year in advance.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,

ALDEN'S READY BOOK BINDER.—An article for universal use! For filing or Binding Books, Magazines, Papers, Music, Sermons, Manuscripts, etc., etc. See them at Book Stores and News Stands, or send stamp for circulars, or 25 cents for sample, saying where you saw this advertisement, to BRIGHT SIDE CO., Manufacturers, Chica-Co, Ill.

SHORT HAND WRITING.—Students of Phonography and all others who are interested in the art can obtain instruction books. Send stamp for price list and tracts.

"AMERICAN PHONETIC DEPOT.
Tyrone, Pa.

J. S. THOMAS, & CO.
WHOLESALE GROCERS
and
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

No 305 Race St. above 3rd, Philadelphia, N. B. Country Produce taken in exchange for goods or sold on commission.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine,

with Drop Feed, new Take-up, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted First Class, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted traveling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $200 per month. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. Co.

Union Square, 53 East 17th St., New York

Universal Guide for Cutting Garments.

By which every family may cut its own garments for men and boys, of twenty six different sizes; for Coats, Pants, Vests, and Shirts, and Ladies' Dress Bodies. Agents wanted to sell State, County, and Family Rights. For Particulars address Miller & Quinn, Tyrone, Blair Co., Pa.

Wm. M. Lloyd, Altoona, Pa. D. T. Caldwell, Tyrone Pa.

LLOYD, CALDWELL & CO.,
BANKERS,

Receive monies on deposit, and pay interest if left 6 months, at 4 per cent per annum, or 5 per cent. if left one year.

Special contracts made with parties acting a administrators, executors, guardians, and persons holding monies in trust. Dealers in every description of Stocks and Bonds.—Government Securities made a speciality.

Gold and Silver bought and sold, and a general Banking business transacted.

CABINET MAKING & UNDERTAKING

The undersigned keeps on hand and manufactures to order all kinds of Furniture. He is also neatly fitted out for conveying the dead to their last resting place.

Manufacturer of the Common Sense Dasher Washing Machine. Shop at the Cross Roads, near Warrior's Mark, Pa.

JAMES S. COX.

A Washing Machine may be seen and purchased at this office. v6n48tf.

A Card.

Drs. D. Fahrney & Son, Uroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.

7-10-1 yr. pd.

Excelsior Bee Hive.

This hive being now well established is extensively manufactured, and for sale. $3 for single hive, also Bee-keepers Instruction, 15 cents single copy. Liberal inducements to agents. Address S. B. REPLOGLE,

Roaring Spring,
7-12-ms. Blair Co. Pa.

THE
Christian Family Companion

Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements; that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
Tyrone, Pa.

Christian Family Companion.

BY S. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—JESUS. At $1.50 Per Annum

VOLUME VII. TYRONE, PA. TUESDAY, JUNE 20, 1871. NUMBER 25.

Selected for the COMPANION.

The Shore of Eternity.

Alone! to land alone upon that shore!
With no one sight that we have seen before;
Things of a different hue,
And the sounds all new,
And fragrance so sweet, the soul may faint;
Alone! oh, that first hour of being a saint!

Alone! to land alone upon that shore!
On which no wavelets lisp, no billows roar;
Perhaps no shape of ground,
Perhaps no sight or sound,
No forms of earth, our fancies to arrange,
But to begin, alone, that mighty change!

Alone! to land alone upon that shore!
Knowing so well we can return no more;
No voice, or face of friend,
None with us to attend
Our disembarking on that awful strand,
But to arrive alone, in such a land!

Alone! to land alone upon that shore!
To begin alone to live forever more!
To have no one to teach
The manners or the speech
Of that new life, or put us at our ease.
Oh, that we might die in pairs, or companies!

Alone? No! God hath been there long before;
Eternally hath waited on that shore,
For us who were to come
To our eternal home.
And he hath taught his angels to prepare
In what way we are to be welcomed there.

Like one that waits and watches, he hath sat,
As if there were none else for whom to wait,
Waiting for us, for us
Who keep him waiting thus,
And who bring less to satisfy his love,
Than any other of the souls above.

Alone? The God we know is on that shore;
The God, of whose attractions we know more
Than of those who may appear Nearest and dearest here
Oh, is he not the life long friend we know,
More privately than any friend below?

Alone? The God we trust is on that shore;
The faithful One, whom we have trusted more
In trials and in woes,
Than we have trusted those
On whom we leaned most in our earthly strife.
Oh, we shall trust him more in that new life!

Alone? The God we love is on that shore;
Love not enough, yet whom we love far more,
And whom we've loved all through,
And with a love more true
Than other loves,—yet we shall love far more.
True love on him begins upon that shore.

So, not alone we land upon that shore;
'Twill be as though we had been there before!
We shall meet more we know,
Than we can meet here below.
And find our rest, like some returning dove,
And be at home at once, with our Eternal Love.
—Faber.

For the Companion.

Christ the Great Physician.
No. I.

Human depravity has become so great, that nothing short of application to the great Physician of souls, Jesus Christ, will meet the wants of one individual this side of eternity. In the present day and age of the world, human skill has become so great, that almost every disease that human flesh is heir to can be successfully treated. But when we come to speak of the soul, the principle of life, we find no remedy that will bring it back or restore it to its original purity, save the blood of Jesus. He alone can save when all human skill is frustrated. He alone will meet his patients—blessed followers, if you please—when all human art and skill becomes baffled—when the dark curtains of death begin to draw around their dying couch and bear their spirits safely to a heaven of rest.

Seeing, then, that such an unholy being as unregenerated man, upon application to this great Physician can be restored from this depraved condition, how necessary that those, who have never had "the blood of Christ" which "cleanseth from all sin" applied to their sorrowful and undone condition, come to so great a Physician without delay, and be saved from the torments of eternal misery and woe.—All will be eternally saved who yield submissively to the mandates of the great Physician—Jesus Christ. Sin is the cause of man's depravity. But the blood of Christ will cleanse the most unclean sinner, as sure as Naaman at the command of the prophet was cleansed from his foul leprosy, or as the blind man at the bidding of Jesus came seeing, after he had washed the clay salve from off his eyes.

While the sinner pursues his downward course, his condition, spiritually, is far worse than the most unclean leper. And as the afflictions of the flesh are so numerous and variously formed, their destructive tendencies are vastly different; so with the sin sick soul: it may be so wonderfully defiled with sin, that its complete ruin may be accomplished in a few unhappy years; or it may only be slightly tinted with sin, but slowly and gradually growing worse and worse, all the time becoming deeper dyed in unholiness and crime, until it is hurled down the vortex of eternity altogether unfit for the Master's use.

Sinner, your condition may not be very critical to-day. You, at present, perhaps, are within easy reach of the Physician of souls. The kingdom of God,—blessed kingdom, in which we alone are safe,—may not be very far from you. But what may your condition be to-morrow, or in years to come? Will you come any nearer assuming both the divine image of your Creator and character of the blessed Jesus by procrastinating the day of grace, turning away continually him who so often knocks, and so earnestly too, at your door (heart) that he may cleanse you as he did many unclean lepers of old—that your bodies may be a fit temple for the Holy Ghost, until you may be bidden to leave this sin cursed world, and enter the blissful state of the redeemed, and henceforth enjoy the felicity of ineffable glory? Ah! sinner, don't you see your forlorn condition? If you do not, just for once take a peep into the Divine Mirror—the Gospel of Jesus Christ—and you may see at once, that, unless you apply to this great Physician, you are forever lost. The fall in Eden is what has been the cause of all human depravity. And now Jesus Christ, our King and great Physician, comes to you, and earnestly entreats you to accept him and his Gospel, that you may be able to attain unto the highest type of Christianity, and thus be saved from the allurements of vice and unholiness.

F. M. SNYDER.

Welcome, Adored Name!

In the centre of their inmost souls they wore Thee,
Where rack and torment strived in vain to reach Thee.
Little, alas! thought they
Who tore the fair breasts of thy friends,
Their fury but made way
For Thee, and served them in their glorious ends.
What did their weapons, but with wider pores
Enlarge thy flaming-breasted lovers,
More freely to transpire
That impatient fire
The heart that hides Thee hardly covers?
What did their weapons but set wide the doors
For Thee? fair purple doors of love's devising;
The ruby windows which enriched the east
Of thy so oft-repeated rising.
Each wound of theirs was thy new morning,
And re-enthroned Thee in thy rosy nest,
With blush of thine own blood thy day adorning:
It was the wit of love o'erflowed the bounds
Of wrath, and made the way through all these wounds.
Welcome, dear, All-adorned Name!
For there is no knee
That knows not Thee;
Or if there be such sons of shame,
Alas! what will they do,
When stubborn rocks shall bow,
And hills hang down their heav'n-saluting heads
To seek for humble beds
Of dust, where, in the bashful shades of night,
Next to their own low nothing they may lie;
And couch before the dazzling light of thy dread Majesty.
That they by love's mild dictate now
Will not adore Thee,
Shall then, with just confusion, bow
And break before Thee.

—Richard Crashaw (1644.)

For the Companion.

The Glorious Appearing of Christ.

"Behold he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. Even so. Amen. Rev. 1: 7.

The most glorious coming and appearance of the Son of God, may well be reckoned in his people's glory. For their sake he came into the world, suffered, died, rose, ascended; and for their sake it is that he will return. To this end will Christ come again to receive his people unto himself, that where he is there they may be also. The bridegroom's departure was not upon divorce. He did not leave us with a purpose to return no more. He hath left pledges enough to assure us to the contrary. We have his word, his many promises, his ordinances, which show forth his death till he come; and his Spirit, to direct, sanctify, and comfort, till he return. We have frequently tokens of love from him, to show us he forgets not his promise, nor us. We daily behold the forerunners of his coming, foretold by himself. We see the fig-tree putteth forth leaves, and therefore know that summer is nigh. Though the riotous would say, "My Lord delayeth his coming," yet, let the saints lift up their heads, for their redemption draweth nigh. Alas! fellow Christians, what should we do if our Lord should not return? What a case are we here left in! What! leave us in the midst of the wolves, and among lions, a generation of vipers, and here forget us? Did he buy us so dear, and then leave us sinning, suffering, groaning, dying daily? It cannot be. This is like our unkind dealing with Christ, who, when we feel ourselves warm in the world, care not for coming to him; but this is not like Christ's dealing with us: He that would come to suffer, will surely come to triumph. He that would come to purchase, will surely come to possess. Where else were all our tears and our waiting? What were all the patience of the saints worth to them? Were we not left of all men the most miserable? Christians, hath Christ made us forsake all the world and be forsaken of all the world, to hate all and be hated of all—and all this for him—that we might have him instead of all? And will he, think you, after all this, forget us, and forsake us himself? Far be such a thought from our hearts!

But why stayed he not with his people while he was here? Why? Was not the work on earth done? Must he not take possession of glory in our behalf? Must he not intercede with the Father, plead his suffering, be filled with the Spirit to send forth, receive authority, and subdue his enemies? Our abode here is short. If he had stayed on earth, what would it have been to enjoy him for a few days and then die? He hath more in heaven to dwell amongst, even the spirits of many generations. He will have us live by faith, and not by sight.

O brethren and sisters in the Lord, what a day will that be, when we who have been kept prisoners by sin, by sinners, by the grave, shall be brought out by the Lord himself! It will not be such a coming as his first was—in poverty and contempt, to be spit upon and buffeted, and crucified again. He will not come, O careless world, to be slighted and neglected by you any more!

Yet that coming will not be wanting in its glory. If the heavenly host, for the celebration of his nativity, must praise God, with what shouting will angels and saints at that day proclaim glory to God, peace and good will toward men! If a star must lead men from remote parts of the world, to come to worship a child in a manger, how will the glory of his next appearing constrain all the world to acknowledge his sovereignty! If riding he enters Jerusalem with hosannas, with what peace and glory will he come toward the New Jerusalem! If when he was in the form of a servent, they cry out, "What manner of man is this, that even the winds and sea obey him," what will they say when they shall see him coming in his glory, and the heavens and the earth obey him?

"Then shall all the tribes of the earth monrn.' To think and speak of that day with horror, doth well become the impenitent sinner; but ill the believing saint. Shall the wicked behold him, and cry, "Yonder is he whose blood we neglected—whose grace we resisted—whose counsel we refused—whose government we cast off?" and shall not the saints, with inconceivable gladness cry "Yonder is he whose blood redeemed us, whose Spirit cleansed us, whose law did govern us, in whom we trusted, and he hath not deceived our trust; and now we see we have not waited in vain."

And now, brethren and sisters, should we not put up that petition heartily, "Thy kingdom come." "The Spirit and the bride say come; and let him that heareth, (and readeth) say, come." Our Lord himself says, "Surely I come quickly." "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city."

WILLIAM S. WHITEL.

Stuart's Draft, Va.

For the Companion.

The Lord's Treasury.

God's chosen people of ancient times, had in their temple a repository, where they deposited their tithes and offerings, called the Treasury of the House of God. These treasures were for the use of the Levites, the widow and fatherless, the stranger, and to maintain the service of the house of God.

It was the duty of all, except the Levite and the very poor, to contribute to this treasury. They gave it as unto the Lord, as it were, in return for benefits conferred by him, in giving them fruitful seasons—the early and latter rain.

At times they gave so abundantly that they needed to be restrained. But when they fell into idolatry the tithes and offerings were withheld; and it became necessary for the prophets to reprove them for having robbed God. As a punishment, and for correction, God sent upon them blasting and mildew. Worms devoured the fruit of their gardens and vineyards. Their fields were scorched with drought, and yet they would not return to the Lord; not until they were carried away into captivity.

"Now all these things happened unto them for ensamples; and were written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come. Each branch of the church of Christ is now entrusted with a treasury of the Lord, to which it is our duty and privilege to contribute; a privilege that I fear we do not rightly appreciate. Can we, indeed, make some return to God for all the blessings he daily lavishes upon us? How ungrateful, if we have no desire to do so! When we receive a favor from a friend, how anxious we are to return it! but we are very careless, sometimes, about returning the Lord's favors. We seem to forget, that we can do something for Jesus.

The poor, and those in moderate circumstances, are too apt to think that the expenses of the church should be borne entirely by the rich members. We, who have but little of this world's goods, ought not to think that, because we have only one talent, nothing is expected of us. It is our duty to double it the same as though we had five; lest the Master say, "Thou wicked and slothful servant," and cast us out of his presence. Let us always remember that God gave us the little we have, and if we are faithful stewards of that little, we shall have a reward. And we ought not to forget that it is to Jesus we are giving, and that it is our blessed privilege to do so.

We are all members of the same body, and all enjoy the same church privileges; we ought, therefore, be willing to work together; according to our ability, and as God has prospered us: "For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not." Letus cheerfully return, to God, a part of whatever he has given us. Why should we lose our reward? Paul calls it a good works; and we are commanded to abound in good work. He further says: "Now, he that ministereth seed to the sower, both minister bread for your food, and multiply your seed sown, and increase the fruits of your righteousness." So we need not fear our means will be diminished if we give liberally.

We sometimes hear expressions, something like this: "What, I a day-laborer help to build a meeting-house?" or do something else. Now we think these certainly forget who it is that has given them strength to labor, and above all, who has ransomed them from the penalty of their sins. They must also forget, or have no faith in the promises of great rewards connected with giving to the Lord's treasury. Hear God's promise to Israel, remembering he is "the same yesterday, to-day, and forever:" "Bring ye all the tithes into the store-house, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." Paul, when encouraging the Corinthian brethren to give liberally, says: "God is able to make all grace abound toward you: that ye always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work." Are not these good promises? And if we include the reward laid up in heaven for the cheerful giver, I think none of us would say that we are willing to lose them.

We can not think there are any so poor, except those who are supported by the church, that they could not give at least a dime once a year. And I would say to the very poor: If you have not so much as that, don't be ashamed to give even less. You are giving it to God; and he knows how to estimate the gifts. Remember the widow's two mites, and how she was commended by the Lord. The savor of her pious deed will be wafted down to the latest time; and her "zeal hath," no doubt, "provoked very many;" as yours also may. Show your love for the Master by doing what you can; and the rich, if they have withheld, will become ashamed, and they will also cast in, and the Lord's treasury will always be full; and you will have the pleasure of knowing, that you, by your example, helped to fill it.

What an opportunity does the Lord's treasury afford those who are rich to lay "up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life!" Paul directed Timothy to charge the rich, "that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate." So many are inclined to "keep treasure together"—such treasure of which James says: "the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire." How horrible, to be the owners of such treasures in the last day! Treasures that the rust of them will eat the flesh as fire! But the rich need not let their treasures rust: if they use them aright, the handling of them will keep them bright. We can all lay up treasures in the store-house of heaven, that will be a wellspring of joy forever.

Now is the time to fill our seed baskets with precious seed; and now is the time to sow it, and the treasury of the Lord is a fruitful field, in which to cast it, and from which we shall reap abundantly when the harvest has fully come.

An empty treasury! How painfully these words fall on the ears of all who have the interest of the church at heart! Is not an empty treasury an indication of a lukewarm church, if not something worse? The Lord's treasury empty! and the earth his, and the fulness thereof!! Then verily something that belongs to the Lord must be in our own treasuries. Let us search and see. "Can a man rob God," and be guiltless or escape punishment! Hear the answer: "Ye are cursed with a curse, for ye have robbed me." How fearful! "Take heed and beware of covetousness," saith Jesus. The Apostle Paul tells us further that "covetousness is idolatry." God forbid that it should be said of us, as it was of the Samaritans: "They feared God, and worshipped idols." They fear God, and worship mammon. Let us not, as individuals, think we can hide our delinquency under the broad mantle of the church. God knows every penny in his treasury, and he knows who put it there. They that have treasure there will receive a reward; they that have none he will judge. If we had that love for the Master and the church, that ought to fill our heart's we would not be so careless in the matter; but there would be an earnest desire to contribute something; and we would be willing to make some sacrifice to be able to do so.

When it becomes necessary to contribute more largely than usual, let us ask ourselves the question: Has the Lord done aught for me, and can I do anything for him? If this question were rightly considered in the spirit it ought to be, there would be no empty church treasuries; but each one would give liberally, and exclaim: "Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gifts."

E. WILLIAMS.

Inherent and Imputed Righteousness.

Inherent righteousness sanctifies, imputed righteousness justifies. Inherent righteousness makes us shine before men, imputed, before God. Inherent righteousness pleases God, imputed, appeases him. Inherent righteousness discharges from hypocrisy, imputed, from guilt. Inherent righteousness makes us pray, imputed righteousness makes our prayers prevail. Inherent righteousness is our sincerity, imputed righteousness is our perfection. Inherent righteousness respects the Law, imputed righteousness answers it. Inherent righteousness is the evidence of our salvation, imputed righteousness is the foundation of it. Inherent righteousness is our joy, imputed righteousness our glory. Inherent righteousness is to be loved, imputed righteousness is to be trusted. Inherent righteousness is imperfect, imputed righteousness is perfect. Inherent righteousness is a qualification for Heaven, imputed righteousness our title to it. Inherent righteousness is what the Holy Spirit works within us, imputed righteousness is what the Lord Jesus has wrought for us.

G.

God's promises are true and faithful.

For the COMPANION.

Two Eternal States.

And these shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal Matth. 25: 46.

There are two eternal states, to which all mankind are destined: the one a state of life and happiness; and the other, of misery and woe. In one or the other will each of us soon be fixed. This is a truth which most persons profess to believe. But if we look at the actions of most men, —and these speak louder than words, —we are forced to say with the Scriptures: "All men have not faith." How many do we see in the world, who worship God with their lips and whose hearts are far from him, as the Savior himself hath said.

When we notice the two characters presented in the last paragraph in the chapter, we are forced to think, when comparing their daily walks with the perfect law of liberty, that there will be many in that day, who shall be shut out of the kingdom of heaven, and shall fail to enjoy that eternal felicity which is prepared for the people of God. Why? Because he says in the latter clause of the 45th verse: "Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me." Oh! how many do we see in the world, who make a profession of his excellent name, and yet deny his holy injunctions, and through covetousness do they watch, and take the advantage of the poor man's necessities, and not once, are they willing to lend a helping hand to those who need assistance! But to you, whom I address, in the language of the apostle let me say: "Be not carried about with every wind of doctrine;" but take heed to yourselves, and to the instructions given us in the Gospel by the great Judge of the quick and dead: "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth." A true belief of an eternal hell, and an eternal heaven cannot fail to make us fly from the one, and endeavor to secure the other. But even where we may hope there is a settled belief of these things, it must be owned through the cares and labors, or pleasure of life, they do not make so strong an impression upon us as they ought; nor are we so diligent in our preparation for eternity as we should be. The very word eternity, ought to fix our attention on this great subject.

Let us turn our attention to the account that the word of God gives us of hell. It is true, it is an awful subject, and unconverted persons do not like to hear of it; but if they do not like to hear of it, how will they be able to endure it? He says, "And these shall go away into everlasting punishment." Punishment is pain inflicted on account of breaking some law. If a man breaks the civil laws of our land, he is convicted, and sentenced to punishment according to his act. Next we see him shut up in prison; banished from society, there to suffer the penalty of the law he violated. So it will be with those who break God's law. Hell is the prison where the violators of God's law will be confined and punished.— God has made known to us his law, which may be found in the New Testament Scriptures; which law was dedicated by the blood of the covenant upon Calvary's cross; and a part of God's law, is embraced in the chapter as quoted above: "Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me. And these shall go away into everlasting punishment." Oh! what a word! My unconverted friend, how is it that you can sleep away your day of grace? In the language of the apostle I must say to you, "Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead and Christ shall give thee light." The very language of the quotation is startling: it is a punishment not only for a day, or a week, or a year, or even a hundred years; but it is everlasting. The law of God requires us to love and serve him; but being fallen creatures and unable of ourselves to do it aright, he also gives us his Spirit. Herein Christ is set forth as an all sufficient Savior, able and willing to save us from the guilt already contracted by our sins, and to renew and sanctify us by our complying with his will; or, as the apostle says: "seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth.

This is certainly our reasonable service. But the sinner refuses to obey He is so strongly bound with the cords of his sins; so in love with the lusts of the flesh; so besotted with the love of the world, that he persists in his sins notwithstanding the warnings of God; and neglects salvation, though a thousand times invited and entreated. Thus he lives, and thus he dies. What must be the consequence? God is just as well as merciful. His laws cannot be dispensed with. The sinner has no room to complain. He was warned, he was entreated; but he chose the ways of sin, and he must reap the wages thereof; for "the wages of sin is death." It is not the death of the body only, for all men must die; but it is the second death—the death beyond the tomb

We understand the term death to mean simply a separation; the spirit is not extinct, or annihilated, but is separated from the body. In the second death we understand the spirit is seperated from the peaceful presence of God, and consigned to that awful abyss "where the worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched;" and as the quotation tells, "And these shall go away into everlasting punishment." The very language itself explains the term death. Startling indeed to a considerate man! In this present world all your comforts flow from God. God is the chief good, and the source of all good in the world. He is omniscient omnipotent and omnipresent. His all-seeing eye beholds our every act and deed; and nothing can be hid from him.— He remembers all things; he knows all things; he made all things; yea, he knows even the very thoughts of our hearts. Oh! then repent and believe the gospel. "Turn ye, turn ye, for why will you die?" It is God who has made all creatures what they are. It is his sun which fills the world with light; it is his power by which man subsists, and enjoys his senses and his health. It is from him that we obtain our food and raiment; and though wicked men forget God in all these mercies, they are nevertheless from him, and in their proper tendency lead to him; for the goodness of God leadeth us to repentance. But from hell all these comforts will be withdrawn. They did not answer the purpose for which God intended them, to soften the hard and rebellious heart to obedience, and now the season of trial, and the day of grace, and the probationary state are over; there is no end for which they should be continued.

But it is not the loss of bodily comforts only, that the condemned shall suffer: they must forever lose the infinite pleasures that the redeemed in heaven will enjoy in the presence of God, with Christ in his celestial dignity, and in the presence of the holy angels. This indeed they do not value now, but they will then. They will have a tormenting prospect of the happiness of others. So Dives in the parable is represented as seeing Abraham afar off and Lazarus in his bosom. This will aggravate their misery as it would that of a man starving to death with hunger, and seeing others feasting bountifully upon the rich luxuries of this world.—And as our Savior expresses it, "there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets in the kingdom of heaven, and you yourselves thrust out."

The punishment of loss is not all, there is the punishment of sense.—Take an account of it, from the lips of our blessed Master, when he says, "Where their worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched." This is the description he gives of it over and over as recorded by Mark. By the worm that dieth not, is generally understood the gnawings of a guilty conscience, or the painful remorse which guilty sinners will feel when they remember the sin and folly that brought them to such a wretched state of misery and woe. Thus in the parable, Abraham spake to the rich man in hell, and says, "Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things; but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented." Luke 16 : 25. Memory will be a dreadful source of misery. "Son, remember."

We learn from the parable that the thinking faculties of man shall exist beyond the grave, even when these bodies of ours shall have mouldered back to the different particles of their mother dust; then, even then, shall the power of memory exist, and live parallel with God, because he gave it and takes it away. Lo! he watches over those different particles of dust, while slumbering with the silent nations under ground, until his appointed time, according to his own good pleasure, when Gabriel's trump shall sound at God's divine command:—then shall these bodies come together again and come forth, never to be separated again through the long duration of eternity.

We will now turn to the more pleasing part of the subject. "But the righteous into life eternal." But who are the righteous? "There is none righteous, no, not one;" that is in himself. It is by the righteousness of Christ put to the account of our unrighteousness, and strict obedience to the righteous law of God as given to us by Christ the righteous Judge. For as the apostle tells us: "Seeing you have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently." 1 Peter 1 : 22. So we see that our polluted souls may be purified, and must be purified, while in this probationary life, that they may be made fit for the Master's use. We understand that the law of God is right; that Christ is right;—and all that is right is righteousness, and that there are no non-essentials given us in this righteous law of God, or perfect law of liberty. And now for us to become righteous is, as before stated, through the righteousness of Christ and fulfilling the righteousness of his law by a literal performance of the same, as he hath instructed us. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me." "But the righteous into life eternal."

What is heaven? The carnal man can have no conception, for we are taught that it is spiritually discerned. It is not a Mohammedan paradise, where the lust of the flesh may be indulged. No, life and immortality are brought to light through the Gospel; and there we find it consists in a complete deliverance from all the evils of the present state, and in the enjoyment of all that can render the soul perfect and forever happy.

Need we be told that man is born to trouble? Nay, this is our sad and only inheritance, mingled, indeed, with a thousand undeserved mercies. But all the sorrows and afflictions of the true believer, shall cease at his death. No more excessive labor and fatigue. No pinching want and poverty. No painful, irksome, or loathsome disease shall trouble him. The inhabitants of heaven shall not say, "I am sick," nor shall any of the numberless sorrows of the mind, that we now feel, follow us to glory and happiness. We shall not suffer in our own person, nor shall we suffer by our neighbors, our relatives, or friends. Yea, we shall drop the body of sin in the dust, and we shall no more be grieved spectators of sin in the world. "God shall wipe away all tears from our eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away." Rev. 21 : 4.

But this is not all. Our knowledge, which is now so very limited, shall be wonderfully increased. It is eternal life to know God; but oh! how little do we know of him while beholding him through a glass darkly, in comparison to beholding him face to face! "The pure in heart shall see God," and know more in a moment, than all the learned of this world could attain in many years.—We shall know even as we are known. We shall have as immediate and familiar knowledge of divine things, as any of our most intimate friends have of us; yea, we shall know God, and Christ, and angels, in the same kind of way that they now know us,—not through a glass darkly, but face to face,—as clearly and distinctly as one man beholds another when they converse together. But the heaven of heavens will be the presence of Christ—being with Christ and beholding his glory. This is what Christ, as Mediator, prayed for in behalf of his disciples: "Father I will that they also whom thou hast given me be with me where I am: that they may behold my glory."—This is what Paul prayed for and longed to enjoy. And what will render the vision of Christ so very excellent is, "that we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." We shall bear his amiable, illustrious image of light, and love, and holiness, in our souls. Even our bodies, now vile by reason of sin, and soon shall be much viler in the corruption of the grave, shall, when raised from the dead, "be made like unto his glorious body:" made to bask in the sunshine of everlasting felicity in the presence of God and of Christ, and all the holy angels, with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and with all the redeemed from the earth, to shout anthems of praise to God and the Lamb forever and ever.

ANDREW STALNAKER

Take away the Bible, and you take away the elect succession of inspired men. Not a single patriarch, or priest, or prophet, or apostle, or evangelist is left to proclaim or record a single superhuman oracle.

For the Companion.

Sunday-Schools.

Bible Authority.

No. 1.

A few brethren among us will not engage in the Sabbath-School work, because they do not find it commanded in the Bible. They tell us they want a "thus saith the Lord" for all they do.

My brother, let me say to you that we, and the church of which we are members, do and teach many things for which no positive command can be found in the Book.

In which grand division of the Bible is the command found for building meeting-houses? And where do we find the plan of the house, the form and height of the pulpit?

Is it commanded in the Law or the Prophets to hold District and Yearly meetings, to make discipline to govern the church? In which chapter of the four records of the Gospel does the Savior give the pattern for our garments, or the style of wearing the hair? Where is it commanded that the sisters must wear caps?

My purpose in this article is not to advocate or oppose these things as taught by the church, but to try to show that if Sabbath-schools are condemned because there is no positive command for them, then these things also may be condemned.

But to the authority. "Gather the people together, men, and women, and children, and thy stranger that is within thy gates, that they may hear, and that they may learn, and fear the the Lord your God, and observe to do all the words of this law; And that their children, which have not known anything, may hear, and learn to fear the Lord your God as long as ye live in the land." Deut. 31 : 12,13.

"Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." Do you say this was commanded only to the apostles and that they did preach to all the then known world? If you can prove that the command to "Go into all the world and preach to every creature" ceased with the apostles, I can prove that the blessings which followed believing and being baptized ceased also with them.

But the objector says: "The command is preach the gospel;" I am no preacher, and you do not have preaching in the Sabbath-school." Yes, we do. And if you are a brother or sister you ought to preach there on every Sabbath that you have opportunity. "What, sisters preach! Are you going to have all the church preaching?" Certainly, all ought to preach; not only in the Sabbath-school, but out of it, too. Preaching means teaching; and all God's children should teach the way of salvation.

There is Law, and there has also been enough practical demonstration to convince all who have eyes and ears, that the LIVE Christian Sabbath-School, is a great auxiliary of the Church in bringing souls to Christ. May God bless what is in accordance with his will.

S. M. Minnich.

Antioch, Ind.

For the Companion.

Who are the Least?

In Companion, No. 22, I find an explanation given by L. West, on the question, "Who are the Least?" which question was asked by D. Baringer in No. 10, wishing to know who are the least esteemed in the Church, referring to 1 Cor. 4 : 4. In the German language it reads thus: "But ye, if ye have matters of things pertaining to this life, so ye do take those which are despised by the Church, and et them to judge." As bro. West has given his own views of this passage of Scripture more particularly through a desire to hear from other brethren, I thought I would give my views also, hoping they may prove satisfactory to the brethren.

We find that the apostle after reproving the Corinthian church of certain evils which had made such inroads into their church, reproved another lamentable evil in the same church. He inquired as a man in astonishment, whether any of them could venture to go to law with their brethren before the heathen magistrates, who were unrighteous before God, and might be expected to be unjust judges in such matters. Surely they ought to have decided all their differences by the arbitration of the saints, the holy disciples of Christ, and not set them to judge who are least esteemed by the church, which I think are certainly those that are outside of the church. We cannot reconcile this passage of Scripture with the view that the least, are members of the church. Now if we have matters of any importance, we would not entrust it into the hands of the least esteemed members; and again, the apostle spoke to their shame, because they were not making a selection of wise members in the church, but to the contrary, they took the law in hand, to have their matters investigated, and decided, before the unjust judges of the world; therefore their proceedings were, in the eyes of the holy apostle, too unwise, and inconsistent to be tolerated by members of Christ's body, who are to judge the world and angels. Now I hope the question is answered, "Who are the least esteemed in the church?" not those in the church, but those outside of the church. The brethren no doubt will examine my views, and if they can reconcile this passage of Scripture to better satisfaction, well and good; if not, nothing lost.

Daniel Keller.

For the Companion.

Government.

I have chosen this subject for several reasons; the first is, because of its great importance in every department of society, either politically, religiously, or socially. Secondly, because it is so oftened abused.

Government, what is it? I answer, it is everything. The first use we find for government is, to govern ourselves, our evil passions and habits. How often do we find men and women fail in this. How often do we find men that even profess to be the followers of the meek and lowly Lamb, who have got into some sinful habits, such as using vain and vulgar expressions, or perhaps, sometimes, lifting the intoxicating bowl, or even using tobacco, and a great many other things equally vain and useless, who, if approached in their sober moments, will acknowledge that these things are wrong; but they have got into the habit of it, and they cannot quit. Oh! what a pity for any man to have a disposition, or an appetite, or temper, which is his master, & over which he has no control! He cannot govern himself; and yet perhaps would undertake to govern nations!—Look for example at Alexander the Great. He conquored many kingdoms; and finally was conquered by the intoxicating bowl. Lamentable indeed! We should not only govern our actions, passions and appetites, but also our thoughts; for God, who is a searcher of the heart, does not only see what we do, but he knows the most secret thoughts of our hearts, therefore, brethren, it behooves us to watch. And where shall we watch? Shall we watch our brother or sister? Nay, Verily! each one has enough to do to watch himself—to watch his own actions or thoughts, that he may not stray from the path of righteousness. Watch and pray, therefore, that ye enter not into temptation.

Secondly. We are to exercise government over our own families. How many of us fail to do this in a God-fearing manner. How many of us rule over our families as with a rod of iron. We are commanded to chasten our children; but not in wrath and anger. "He that loveth his son chasteneth him betimes." But this chastisement should be in love, and in the fear of God. Here, then, we find a point that is hard to govern. For example: A son violates the father's command; it becomes his duty to chasten that son, but not in anger; no, not because he is angry, but because he loves that son.

He must be loving that son all the time while he is inflicting a punishment on him; and his words must be mild and lovely; not rough and angry. To do this it requires much self-denial, yea, much watching and praying.

The third, and perhaps the last point that I shall notice at present, where government must be exercised is this: Some have to exercise government over the church; and some over schools. Here, brethren, let us be careful that we do not lord it over God's heritage. Brethren, let us be careful that our ruling is not done with rigor. Let us remember that the Master has said: "Judge not that ye be not judged; for with whatsoever judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged; and with whatsoever measure ye mete, it shall be measured unto you again." Therefore, let us watch, that we exercise our authority in the fear of God.

As regards the government of schools, I can speak from experience, having served in the capacity of a teacher for a quarter of a century; and I know that I have not always been careful enough in the manner of chastening my pupils: that I have sometimes let anger have the ruling power.

Brethren let us be careful about these things. Let us ever endeavor to rule by love. Whenever we let anger rule our hearts, we have not the spirit of Christ, but of the wicked one. Therefore let us in all cases exercise our authority in love; inasmuch as love is the strongest attribute of God.

I have said that government is often abused. This is verily the case. We frequently find Men, because they have the power, lay heavy burdens on the shoulders of others, which they themselves would not touch. This is what I call abusing government—ruling with rigor or with a rod of iron. This should be carefully guarded against. Now, brethren, let us ever be careful, and watch lest we digress from the path of righteousness; and pray for the assisting grace of God to keep us ever in the straight and narrow path that leads from earth to the portals of eternal joys at God's right hand; ever watching our own thoughts and actions first, and imploring God to give us strength to govern ourselves, and then we will be qualified to exercise government over others in the spirit of meekness and love, ever speaking gently to all.

Lest I weary the patience of my dear readers, I will add no more at present. I did not think that I would write so much when I commenced; but when I have so important a subject before me, I hardly know when to stop. May the Lord add his blessing to all that has been said agreeably to his word and will, is my sincere prayer.

I will yet submit a few lines of poetry which are very appropriate to this subject.

SPEAK GENTLY

Speak gently! it is better far
To rule by love than fear.
Speak gently! let no harsh words mar
The good we might do here.

Speak gently to the little child;
Its love be sure to gain;
Teach it in accents soft and mild:
It may not long remain.

Speak gently to the aged one;
Grieve not the care-worn heart;
The sands of life are nearly run;
Let such in peace depart.

Speak gently, kindly, to the poor;
Let no harsh tone be heard;
They have enough they must endure
Without an added word.

Speak gently to the erring ones!
They may have toiled in vain,
Perhaps undindness made them so,
Oh! win them back again!

Speak gently! 'tis a little thing
Dropped in the heart's deep well:
The good, the joy, which it may bring,
Eternity shall tell.

A. B. MILLER.

Antioch, Ind.

Love.

"Without love, all other things, though ever so many, great and excellent in themselves, are not acceptable unto God. He regardeth not your prayers if you do not love him. He values not your hearing, if you do not love him; all your alms-deeds are poor things in his esteem if you do not love him; yea, all your suffering for religion, and for Christ, are nothing, if you do not love. If a man could preach like an angel, and yet not love him, he should not be accepted by him:—'Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing.'

"Love therefore is above all these; for all these without love are nothing. Love makes us most like to God;—for God is love. And God loveth Christ above all the men on earth, and above all the angels in heaven; he therefore calls him his beloved Son. God loveth all men with a common love; holy men with a special love; angels with a higher love; Christ most of all, who is the Son of his love. So our love is gradual; we ought to love all men with some degrees of love, holy men and angels, with a higher love, and Christ with the highest love. And when we love as God loves, our love makes us most like unto God."

In the last time Popery and the Socinian heresy (a denial of the proper deity of Christ) will run into one another; for though they at present appear virtually aloof, they will in process of time form a mighty confluence, that will burst all bonds and bring everything to a crisis.

Christian Family Companion

Tyrone City, Pa., June 30, 1871.

The Pious Youth.

The June number of the PIOUS YOUTH has been sent out. We hope it has reached its points, and has met with a cordial welcome everywhere. Although it was a little tardy in going forth on its mission, we feel assured that, when it did go, it carried with it an abundant supply of good, wholesome food for the mind. Its modest appearance, unpretending style, sound morals, and purely pious instructions and admonitions, we think, should recommend it to the favorable reception and patronage of the Brotherhood, and all who have the ood of the rising generation at heart.

We can still furnish subscribers for the YOUTH with the back numbers of this volume.

TERMS.—$1.00 per year. To Companion subscribers, 75 cents. For Sabbath-schools, 10 copies monthly, at 50 cents per month; and at the same rate for any number of copies above ten. J. W. B.

Salem College.

By the kindness of some brother or friend we have been favored with the "Catalogue of the SALEM COLLEGE." It comes to us with a neat, modest, fraternal appearance—not like that bombastic, fictitious Circular, that was sent out some time ago by some uninitiated,—though perhaps well-meaning,—party. This circular will, we trust, to some extent meliorate the offences caused by that obnoxious circular.

Without saying anything either for or against the College itself, we will, for the information of those who may wish to know more about it than is generally known, state a few facts as set forth in the Catalogue.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES

Jesse Calvert,	Milford, Ind.
J. B. Shively,	Inwood, Ind.
David Shively,	Bourbon, "
Paul Kurtz,	Goshen, "
Joseph Harden,	" "
Keylon Heckman,	Bourbon, "

OFFICERS OF THE BOARD.

Jesse Calvert,	President.
J. B. Shively,	Treasurer.
Keylon Heckman,	Secretary.
Paul Kurtz,	Librarian.

OBJECTS.

The design of the school is, to supply a want that has been felt by many brethren—the means of acquiring an advanced education under the influence and tuition of members of our own fraternity. Salem College therefore purports to be "managed entirely by brethren; having for its object, mental and moral excellence instead of external display." To this end Brethren and all interested in the enterprise, are admonished to "use their influence to have their children exhibit plainness, both in language and external appearance."

RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION AND WORSHIP.

"The exercises each day are opened with reading the Scriptures, singing and prayer, at which all the students are required to be present.—Brethren's children are required to attend the Bible class, which meets in the college building every Lord's day, and such other religious exercises as will promote their moral and spiritual welfare.

LITERARY SOCIETY.

There is a Literary Society organized in connection with the college.—The exercises are, Composition-reading, Orations, Debates, and Criticisms.

LAWS AND REGULATIONS OF THE COLLEGE.

The following is a correct copy of the Laws and Regulations of the College as set forth in the Catalogue.

1. Every candidate for admission to any department of the college, must present satisfactory evidence of a good moral character, and if he has been a member of any other college, he shall produce a certificate from the authorities of that college of his regular and honorable dismissal and standing.

2. No student shall be admitted to an advanced standing unless he be found, on examination, prepared for that class.

3. Every student, on being admitted into the institution, shall sign the following obligation in good faith:

Being admitted as a member of the College, I promise and bind myself to obey the laws, rules and regulations of the same; to conduct myself with propriety; to be diligent in study; to be respectful to the Faculty, and to deport myself becomingly in morality and courtesy among my fellow students and in the community generally.

4. Every student is required to report to the Faculty immediately on his arrival.

5. No student shall absent himself from any recitation of his class without permission of the officer whose duty it may be to preside at such exercises; nor shall he leave the immediate precints of the college without the permission of the President or Vice-President.

6. Strict attention to the studies prescribed by the Faculty will be required, and habitual idleness will insure dismission from the college.

7. Indecent and profane language, rude and boisterous conduct, tippling; frequenting taverns, inns, beer-houses, places of mere idle amusements and resorts of bad company, gambling, betting, games of chance, smoking tobacco within the college enclosure, or carrying concealed firearms or deadly weapons, and every other species of vulgar and immoral conduct, are absolutely forbidden, and will subject the offender to punishment.

8. No student will be expected to inform on a fellow student, nor to criminate himself; but when called upon as a witness in a particular offense, he shall be required to give full and true testimony.

9. Any student may be privately dismissed, or suspended, or reprimanded, or required to apologize to the faculty for cause. Public expulsion shall be resorted to only in extreme cases, and shall require a majority of the Faculty.

10. General meetings of the students are prohibited, unless the consent of the President, Vice-President, or a presiding member of the Faculty be obtained. Public meetings of any class must be previously authorized by some member of the Faculty.

11. No student shall be publicly suspended or expelled until he has had the opportunity of explaining or defending his conduct, before the faculty; but the Faculty shall have power to dismiss from the college privately, without the formalities of a trial, such students as are habitually idle or disorderly, or whose example and influence are pernicious to others.

12. Every member of the graduating class shall be present at commencement, unless excused by the Faculty, for special and good reasons.

13. Students shall have no meetings except such as are authorized by the Faculty.

14. All exercises for exhibitions or commencement shall be submitted to the President before being delivered in public.

15. Students are not allowed to take lessons under teachers outside of the college, or take part in public discussions without permission of the Faculty.

16. No person shall be invited to address the societies, or the students of the college, upon anniversaries or other occasions, whose name has not been first submitted to the Faculty, and received their approval.

17. Secret societies or organizations among the students of the College, are condemned and shall be discouraged, and the members thereof shall be subjected to such admonition and discipline as the Faculty shall deem best adapted to effect the abandonment and suppression of such organizations.

O. W. Miller, is the Principal of the college, who will be assisted by a corps of professors and teachers equal to the demand.

The second term records ninety-eight students: this seems to speak well for the institution.

The college is situated at Bourbon, Marshall county, Indiana, on the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne, and Chicago Railroad.

J. W. B.

MISCELLANEOUS

Testimony of Egypt.

There is no field in which the enemies of the Bible have been more fond of expatiating, or from which they have drawn more of their arguments, than the absolutely unknown. While Egypt was a mystery, and its records a sealed book, they drew from it objections to the Mosaic history and to Bible chronology generally, making that boast that Egyptian dates extend thousands of years farther back, and thus disprove the Bible. But it is now proved incontestably that there is not in all the remains of that ancient land a monument as old as the time of the flood, nor a record of any event that occurred before that period. The question of the use of the Bible in the schools having awaked a general discussion in England, the new scientific periodical, Nature, referring, among other things, to the opinion that "man is but some 6,000 years old," as founded on the statements of Scripture, says it is most deplorable to think that such doctrines should be taught in the schools. To which the B. W. Savile, of Feignmouth, replies, with great pertinence and force:

"As regards the antiquity of man, no scientific proof has ever yet been adduced of man's existence on earth much more than 4,000 years ago.—All evidence of the antediluvian world is dependent upon the statements of Scripture alone. What Champollion wrote in his work on Egypt,—'They will find in this work an absolute reply to their calumnies, since I have demonstrated that no Egyptian monument is really older than the year B. C. 2200'—is true in the main though recent discoveries may throw back the oldest monument of that country one or two centuries earlier. The only really scientific attempt to prove man's antiquity greater than what Scripture allows was made by the late Mr. Horner, when manufactured articles were discovered at a certain depth in the alluvial deposits of the Nile. Estimating the sinkage at the rate of 3½ inches per century, the late Baron Bunsen hastily declared that it was sufficient proof of man's existence on the earth at least as early as 13,000 B. C.

But when Sir Gardener Wilkinson detected the figure of the Grecian honeysuckle upon these very ancient pieces of pottery, which limited their date to some period later than the conquest of Egypt by Alexandria the Great, or three centuries B. C. it was seen that Bunsen's anti-scriptural theory was at once blown to the winds. And if any further proof is needed of the untenableness of such a theory, it is seen in the fact that the late Sir Robert Stephenson, when engineering in Egypt discovered in the mud of the Nile, at a greater depth than was ever reached by Mr. Horner's diggings a brick bearing upon it the stamp of Mohammed Ali!

"So much for the attempt to prove man's existence on earth earlier than what is stated in the unerring word of God."—N. Y. Observer.

God's Remembrance.

It is said that God "remembered Noah." Surely God never forgets! Yet there are times when he may be said especially to remember. Picture to yourself the horrors of the deluge; The fountains of the great deep breaking up; the bursting clouds pouring their torrents upon the doomed earth, the consequent gloom and loneliness, as the ark, borne gradually up above the highest point to which some despairing wretch might flee for safety, was driven here and there upon a vast waste of waters—floating over the grave of a sinful world. No light through the encircling clouds; no voice of succor from heaven; only the ceaseless downfall of the pitiless rain—truly there was need of faith sublime as the patriarch's, calmly to meet this hiding of the covenant God.

But he "remembered Noah," and he will remember us. In our saddest days, under our heaviest burdens, when life seems at a standstill, because of the impenetrable gloom of sore trials, and sight cannot discover one ray of delivering light, faith should grasp the assurance that the Eternal Ruler never forgets, and in his own time will appear for our help. As Fuller has expressed it, "God's ways fetch an astonishing compass," but never so extensive as to leave us out of the bounds of his remembrance.—Messenger

A beautiful life—a life of truth and purity, and affection.

Selected by JOHN D. SELL.

Hymn for the Verge of Jordan.

My gracious Redeemer I love;
His praises aloud I'll proclaim,
And join in the armies above
To shout his adorable name.
To gaze on his glories divine,
Shall be my eternal employ;
To feel them incessantly shine
My boundless, ineffable joy.

He freely redeemed with his blood
My soul from the confines of hell,
To live on the smiles of my God,
And in his sweet presence to dwell;
To shine with the Angel's of light,
With saints and with seraphs to sing;
To view with eternal delight
My Jesus, my Savior, my King.

In Meshech as yet I reside,
A darksome and restless abode,
Molested with foes on each side,
And longing to dwell with my God.
Oh when shall my spirit exchange
This cell of corruptible clay,
For mansions celestial, and range
Through realms of ineffable day?

My gracious Redeemer, I long
To see thee descend on the cloud,
Amidst the bright, numberless throng,
And mix with the triumphant crowd.
Oh, when wilt thou bid me ascend,
To join in thy praises above;
To gaze on thee world without end,
And feast on thy ravishing love?

Nor sorrow, nor sickness, nor pain,
Nor sin, nor temptation, nor fear,
Shall ever molest me again;
Perfection of glory reigns there.
This soul and this body shall shine
In robes of salvation and praise,
And banquet on pleasures divine,
Where God his full beauty display.

Ye palaces; scepters, and crowns,
Your pride with disdain I survey;
Your pomps are but shadows and sounds,
And pass in a moment away.
The crown that my Savior bestows
Yon permanent sun shall outshine;
My joy everlastingly flows,
My God, my Redeemer, is mine.

Bedford's Store, Pa.

Selected for the COMPANION.

"Be Ye therefore Perfect."

Yes, "Be ye therefore perfect."
Your great Redeemer said,
Before that cruel verdict,
Before he bowed his head.

Be perfect men and women,
Be perfect in your sphere;
That doubts and fears of evil
May quickly disappear.

Think not to have God's wisdom,
Nor ALL his wondrous LOVE;
Nor think to have his power
To rule the worlds above.

Think not to vie with angels
While here on earth you stay,
To raise as high your voices,
Or on those harps to play.

Think not to know, with spirits
The glories of that place
Where they in mansions dwelling,
See Jesus face to face.

Nor think to enter Eden,
With hearts like primal Eves;
And, void of all temptations,
All worldly cares to leave.

For earth is full of anguish,
Where'er our paths may lead;
And tears and troublous partings,
Oft cause the heart to bleed.

Yet here we may be perfect,
Before we meet above;
Small or large the vessel—
It may be filled with love.

What'er is right, is perfect—
What'er is wrong is not;
The first is born of Heaven,
The last of Hell begot.

If thoughts and words and motives
Are right and just and pure,
Then Faith may grasp the promise,
Which helps you to endure.

If nothing wrong you cherish,
With mind, or lip, or hand,
You'll then be fully perfect,
And keep your Lord's command.

But if you lack for wisdom,
Or strength in time or place,
Then faith may claim the promise—
"I'll aid you by my grace."

S. F. SANGER.

Let us Go to Church.

Because, if we are cold in the affairs of religion, it will tend to make us warm. If we do not think often of eternity and its realities, we may be induced to take more interest in them than we do now. The oftener we think of eternity, sincerely, the more humble we may be; for, having nothing of value, of substantial worth, we can claim there, we cannot but feel our dependence. Humility first, then acceptance with God in Christ. Then come, let us go to church, where the people of God meet, praise and pray, and the work of humility may be easier, and that of salvation in Christ more speedy and sure.

Let us go to church and show our appreciation of the work of religion. All the security of life and property, from murder and plunder, results from the influence of religion—the religion of Jesus. If everybody should stay away from church, soon, disorganization and ruin would ensue. Let us go to church, and, by our example, induce others to go also. Example is more powerful than words. Whether we are professors of religion or not, let us go to church. If we are not, we ought to be; and there is not a surer way in which to find encouragement, information and help to begin the work of salvation—make peace with God and thereby obtain the blessings of Heaven. The peace and happiness of the entire community require it. If everybody regularly attended church, there would be less Sabbath-breaking and less of neighborhood-visiting on Sabbath, the day on which tale-bearers and busy-bodies do their work of evil, most largely, in sowing the seeds of discord. Going to church has a tendency to refine the feelings, purify the manners, and give opportunity for holier reflections and therefore better ideas of true religion. Church-going leads us to consider the claims of benevolent institutions more favoribly. It inclines us to be wiser, better and happier;—our neighbors will be rendered happier—have less of the petty disturbances and other evils, with more of the spirit of improvement for the general good and every elevating enterprise. Come, let us go to church, the Sabbath-School, prayer meeting, conference meeting, and all, and we will speak of no more inducements and reasons for going to church; because when we make it a rule and keep it, we will soon see that it helps to produce every good and allay every evil. "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together."

As prayer is no isolated thing in Christianity, but springs from the ground of the whole spiritual life, so the Lord's prayer, which forms a complete and organic whole, comprehends within itself the entire peculiar essence of Christianity.—Neander.

CORRESPONDENCE

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Brother Holsinger.: We are constructed so that pleasant feeling flows through the spiritual man, when we can report our adversity and prosperity to each other. When I look over the large field of labor that lays before us in the State of Missouri and the prosperity of the church throughout the State in the last 5 years, I feel like Paul did upon one occasion, to thank the Lord and take courage. Five years ago there ware but two parts of organizations in the State, and in Mav last, at our District meeting their ware some twenty churches represented, and some we learned were not represented at all. All these churches are in their infancy—tender vines, and need great care to make them what they should be—bright and shining lights in the christian constellation. Brother J. Quinter penned a truthful statement, when he said "The Brethren in the days of yore did much for the advancement or Christ's cause, but they still have left much for us to do." And while there remains much for us to do, we should go at it with a heart for any fate, and not be Peter like, when the adverse power begins to pour in his artillery. That is the time we should all stand to our post; like Gideon's force of 300 storming the forts and putting the host of the Medeonites to flight with a pitcher and a lamp for their weapons. By a skillful use of the weapons that our great Captain has given orders to use, we can recruit our army and hold the enemy at bay, and finally come off conquerors through him that lived and died, and rose for us. The brethren in this arm of the Church, according to previous arrangements, held their lovefeast on the 27th and 28th of May. A very good turn out of members and others; and we think the meeting had its desired effect. Brother Christian Root, from Caldwell county, and brother Eli Yourty from Kansas City were all the strange ministers present. They lobored faithfully.—The Lord reward them. Why there were not more of our neighboring ministers with us on that occasion is unknown to us. It made us feel a little unpleasant when there was no one to officiate in the breaking of bread, &c; but the writer, who has his home among the brethren here; but upon the whole we had a very good meeting; one that we can look back upon with a pleasant feeling.—The Lord prosper Zion.

DANIEL D. SELL.

Plattsburg, Mo.

Dear Brother: We had our lovefeast on the 3rd and 4th, according to appointment; and I think we can say as a truth, that we had a feast of love; yet we were somewhat disappointed in getting strange preachers, as we had expected. Old brother Christian Layman, from Shade Creek branch, was the only strange Bishop we had; and he, being German, declined doing or preaching much; and brother Jacob Holsopple from the same church, Leonard Furry from Yellow Creek, and James A. Sell from Duncansville were all the strange preachers we had. But they improved the time very well, and gave us very wholesome doctrine; so we can have no doubt but Christ was in our midst during our meeting. We had a very attentive congregation, and quietness in the house, during meeting.

Your's in love.

THOMAS S HOLSINGER.

Six Roads, Pa.

Dear Companion: I, this pleasant morning, feel like writing a few lines for your columns; when I see how good God is to me in sparing me through another winter, while there have been many called home to their long home never to return. Oh! I often wonder if there are any gone that would want to return. I think if there are any there that would like to come back, it would be to serve God and prepare for heaven. Why do not sinners serve God now, while here in this world? Yes, God is calling sinners to come now and serve him. He has opened a way for all to be saved. Oh! think, poor sinners, for a moment! If you were in a place where you would be unhappy, and would have to stay there forever, what would you give if you could get away? I think you would give all you have, whether it is much or little. You would be so unhappy! The cold winds blow and the cold rains come; the grass withers away. So it will be when death chills our flowing blood: we shall fade away. O sisters will we come forth in the resurrection as fresh and green as the grass that we see springing fresh and tender all around us?

I often wonder whether we shall sing more sweetly than we do now. The righteous shall praise God day and night in his temple. Shall I have a part in that delightful song? Yes, if I am faithful; and so shall you all if accounted worthy.

When we behold the beautiful fields—how beautifully they are covered as with a green carpet—beautiful indeed! But my dear sisters, we shall see a more beautiful sight, when we see that city which is pure gold, and walk the gold-paved street. This we may do if we love God here below. But we must deny "ourselves of all ungodliness and worldly lusts," and follow Christ. We cannot follow the fashions of the world, and enjoy all the sinful pleasures of this world, and expect to enter that holy city of pure gold. No, sisters, I think that place will be so pure there is no place for worldly fashions. I think there will be no idleness nor idols there:—the saints will be busily engaged in doing God's will. Why not be engaged now? How many people live in this world who have no homes of their own: they are like myself. We all have places to stay at while in this world: we make this world our home if we want to. If we will serve God he will give us a home in heaven; he has a home for all his children: a home that will be lasting. Come on, loving pilgrims, let us travel on until we get home. Oh! what a glory is prepared for the children of God! There we shall see Jesus! There we can see our friends who are there, all safe in heavsn! So farewell. Your sister,

NANCY WISE.

Scenery Hill, Pa.

Brother Holsinger: After returning home from the lovefeast of the Monticello branch, where we hold our membership, I feel like sending a few lines to the press, to bear a word of testimony to that good work that was done during the meeting

Meeting began at two o'clock P. M. Speaking by the brethren for about two hours. An intermission was then given, that preparation could be made for evening services. During the intermission there was an application for baptism by an old friend of mine that I longed to see take up the cross. Time was drawing near for evening services. Three of the laboring brethren, and a few of the young folks, went with the applicant to the water, while preparations were being made, a message came by another brother, that we should wait a little while, that there was another applicant on the way. While we were waiting brother Adam Young delivered a beautiful exhortation, which made our hearts overflow with joy. Our work was finished at the water, and we returned to the Church. Evening services consisted in the Lord's Supper and Feet-washing. Everything passed off lovely, with the exception of a little confusion that was made at the doors of the church, which we will have to look over, and pray to the Lord to "forgive them, for they know not what they do." Luke 23 : 34.

Night passed over and the morning came, and everything seemed beautiful. While the elder brethren were in the basement at breakfast, the young folks were engaged in singing beautiful hymns, so that our hearts were filled with gladness; for we felt that the Lord was with us.—When breakfast was over, before meeting began, the brethren and sisters were called together, and it was announced that there were three applicants for baptism; which was attended to. After returning from the water meeting commenced; and there was good speaking by the brethren that were with us; and before the meeting was closed, there was another invitation given, and seven more came forward and gave their names and were baptized at the close of the meeting. Meeting closed on the 9th, and we all returned home rejoicing.

WM. W. SNYDER.

Logansport, Ind,

Brother Holsinger: For the benefit of those who feel an interest in our work here, and desire to hear from us, we will give the following brief sketch.

Last summer, nine of us, five brethren and four sisters, were regularly organized into a church. Since, then, one brother has mover here, and one has been received by baptism. Three families of us, besides brother Byrne, lives near together at Maryville, and three, six miles away from us. At the latter place, we have preaching every two weeks in an old building on brother Bowman's farm. It is, however, inadequate to meet our needs, and we have decided to build a meeting-house in that neighborhood, as there is a great deal of interest manifested there in our meetings. The three brethren and sisters, there, have formed themselves into a Bible class, and meet every Sunday evening, to examine a portion of the Scriptures together. We, who are living here, in town, also meet every Sunday evening, for the same purpose. A number of others have joined with us, and we have very interesting, and, I believe, profitable meetings. There are also several other places where we have regular appointments for preaching, but at such a distance, that, seldom any of us can attend, except the minister. Three of the brethren have also charge of large and interesting Sunday-schools.

There are obstacles in the way of our having meetings for public preaching in this town, and those of us who live here, are seldom able to attend the regular meeting at brother Bowman's, not having any mode of conveyance. Remembering the apostle's injunction, not to forget the assembling of ourselves together, and feeling the great need of it ourselves, we agreed to meet at our house every Wednesday evening, for our own spiritual edification. We meet in an informal way, seeking first to put ourselves under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, calling upon God in praise and prayer, reading a portion of Scripture, and exhorting and strengthening one another in faith and holiness. Although there have been but six of us assembling together at any one time, yet we have abundantly verified to us the previous promise, "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of you."

I am astonished, sometimes, in these meetings, at the descending grace of God, for we often come together so wearied with the labor and cares of life, that we feel as if we had nothing in our hearts to bring to God, yet as soon as we yield ourselves to the influence of his Spirit, he graciously meets us, and pours out such a blessing that we truly feel, "there is not room to receive it."

Let me earnestly recommend such meetings to my brethren and sisters, especially those who are isolated from the general Brotherhood.

SALOME SHARP.

Maryville, Tenn.

Nature and Religion.

Whatever leads the mind habitually to the Author of the universe; whatever mingles the voice of nature with the inspiration of the Gospel; whatever teaches us to see in all the changes of the world, and the varied goodness of him, in whom we live, and move, and have our being, brings us nearer to the spirit of the Savior of mankind. But it is not only as encouraging a sincere devotion, that these reflections are favorable to christianity. There is something, moreover, peculiarly allied to its spirit in each observation of external nature. When our Savior prepared himself for his temptations, his agony and death, he retired to the wilderness of Judea; to inhale, we may venture to believe, a holier spirit amid its solitary scenes, and to approach to a nearer communion with his Father, amid the sublimest of his works. It is with similar feelings, and to worship the same Father, that the Christian is permitted to enter the temple of nature, and by the spirit of nature there is a language infused into the objects which she presents, unknown to the worshipper of former times. To all indeed the same objects appear; the same sun shines; the same heavens are open; but to the Christian alone it is permitted to know the Author of these things; to see his spirit move in the breeze, and in the blossoms of spring; and to read, in the changes that occur in the natural world, the varied expression of eternal love. It is from the influence of Christianity accordingly, that the key has been given to the signs of nature. It was only when the Spirit of God moved on the face of the deep, that order and beauty were seen in the world. It is accordingly peculiarly well worthy of observation, that the beauty of nature, as felt in modern times, seems to have been almost unknown to the writers of antiquity. They described, occasionally, the scenes in which they dwelt; but, if we except Virgil, whose gentle mind seems to have anticipated, in this instance, the influence of the Gospel,—never with any deep feeling of their beauty. Then, as now, the citadel of Athens looked upon the evening sun, and her temples flamed in his setting beam; but what Athenian hath ever described the matchless glories of the scene? Then, as now, the silvery clouds of the Egean sea rolled round her verdent isles, and sported in the azure vault of heaven; but what Grecian poet has been inspired by the sight? There is something, therefore, in religious reflections on the objects or changes of nature, which is peculiarly fitting in a Christian teacher. No man will impress them in his heart, whether to be coming happier or better—without feeling warm gratitude for the beneficence of nature, and deeper thankfulness for the means of knowing the Author of this beneficence which revelation has afforded. "Behold the lillies of the field," says our Savior, "they toil not, neither do they spin; yet verily I say unto you, that even Solomon, in all his glory, was not arrayed like one of these." In these words we perceive the deep sense which he entertained of the beauty, even of the minutest works of nature. If the admiration of external objects, is not directly made the object of his precepts, it is not on that account less allied to the spirit of religion; it springs from the revelation which he has made, and yours with the spirit which he inculcates.

Selected by ADAM HELMAN.

Corrections.

In No. 23, page 364, 1st column, 18th line from bottom of page, read: "that we may base our hopes," &c. Middle of 2nd column, instead of "trusts harmonize," read TRUTHS harmonize. Third column, last line, instead of "have been baptized" &c., read, have NOT been baptized, &c.—Page 365, 1st column, 3d line, read saving faith, instead of "having faith." Second column, 13th line from below, minds, instead of "hands."

P. S. N.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with obituary notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In Derry township, Mifflin county, Penn'a brother JONATHAN ZOOK; aged 54 years and 20 days. Funeral services by brother Wm. Howe.

Jacob Mohler.

At Vermillion, Kansas, May 30th, of Pulmonary Consumption, sister ALMIRA MICHAEL, wife of brother Joseph Michael (minister); aged 47 years and 10 months.—She leaves a sorrowing husband and four children to mourn their loss.

The subject of this notice has been in delicate health for a long time; but for a few weeks she appeared much better, and was able to go about the house. Early on Tuesday morning, she awoke her husband, telling him that her head ached, and wanted to dress herself, but was not able, her one side being paralyzed. She soon became insensible and in less than three hours was a corpse. But we should not mourn as those who have no hope; for like Mary of old, she had chosen that good part that should never be taken from her.

There being no ministering brethren near, funeral sermon was indefinitely postponed.

Mollie Bilbrey.

Frankfort, Kansas.

At the house of brother George Garver, near Dayton O., May 28th, of Quick Consumption, sister NETTIE S., consort of brother H. J. KURTZ; aged 24 years, 8 months, and 7 days. Text Philip. 1: 21.

Having poor health, she thought it would benefit her to stay in the country awhile.—Here she was taken down suddenly, so that she could not be brought to her home. For six days and nights she sat in her chair (being unable to lie in bed) and in it she breathed her last. Some hours before she died, she called those in the house around her, and spoke very feelingly, being perfectly resigned to the will of God.

LIST OF MONEYS received for subscription, books, &c.,

F. P. Loehr,	1.00	F. Myers,	1.50
John A. Wertz,	.75	D. W. Garst,	.75
D. Workman,	2.00	J. Hollinger,	.75
J. Beeckly	2.50	J. Longenecker,	2.75
G. Ashenbrenner,	.75	D. H. Garber,	.78
H. West.	1.50

1780 1871

ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK?

Use Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

CLEANSE YOUR BLOOD!!

An Alterative and Cathartic, or Tonic and Purge combined, for diseases arising from bad blood; such as Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Erysipelas, Worms, Chills and Fever, Scrofula, Pimples, Tetter, &c. TRY IT.

Established 1780 in package form. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form, which was brought to its present state of preservation and perfection some years later by Dr. P. Fahrney, Chicago, Ill's, who conducts the trade west of Ohio. Great reputation! Many Testimonials! Ask for that prepared at Waynesboro, Pa., and Chicago, Ill's. Beware of imitations. Genuine retails at $1.25 per bottle. Druggists and Medicine dealers sell it.

Dr. P. Fahrney's "Health Messenger" gives the history and uses of the BLOOD CLEANSER testimonials, and other information, sent free of charge. Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.
WAYNESBORO, PA.

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament with Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price $4.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol., $2.25. Indispensable.

Life at Home; or the Family and its MEMBERS.—Including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed, The Altar in the House, etc. By Wm. Aikman. $1.50; full gilt, $2.

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or, The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. THOMPSON. Fancy Cloth $1.00

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand-book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners, with a Chart for recording the sizes of the different Organs of the Brain, in the delineation of Character, with upwards of 170 Engravings. Muslin, $1.25

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50; Extra gilt, $2.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By W. PITTINGER. $1.50

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Beautifully Illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth, gilt, beveled boards. Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75 cents.

Any of the above sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

The Phrenological Journal, An Illustrated. First-Class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50, or with the Pious Youth, for $3.00. We commend the JOURNAL to all who want a good Family Magazine, and who does not?

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office county and state written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to H. R. HOLSINGER, Tyrone, Pa

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING

One copy, post paid	0 75
12 copies, post paid	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	$0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN & ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid	$1 00
Per dozen,	10.50

Turkey Morocco, Ger. & Eng.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	13.50

Plain Single German

One copy, post paid	.90
Per dozen " "	8.50

The Christian Harp, containing 32 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 65 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price $6.00 per dozen. One copy 60 cents.

TRACTS.—RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE, 12 pages five cents single copy; thirty cents a doz. All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, postoffice county & state written in unmistakable letters

Address,
H. R. HOLSINGER, Tyrone Pa

To Nebraska, California, and Kansas, and the B. & M. R. R. Lands.

The "Burlington Route," as called, lies right in the path of the Star of Empire. It runs almost immediately in the center of the great westward movement of emigration. Crossing Illinois and Iowa, it strikes the Missouri river at three points.

These three points are the gateways into three great sections of the trans-Missouri region.

The Northern gate is Omaha, where the great Pacific road will take you to the land of gold and grapes, sunny mountains, and perpetual summer.

The middle gate is Plattsmouth, which opens upon the south half of Nebraska, south of the Platte river, a region unsurpassed on the continent for agriculture and grazing. Just here are the B. & M. Railroad lands, concerning which Geo. S. Harris, the land officer at Burlington, Iowa, can give you all information, and in the heart of them is Lincoln, the State Capital and present terminus of the road.

The Southern gate leads to Kansas, by connections with the St. Joe Road at Hamburg running direct to St. Joe and Kansas City.

The trains of the Burlington run smoothlyq and safely, and make all connections. It runs the best of coaches, Pullman Palace and Pullman dining cars, and should you take the journey for the journey's sake alone, you will be repaid; or take it to find a home or a farm, and you cannot find either better than among the B. & M. lands, where you can buy on ten years' credit, and at a low price.

TYRONE BANK.
TYRONE, PA.

This Bank, intending to do a general banking business, solicits accounts from Banks, Bankers and others. Collections made on all points. Interest allowed on DEPOSITS left on time. Paper discounted on liberal terms.

Wm. P. Orbison,	D. I. Gwin,
John Scott,	H. G. Fisher,
Thomas Fisher,	J. H. Glazier,
Wm. Douris,	G. C. Wilkins,
G. W. Garretson,	and others.

Beers' Expanding Scroll Water-wheel.

[Patented 1868] This wheel is now running with the overshot, in a Flouring Mill, and is using less water than the overshot. Inventor being a Millwright, and having seen and used all the new water wheels, does not hesitate to say it is the best iron wheel that can compete with the overshot, and is one half cheaper, simpler and better. For farther information address J. L. Beers & Sons, Millwrights and Manufacturers of wheel shafting and mill gearing of all kinds, cut cog and Sawmill feed and Swaim irons.

J. L. Beers & Sons
Perrysville, Juniata Co. Pa

THE PIOUS YOUTH.
A MONTHLY PUBLICATION

Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.

It comes about as near pleasing everybody as any paper published.

One dollar a year in advance.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,

ALDEN'S READY BOOK BINDER.—An article for universal use! For filing or Binding Books, Magazines, Papers, Music, Sermons, Manuscripts, etc., etc. See them at Book Stores and News Stands, or send stamp for circulars, or 25 cents for sample, saying where you saw this advertisement, to BRIGHT SIDE CO., Manufacturers, Chicago, Ill.

SHORT HAND WRITING.—Students of Phonography and all others who are interested in the art can obtain instruction books. Send stamp for price list and tracts.

"AMERICAN PHONETIC DEPOT.
TYRONE, PA.

J. S. THOMAS, & CO.
WHOLESALE GROCERS
and
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

No 305 RACE ST. ABOVE 3RD, PHILADELPHIA,
N. B. Country Produce taken in exchange for goods or sold on commission.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine, with Drop Feed, new Take-up, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted FIRST CLASS, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted traveling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $200 per month. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. Co.

Union Square, 33 East 17th St., New York

Universal Guide for Cutting Garments.

By which every family may cut its own garments for men and boys, of twenty six different sizes; for Coats, Pants, Vests, and Shirts, and Ladies' Dress Bodies. Agents wanted to sell State, County, and Family Rights. For Particulars address

MILLER & QUINN,
Tyrone. Blair Co., Pa.

BEES.

Pure Italian Queen Bees for sale, at $2.25 each. Full directions sent with each order.

J. S. HEDDINUS.
Box 22, LEWISTOWN,
21,1:mo Mifflin Co., Pa.

Sure Cure for Gapes.

I have discovered a sure cure for gapes, in chickens and turkeys, which I have tested for two years. Costs a mere trifle. No fine dusting, worm catching, &c. I will send the recipe, with a number of practical hints on poultry raising, post paid, for one dollar, and if applied as directed, and no benefit is derived from it, I will refund the money.

Address LEVI ANDES.
Lincoln Pa. 19-4t. pd.

Wm. M. Lloyd, Altoona, Pa. D. T. Caldwell, Tyrone Pa.

LLOYD, CALDWELL & CO.,
BANKERS,

Receive monies on deposit, and pay interest if left 6 months, at 4 per cent per annum, or 5 per cent. if left one year.

Special contracts made with parties acting as administrators, executors, guardians, and persons holding monies in trust. Dealers in every description of Stocks and Bonds.—Government Securities made a speciality.

Gold and Silver bought and sold, and a general Banking business transacted.

CABINET MAKING & UNDERTAKING

The undersigned keeps on hand and manufactures to order all kinds of Furniture. He is also neatly fitted out for conveying the dead to their last resting place.

Manufacturer of the Common Sense Dasher Washing Machine. Shop at the Cross Roads, near Warrior's Mark, Pa.

JAMES S. COX.

A Washing Machine may be seen and purchased at this office. v6n48tf.

A Card.

Drs. D. Fahrney & Son, Uroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.

7-10-1 yr. pd.

Excelsior Bee Hive.

This hive being now well established is extensively manufactured, and for sale. $3 for single hive, also Bee-keepers Instruction, 15 cents single copy. Liberal inducements to agents. Address S. B. REPLOGLE,

RoaringSpring,
7-12-ms. Blair Co. Pa.

THE
Christian Family Companion

Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements; that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or so much as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
TYRONE, PA.

Christian Family Companion.

BY J. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum

VOLUME VII. TYRONE, PA. TUESDAY, JUNE 27, 1871. NUMBER 26.

For the COMPANION.

Our Home.

BY F. P. LOEHR. Tune, HOMEWARD BOUND.

Brethren and sisters, we're not here at home—
Not here at home—not at home:
Only a while we are left here to roam—
Left here to roam—here to roam.
Faint not, if trials and troubles you meet;
Trust in your Father—your Father—how sweet!
He'll abide with you—your joys to complete—
You're going home—going home.

Fear not, dear brethren, when darkness comes near;—
You'r going home—going home.
Darkness will flee when the sun doth appear.
Sun doth appear—doth appear.
Look to the Savior, your brother and friend;
He's ever near you till life's latest end;
And to your sorrows and sighs he'll attend,
Till you reach home—you reach home.

Never, no never, distrust that dear friend—
He'll lead you home—lead you home;
And while you're here to your cries he'll attend,
Till you're at home—you're at home.
Raise your glad voices, to honor his name;
He e'er was good, and he yet is the same;
He will conduct you to heaven your home—
Heaven's your home—your sweet home!

For the COMPANION.

Experimental Religion.

To experience religion, or get religion, is the common expression of christian professors of most denominations, as the pardon of sins, and the reception of the Spirit almost instantly, while engaged in prayers. Where do we read in the Scriptures how to obtain religion, at any definite time, aside from obedience? We are commanded to be baptized for the remission of our sins, and then the promise is we shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. Is this religion? We understand the law of Moses to be the Jew's religion Paul srys: "after the most straitest sect of our religion I lived a Pharisee and he says, he profited in the Jews religion above many my equals in my own nation, being more exceedingly zealous of the traditions of myfathers. We learn then that religion is a regular order or systemof faith and worship; pious practice. Under the present dispensation the Gospel is our rule and order of religion. The apostle James says: Pure religion, and undefiled before God and the Father, is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their afflictions; and to keep himself unspotted from the world. Now to have experience in this religion, we must be zealous of good works, we must obey, practice and continue to perform until our lives end, the duties laid down in the gospel. The popular doctrine now taught, is that we are saved by graces through faith; so every christian believes; but James says faith without works is dead, as the body without the Spirit. Then there is something more to do than to believe only, we must visit the fatherless and widows in their afflictions; we must not only go and look at them, and ask how they are and say, be warmed and filled, for what will that profit? but give such things as are needful for their comfort, and then we will be doers of the work, and will be blessed in the deed. provided we give according to the gospel; that is in secret, and not to be seen of men. Neither let us deceive ourselves or make our religion vain by boasting of our alms deeds; but as the apostle teaches, whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God. Paul says to the Thess, "We are bound to thank God always for you, brethren, as it is meet, because that your faith groweth exceedingly, and the charity of every one of you all toward each other aboundeth. But this is not all the apostle speaks of to constitute pure religion and undefiled, before God but add, and to keep himself unspotted from the world. This is far more hard and difficult to perform, than our charities. Paul says; "But without faith it is impossible to please God,forhe that cometh toGod must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." And the Savior says; "No man cometh unto the Father but by me." When we believe in God and in his son Jesus Christ, we must repent and be baptized for the remission of our sins, and there by put on Christ, being buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead, by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. Now we are washed, sanctified, and justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God. Now we are unspotted from the world, made free from sin. Happy thought! But oh! how few of us remain so very long? "But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness; and the end, everlasting life." Now we have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts thereof. "Then if we are crucified, we are dead: dead unto sin, but alive unto God, through Jesus Christ our Lord. We are now commanded to come out from the world, and be a separate people, and touch not the unclean thing, which is sin. All things that are impure, vain or sinful, either in thought, word, or deed, are unclean and make us sinners before God. Paul to the Ephesians says, "But fornication and all uncleanness, or covetousness, let it not once be named among you, as becometh saints: Neither filthiness, nor foolish talking, nor jesting, which are not convenient; but rather giving of thanks." We sometimes hear indelicate and disgusting expressions which I understand the apostle to call filthiness, from profession of religion. What a spot on the character of a christian! Foolish talking and jesting, to act contemptuously, mock or make sport, with loud laughing, is a stain and disgrace upon the profession of religion, and a dishonor to God. Another great injury to the cause of our religion is, going to places of mirth, and amusement, where the mind will be drawn away by "arts and cunning, craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive." Solomon says: It is better to go to the house of mourning, than to the house of feasting, for that is the end of all men, and the living will lay it to his heart." Brethren have been seen coming out of saloons, and other places of excess, revelry, and intemperance; another dark spot upon the christian character. No watching or prayer there.

Now to the sisters more particularly, yet the brethren are not allowed to go free in following the world in the fashions, in the lusts of the eyes, and the pride of life. How many of our sisters run with the world, particularly in the style of clothing, when the commandment is, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with broidered hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array, but with good works. Does a sister look very shamefaced with a little hat on the top of her head, with her face conspicuous to the view of all beholders, and her hair hanging spread around the shoulders, no modest or plain covering, as the apostle commands, and the church approves? Sisters think of the crown of thorns the Savior bore for you! We cannot have the religion of Jesus Christ in our hearts, and act from knowledge and experience, as the Apostle says, always bearing in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our body, and at the same time have our bodies, decorated with all the fashions and allurements of a vain world, and our conversation in the "lusts of the flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh, and of the mind" with the world; but as Peter says: "Gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ, as obedient children, not fashioning yourselves according to the former lusts in your ignorance; but as he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation. "For the time is come, that judgment must begin at the house of God; and if it first begin at us, what shall the end of them be, that obey not the Gospel of God?"

SARAH RUPEI.

JESTING UPON SCRIPTURE.—The evils arising from this practice are greater than appear at first It leads in general, to irreverence for Scripture. No man would jest with the dying words of his father or mother; yet the words of God are quite as solemn. When we have heard a comic or vulgar tale connected with a text of Scripture, such is the power of association that we never hear the texts afterwards without thinking of the jest. The effect of this is obvious. He who is much engaged in this kind of false wit, will come at length to have a large portion of Holy Scripture spotted over by his unholy fancy.

HE who commences with certainty will end with doubts, but he who is content to begin with with doubts may end with certainty.

Wait and See.

John Bunyan was once asked a question about heaven which he could not answer, because the matter was not revealed in the Scriptures, and he therefore advised the inquirer to live a holy life, and go and see.

The secret things belong unto the Lord our God; but those things which are revealed, belong unto us and to our children forever, that we may do all the words of this law.

When my boy with eager questions,
Asking how, and where, and when,
Taxes all my store of wisdom,
Asking o'er and o'er again,
Questions oft to which the answers
Give to others still the key,
Then I said to teach him patience,
"Wait, my little boy, and see."

And the words I taught my darling,
Taught to me a lesson sweet;
Once when all the world seemed darkened
And the storm about me beat,
In "the childrens' room" I heard him,
With a child's sweet mimicry,
To the baby-brother's questions
Saying wisely, "Wait and see!"

Like an angel's tender chiding
Came the darling's words to me,
Though my Father's ways be hidden,
Bidding me still wait and see.
What are we but restless children
Ever asking what shall be?
And the Father, in his wisdom,
Gently bids us "Wait and See."

Earth Has no Pleasure for Me.

No more can joy and gladness
Cheer this sad heart of mine,
But filled with grief and sadness
Awaits the flight of time.

I once was gay and cheerful
As bees among the flowers,
But now I'm sad and gloomy
And slowly pass the hours.

The sprightly little Spring birds,
That warble 'mong the trees,
Can now no longer cheer me,
Sweet flowers no longer please.

The long loved vine clad arbor,
Where sweetest hours were past,
Is now by me forsaken,
And prostrate by the blast.

The sprightly little lambkin,
The sleek haired gentle fawn
That used to sport and gambol
Upon the grassy lawn,

Are now by me forsaken,
Have quit their mirthful play,
And as they're unattended,
May wander far away.

Earth's hopes from me have faded,
No more can joy be mine
Until I've crossed the borders,
Of never ending time.

This world has lost its brightness,
The stars above look dim,
And through the floating ether,
I see my way to Him.

In him to serve is glory,
In him we know is joy,
In him we find a pleasure,
Unmixed with base alloy.

M. E. Studebaker.

Hope for Better Days Again.

Though to-day be gloomy seeming,
And obscured the sun's bright ray,
Soon his lustre will be beaming,
All the clouds will pass away.
So, however sad your lot be,
Pressing hard on heart and brain,
You may yet a brighter change see:
Hope for better days again.
Sit not down the whole day grieving,
Life is worth a struggle still;
Never cease to be believing;
Much we can do, if we will.
So, however sad your lot be,
Pressing hard on heart and brain,
You may yet a brighter change see
Hope for better days again.

Thought is refused to be sanctioned. institutions refuse to change, and war is the consequence.

For the Companion.

Restoration of the Jews.

A Reply to Brother Heckler.

Once more, brother. I did think when I read your reply that I would not reply to you again. But in reading it the second time, I thought it would not do, to let your request for information and explanation pass by unnoticed; hence my reply.

You say, "I hope there may no harm be done, in our exchanging of sentiments." Certainly not; as your views do not in the least injure mine, you are quite welcome to them; although they may be incorrect. I think there are but few that will not admit that the prophecies, as well as all other Scriptures, have a spiritual meaning, and also a literal meaning. This I think can easily be seen by those that have already gone into fulfilment. You say, you are glad I selected a few chapters from among the many, so that you can the more readily answer me. And in selecting the thirtieth chapter of Jeremiah you say, "Would it not be better to take the whole subject, and put things in their proper places?" Now this is what I always did contend for, and always will; and it is the very thing I did in selecting the thirtieth chapter from the two previous chapters. The prophecy in the thirtieth chapter has no connection with the prophecy in the fourth, and tenth verses in the preceeding chapter. There is not one word in Israel and Judah returning in the two preceding chapters. I we go according to your directions, then there was two years between the two prophecies. But thus saith the Lord unto all those who were carried captives from Jerusalem to Babylon. "Build ye houses," &c.—"For thus saith the Lord, that after seventy years are accomplished at Babylon, I will visit you, in causing you to return again to this place." Now who were those who were carried captives from Jerusalem to Babylon, but Judah and Benjamin, and part of Levi, and a few of some of the other tribes? but not so many, as to be worth keeping an account of; and when the time came they did return, exactly according to the letter. It would be hard to prove that any returned, but those that were carried captives from Jerusalem, and perhaps some of their children that were born during the captivity. And there are promises in the prophecies in the thirtieth, and several in the thirty-first chapter, that were not fulfilled at their return from Babylon; but will be at their appointed time. Thus, they shall be saved out of their troubles, "and Jacob shall return," this means the whole house of Israel, "and shall be in rest, and be quiet, and none shall make him afraid."—"And their soul shall be as a watered garden, and they shall sorrow no more at all;" and, "Behold, I will bring them from the north country, and gather them from the coasts of the earth, and with them the blind and the lame;" "for I will be a father to Israel, and Ephraim is my first born." Now they certainly did not enjoy these promises at the return from Babylon. And do you suppose that God would let any of his promises fail? No, verily not; for they will yet be fulfilled in as literal a manner as the return from Babylon. If we read Ezra and Jeremiah, we don't find them saved out of their troubles; they had plenty of them, and were continually in fear.

The fifteenth verse of the thirty-first chapter was partly fulfilled, when Herod ordered all the children from two years old and under, to be slain. But the next verse saith, "Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears; for there is hope in thy end, saith the Lord, that thy children shall come again to their own borders." And there are more such prophecies that have been partly fulfilled; but the time will come, when they will receive the complete fulfillment. So with the prophecy of Joel, that Peter quotes; but the nineteenth and twentieth verses of the 2nd chapter of Acts did not go into fulfilment on that day, but will "before that great and notable day of the Lord comes." And the prophecy in the twelfth chapter of Zechariah, you certainly can not say has already been fulfilled; and to be brief, I will refer you to the sixth and tenth verses. They certainly could not look upon him, whom they pierced at the time when they returned from Babylon.

Next comes that disputed city. It matters little whether the city be holy or the ground on which the city is built. But it evidently is the city that shall not be plucked up nor thrown down any more. Now brother do you really believe that the temple of a great city is now in building, and for which large quantities of stone are prepared in the United States? that this is the city Jeremiah had in view, when he says it shall not be plucked up nor thrown down any more? Any one that is not dull of apprehension, can easily understand that the city Jeremiah speaks of will be built on such material that could be thrown down. The prophets don't make use of such useless language as that would be, to say that the city that has the twelve apostles for its foundation, and every believer a lively stone "shall not be thrown down any more." The words, "shall not be thrown down any more," certainly mean that it had been thrown down before. But the building that is now in process of erection, has ever been thrown down nor never will be; and there are large quantities of stone yet to be gathered, out from among the dispersed of Israel, and made fit for prominent places in this building.—But the city that Jeremiah speaks of must give way at its time, which will not be until the universal conflagration when all earthly things must give way.

Next is the new covenant. Our brother asks the question, "Who is to make the new covenant yet in the future? By whom and with whom? Will our sister please inform us?" I think you had better ask brother Paul about that question, for he certainly speaks of it being yet in the future in his day. This I see can be easily discovered by reading carefully the eleventh chapter of Romans. The Gospel covenant is not called "a new covenant," it is another covenant, "a better, covenant, established upon better promises:" it is a covenant with Jew and Gentile; it is not a second covenant—there never was any made with Jew and Gentile before; the new signifies that there was an old one to the same people. Paul says, if that first covenant had been kept faultless, then there would have been no place sought for the second. Now do you believe, that if the first covenant had been kept faultless, by the whole house of Israel as by Jushua and Caleb, it would have rendered the covenant of the Gospel in the least unnessary? No, verily not; for we have the promise, that Christ should come and bruise the serpent's head, and remove the cherubim and the flaming sword which turned every way to keep the way of the tree of life; so that now both Jew and Gentile can have free access to it. Long before the covenant was delivered on mount Sinai, and remember that covenant was only with the house of Israel, the Gentiles were entirely excluded; and had they kept the first, then there would have been no place sought for the second. But they had broken the covenant, as marriage vows, yet God still had pity on his people; he was loth to give them up. He utters many lamentable complaints; and at last he is obliged to give them a bill of divorcement. But the prophets declare that he will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah. (Gentile again excluded;) "and my Spirit and my words shall not depart out of the mouth of the people with whom the covenant is made, nor out of the mouth of their seed, nor out of the mouth of their seed's seed, from henceforth and forever." Now can this be said of Israel in the Gospel covenant?

It is evident that Paul had no allusion to the Gospel when he brings in the new covenant of Jeremiah. I am not willing that any one should charge Paul with such inconsistency as that would be, to tell his Hebrew brethren, that in the new covenant, there will be no need for one to teach another, for they all shall know the Lord from the least of them to the greatest of them, when at the same time he, Paul, was teaching with all the strength and power that was in him, to get them to know the Lord; and after all his teaching it had but little effect; they still "spake against the things that were spoken by Paul, contradicting and blaspheming;" so that Paul waxed bold and said, "It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you; but seeing ye put it from you and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles!" And more, it should be flatly contradicting what our Savior had commanded his disciples just before he ascended, to go into all the world and teach every creature, "and he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."

"And where is Ephraim, if Judah still vexes him?" I hope my brother does not understand me to say that Judah is still vexing Ephraim; but he certainly did after they were divided into the kingdoms.

The whole of the prophecies in the eleventh chapter of Isaiah has reference to the time when the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea;—"And in that day there will be a root of Jesse, which shall be set up for an ensign to the people: to it shall Gentiles seek"; which I will try to explain hereafter. "And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord, shall set his hand again, the second time, to recover the remnant of his people which shall be left from Assyria." "He shall set up an ensign to the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four quarters of the earth"; then follow, "Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim." Is 12: 11, 12 Now this prophecy cannot be taken for the Gospel; the earth has never been as full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea; and Israel and Judah have never been gathered together from the four quarters of the earth, no more to be scattered. The whole of the chapter has reference to another dispensation. Now there will certainly be some Gentiles in the millennial dispensation, although the Gospel dispensation is their time. It was taken from the Jews and given to the Gentiles; as some of the branches were broken off, so that the Gentiles might be grafted in. And in the millennial dispensation the Gentiles, who are among the Israelites as men-servants and maid-servants, will certainly seek the ensign that is set up to the people. For "thus saith the Lord God, Behold I will lift up my hand to the Gentiles, and set up my standard to the people; and they shall bring thy sons in their arms, and thy daughters shall be carried upon their shoulders. And kings shall be thy nursing fathers, and their queens thy nursing mothers; and they shall bow down to thee with their faces toward the earth." Zachariah says "It shall come to pass that every one that is left of the nations which came up against Jerusalem"; that is those who had come up to fight. It appears they will not all be destroyed—there will be some left, and these will have to go up to Jerusalem year by year to worship the king—the Lord of Hosts—and to keep the feast of Tabernacles, and if they refuse to go up, they shall have no rain; and if the family of Egypt go not up that have no rain, then their flesh shall consume away while they stand on their feet; and their eyes shall consume away in their holes, and their language shall consume away in their mouth."

The next thing is, concerning the two sticks. You ask, "why not take twelve sticks, if the twelve tribes are to be restored?" We answer: because it was not necessary for God to tell the prophet to take more than two sticks. Have you never discovered in reading your Bible, that after the division, the ten tribes frequently went by the name of Ephraim, and had their capital at Samaria, while those that remained at Jerusalem, went by the name of Judah? God told the prophet to take one stick and write upon it, For Judah, and for the children of Israel his companions: then take another stick, and write upon it, For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for all the house of his companions": and join them together, and they would become one in his hand. And this prophecy has yet to be fulfiled, for they certainly have never become one nation, since they have been divided. And you have made a great mistake in saying that the two sticks were joined together and became one, when Cornelius and others were baptized. The wall of partition between Jews and Gentiles was only broken down, so that also "unto the Gentiles is granted repentance unto life."

When the prophets mean the Gentiles, they say so; they never presented the Gentiles in any of the names of the children of Israel.

You say yourself that the Jews were scattered among all nations at the time of Christ; for on the day of Pentecost there were dwelling at Jerusalem, Jews, out of every nation under heaven. But remember, they were Jews. It cannot be proven that any were called Jews, but the descendants of those who were taken captive to Babylon. And the fact that they were scattered among all nations under the heaven, is a substantial proof that the heart cheering promises were not accomplished at their return from Babylon; for the prophet says: "I will take you from among the heathen, and will gather you from all countries, and will bring you to your own land; then I will sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean from all your filthiness; and I will put my spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statues, and ye shall keep my judgments and do them; and I will make you one nation in the land of Israel; and one king shall be king to them all: neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all;—and they shall dwell in the land that I have given to Jacob my servant: and they shall dwell therein, they, and their children, and their children's children, for evermore." "And I will make a covenant of peace with them: it shall be an everlasting covenant with them" "And I will place them and multiply them"—Now we know that none of these promises have as yet been fulfilled. They never had a king of their own after their return from Babylon; they were all the time subject to other kings; and they still continue to this day to be scattered among all nations. Our brother cannot say that these promises are intended for the spiritual Israel: they will not multiply after they get home to their inheritance. So our brother can easily see, that is, if he wishes to, that all the prophecies that I have quoted, and indeed many more, are yet in the future. And I want you to hunt up the dry bones, and compare the prophecies that occur in the chapter, with the one in the preceding chapter, and see whether they do not both point to the same time.

The next: It is not likely that the people of Samaria, at the time of Christ were Ephraimites. I think we can prove that they were some of the descendants of the ten tribes, and called Jacob their Father. But at the time of Christ they had become mixed with those nations the king of Assyria had placed in the cities of Samaria; but these nations did not fear the Lord, therefore they did not prosper, so the king said, "Carry thither one of the priests that ye brought from thence, and let them dwell there; and let him teach them the manner of the God of the land.—So one of the priests came and dwelt at Bethel, and taught them how to fear the Lord." And after their return from Babylon, Nehemiah commanded all who had married heathen woman either to separate from them or quit Jerusalem. And Mannasses, son of Jehoiada, the High Priest, was one of this number; and rather than part with his wife, he accompanied her to her father Sanballet, governor of Samaria. The Samaritans had previously blended the worship of the God of Israel with that of their idols. Sanballet now obtained of Darius Nothus, leave to build at mount Garizon, near Samaria, a temple of which he made his son-in-law High Priest. The Samaritans asserted the superior sanctity of this temple to that of Jerusalem; hence the hatred between them and the Jews; and thus they became mixed with the Ephraimites.

With this I will bid you farewell. You shall not hear from again unless it should come to overbearing. I think I have answered all you requested of me.

MARGARET DEARBORN.

Christian Family Companion

Tyrone City, Pa., June 27, 1871.

Report of the Annual Meeting, Held in Berks Co., Pa., on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, May 30th, 31st, and June 1st, 1871.

We had collected matter for an interesting introduction to our Report; but as we have been unavoidably detained for a few weeks, that part will be omitted for the time being. We shall therefore proceed at once with our Report, which may be followed by some general remarks.

The meeting was held on the premises of brother John Merkey, in Berks county, this State, about nine miles north of Myerstown station on the Lebanon Valley Railroad.

Brother Merkey's large, commodious barn was fitted up—well arranged—with the design of holding the meeting in it; but as the congregation was large and constantly increasing, and as Tuesday morning gave promise of a beautiful day, it was concluded to move to the pleasant grove not far distant. The action was suited to the word, and in due time the necessary arrangements were made, and the council assembled.

The exercises were introduced by Eld John Zug, by lining and singing the 108th hymn, in the new German hymn book, commencing:

"Komm, O komm, Du Geist des Lebens."

Eld. John Wise then proposed to open in one language and close in another. Accordingly Eld. Samuel Lehman proceeded to open the meeting by exhortation and prayer in the German.

Wise then read the 15th chapter of Acts.

Eld. Henry Davy remarked, in substance, as follows: As Acts 15th has been read as a basis for our meeting, we are together in the name of God; and therefore we ought to be very solemn. That in so far as doctrinal points were involved, there would not be much occasion for such councils: this was also the case in the chapter read.

Lehman recapitulated in German, what Davy had said in English: especially regarding the small matters that so often divide the Brotherhood. He exhorted to humility, and carefulness, and a proper premeditation of what we say.

The following officers were elected.

Eld. Henry Davy, Foerman.
Eld. D. P. Saylor, Asst. "
Eld. John Wise, Clerk (reading)
Eld. James Quinter, Asst. "(writing)
Eld. F. P. Loehr, Interpreter, to read queries and answers in the German. D. M. Holsinger was also called as interpretor.

Eastern District of Penn'a.
David Garlach, S. R. Zug, delegates.

Query 1. What is to be done when a congregation needs a brother to be forwarded to the second degree of the ministry, but lacks confidence to forward him who is the eldest in office, the church having tried twice to advance him, but was opposed by the majority?

Ans. of District Meeting: "The brother should be informed of the objections against him, that he may remove them, and if the church cannot forward him, strange brethren should be called to assist in advancing him."

D. M. Holsinger proposed to amend so as to say: "or forward another."

D. P, Saylor thought the answer was not good, and if carried out would not result in practical good.

J. P. Ebersole. The Annual Meeting has decided that brethren may be ordained who are not the eldest in office, and he thought that the same rule ought to apply in such cases.

Daniel Fry thought that the matter was altogether in the hands of the churches, and favored that if the eldest is not competent the next one should be taken.

John Metzger. If the brother was told of the hindrance, and entreated to remove it, perhaps all would come right.

Moses Miller. There might be many causes. Among them we could mention, blood relations, where they stick together and oppose a brother.

Samuel Harley owned the query and explained. There are three standing alike, except age, and the three he thought might be advanced together.

John Kinsely. Forwarding the three would not remove the objections to the eldest in office.

Amended answer proposed:

"If he can and will remove the cause of the objection, the church may and should forward him, but if he cannot, then they may forward the next in office." Agreed to.

2. How is it considered when members attach themselves to the Washingtonion Live Stock Assurance Companies?

Kept for future connection with similar queries.

3 Is it according to the order of the church for brethren to associate themselves with the world in building colleges?

As it was evident that the query had reference to Salem College, and as it was known that similar queries would be presented, this also was withheld to be consolidated with others.

4. For a plan to remove the pressure at our Annual Meeting. Tabled.

5. Should not this District Meeting make provisions to furnish ministerial aid to such congregations within its limits, as may be required.

No answer, and therefore fell into the hands of the Standing committee, where we presume it remained, as it was not reported before the meeting.

6. A petition to the Annual Meeting to decide that we should have but one periodical for the church.

It was said that we have no church periodical, but all are individual enterprises. Tabled.

MIDDLE DISTRICT OF PENN'A.

7. Inasmuch as the brethren assembled in Annual Council in 1858, saw no inconsistency in deacons rising to their feet to exhort, and as some of the elders, when installing deacons, still charge them to keep their seats, when thus charged would it be inconsistent for them to rise to exhort?

Answer of District Meeting. We think all deacons should have the privilege to rise when it becomes their duty to speak.

8. Does the annual meeting of 1871 claim Salem College of Bourbon, Ind., to be under the auspices of the Brotherhood.

Answer: It does not regard it as a church school, or conducted by the brotherhood, though it is under the auspices of members of the church, and is supported by those who patronize it, and not by donations of the church.

Henry Davy: The query is before you, brethren, what have you to say?

D. B. Sturgis: It is correct, brother Davy, as we understand it in our section of country.

Henry Davy: I will just remark that the answer read agreed very well with the understanding in Middle and Western Penn'a.,—that neither of these regard it as a church school. Neither does this Annual Meeting regard it as such.

Samuel Layman: This matter has caused some trouble. Now we can publish the truthful statement

(A voice.) While I lived in new Albany, Indiana, it was stated that we had our sons there, being educated for preachers. They have advised us to be careful. So long as wheat flour is sold for wheat flour, I will not object. So long as this school is carried on as it is now carried on, I will say nothing about it; but be careful that you do not make additions. As the matter now stands, let us be careful to bear with it.

David Nisely: I think there is no brother here who lives nearer the school than I do; and I think it is carried on in a Christian-like manner.

Henry Davy: As I read the question and answer, the school is under the auspices of the members of the church, and is supported by those who patronize it, and not by donations of the church.

The query and answer then passed. Adjourned to 1 o'clock, after singing "Guide me, O Thou Great Jehovah."

AFTERNOON.

While the Standing Committee tarried, the congregation engaged in singing; "On Jordan's stormy banks I stand." "My days are gliding swiftly by," "O, how happy are they," &c. Called to order by singing: „Kommt und laszt euch Jesu lehren."

9. What will the members of this D. M. say to the following: A church expelled a misistering brother, all the members being satisfied, except eight out of over two hundred. Afterwards some of those dissatisfied, being near relations to the bishop, got up a paper and got ten signers with the Bishop, to call a committee of four old brethren. These old brethren came and took an action, and with a few members reinstated the expelled brother again, to his full office to preach, against the wish and will of the church. The calling of the committee was unknown to the church, until notice was given, when said committee would meet. Now had those brethren a right to do so, according to the Gospel and the Minutes of Annual Meeting of 1866, '67, Query 19 & 30, and 1870, Query 5, and 1857, art. 13? If not right what should be done, or how should such persons be dealt with?

ANSWER. They had no right to do so, and those who have done so, should be dealt with as offenders.

(A voice) Have brethren from other districts the right to take hold of such matters? It has reference to a case in the Eastern district of Penn'a, and the brethren who give this answer live in the Middle district of Penn'a.

John Zook. The case in my district was nearly like it but it was not carried on in that way. That query would not suit our case. It is quite out of the way.

Moses Miller. This query has been presented. It may be valuable, and it may not be valuable. As it is before us, let it be discussed. If I am guilty, let it be for me. If I am innocent, it will do me no harm. If the brethren in Eastern Penn'a, have something to fit it, it would be well to have a decision.

Samuel Longenecker: It appears to be a query of a general character. The query is, have the brethren the right to do as this theory represents? If there is no brother here that has done so, it will hurt nobody; and if we can have a decision in this case, it will be for the future instruction of brethren. Therefore, I do not see why this query should not be acted upon.

Henry Davy. We have enough cases, without taking them up before they occur.

Grabill Myers. Brethren should know how far they ought to go, we have young brethren coming on, and let us know about this.

Dan'l Keller. Made remarks in German; also Wm. Hartzler.

Samuel Longanecker The query is before us with its answer. There is a cause why this query comes up.—Let this go on the minutes, and when we reach the case, the answer is here Should there be a mistake, and the answer made, there is nothing lost This body will know how to act in similar cases.

Emmanuel Slifer. That answer will not do There has always been a rule I believe, that we cannot legislate backwards. In passing by that case, it will not satisfy that church if that action has been had in opposition to the 200. What will be done with the case? Though that would answer for the future, but it will not answer for the past.

D. P. Saylor. In 1866 we passed a rule that no dispute can come in the District, unless it first comes up in the church in which it originated. If this did not originate in the church, it cannot come up in the district; much less in another district.

(A voice.) There are different queries here regarding it, though they are not from the same District. Suppose these congregations did not send a query when the bishop of the congregation was against them?

(A voice.) There had been council meetings held there with two Elders from other churches, and these have been from other dirtricts; so that still they might have brought the query up. No doubt there will be a committee to investigate the matter farther. If that is the case, I move to lay the question on the table, and thus not detain the meeting much longer.

Henry Davy: There are cases in which this will not suffice. Now be careful what you do. There is a minute where a bishop has no right to call in joint Elders, without consulting the church. It is thought best to table the question and have a committee appointed. Agreed to, and Jos. R. Hanawalt, John G. Glock, Samuel Lehman, Daniel Fry, F. P. Loehr, and John Metzger were appointed the committee.

10. Will this District Meeting approve of the following amendment to the plan of holding Annual Meetings? Let the district send one delegate to represent them on the Standing Committee, and each congregation send one representative, and these to compose the annual council, and all queries to be decided by that body alone?

Ans. We approve of this amendment, and recommend it to the consideration of the Annual Meeting.

D. P. Saylor. I suggest that this meeting recommend that there be no more elections of Standing Committees, but that all the ordained elders present upon the Annual Meeting, shall constitute what is now known as the Standing Committee, who shall organize themselves for the dispatch of business: that the "standing committee" be stopped, and that the term "elders" be substituted.

I feel bound to make an effort to get this to something like it was in the past. You know as well as I, that there has been more or less unpleasant feelings in different parts of the Brotherhood in reference to this select standing committee of business, since it has been adopted by the church. This is the reason that there have been continual changes made; and that is the reason why it now comes up in the Middle District of Pa., in the shape it does. The object is still to offer an amendment to the standing committee arrangement.

Now, I see no need that there shall be any difference between the ordained elders present at the Annual Meeting. Why not let them all go to the meetings as the Committee now goes, and when any private matters are to be consulted upon, why not consult with them all? If we do that, there can be no cause for complaining on the score that any part of the Brotherhood would be unrepresented. The time was when there was an apparent necessity for something of this kind; but that necessity no longer exists. When we did busines through the Committees, then it was necessary for them to go into rooms. Every elder was put on sub-committees, and business was committed into their hands. Now, we have passed this arrangement. For the Annual Meetings, the District Meetings, prepare all the queries and pass upon them; they bring certain ones here and keep other ones at home. There is no longer necessity for committees.—My idea is that those questions that come up of a private character, shall be submitted to the whole body of the elders present, and not one excluded.

I have said what I did for the purpose of introducing the subject; and it seems to me that if every peace-loving brother could see what I see, no possible harm come out of it, but on the other hand it would have a tendency to bind the brotherhood together.

Brethren have talked about room. We have a good deal of room here. If we have not room in the house, let us go into the barn; if the barn is not large enough, go into the woods.

Now, I make an amendment to that answer, and I hope the brethren will see the propriety of adopting it in lieu of this. Some of the brethren think my amendment does not touch the question. I think it does. The query proposes an amendment to the plan of holding the Annual Meetiug.

H. R. Holsinger: Our plan proposes to have each District send one delegate to represent them on the Standing Committee; and your plan proposes any ordained Elder who attends the meetings; in direct contradiction.

Saylor. As to the election of a delegate to go to the meeting, you have no Scripture for it, from the beginning to the end of the Scriptures.

Joseph R. Hanawalt. You cannot quite make it appear that way.

Daniel P. Saylor. "Then their bishops and elders came together."

Jacob Miller. Did not the whole church come together? Why not have the whole church then? I think we had better stick to this until we can get the council committee of the meeting to consider and say whether we want a change or not.

Slifer. While I differ with brother Saylor on his plan, I nevertheless agree that he has a right to offer a substitute. After that is decided, I will talk about the matter itself.

H. R. Holsinger. You are talking about a thing that is not before the meeting.

Henry Davy. I have been appealed to. I do not understand that any brother has the right to substitute a query in place, of a query; however he has the right to make an answer. If it is an answer to the query, it is in place; if it is a substitute, it is not it place. It has not been definitely stated, whether it was an answer or whether it was not.

H. R. Holsinger. If it is a proposition, it cannot be an amendment.

Jacob Miller. Why not bring in the whole brotherhood assembled?

Daniel P. Saylor. That is what we want; and also that all ordained elders present shall meet together in committee instead of the method now pursued.

Joseph Hanawalt. What is wanted, in the first place, is representation; and we think we have it as fair as it can be had, in point of the Standing Committee; from the respective districts. Unless districts are swelled unequally, which we are yet unwilling to bear with. Penn'a. has three large districts. Numerous churches compose those districts. Maryland gets three, with fewer members and churches, by many. We have no complaint entered, but we would like the representation from all the churches made, if possible, a little more equal. As it was, for many years the whole church came together. After a while, we found there were too many; that all could not be accommodated. Many brethren then did not have a voice, and then whole churches were not represented, in the true sense of the term. To remove this, we prepared this amendment. I think there cannot be any room of complaint in that. Then every church can have the privilege of sending one member, and those members to compose the body to decide questions only; and if any of those churches do not see proper to send a representative of course they expect to be satisfied with what is done. But we think that the privilege should be given to every organized church, to send one representative, those representatives to decide questions in that body alone. Such representation would tend to bring back to the churches the mind of the Annual Meeting, and I think it would save a good deal of discredit that might be carried back in other ways. We do not care to war with the brethren; but we desire that fair representation be given here.

Ebersole. Brother Saylon had one plan, and the brethren had another.—But a few years ago we changed, and now we are going to change again. It does not appear to work well. Now one wants all the elders to be on the committee, and one wants a delegate from every church, and every district to have one of the Standing Committee.

H. R. Holsinger. I do not know that there is so very much danger in changing, provided we come a little nearer the right. Some things have been changed pretty nearly every year, in order to get a little nearer correct. So I do not see that there is an argument against this, although I am not a very strong friend of this resolution.

But I wish to make a little explanation to show you how much this plan of holding the Annual Meeting is complained of and its effect upon the church.

The appointment of the Standing Committee is all the same—each district to one member;—and it seems to me that no body ought to object to that.

Now, instead of sending another delegate, this plan proposes to send a delegate from each congregation; and then, when this is done, it is not proposed to exclude any member from coming here and participating in the discussions. For instance, here is this congregation, with a very large body of brethren around us. According to the present plan, each individual member of this congregation has as much to do in passing upon the decisions of this meeting, as any delegate sent here by distant congregations. That is the way we look on this matter—any brother has equal authority with any man appointed by any district, although that delegate is sent here, and has his expenses paid. It appears to our people that there is no system at all in this.

Now, they do not want to be cut off from the privilege of discussing subjects, not at all. But when it comes down to a conclusion, then we think the delegates sent here ought to decide the matter.

A brother suggests that we want to decide all questions by vote of the delegates sent here. He thinks that would be against the system. I do not say by vote. If you can do it by acclamation, so much the better; but do not come to a decision, by three or four saying "pass it," and all the others sitting quiet, as we have done today. In our congregational meetings, we decide matters by majority. At our District Meetings, we decide matters by a majority. Members go there belonging to congregations of the District in which the meeting is held, and have a right to participate in the discussions; but when it comes to final decissions, delegates and delegates only are allowed to vote. When it comes to this meeting, where the most weighty matters are sent for final decision, and from which there is to be no appeal, then you are to decide these matters at random Slifer: I simply rise to concur fully with what the brother has said.

David Bosserman: I think there is a little too much exclusion at our Council Meetings. It is often said that brethren have done so and so

It is now fifty years since the Spirit of God worked upon me. I remember in 1846, I think it was, in Franklin County, there was a proposition offered and carried that a two-thirds majority should decide; but it answered the brethren only one year. They wanted it unanimous. I have proposed here, but it did not succeed, to have it in this form: In case a question comes up, and the whole are not for it, get consent to postpone the matter for one year, and then, when they come together have it reconciled. I have been taught that there is a time coming when I cannot hide behind my brethren. I tell you that it will not be a sufficient excuse.

Jacob Miller: I propose to lay it aside entirely, and not make any change in the order of holding the Annual meetings.

Hanawalt: I think we do not look at this matter fairly. I want it said in the Districts of Penn'a, that we have a Republican form of government in our churches, that the majority rules, but these representatives sent here are no more than other brethren. When one says on a question "Table it," and the question is before the delegates whether it shall be tabled or not, we want somebody here to stand up when matters are going wrong; when they go right all well.

I have been present, on a subject a little wrong, when one would say, "Pass it," and it would seem to have its influence on the congregation, and brethren with little courage, like myself, would not have the courage to oppose it.

Davy. It has been said that some things have passed by, a few saying thay were agreed to pass it. I ask if there is any brother to say that we passed any thing at any meeting, without the vote of not less than five or six brethren? I say that we have not. When a number say, "We are agreed," and the balance sit still, we take it for granted that we are all agreed. I think the brethren will say I have pursued that course.

As to the argument that was made I feel fully prepared to meet it. It is proposed now to table this, and try the former, and see which we are agreed upon.

H. R. Holsinger. We do not want any tabling. We want this to go upon its merits, and the brethren to tell us whether they agree to our plan or not.

Jacob Miller. I believe this is an important matter. I believe if we admit one amendment to the present organization, through this meeting, that next year we may have twenty, and it may be forty. When the general Brotherhood gets tired of the present order, let us take an order as we did in 1865, and appoint a committee to consider the matter for the good of the general Brotherhood. It is a serious matter, admitting these amendments year after year. They came by scores to amend the old order, but the brethren kept the amendments out until the whole Brotherhood said we will have a committee meeting, and they did so. Then we tried this. Let us have the same authority—the whole church by their delegates—to consider the matter, and change in part or whole for the edification of the body.

The answer was read and agreed to as follows:

"We think it best not to make the change asked for at present."

The next question or rather resolution submitted to the Annual Meeting to answer, according to the arrangement of the proper person, remains in possession of the standing committee until an answer be appended to it.

H. R. Holsinger. Our action has been properly taken. We cannot answer a resolution.

John Wise. It is by no means suppressing this resolution. We want it in proper shape.

Western District of Penn'a.

13. Is it according to the gospel for a brother to swear his life against a man for any cause?

Ans. Not according to the Gospel.

Isaac Price. It does not ask the question fairly. If it asks in relation to protection from the government, I say, pass this not. Jesus Christ swore not, and the disciples say swear not at all. Are we such ignoramuses? Never bring such a question here. Many of us hold that we have a right to turn to the government, for we have Paul for an example. But to swear—in that manner, we have no right to swear. Send this back to the congregation and request them to ask the question more properly.

Saylor. We have no right to refuse to answer queries.

Isaac Price. Why come here. We have no right to take up such a question. We claim our right to throw ourselves protection upon the government, and we are shutting our mouths to proclaiming it.

(A voice.) "I appeal unto Cæsar."

John Wise. "Unto Cæsar thou shalt go." When a man's life is threatened, it is a common phrase that he swears his life against the person threatening him, whether he make affirmation or oath by the Bible.

Henry Davy. The Delegates who brought this query here will please take it back as objectionable.

John Wise. Rather than take the responsibility of making any change in this question, which I think we have no right to do—it has just come in the form it passed the District Meeting—I would say, send it back to the congregation where it originated. That would be satisfactory.

Isaac Price. If you are sure that "affirmation" is the word, put it "affirmation."

(A voice.) That was the intention, no doubt.

Wise: The common phrase is "Swear."

Price: After so saying it is to say,

"Have we a right to throw ourselves under the protection of the government ?"

Henry Davy : Shall we return it to the congregation, and say nothing about it?

If brethren want information on a case, we ought to give it to them. When a brother's life is threatened, he, according to the gospel, can inform according to law of the one who threatens, in order to have that one keep the peace.

Jacob Rininger. It seems to me that the Standing Committee is the proper place to correct the form, and place it in such language that the query might be answered, and answered properly.

Saylor. It is manifest that we have the right to throw ourselves upon the government for protection. We certainly have, if we have the apostle Paul for example. Because he was born in that province, and according to the roman law made a citizen, he could not be bound or beaten with stripes—they were afraid to bind him before he was candemned. Others had bound themselves under an oath that they would not eat until they had killed Paul. He throwed himself under the protection of the military ; they saved his life, and he was brought before the centurion. If a man's life is threatened by another, he does not need to make oath, but a regular form of affirmation. I think that the answer ought to be changed

John Wise. Brother Daniel thinks the case in question synonymous with the case of Paul. There certainly is a difference. When Paul made that appeal, he was a prisoner, and incurred no penalty by the appeal. When a man informs the government of a lawless man who threatens his life, it places that lawless man in a position to keep the peace one year and one day, or he goes into prison for threatening to assault a man. Is that synonymous with the position of Paul? Your judgment will determine.

Let the man succeed in informing the government against this vicious person who threatens his life, and certainly he has to present security that he will keep the peace for one year. Does the government place around the man a band of soldiers for his protection? I answer, no. That man stands as isolated from the government as if he had made no appeal. The only protection is an instrument of writing. The man of vicious principle will lurk in the wood and in the night and shoot the one he threatens as readily as if the protection were not obtained. There is no similarity in the case whatever.

I very much fear that the brother who will behave so unseemly that his neighbor will threaten his life, and he then informs the authorities against him, that it will incense the man the more, and jeapordize the brother's life more than if he did not do such a thing. I say to my brethren if you cannot so conduct yourselves in a peaceful community that your neighbors will be at peace about you, you had better reform your heart. By conducting yourselves more becomingly, you need make no such appeal.

Isaac Price. I tell the church to turn that brother out.

Wise. There was an effort made to do that ; but the church was divided, like we are here. Hence they appealed to the Ditrict Meeting, and they appealed to the Annual Meeting. When we had it under consideration at our District Meeting, we answered it "Not right." My judgment is the same yet, when we answered the question in the District meeting, it is that the man that does so, does not exhibit himself in that light laid down in the holy principles of our religion. If we live out those principles as the Bible teaches, we know there is no necessity for such procedure. Let us fill our station honorably. If these troubles come, go back to the Scriptures, and by reform, manifest a confidence in God more than in the law.

H. R Holsinger. I have something to say regarding the unfair argument, touching the matter now before this meeting. Brother Wise says that perhaps by a word this lawless man would be thrown into prison.—Why, most assurdly, if a brother has no cause to be fearful of losing his life, he ought never to make oath, or affirmation, or complaint, and therefore that would never touch the case. It must not be said, there is no cause for this course. We have had, and know of brethren that led Christian lives, who went down to the grave by the hand of the assassin. It is not every person who will respect an honorable life.

Regarding protection. It is very true, a man's security in an article of agreement, is not a strong band of Soldiers surrounding him ; but it iscertainly a mean's of protection. In the business transactions of life, a man's word is not held to be as good as his note ; and a note without is not as good as a note with security. When a man is held to keep the peace, there is security connected with it, and this can be brought about by affirmation.

J. H. Umstead. To give them encouragement of certain protection, would give them encouragement to go out of the way. The instruction of Paul is never to render evil for evil. If we get hold of other ideas, and instill them into the minds of the children, and place them upon record, I think our coming together would be to disadvantage. My voice is therefore to give no encouragement in such a thing as this.

Knisely. Did not the Savior say, "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you?" Paul says, "If thine enemy hunger, feed him ; if he thirst, give him drink ; for in so doing, thou shalt

[To be Continued.]

CORRESPONDENCE

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as a guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Dear Companion: Seated in the President's room of Salem College, this morning, freed from outside pressure and turmoil, I shall try to compose my mind for the purpose of giving a short sketch of my late tour to the east and back to this place: not so much for my own gratification as that of my dear brethren and sisters, who desired me to do so; and more particularly the younger class, for whom I have a strong affection, and in whose spiritual welfare I am particularly interested, and whose noble aspirations for holiness of character I desire to encourage, and to stir up the pure motives of Christian virtues in their souls, that they may be living epistles of the Christian religion wherever they go, and in whatever they do.

I left Bourbon, Indiana, on the evening of June 1st, and stopped off next day at Columbiana, Ohio, and visited our esteemed brother and sister Kurtz, who (bro. K.) had been brought nigh unto death last winter, but was permitted to remain a little longer in the purifying process of this life. Having spent a little time agreeably, I resumed my journey next day between 9 and 10 A. M., and stopped off at Johnstown, Pa. Passing through their wild and thinly inhabited region, from Pittsburg to Johnstown, I felt lonely and homesick;—hence those three verses of poetry that appear in the C. F. C. Here I inquired and found sister Cobaugh, and remained over night with her and her interesting little family. May her little son not delay to step into the foot-prints of his father, and in so doing insure to himself an inheritance in the kingdom of glory.

In the morning I went two miles through the rain to brother J. Wertz's who took me to brother H. Musselman's, by whom I had been invited to stop off at Johnstown. It being still rainy there could be but two meetings held, after which I made my way to McVeytown, to the Middle Pennsylvania District Meeting, which I attended to great profit and satisfaction. Salem College was one of the first subjects noticed and discussed. After some discussion brother H. R. Holsinger rose and gave a correct view of the matter; and after I had given it my testimony, Salem College was left go in peace;—and I have no doubt many a God-speed followed the same. I did not blame the brethren for objecting to the Salem College by what they had understood of the same; but they should have judged nothing before the time, however to err is human and to correct errors divine. I trust the labor performed here in this settlement by the brethren from the different congregations, will be as "Bread cast upon the waters"; and especially that of fitting out and sending brother D. M. Holsinger to Michigan, to visit the scattered lambs of the flock, who have gone there to get little earthly homes with small means, and are now crying for the bread of life. Many there are from the state of Penn'a,—brethren's children and neighbors, who cannot unite with any other than the church of the Brethren.

From McVeytown, I went back to Mt Union, and was taken to Germanny Valley, by brother Basehoar, where I attended their lovefeast; and though my own heart felt cold and lifeless, yet I have reason to believe that others enjoyed the light of God's countenance, as I also did in the morning after the lovefeast, for which God's name be praised. Afterwards I attended several meetings in this congregation, in all of which God's blessing seemed to be manifest.

I came back to Mt Union again, and took the train to Huntingdon, where, in the company of sister W. Clark, I enjoyed the hospitality of Dr. Brumbaugh, and formed agreeable acquaintance in addition to others already made, though not named.

From here took passage for Markleysburg. Attended several meetings among the Brumbaugh families.

From here I was brought across the Turrie Mountain, to the place where the Annual Meeting was held 8 years ago, which brought back many thoughts and reflections; but I dare not enter into a discription of the same. A very large number of members communed here; and, as I have reason to believe, to edification; at least I felt that it was good to be here. As in other places before, so also here, former friendship was renewed, and many new acquaintances formed.

I was then brought by brother stiffler to brother James Sell's, the only speaker now in the Duncansville church. May the good Lord be near him, and be his great reward.—I attended meeting next day with them in their meeting-house; a goodly congregation; I trust they will pray the Lord of the harvest to send them more laborers. I went home with brother stiffler, and learned to my grief, that they had two sons who would not be satisfied with a common education; consequently got an education in some Baptist seminary, and were afterwards hired to preach for them; which might have been avoided, had a scoool of the brethren been in existence. Here a smile of derision might be raised at the above expression, as if no people were Christians but ourselves; but be it remembered, we don't unchristianize anybody that professeth Christ; but we love them for what they do, as far as they go, as Jesus did the young man; but we think so long as we are willing to dispose of all that we love and follow the Lamb whither soever he goes, we may miss the mark of the high calling of Christ Jesus. Brother Stiffler brought me to the station, three miles from Altoona; arrived at Lewistown, and was taken to Dry Valley lovefeast, where a goodly number enjoyed the rich blessing, found only in the house and family of God.

The meeting was continued next morning, as I trust, to edification, till eleven o'clock. Next day I took the train for Mifflintown, from whence we were taken to place of meeting, where old brother Peter Long keeps house. Here there was a choice held for a speaker. May God anoint him with wisdom from on high to serve the cause of the Master. From this place, I, with a number of brethren made my way to the city of "Brotherly Love"—Philadelphia, where we arrived in the meeting-house at the commencement of Feet-washing. A large number of members from a distance united in the exercises. And though there was some variation from our practice, yet it seemed all were edified; and as there was no breaking up between examination and supper, I for my part enjoyed the more composure of mind, and consequently a greater share of the presence of Divine influence.

I was there met by brother Abraham Cassel, from Indian Creek church, who conducted me next day (after lodging with brother J. Fry, and visiting brother Custer,) to his home, where I spent Saturday, 27th of May, in looking at some of his ten thousand volumes of rare books, of antiquity and modern date; and if I never before wished myself back fifty years, I did it involuntarily today. I thought of the immense treasury contained in these books, which I might have made my own had I had access thereto. And another thought struck me forcibly:—What a pity that these valuable volumes lie here unoccupied! Brother Cassel, however, wishes to place them where they may be of use, if such a place can be designated; and my private opinion runs, that his books, with himself as Librarian, could be of great value in Salem College. As a Librarian he can lay his hand on any book named, in a few minutes, and while doing so, tell of its contents. I dare not enter into any particulars, but only say that next day I met with the church in their roomy meeting-house three times, and to my surprise found all yet in German;—even the old "Psalterspiel" for their hymn-book, and scarcely any that can sing English hymns. Though a brother told me his little family cost him many hundred dollars for fitting them out with carriages, harness, and fast horses, yet education of the mind seems to have lingered in the back ground, and never has shown its pleasant countenance and agreeable company. But instead of being trained up in attending Sunday-schools, and acquiring a love and taste for reading good and useful books, the youth perhaps would have an understanding where they would meet this Sunday, and that long winter evening, and for lack of better matter from reading, would of necessity talk of less important or perhaps hateful things, so as to pass away their time. Now if it were not that very few of the families, not only in this place but to a large extent in the eastern part of Pennsylvania, read the Companion, I would endeavor to call the attention of fathers and mothers to the subject of giving their children useful employments for their minds, as they do for their bodies.

And to attain this end I would suggest, to bring them together on Sunday morning, teach them to exercise their voices by teaching them the notes as they are taught the letters to learn to read; then teach them tunes and words to suit the tune, or rather tunes to suit the words, and in so doing you will prevent them using idle and vain words; but instead of that their mouths will be filled with the songs of Zion, and no need of filling them with tobacco, to give them employment; and instead of gossipping, when older, in coming together, they can occupy their time in singing; and if they have acquired a love for reading in Sunday-school, they may have something to talk about that is useful and instructive.

Children, like old people, must have associations; and if parents don't provide for them, that which is useful, they will form for themselves The neglect of parents in this respect has filled the saloons, doggeries, and places of ill fame; and many a bright and intelligent boy has ruined himself with fast living, fast horses, and fast woman, who could and would have been an ornament to society, an honor to his country, and a comfort to his aged father and mother, and, finally, an heir of heaven.

But I have digressed, and must return and say, that on Monday I returned to place of Annual Meeting, where I enjoyed a season of extraordinary refreshing; especially as those queries most dreaded were disposed of without much excitement; and I trust we are all more confirmed that the Lord hath not forsaken them that put their trust in him. We have had again lessons of self-denial and submission to one another for Christ's sake, thereby to become more and more combined as members of one body; and such of us who have dreaded a disruption of the brotherhood, may take courage, and begin anew to work in the vineyard of the Lord with redoubled zeal, to keep up the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace and love.

I must here cut short my communication, by saying, that I had to deny myself the pleasure of making some visits to my former home in Northhampton, and only paid a short visit to a cousin some forty-five miles below Philadelphia; and then attended some council meetings in Lancaster county, which, to all appearance, were directed by the Spirit of the Lord; and it is hoped all the dear brethren and sisters will watch with greater diligence and prayer than ever, so that our adversary may be defeated in his scheems to destroy the unity and peace of God's children. We left Elizabethtown on Saturday, and arrived at McVeytown at 6 P. M. on Monday; bade farewell, and stopped over at Tyrone, with the intention to remain two days; but learning that the school at Bourbon would close on Wednesday the 14th, I left for that place in the morning, and reached next morning in time to hear the exercises that day and next, of which I shall speak in my next.

F. P. Loehr.

Bourbon, Ind.

Contemplated Visit.

Having had under contemplation for some time to visit our friends and acquaintances in the states of Illinois and Iowa; myself and wife have now concluded, the Lord willing, to start from here on the 22nd of June, and as we expect stopping off at several points, we calculate to land at Haldane, Ogle county, Ill., on the afternoon of the 29th, or morning of the 30th. We expect to be in and around Ogle county, at least three weeks

Should any of our friends in the East wish to write, they can address me at Polo, Ogle county, Ill's. Also, brethren and friends wishing to correspond with me in regard to the visit, can address as above. We have not, as yet, definitely laid out the route of travel for our visit, but will to some extent be governed by the instructions and encouragement of the brethren. I expect giving an occasional report of our visit; and will try to keep the readers of the Companion posted as to where they can address me by letter, either to give or receive information.

So in conclusion for this time I will say to all, Remember us when it is well with you.

Daniel M. Holsinger.

Tyrone, Pa.

Brother Henry: A circumstance took place last winter, that is worthy of notice

A Union Meeting was agreed upon to be held by a Lutheran minister and a Baptist minister, as a revival meeting, to be continued some days. At the close of this meeting each convert was to choose which way he should be baptized—by sprinkling or immersion.

So the Lutheran minister announced his day for baptism, for adults and children to come to his baptism, as he termed it. The first action was on the adult, and then the children (they were not believers). The children did not receive the water with joy, but struggled and cried very much, as some of them were of pretty good size.

The Baptist minister said, "I have looked at your way of administering your baptism, now come to-morrow and see my way of baptizing."

The morrow came on, and the Baptist minister performed his service; and coming up out of the water, steps up to the Lutheran minister, and, reaching for his hand, said:

"Come in here, I want to baptize you."

"No, sir, I don't believe in your way, sir."

"Come on," replied the Baptist "you must come, sir, you forced your candidates yesterday, so I will force you to-day; now be consistent—come on, sir."

Oh! that the common people would open their eyes. J. J. Cover.

"Hygeian Home," June 22, 1871.

Brother Holsinger: Conformably to your request, I will transmit a few lines relative to my physical condition.

Like the Israelites in the wilderness, I am crossing and recrossing my path in my exodus from the furnace of suffering. Gradually, almost imperceptibly, the vital force is asserting its sway, and giving faint indications of victory over disease.—My case may be aptly illustrated by a dam that has been emptied by the slow process of evaporation. When a dam is suddenly drained, with a full, strong current at its head, it will soon refill when the sluice is let down. This conveys a vivid idea of acute disease. But I have had my vital fund sapped by a slow death extending over twenty years. I have but he least spark of recuperative power to fall back upon, which must be economized with great prudence and skill in order to regain areasonable degree of health

The physician is very sanguine of my ultimate recovery if I remain under the proper influences a sufficient length of time. He is a profound philosopher, but I always remind him that I believe in a God who has control over organic law as we have over the implements with which we accomplish our daily work.

I am in His hand, and whether health or dissolution be the issue of my present prostration, my constant prayer is that He may be glorified, and my body, soul, and spirit sanctified, and made "meet for the inheritance of the saints in light."

Better lie in the hottest chamber of heaven's refining crucible, and feel the warm pulsations of redeeming love beating back and forth from the bosom of the God-man into our own, than to drink the deepest cup of earthly joy without an interest in the glorious future of Emmanuel.

C. H. Balsbaugh.

Editor Companion; Dear sir, we would recommend the following for the consideration of those persons, who are thinking of emigrating to Oregon. Specially would we call the attention of ministers of the German Baptist order; especially those who wish to reside in a land of plenty, and quietness, and we presume that all good men desire to have a home in such a country.

We are blest.

Truly are we a people crowned with divine favors, cradled with peace and plenty in the fertile valley of the Willamette, protected by the vast chain of Rocky Mountains on the East; lulled to forgetfulness of the outside world by the songs of the mighty Pacific on the West. We thank the kind Omnipotence, that, with infinite goodness, has cast our lot in this beautiful "Sunset land," where our quiet has never yet been broken by clang and clash of arms.

And long be the day,
Ere in battles affray,
We shall hear the cannon's roar.

The inhabitants of other lands have not been so blest with happiness and prosperity as we; for tales of war and blood-shed have been brought to us every time, the lightening has flashed across the atlantic cable for many months, and our hearts best sympathy has gone out to the wounded and dying on the vine clad hills of sunny France, and elsewhere.

B. N. Hardman.

Dear Brother; According to previous arrangements, our lovefeast came off on the 3rd and 4th of June; and we are happy to inform you that we really had a feast of good things. One sister was added to our number,—making in all eight in the past year.

The old ship of Zion is slowly but successfully moving along with us; and we hope that we will soon have a goodly number to sail with us o'er the briny waters of time, and at last land safely in the port of Heaven.—We have a small body, consisting of about 60 members, while our country is improving very rapidly.

To the brethren of the East who contemplate moving West, we extend a hearty invitation, that some may cast their lots with ours in Champaign Co., where, in peace and harmony, we may live and serve the Lord as one people.

Your brother in the Lord,
J. H. Moore.

Thomasboro, Ill.

MARRIED.

By the undersigned on the 1st day of June, 1871, brother JOHN RIFE, of White county, Indiana, and sister ELIZABETH SMITH, of Miami county, Ohio.

Elder Isaac Miller.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with obituary notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In the Elklick branch, Somerset county, Pa., May 25th, of Measles, sister ELIZABETH VOUGHT, wife of brother Jacob Vought; aged 53 years 3 months and 4 days. Funeral services by the writer.

In the same congregation, May 10th, WILLIAM BITTNER, son of Peter and Elizabeth Bittner; aged 3 years 2 months and 1 day. Funeral services by the writer and Elder C. G. Lint.

Cornelius Berkly.

In the Bloomingdale congregation, Van-Buren county, Mich., April 21st, sister SUSANNAH MESSER, sister-in-law to the writer; aged 47 years 3 months and 11 days. Disease, Congestive Chills. Funeral discourse by brethren Jacob Thomas and M T. Baer, from Rev. 14: 13, to a large concourse of people. A. B. Wallick.

In the Wabash branch, Wabash county, Indiana, on the 22nd day of April, old bro. SAMUEL IKENBERRY; aged 72 years 7 months and 22 days. He emigrated from Virginia to Ohio, and from Ohio to Wabash county, Indiana. He was quite poorly for four or five years. Finally death delivered him from all his sufferings of this mortal life. We are glad to know that the friends need not sorrow as those who have no hope.

Funeral improved by the writer, from Gal. 14: 14, in the Brethren's meetinghouse, to a very large and attentive congregation. Samuel Murray.

In the Sallimoney church, Huntingdon county, Indiana, on the 6th of May, brother HENRY HOOVER, aged 57 years 1 month and 12 days. He was complaining for several months. On Thursday he took dinner with his neighbor, brother W. Smith, went home; on Friday night he sent for the Elders of the church and was anointed. On Saturday morning he died. On Sunday he was conveyed to the Brethren's meeting-house at Lancaster, followed by a very large procession, and many mourning friends.—Funeral discourse by the writer, from John 11 : 25, 26.

Samuel Murray.

In Grandround Valley, Union county, Oregon, Feb. 21, SINDRILLA, infant daughter of friend Joseph and Sindrilla SHOEMAKER, aged 5 months and 4 days. It suffered 18 hours, when God called it to a better world. Fufferal services by a Baptist minister.

In the Black Swamp congregation, Wood county, Ohio, Dec. 25, 1870, brother JOHN SMITH, aged 103 years 11 months and 15 days. He was born and raised in England, and the father of two sons, with whom he lived. His wife died in England. Funeral services from 2nd Timothy, 4 : 6, 7, 8. He was baptized June 6th, 1868. While going to change his clothes, he said he had done the biggest day's work he had ever done.—He communed that fall with us, at our love-feast, and walked about without a cane.—Before our next love-feast, in the fall, he was struck with the palsy. He was anointed in May, 1870. When this was done, he said he had done everything he knew to insure the great salvation of his soul. His life was still prolonged, in a helpless condition, till October 15th, 1870, the time of our lovefeast. After the meeting, a few of our Bishops went to his house and administered the sacred emblems to this aged brother, when he shed tears of joy to think that the Brethren thought so much of him in his affliction, which he bore with patience, hoping there was a crown of glory laid up in heaven for him. One week before his departure, several brethren and myself visited him a few minutes before meeting. He showed great manifestation of good faith. He filled part of his Christian mission by raising his head from his pillow to salute the brethren present. Funeral services by Noah Henricks.

Brethren and sisters, hold out faithfully in all your Christian duties, that we may all one day meet him.

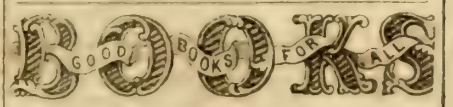
S. Fink.

LIST OF MONEYS received for subscription, books, &c.,

A. B. Wallick,	$1.00	G. B. Spicher,	1,50
J. Buechly,	1,50	B. Benshooff,	3,75
Samuel Book,	1,50	H. P. Shultz,	3,50
R. B. Reigard,	1,50	J. F. Neher,	,75
J. L. Custer,	2,25	J. Warner,	1,00
S. R. Major,	,75	E. C. Benton,	,70
J. J. Cover,	2,50	J. J. Blough,	,75
G. W. Mathias,	1,25	S. W. Bollinger,	2,00
John Oaks,	1,00	Peter Long,	,75
L. W. Teeter,	10,00	J.H.Hoek'nb'ry,	2,00
John Renner,	2,00	J. E. Bowser,	1,75
John Pool,	,75	Wm. Lentz,	1,50
F. A Hendricks,	1,50	I. H. Crist,	1,40
E. Merrill,	1,25	M. Whitacre,	,75
Thomas Nedrow,	3,00	Mark Minser,	4,00
S. Wilcox,	,75	Dr E. Brallier	,75

Advertisements.

WE will admit a limited number of select advertisements at the following rates.
One insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.
No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations.



For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By Benjamin Wilson. Price, $4.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol.. $2.25. Indispensable.

Life at Home; or the Family and its Members.—Including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed. The Altar in the House, etc. By Wm. Aikman. $1 50; full gilt, $2.

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. Thompson Fancy Cloth. $1.00.

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand-book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners, with a Chart for recording the sizes of the different Organs of the Brain, in the Delineation of Character, with upwards of 170 Engravings. Muslin, $1.25.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S R. Wells. $1.50; Extra gilt, $2.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms By W. Pittinger. $1.50.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Beautifully Illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth, gilt, beveled boards. Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75 cents.

Any of the above sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

The Phrenological Journal, An Illus-trated First Class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man" subscription price, $1.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50, or with the Pious Youth, for $4.00. We commend the Journal to all who want a good Family Magazine, and who does not?

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post office, county and state written in plainest possible letters and address-ed to S. R. Brallier, Tyrone, Pa

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING

One copy, post paid	0.75
12 copies, post paid	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	$0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

German & English PlainSheep.

One copy, post paid	$1.00
Per dozen,	10.50
Turkey Morocco, Ger. & Eng.
One copy, post paid,	1,25
Per dozen " "	13.30
Plain Single German
One copy, post paid	.50
Per dozen" "	$5.50

The Christian Harp, containing 32 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP.

Per dozen, post paid.	$0.20
Per hundred, post paid,	1.50

Marriage Certificates.

On good, heavy paper, per doz., post paid,	0.30
" " per hundred, "	2.40
Companion Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.70
Reserved at the office,	2.25
Nead's Theology, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
Brethren's Encyclopedia.
Single copy, Post Paid	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express,	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	·60
German & English Testaments,	.75

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Revised New Testament.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50
18 MO. EDITION.
Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25
32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION.
Plain Cloth Binding, post paid	25
25 copies to one person, by express,	5.00
Roan binding, red edges, post paid	50

Where one or two dozen is wanted, in places adjacent to Railroads, they may be sent cheaper by express.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

1780 1871

ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK?

Use Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

CLEANSE YOUR BLOOD!!

An Alterative and Cathartic, or Tonic and Purge combined, for diseases arising from bad blood, such as Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Erysipelas, Worms, Chills and Fever, Scrofula, Pimples, Tetter, &c. Try It.

Established 1780 in package form. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form which was brought to its present state of preservation and perfection some years later, by Dr. P. Fahrney, Chicago, Ill's, who conducts the trade west of Ohio. Great reputation! Many Testimonials! Ask for that prepared at Waynesboro, Pa., and Chicago, Ill's. Beware of imitations. Genuine retails at $1 25 per bottle. Druggists and Medicine dealers sell it.

Dr P. Fahrney's "Health Messenger" gives the history and uses of the Blood Cleanser, testimonials, and other information, sent free of charge. Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.
Waynesboro, Pa.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price $6.00 per dozen. One copy 60 cents.

TRACTS.—Religious dialogue, 12 pages five cents single copy; thirty cents a doz. All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, postoffices county & state written in unmistakable letters

Address,
H. R. HOLSINGER, Tyrone Pa

To Nebraska, California, and Kansas, and the B. & M. R. R. Lands.

The "Burlington Route," as called, lies right in the path of the Star of Empire. It runs almost immediately in the center of the great westward movement of emigration. Crossing Illinois and Iowa, it strikes the Missouri river at three points.

These three points are the gateways into three great sections of the trans-Missouri region.

The Northern gate is Omaha, where the great Pacific road will take you to the land of gold and grapes, sunny mountains, and perpetual summer.

The middle gate is Plattsmouth, which opens upon the south half of Nebraska, south of the Platte river, a region unsurpassed on the continent for agriculture and grazing. Just here are the B. & M. Railroad lands, concerning which Geo. S. Harris, the land officer at Burlington, Iowa, can give you all information, and in the heart of them is Lincoln, the State Capital and present terminus of the road.

The Southern gate leads to Kansas, by connections with the St. Joe Road at Hamburg running direct to St. Joe and Kansas City

The trains of the Burlington run smoothlyq and safely, and make all connections. It runs the best of coaches, Pullman Palace and Pullman dining cars, and should you take the journey for the journey's sake alone, you will be repaid; or take it to find a home or a farm, and you cannot find either better than among the B. & M. lands, where you can buy on ten years' credit, and at a low price.

TYRONE BANK,
TYRONE, PA.

This Bank, intending to do a general banking business, solicits accounts from Banks, Bankers and others. Collections made on all points. Interest allowed on DEPOSITS left on time. Paper discounted on liberal terms.

Wm. P. Orbison,	D. I. Gwin,
John Scott,	H. G. Fisher,
Thomas Fisher,	J. H. Glazier,
Wm. Dorris,	G. C. Wilrins,
G. W. Garretson,	and others.

Beers' Expanding Scroll Water-wheel.

[Patented 1868] This wheel is now running with the overshot, in a Flouring Mill, and is using less water than the overshot. Inventor being a Millwright, and having seen and used all the new waterwheels, does not hesitate to say it is the first iron wheel that can compete with the overshot, and is one half cheaper, simpler and better. For further information address J. L. Beers and Sons. Millwrights and Manufacturer's of wheel shafting and mill gearing of all kinds, contained Sawmill feed and Sawmill irons

J. L. Beers & Sons
Conemaugh, Juniata Co. Pa

THE PIOUS YOUTH.

A MONTHLY PUBLICATION

Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.

It comes about as near pleasing everybody as any paper published.

One dollar a year in advance.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER.

ALDEN'S READY BOOK BINDER.—An article for universal use! For filing or Binding Books, Magazines, Papers, Music, Sermons, Manuscripts, etc., etc. See them at Book Stores and News Stands, or send stamp for circulars, or 25 cents for sample, saying where you saw this advertisement, to BRIGHT SIDE CO., Manufacturers, Chicago, Ill.

SHORT HAND WRITING.—Students of Phonography and all others who are interested in the art can obtain instruction books. Send stamp for price list and tracts.

"AMERICAN PHONETIC DEPOT.
Tyrone, Pa.

J. S. THOMAS, & CO.
WHOLESALE GROCERS
and
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

No 305 Race St. above 3rd, Philadelphia,
N. B. Country Produce taken in exchange for goods or sold on commission.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine, with Drop Feed, new Take-up, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted First Class, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted traveling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $200 per month. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. Co.

Union Square, 33 East 17th St., New York

Universal Guide for Cutting Garments.

By which every family may cut its own garments for men and boys, of twenty six different sizes; for Coats, Pants, Vests, and Shirts, and Ladies' Dress Bodies. Agents wanted to sell State, County, and Family Rights. For Particulars address

MILLER & QUINN,
Tyrone. Blair Co., Pa.

BEES.

Pure Italian Queen Bees for sale, at $2.25 each. Full directions sent with each order.

I. S. HEDDINGS.
Box 22, Lewistown,
24,1mo. Mifflin Co., Pa.

Sure Cure for Gapes.

I have discovered a sure cure for gapes, in chickens and turkeys, which I have tested for two years. Costs a mere trifle. No lime dusting, worm catching, &c. I will send the recipe, with a number of practical hints on poultry raising, post paid, for one dollar, and if applied as directed, and no benefit is derived from it, I will refund the money.

Address Levi Andes.
Lincoln, Pa. 19-4t§, pd.

Wm. M. Lloyd, Altoona, Pa. D. T. Caldwell, Tyrone Pa.

LLOYD, CALDWELL & CO.,
BANKERS,

Receive monies on deposit, and pay interest if left 6 months, at 4 per cent per annum, or 5 per cent. if left one year.

Special contracts made with parties acting a administrators, executors, guardians, and persons holding monies in trust. Dealers in every description of Stocks and Bonds.—Government Securities made a speciality.

Gold and Silver bought and sold, and a general Banking business transacted.

CABINET MAKING & UNDERTAKING

The undersigned keeps on hand and manufactures to order all kinds of Furniture. He is also neatly fitted out for conveying the dead to their last resting place.

Manufacturer of the Common Sense Dasher Washing Machine. Shop at the Cross Roads, near Warrior's Mark, Pa.

JAMES S. COX.

A Washing Machine may be seen and purchased at this office. v6n48tf.

A Card.

Drs. D. Fahrney & Son, Uroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.

7-10-1 yr. pd.

Excelsior Bee Hive.

This hive being now well established is extensively manufactured, and for sale. $3 for single hive, also Bee-keepers Instruction, 15 cents single copy. Liberal inducements to agents. Address S. B. REPLOGLE,

Roaring Spring,
7-12-ms. Blair Co. Pa.

THE
Christian Family Companion

Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements; that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
Tyrone, Pa.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum

VOLUME VII. TYRONE, PA. TUESDAY, JULY 4, 1871. NUMBER 27.

The Blind Man's Lament.

This morning we were met at our door by a blind beggar, led by a little boy. He handed us a slip of paper, having a note to the public, and a few stanzas of poetry printed on it We became the possessor of one of them in a rightful manner, and herewith present our readers with a copy of the "Blind man's Lament," hoping that by reading it they may be induced to lay by a mite for the blind man when he shall come to their doors.

O, where are the visions of ecstacy bright,
That can burst o'er the darkness and banish the night?
O, where are the charms that the day can unfold,
To the heart and the eye that their glories can hold?
Deep, deep in the silence of sorrow I mourn,
For no visions of beauty for me shall e'er burn.

They have told me of sweet, purple hues in the West;
Of the rich tints that sparkle on Ocean's wide breast:
They have told me of stars that are burning on high,
When the night is careering along the vast sky;
But, alas! there remains, wheresoever I flee
Nor beauty, nor lustre, nor brightness for me.

And yet to my lone couch there is given
A ray of my heart that is kindled in heaven;
It soothes the dark path through this valley of tears:
It enlivens my heart and my sorrow it cheers,
For it tells of a morn when this night shall pass by,
And my spirit dwell where the days do not die.

For the COMPANION.

Light is Attractive

Not long ago, while passing through the forest in company with father and others, we noticed a small oak that grew very near a much larger one, which so much shaded it that it was very little of stature. But its diminutive size was not at all the reason why our attention was called to it; it was the manner in which it extended its young branches away from the giant oak—its large companion. This seeming inclination to rid itself from the dark shade of the old oak, called forth some remarks from our company concerning the way in which it so curiously extended its tender branches toward the light, which made me use the expression heading this article.

This little, curious-shaped inhabitant of the forest, so formed by the workings of nature, has taught ourself a beautiful, as well as, instructive lesson. It has caused me to believe that a wonderful influence goes forth from the light of Christians, if they be Christians indeed.

I know the Bible says, "Men love darkness rather than light;" but the reason of this may be attributed to their never being brought under the influence of spiritual light: hence their lost condition. The Apostle says: "If our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost, in whom the God of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Jesus Christ should shine unto them."

And is it not probable that our gospel to many is hid? Is the gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ preached in its primitive purity, as extensively as it should be? And shall men and women, created beings in the image of God himself and only "a little lower than the angels," be left to grope their way in darkness, all for the want of us letting our light so shine that they may see our good works and glorify our Father who is in Heaven, by being more exemplary at home, and endeavoring to spread the gospel more extensively to the lost inhabitants of an enlightened but sinful world?

Dear reader, are you doing all you can to have the rays of spiritual light illumine the benighted hearts of our land? Are you a christian, and does your light so shine before men that they may see your good works? If not, when will you yield to him who needs you for the consummation of his great work? Satan has his works in the hearts of the children of disobedience; and for this reason, they are robbed of all true enjoyment, and live and die with envious hearts: hearts that perhaps have never been attracted with the light of heaven sufficiently to cause them to become penitent and fit temples for the Holy Spirit. Then, as God has chosen us for the administration of his great work, let us trim our lights and keep them burning, that the Holy Spirit may richly dwell in all.

F. M. SNYDER.

For the Companion.

Christ the Great Physician. No. 2

By the disobedience of one we have been made to experience much unhappiness; and the frequent vicissitudes which human life is exposed to. Like the reception of disease in each succeeding generation which had its origin in generations past, the tares of evil have not ceased to grow since man first violated the law of eternal justice, thus causing humanity to become so depraved, so corrupt in morals, that nothing short of the atoning blood of Jesus,—the only Physician that can save when all human skill becomes ineffectual—will meet the wants of sinful man. He can cleanse the most unclean sinner, fit and quality him for the society of angels, when human skill, great as it actually is, will not so much as save the physical structure.—Why, then, is the application to so great a Physician left as a last and final resort? "All power," saith Jesus, "is given me in Heaven and in earth." Why, then, not resort to such an all powerful Physician at once? He has balm in Gilead that will cure every wound inflicted by that deadly fiend—the enemy of souls. He, unlike any other Physician, can be consulted by all, at any time, with profit. Yet few seek him. He is "mighty to save," and how willing, too. He has room and the means to treat all cases. "In my father's house," he says, "are many mansions." But if you apply to him and follow his prescriptions, he will cure you before he will safely house you in them.

If you follow his prescriptions. Yes, that is one very essential point. You perhaps have been very sick—"nigh unto death;" but by following the prescriptions of your physician, which undoubtedly required not a little self-denial, you finally recovered. So on application to the great Physician of souls. Your case may be a very critical one; spiritually, I mean. Hence if you wish to submit to the treatment of Jesus, you, of course, must practice much self-denial.—Have you been long in the service of Satan? so long have you received, from his bitter cup, the poisoned dregs of iniquity. Hence you must receive Jesus and his doctrines, which doctrines are the words of Jesus, as contained in his glorious gospel.

You should do more. You should labor to disseminate the doctrines of this great Physician to those ignorant of his noble virtues. It is a prevailing custom with invalids, who become restored to health by medical aid, to publish the skill of their physician to others in need of medical treatment. Very frequently we notice the testimonials of cures effected by certain physicians, as an inducement to other invalids to have the healing art applied, and thus have their cases similarly and successfully treated. But, alas! the cause of Christ is often made to suffer by those who have sought safety in his kingdom, and have failed to manifest both the love of Jesus and light of the gospel, either in words, precept, or example. Like as, of the ten lepers who were cleansed by Jesus, but one turned to glorify God, so in the present age of the world, many go their ways seemingly purified by the grace of God, little thanking God for the purification of their hearts, as though the honor of God were only due him from every tenth Christian.

Christian brother or sister, have you found this great Physician and had your souls purified in obeying the truth? cease not to declare, in your simple way, the glory of God and the love of Jesus, and his power and willingness to save. Render homage to the Lord. Live continually to the honor and glory of him who redeemed you. Count all physical suffering as tending to keep you near the feet of One who died to redeem you, but who is now on the throne of the majesty, interceding (praying) for you.

Remember the mission of Jesus on earth was "to seek and save that which was lost." And if you have found him, it is only because he first sought you. Jesus has done much more for you than he has for those who have never repented of their sins. He has granted you pardon. This he has not done for those who sought him not. Cannot you, then, lead some afflicted sin-stained soul to Jesus, the great Physician of souls?

WHY should man be in love with his fetters, though of gold? Art thou drowning in security? Then I say thou art perfectly dead. For though thou movest, yet thy soul is buried within thee, and thy good angel either forsakes his guard or sleeps. There is nothing under heaven, saving a true friend, who cannot be counted within the number of moveable, unto which my heart doth lean. And this dear freedom hath begotten me this peace, that I mourn not for the end which must be, nor spend one wish to have one minute added to the uncertain date of my years.

For the COMPANION.

Do I Love Jesus?

Jesus said to his disciples, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." Now this was said on the evening in which he washed his disciples' feet. and when he had commissioned his disciples, and sent them out to teach all nations, he said unto them: "Teach them to observe all things WHATSOEVER I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." Matth. 28: 20. What he said unto them, said he unto us? Undoubtly. He also gave us a new commandment: "That ye love one another, as I have loved you." Now, if we love him, and have love one for another, we will not be ashamed to follow him in all things, even in the washing of one another's feet; for he has taught us that the "servant is not greater than his Lord." We will also not be ashamed to give to our brother our hand with the salutation of the kiss, as a token of our love and affection. We thus show to the world that we follow Jesus, who is our captain, and are not ashamed to be called his diseiples, and that we love one another.

John tells us, "If God so loved us,"—that he sent his only begotten Son into the world, to be the propitiation for our sins,—"we ought also to love one another." "He that lovethnot, knoweth not God, for God is love." 1 John 4: 8—11.

Love, then, is eternal. Take away love from heaven, and heaven could no more boast of its unbounded bliss. Then we feel to say on the authority of God's word, the more we love, the more we become like the inhabitants of heaven; for among them is perfect love.

"Heaven and earth," we are informed, "shall pass away;" but love will not, Time must end, but love attends the saint beyond the grave; it will be the heart, or centre of heaven; the joy of angels, and the song of the redeemed.

CHRISTIAN

I love Jesus; he loved me first;
And for that sacred love I thirst.
I'll follow him, his cross I'll bear,
That I his peace, and love may share.

PROFESSOR.

"I love Jesus," Tis often said,
And yet are spiritually dead;
Have not been born again, anew,
Nor in the narrow way pursue.

CHRISTIAN.

Love Jesus? "Yes, I think I do,"
Is said by some—Ah! not a few!
But do you follow his commands,
And take his word just as it stands?

PROFESSOR

If you love Jesus, prove that love,
And set your heart on things above;
Show to the world you him obey,
And bear his cross from day to day.

CHRISTIAN.

He'll love you then: His love you'll feel,
That love will all your sorrow sheal;
And you, so happy, filled with love,
Can pass from earth to heaven above.

Philadelphia, Pa. ISAIAH G. HARLEY.

For the COMPANION.

Nothing but Leaves.

In perusing God's holy word, my mind was impressed with the declaration of God's word, so pregnant with significance, from which may be drawn a lesson of instruction, that may perchance, redound the building up of languishing zion. The disappointment of our Savior expressed in the above language so pert with significance, leaves a divine impress, indelibly stamped upon the lesson it is designed to inculcate. In making a rough survey over the line marked out for our progress in the divine life, we too often perceive those lagging by the way side, assuming the form of Godliness, but denying the power thereof by their cold, careless, and inert activity in the things pertaining to such advancement in a life devoted to God's service: clothed with the outward garb, but decay supping up the energy of the Soul, until all spiritual resuscitation is withdrawn, which was once the vital principle that generated healthy and holy influence germinating in the bud, blossom, and finally the matured fruit. Decay extends its blighting influences until we perceive its withering tinge upon the once green, leafy tablets, indicating to our minds unhealthy inward action; it withers, droops, and dies as a cumberer of the ground—It is cut down, a fit representation of the unfruitful branch of the true vine, Christ Jesus, who has proclaimed through his divine messenger to the multitude that came forth to be baptized of him, "O generation of vipers, who hath warn-you to flee from the wrath to come? bring forth theifore, fruits worthy of repentance. "And now also the ax is laid at the root of the trees: every tree, therefore, which bringeth not forth good fruit, is hewn down and cast in the fire." Now let us in the shortest practicable way, inquire what the character of this fruit is. "The fruit of the Spirit, says Christ, "is in all goodness, righteousness and truth." "We have here a significant consolidation; broad and comprehensive in its character; sublime in its annunciation; glorious in its attainment. If we aspire to be kept sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise until the time of our redemption draweth nigh, we must necessarily make such advancement in the divine life that will effectually secure to us that promise. If we remain cold, careless, and inert christians, not leaving the first principles of the doctrine of Christ and going on to perfection, beware, lest we see Christ approaching, seeing us afar off clothed in the outward foliage of his holy religion, anticipating that he might happily find fruit thereon, but finding "nothing but leaves." No fruit to satisfy the soul hungering and thirsting after righteousness—nothing to confirm the spiritual promises which are "yea and amen" in him, to the glory of the Father—nothing but a disannulling of our covenant relations entered into with him in the holy ordinance of baptism—not ready to give an answer, with meekness and fear, of the hope within us, anticipating the joys of eternal felicity—no works, that others seeing may be profited thereby—mere creatures of outward circumstances, propelled onward by the common tide of current events, lacking even the vital principle and christian virtue, necessary to the elevation of the soul above the mercenary things of time and sense. My dear brethren and sisters, if there be any among our fold that this picture is applicable to, let me beseech you through the mercies so graciously vouchsafed unto you, by our blessed Redeemer, through his efficacious atonement, who "is mighty to save and strong to deliver," to wake up. Arouse from your slumbers, ye that sleep, and the Lord will give you light. "Be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might; put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. * * * Having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breast-plate of righteousness; and your feet shod with the preperation of the gospel of peace; * * * take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God: praying always, with all prayer and supplication in the spirit and watching thereunto with all perseverence and supplication for the saints;" doing the will of God from the heart; purifying your souls in continually obeying the truth; asking in faith, believing that ye shall receive, for the riches of his sustaining and comforting grace, and for a full endowment of all the christian graces, that cluster so closely around a life truly devoted to God's holy service. This do, and you will not be a barren and unfruitful tree in the vineyard of the Lord; no dead branch, subjected to the fiery indignation of an offended God, by whom, when he comes, if discovering 'nothing but leaves," we will be subjected to the anathema of his wrath. He pronounces his curse; the seal of his condemnation is irrevocably fixed: a dead tree is cut down, cast into the fire and is burned "I am the vine; ye are the branches: he that abideth in me and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit; but if a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered." But the essence of the glorification of the Father is, "that ye bear much fruit, so shall ye be my disciples." "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love."

Oh! what comforting assurances to the christian Pilgrim, who enjoys the benign influences of the love of God shed abroad in the heart, the aspiration of whose soul is, "Nearer my God, to thee"—who feels the happy conciousness continually looming up within his breast, that whilst one day recedes and we are ushered into the light of another, he is one day nearer, O God, to thee—one day nearer the seat of his affections—the true source and fountain of all that is good, pure and peaceful! May he then keep renewed within us a bright hope of the fond anticipations of eternal glory, far beyond the confines of this world's misery, despondence, and gloom, in a fairer world on high, where the bright, celestial orb of eternal day shall not wax and wane; where we shall bask in the sunlight of God's countenance, "Nearer, my God, to thee," when all intervening space shall have receded far in the distance—the objective point of our weary pilgrimage at last attained, with the seal of the Holy Spirit of promise unbroken, we enter the pearly gates, and as we approach in sacred nearness to the divine majesty, we are receive into his extended arms of love and mercy, with the welcome plaudit, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

But before I send this missile on its errand of love and mercy, I feel called upon to remind the the slothful servant to wake up. Arouse to a true sense of duty! gird on your armour! "'Tis not all of life to live; nor all of death to die." The divine purposes of the Lord must find an abiding place in your bosom, if you have been recreant to the trusts imparted to you through his divine agencies, having done despite to the spirit of his grace. When he comes seeking fruit and finding nothing but leaves, beware, lest his withering condemnation be your unhappy lot, and a branch that bore no fruit be cast into the fire and burned—banished forever from his presence and the glory of his power. If there be any among us who feel the righteous condemnation of the Lord resting upon them for any remissness of duty, remember that if our hearts condemn us, God is greater than our hearts. "Ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you;" and it shall judge you in the last day.

If we turn a deaf ear to the holy admonitions falling from the sanctified lips of inspiration, conscience that inward monitor of the soul, will surely accuse us; for it has the attribute of either accusing or excusing: "Their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts the meanwhile accusing or excusing one another."—Rom. 2d and 15. But we must be prudent, and not base our excuses upon untenable ground that does not comport with divine instruction.—Whilst we be observing all the holy ordinances of God's house, endeavoring to build ourselves up by becoming established in our most holy faith, having our spiritual minds continually renewed, being knit more closely together in the bonds of christian fellowship and love, let us not forget our home devotions; as we are continually under renewed obligations to God, morning, noon, and night. Oh! it pains me to hear of so many prayerless families within the borders of our own fold, where no family altars have been erected to praise him continually from whom all blessings flow! We are told to pray always, and for all things to give thanks. Oh! remember how ungrateful, whilst your most bountiful Benefactor is continually dealing out his blessings and comforts from his rich storehouse of mercy, not to give thanks to the kind and provident hand of love and mercy extended over you! Let not excuse escape your lips; but firmly resolve, and as firmly execute your vow, "I will erect an alter within my home circle, where we may continually offer up our evening and morning sacrifice of praise and thanksgiving to the God of our salvation." Let no such unhallowed expression fall from your lips, as "I can't pray." If you be so illiterate as only to say in child-like simplicity:

> Now I lay me down to sleep,
> I pray thee, Lord, my soul to keep,
> And if I die before I wake,
> I pray the, Lord, my soul to take."

it will meet the Divine approbation; "for if there first be a willing mind, it is accepted according that a man hath and not according to that which he hath not."

Be pleased to accept these few jottings of my pen, as a gratuitous offering of love, feeling a deep interest in the spiritual interests of the church of which I am an humble member, and if perchance, it meets with but a few affirmative responses, I will be amply repaid, giving all the praise to him who doeth all things well. May the Lord sanctify his truth, to the sanctification and salvation of souls, and the building up and strengthening of languishing Zion, wherever it may exist; so that when he cometh to pluck the fruit, he may happily find it, and not proclaim the cheerless annunciation, "nothing but leaves."

> "See in the garden of the Lord,
> A barren fig tree stands;
> It yields no fruit no blossom bears,
> Though planted by his hands.
>
> From year to year he seeks for fruit,
> And still no fruit is found;
> It stands amid the living trees,
> A cumberer of the ground."

P. S. Newcomer.

For the Companion.

Jacob's Ladder.

"We are climbing Jacob's Ladder:" so often have I heard it sung in great glee; and I have heard it sung, "We are climbing, higher, and higher."—But I thought they were mistaken. There is a mystery in this Jacob's ladder, if it is properly investigated, which will enlighten the mind of the human family very much; therefore I thought I would give a few of my thoughts upon this subject. I don't pretend to understand it properly, but I wish to give my opinion upon the subject, as it came to my mind. As it is claimed that the commandments are likened unto Jacob's ladder, if you leave one round out, you are not able to reach the next. So I claim that every human being when born into this sinful world, is supplied with a ladder that reaches from earth to heaven, full of rounds. Whenever they commence to sin, then they commence pulling out the rounds of the ladder, and whenever they commit a sin, they pull out a round. Blessed are they who never pull them out, that they can climb on up with less difficulty than those who pull them out. The difficulty is, the one that pulls his rounds out, finds a difficulty sometimes in putting them back again. There are so many to tell him, this is the way, and that is the way. Some claim to make a start to place them back; but they want to put the top round in first. They stand at the bottom of the ladder, and cry loud to their God to raise them up so they can put in the top round first; and methinks that is what makes some cry so loud in some of the churches. God turns a deaf ear to them; they are not willing to commence at the bottom and place round after round, and take step after step until they get to the top.

Now, my friendly readers, if you ever want to climb up to heaven after pulling the rounds out of your ladder that God supplied you with in your youthful days, you must commence at the bottom of the ladder, and that is the bottom of your heart. Place in the rounds as they are intended to be placed; then you can begin to climb; but always pray to God to watch over you that you may not fall. Keep a good hold on the rounds; place your feet on a good foundation, that you may not fall and take all the rounds out again and mix them up so that you may not place them back again without much difficulty.

But here is the sticking, or rather, standing point: "Love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy strength: and love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets." This is all very good. Some think these two commandments are all that are necessary to be observed. Well, we try this by way of comparison with Jacob's ladder. You may have all the rounds and not the two side pieces, and you cannot form a ladder; and you may have both sides and no rounds, and you cannot form a ladder. Then how are you going to form a ladder? and how are you going to climb a ladder that has no rounds in it? Suppose you have both side pieces, and all the weight that comes upon the ladder depends upon these two side pieces,—if they are not substantial, they will not bear up the weight; but if you have these two pieces and they be ever so firm, how are you going to climb a ladder that has no rounds in it? Remember, sinner, you have pulled all your rounds out and trampled them under foot. Now how do you expect to climb Jacob's ladder, without you place the rounds back again. You may have both side posts, and they may be firm and well calculated to receive the rounds, but you cannot climb that ladder, any more than a man can fly to Europe with an umbrella, unless you place back the rounds you pulled out by the commission of sin; and you will find difficulties enough to climb Jacob's ladder after you have placed every round in. There is always danger of falling.

Faith is the first round, repentance is the second, baptism is the next, and so on, until you come to the top.—When you are on the bed of affliction you then put in your last round by calling on the elders of the church to pray over you, anointing you with oil in the name of the Lord. Then you have put in your last round.—You are standing at the top of your ladder. You are standing on the line between life everlasting and everlasting destruction: the promised land before you and everlasting destruction behind you. If death takes you by the hand, you can step off into the promised land; and if death does not take you away, stand firm, keeping in view the promised land; and ere long death will lead you home to your Father's house; and then he will say, "Well done thou good and faithful servant, enter into my joys, and sit down at my right hand."

H. Hunt.

Shepardsville, Mich.

Irregular Teachers.—When a teacher is absent, the whole lesson is lost to the whole class. Here is one entire week of religious instruction gone. On the following Sabbath, should the teacher be present, the result will be about the same; the scholars will not know whether to learn a new lesson or the old, and, in doubt, will learn none at all. One day's absence on the part of a teacher, does, in fact, cause the loss of two weeks' instruction. Where there is occasional irregularity of the scholar also—the scholar absent one Sabbath and the teacher the next—all instruction comes to an end.

A Model Magistrate.—The Rev. Dr. Cheever, in a sermon upon the duties of Magistrates, says that Nehemiah, who, with Ezra, led the Jews back to Jerusalem from the captivity of Babylon, was the last mayor that Jerusalem ever had, and a model for mayors of all other cities; for he ordered all the spirit shops to be closed on the Sabbath, and all who hung about their gates (doors) to be indicted.

Female Culture.—Sidney Smith says: "Among men of sense and liberal politeness, a woman who has successfully cultivated her mind, without dismissing the gentleness and propriety of her manners is always sure to meet with respect and attention bordering upon enthusiasm."

"There is not greater grace of possession than to believe that God speaks to us. If we believe that we should be already blessed. Christ offered once for all, now He requires nothing but that we should give Him thanks forever."

Christian Family Companion

Tyrone City, Pa., July 4, 1871.

The One Thousand.

Since last reported, the following persons have sent us names:

G. Ashenbrenner,	1	Raphael Myers,	2
Hannah West,	1	William Lentz,	1
Daniel W. Garst,	1	Isaac H. Crist,	2
John Hollinger,	1	George Long,	1
Samuel Book,	1	Weidler & Mohler,	2
J. J. Cover,	2	Sarah Leckrow,	1
G. W. Mathias,	1	Annie M. Leckrow,	1
John Oaks,	1		—
Lewis W. Teeter,	1		27
John Pool,	1	Reported before	215
Benj. Benshoof,	1		—
J. G. Winey,	1	Total	242
S. H. Myers,	1	At Annual Meeting, say	58
Jonathan Warner,	2
Joseph E. Rowser,	1		300

Only seven hundred more and our call will be filled. We are opposed to drafting, and shall not resort to that means. We want all volunteers. Now is the time to work. Soon we will be too far from the middle of the year to take subscribers for six months.

Minutes.

With our next issue we expect to send out the minutes of last Annual Meeting, in the usual form, attached to the end of the sheet. They may then be bound in with the volume, or be separated. Next year, if we are spared, we expect to publish them in our paper, as we would other reading matter.

A Good Plan.

We mean brother Mathia's plan for sending the COMPANION to the poor. Hear him: "This sister is a reader of your paper; and when her time expires, send the C. F. C. She loves to read it and is not able to pay for it, so I raised it by the assistance of the brethren, each one paying a dime. The money can be raised in this way. So I raised $1.25. Send the C. F. C. as long as you please.—Some brethren say, 'Just send the names of poor brethren and sisters, and brother H. R. H. will send it.' We should be careful and not impose too much on good nature.

Just so. Brother H. R. H. never turns the poor empty away; and in all such cases as the foregoing he will cheerfully give his full share; but how much easier it is for fifteen persons to carry a weight than for one to bear the same weight alone.

J. W. B.

Harvest.

When the flood of waters had abated from the earth, and Noah, with the various species of passengers with him, had gone "forth of the ark," he built an altar and offered burnt-offerings on it unto the Lord. "And the Lord smelled a sweet savour, and the Lord said, I will not again curse the ground for man's sake; for the imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth; neither will I again smite any more every living thing, as I have done. While the earth remaineth, seed time and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and the day and the night shall not cease."

More than four thousand years of days and nights, summers and winters, cold and heat have rolled over the baptized earth, and now, in an abundant harvest, we have a cheering token of God's faithfulness.

As the Lord remembers his covenant and bestows upon us the rich fruits of the earth from the storehouse of his bounty, let us not neglect to offer, upon the pure altar of grateful and love—inflamed hearts, the sacrifices of thanksgiving and praise; may our offerings still ascend a sweet savour unto God.

Harvest will make its return while the earth remaineth, but how long? Our Father knows.

J. W. B.

Book Notice.

History of the War in Europe.

The recent war between Germany and France aroused so much interest on the part of our people, earliest and best history of that great struggle, would be from the pen of an American author. The National Publishing Company, of Philadelphia, have just issued a very complete and valuable history, bearing the above title. It is from the pen of Mr. James D. McCabe, Jr., and is a handsomely bound volume of 800 octavo pages, illustrated with 150 maps, portraits, battle scenes, views of prominent localities, etc.—It is written in a bold and vigorous style, and will, unquestionably, take rank as the standard history of the struggle by an American writer.

Mr. McCabe has evidently studied his subject deeply, for he writes as an historian, and not as a politicion, as one who places facts on record for the verdict of future ages and not as one who seeks to win the favor of either the Germans or the French of today. The great charm of the work is its impartiality, its absolute fidelity to truth.—His book fascinates while it instincts, for it tells in graphic and eloquent language, the most wonderful story of modern times. He traces the causes of the war from their origin down to the beginning of hossilities; sets forth the diplomatic history of the prelude to the war, with clearness; and states forcibly, and in detail the cause of the triumph of Germany and the failure of France. The narrative of the great battles which opened the campaign, and hurled the French back upon the interior of thoir own country; the effect of these reverses upon the French Nation; the frantic efforts to rescue the beaten army, and the terrible disaster at Sedan; the capture of the Empereror Napoleon and an entire army; the Revolution in Paris: the rise and formation of the Republic; the flight of the Empress from Paris; the Siege and surrender of Strasburg and the frontier fortresses of France; the triumphal advance of the German armies to Paris; the of Metz and Paris it detail; a full diary of events in Paris during the Siege; the campaigns on the Loire and in other parts of France: the peace negotiations; the surrender of Paris and the treaty; the naval history of the war; the history of the formation of the great German Empire; the proclaiming of King William emperor, and the realization of German unity; the civil war and second siege of Paris, with its terrible scenes of bloodshed ond vandalism;—all these and other events of the war are related with a graphicness and brilliancy which render this a work of unusual value. The author goes into the philosophy of the war, and impress his readers profoundly with the great lessons of the conflict.

The low price at which the book is issued, brings it within the reach of all, and no one wishing to keep abreast with the times should fail to read it. It is published in both English and German, sold by subscription only, and agents are wanted in every county.

Answers to Correspondents.

MARY J. WEST. C. F. C. and P. Y. balance of the year $1.15.

J. H. MILLER. You can address John Harley at Pottstown Pa.

HENRY F. LOEHR. Seventy-five cents.

GEO. LONG. You failed to give Philip Sider's address: please to give it?

AARON SHAFFER. Is there a Jacob B Miller at Slade furnace? If there is, will you let us know why he does not lift his C. F. C.?

Report of the Annual Meeting, Held in Berks Co., Pa., on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, May 30th, 31st, and June 1st, 1871.

[Concluded.]

heap coals of fire on his head." "If they persecute you in one city, flee to another."

H. R. Holsinger. I propose an amendment. The proposed amendment was read as follows:

"The brethren must not swear at all; but we may ask the protection of the authorities by the advice of the church."

The second answer was dropped, and the first answer was declared passed.

EASTERN MARYLAND.

13. With regard to the installation of brother Elias Fisher, colored.

D. P. Saylor was called upon to explain the case, which he did. The church at Bush Creek, Md, has a colored brother, by the name of Elias Fisher. The church thought it good for brother Fisher to preach to the colored people, and so selected him for that purpose, though he was not regularly elected, in the usual order. The matter was then referred to the District Meeting of the Eastern District of Maryland. That body agreed that he should have the whole Eastern District of Maryland for his field of the ministry, and appointed Elders to ordain him in any form of words the Holy Spirit might dictate. Those brethren refused to do the installing within the space of a year. By that time the church at Bush Creek obtained an Elder, and asked the succeeding District Meeting to transfer the authority from said Elders to their own, which request was granted. Soon after their Elder became unwell, and went away to a health institute. He (the Elder) then authorized his colleague, in the second degree of the ministry, with the consent of the church, to install the colored brother. It was then attended to, and he was installed by the laying on of hands, the brother officiating believing that method to be according to the dictates of the Holy Spirit, confirmed by the word. Now some object, because the brother who performed the ordination had not had hands laid upon him.

The following answer was proposed. "This Annual Meeting approves of the decision of the Eastern District of Maryland, so far as the selecting of brother Fisher to the ministry, is concerned, but not of the manner of ordination.

Jacob Spanogle was opposed to the answer, and suggested that we send out our first colored minister in the regular order of the church.

Robeson Hyde. If the action of the church in Maryland be reversed by this meeting, then the persons baptized by brother Fisher would be excluded by virtue of our action.

Remarks were made by brother Peck and others, and evening being at hand, the matter was laid over for next day. Adjourned by singing Hymn 283, and prayer.

WEDNESDAY FORENOON.

Being cloudy, and giving indications for rain, the meeting moved to the barn. Opened by using the German hymn:

"Jesu, Jesu, Bruun des Lebens," and prayer. The unfinished business of the previous day, was announced, and the following answer was proposed by the Standing Committee:

"Considered that the Elders acted imprudently in the manner in which the case was handled; yet we recognize brother Fisher as a minister in the first degree, regarding the laying on of hands as conferring no official authority whatever.

The above answer was agreed to with very little talk.

WESTERN MARYLAND DISTRICT.

David Long, Delegate. No queries.

FIRST DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA.

Peter Crumpacker, Delegate.

14. For a consideration and reversion of Art. 27, minutes of 1856, which reads as follows:

"Does Christian fellowship, according to the Gospel, forbid or require, or leave it optional for brethren, when meeting in cities, towns, or at public gatherings, when extending the salutation of the hand, to accompany the same with the salutation of the holy kiss? ANS. Considered optional.

It was concluded after some discussion to make no change from the decision of 1856.

15. Do the Brethren consider the modern custom of holding protracted meetings, in the old established congregations, conducive of good to the church.

Answer of District Meeting. "We do not approve of it, fearing that thereby unregenerate persons may be brought into the church, and new impurities be introduced.

J. Umstead claimed to be the pioneer of protracted meetings among the Brethren. He had carefully watched their workings, and he did not believe that they were intended to bring unconverted persons into the church. Neither did he think they would be more likely to do so in old than in new congregations.

A brother in German spoke very highly of protracted meetings.

D. C. Moomaw feared they had a tendency to create undue excitement.

On motion the query and answer were tabled.

Adjourned.

Afternoon.

15. See query 9. Minutes.

NORTH WESTERN DISTRICT OF OHIO.

John P. Ebersole, and Daniel Brower, delegates.

16. Is it the duty of the church to support a widowed sister over three score years old, who has nephews that are members of the church, and these nephews being able to support her?

Ans. of the District Meeting: "We think not according to 1st Tim. 5: 16."

A former decision was referred to, but a difference of the cases was discovered, the one under consideration specifying that the nephews are members of the church

Deferred to next meeting.

17. See Minutes, query 11.

18. In regard to helping one another, and assurance. Deferred. See Minutes, query 12.

19. Has a member a right, according to the Gospel, to tell a brother that he has aught against him, and not proceed according to Matth. 18?

It was thought the matter was too trifling to be brought to this meeting, and in speaking about it considerable emotion was created. Tabled.

20. See query 13, Minutes.

21. Query 14, Minutes of Annual Meeting.

South Western Ohio.

James Quinter, Henry Davy, delegates.

22. This matter is the same as query 15 in the minutes, regarding the appointment of committees by the District Meetings. The answer of the Ditrict Meeting was that the District should be authorized to appoint such committees, and that their decisions should be final. The Annual Meeting, however would not confer such authority to the District Meetings.

23. See Minutes, Ans. 16.

24. Would it not be advisable to admonish the congregations, that when they send out delegates to the Annual Meeting and District Meetings, to select such as are qualified by age and experience, instead of young and inexperienced brethren.

After some discussion, in which it was agreed that the congregations were capable of deciding what persons are qualified for those duties, and that they were to be selected by election, and hence must send those who are voted in, whether old or young, it was agreed to table the query and its answer.

25. See query 17.

26. Query 18.

27. Had reference to a paper that had published an article severely censuring the practice of holding continued meetings, and refused to allow any corrections through its columns, and asked for a committee; but the general impression was that said paper was too insignificant to spend time in discussing such propositions, and so it was tabled.

Adjourned by singing, "Let Thy kingdom blessed Savior," and prayer.

Thursday.

Opened at 7 A. M. German hymn: "Wir loben dich, O Herre Gott."—Exortation and prayer in German.

28. In regard to the action of the Committee sent to California, relative to the reinstatement of A. P. Gibson without he having given satisfaction to the church in Macoupin county, Illinois, it was decided that he should not be held as a member.

29. Query 19, Minutes.

30. Query 20.

31. Query 21.

32. Query 22.

33. Query 23.

34. Query 24.

35. Query 25.

36. Query 26.

37. Query 27.

38. Query 28.

39. Query 29.

40. Query 30.

41. Query 31.

Middle District of Indiana.

Jacob Karnes, delegate.

42. See query 32 Minutes.

43. Should not the District Meeting have the privilege of appointing committees to settle difficulties, subject to appeal to Annual Meeting?

The request was favored by a number of brethren, but as it could not pass, it was tabled.

44. Are the decisions of the Annual Meeting a Discipline? If not, please explain wherein they differ from a Discipline.

The District Meeting answered that they are not a discipline, but entered into no explanation. It was found to be the easiest way of disposing of this matter by tabling which was at once resorted to, and it was tabled.

45. See query 33, Minutes.

Southern District of Indiana.

Geo. Hoover, delegate.

46. See query 34, Minutes.

47. Query 35

48. Is it right for brethren and sisters to teach instrumental music, or employ others to teach it. Tabled.

49. Should there not be a limit to that time for disowned members to make application to the Annual Meeting for a committee? Ans. of District Meeting: "We think it should be limited to the second succeeding Annual Meeting."

The meeting did not seem to think that two years would be a proper time. Samuel Lehman and Daniel Fry, thought there should be some limit; that sometimes matters are smothered up for ten or fifteen years, until all the principal witnesses have died or moved away, and then a committee is called for. Tabled.

50. Will this meeting allow a member to hold a policy in the mutual Life Insurance company. Answer of the District Meeting: "No it is not consistent with the Gospel." A number of the German brethren spoke against the insurance companies—Lehman classed them with lightning rods and otherinnovations. Tabled.

51. Would itnot be advisable to make an amendment to the decision of Annual Meeting of 1866, so that the Council should be composed of all the members present, instead of the delegates, &c. Tabled

52. If a church demands a humble acknowledgement of a member, and the member refuses to make such acknowledgement, is it the duty of the Elder to dismiss said member and hold another council, or at once to read him out of the church?

The District Meeting decided that he should be read out at once. Some of the speakers thought that circumstances should govern: and that there are sometimes demands made of members, which when refused, it would be well to hold another counsel. Tabled.

Adjourned. Hymn: "Come let us all unite to praise, &c.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Hymn: "Sei Lob und Ehr dem hoegsten Gut."

53. A local matter regarding difficulties in a congregation, and an adjoining branch sending a committee to the place without first counselling said congregation. It appeared that the case had reference to circumstances where the Elder was with the minority. Tabled without discussion.

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS DISTRICT.

John Metzger, delegate.

Should not queries 12, 1862, and 14, 1869, be amended so as to agree with the general practice of the old brethren, which was not to wear the full beard, or moustache?

The former decisions are that brethren may wear the full beard, but not the moustache only. Tabled.

54. See Minutes, query 36.

FIRST DISTRICT OF MISSOURI.

John Hershey, delegate. No queries

KANSAS DISTRICT.

Not represented.

NORTHERN IOWA.

Benjamin Bueachly, delegate. No business.

MIDDLE IOWA.

By letter. No business.

SOUTHERN IOWA.

Not represented.

It was then announced that all the districts had been called.

55. As there had been different queries, resolutions, and propositions, presented upon the mode of Feet-washing, and as it was thought there was not time then to discuss the subject, it was deferred for the first matter to be taken into consideration at next Annual Meeting. For particulars, see the Minutes. It was also proposed to allow no discussion of the subject through our periodicals, but against such restrictions we entered our protest; hence it was no passed, and we are free. We however solicit and propose no discussion but we invite information, and historical facts, regarding the first practice of the church.

56. A number of Committees were appointed to visit different congregations to settle difficulties, for which see the Minutes.

57. It was agreed to hold our next Annual Meeting with the Brethren of Northern Ohio, the congregation to be announced hereafter.

58. An application from the Elklick congregation, Pa., for the Annual Meeting in 1873.

59. A request for the meeting in 1874, from Northern Indiana.

60. C. Custer was appointed to confer with the R. R. Companies for reducing fares.

61. The Committee appointed by last Annual Meeting to visit California reported their visit, but as we cannot give their statement verbatim we refrain from giving any part there of. Financially the gave in the following:

Total expenses		$613.05
Paid in California,	$106.05
" the states,	$328.60	$434.65
Yet unpaid		$178.40

All the business being now transacted, it was announced that the meeting was awaiting the concluding devotional exercises. The 684th hymn was lined and sung, followed by brief exhortation and fervent prayers; after which the meeting adjourned, at half past three o'clock, and before night the vast concourse of people had dispersed. We remained at brother Merkey's until next morning.

GENERAL REMARKS.

There was nothing unusual connected with the meeting. The attendance was about the average. There was provision in abundance for all. The accommodations were as good as could have been expected. The place was well adapted to the holding of such a meeting, having four pumps on the premises; but we regard it as a great mistake to have such a meeting so far away from the Railroad, and we heard very severe censures expressed for that part of the arrangements. It was certainly very imprudent to compel so many persons to travel so far over rough roads, on rough conveyances, and spend their time and money, when there was no occasion for so doing.—Hundreds of dollars might have been saved to the brethren and sisters, if the meeting had been near the Railroad. We hope this will be taken into consideration in selecting locations for future meetings.

Among the peculiarities of the meeting, may be mentioned that there was more German speaking, both public and private, than at any previous meeting that we have attended. There were many persons present that understood scarcely any English. Another was that there was less Tobacco smoking. This was remarked by several persons on the ground.—It is certainly a hopeful indication. Only occasionally you would see a brother so imprudent as to come among the people with burning tobacco; and we saw but one "smoking union" among the sisters, and they had the prudence to retire to themselves.

Our Report.

We this week present before our readers the balance of our report of the doings of last Annual Meeting. Before commencing to write what is contained in this week's issue, we received a copy of Minutes. We had already lost much of our zest for writing the report from the fact that we were so much behind time, and now we had to force ourself to an attempt. Hence we simply give an account o those things that do not appear upon the Minutes, and refer to those that do.

It will be observed that our report of the proceedings of the first day are much more full than the second and third. This is owing to the fact that we obtained the notes of that day's doings from one of the Associated Press Reporters, who was on the ground the first day; but left on the second day for want of proper accommodations, and on account of annoyance from impertinent inquirers. He is undoubtedly the same reporter that wrote the graphic account of our Brethren, published a few weeks ago from the Philadelphia Press. Had he received the countesies of the meeting, in the shape of a few square feet of our rough board table, we might have been permitted to lay before our readers the entire proceedings of the Annual Meeting, to the joy and satisfaction of thousands who could not attend the Meeting,—as well as to hundreds who were there but could not get within hearing distance—and a synopsis of the principle business of the Meeting would have been published in one of the most prominent daily papers in the country, and thus the church would have been perspicuously and favorably set before the world, and its light made to shine before men. As it is, we are thankful to the Press Association for supporting men who have enough of the fear of God before them to do justice to such unassuming people as we are, and hope the time is not far in the future when we will not only allow them, but even assist them in giving to the world a full and correct knowledge of Gods peculiar people.

In this connection we wish to say for Brother Isaac Price, that he had promised a number of the brethren to send them a copy of the Philadelphia Press containing the article alluded to above, and he had already made arrangements with the publisher for doing so, but when he saw the article in the Companion he considered there was no necessity for so doing. For this reason they were not sent.

Our Eastern Visit.

While on our way to the Annual Meeting, we stopped off at Derry Station, and attended a loveteast in the Spring Creek congregation, some seven miles from the station. There was a very large assembly of people present, more than we have seen on such an occasion for a long while.—There was very bad order among the the young people in daytime and at night. Otherwise we had a good meeting.

On Sunday there was meeting at the same place in the forenoon, and as the congregation was large, there was preaching at two places, in the barn and at the house. In the evening we attended preaching at the Brethren's meeting-house, near brother Wendel Henry's, within a short distance of Derry Church. Good attendance, but we did not enjoy the preaching, and we have reason to believe many others did not. It is remarkable to what an extent self-esteem is developed in some preachers.

Next day we went early to the station, and so had an excellent opportunity for interviewing the old Derry Church property, and gathered a few particulars for our readers.

The church was built in 1720. It is quite dilapidated, and one would fear that it might fall upon him, yet it is still used by the congregation, which has grown very small. It belongs to the Scotch Presbyterians.—In the grave yard we found the grave of Wm. Bertram, the first minister of that church, who died 1746, aged 72 years, and was therefore born 16 74. We also read the inscription upon the tombstone of Catharine Steel, died 1803, who had raised nineteen orphan children. Surely she was a benefactress. The sexton informed us that no grave had been dug within the inclosure for years, without disturbing the remains of one or more of its silent inhabitants, and that it is no uncommon thing for three and more to be buried in one grave

In the church we were shown a communion service, pitcher, goblet, and plate, that bore the signature of Richard, king of England, supposed to have been stamped in the tenth century. They are certainly rare relics. Other curiosities were on exhibition but we pass them by.

Our Late Visits.

Notwithstanding duty would have demanded our labors at home, and the condition of our health scarcely allowed our leaving home, we had given a promise, and must fulfil it.—Hence we set out for Plum Creek, Armstrong county, this state, in company with my wife, early on the morning of the 9th of June.

At Altoona we were joined by bro. John W. Brumbaugh We landed at the house of brother Tobias Kimmel, at about five o'clock the same evening. There had been meeting at the meeting-house in sight, in the afternoon, which had just broken.—They had had two sermons, with a short intermission between, and then had no appointment for night meeting. This just suited us, as we were very tired. We kept our head-quarters at brother Kimmel's, and feel satisfied that we could not have fared better anywhere.

On Saturday there was meeting at ten o'clock. Brother Brumbaugh spoke very feelingly, and a good impression was made upon the congregation. Between the forenoon and evening exercises, an election of two deacons was held, resulting in the choice of Wm. Miller and Samuel Kimmel. Brother Jacob Kelso was also advanced to the second degree, and other church business transacted, yet unfinished. Seven precious souls also professed faith in Christ and were immersed. In the evening we enjoyed a feast of love together.—Brethren Stephen Hildebrand, Jesse Hetrick, Joseph Holsopple, Mark Minser, Levi Wells, and Robert Whittacre, Wm. H. Quinn, ministers, were present. There was good order and good attention.

On Sunday we met again for worship, at ten o'clock, and had a good congregation.

In the afternoon brother Tobias Kimmel brought us to brother Wm. Wilcox's, three miles from Indiana town. After supper brother Wilcox took us to town, to the house of sister Jacoby, whose husband is not a member, where we were kindly cared for during the night, and in the morning sent forward with joy.

At Blairsville intersection we parted with brother Brumbaugh, he returning home, and we turning westward. When we arrived at Pittsburg we found that we could not take a train for Myers Mills before next morning. So we took quarters at the Central Hotel, and tried to feel as composed as possible.

Tuesday. We have not space to speak of the new railroad, its beautiful scenery, and its present and prospective worth to the country. We know of no road that has better prospects before it. We were comfortably conveyed, and safely landed at Dale City about noon, and found our friends awaiting our coming. At Connellsville we had been joined by brother Graybill Myers, who also landed with us. We took up our quarters at Dr. Buechley's, and soon felt at home.

The object of our visit to this place at this time has already been announced. Having had an invitation to make Dale City our future and permanent home, we have made this visit to examine its advantage, hear its offers, and consider what objections there might be. We remained at the place from Tuesday until Sunday morning, attended several meetings and made many acquaintances. We looked over the town, passed through it, and around it, and think we are pretty well acquainted with its geography, especially in the neighborhood of Dr. Buechley's, whose dining room we could find without a guide. The town has everything that we have been seeking for, but of course also a few things that we do not desire.—Taking all together we might seek all over the land, before we could find a place with less objections. The majority of the citizens are members, or descendants and friends of the brethren. There is an excellent meeting-house in the town; which at short notice can be well filled with attentive listeners. There is neither Sunday School or Bible class, but all with whom we conversed upon the subject expressed an anxiety for both. They want some one to lead off. Those who could and would lead, are too busily engaged in other duties and callings. The people surrounding the town for miles are almost entirely of the faith of the Brethren, and a more wholesome community could not be desired.

Business facilities are as good as can be expected at a new place, on a new railroad. There is a commendable enterprise among the people, which is beginning to manifest itself in improvements, in the line of buildings, streets and walks.

We have fixed upon the hour of twelve, noon, on the fourth day of July, inst, to decide whether we shall go. It is our prayer that the Lord may overrule our decision for our good, for the good of the cause in which we are engaged, and to his honor.

On Sunday morning young brother Saylor brought us to Berlin. Here we attended preaching by a Disciple minister from Somerset. He took his text in the Epistle of James 5 : 14, 15. In his introductory remarks he stated that he was aware that the Brethren still practiced the anointing, and as there was so little difference between them and us he wished in his discourse that day to labor to remove those differences, that we could be one body. He then proceeded to show that anointing was not now to be practice. It is not now for us to say that he did not do it.

Next he took up the Salutation and attempted to explain that away. Then Feet-washing received a turn, and lastly Trine Immersion. At the close of his remarks he offered his pulpit, at a suitable time, to any one who might think he had any better light to give upon the subjects upon which he had spoken. After asking permission we announced an evening meeting at the Brethren's meeting-house a short distance from town, and that then and there we would speak upon the subjects discussed by our friend, and show, as God might give ability, our reasons for practicing the commands of God's word.

In the evening we had a large congregation, and excellent attention.

We tried to fulfil our promise, with what success God and the people will judge. The time and the notice of course were too brief to do justice to so many subjects. We did the best we could under the circumstances.

We enjoyed the hospitalities of brethren Ephraim Cover, and Emmanuel Myers, and in the morning were sent on our way by the brethren, in the Hack, leaving Elder Myers to labor with the people a while longer. We arrived at Johnstown at about five o'clock, and home at nearly twelve, midnight, and found all in reasonable health.

CORRESPONDENCE

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

California and Oregon.

Editors Campanion: By counsel of last Annual Meeting, I will report the amount given by each church, so that those who have not paid, may know it.

OHIO.

Upper Miami,	$2.00
Black River,	1.00
Donnell's Creek,	5.00
East Nimishillon,	4.00
West "	4.00
Springfield,	4.75
Mohegan,	4.85
Canton and Georgetown,	4.00
Sugar Creek,	6.00
John P. Ebersole,	2.00
Chippewa,	5.00
Maple Grove,	2.00
Covington,	5.00
Received of 5 churches, at Dayton, as follows. P. Nead, G. Holler, A. Erbaugh, M. Shoop, David Bowman,	10.30
Laniel Brower,	2.00
Anglaize,	1.00
Lafayette,	1.00
Tuscarawas,	2.00
Ashland,	3.00
Lick Creek,	2.75
Salem,	2.10
Newton,	4.00
Preble county,	4.00
Total	81.75

ILLINOIS.

Macoupin,	$4.00
Hudson,	2.00
Woodford,	5.00
Big Creek,	1.55
John Metzger,	12.50
Silver Creek,	5.00
Wadham's Grove,	3.00
Cherry "	5.00
Milledgeville,	5.00
Rock River,	3.00
Adel, by M. Emmert,	3.00
Yellow Creek,	5.00
Pine,	3.00
Total	57.05

IOWA.

Peter Forny,	$2.00
Keokuk,	4.15
Desmoines Valley,	4.05
	10.20

MICHIGAN.

Pokagon,	$4.00
Thornapple,	2.00
Total	6.00

INDIANA.

Raccoon Creek,	$2.00
Fawn River,	1.00
Howard Branch,	2.25
Bachellor's Run,	3.00
Portage,	5.00
St. Joseph,	4.00
Pigeon Creek,	1.00
Nettle Creek,	5.00
Elkhart Valley,	1.20
Bango,	1.00
Upper Fall Creek,	4.00
South Bend,	3.00
Rock Run,	5.00
Pine Creek,	3.00
Turkey Creek,	1.00
Laporte,	2.00
Solomons,	3.00
Elkhart,	2.75
Eel River,	3.00
Union,	2.00
Union Center,	1.50
Beaver Dam,	2.75
Total	58.45

MARYLAND.

David Long,	$ 5.00
Pipe Creek, Carroll county,	10.00
Express charges, $0.75
Beaver Dam,	3.00
D. P. Saylor,	2.00
	19.25

VIRGINIA.

Valley Church,	$ 3.85
West Virginia,	15.00
Flat Rock,	15.00
Total	33.85

PENNSYLVANIA.

Spring Run,	$ 2.00
Berlin Branch,	5.00
Perry Church,	2.00
Clover Creek,	2.00
Lower Cumberland,	5.00
John Wise,	6.00
Gettysburg,	3.00
Conemaugh,	5.00
Yellow Creek,	3.00
Snake Spring,	5.00
Isaac Myers,	3.00
Shade Creek,	5.00
Eastern District,	20.00
Augwick,	3.00
Red Bank,	9.00
Upper Conawauga,	5.00
Jacob's Creek,	5.00
Lost Creek,	4.00
Warrior's Mark,	1.00
Total	93.00

Ohio,	$81.75
Illinois,	57.05
Iowa,	10.20
Michigan,	6.00
Indiana,	58.45
Maryland,	19.25
Virginia,	33.85
Pennsylvania,	93 00
Grand Total,	359.55

The Committee is yet short, $147, 32. Those churches that find themselves delinquent, still have an opportunity to send in their mite.

VISITOR please copy.

Eld. C. WENGER.

South Bend, Ind. June 20th, 1871.

Our Visit to Hudson Ill.

Brother Holsinger: I have just returned from Hudson, Ill., where we attended a lovefeast on the 7th and 8th of June, and are happy to inform you that we had the pleasure of enjoying a successful meeting. Better order among the people we never before saw, and must speak very highly of the entire meeting.

The Hudson members are wide awake in their religious exercises, manifesting a zeal and an intellectual ability, which the sincere follower of Christ must ever admire. The happy meeting was not a success in happy sensations only; but through the door of Zion, which stands open both night and day, three young sisters entered, making much joy and happy feelings among their intimate relatives.

To the members of Hudson we would say: Put your trust in the Lord; keeping close together in the ties of christian love, that Satan make no inroads into the heart of those young members, whom Christ has plucked from the world and placed among his followers for future day.

VISIT TO MACON CO., ILL.

The next day after the close of our Hudson meeting, we were soon on our way to Macon county, but missed connection at Decatur; so we hired a wagon, and were soon on our way to the place of meeting, some twelve miles distance.

Being eight in number, some of whom had never before met, a part of the time was spent on the tobacco question. All were opposed to its use, but the main difficult was, how can we get the people to quit it?—However, all could agree upon one plan, which may be as follows:

No preacher feels it his duty to preach and justify the use of it, at the same time, they do not wish to preach against the use of it; hence let them be still and say nothing at all about it, and let those who oppose the evil preach against it all they wish, and finally they will convince the entire party, having no opposition from the members in office.

The next day we attended meeting at the Brethren's large meeting-house, two miles west of Cerro Gordo. This being the lovefeast, we were well entertained by good and able preaching for two days.

Here we saw the largest collection of members that we are accustomed to see; however we were well pleased to see them manifest a wonderful zeal for the ancient order of the brethren; and while this is so, they appear to impart a full share of it to the younger members, of whom there is quite a number; and few things are more needful. The time will one day come, when these old and useful fathers must depart, and let the burden of the church rest upon the shoulders of those that are younger. Then how necessary it is that the young strictly adhere to the counsel of the elders, that they may be prepared for the useful work.

David Frantz, was ordained to the office of Bishop. Menno Stouffer and Jacob Troxel were advanced to the second degree of the ministry.

The next day, (June 12th,) arrived safe at home; and must confess that we learned many good things.

J. H. Moore.

Thomasboro, Ill.

Brother Henry: I will send you a few lines for the Companion.—There is a [illegible] church of the Brethren here, called Walnut Level District, under brother George Studabaker's charge. The brethren are scattered over part of Wells and Adams counties, Indiana, and it is very seldom that we, as a little body of believers, can hear the word preached. Brother George has a large amount of territory to travel over, which makes it almost impossible for him to meet with us more than once every two months. Our object in writing this is to invite ministering brethren to pay us a visit and labor with us.—We feel certain that there might much good be done here, as many are almost persuaded to be christians. Brethren, come over and help us.—Any brethren coming by Railroad, would stop at Bluffton, the county seat of Wells county, where they will be met and conveyed to the place of meeting, by giving timely notice. Address,

Jonathan Warner,
Reiffsburg, Indiana.

Brother Holsinger: I noticed in Companion, No. 24, present Volume, a plan for destroying the Colorado potato bug, which I think would work well for the full grown insect, but it will not do for the larvæ, which are as destructive to the crop as the full grown insect. A better and speedier plan is the following:

Take about two parts of wheat flour and one part of Paris Green, mix well and dust it, through a thin muslin sack, on the vines while the dew is on. The Paris Green acts as a poison, and kills insect and larvæ; and the application need not be repeated so long as it does not rain;—but after a rain, if any eggs remain to be hatched, it should be applied again. Care must be taken not to inhale any of the dust into the lungs, as it is an active poison.

The above plan has been extensively practiced in this country for two years, and the result has been satisfactory in every instance, so far as I know.

A. H Snowberger.

Huntingdon, Ind.

Brother Holsinger; Enclosed you will find one dollar for the Companion, the balance of the volume.—Having moved to the Far West, and as there is no organized church—no place to meet in solemn assembly with the Brethren, we are very anxious to have the Companion, as we will be edified thereby and encouraged in the way of the Lord; also will hear church news, which we will enjoy. The change is very great;—having lived in the Manor Church, Washington county, Md., and having been members there for twenty-two years; having the privilege to attend the house of the Lord and have the bread of life broken to us. Oh! what a feast to the soul!

There are five members in Fort Scott; about twelve miles from this place there are some members. They have preaching sometimes. On our way out, we stopped at Kansas City, heard our beloved brother George Myers speak; had meeting at the house of brother Yourty, where we stopped. We hope some ministering brethren will make this point a passing way. We would gladly receive them and we think some good could be done. I will now close, asking the prayers of the brethren in the Lord, that grace will be granted for every day and trial.

Your sister in the Lord.

Louisa M. Emmert.

Fort Scott, Kan.

Queries.

Luke 16: 9. "And I say unto you, make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness; that when ye fail, they may receive you into everlasting habitations."

An explanation is desired through the Compaaion.

J. E. Bowser.

Abbottstown, Pa.

Will some brother or sister give advice through the Companion about attending churches of popular religion, when we are so situated that we very seldom get to worship with the brethren and sisters to hear the gospel preached in all its truth and purity? What answer are we to give when they ask us to regularly attend their church and prayer-meeting? I have no desire to go, but would like to know my duty. I attend funerals, but on Sabbath day stay at home to read and meditate. I am called selfish and denominational, but what is that to me, so I do the will of God.

A Sister.

"For the love of money is the root of all evil."—1st Tim. 10th and 9th. "Abstain from all appearance of evil.—1st Thes. 5th, 22d.

It appears that we all love money, the more we can get the more we want. Please explain.

D. B.

Correction.

In brother Beaver's "Outside Sketches," on page 388, a number of orthographical and typographical errors occur. The most flagrant of these is in the third column, where the types say, "of fine boards, about ten hundred feet having been consumed." Brother Beaver wanted this to read, "of pine boards, about ten thousand feet, having been," &c.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with obituary notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In St. Joseph District, near South Bend, on Thursday morning, June 3th, of Nervous Apoplexy, sister SUSANNAH STUDEBAKER, wife of Henry Studebaker, aged 41 years 8 months and 13 days.

Her furneral, which look place on Sunday, was very largely attended; services by Elds. D. B. Sturgis and Jacob Miller. She left a husband and six children to mourn their loss, which is her great gain. She was laid away in the quiet shade of Bowman's graveyard to await the resurrection of the just.

Eld. C Wenger.

In West Conastoga congregation, Lancaster county, Pa., on the 11th inst., our dear sister CASSA, wife of our beloved brother John Keller, aged 56 years, 4 months and 9 days.

The deceased was a consistant member of the church of the Brethren for many years, and lived the life of a devoted christian.—During her brief but painful illness, which she bore for some time, she expressed herself resigned to the will of God, and she died in faith and hope of a glorious immortality. Our brother need not to mourn as those who have no hope. Yes, brother, she is gone, never to return to you, but she calls you to come to her, to that better place than here on earth. Brethren and sisters, let us all work together for good, so that we all may meet in that blessed city, where parting is known no more, & the weary are at rest. At her funeral brethren Bomberger, Reinhold, and others preached at the meeting-house, text, Matt. 6 : 10, "Thy will be done," &c.

J. R. ROYER.

In the Waterloo congregation, Black Hawk county, Iowa, May 27th, MESHACH GILLEN, son of sister Gillen, (widow) aged 9 years, 1 month and 9 days.

Funeral discourse by brother Henry Gochnour, from 2d Sam. 14 : 14.

Near Swanton, Md., April 17, EVA MERFY, wife of friend Charley Merfy, aged 40 years, 8 months and 20 days.

Funeral services by Eld. Jacob M. Thomas, from John 5 : 25—29.

JEREMIAH BEECHLY.

In the Redbank congregation, Armstrong county, Pa., September 23d, 1870, HANNAH ELIZABETH SHOEMAKER, daughter of brother Samuel Shoemaker, aged 3 years, 6 months and 20 days.

Funeral discourse by Elder John Wise, text, "It is well," Num. 4 : 26.

In Sand Creek church, at Markleburg, Fayette county, Pa., May 18th, brother JOHN DONNELS, aged 68 years, 3 months and 14 days.

He was from England. Many years ago he was hurt in a coal mine, and had one leg amputated. His disease was Dry Gangrene; three or four days before he died his right hand became black and shriveled up until above the elbow and mortified. He suffered a great deal, but bore his pain with christian fortitude; he died in the triumphs of a living faith; he said, "brethren, it wont be long, we will soon be in glory." He thanked the Lord for every morsel of bread and water he had eaten and drank. He leaves a wife, (a sister) and four children to mourn their loss.—Funeral services by the writer, from Rev. 14 : 14.

JACOB BEECHLY.

In the same church and town, March 31st, of Whooping Cough, LUCINDA BELL, UMBEL, aged 2 years, 4 months 16 days. Funeral services by Eld. J. M. Thomas.

Also, in the same place, sometime in the latter part of the Summer of 1870, (exact time not known,) sister ELIZABETH BARNHOUSE. Funeral services by Eld. J. M. Thomas.

JACOB BEECHLY.

In the Codorus congregation, York county, Pa., sister ELIZABETH FITZ, on the 24th of May; aged 87 years 3 months and 18 days. Her body was taken to the burying ground at Fry'sville. Funeral occasion improved by brethren Elder Jacob Shumberger and Andrew Myers, from Rev. 14 : 13.

THOMAS GRAY.

Advertisements.

WE will admit a limited number of select advertisements at the following rates.

One insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.

No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations.

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price, $4.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol., $2.25. Indispensable.

Life at Home; or the Family and its MEMBERS.—Including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed. The Altar in the House, etc. By Wm. Aikman. $1.50; full gilt, $2.

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. THOMPSON. Fancy Cloth, $1.00.

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand-book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners, with a Chart for recording the sizes of the different Organs of the Brain, in the Delineation of Character, with upwards of 170 Engravings. Muslin, $1.25.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50; Extra gilt, $2.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By W. PITTINGER, $1.50.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Beautifully Illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth, gilt, beveled boards. Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75 cents.

Any of the above sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

The Phrenological Journal, An IllusTRATED, First Class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50, or with the Plain Youth, for $4.00. We commend the JOURNAL to all who want a good Family Magazine, and who [illegible]

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post office, county and state written in unmistakable letters, and address[ed] to D. R. Hershberger, Tyrone, Pa.

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING

One copy, post paid	0.75
12 copies, post paid	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	$0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN & ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid	$1.00
Per dozen,	10.80
Turkey Morocco, Ger. & Eng.
One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	13.80
Plain Single German
One copy, post paid	.50
Per dozen" "	$5.50

The Christian Harp, containing 32 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP.

Per dozen, post paid.	$0.20
Per hundred, post paid,	1.50

Marriage Certificates.

On good, heavy paper, per doz., post paid,	0.80
" " per hundred, "	2.40
COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.70
Reserved at the office,	2.25
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.
Single copy, Post Paid	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.35
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express,	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	.60
German & English Testaments,	.75

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Revised New Testament.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50
18 MO. EDITION.
Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25
32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION.
Plain Cloth Binding, post paid	25
25 copies to one person, by express,	5.50
Roan binding, red edges, post paid	50

Where one or two dozen is wanted, in places adjacent to Railroads, they may be sent cheaper by express.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

1780 1871

ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK?

Use Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

CLEANSE YOUR BLOOD!!

An Alterative and Cathartic, or Tonic and Purge combined, for diseases arising from bad blood; such as Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Erysipelas, Worms, Chills and Fever, Scrofula, Pimples, Tetter, &c. TRY IT.

Established 1780 in package form. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form which was brought to its present state of preservation and perfection some years later, by Dr. P. Fahrney, Chicago, Ill's, who conducts the trade west of Ohio. Great reputation! Many Testimonials! Ask for that prepared at Waynesboro, Pa., and Chicago, Ill's. Beware of imitations. Genuine retails at $1.25 per bottle. Druggists and Medicine dealers sell it.

Dr. P. Fahrney's "Health Messenger" gives the history and uses of the BLOOD CLEANSER testimonials, and other information, sent free of charge. Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.
WAYNESBORO, PA.

Universal Guide for Cutting Garments.

By which every family may cut its own garments for men and boys, of twenty six different sizes; for Coats, Pants, Vests, and Shirts, and Ladies' Dress Bodies. Agents wanted to sell. State, County, and Family Rights. For Particulars address MILLER & QUINN, Tyrone, Blair Co., Pa.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price $6.00 per dozen. One copy 60 cents.

TRACTS.—RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE, 12 pages five cents single copy; thirty cents a doz. All orders should be accompanied with the money, and the name of person, postoffices county & state written in unmistakable letters

Address,
H. R. HOLSINGER, Tyrone Pa

To Nebraska, California, and Kansas, and the B. & M. R. R. Lands.

The "Burlington Route," as called, lies right in the path of the Star of Empire. It runs almost immediately in the center of the great westward movement of emigration. Crossing Illinois and Iowa, it strikes the Missouri river at three points.

These three points are the gateways into three great sections of the trans-Missouri region.

The Northern gate is Omaha, where the great Pacific road will take you to the land of gold and grapes, sunny mountains, and perpetual summer.

The middle gate is Plattsmouth, which opens upon the south half of Nebraska, south of the Platte river, a region unsurpassed on the continent for agriculture and grazing. Just here are the B. & M. Railroad lands, concerning which Geo. S. Harris, the land officer at Burlington, Iowa, can give you all information, and in the heart of them is Lincoln, the State Capital and present terminus of the road.

The Southern gate leads to Kansas, by connections with the St. Joe Road at Hamburg running direct to St. Joe and Kansas City

The trains of the Burlington run smoothly and safely, and make all connections. It runs the best of coaches, Pullman Palace and Pullman dining cars, and should you take the journey for the journey's sake alone, you will be repaid; or take it to find a home or a farm, and you cannot find either better than among the B. & M. lands, where you can buy on ten years' credit, and at a low price.

TYRONE BANK,
TYRONE, PA.

This Bank, intending to do a general banking business, solicits accounts from Banks, Bankers and others. Collections made on all points. Interest allowed on DEPOSITS left on time. Paper discounted on liberal terms.

Wm. P. Orbison,	D. I. Gwin,
John Scott,	H. G. Fisher,
Thomas Fisher,	J. H. Glazier,
Wm. Dorris,	G. C. Wilrins,
G. W. Garretson.	and others.

Beers' Expanding Scroll Water-wheel.

[Patented 1868] This wheel is now running with the overshot, in a Flouring Mill, and is using less water than the overshot. Inventor being a Millwright, and having seen and used all the new waterwheels, does not hesitate to say it is the first iron wheel that can compete with the overshot, and is one half cheaper, simpler and better. For farther information address J. L. Beers and Sons, Millwrights and Manufacturer's of wheel shafting and mill gearing of all kinds, continued Sawmill feed and Sawmill irons.

J. L. Beers & Sons
Cocolamus, Juniata Co. Pa.

THE PIOUS YOUTH.
A MONTHLY PUBLICATION

Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.

It comes about as near pleasing everybody as any paper published.

One dollar a year in advance.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,

ALDEN'S READY BOOK BINDER.—An article for universal use! For filing or Binding Books, Magazines, Papers, Music, Sermons, Manuscripts, etc., etc. See them at Book Stores and News Stands, or send stamp for circulars, or 25 cents for sample, saying where you saw this advertisement, to BRIGHT SIDE CO., Manufacturers, Chica-Co, Ill.

SHORT HAND WRITING.—Students of Phonography and all others who are interested in the art can obtain instruction books. Send stamp for price list and tracts.

"AMERICAN PHONETIC DEPOT.
TYRONE, PA.

J. S. THOMAS, & CO.
WHOLESALE GROCERS
and
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

No 305 RACE ST. ABOVE 3RD, PHILADELPHIA,
N. B. Country Produce taken in exchange for goods or sold on commission.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine, with Drop Feed, new Take-up, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted FIRST CLASS, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted traveling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $200 per month. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. Co.

Union Square, 33 East 17th St., New York

BEES.

Pure Italian Queen Bees for sale, at $2.25 each. Full directions sent with each order.

I. S. HEDDINGS.
Box 22, LEWISTOWN,
24,1:no. Mifflin Co., Pa.

For Sale.

The undersigned offers for sale his farms, situated in Oliver township, Mifflin county, Penna.

No. 1.—Containing about 196 acres, 2 1-2 miles from McVeytown, about 125 acres under cultivation, balance well timbered; two large orchards, grapes and cherries in abundance; three-story log-house, 32x34, fountain and well pumps at the door, barn 98x48, and all necessary outbuildings, all in good repair.

No. 2.—Within view of No. 1, contains 90 acres, 75 or 50 acres cleared, barn and house quite new, one of the finest orchards in the country, 130 apple trees, about 300 peach trees, pears, cherries, grapes, all coming into bearing, fountain and well pumps. This is considered one of the most desirable locations in the country. For further particulars, address,

PETER MYERS.
27, 4t. McVeytown, Pa.

Wm. M. Lloyd, D. T. Caldwell,
Altoona, Pa. Tyrone Pa.
LLOYD, CALDWELL & CO.,
BANKERS,

Receive monies on deposit, and pay interest if left 6 months, at 4 per cent per annum, or 5 per cent. if left one year.

Special contracts made with parties acting a administrators, executors, guardians, and persons holding monies in trust. Dealers in every description of Stocks and Bonds.—Government Securities made a speciality.

Gold and Silver bought and sold, and a general Banking business transacted.

CABINET MAKING & UNDERTAKING

The undersigned keeps on hand and manufactures to order all kinds of Furniture. He is also neatly fitted out for conveying the dead to their last resting place.

Manufacturer of the Common Sense Dasher Washing Machine. Shop at the Cross Roads, near Warrior's Mark, Pa.

JAMES S. COX.

A Washing Machine may be seen and purchased at this office. v6n48tf.

A Card.

Drs. D. Fahrney & Son, Uroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.

7-10- 1 yr. pd.

Excelsior Bee Hive.

This hive being now well established is extensively manufactured, and for sale. $3 for single hive, also Bee-keepers Instruction, 15 cents single copy. Liberal inducements to agents. Address S. B. REPLOGLE,

RoaringSpring,
7-12-ms. Blair Co. Pa.

THE
Christian Family Companion

Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements; that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
TYRONE, PA.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.60 Per Annum

VOLUME VII. TYRONE, PA. TUESDAY, JULY 11, 1871. NUMBER 28.

Light Beyond.

Beyond the stars that shine in golden glory,
Beyond the calm sweet moon,
Up the bright ladder saints have trod before thee,
Soul! thou shalt venture soon.
Secure with Him who sees thy heart-sick yearning,
Safe in His arms of love,
Thou shalt exchange the midnight for the morning,
And thy fair home above.

O! it is sweet to watch the world's night wearing,
The Sabbath morn come on—
And sweet it were the vineyard labor sharing—
Sweeter the labor done.
All finished! all the conflict and the sorrow,
Earth's dream of anguish o'er;
Deathless there dawns for thee a nightless morrow,
On Eden's blissful shore.

Patience! then, patience! soon the pang of dying
Shall all forgotten be,
And thou, through rolling spheres rejoicing, flying
Beyond the waveless sea.
Shalt know hereafter why thy Lord doth lead thee,
His darkest dealings trace;
And by those fountains where His love will feed thee,
Behold him face to face!

—Christian World.

For the Companion.

Sabbath Schools,

NO. II.

ORGANIZATION.

In order to organize a Sunday School we must have a place to meet, scholars to instruct, and teachers to teach.

If there is a will, a place can always be found; a meeting-house, a school-house, a dwelling, a barn, or a grove may be selected. It matters little where we meet if our object is to glorify God.

A goodly number of scholars, too, can be brought together in almost every neighborhood in the land. When the great teacher was teaching among men, he said, "the harvest is great but the laborers are few." And so it is to-day, there is usually an abundant harvest of scholars, but the laborers—the efficient, punctual christian teachers are few. The Savior commanded his disciples to pray the Lord of the harvest, that he would send laborers into his harvest. Oh! that the church would pray to-day to the Lord for more laborers to be sent into the Sunday School harvest. Let us not only pray that laborers be sent, but let us go, and as we go, ask God for wisdom to teach the way of life.

The christian teacher, then, being the great magna-charta in the Sabbath School, the first thing, and we might add, the only thing, needed to insure success, is to enlist the church in the Sunday School cause, for if the church become earnest workers in the Sabbath School, everything else needed will come as naturally as the flowers come in Spring.

You ask if there is a panacea that will cause all the church to enroll their names as laborers in and for the Sunday School. I fear there is no such remedy. If brethren or sisters who live in hearing of the church bell have become so lukewarm in the service of the Master, that they do not attend the regular appointments for public worship, from such we cannot expect much help to organize and maintain a Sabbath School.

And if such there be in the church, let the earnest christian commence to-day to awaken the sleepers, and call them to come and labor in the vineyard of the Lord. Let us become earnest christians, then we will be lively members in the church, in the Sabbath School, or wherever duty may call.

In order to organize a school successfully, it is necessary to think about it, to talk about it, to preach about it, to pray for wisdom to guide us, and for God's blessing upon it. We ought not to be discouraged on account of the number being few, for Jesus hath promised that if only two or three be gathered together in his name, that he will be in their midst. If Jesus meets with us, and is for us, it matters little who is against us, only let us meet in the name of Jesus, and we will be blessed

S. M. MINNICH.

Incentives to Intellectual Attainments.

Whilst we deplorethe prevalence of vice and immorality, that is manifested almost everywhere within the borders of our country, and whilst we deplore the systems of iniquity that enter into, and in a great measure control, many of the institutions of our land, as well as the public affairs of our country in general, yet there are many things in the elements of the government and the character of the institutions that savor much of the truly beautiful and good. Whilst, as a nation, we do not seem to recognize any higher as controling the destiny of our affairs than the sovereign will of the people, yet there is much to indicate that many of our rulers have some recognition of a Supreme Being. Although many of the young men of our country are ruining themselves by idleness and dissipation, yet this only gives those who follow in the paths of rectitude and virtue, a greater opportunity for positions of honor and trust in our land; for we find these positions, as well as the educational interests of the country, are all under the control of the moral and virtuous element of society. No one ever pleads the "merits of vice" to recommend him to any position of profit or trust, even when at the disposal of that class of individuals. Are these not beckonings to nobler achievements,and incentives to greater intellectual attainments? And whilst these beckon us onward and upward to greater usefulness in this life, are they not instrumental in controling the destinies of the eternal future? We plead therefore for the thorough discipline of mind, not only for the uses to which it may be applied, but for its own sake.

The realm of the created is the goal of the outgoing creation. The material finds its end not in itself, but in the mind. The whole order of creation below man, points to him as its glorious and honorable consummation. The cultivation of his intellectual being must, therefore, in this view, find its end in itself, and not in that which is below it. The possession of a well cultivated mind, therefore, is of infini tely greater account—a richer boon to man than any of the uses to which it can be applied in developing the resources and wealth of creation around him. Nay, it is precisely in mind that the signification and worth of created things is taken, and held for the purposes and ends for which they were created. We are placed in this world to be educated for a higher stage of existence. We have been endowed with immortal minds, susceptible of improvement, not only for time, but for eternity. Our minds should be educated so that the soul may be enabled to fulfil its duty well here, and stand upon high vantage ground, when it leaves this the cradle of its being for an eternal existence beyond the grave.

The Sleep of Death.

"The sleep of death"—what is this sleep? We know that the surface idea connected with sleep is that of resting. The eyes of the sleeper ache no more with the glare of light or rush of tears; his ears are teased no more with the noise of strife or the murmur of suffering; his hand is no more weakened by long protracted effort and painful weariness; his feet are no more blistered with journeyings to and fro along a rugged road; there is ease for aching heads, and overtaxed nerves, and heavy hearts, in the sweet repose of sleep. On yonder couch, however hard, the laborer shakes off his toil, the merchant his care, the thinker his difficulties, and the sufferer his pains. Sleep makes each night a Sabbath for the day. Sleep shuts to the door of the soul, and bids all intruders tarry for awhile. So it is with the body when it sleeps in the tomb. The weary are at rest; the servant is as much at ease as his lord. No more the worker leans on his spade,no more the thinker props his pensive head. The wheel stands still, the shuttle is not in motion, the hands which turned the one and the fingers which threw the other, are quiet also. The grave shuts out all disturbance, labor, or effort. The toil-worn believer quietly sleeps, as does the child weary of its play, when it shuts its eyes and slumbers on its mother's breast. Oh! happy they who die in the Lord; they shall rest from their labors, and their works do follow them. We would not shun toil, for though it be itself a curse, it is when sanctified, a blessing; yet toil for toil's sake, we would not choose: and when God's work is done, we are too glad to think that our work is done too. The Mighty Husbandman, when we have fulfilled our day, shall bid his servants rest upon the best of beds, for the clods of the valley shall be sweet to them. Their repose shall never be broken until he shall raise them up to give to them their full reward. Guarded by angel-watchers, curtained by eternal mysteries, resting on the lap of mother earth, ye shall sleep on, ye heritors of glory, till the fulness of time shall bring you the fulness of redemption.—Spurgeon.

Gentleness.

It is rare to find a person uniformly gentle, to whom the world does not ascribe all other good qualities.—Gentleness is, in itself, such a recommendation, that it is a marvel the virtue is not cultivated from self-interest—if a sense of duty, and the promptings of religion, be not sufficient to make the practice of it observed. The influence of a person habitually gentle is felt by all around, like the sun's rays which clear the atmosphere by dissipating noxious vapors, and impart like the genial warmth to objects that have languished and become shriveled up under the influence of clouds and chilling winds. The whole face of nature seems transformed when the sun bursts forth, and gloom departs. Thus, a gentle disposition, appearing among morose and gloomy natures, reflects something of its own serenity and brightness; others seem to partake of that inward tranquility which it promotes, and, for the time, to shake off the mantle of surliness, opposition, or harshness, in which too many allow themselves to be wrapped.

A person of unfailing gentleness of manners, benignity, and cheerfulness, will disarm the ill-disposed, and melt, in many cases, those stubborn natures upon which harshness has only the effect of confirming in opposition. Gentleness persuades when forcible arguments fail; hearts are won by the soft word and pleasing manner, where severity and jarring tones would create only enemies. The reverses of the gentle are sure to be regretted; his prosperity is viewed without envy, and his failings are easily forgiven.

Habitual gentleness is a safeguard against outward annoyances. A mind that is calm and serene beholds everything in the most favorable light, and, like a smoothe stream, reflects every object in its just proportion and fairest colors. A spirit always in agitation, communicates something of its turbulence to those with whom it comes it contact, and is a disturbing element in whatever society it may be thrown.

A nature always ready to pick flaws sees everything in a distorted form, finding nothing pleasant or agreeable, and considering it a personal insult that others, more amiably disposed, should be happy and contented under the same circumstances that render itself so miserable. Misinterpreting—too often, alas! misrepresenting—every act and word of companions and acquaintances, repeating remarks, trivial in themselves, but receiving importance from significant shrugs and dubious tones, and the substitution of more forcible words, thus sowing the seeds of discord, even severing long united friends, is but one of the many miseries an ill-natured person, perhaps almost insensibly to himself, falls into. He feels illy-disposed toward the whole world, and proportionately dissatisfied with himself, a state of mind exhibited in every line of the countenance; grum looks, impatient motions, and snubbing words, are freely bestowed, causing the recipients to shrink and retreat as from a porcupine, whose penetrating quills are thrown in all directions. But, even upon such a nature, a person of well-known, uniform gentleness will exert a beneficial influence, and though inwardly distressed at the black looks and snubs direct, will by quiet and gentle tones, soothe the ruffled spirit, and call up a blush of shame to the cheek that is wont to color only in anger. Since gentleness is so universally loved, so much admired, why is it not more generally cultivated? Since so much is to be gained by its practice, why do we not find more of it in a world ever ready to assume even the most austere virtues to obtain selfish ends? —Leisure Hours.

For the Companion.

Selections and Sayings.

BY SOLOMON W. BOLINGER.

A woman should be amiable, benevolent, charitable, domestic, economical, forgiving, generous, honest, industrious, judicious, kind, loving, neat, cleanly, obedient, pleasant, quiet, reflecting, sober, tender, urbane, virtuous, wise, exemplary, zealous, and a christian

So should a man

The fewer the words the better the prayer.

A small leak may sink a great ship

A wise head hath a still tongue

Either have mind enough to speak well, or judgement enough to keep silent

The greatest glory is not in never falling, but in rising every time we fall.

Bear with infirmities, but not with vices

A great deal of judgment is required in skimming the polite conversation of fashionable women.

Words change to swords by prefixing a sigle letter.

He who conquers others is mighty, but he who conquers himself is mightier.

Small as a grain of wheat is, enough will make a car load; so with little sins, enough will ruin the soul.

Have you fifty friends? it is not enough. Have you one enemy? It is too much.

Seek First the Kingdom.

He who seeks the world first may become disqualified for seeking the dingdom of God at all. The mind in early life may become surfeited with the world, so that it can hardly break away from the influences that depress it. Thus many men feel that they ought to be Christians, and if money would buy salvation, they would have it. But they cannot throw off from their minds the influences and chains with which Satan has bound them.

"Seek first the kingdom of God.' This is the dictate of wisdom as well as the command of Christ. We need not wait to be rich; thousands are never rich; and the rich man who dies without hope is poorer than Lazarus ever was. Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and trust his providence for all you need. His blessing maketh rich. His smile brings peace and plenty. Godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come

He who seeks first the kingdom of God, and follows the direction of the sacred Word, is saved from many evils which wreck even the earthly hopes of worldly men. Rash speculations, and expensive vices, fashionable and foolish pursuits, dissipated courses, intemperance, and various other sources of financial disaster, are never so thoroughly guarded against as when the grace of God rules the heart and molds the life. They that honor the Lord shall be honored of him: and he has said "Honor the Lord with thy substance so shall thy barns burst out with plenty, and thy presses with new wine

Sin, all sin, is fruitless; it is never fair, but always deceives: "What fruit had ye in those things whereof ye are now ashamed?"

For the Companion.

Do not Say you Cannot Pray.

Prayer is the simplest act of all religion. It is simply speaking to our heavenly Father. It needs neither learning nor wisdom, nor book knowledge. It needs nothing but the heart and will. The weakest infant can cry when it is hungry; the poorest beggar can hold out his hands for some alms, and does not want for words; the most ignorant person will find some words to say to his heavenly Father if he has only a will.

My dear reader, do not say you have no convenient place to pray in. Any one can find a place private enough if he is disposed. Our blessed Saviour prayed in the mountains; Isaac in the field; Nathaniel under the fig tree. Any place may become a closet, and be to us the presence of our heavenly Father.

Do not say you have no time for prayer.—There is plenty of time if the people would only observe it; time may be short, but it is always long enough for prayer. Daniel had all the affairs of a kingdom on his hands and yet he prayed three times a day; David was a ruler over a mighty nation, and he says, "evening and morning, and at noon will I pray." When time is really wanted it can always be found.

Reader, do not lose the eternal joys, the glorious anticipation of heaven, for want of asking.—Go this day and pour out your heart's desire before the Almighty God; tell him he shall convert you by his Holy Spirit, as he did his holy servant Paul; tell him that you have learned in his divine word, that he will hear all those who ask in Christ's name, and that in Christ's name you ask to be saved.

J. T. MYERS.

Somerset, Penn'a.

For the Companion.

What shall I Do with Jesus? Matth. 27: 22.

Pilate could not decide whether to release Jesus against the will of the Jews or to condemn him to be crucified to satisfy their wicked desire. He was in trouble—halting between two opinions. He tried to release him, for he found no fault in him; and his wife sent and desired him to have nothing to do with that man, for she had suffered many things in a dream that day because of him. Pilate's troubles increased; for he knew that for envy they had delivered him. The Jews said to Pilate, "By our law, he ought to die; because he made himself the Son of God." When Pilate heard that, he was the more afraid. No wonder he was afraid. But Jesus said to Pilate' "He that delivered me unto thee hath the greater sin."—Pilate was in trouble; for he was set to do justice between man and man; and this he would have done, but it wonld not have satisfied the Jews; and he could not satisfy them and do justice to Jesus and his own conscience.

But Pilate should not have taken counsel of sinners, when he knew that Jesus was innocent. But so it is: sinners in trouble will sometimes take counsel of sinners to do evil. But Pilate said, "I find no fault in the man: the governor said, "Whether of the twain will ye that I release unto you? They said, Barabbas. Pilate saith unto them, What then shall I do with Jesus?" They said, "Let him be crucified." The governor said, "Why, what evil hath he done?" The Jews said to Pilate, "If thou let this man go, thou art not Cesar's friend." This ended the discourse: Pilate to be a friend of Cesar and the wicked Jews, decided against Jesus; and oh! how many wicked sinners have decided like Pilate—against Jesus—to have the honor and glory of the world. But Pilate, in order to pacify his guilty conscience, took water and washed his hands, saying, "I am innocent of the blood of this just person; see ye to it." But the Jews said, "His blood be on us, and on our children;" which was partly fulfilled in the destruction of Jerusalem. Historians say Pilate died a hard and fearful death: his friends could not help him in his bed. Pilate and the Jews as a nation, decided against Jesus, to their own destruction.

Now let us make an application of the language of the text. What will you do with Jesus? Will you, my dear readers, now say what shall be done with Jesus? Will you decide in his favor, or against him? Oh! let not the honors ond glory of the world, keep you from deciding in favor of Jesus and your own salvation! Do it now, for you know not what hour the Son of Man cometh. Now is the day of salvation: harden not your hearts; make your calling and election sure; do not wait for the eleventh hour; that hour may be now for some of you. If you decide in favor of Jesus,—believing, repenting, not willing that he should be crucified afresh, but that he should be glorified, and reign over you and be your King and Savior,—then you may be adopted into the family of God, and be his sons and daughters, and have your sins washed away—your names written in the book of life, and be heirs to that inheritance which Jesus has prepared in heaven; but if you decide against Jesus, you will lose these blessings and favors—die in your sins—be lost, and where Jesus and the happy are, you can never come.

DANIEL LONGENECKER.

For the COMPANION.

Do Christians Ever Die.

It is very frequently said that man never dies, but we make this distinction, and say, Christians never die. The life of God's regenerated children only begins on earth. After men and women have once become filled with the Holy Spirit, their hearts actuated by the love of Jesus, and their wills brought into subjection to God's, they "arise from the dead," and enter a life, which, though begun on earth, fadeth not away nor withereth as the grass. "Awake thou that sleepest, arise from the dead, and Christ will give thee light." This light, friendly reader, will guide you safely across the surging waves and tossing billows, to a haven of rest. This light is heaven-born; and when it once hath lighted the benighted heart, it makes the way of eternal life so clear and joyous, that we, bearing the yoke of Jesus and shield of faith, can steadily march on to the crystal fountains of eternal life. It is only walking through the valley and shadow of death with Jesus as Pilot, that is termed death, to Christians. Then admitting the Christian never dies, is it not joyous to think that Christ only leads his followers through the dark and lonely grave that they may awake in glory, there open their eyes and behold the jasper walls of Zion, with the angels and the redeemed, marching upon streets of pure gold?

F. M. SNYDER.

LIVING BY THE DAY.—I compare, says John Newton, the troubles we have to undergo in the course of a year to a great bundle of fagots, far too heavy for us to lift. But God does not require us to carry the whole at once. He mercifully unties the bundle, and gives us first one bundle, which we are to carry to-day, and then another, which we are to carry to-morrow, and so on. This we might easily manage, if we would only take the burden appointed for us each day; but we choose to increase our troubles by carrying yesterday's stick over again to-day, and adding to-morrow's burden to our load before we are required to bear it.

William Jay puts the same truth in another way. We may consider the year before us a desk with three hundred and sixty-five letters addressed to us—one for each day announcing its trials and prescribing its employments, with an order to open daily but the letter for the day. Now we may be strongly tempted to unseal beforehand some of the remainder. This, however, would only serve to embarrass us, while we should violate the rule our Owner and Master has laid down for us; "Take, therefore, no thought for the morrow, [for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself."

WHOSE SEED IS IN ITSELF.—How much is contained within the small acorn cup! When a little child holds an acorn in his hand, it holds not a small nut only, but a whole forest; for folded within its tiny shell lie trees and their children trees—even a whole forest.

How wonderful was the command of God!—"Let the earth bring forth. . . the tree yielding fruit whose seed is within itself." It is a great work to make a tree; but how much more wonderful to give to it the power of producing other trees for countless years!

There is this self-multiplying power in all our acts. Love begets love, hate produces hate, Christian patience and courage have in them the seed of future heroism. Of nothing is it more true than its seed is in itself, than of our moral influence. How careful, then, should we be of each trivial act, since in its minute compass is enfolded the forest of a thousand full grown deeds, each in its turn to fill the earth with germs of right and wrong.

The great man is he who chooses the right with invincible resolution; who resists the sorest temptations from without and from within; who bears the heaviest burdens cheerfully; who is calmest in storms and most fearless under menace & frowns; and whose reliance on truth, on virtue, on God, is most unfaltering.—Channing.

Christian Family Companion

Tyrone City, Pa., July 11, 1871.

Our New Home.

As announced last week, we had appointed twelve o'clock, noon, on the fourth instant, for deciding upon the location of our future and permanent home while sojourning in the terrestrial sphere. On the preceding day we had letters from both competing places, presenting their last and best offers and petitions. These places are: Martinsburg, Blair county, Penn'a., and Meyer's Mills, Somerset Co., Penn'a. Martinsburg is in Morrison's Cove, and in the bounds of the Clover Creek congregation. It is our old home, where we were raised, married, converted, and from whence we moved direct to this place. It is a beautiful location, fine, fertile, healthy country. There are many Brethren living in the country surrounding the town, and a few members residing in town. They are now finishing an excellent brick meeting-house in the town. Two miles and a half east, is the Brethren's large meeting-house, where the semi annual lovefeasts are held, and where the Annual Meeting convened in 1863. The place has many advantages, and but few disadvantages. It has no rail road yet, but one is in rapid construction, being a branch of the Pennsylvania R. R., intersecting it at Altoona, and running by way of Hollidaysburg, McKees Gap, Roaring Springs, Martinsburg, and in all probability, from thence to Woodberry, Loy's Gap, and Hopewell. From Martinsburg there will be a branch road to Leather Cracker, four or five miles South-east, of the richest iron mines is being opened, that has yet been discovered in the state.

The Brethren's invitations from Clover Creek were warm; their offers were generous. Martinsburg would have been a good location for us. The fact of its having been our native place, gave occasion for much serious thinking; but resulted with very little in its favor. Taking all things into consideration we could not decide not to go to Martinsburg.

Meyer's Mills is a station on the Pittsburg and Connellsville Railroad, about one hundred and thirty miles east of Pittsburg, and about forty miles west of Cumberland, Maryland. The town has lately been incorporated, and is now called Dale City. It is situated on the Casselman river, and is in the bounds of the Elk Lick congregation. Two and a half miles north of town is the Mechanicsburg Meeting-house, where the lovefeasts are held, and where the Annual Meeting was held in 1841, and 1859, and where it will most likely again be held in 1873, the Lord willing. We have before spoken of its advantages, and may do so again. For the present it will suffice to say: the invitations of the Brethren were warm and strong; their offers liberal and positive. The matter was taken into consideration at a church meeting, and their efforts were united. The place is new and strange to us; we thought that might be an advantage as it would afford us a suitable apportunity to raise the standard of our christian life. Taking all things into consideration the conclusion was forced upon us that Dale City is a very good location for our new home, and hence we said, with considerable emotion, at the appointed moment: "It is twelve o'clock, and now it is approaching one; so we are now at Tyrone, but henceforth we seek our earthly home at Dale City." It was the best we could say, under the circumstances, for our heart was as full as our mouth. We can not go to more than one place, which isthe only reason we are not going to Martinsburg.

May the good Lord bless the decision, that the change may be one of the best in our changeable life, and that it may result to our present and eternal welfare, and to his honor, is a prayer in which we invite all our friends to join us most fervently.

We shall aim to accomplish the removal by the middle of October next, of which due notice will be given.

Our Dues.

About one thousand dollars due us, in amounts ranging from fifty cents to one hundred dollars, would come very good to us just now. And as we have had a plentiful harvest, which is now about gathered, and both farmers and laborers have had an opportunity of accumulating some funds, we do hope that we will speedily receive our dues. Come friends help us along this time, and do not suffer all our appeals to be in vain.

Answers to Correspondents.

Elder Geo. Wolf: According to our books, $6 less $2 commission, equal to $4 is yet due us.

Peter Wolfe: We are square. When agents take no percentage, we freely allow them to deduct the cost of postal orders, and give our thanks to boot: thank you.

J. S. Keim: $8. 75.

Isaac Secrist: The Harp was mailed to you on the 9th inst. If it does not reach you, let us know.

Jacob Mohler: All right, with many thanks.

Alex. W. Miller: We find you credited on our book with money order, for $8. 50, on the 22nd of April. It was overlooked in the acknowledgements. Please excuse.

Jos. Stuckey. If we knew what numbers are wanting, we would try to send them.

F. A. Hendricks. Yes.

Solomon Horner. W. S. Haven & Co., Book Binders, Corner of Wood Street and Third Avenue.—Pittsburg, Pa.

C. W. Klippert. The $1.50 came to hand; and we have sent the back numbers except No. 20, which is exhausted.

J. J. Shively. G. W., according to our books, owes $1.10 on Vol. 6.

Thomas Berry. Your time expires with this No. To the end of the year will cost you 65 cents.

Letter from D. M. Holsinger, No 1.

Dear brethren and sisters:—Myself and wife, on our mission West, left Tyrone June 22d, (morning train;) arrived at Columbiana, Ohio, about 2 p. m.; made our way to old brother and sister Kurtz, from whom we received a hearty welcome, and all the attention that christian courtesy imposes or christian charity demands.—Old brother Henry is rather delicate, but with caution, is still able to attend to some domestic as will as religious duties. The old sister seems to enjoy rather better health than her companion. After enjoying their company and hospitality, and a good night's rest, we took leave and same evening landed at brother Daniel Leedy's, Richland, Co. Here we visited some of our friends, and on Saturday evening and Sunday attended meeting at the meeting-house near brother Henry Hess', where we formed acquaintance with many loving members and friends.

On Monday morning took leave of kind friends there, and about 4 p. m., landed at brother John Holsinger's, Henry county, Indiana. Found the friends and members generally in usual health here; had three evening meetings in this (Fall Creek) branch, but being mid-harvest here the attendance was not large. At 11:25 p. m., of the 28th took cars at Sulphur Spring, for Haldane, Illinois, via Chicago and Dixon, and landed on the 29th, at 2:14 p. m. Were met by brother John Diehl and conveyed to his house, and to this date have enjoyed the hospitality and care of the members of this arm of the church. Yesterday (Sunday,) we attended two meetings at the Silver Creek meeting house, where we enjoyed ourselves very much among our Father's children, and about His business.

We have so far realized the parting wishes, as well as the prayers of many dear members, enjoyed reasonable and good health, stood the fatigue of travel well, made connections, and reached points in good time; and now brethren and sisters, join with us to praise that God, who has thus watched over us, and do not cease to pray Him for a continuance of His mercies. Should any one write, address to Polo, Ogle county, Illinois, in care David Holsinger. Farewell, for the present.

D. M. Holsinger.

Polo, Ill., July 3.

MISCELLANEOUS

The Danger and the Remedy.

Persons who become Christians enter upon the road to wealth; for the road to wealth is simply the path of industry and frugality. It is true that rash and mad speculations may enrich one, while they impoverish thousands; but the legitimate path to competence and independence is the path of diligent and economical endeavor. A Christian man at once enters upon this road. He refrains from expensive vices. Habits of intemperance and dissipation are discarded. Recklessness and carelessness are foreign to his profession and character. Gluttony, luxury, and gaudy show, are alike contrary to his tastes and to the rules which guide his conduct. Idleness is forbidden. Everything which tends to impair vitality, deteriorate his physical powers, and destroy life, becomes to him a sin. His health is better, his services are more valuable in every point of view, and becoming diligent and frugal, he naturally increases in goods.

His danger is, that as riches increase, he will set his heart upon them, and to become, not only wealthy, but also worldly and covetous, and thus lose the peace of God. His danger is real, for our Saviour has warned us to beware of the enticements of wealth, and has perpetually spoken of the tendency of riches to corrupt and destroy their possessors. As wealth increases, men grow extravagant, wasteful and selfish; and indulge in the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye and the pride of life; until the providence of God, to save them from utter ruin, sweeps away their hoarded gain, and leaves them to seek in poverty, the only wealth which can satisfy the soul.

What, then, is the remedy for this obvious evil? We cannot forbid men to be diligent, for this is expressly commanded; nor can we reprove them for temperance, fidelity, and frugality, all of which, in their case, tend to the accumulation of wealth. There are ways enough in which money might be squandered or wasted; but wastefulness as well as idleness is sin.

The gospel safeguard against this danger is simple: "Lay not up for yourselves treasures on the earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal. Sell that ye have, and give alms." In a word, let it be said of you, as of the righteous man of old, "He hath dispersed, he hath given to the poor; His righteousness endureth forever."

Only in this way, can we guard against excessive and dangerous accumulations. We are not to leave our property to charitable uses when we are dead and can no longer hoard it, compelling our heirs to bestow what we were unwilling to give, nor allow lawyers and swindlers to divide it among themselves in law suits and quarrels. God does not ask for gifts in our last will. He asks for a present will, which consecrates our all to him. Nor are we to delay the performance of our duty in the hope of gaining vast wealth with which to do some great good at a future time. This suggestion is of the devil. Our money, given to the Lord to-day, may be as useful under His management, and return as large a dividend in His work, as under any direction of our own. And we may be dead and buried, and our property scattered and destroyed, before the time that we may set to devote it to o holier service. Said a man to a Christian laborer, "I thought, some weeks since that I ought to give five hundred dollars to your work; I did not do it, and the money is gone, and I am sorry. I am not sorry for anything that I have given away; but this money has been spent, and I am not satisfied with the dispesal that has been made of it."

Keep an accurate account of all receipts and expenditures. By this you will always see what you can afford to spend, and what of your expenditures you can curtail or cut off.

When a thing is well begun it is almost half finished

Selected for the COMPANION.

The Voice of Jesus.

I heard the voice of Jesus say,
Come unto Me and rest;
Lay down thou weary one, lay down,
Thy head upon my breast.

I came to Jesus as I was,
Weary, and worn, and sad,
I found in him a resting place,
And he has made me glad.

I heard the voice of Jesus say,
Behold I freely give
The living, water-thirsty ones,
Stoop down and drink and live.

I came to Jesus and I drank
Of that life-giving stream,
My thirst was quenched, my soul revived.
And now I live in him.

I heard the voice of Jesus say,
I am this dark world's light;
Look unto me thy morn shall rise.
And all thy day be bright.

I looked to Jesus and I found
In him, my Star, my Sun;
And in that light of life I'll walk
'Till traveling days are done.

JOHN P. NALLEY.

Mt Morris, Ill's.

For the COMPANION.

Evening Hymn.

Seal me, Lord, an heir of glory,
Seal my brethren with me, Lord,
Love we not those temples gory?
Bind our hearts in sweet accord.

Seal us: let thy signet cover
All thy children far and wide;
Thy blest arms extended over
All, when thou wast crucified.

There in agony extended,
Hatred sought thy overthrow;
Mercy for its own depended
On the dark abyss of woe.

Love we not those temples gory—
Hands, and wounded side, and feet?
Love we? let love tell the story—
Love, his dying love repeat.

In your actions, there repeat it:
Brightly shining let it be.
Trim your lamps, who would possess it,
Light your lamps with charity.

For the COMPANION.

Felix, Festus, Agrippha and Paul.

Nature in many respects, resembles divinity. When we enter a beautiful garden, we may pluck a single leaf of a flower and make it a subject of much examination and instruction; next the whole flower may be subjected to the same course of investigation; likewise the whole plant; next one or any other number of classes, and finally, the whole garden.

The natural philosopher sometimes takes for his subject a single grain of sand or the least visible particle of dust; next a field, then a continent, and by and by the whole globe.—Still he goes beyond, and beholds the beauty of the sun, moon, planets, stars and constellations, and finally he grasps at one view, the whole universe. And still he concludes there is something beyond; he almost comprehends infinity, still he cries, "Beyond." He may commence at either end of his knowledge, in the middle, or anywhere he chooses, and soon he goes beyond his finite conception, and finally concludes that nature and infinite space, like eternity and God, cannot be fathomed by mortals.

The christian philosopher may meditate upon a single word with much instruction and profit; he may take for his subject the expression of one idea—a paragraph or a circumstance—a chapter, then a whole book and finally the whole Bible at one view. He may also choose his subject where he will, still he finds the same "unsearchable wisdom of God," that his ways are past finding out.

In the four characters selected from the Bible for consideration, we have an applicable representation of man's disobedience and obedience to God. Paul represents the model of obedience, and the other three that of disobedience. In the character of Felix, fallen humanity is discovered in the most lamentable condition, a tyrant, a seducer, and an adulterer—not unconscious of his condition, still curious to know the uttermost of the matter, and when the truth was made to bear so vividly and with such power upon his mind that his sin-hardened heart could scarcely endure the shock, he answered, "Go thy way for this time, when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee." Paul reasoned before Felix "with power and in demonstration of the Spirit." It was not he who spake, but the Holy Ghost which was in him; being before a magistrate, in that hour it was given him what to say. He no doubt told Felix that righteousness consisted in prolonging and saving life, instead of shortening and destroying it, as he was doing; that it was to "undo the heavy burdens" entirely instead of increasing them as he was wont to do; "to let the oppressed go free," instead of enslaving them yet more, which he did in his government; that it was "to deal out thy bread to the hungry," instead of taking it out of their mouths as he did; and that it was "to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God," instead of administering injustice, and showing no mercy, and disregarding the commandments of God; that in a kingdom of righteousness, he that was greatest was the servant of all, and not, as in his government, where the greatest is the terror and tyrant of all.

There is no doubt but the apostle reminded Felix of the fact that by his intemperate habits he was destroying his happiness, his body, and his life; that he was waring against the elements with which God had surrounded him to make him happy, by excessive indulgence in every liberty—he had become an abuser instead of a user of the world and its enjoyments—Doubtless he felt sensible of the certainty of the eternal consequences of such a course, and was heartily admonished to desist, and yield himself a servant of righteousness, but, true to his kind, he answered, trembling, "Go thy way for this time, when I have a convenient season I will call for thee." There was still too much avarice and love for the praise of men in his heart, consequently he did not yield. Alas, how often does the convicted sinner follow his example?

Festus was amiable, obliging, clever man; not openly wicked or malicious at heart—a man deserving of the epithet, gentleman. The trial of Paul before him was much like that of Jesus before Pilate. Paul had been left a prisoner, and it was said that he was not fit to live; but when his accusers brought him before Festus to have him legally condemned to death, they brought no doubt no uch accusations as he supposed they would bring; but certain questions of which he doubted, among which was the question of the resurrection of Jesus from the dead. When they had laid many and grievous complaints against Paul which they could not prove, Festus could find no fault in him, but being curious to bring the matter to a further test, and willing to do the Jews a pleasure did not please Paul, though he could find no fault in him. And thus he relates the case to king Agrippa, who would hear the man himself In the character of Agrippa we have a striking view of the indisposition of men of worldly honor to become followers of the meek and lowly Jesus. He was intelligent—well versed in the scriptures, and Paul rejoices in the privilege of defending the truth before a king who knew it. After giving an outline of his manner of life, relating his almost miraculous conversion, and the cause of his bonds, namely, the affirming of the resurrection of the dead, Festus with a loud voice accused him of madness, but he boldly, yet amicably denies the charge, and appeals to the king's knowledge of what he spake, and of the scriptures for his evidence, following the appeal with an unrejected answer, "Then Agrippa said unto Paul, almost thou persuadest me to be a christian."

And Paul said, I would to God, that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost and altogether such as I am, except these bonds—likely holding up the chain that bound him. Agrippa however did not consent to lay aside his royal robes and leave the pleasures of this life to suffer with Christ. Though it is evident not only from the preceding conversation, but from what followed, that both Agrippa and Festus were mightily convinced and convicted, yet they would not yield.

There is no rational person living where the gospel is preached, though he may now be a mocking skeptic, or even an infidel, who has not at some time, or at repeated times, had such convincing and convicting seasons.

Dear reader, whoever you may be, brother, sister, friend, foe, saint or sinner—your case is represented by at least one of the four characters of our text. Either like Felix, on account of your extreme wickedness and reprobacy of mind, you have been made to tremble under the reasoning "of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come," by the Spirit of God; and have, like him, been disobedient saying, "Go thy way for this time: when I have a convenient season I will call for thee;" or perhaps like Festus, you have been so mightily convinced that you dared not give any audible answer against the truth, still, like him, you have left no account of your confession and conversion to God; or perhaps like Agrippa notwithstanding your many amiable qualifications and your very efficient knowledge of the Scriptures, when almost persuaded to become a Christian, you have refused to become altogether such; or happy thou, if like Paul, you have not been disobedient to heavenly visions, or the light and knowledge which God has given you, and have made an unconditional surrender to Christ, counting all things but loss that you may win Christ.

At least one of these calls and your answers are written in the books of eternal truth; like those of the characters under consideration.

Whether the account be like that which is favorable or like those that are unfavorable, the record is kept at all events. These drawings of the Father you have felt, perhaps in the dead hour of midnight, while lying upon your couch, when all nature was still and in darkness, and while, perhaps, for this very purpose, sleep was withdrawn from you. The spirit has wafted his way on wings of love and mercy, near to your side;—and has, in a still, small voice, whispered into the ear of your understanding, that there are some duties which you have left undone; or else with a voice more terrible than thunder, the powers of the everlasting truth of God have forced their way in upon your benighted understanding, warning and entreating you until you trembled.

By reason of fear, or curiosity or some other cause, you have meditated upon the scriptures of divine truth, and have been almost persuaded to become a Christian. Under some circumstance or other in your life, you have either been obedient or disobedient to these heavenly visions.—Perhaps in the hour of danger or remorse, after the commission of crimes; perhaps while wiping the last cold sweat from the brow of a dear kind mother, or a father, or a friend; or perhaps, when casting a last, long, lingering look upon the sweet, pale face of a dear, departed sister or brother, a child or a companion, at some time or other, I cannot tell exactly when, you have seen the necessity of turning to God and becoming a Christian. Perhaps while at a funeral, or while watching at the death-bed of some one, or when upon a bed of sickness yourself, thinking it might be your death-bed, or at preaching, perhaps when in conversation, or in company with Christians or sinners. Perhaps when you were attending at the altar of prayer, or after taking the advantage of and defrauding your neighbor, while pondering upon your reverses of fortune, the disappointments you have met, or the uncertainty of life,—at some time or other, you know best when—you have had these drawings; and the record is correctly kept by Him before whom all things lie naked and open

Dear reader, let me again ask the question, Which of the four characters represent your case? Have you like Felix, said to the convicting Spirit, "Go thy way for this time;—when I have a convenient season I will call for thee"? Or have you, like Festus, said or done nothing? Or, like Agrippa have you been almost, yet not altogether, persuaded to become a Christian? Or, like Paul, not been disobedient to the heavenly visions which you have certainly had. If Paul represents your case, then like him, your conscience is also void of offence toward God; and like him, though bound with chains, you are happy, rejoicing in the defence of the truth.

JOHN B. GARVER.

Shirleysburg, Pa.

LOOKING UPWARD.—"Our thoughts," says an eloquent divine, "like the waters of the sea, when exhaled toward heaven, will loose all their bitterness and saltness, and sweeten into an amiable humanity, until they descend in gentle showers of love and kindness upon our fellow men." —Colton.

"God known in the soul is God united with the soul: Christ revealed in the heart, is Christ formed upon the heart: there is life in this light—it is no other than the light of life. Woe to us that we know so much to so little purpose—that we should be bushels to hide, and not rather candlesticks to hold forth the candle of the Lord He has lighted in us!"

Economy and meanness are by no means identical. Judicious economy is necessary to large benevolence.

CORRESPONDENCE

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as a guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Salem College.

For the satisfaction of the many brethren and sisters that desire me to give the best information that I can of the College, I will now try to do so, since I have safely reached home again.

I will then state here, first, that the principal reason of my journey was to do all that I could, uprightly and consistently, for that institution, for reasons hereafter mentioned.

I left home on the 21st of April, for our Northern Indiana D. M., and attended at the same time a meeting about Salem College, where a report was made by its officers, showing that the school was in a prosperous condition, counting 86 scholars in attendance, and that all debts and obligations had been paid, or provided for, and a surplus of several thousand dollars in obligation in hand. At the same time a delegation from Warsaw, the county seat of Koscusko, making a very flattering offer if the College could be established in their place; but as the word was given to Bourbon, the brethren thought their word should stand.

I had been present at the time of the dedication of the house by the people of Bourbon, to the brethren of Northern Indiana. I there learned that thus far all that was done, was done outside, and brethren were not responsible for anything; and the pamphlet circulated was without the knowledge of the brethren, consequently fictitious, though we are not inclined to say that any other than good motives were intended.

On the second day after the dedication, the school was opened by singing, reading the first chapter of the Gospel of John, and prayer, all kneeling. Only seven scholars were registered, and after proper direction given by the Professor, were dismissed for a day. I attended again, and giving them a little talk, bade them farewell, with the promise to visit them again. This was done in about six weeks afterward, to mutual satisfaction. I formed the opinion that if all our children could have such discipline, and order, and moral training there might be a revolution for great good. Thus I left for this time, with the satisfaction within myself that this school is no nursery for pride and insolence, but the reverse.

The first term expired, and a second commenced; and when I paid a visit to the school just before I started for A. M, I had the pleasure to know that this first school of the Brethren was so far a success, and would answer the purpose for which its friends designed it; viz, an asylum or place of protection for brethren's sons and daughters, to be safe from the contaminating influences of a perverted Christianity, that is distilled into the minds of those who place themselves under the tuition of the world-teachers, by whom they imbibe pernicious doctrines and principles; and till they have their education, are ready to unite with them, and for filthy lucre deny the true and genuine doctrine embraced by their parents, of which number there are not a few, as I have learned in my tour east and back.

Having promised to be present at the close of the term, I had to deny myself the pleasure of paying some visits in the east, and so arrived on the 14th inst., at the College, and heard the closing of the examination, and the day following a number of addresses, made by the students, which would have done honor to men of higher attainments and standing; not only the substance, but the manner and spirit the speakers exhibited, were praiseworthy, and might be copied by older persons to profit. I shall perhaps be favored with some copies of those speeches, which shall be communicated.

But there was something in the demeanor of the whole of the students which was worth more to me than all, and that was, an attachment to one another and their teachers, which speaks volumes in favor of this school. There is certainly a spirit of dictation here, that secures respect and love to all that come in contact with this institution. The above sentiment is not mine alone, but was the expression of many.

The objection expressed to Salem College by some brethren, that it is called the Brethren's College, is, by no means, inappropriate, as long as it is under the sole direction and control of Brethren; and although it cannot be said who and how many there are that sustain the institution, it is, nevertheless, none but the Brethren's school, so long as we are not disowned by a proper course of gospel procedure, which, by the way, we will try to prevent by a Christian walk and conduct.

And as regards the fear that by giving our sons and daughters a collegiate education, the salary system will be introduced into our church;—let it be understood positively, by all our brethren, that Salem College is no manufactory of Preachers. But if it should produce a goodly number of teachers, to whom we can entrust our children in our Common Schools, to make them good boys and good girls, and good, law-abiding citizens,—which will certainly be the effect produced by precept and example—and the road paved to make them also obedient disciples of Christ, who will complain?

And if, in course of time, you should see proper to elect some of them to the ministry and make them proud by giving them a salary of a thousand or ten thousand dollars a year, it is your fault and not that of Salem College.

But for my part I have no such fears, so long as brethren see no danger in laying up for themselves and children by the thousand, and remain in fault to communicate in all good things to him that teacheth; and, "If we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great thing if we shall reap your carnal things?" 1 Cor. 9: 11. There are two extremes, let us avoid both; by so doing we shall act wisely and be safe.

Now because we cannot restrain our sons and daughters from having a thirst for knowledge any more than we can prevent the apple tree from showing blossoms, an indication of usefulness in bearing fruit, we thought it proper to erect an institution like Salem College; and if brethren will not nip it in the bud, but nurse and help to cultivate the same, and wait till the proper time, they may reap an abundant harvest with joy. Certain it is that many a son and daughter of ours might stand prominent for usefulness in the church now, who this day, to the grief of their parents, are attached to those who, as we have reason to believe, make some of the laws of God of none effect, teaching for doctrine the commandments of men, if they had been educated by our own teachers.

I think my promise made to many brethren and sisters is now fulfiled; and I will only add that the next term commences on the 6th day of September next.

Yours fraternally,

F. P. LOEHR.

A Missive to Joseph Michael and Children.

Beloved Relatives: It is love which entwines around our hearts and draws us near to each other, notwithstanding the great distance between us; and it is this love which flows back and forth between kindred, that prompts us at present to devote a few moments in writing to those of our relatives who long since dwelt near us, but now are far from us. We will not murmur, but will try to be content with our lot, let it be what it may: but we regret that we were not permitted to bid you farewell, and we also regret that none of you ever visited us in our own home. Our Communion meeting has passed, we indeed enjoyed a good season, and truly a feast of love, and were richly and bountifully fed from the ministers lips with such food as maketh the soul glad. We enjoyed the best order ever known here at so large a meeting. There was a festival in Hudson the same evening;—consequently none attended the meeting only those who came from pure motives. There were three added to our number; namely, Mahala Burns, Bellinda Blough, Maggie Lyon.—Brother Philip A. Moore administered baptism, which was done in good order. Many times during our meeting our thoughts were directed to you all, knowing that at our former communions we feasted together, but we are now deprived of that pleasure. Also, during our meeting, the silent medium of the pen brought us the sad news of your wife's death, which caused us to deeply mourn and sympathize with you, knowing that you had scarcely reached your new home, when grim death stretched forth his strong, irresistible arm, and robbed you of your side companion, which was your dearest and most true, earthly friend; consequently it is the most sad misfortune that could have befallen you. But when we remember that this earth was only a place of suffering for her, we should say: Depart in peace, and go hence to drink of that never failing fountain of love and mercy, ready prepared for all Christians. How happy we are when we remember the good example that she set and left for her children, and that one has already followed the good example of her mother, and is now a comfort to her father, in his lonely, bereaved condition. Cousins, be encouraged, and put all your trust in our good Father above. He is able to heal every wound, and his love is sufficient to buoy you up, even in the saddest trials. Accept love and best wishes from your weak sister and cousin.

REBECCA SNAVELY.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with obituary notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In the Codorus congregation, June 11th, sister LYDIA GRAY, wife of brother Thomas Gray, (minister); aged 55 years 9 months and 30 days. She leaves a sorrowing husband and one daughter to mourn their loss; but we should not mourn as those who have no hope; for, like Mary of old, she had chosen that good part that should never be taken from her. She was a beloved mother in the family, and also a faithful sister and mother in the house of God.

Funeral services by brethren Jacob Shamberger, Christian Ness, and the writer, from 2 Cor. 5: 1, to a large and attentive congregation. Andrew Myers.

In the Salamony Church, Huntington Co., Ind., May 6th, brother HENRY HOOVER; aged 57 years 1 month and 12 days. The deceased was born in Morrison's Cove, Pa., and emigrated to Indiana, in about 1847.—He joined the church about 15 years ago, lived an exemplary life, and died in the triumphs of a living faith. His funeral was attended on the 7th, by a large concourse of people. Discourse by Elder Samuel Murray. He leaves a wife and three children, all grown, and a large circle of friends, to mourn their loss, which is his eternal gain.

A. H. SNOWBERGER.

In the Philadelphia church, January 14th, our beloved brother GEORGE W. SPENCER in the 59th year of his age. He is one of whom we may say: he only bade farewell to his earthly home and friends, to depart to his heavenly home, there to meet with those who have gone before, and wait to welcome those from whom he parted here. He was loved by all in his church—loved and respected by all with whom he came in contact in his business and friendly relations outside the church.

C. C. SEIB.

Killed, in the Allison Prairie church, Lawrence county, Illinois, on the 6th inst., bro. IRA CALVERT, in the 52nd year of his age, by the running away of a team. His loss is much felt by the church, and by the community, as he was much esteemed. His funeral was attended by a large concourse of people. He leaves a wife and eight children to mourn their loss. Funeral services by brethren A. Hyer, P. Stoneberger.

LIST OF MONEYS received for subscription, books, &c.,

M. R. Charles,	$0.75	J. M. Messamer,	.75
D. J. Peck,	8.65	Jacob Hoff,	.75
Thomas Berry,	5.00	J. Bowman,	1.50
D. Vaniman,	1.50	J. Mohler,	6.50
Isaac Kulp,	5.00	E. Brandt,	1.00
A.H.Snowberger,	.50	Charles Hilary,	.75
D. Crofford,	2.00	W.Angle,by D. L.	1.50
D. A. Hufford,	.75	Thomas Gray,	1.00
J. G. Winey,	1.50	M. M. Mummert,	4.50
D.B.Puterbaugh,	5.00	Isaac Kulp,	1.20
Peter Wolf,	5.00	G. W. Hoxie,	1.50
Eld. J. I. Cover,	1.00	Wm. Moses,	1.00
J. S. Keim,	.75	S. G. Keller,	1.25
Dr. Solomon,	3.00	Amos Wright,	1.00

Advertisements.

WE will admit a limited number of select advertisements at the following rates.
One insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.
No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations.

SALEM COLLEGE.

The Fall Term of this Institution, (open for both sexes) situated at Bourbon, Marshall county, Ind., will begin Sept. 6th, 1871.
A class in Didactics will be organized for the special training of teachers.
For further particulars apply to
O. W. MILLER, President.
BOURBON, IND.

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING

One copy, post paid	0.75
12 copies, post paid	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	$0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN & ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid	$1.00
Per dozen,	10.80

Turkey Morocco, Ger. & Eng.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	13.50

Plain Single German

One copy, post paid	.50
Per dozen " "	$5 50

The Christian Harp, containing 32 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP.

Per dozen, post paid.	$0.20
Per hundred, post paid,	1.50

Marriage Certificates.

On good, heavy paper, per doz., post paid,	0.30
" " per hundred, "	2.40
COMPANION Volume 8, bound post paid,	$2.70
Reserved at the office.	2.25
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.
Single copy, Post Paid	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid.	.75

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price $6.00 per dozen. One copy 60 cents.

TRACTS.—RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE, 12 pages five cents single copy; thirty cents a doz. All orders should be accompanied with the money,and the name of person, postoffices county & state written in unmistakable letters

Address,
H. R. HOLSINGER, Tyrone Pa

BEES.

Pure Italian Queen Bees for sale, at $2.25 each. Full directions sent with each order.

I. S. HEDDINGS.
Box 22, LEWISTOWN,
24,1mo. Mifflin Co., Pa.

To Nebraska, California, and Kansas, and the B. & M. R. R. Lands.

The "Burlington Route," as called, lies right in the path of the Star of Empire. It runs almost immediately in the center of the great westward movement of emigration. Crossing Illinois and Iowa, it strikes the Missouri river at three points.

These three points are the gateways into three great sections of the trans-Missouri region.

The Northern gate is Omaha, where the great Pacific road will take you to the land of gold and grapes, sunny mountains, and perpetual summer.

The middle gate is Plattsmouth, which opens upon the south half of Nebraska, south of the Platte river, a region unsurpassed on the continent for agriculture and grazing. Just here are the B. & M. Railroad lands, concerning which Geo. S. Harris, the land officer at Burlington, Iowa, can give you all information, and in the heart of them is Lincoln, the State Capital and present terminus of the road.

The Southern gate leads to Kansas, by connections with the St. Joe Road at Hamburg running direct to St. Joe and Kansas City

The trains of the Burlington run smoothlyq and safely, and make all connections. It runs the best of coaches, Pullman Palace and Pullman dining cars, and should you take the journey for the journey's sake alone, you will be repaid; or take it to find a home or a farm, and you cannot find either better than among the B. & M. lands. where you can buy on ten years' credit, and at a low price.

TYRONE BANK.
TYRONE, PA.

This Bank, intending to do a general banking business, solicits accounts from Banks' Bankers and others. Collections made on all points. Interest allowed on DEPOSITS left on time. Paper discounted on liberal terms.

Wm. P. Orbison,	D. I. Gwin,
John Scott,	H. G. Fisher,
Thomas Fisher,	J. H. Glazier,
Wm. Dorris,	G. C. Wilrins,
G. W. Garretson,	and others.

THE PIOUS YOUTH.

A MONTHLY PUBLICATION

Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.

It comes about as near pleasing everybody as any paper published.

One dollar a year in advance.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,

Beers' Expanding Scroll Waterwheel.

[Patented 1868] This wheel is now running with the overshot, in a Flouring Mill, and is using less water than the overshot. Inventor being a Millwright, and having seen and used all the new waterwheels, does not hesitate to say it is the first iron wheel that can compete with the overshot, and is one half cheaper, simpler and better. For farther information address J. L. Beers and Sons, Millwrights and Manufacturer's of wheel shafting and mill gearing of all kinds, continued Sawmill feed and Sawmill irons.

J. L. Beers & Sons
Cocolamus, Juniata Co. Pa.

ALDEN'S READY BOOK BINDER.—An article for universal use! For filing or Binding Books, Magazines, Papers, Music, Sermons, Manuscripts, etc., etc. See them at Book Stores and News Stands, or send stamp for circulars, or 25 cents for sample, saying where you saw this advertisement, to BRIGHT SIDE CO., Manufacturers, Chica-Co, Ill.

SHORT HAND WRITING.—Students of Phonography and all others who are interested in the art can obtain instruction books. Send stamp for price list and tracts.

"AMERICAN PHONETIC DEPOT.
TYRONE, PA.

J. S. THOMAS, & CO.
WHOLESALE GROCERS
and
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

No 305 RACE St. ABOVE 3RD, PHILADELPHIA,
N. B. Country Produce taken in exchange for goods or sold on commission.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine, with Drop Feed, new Take-up, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted FIRST CLASS, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted traveling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $200 per month. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. Co.

Union Square, 33 East 17th St., New York

For Sale.

The undersigned offers for sale his farms, situated in Oliver township, Mifflin county, Penna.

No. 1.—Containing about 196 acres, 2 1-2 miles from McVeytown, about 125 acres under cultivation, balance well timbered; two large orchards, grapes and cherries in abundance; three-story log-house, 32x34, fountain and well pumps at the door, barn 98x48, and all necessary outbuildings, all in good repair.

No. 2.—Within view of No. 1, contains 90 acres, 45 or 50 acres cleared, barn and house quite new, one of the finest orchards in the country, 130 apple trees, about 300 peach trees, pears, cherries, grapes, all coming into bearing, fountain and well pumps. This is considered one of the most desirable locations in the country. For further particulars, address,

PETER S. MYERS,
27, 4t. McVeytown, Pa.

Wm. M. Lloyd, D. T. Caldwell,
Altoona, Pa. Tyrone Pa.

LLOYD, CALDWELL & CO.,
BANKERS,

Receive monies on deposit, and pay interest if left 6 months, at 4 per cent per annum, or 5 per cent. If left one year.

Special contracts made with parties acting a administrators, executors, guardians, and persons holding monies in trust. Dealers in every description of Stocks and Bonds.—Government Securities made a speciality.

Gold and Silver bought and sold, and a general Banking business transacted.

CABINET MAKING & UNDERTAKING

The undersigned keeps on hand and manufactures to order all kinds of Furniture. He is also neatly fitted out for conveying the dead to their last resting place.

Manufacturer of the Common Sense Dasher Washing Machine. Shop at the Cross Roads, near Warrior's Mark, Pa.

JAMES S. COX.

A Washing Machine may be seen and purchased at this office. v6n48tf.

A Card.

Drs. D. Fahrney & Son, Uroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.

7-10- 1 yr. pd.

Excelsior Bee Hive.

This hive being now well established is extensively manufactured, and for sale. $3 for single hive, also Bee-keepers Instruction, 15 cents single copy. Liberal inducements to agents. Address S. B. REPLOGLE,

RoaringSpring,
7-12-ms. Blair Co. Pa.

THE
Christian Family Companion

Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements; that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
TYRONE, PA.

ticed by our brethren in America: D. P. Saylor, Jacob Reiner, and J. Quinter.

Calls for Committees.

XXXVIII. 1. A request for a Committee to visit the West Branch church in Darke county, Ohio, to settle difficulties. This was granted and the following brethren were appointed: H. D. Davy, James Quinter, Samuel Mohler.

2. A request for a Committee to visit the Pine Creek Church, Ogle County, Illinois, for the same purpose. This was granted and the following brethren compose the Committee: Samuel Lehman, Martin Myers, and Michael Sisler

3. For a Committee to the West Conestoga and Chiques Creek Churches, in Lancaster county, Pa., to settle difficulties. The following are the brethren appointed: Jos. R. Hanawalt, Samuel Lehman, Daniel Fry, John G. Glock, John Metzger, and F. P. Loehr.

4. A request for a Committee to the Sugar Creek Church, Allen county, Ohio. The following brethren were appointed: Abraham Airbaugh, Abraham Flory, John Brillhart, Noah Henricks, and Samuel Mohler.

5. A request for a Committee to visit the Milmine church, in Piatt county, Illinois, to settle difficulties in said church. The following brethren were appointed: J. R. Gish, George Gish, Daniel Neher, and D. M. Holsinger.

6. A request from the Limestone Church, Washington county, Tenn., to settle difficulties. The following brethren were appointed on the Committee, Peter Crumpacker, Abraham Neff, and B. F. Moomrw.

7. For Elkhart Valley Congregation, for the same purpose. Jacob Berkey, C. Wenger, Jacob Miller, of Portage; D. B. Stutsman, and A. Whitmore.

Requests for the Annual Meeting.

XXXIX. 1. A request from the brethren in Northern Ohio, for the A. M. in 1872.

2. A request from the brethren in the Elklick Church, Somerset county, Pa., for the A. M. in 1873.

3. A request from Northern Indiana, for the A. M. in 1874.

There being but one request for the A. M. in 1872, and that from the brethren in Northern Ohio, the meeting will be held, the Lord willing, at the usual time, with the brethren in that part of the Brotherhood. Information in regard to the place at which it will be held, and other particulars, will be given in due time.

Brother Christian Custer, of Philadelphia, was appointed to confer with the R. R. Companies, in regard to obtaining half fare privileges.

The meeting closed as it commenced with devotional exercises. And after thanking the Lord for the pleasant season of Christian fellowship which many of his children enjoyed, and after commending ourselves to the protection of his providence and the word of his grace, the brethren and sisters separated with mingled feelings of joy and sorrow, produced by the reflections awakened by the occasion.

Standing Committee and Officers.

John Zug, Moses Miller, John Wise, D. P. Saylor, David Long, Peter Crumpacker, Solomon Garber, Martin Cossner, David Derrick, F. W. Dove, D. J. Peck, J. P. Ebersole, H. D. Davy, J. Miller, Jacob Karns, George Hoover, D. Fry, John Metzger, John Harshey, Benjamin Beeghly, and James Quinter.

Companion Steam Print, Tyrone, Pa.

MINUTES
OF THE
ANNUAL MEETING
OF THE BRETHREN,

HELD IN

LITTLE SWATARA CHURCH, BERKS CO. PA

On the farm of Bro. Merkey, May 30, 31, and June 1, '71

On Monday afternoon the Standing Committee met, and organized by the appointment of the necessary officers.

On Tuesday morning the Meeting was opened with devotional exercises and the reading of the fifteenth chapter of the Acts of the Apostles; after which the business commenced. Upon the reception of the papers from the delegates from the District Meetings, it was ascertained that the following subjects were designed to come before the General Council. They were accordingly considered and acted upon as herein stated:

Query I. What is to be done when a church needs a brother in the second degree of the ministry, but lacks confidence to advance the one that is oldest in office; yet, out of necessity, the church has tried twice to advance him, but was opposed each time by the majority of the members voting against him?

Answer. The brother should be informed of the cause of such opposition, so that he may have an opportunity to remove it:—and if he can remove the cause then the church may and should advance him; but if the cause is not removed, then the church may advance the next one in office.

II. Inasmuch as the brethren assembled in Annual Council in 1868 saw no inconsistency in Deacons rising to their feet to exhort, and as some of the Elders, when installing Deacons still charge them to keep their seat, would it be inconsistent, when thus charged, for them to rise to exhort?

Answer. We think all Deacons should have the privilege to rise when it becomes their duty to speak, and that Elders, when installing Deacons, should observe this decision.

III. Does the Annual Meeting of 1871 claim Salem College, of Bearbon, Indiana, to be under the auspices of our Brotherhood?

Answer. It does not regard it as a Church-School, or conducted by the general Brotherhood, though it is under the auspices of members of the church, and is supported by those who patronize it, and not by donations of the church.

IV. Will this District Meeting approve of the following amendment to the plan of holding Annual Meeting: Let the Districts send one delegate to represent them on the Standing Committee, and each congregation send one representative; and these to compose the Annual Meeting, and all queries to be decided by that body alone?

ANSWER. We think it best not to make the change asked for, at present.

V. Is it according to the Gospel for a brother to swear his life against a man for any cause?

ANSWER. Not according to the Gospel.

VI. Whereas, the Eastern District of Maryland has decided that our colored brother, Elias Fisher, be authorized to preach the gospel to the colored people, and since he was installed there have been exceptions taken to the manner of his promotion, will this Annual Meeting confirm the decision of the Eastern District of Maryland.

ANSWER. In relation to the above case it appears, from what this A. M. has learned, that there has been a failure on the part of the Elders in the District to authorize brother Fisher to preach, and owing to said failure, a brother in the second degree installed him, by the laying on of hands. As this was a departure from the practice of the church, we think it was very improper; and, while we recognize brother Fisher as a minister among us, we consider him only in the first degree, regarding the laying on of hands as conferring no official authority whatever.

VII. Should not this District adopt measures to provide and supply ministerial aids for churches where there is no preacher? and, also, to fill calls, and open missions, preach the gospel, and introduce the principles of the Brethren in the many sections within said District which they have not yet reached?

ANSWER. This Annual Meeting approves of the suggestions in the above query, as it is very necessary that churches or bodies of Brethren in which there are no resident ministers should be assisted. And, inasmuch as there are many localities where the Gospel, as preached and practiced by the Brethren, is not known, we think the District should adopt such measures as it judges best calculated to answer its purpose.

[NOTE.—This query came to the Annual Meeting without any answer.—It was the duty of the Standing Committee to form an answer to it, and submit said answer to the General Council. The above answer was accordingly formed and submitted to the Committee, and received the unanimous vote of the Committee. But, owing to the fact that it was not answered, it was deferred, when first introduced, and was afterwards overlooked. It then occurred to the mind of the Clerk that it had been overlooked, and he regretted it very much. Having an opportunity to do so, he mentioned the circumstances to several of the Standing Committee after the meeting closed, and they thought it might be put on the Minutes. We, accordingly, insert it, not as having received the sanction of the General Council, but that of the Standing Committee.—CLERK.]

VIII. Will the District Meeting petition the Annual Meeting to reconsider and revoke Article 27 of the Minutes of the Annual debates, so that their influence extends into neighboring churches, causing trouble there?

ANSWER. We consider it the duty of the Elders of the surrounding churches to take notice of such churches and set them in order.

XXXIV. Inasmuch as the Annual meeting of 1870, Art. 12, has decided that applicants for baptism should be asked whether they belong to any secret order, and as our Fraternity is opposed to all secret societies, would it not be well be adopt some plan by which the members may be interrogated yearly, before we hold our communion meetings upon the subject of secret organizations?

ANSWER. We consider it necessary to interrogate members upon the subject alluded to in the query, where there is any reason to believe they belong to secret societies, but any thing further we think unnecessary.

XXXV. According to Art. 14, in Minutes of 1869, can the Church tolerate a brother who assails the Annual Meeting by writing against its decisions in the periodicals of the Brotherhood?

ANSWER. We think it is wrong for a brother to do so, and any doing it, should make satisfaction to the Church.

XXXVI. Would it not be more consistent with the gospel for the brethren to adopt a difinite name in writing letters of recommendations?

ANSWER. We think it would be good to head all our letters of recommendations as follows: We, the German Baptists, send greeting.

XXXVII. Whereas, This A. M. finds to its great regret, that the subject of Feetwashing in its single and double mode, as the difference is called, has produced serious difficulty already among us, and threatens still greater difficulties in the future. Questions relating to this subject have come from different localities in the Brotherhood, and it has assumed such a degree of importance, as to commend it to the serious and prayerful attention of the Brotherhood. Under these considerations, with much prayerful reflection, the propriety has suggested itself to us of calling the Elders of the Brotherhood together to consider this matter, as the Apostles and Elders did to consider the case of circumcision, Acts 15: 6. We have, therefore, concluded to request all the ordained Elders of the Brotherhood to meet in the fear of the Lord, and under a due sense of their responsibility, in solemn assembly, on Whit-Monday, 1872, at the place of our next Annual Meeting, to dispose of this subject as the peace and prosperity of the Fraternity require.

In the meantime, no church should be organized under the single mode, neither should any church change from the double to the single mode.

And in order to obtain all the information possible to present unto the Council of Elders above alluded to, we appoint the following brethren as a Committee to ascertain as far as possible which was the first mode prac-

See also minutes of 1866, and a paragraph under the heading, "The Organization of the Annual Meeting."

XXVII. Is it advisable for a brother to serve as manager or teacher of a college or high school, as the tendency thereof is to lead many of the brethren from the simplicity that is in Christ, and also to divide the brotherhood?

ANSWER. Inasmuch as the A. M. has admitted the propriety of a high school as a private enterprise, see Art. 51, 1868, we cannot prohibit a brother from engaging in teaching in such an institution. And as it regards the fears that many entertain of the tendency of such an institution to lead the brethren from the simplicity of the Church, this will depend upon the character of the institution. And to guard the Salem College against any such tendency, this Annual Meeting advises the Elders of the Church District in which the college is located, to take into its charge all the teachers and scholars of said college, who are members of the Church, and require of them to conform to the general order of the Drotherhood.

XXVIII. Would it not be better to dispense with the District meetings entirely, and go back to the plan of 1848 for holding the Annual Meeting?

ANSWER. We think it best not to make the change asked for.

XXIX. Will not the Annual Meeting make it binding on all the churches to furnish all members moving from one place to another with letters of recommendation, or a reason why not when asked?

ANSWER. The churches shall give recommendations, or a lawful reason why not.

XXX. Inasmuch as the brethren are misrepresented and abused by enemies saying the Brethren's Encyclopedia is our discipline kept secret by a few leading brethren, would it not be better to advise the publisher to have no more bound?

ANSWER. We do not recognize the brethren's Encyclopedia to be a discipline of the Church, but we consider the reasons given in the query insufficient for making any change in regard to publishing it.

XXXI. Would it not be best to allow all brethren in the second degree of the ministry, to represent the churches in Annual Meeting, and sit on the Standing Committees if sent by the District Meeting?

ANSWER. We think it best to make no change.

XXXII. In order to avoid imposition on churches, should not all the members of the Church, and especially travelling preachers be furnished with a certificate properly signed, showing their standing in the church?

ANSWER. We consider it advisable that members of the church under the circumstances alluded to should be supplied with certificates.

XXXIII. What course should be taken to bring into order an individual arm of the Church, which is much out of order in regard to wearing of apparel, and implicated with the world in attending school exhibitions, and Meeting passed A. D. 1856, relative to the Holy Kiss.

ANSWER. This Annual Meeting thinks it best to make no change of Article 27, 1856.

IX. Is it in accordance with the gospel for the brethren to belong to the Building and Loan Associations now organized in different parts of the country?

ANSWER. We advise the brethren not to unite with such Associations until they understand them properly, and are satisfied that uniting with them does not conflict with the Gospel.

X. Is it the duty of the church to support a widowed sister over three score years old, and who has nephews who are members of the church, and these nephews being able to support her?

ANSWER. We agree to defer this subject to our next Annual Meeting

XI. Is it according to the gospel and the order of the brethren in case a member wishes outside testimony to prove his position in a matter of difference between members in the church, to have said testimony qualified by an oath or affirmation?

ANSWER. We consider it not according to the gospel for members to require outside evidence under oath or affirmation.

XII. Does the gospel teach that the brethren are bound (by the gospel) to aid one another in case of loss, and if so, ought they not to establish their own insurance companies, and not in those of the world?

ANSWER. We conclude to defer this question unto our next Annual Meeting.

XIII. Would it not be in harmony with the Scriptures and the counsels of our brethren, when there is considerable difficulty in a church, and the cause of the Master suffers in consequence thereof, for the Elders of the adjoining churches to visit said church and set things that are necessary in order?

ANSWER. We consider it would be in harmony with the Scriptures and the order of the brethren to do so.

XIV. Is it considered right for a brother in the ministry to exercise his own judgment in reference to remaining in or moving out of the church in which he was chosen; or must he remain in said church or district until the brethren there see proper to let him go?

ANSWER. We consider that it would be best for all ministering brethren, before leaving a church, to counsel it; and it should spare him if it can do so.

XV. Would it not render more general satisfaction if churches which have difficulties to settle would, when they fail to settle them, call upon the Elders in the adjoining churches to come to their assistance; and if, in case a committee be after that needed, let them apply to their Annual District Meeting instead of our General Conference for said committee; and let it be selected from the churches which compose said District Meeting, saving much expenses,

ANSWER. We think it best to make no change in regard to the authority for appointing committees to make a final settlement of difficulties.

XVI. When a brother has fallen into the judgment of the church, and it takes an action in his case to the dissatisfaction of the brother, and he wants a rehearing, or an investigation of the church's proceedings, what is the proper course to be pursued to get a rehearing?

Answer. The expelled member shall first apply, through the officers, to the church which acted on the case; if, however the officers refuse to bring it before the church, the Elders in the adjoining churches may call said church together, to ascertain whether it will grant a rehearing to the expelled member.—But, if the church refuses to grant a rehearing, then the expelled member should obtain what names of the members in the church he can to a petition to the Annual Meeting for a committee to investigate the case.

XVII. Will not this Annual Meeting recall the privilege granted to establish Sunday Schools, especially where the church is not entirely unanimous?

Answer. We do not recall the above privilege; but where the establishing of Sunday Schools would cause trouble or divisions, brethren had better desist from introducing them.

XVIII. Is it right for members of the church, even Elders and Deacons, to make dinners or feasts on Sundays, or on other days, spending much time in baking and cooking, and setting their tables with many luxuries, and then inviting other members and such as are not members, to come and feast with them; and then, while eating, be engaged in vain conversation, such as jesting and joking, and perhaps eating to excess?

Answer. We consider it utterly wrong for brethren to do so. See Eph. 5; 1 Peter, 4.

XIX. How is it considered for members of the church to attach themselves to the Washingtonion Mutual Live Stock Insurance Company?

Answer. We consider that brethren should not join any society by which they jeopardize their non-resistant principles.

XX. Can the church hold a man and his wife both members of the church, when the one will not live with the other under any circumstances whatever.

Answer. We consider that the Elders in the adjoining church shall investigate the case and dispose of it according to its merits and the principles of the gospel. Being informed of the case that gave rise to the above query, we name John Metzger, Samuel Lehman and Daniel Fry to attend to it.

XXI. Inasmuch as the Annual meeting has decided that it is not improper to secure a debt by mortgage, (See Minutes A. M., 1825, Art. 2,) would it be proper for a brother to close such mortgage when the debt is not paid according to contract?

Answer. We have no objection for brethren to secure money by mortgage, but we cannot advise brethren to close a mortgage by a process of law.

XII. We desire an explanation, with an answer, on the words "again and again" used in answer to query 27 of A. M., 1866, as the word or words again and again is or are not Scripture language. Hence, how often must an offending member be admonished, to be admonished again and again, before an action can be taken against him?

Answer. We still feel, as the brethren have always felt, that is difficult to lay down a definite rule to apply to all cases concerning the subject alluded to in the query. We think that the wisdom of the churches should dictate the proper method of treating such cases. Where the general conduct of members is such as becomes the Gospel of Christ, and there seems to be no inclination to follow the fashions of the world, and their apparel is modest and not gay, forbearance should be exercised toward such members, hoping they will in time adopt the plain garment, as this is considered one of the peculiarities of our fraternity, and in accordance with the Christian grace of simplicity taught in the gospel. In cases, however, where members, instead of conforming to the order of the brethren in plainness of dress, conform to and follow the fashions of the world, such should be dealt with more rigorously; and if, after several admonitions, there seems to be no improvement, they should be dealt according to Matt. 18. And in dealing with such cases, both the salvation of souls and the purity of the church should be kept in view.

XXIII. If a speaker's or visiting brother's wife dies and he marries a woman that is not a member of the Church, can he still officiate in his office? A scriptural decision is requested.

Answer. We think he can, for where there is no law, there is no trangression.

XXIV. Whereas it is generally understood by the brethren, that members of the Church are not permitted to attend places of merriment, such as State and County Fairs, celebrations, circus shows, mass-meetings, and political conventions, etc., and as we cannot find any thing in the minutes on the subject, a decision from the A. M. is desired.

Answer. We consider that the answer given by the Annual Meeting of 1859, Art. 14 covers and applies to all the cases referred to in the query.

The answer to query 14, in the minutes of 1859, reads as follows: "Such brethren should be admonished not to attend such places, and if they still persist in doing so, they should be dealt with according to Matt. 18 ch."

XXV. Will the Annual Meeting permit brethren and sisters to attend animal shows?

Answer. This A. M. can give no such permit.

XXVI. Is there not some way of bringing members to an account who speak disrespectfully of, and disregard the counsels of A. M. and District and Sub-district meetings?

Answer. Such members should be admonished, and if they will not hear, they should be dealt with as transgressors.—

Christian Family Companion.

BY I. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—JESUS. At $1.50 Per Annum

VOLUME VII. TYRONE, PA. TUESDAY, JULY 18, 1871. NUMBER 29.

The Christian's Departure.

SELECTED BY D. B. SELL.

Here is a hymn which transends anything I have seen in school poetry, and I think you will concur with me that there are few things in poetry half so beautiful. The heart must be cold indeed which can read or hear it without emotion :

"The hour of my departure's come,
I hear the voice that calls me home;
At last, O Lord, let trouble cease,
And let thy servant die in peace.

The race appointed I have run,
The combat's o'er, the prize is won ;
And now my witness is on high,
And now my record's in the sky.

Not in mine innocence I trust,
I bow before Thee in the dust ;
And through my Savior's blood alone
I look for mercy at Thy throne.

I leave the world without a tear,
Save for the friends I held so dear,
To heal their sorrows, Lord descend,
And to the friendless prove a friend.

I come, I come, at Thy command,
I give my spirit to Thy hand ;
Stretch forth Thine everlasting arms,
And shield me from the last alarms.

The hour of my departure's come,
I hear the voice that calls me home ;
Now, O my God, let trouble cease !
Now let thy servant die in peace."

Hamilton, Mo.

Selected for the COMPANION.

The Land Beyond.

When trials thickly strew our path,
And earthly comforts fail,
'Tis sweet to raise the eye of faith,
And look beyond the vale.

Here joy is but a passing day,
And darkness follows light ;
But of the land beyond we read,
"And there shall be no night."

Here sickness bows the forms we love ;
We watch the couch beside ;
And see the last long labored breath,
The ebbing of life's tide.

We press the cold and pallid brow ;
We close the beamless eye ;
And think how sweet will heaven be ;
Where loved ones never die.

As precious blessings in disguise,
Our sore afflictions come ;
And how they worked out good for us,
We'll know when we get home.

The tokens of a Father's love,
Should be a heavenly chain,
To bind our hearts to other scenes—
The rest that doth remain.

How great, how wondrous great the love,
That did for us prepare
In the good land that lies beyond,
A home so bright and fair.

Oh, let us press more earnest on !
The rest will soon be found,
What, though this be a troubled vale,
All, all is peace beyond.

B. A. STONER.

Union Bridge, Md.

Selected for the Companion.

Longing for Home.

Longing for home—for that peaceful home,
Where there is rest forever more,
Where white-robed ones forever roam ;
Along the radiant shore.

My soul grows weary 'mid the strife,
And conflict here below ;--
Up yonder lie the fields of life –
And how I long to go.

Longing for home—for the happy home,
Where tears are never shed ;
Where loving hearts shall never weep
Afore their ghastly dead.

No sorrow shall be felt above,
No sickness and no pain,
But all shall blend in perfect love
Beneath Messiah's reign.

Longing for home—that beautiful home,
The city of crystaline gold,
Where glorious scenes, and blissful joys
Man's lips have never told.

A million harps with music ring,
By angel fingers pressed—
The song of the Lamb, they sweetly sing,
In that sweet home of the blest.

Longing for home, yet I would say: –
My Father, thy sweet will,
And if thou bid thy servant stay,
'Mid scenes and conflict still.

I'll labor in thy vineyard here
Till thou dost bid me come;
Then heaven I know will seem more dear,
When thou has called me home.

POLLY ULLERY.

Something You Can Do.

If you cannot speak like angels,
If you cannot preach like Paul,
You can tell the love of Jesus,
You can say he died for all.
If you cannot rouse the wicked
With the judgment's dread alarms,
You can lead the little children
To the Savior's waiting arms.
Let none hear you idly saying
There is nothing I can do,
While the sons of men are dying,
And the Master calls for you,
Take the task he gives you gladly,
Let his work your pleasure be,
Answer quickly when he calleth,
Here am I, send me, send me.

Melchisedek.

There have been different articles written upon the above subject ; and although I do not consider myself more wise than my brethren who have written, yet I hope my understanding may not darken the subject, or make it more "mysterious."

To begin with, I will say, I understand the Bible does give his parentage, birth and death ; but the Jews' record of their priests does not, because he was not of the order of Aaron, and died long before Aaron was born.

His proper and individual name was Shem. He was the son of Noah Now brethren, don't be excited above measure, we can give good reasons for our conclusion

Shem lived until Isaac, Abraham's son, was fifty years old He was living, therefore, when Abraham returned from the slaughter of the four kings. Shem, "without contradiction," was greater than Abraham. Shem spent ninety-eight years of his life with Methuselah, and hence had time to become acquainted with that venerable man, who had seen Adam, the first man; for Methuselah was born 243 years before the death of Adam Hence Shem could have re-received such information from Methusela, which Methusela received from Adam; and no doubt did receive such information. Therefore, in point of knowledge, Shem was greater than Abraham, and the less was blest of the greater.

But some say "Abraham is called the friend of God." Very true, and Shem is called, in the Bible Melchisedek, which is as Adam Clark gives the interpretation of the Hebrew Malchi tsedek, my righteous king or king of righteousness. Hence he is made like unto the Son of man, as his type or representative. In his office he was a priest of the most high God. Kohen, which has its root in the Arabic kahana, signifies to approach, draw near, have intimate access to; and from hence, to officiate as priest before God; and thus have intimate access to the divine presence; and by means of the sacrifices which he offered and received counsel, and information relative to what was yet to take place."

Thus we find that Melchisedek, being a priest of the most high God, represents Christ in his sacerdotal character. Melchisedek was not of the order of Aaron, or of the Levitical priesthood. Therefore, in the Jewish Record of Priests, he is "without father, without mother, without descent, &c." But if I am correct, and I think I am, that Shem is called Malchi tsedek, or in English, Melchisedek, then there is not much difficulty in the matter; the apparent "mystery" vanishes at once."

Written in love by

JOHN WISE.

Searcy Hill, Pa.

For the Companion.

Christ the Great Physician, No 3.

Having now briefly noticed that there is but one great Physician that can cure the sin-sick soul—the soul languishes, sickens and dies in sin, without divine aid—we will in this No. endeavor to show the reader the necessity and importance of applying to this great Physician at once. Delay is dangerous: "Now is the accepted time." Has your soul been diseased but a short time, your salvation is near: a cure is easily effected. But have you been long in the service of Satan, laboring for that hard paymaster, whose service has gradually worn from your innocent natures the heavenly beauty of the Divine image, the soul's wants will not be so easily alleviated. Therefore, young readers, it is to you we shall make our brief, but earnest appeal.

We will suppose you to be within easy reach of God's saving grace; not having been long subject to vice and its allurements, you are not far from the kingdom of God. Therefore though the poison of asps be upon your tongues, having already swallowed the bitter dregs of his abominable cup until your inmost souls are contamnated with sin, Jesus is able, and Oh! how willing, too, to save you.

Like an invalid whose case may be very critical, but who has been afflicted but a short time, is deemed curable by practical physicians, so you may, if you at once apply to the great Physician of souls, be saved from condemnation, by freeing yourselves from sin and purifying yourselves in obeying the truth.

How frequently do we hear of the condition of invalids becoming so critical that the aid of physicians is all in vain, all for the want of proper treatment in the first stages of disease. "You waited too long;" "you, perhaps did not call in the physician soon enough," is often said while looking upon the lingering patient, scorched with burning fever or languishing with the dreaded consumption. And you, my dear travelers to the bar of God, will you let the soul-destroying hand of Satan press you down deeper and deeper in guilt, until your condition becomes unsafe, until you are no more able to rise from your sinful slumbers and obtain the aid of Him who is now so able and willing to save you?

Will you suffer sin to reign in your mortal bodies, until that deceiver at last ensnares you in his great net and drags you down the vortex of black depair? Notice, for once, the fatal effects of sin upon old age—upon those who have suffered the wasting and sin-oppressing hand of the enemy to bear them down in iniquity until their very hoary headed appearance is enough to make one's blood run cold. Their disheveled locks are silvered over for the grave, while their hearts are full of the deceitfulness of sin, their souls,—I shudder to speak it,—contaminated with sin. Their tired limbs and faltering steps will soon cease to bear up their frail bodies; and then the silent tomb must be their abode. Bid them look up higher if you will and you will be wasting words. This evidently has been the case.

Just now the case of an invalid (an aged sinner) reaches my memory.—For over three score years he has toiled in the service of Satan. And what has he gained to boast of?—Nothing at all. Though he has heaped unto himself riches until his store house and barns are full, his labors have been in vain; and undoubtedly his life will be a failure. But let me tell you know his life might have been a success. Had he in the days of his youth obeyed the commands of the great Physician of souls, and not slighted the counsels of him whose merciful hand—that once bleeding hand—held forth a crown of life, he would have been eternally blessed.—But the still small voice of Jesus he heeded not. Straws (riches) he foolishly heaped up, while mercy and a crown of life was offered him; and now he is wont to die as he lived.—And shall it be so? Shall mortal man end his days in sorrow, and take up his abode in deep dispair? "Is there not balm in Gilead?" "Is there no Physician there?" Jer. 8: 22—Yes, reader, Jesus has a balm for every wound. Seek him at the foot of His cross and live. "Will ye die when there is a universal remedy?—Jesus has it.

F. M. SNYDER.

For the Companion.

One Lord.

"One Lord, one faith, one baptism.—Eph. 4: 5.

Every unprejudiced mind, we believe, is capable of understanding this plain declaration, found in the word of the Lord, in its true light. It has been spoken by the authority of him that has commanded, and it must be done.

The word of the one Lord is not yea and nay, but yea and Amen.—Jesus is the one Lord, because he is the "Author of eternal salvatian to all them that obey him" He is Master in authority, because he is the Son of the Eternal, who has given into his hands all power; and with him he was "well pleased."

Jesus is the one Lord; we need none other: he has done all that will be done on the part of God. If Jesus is Lord in commanding, we should be servants in obeying; and if he is the only Lord dwelling in our hearts, there is nothing which he has commanded that we feel ourselves unwilling to obey. There is but one way that we can prove ourselves servants of the one Lord, and that is by a full observance of his commandments are adapted to our wants. This carnal propensity, which is imbibed from our federal head—implanted in our hearts—must be subdued: this must be rooted up. The commandments of our Lord are calculated to bring the carnal mind into subjection. We should not treat the commands of Jesus with disrespect; for they are intended to lead us in the ways of the Lord. We may sometimes get out of the way by feeling a little proud—a little above our Lord; but there is a remedy in the commands of Jesus to bring us down: "If I your Lord and Master have washed your feet, ye also ought to wash one another's feet." "The servant is not above his Lord." This is what this simple command is for. And so it is in every degenerate principle in the heart of man.—The Word of God is intended to separate carnality from the heaven-born principle; and if we have the one living faith rightly applied, his commandments are not grievous. Jesus is not a hard master; but with pleasure and delight we will go on serving our Master in patience and delight.

But poor man has lifted the puny arm of rebellion against God. One step after another he is leaving the simplicity of the Gospel. Truth and error are interwoven in their hearts; and to them they are as twin sisters; they cannot discern between the two principles. At them the plain declarations of the word of God are hurled in full force, "He that saieh he loveth God and keepeth not his commandments is a liar and the truth is not in him." In the face of all such plain declarations, is it possible that men have became so stiff-necked and uncircumcised in heart, that they will reject what they can see and might understand, and cleave to that which they cannot honestly see nor rightly understand? But such is the way with men; and awful is the responsibility resting upon such. It is very reasonable that where there is more than one Lord harbored in the heart there are diver faiths, which lead to more than one mode of baptism. But my Brethren, especially my young brethren and sisters the right and best way for us is to have the one Lord, and we will be sure to have but the one faith, and the one mode of baptism.

SAMUEL C. BASHOR.

Whitesville, Mo.

For the COMPANION.

Who Are the Least Esteemed?

The apostle directs the church at Corinth, when they have matters pertaing to this life, to set them to judge who are least esteemed in the church. The new translation renders it: "Set them to judge who are of no esteem." He ridicules the idea that they cannot judge such small matters. He makes use of both sarcasm and irony; and exclaims, "I speak to your shame, is it so that there is not a wise man among you, no not even one that shall be able to judge between his brethren." He alludes, no doubt, to things of this life, to money or property, whether it be of small or large amount, and calls them the smallest matters, and very reasonably concludes that small matters should be judged by suitable agencies.

"Set them to judge who are least esteemed in the church." Who does the apostle mean by the least esteemed in the church? Does he allude to the heathen? Certainly not, they are not in the church, and of course cannot be esteemed in the church.—They may be esteemed by brethren who are in the church. The brethren also have no control of them. His language also is imperative; he speaks of a controversy about things of this life, and orders an umpire to be set, and the church is to set it. He unmistakably interdicts their going before the heathen

Does he mean the preachers and other officers of the church? Not at all; because they were in his day, and also are now, the least esteemed in the church; and the apostle directs that in certain cases some should be doubly honored.

And also the officers of the church are ordained, are already set for work and labor, and more important matters than to set as judges between their brethren in things pertaining to this life. The apostle in all his writings seems to set a very low estimate on all perishable objects; and his instructions in the text would indicate that the cultivation of this principle was in his heart at the time the ink flowed from his pen and the text was formed: a proper estimate of all earthly things, and a tribunal to adjust disputes arising from them, on the same level of importance with them, dissuades and discourages men from litigation and controversy, when the agents and means of judgment are very humble and of no esteem, as the new translation has it.

Yes the litigants would conclude we can do better by settling our difficulty ourselves, than to appear before such an humble tribunal. But the more esteemed in the church are averse to appointing such ordinary brethren to set as judges We fear for justice sake, we have a sacred zeal that things should go right. We feel that apart from ourselves a case of wisdom in a man is exceedingly rare; but the apostle would have confidence. It is to be regretted that many very good meaning people differ with the apostle in some other things also. We know that letters are not wisdom, and learning is not judgment. The apostle does not allude to persons outside the church, neither does he mean the officers of the church.

Now these include all mankind, except the private members of the church. And this is the class the apostle has allusion to in the text.—Now is not there a wise man among them?

HENRY NEIKIRK

Sharpsburg, Md.

The universal want is love. Christ is the exhibition of love. Love is above everything else. There may be reverence, there may be fear, and they may be filial; but they are not to be compared with love. Christ was made to love. He is the very incarnation of the soul.

Laziness begins in cobwebs and ends in iron chains. It creeps over a man so slowly and imperceptibly that he is bound before he knows it.

Hold on to the truth for it will serve you well.

A man may well bear his cross patiently while on the road to wear his crown.

For the Companion.

Look Up.

"And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh." Luke 21: 28.

The above words were spoken by our Lord and Master, in answer to a question asked by some, about the sign of the destruction of the temple. The first he said was, "Take heed that ye be not deceived;" and after telling them what shall happen before his second coming, he said: "Then look up." I understand him to mean that we then shall watch and pray, that we may be ready to meet him in the air.

Brethren and sisters, if we look back, we must believe that the time is near at hand when he will come again and will not tarry. Then let us "look up" and try and be ready, when our redemption draweth nigh; that is, when our Redeemer will come and gather his elect from the four winds of the earth. Let us look up and behold our Savior, with an eye of faith, at the right hand of God, there intereeding for us.

We also learn in the word of God, that when the children of Israel, journeyed through the wilderness, fiery serpents were sent among them, and when they were bitten by the serpents they died. When Moses prayed for the people, the Lord told him to make a fiery serpent and set it upon a pole; and he made a serpent of brass, and if any was bitten, when he looked upon it he lived. And we also learn in the word of God, that, "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up."

From the foregoing passage we learn, that as the serpent was lifted up, for the saving of those that were bitten, so must the Son of man be lifted up for the saving of all those that were bitten with sin, through our first parents. But if the children of Israel had not looked up and behold the serpent, they would not have been cured of of their bites. And just so with us, if we who are sinners by nature, do not "look up" with an eye of faith and behold our Savior on the cross, and become true followers of him in all things, his dying upon the cross will avail us nothing.

And as we learn that the same Jesus that was nailed to the cross will come again and receive his elect to himself, so, brethren and sisters, let us "look up," with an eye of faith, and behold him in his mansions above, which he went to prepare for us, if we hold out faithful to our end; and we must believe that the time is near at hand, that we must all meet at the judgment bar of God, and there receive our reward according to our labors. So let us all "look up" and try and be ready whenour Redeemer doth come.

NOAH B. BLOUGH.

For the COMPANION.

An Incident.

In this vicinity some years ago, a man with horses and wagon, drove into a large stream of water which had overflowed its banks. The man was a stranger, and instead of inquiring whether the stream was fordable, boldly drove in. But oh, horror! the strong deep current overthrew his wagon, and emptied its contents into the stream. The horses and wagon finally swam to the shore, but the man who caught hold at some bushes, was left standing in the water above his waist, calling for help. It was in December: the water was cold and the stream was rising; and as it was near a village, it was not long until a multitude of spectators were gathered on the shore, and the man still calling for help. The deep muddy stream, rising higher and higher, came up under his arms, and he was still calling for help. The spectators on the shore took counsel what to do to save him. Some thought so, and others so. Finally they agreed, that if they had a horse which could swim, some one would venture his own life to go into the stream and try to save the man from drowning.

Then, a neighbor who owned a strong trusty horse nineteen hands high, a good swimmer, soon had his beast on the shore. By this time the stream had risen up to the man's neck, who still held on to the bush calling for help. There was not a moment's time for delay: an effort must be made to save the man or he will drown. But who would risk his own life? At first when the horse was ready, no one seemed willing: but finally a young man stepped forward, mounted the horse, rode into the flood and safely reached the man; when, after several efforts he succeeded in getting the man, cold and stiff, behind him on his horse, and then safely swam his horse ashore. A kind neighbor took the man to his home, made him comfortable, changed his wet clothing and dried them for him, so that in a few days he went his way.

But what do you think? That ungrateful man whose life was saved, never offered his benefactors the smallest thanks for their kindness. He is a man still living in good circumstances. He gave the man who had risked his life to save him from the flood, two dollars. Oh, how ungrateful! Is a man's life worth only two dollars? Is not every man who saves another's life, a savior? And should he not even now yet bring good gifts to his savior? I think he should. It is only he who has a tender feeling for his fellow man, who will risk his own life to save the life of a stranger. Should this saved man ever come to a state of sensibility, I think he will be ashamed of himself, and, going to his savior and benefactors, he will ask forgiveness for his ingratitude, and will also do all in his power to make amends.

And now the whole world is standing in the water, but how few are calling for help, while the stream is bearing along thousands upon thousands of Adam's race? The stream is running down, down, DOWN to the dreadful gulf—to everlasting destruction, "Where their worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched!" The Most High has taken counsel, and sent his own Son into the waters, not upon a big horse, but riding upon "a colt, the foal of an ass," to be a Savior and a Deliverer, of all those who call for help. And will we who estimate the value of life, after our salvation on the shore of everlasting deliverance be ungrateful to our Benefactors? No; there we will see and understand what an inestimable price was paid for our deliverance from eternal woe, and we cannot cease praising and adoring our Savior for our so great salvation.

JAS. Y. HECKLER.

Harleysville, Pa.

For the Companion.

The Faith and Patience of the Saints.

BY EMMANUEL UMBAUGH.

The lives of the early christians are often referred to as instances of remarkable zeal for the cause of their blessed Master; yet we believe that their zeal was according to knowledge—that the knowledge which they obtained by being inspired with wisdom from heaven, through the agency of that blessed Word which was made flesh and dwelt among men, forcibly impressed them with the important truth that Jesus was the only teacher whose teachings they could safely receive—the only friend in whom they could confidentially confide, and the only king under whom they could faithfully live. They felt that heaven is the only place of real enjoyment and the only place of lasting pleasure; hence they considered the pleasures and excitements of this world of no value to them, and their minds were entirely absorbed in the great work of getting themselves ready and urging others to prepare to enter the "house not made with hands," which is as durable as the rock of eternal ages, and the walls of which the unpolluted hands of holy saints can never wear. They made this their life-work and formed resolutions that they would pursue their calling openly and vigorously before the world, with the determination that they would boldly oppose wicked men, the powers of Hell and the Devil, even if they should be obliged to sacrifice their lives in the mighty struggle.

That they were true to their profession is evident from the fact that many of them sealed their faith in Christ with their own blood, which also manifested their patience. Peter, it is true, appeared to be too weak to march bravely through the storm and temptation and fire of persecution, when in the presence of his Master he was overcome by the spirit of fear and denied him three times. This, however, was designed to show him that his conversion was not yet complete—that his faith was not quite strong enough, and that he should form a new and stronger resolution to serve his master faithfully. We think that this circumstance brought about a complete change in Peter's heart, for he wept bitterly. Perhaps his cheeks were now more tender with penitential tears than ever before.

Sometime after this, the blessed Savior, who had now extracted from Death his venomed sting, asked Peter whether he loved him. Since he denied him three times, our Lord asked Peter three times whether he loved him. It seemed to grieve Peter when the Savior asked him this question three times, thinking, perhaps, that because he had so shamefully denied him before his crucifixion, the Lord had lost confidence in him, yet he said "Lord thou knowest that I love thee." We know that Peter was numbered with the apostles, and became a zealous worker in the Church of Christ, and possessed the power of healing by miracles. He was an earnest missionary and labored faithfully in advancing the kingdom of Christ throughout the world; and it is said that he preached and established churches in England.

After having returned to Rome, Peter found the people strangely drawn away from the teachings of the gospel, by a false teacher, (we find there were false teachers then as well as now, who objected, perhaps, to Christ's ordinances as being essential,) who was trying to get the people prejudiced against the gospel of Christ. This impostor was called Simon Magus who was so bold that he even attempted to deceive the two apostles, Peter and Paul, by trying to make them believe that he was the Savior; but by this attempt to convince them of the truth of his statement, combined with the stability of the two apostles, he lost his power; for while by some secret contrivance he caused himself to ascend toward the heavens Paul and Peter prayed that, for the good of the cause of Christ, the Lord should speedily expose his vile imposture; whereupon he fell to the ground and was so badly bruised that he died in a short time afterward. This impostor was a friend of the emperor of Rome, who, when he heard what was done determined to have revenge. It is true that this is only a historical account, but it so completely agrees with, and fits every corner of what is said by St. Ambrose a writer of the third century, that we have no very good grounds for disputing it.

There is no doubt but St. Ambrose was acquainted with those who personally knew both Paul and Peter. Here is a part of the history of Ambrose relative to the matter at issue:— "When the people perceived the danger to which St. Peter was now subjected, they prayed him to quit Rome and repair for awhile to some secure retreat that his life might be spared for the benefit of the church. Peter, with great reluctance, yielded, and made his escape by night, but as he passed the gate,he was met by a person in the form of his great Master, and on asking him whither he was going, answered, "to Rome, to be crucified a second time;" which Peter taking for a reproof of his cowardice, returned into the city, and was soon after apprehended and cast, together with St. Paul into the Mamertime prison. Here the two faithful apostles spent the greater part of a year, during the latter end of their lives, singing and praising God. This is the patience of the Saints. Paul was beheaded while Peter was crucified with his head downward. This is the faith of the Saints. St. Andrew, Peter's brother, was also crucified, but was fastened to the cross with cords, instead of nails in order that his death might be the more tedious and lingering. When he came near the cross he said: "I have long desired this happy hour. The cross has been consecrated by the body of Christ hanging on it. I come, therefore, joyfully and triumphing to it, that it may receive me as a disciple and follower of him who once hung upon it, and be the means of carrying me safe to my Master." After having offered up his prayer to God, he was fastened to the cross upon which he hung teaching and instructing the people during two whole days, after which his spirit fled. This is a combination of the faith and patience of the Saints.

For the COMPANION.

Crime Succeeded By Remorse.

The conscience of the sinner speaks to his soul with a keen, piercing voice, the echo of which reverberates with a hollow, condemning sound upon the ears of his understanding.— When once subdued, his crimes resolve into a trickling remorse; his heart vibrates in a broken mass; loose tears descend from his melted eyes, as tokens of the anguish within. His being swells of wicked spirits, threatening momentarily his eternal destruction. Suddenly a thousand fiery darts, discharged from the weapons of demons, pierce his aching heart at once, drinking up, with a thrilling, hissing noise, his very life. Many sullen, fiendish spirits watch over him while he groans beneath the shackles of mighty bondage; rousing all their power, they rush upon him irresistibly with all their influence of torture and destruction, and hark! the continuous roar of his torment still increases!— Thus he is borne across the limit of time to the brink of hell; and if not delivered and rescued from his enemies by an Almighty hand, his existence is torn into a thousand fragments, each of which is forced to endure greater punishment than the whole had suffered. Thus lost without hope, he is tossed amidst the floating clouds of smoke and fire, in which is heard the hungry howl of distant famished monsters, waiting for their prey; while eternity overwhelms the scene and horror looks more horrible. Heart gnawing anguish, fainting, weariness, weeping, wailing and gnashing of teeth, commingled with the roar of flames and frightful demons, sometimes decreasing, then renewed with a louder rage, and in direful echoes, bellowing round through all the dreary labyrinth of the fate of the wicked. And are these the awful consequences that await the sinner? Oh! how can the human mind endure the thought of its fellows suffering the assembled mischiefs that await, and finally and eternally besiege the souls of the guilty, without laboring and sacrificing all to save them? JOHN B. GARVER.

Shirleysburg, Pa.

For the COMPANION.

Partiality Of The Brethren.

This expression is frequently made against the brethren; that they are too partial, because they do not consent to the principles that are taught among the different denominations. The principles of popular religion are such as to meet the approbation of the people at large; preaching for doctrine the invention of men. Solomon says, when searching for wisdom, "Lo! this only have I found, that God hath made man upright; but they have sought out many inventions;" working for the popularity of their institutions, and not for to save the people from their sins. The definition of the word partial, is more strongly inclined to one thing than to others. And if we are strongly inclined to do the will of God, desiring the sincere milk of the word instead of following the traditions of men, let us suffer for well doing. When Christ asked his apostles, "But whom say ye that I am? Peter answered and said, thou art the Christ, the son of the living God. Christ answered and said, And I say also unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church: and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." And if the gates of hell shall not prevail against the house of God, or his church, it will and must stand forever. And there is but one church; he has but one kingdom upon earth: "Therefore, whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock; namely, upon that foundation which no other man can lay. "In the beginning was the word, and the word was God; and Christ says, "I and the Father are one;" hence the word is Christ and is the rock. Christ never appointed two ways to Heaven, nor did he build a church to save some, and make another institution for other men's salvation. "There is no other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved, but the name of Jesus:" and that name is not otherwise given under heaven, than in the church. Christ has appointed his kingdom upon earth as the only way unto eternal life; and if an angel will preach a doctrine different from Christ, let him be cursed. Hence it becomes us to be partial against that which is contrary to the word of God; but let us not be partial amongst the brethren.

We find the word partiality, but three times in the New Testament. When Paul charged Timothy with certain rules that he was to observe, in reproving, at the conclusion he said that he should "observe these things without preferring one before another, do nothing by partiality."—1 Tim. 5: 21, meaning amongst the brethren. And again in the 2d chapter of James 17th verse, referring again to the brethren, that we shall not have more respect for the rich brethren than for the poor, but rather be loving and merciful. The wisdom from above is pure, peaceable, gentle, full of mercy and good fruit, without partiality, and without hyprocrisy, and this is required of us as christians, to exercise towards all mankind, without distinction as to color or sect.

"And without hypocrisy;" not consenting to erroneous doctrine, "be ye steadfast and unmovable," possess Jesus Christ in deeds and words.

How do we know that we are in the church of God? He that keepeth Christ's commandments, dwelleth in him and he in him.1 John 3:24. If we keep his commandments we know that we are his sons and daughters.

It has been said that the Brethren have only the shell and not the kernel. But where there is no shell there cannot be a kernel; and where there is a shell there may be a kernel.

Can no person be saved except he belongs to the Brethren? is a question that I am frequently asked.—Jesus Christ did not come into the world to judge, (why shall I judge?) but the words that he spoke shall judge the people: they have the power to save and to condemn; "for the gifts and calling of God are without repentance." "Let God be true and every man be a liar." Let a man compare himself with the word of God, and he will judge himself. B. F. MASTERSON.

For the COMPANION.

Is Methodism of Christ?

Being now about to enter upon a series of investigations, we desire to do it in the fear of God, through love of the truth and good will to man, earnestly desiring not to offend, but to seek and search after the truth as it is in Christ Jesus our Lord; for he tells us that his words are truth: even in his prayer to his Heavenly Father, saying, "Father, sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth." And says again, that the words that he spake were not his, but the Father's which sent him.

When we look around and see the many so-called Christian organizations, which, of late, have been instituted by man, and so antagonistic to the plain and simple instructions of Christ, we are compelled to gaze with awe and amazement to witness the fallibility and weekness of man. While beholding the many large revivals around us, even in these our West Virginia hills, claiming they are doing many wonderful works, we cannot help but think of the Saviour's language: "Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils, and in thy name done many wonderful work? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity."—Mat. 7: 22, 23. Who can keep silence under those serious reflections, seeing that many will be deceived in the great day of accounts?

We are informed from the history of the Methodists themselves, that Methodism is of John Wesley, and also hear them instruct their large audiences that John Wesley is the founder of Methodism. During the past few years we have repeatedly weighed serious objections against many of the doctrines and peculiar features of Methodism. I being born of Methodist parentage, taught and brought up under the faith; but being convinced of the error by the word of God, have, for some years past, tried to examine the Scriptural claims, polity, and influence of the system of Methodism, in a calm, candid manner, and can see nothing in it corroborating with the teachings of Christ.

It was claimed some time ago, to me by an Elder in the M. E. church, when he ascertained that I was not a member of his fraternity, that God had given to himself the different kind of fruit trees, and different kinds of vegetation, for his own glory; even so had he given to himself the different denominations; for they were all aiming at the same place, and would ultimately get home to heaven if they were right at heart; if the heart is right, that is all that is necessary.—Then he went on to state the large membership now on this American continent, and the large amount of good his society had accomplished in the last few years. Now the fact that a society has accomplished a large amount of good, is not sufficient to prove that it is a Christian society, or church of Christ, or even entitled to the name of a church. If so, we might canonize heathen philosophers, and modern sinners, and pronounce our Bible and Tract societies scriptural churches of the Lord Jesus.—The Romish Apostacy has in its time accomplished much good, and Martin Luther in his day vastly more; yet the former is "the man of sin," and the latter, a manifest harlot, the fruitful mother of infidelity, and the curse and bane of religion in Germany. A man, or society, propagating a wrong system, or practice, always does more evil than good.

We only drop these remarks to connect the impression that it matters little what we believe, so we are sincere; and that there is no doubt about a man's salvation, if he has done a great deal of good. Let us say to our friendly readers that we find no such doctrine taught in the New Testament scriptures; but it is there taught us by the Apostle, that "because they receive not the love of the truth," God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: that they all might be damned who believed not the truth. And Peter also says: "But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you." Paul also says, by the spirit of inspiration, Eph. 4: 13, 14: "Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ: That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive." And further, 1 Cor. 3: 11, "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." "But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon." 2d Tim. 3: 1–5, "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy. Without natural affection, truce breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away." And in the fourth chapter, "I charge thee, therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom; preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine. For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but upon their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth."

And yet in the face of all these witnesses that we have just quoted, our Methodist friends will tell you that it is no difference what you believe, so the heart is right. I tell you nay, never, until the earnest seeker asks the question as did Saul of Tarsus, when on his road from Jerusalem to Damascus: "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"

Look with me, if you please, on the wide domain of America, and see the distracted state of Christendom, and see the many so-called churches in vile hostility to each other! Will the world ever believe on Christ aright, while there are so many antagonistic to the true and fundamental principles of religion? If all the world were this day converted and banded under the colors of these hostile parties, would it be a millennium? Peace would no more be restored than now, since opposites and contradictions must of necessity antagonize.

The state of things as they now exist, is frightful to the biblical scholar indeed; but storms of tenfold fury await the time to come, "when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power." What we now feel is but the gentle breathings of a zephyr in comparison to the whirlwind that is rushing upon us. The language that fell from the lips of the Savior himself, "Many will say unto me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name cast out devils, and in thy name done many wonderful works? Then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me ye that work iniquity."

The great questions of this age are which of the claimants, out of so many, is the true church of Christ? Ought Christ alone to be obeyed in religious matters, or should the authority of Bishops and Elders in the Methodist society be regarded? The contest in a word is between Bibleism and Manism, between Christ and John Wesley, between the followers of Christ and those of Wesley; Christ says, "If I your Lord and Master have washed your feet, ye also ought to wash one another's feet," and further says, "He that loveth me keepeth my commandments, he that loveth me not, keepeth not my sayings."—Wesley says the injunction is not necessary—it is one of these little nonessentials—if only they are right at heart; and his followers still will tell you the same. And when they tell us these things we can't help but think the passage of scripture is fulfilling in our ears where it says, they shall teach for doctrines the commandments of men, and make the word of God of none effect. The two contradictory propositions cannot be equally true. If Christ has set up a visible kingdom in the world, never to have an end, and which the gates of hell should not prevail against, he must have given a definite organization: he surely has given a rule, an example, a pattern for its building and government.

We understand the term kingdom to embrace three particulars; first a king, second, a law, and third, subjects. The history of the past few years, and the present posture of affairs convince us that the principles and practices of our relative societies are fiercely antagonistic. The kingdom of Christ is not thus divided against itself. Both are not—cannot be—Scriptural Churches. The Savior tells us that a kingdom divided against itself cannot stand. And the kingdom of Christ is not thus divided. The mechanic will tell you that two, seven or twenty things cut after the same pattern will be alike and bear the image of the original.—The Mathematician will tell you that things equal to the same thing, are equal to each other. If churches were organized according to Divine authority, immediately under his direction and pattern, would they not be in all respects similar and bear the same image, and we be one people, in one fold, under one Shephard, obeying the law of the King alike, and be of one mind, and be in the unity of the faith as the law of our King directs us? To bring this serious and solemn subject to our own business and bosoms. If Episcopacy is right, I am wrog; or if I am right, Episcocy is wrong. If they are the true followers of Christ I am anti-Christ and vice versa; since are opposing each other and so antagonistic to each other's practical faith.

A follower of Anti-Christ! fearful, awful thought indeed! Lord, is it I? I make tis appeal as a serious inquirer, occupying life's honest place—the steps to the tomb. But thanks be to God for a revelation of his will, as revealed in the New Testament Scriptures, there giving us the law of his kingdom to perform literally as fellow laborers in the Lord's vineyard. Oh, let us be up and doing, seeing there is so much to do. Can our ministerial brethren, under those solemn reflections, keep still, and cease to proclaim the whole counsel of God to a gain-saying and stiff-necked people? May the Lord give us wisdom from above, with an understanding heart and willing mind to render humble obedience in all things whatsoever he hath commanded is, that he may be with us always, even unto the end of the world.

ANDREW STALNAKER.

[To be Continued.]

THE faith that unites to Christ, separates from iniquity.

PROUD hearts and lofty mountains are always barren.

YOUTH'S DEPARTMENT.

For the COMPANION.

Be Kind.

Dear young readers of the Companion; I say to you with a sincere heart, be kind to each other. You cannot know how soon the Angel Death may come into your midst, and take the dear one to whom you spoke so harshly but a short time ago; and O! what sorrow, what anguish of spirit, what a lifetime of sadness, will be yours, as you reflect, conscience stricken, upon that last unkind word, spoken in anger to a dear little brother or sister, or perhaps a kind father or mother, upon whom you look for the last time, and who now lies pale and motionless before you in the embrace of death. You had not time, or were not willing to ask forgiveness, and now it is forever too late.

Again I say, be kind to each other. I love you, I desire to see you happy. I long ond pray for your salvation. I hope olso, that all who read this paper, or hear it read, will also desire and long for eternal life; or in the words of our Savior, "hunger and thirst after righteousness." I often imagine that I see an older sister or brother reading aloud to the younger members of the family.—This is a lovely sight to see. What is more pleasant to behold than a group of happy children, united in love and harmony. It gives joy to the parent's hearts, and their friends will all love them God will be pleased with them, and will favor them with mercy and loving kindness all the days of their lives. May the Lord grant us all his peace while we live, and after death a rest at his right hand in heaven, is the prayer of your friend.

NANCY A. YODER.

Somerset, Pa.

Hold On.

Hold on to your tongue when you are ready to swear, lie, or speak harshly.

Hold on to your hand when you are about to strike or steal.

Hold on to your temper when you are angry, excited or imposed upon.

Hold on to your heart when evil rssociates seek your company.

Hold on to your good name, for it is more precious than gold.

Christian Family Companion

Tyrone City, Pa., July 18, 1871.

Brethren's Almanac for 1872.

The time has now fully arrived for collecting and compiling matter for our Almanac for 1872. We therefore invite the attention of every one who feels interested in the enterprise, to our wants in this matter.

1. We make the list of the address of ministers one of the leading features in the work, and desire to make it as accurate as possible. In accomplishing this we must depend entirely upon correspondents. We therefore request some one from every congregation to give us, 1st, The names and addresses of ministers in said congregation, that are not in the Almanac for the present year. 2nd, The name and address of the housekeeper, or elder. 3rd, The names and addresses of ministers who have died since Jan. 1870, with the date of their death. 4th, Give the names and particulars of ministers in adjoining congregations, where you are not certain that some one else is attending to it.

Brethren please help us to make our next list complete and accurate, or as nearly so as possible.

2. We solicit brief biographies of prominent brethren in the early history of the Church; reminiscences of peculiarities, remarkable circumstances, incidents, anecdotes, and stories of the Brethren, either individually or collectively, such as would be proper to relate or read at the most refined and devotional fireside.

3. The names of the Districts and the number of congregations in each District, with the place and time of their next counsel meeting, with the name and address of the Secretary.—This is an important and useful item, and we trust the particulars will be promptly furnished us.

4. Contributions of Essays, Sketches, Poems, and Selections.

Now brethren and sisters, "strike while the iron is hot." All matter for publication should be in our hands by the twentieth (20th) of August. Do it at once, while the matter is on our mind.

Consistent advertisements will be inserted at twenty cents a line, minion type.

Obituary.

It becoms our duty this week to chronicle the death of a worthy citizen, Mr. S. C. Laird, who departed this life on the 5th instant, aged 29 years. Disease, Dysentery, of which he suffered about eight days. He was for several years Principal of the Common Schools of this place, and was an able and efficient instructor. Latterly he was engaged in the Book and Stationary business; and was an enterprising citizen, and a kind and obliging neighbor, just such as we regret most to lose. Peace be to his ashes.

"It has been suggested to our mind that the article in No. 24, headed "Dunkers" should be printed in tract form, and sent free, or at small cost, to every member or friend of the cause. "Sow the good seed."

Landon West.

It might do much good to circulate the article referred to more widely, by adding foot notes, and explanations. Well, we are ready for any good work, and will do our share in this. We will get up the article with necessary corrections, in good style, at $31 for 5000 copies, and retail them at 75 cents a 100, postpaid.—Who will go our surity for $31, for the said purpose?

Newspaper Extract.

By request we insert the following from the Kansas City Bulletin. It was written by a special correspondent, who set out on a Sunday morning in search of instruction in regard to the Brethren. We condense and extract the following:

Having heard that there is in this city a congregation of the curious people called by the world "Dunkards," by themselves Brethren, and by history "German Baptists," which sometimes worships in the Milton st. Methodist Church, the Lounger betook himself last Sabbath morning toward the Southeast and in search of instruction. We learned that a number of

GERMAN BAPTISTS.

of whom we were in search, resides at 1606 Hackberry street, which is a sort of headquarters for that denomination. Leaving the devout Minister to talk to his little audience, we repaired to the designated house and were speedily introduced to the presence of quiet George R. Holsinger and his soft-voiced wife. Father Holsinger informed us that the congregation numbers about seventeen. They have lately been to a communion meeting in Clinton county. Some of them attended a meeting on the line between Douglass and Franklin counties, Kansas. The yearly meeting this year is held at Myerstown, a pleasant village of 1300 inhabitants in Lebanon valley, Berks county, Pennsylvania. Father Holsinger kindly gave us a copy of the Brethren's Almanac for 1871, which contains much statistical matter concerning the denomination and referred to Brother George Myers, the Minister, who resides at 1826 Walnut street for further information. Bro. Myers has recently come from Pennsylvania, and has a large and interesting family.—The ministers of the Brethren are not ordained in the sense commonly understood, and are not paid for their labors; but they are selected from the congregation in consideration of their especial fitness for the ministry. The Brethren take care of their own poor, almost working up to the Quaker standard in this respect. They have one missionary, who is supported by voluntary contributions. Father Holsinger is well known in this city, and his name is influential among his people. His son, Colonel Frank Holsinger, is also one of our leading men. He was connected with the Eighth Pennsylvania regiment, and was badly wounded during the war. Another son was with the One Hundred and Tenth Pennsylvania.

* * * * *

"The "Dunkers" have many peculiarities which they strictly observe.—

It is to some extent their intention to be a "peculiar people," believing it both a privilege and a dudy. They are, with here and there a few exceptions, non-resistants, and will not bear arms under any circumstances. [We are aware of no exemptions from the principles of non-resistance. "Here and there" a few break over and violate those principles, as others do also by going to war, swearing, conforming to the world, and by other transgressions, but those generally go out from us, for they are not of us.—We no more tolerate resistance than we do war; in fact it is our non-resistant principles that keep us out of war.—EDITOR C. F. C.] They believe in implicit obedience to the government. [Implicit submision would be more applicable. We do not believe in implicit obedience to the government when it demands anything of us that conflicts with our implicit obedience to the Gospel; but when we cannot obey we nevertheless can and must submit. Ed. C. F. C.]

They were the staunchest of Union people during the late war, and contrived to find ways to manifest their sympathy, although they would not fight. They vote, but donot generally take a very active part in politics.

Excepting the first paragraph, the article is copied from the correspondence to the Philadelphia Press, and published in Companion No. 24.

Fearful Riot.

A terrible riot occured in New York city, on last Wednesday, 12th instant. The Orangemen which is the name of a society having for its object the upholding of the Protestant religion, and opposition of the Catholics, and instituted in 1795, in Ireland. had appointed the day for a general parade.

The catholics threatened interference, whereupon the Mayor and city authorities forbade the parade; but the Governor, believing that such interference by the municipal authorities was not in accordance with our boasted freedom, gave orders that the Orangemen should be protected in their rights.

At the appointed time the procession was formed, and the riot ensued, resulting in the killing and wounding of a number of persons. Great excitement prevailed during the entire day. These religious riots we fear augur no good to the peace-loving citizens of the country.

American Sunday School Worker—We learn from the Publisher, J. W. McIntyre, Saint Louis, that the above named Magazine is constanly receiving subscriptions from all portions of the country. It deserves it. We advise schools to try the Lesson papers, to be used with or without the Magazine. Specimens of either, no doubt, the Publisher would forward on application; or what would be better still, order them three months on trial.

Answers to Correspondents.

S. A. MOORE: You say, "Enclosed please find seventy-five cents."—Cant see it.

WM. H. PULLEN: Only one dollar and a half.

THE FAMILY CIRCLE.

The Footprint.

"What is that, father?"

"It is a footprint, my son, and is a sign that some one came into our front yard last night."

"It must be," replied Benny, "for there could not be a footprint without there had been somebody there to make it."

"That is true, Benjamin; and now show me some of the footprints of the Creator!"

Benny looked up in surprise.

"I don't understand you, father," he said.

"Well, who made all these beautiful flowers? Who made all these splendid trees? Who hung the clouds up in the sky? Who made this great round earth? Who set the mighty sun flaming in the heavens, and started the bright moon to rolling round the world?"

"Why, God to be sure!"

"Then all these things are but footprints of the Creator. They are a sign that there is a Creator, and that he has been here. See this ice-plant I hold—man never could have made it; notice that beautiful lady-bug crawling on the leaves—man could not have made it; see all the glistening grass, hear all the chirping birds—man did not, could not make them! God made them, and they are all simple footprints of the great Creator, to prove to us that there is a great and good God, whom we should love, worship and obey. Do you understand?"

"Yes, sir, I understand very well now, and I thank you for teaching me that lesson."—Kind Words.

"I Am Not Afraid."

BY MRS. J. E. M'CONAUGHY.

A happy time little Robbie and Rosy were having "see-sawing" on a board laid across a big log. At first both were very timid, and clung on tight to the board. But by and by little Robbie grew bolder, and would let go his hold when he went up "sky-high." Just as he began his descent, however, his chubby hands were pretty sure to come down too. After a few such daring flights, he grew still more careless, despite little sister's cautions.

Just as he was laughing and tossing his arms the gayest, saying, "I ain't afraid," a sudden jolt brought him tumbling to the ground "all in a heap." Little Rosy too got a bad fall, and mother had various little bruises to doctor that evening. If Robbie's daring never brings him into worse troubles, we shall be glad.

When a boy says, "I ain't afraid," when there is real danger ahead, which he might as well avoid, it is no sign of bravery, but of foolishness.

A lad once was playing about on board a vessel in Buffalo harbor. He was very daring in his feats up in the rigging, and more than once was cautioned by the sailors. But he wasn't afraid. Presently there was a crash, and on looking around there lay the poor lad's crushed and bleeding body dead on the deck.

A great many boys have gone down to their death because they were not afraid to go into the rum shop and billiard-saloon. Always remember it is manly and noble to be afraid of sin in all its forms.

CORRESPONDENCE

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Notes of Travel.—J. S. Flory.

Left home May 19th. On the 20th attended a church meeting with the brethren at Meadow Bluff, Greenbriar county, W. Va.; 21st, public preaching at the Blue Sulphur Springs;—large attendance, 6 additions by baptism. Same evening went to Lewisburg.

On the 22nd went by stage to the celebrated White Sulphur Springs, at which point, on the morning of the 23d, at 3 o'clock, set out by Railroad for Pa.; passed through the great Blue Ridge tunnel; thence, via. Washington city and Baltimore, to York, Pa., where I arrived same night. Next morning at nine o'clock, arrived at Lancaster City, went to the house of Eld. Jacob Reinhold, with whose kind family I tarried until next morning, the 25th, when I went out by railroad to the communion meeting in the White Oak branch near Manor. At this meeting several additions by baptism. Next morning went farther on to the communion meeting near Ephrata.

From said communion was taken by brother Joseph F. Royer to his home. Meeting at night near by.—Next morning was taken by brother Royer across the mountain to meeting in the Brethren's meeting-house. Thence to Richland, meeting in the afternoon in the Brethren's meeting-house in town. After meeting five additions by baptism. Meeting at night in the Tulpenhocken meeting-house.

Next morning was taken by brother Royer to place of Annual Meeting, where I tarried until Thursday the 1st of June, when, about noon, was taken by brother Jacob Reinhold to Richland, where I got aboard the train for Harrisburg, at which point I tarried until next morning, when I went by railroad to Baltimore, thence to Washington city, and up the beautiful Shenandoah Valley to Harrisonburg, where we arrived about sundown.

Took the stage for Stanton, but lay over on the road at the house of cousin and brother John Young, where we had a pleasant sojourn for the night.

Next morning went on to Stanton by stage, where we tarried until 4 P. M., when we set out by rail for White Sulphur Springs. Arrived there at 10 P. M.; by stage to Lewisburg where we arrived Sunday morning at 2 o'clock. At 8 o'clock set out afoot for Blue Sulphur Springs; was soon met on the way by a son of bro. J. Forrer, who kindly took me to the Springs, where I met a large congregation and preached a funeral discourse.

Next morning set out for home, where I arrived at night, and found all well; thanks to the Lord. Many pleasant recollections recur to our mind, in consideration of the many kind favors shown us by the dear ones we were permitted to associate with. We saw many loved ones we had not seen for a long while, and formed the acquaintance of many whom we shall ever hold in high esteem. Once more were we permitted to look upon the blue mountains, that border on the Shenandoah Valley, that brought to our remembrance our youthful days, days of joys and sorrows, past but not forgotten.

On the morning of the 16th of June, in company with brother Elias Maffit, we set out on a trip down the Valley of the Great Kanawha River. The evening of the 17th, arrived at the house of brother J. Starkey, Kanawha county. Meeting in the evening in the Methodist meeting-house at Cross Lanes. Evening rainy, but a small congregation. Next day I had to fill three appointments in the neighborhood: one at 11 A. M., one at 4 P. M., and one at night. Good turn-out of people and quite an interest manifested.

Next day we spent in viewing some of the lands for sale in that section. Brother Maffit, late from Pa., had some idea of making a purchase, as the country is a good one, and lands cheap. At night we had meeting again in the neighborhood. Had an interesting meeting. Next morning we came to Charleston and in the evening set out for home where we arrived next evening.

I would call the attention of brethren who contemplate making a move, to that section of country. It lies bordering on the Kanawha River on which steamboats ply daily, and on the bank of which a railroad is now being constructed. The lands are naturally productive, (good, healthy climate,) and lie a short distance below Charleston the capital of our growing state; which place is destined to make a large city. The lands are as yet cheap; they can be had, 2 to 4 miles back of the river, at from six to 20 dollars per acre. Some farms, with considerable improvement, can be had for from eight to ten dollars per acre.

There are four members of the Brethren there now, and a prospect for a good congregation, could there be regular preaching there. A ministering brother is much needed there. I pray the Lord may influence some one to go there and be instrumental in building up Zion.

Brother Henry: We are, thanks to our heavenly Father, enjoying good health. I have very little church news, save that we have visited our brethren in their seasons of love, in Clinton county, Mo., while others of us have attended a love-feast in Douglass county, Kansas. All seem to feel refreshed and strengthened thereby, and encouraged to press forward in the discharge of every known duty. Our little meetings have their influence, as the enclosed article in the Kansas City Daily Bulletin of June 18th will show, as it treats mostly of the Brethren.—Straws are said to tell the course of the wind. When we awaken a respectful attention to our creed, our point is more than half gained. Many and varied are the remarks concerning the "Dunkards." Some are inclined to laugh at us, for (as they call them) "our simple ways"; but all give us credit for candor.

It will require time to make much progress in this city. All know the difficulties to encounter in the large towns, as our people are mostly agricultural in their tendencies, and seek rather the rural districts. I think this will be overcome eventually, and the first great difficulty is being surmounted by the instrumentality of Salem College. When our young men and women of all classes of industry are educated, many of them will doubtless select other pursuits, and become citizens of our towns and cities, and serve to build up Zion's cause among a class that among us have not been reached. I do not think that we should disparage those of our speakers who have not been educated, and hope I will not be considered as doing so if I say that, had a good education accompanied all their honest zeal in behalf of Christ's kingdom, they would be much more useful. Take for instance our preachers: do not brethren so and so exert a greater influence than this brother or that? Why is it? Because this brother has greater advantages natural or acquired. Hence I hold that to do the greatest amount of good, we should secure all the advantages of the means which we possess. This subject has long been engrossing my attention. When a youth of 19, I attended an institution—Mount Morris Seminary, Ill's. It was a Methodist seminary. It is astonishing to see the means they employed to proselyte the youth who came within their reach, and I do not wonder that our church has lost so many of the young, who should be among the chief snpporters of the cause of Christ. Brethren, arouse to the importance of this subject, and assist the good brethren in Indiana in bearing their cross. I know none of the brethren engaged in this good work, but can bid them God-speed in their undertakings. Should it result in an educated ministry, so much the better,—if in a supported ministry, I have no objection, as I believe the laborer is worthy of his hire.

Yours in the bonds of love.

FRANK HOLSINGER.

Kansas City, Mo.

Visit to Edgar Co., Ill's.

Brother William Hartzler's appeal in the C. F. C. caused us to make a trip to find those brethren and sisters who moved from Pa., and settled in Edgar county, Ill's. So we left home on Monday morning, June 12th. Took the cars at Lima for Fort Wayne, thence on the Wabash Valley R. R., for Danville, Illinois. We however stopped off at Logansport and staid over night with our cousin Joseph Uhl: had a short but quite pleasant interview; then next next morning took the train again, and arrived at Danville at about 11 o'clock. To our great disappointment, the new Railroad south for Paris, was only staked out, instead of cars running; so we took the good and safe old way for it—on foot, 36 miles to Paris; arrived there on Wednesday about 11 o'clock;—went to post office and made inquiry for Philip Siders or George Hess. I was told that Siders lived 11 miles N. E., and brother Hess some nine miles. Thinking that brother Siders could not live that distance from Paris, going to different places, we met a woman in a store that gave us more correct information, who said as soon as her husband came in, they would start with a team in that direction, and could take us to Kline's, who could tell us where to find them.—So we passed brother Sider's, not knowing. They only live five miles N. E. from Paris. Got to brother Kline's about three o'clock, talked a few minutes, then he started out to have meeting that evening, and to our surprise gathered nearly a schoolhouse full. We spoke to the people the best we could, and left an appointment for next evening. Found there members living in a fine country, harvest just commencing, season rather dry. These members need a speaker. They are in general well and alive to their eternal interest.—I made inquiry whether any of our periodicals were read among them, and found none; but got brother Siders to subscribe for the Companion, for balance of the year. I hereby ask our Owen county, Ind. brethren to pay those brethren and sisters an occasional visit. The brethren's names living in that vicinity are, Philip Siders, John Kline, John Darney, George Hess, and others. Geo. Hess lives 7 miles nearly due north of Vermillion station, west of Terrehaute, and Philip Siders, 4 miles north and 1 mile east from Paris. Now brethren from Owen, don't forget this address: Philip Siders at Paris, and George Hess at Vermillion, both in Edgar county, Ill's.

GEORGE LONG.

The War in Kansas.

In an article in the Companion some time ago, on the subject of this "WAR," I asked the question, "Who will be next to say, 'I have quit the use of tobacco, and who next?'" Soon after, however, a brother writes from Kansas, and through the Companion says, "I used the article for twenty two years, and I was induced to quit by reading your paper." And again, quite recently, I received a letter from another brother in Kansas, a minister, who, after writing to us an interesting letter, says, "I have the best of all yet to tell, and that is that I have left off using the weed. I quit about two months ago, and if the temptation never becomes greater than it has been yet, I shall never buy any mor tobacco. He is also a reader of your paper.

Now brethren and sisters, you who have been engaged in this great work for good, are not the above facts again more evidence that our labors thus far in so great a cause, have not been altogether in vain? Brethren let us have more such persuasive, convincing, and heart-gaining articles on this subject as those we have from brethren Lœhr and Bahr. The use of tobacco is one of those evils which sound reason only forbids, and hence we can but reason together on the subject. Could this evil be reached as those of murder, adultery, theft, drunkenness, &c., then would this war be a short one; then this would never at all have become a national affair.

But sound reason teaches us that the common prevalent use of tobacco is a sin of uncleanness; that it is intemperance; that it is idolatry; and since the law does not specify of what those sins consist, sound logic, and common sense must be left to convince its lovers and its slaves that its use may be brought under the head of either of these latter evils.—Then brethren, then sisters, fight on! But use not only those weapons of gold and steel, but also fight as Jacob did of old, leaving Leah and Rachel, the women-servants, and the sons, this side of Jabbok, and there in loneliness wrestle with God till you overcome, and your name shall be called Israel.

With these thoughts let us "trust in the Lord and take courage."

C. C. ROOT

Mirabile, Mo.

JONESBOROUGH, TENN., June 26th, 1871.

To all whom it may concern:—

Dear Brethren and Sisters, having announced in the Companion some time ago my purpose of spending the latter part of the Summer in the north-western states, if I could raise the means to do so again the 15th of June. I therefore take the present method of saying, that I have not as yet been able to raise the requisite amount, as I would not like to start with less than $50.00, and money is very hard to raise in this part of the country.

True, I have received a few dollars from brethren and sisters from a distance, and for which I tender them my sincere thanks, and hope they will yet realize that "it is more blessed to give than to receive."

I have now concluded to postpone the time of starting until the 1st of September, when, the Lord willing, I shall start on the proposed journey; and in the mean time, any remittance however small, will be thankfully received.

The programme is as follows: To visit the brethren in the Valley of Va., thence to Md., thence to Pa., thence to Ohio, thence to Ind., thence to Mo., and back to Alabama again Winter.

It may be that some would be curious to know how I propose traveling over so large a scope of country on the small sum of fifty dollars. To all such I would just say, that I do not expect any thing of the kind: I mean that before I start, I must have fifty dollars at my own option to depend upon in cases of emergency, where there are no Brethren. Paul says, "No man goeth a warfare at his own charges"; consequently I expect the brethren to forward me on from one place to another; but when I get around into Alabama, where there are but few if any Brethren, then I will expect to bear my own expenses.

I would just say in conclusion, to any and all who may correspond with me or remit me money, to be careful to give me their name and address plainly, so that I may be able to return their money if I never use it as intended. I have already received one anonymous letter, enclosing three dollars, from Lancaster, Pa., and signed, "Three sisters in Christ."

Now, dear sisters, please write to me and give your names, so that I may return your money if I never make the proposed journey.

Yours in "the one hope."

JESSE CROSSWHITE.

Dear Brother: On Friday morning the 7th, I received a letter written by order of brother Daniel J. Peck, requesting me to come to his house by Saturday evening, that he was lying sick with Typhoid Fever, and desired to see me. I accordingly went to see him, and to my sorrow found him on his sick bed quite poorly, yet not altogether helpless.—He thought he was some better than he had been a few days before, and felt very happy to see me, and soon told me what his great desire was. He said that he had also ordered bro. Josiah Keim to write to brethren Conrad Kahler and John Swihart to meet me here; that he wished to be anointed "with oil, in the name of the Lord." Shortly after, brother John Swihart came; but brother Conrad did not come: why, I have not learned. As soon as the family could be collected together, the ordinance was attended to. He was anointed with oil in the name of the Lord. Then he told me he had one more trouble on his mind, that he wish to be released of; namely, that he and C. Kahler were appointed to transact business relative to the next Annual Meeting, and now he is not able to attend to it, or to assist brother Conrad as he ought to. He desired me to take his place and assist brother C. Kahler all I can. When looking over the list of business, I find that a great many of the churches of North-eastern Ohio have not reported yet. Now we desire them to report as soon as possible, and address Conrad Kahler, or J. B. Shoemaker, Smithville, Ohio.

The place selected by the brethren of N. E. Ohio, for the next Annual Meeting, (1872) is brother Cyrus Hoover's, Chippeway church, Wayne county. It is considered by all who are acquainted with the place, to be a very suitable one: plenty of water—nice and level to get about, and only one-half mile from Wooster Summit, on the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago R. R.

J. B. SHOEMAKER.

Smithville, Ohio.

MARRIED.

By the undersigned, at the residence of Samuel M. Burger, July the 2nd, 1871, Mr. ABRAHAM J. CLAAR, and Miss MARY M. MOCK, both of Bedford county, Pa.

S. A. Moore.

By Elder Jesse Crosswhite, at the residence of the bride, in Ashe county, North Carolina, on the 28th of May, 1871, Mr. DANIEL B. BOWMAN of Knob Creek, Washington Co., Tenn., and Miss MARGARETTA MILLER, of Ashe county, N. C.

By the undersigned, July 6th, 1871, brother JACOB LIVENGOOD, of Elklick, Somerset county, Pa., and sister ELIZABETH ROMESBURG, of Fayette county, Pa.

S. C. Keim.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with obituary notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In the Salamoney arm of the church, Huntington county, Ind., MINNIE A. PURVIANS, infant daughter of James and Elizabeth Purvians; aged 8 months and 19 days. Funeral improved by the writer from Matth. 18: 2, 3.

SAMUEL MURRAY.

In Nettle Creek Church, Wayne co., Ind., April 13th, of Diptheria, CATHARINE ELIZABETH, daughter of brother Edward and sister Catharine Raffe: aged 1 year 7 months, and 25 days.

Also in the same place, same disease, ANNA MARY, daughter of brother Joseph and sister Christena MYERS, grand child of Edward Raffe: aged 4 years 5 months and 19 days. Funeral services by brethren Daniel Bowman, Daniel Smith, and others.

E. & C. RAFFE.

In the bounds of the Clover Creek congregation, Blair county, Pa., sister SALLY SMITH, consort of brother John Smith;—aged, 65 years 2 months and 10 days. The occasion was improved by G. W. and J. W. Brumbaugh, from the words "Therefore be ye also ready," 24th chapter of Matthew, first clause of the 44th verse.

J. L. Wineland.

In the TulpeChocken church, Lebanon co., Pa., July 3d, sister CATHARINE ZUG, daughter of the late Elder Abraham Zug, deceased, and sister of the undersigned;—aged 71 years and 2 days. Her remains were taken to their resting place, on the 5th, at the TulpeChocken meeting-house, where the occasion was improved by brother C. Bucher from the words, "For whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," Galations 6th chapter, latter part of 7th verse. Visitor please copy.

Eld. John Zug.

In the West Conestoga church, Lancaster county, Pa., May 24th, sister CATHARINE SHERK, consort of brother Emanuel Sherk, and daughter of brother John and sister Elizabeth Royer; aged 53 years 2 months & 9 days.

The said sister and her husband left their home on the above day to visit some of their children and attend meeting appointed for brethren going to Annual Meeting. When they had gone several miles they had to cross the Reading and Columbia Railroad.—A freight train was approaching; the brother got out to hold the horse, which he was unable to do. The horse passed the train, ran up a bank, threw the sister against the last car and killed her instantly. She was a worthy mother and sister. Her remains were brought to rest on the 27th of May, at the Middle Creek meeting-house, in the presence of the largest funeral assemblage witnessed at this place. Text: Mark 13: 33. Speakers, brethren C. Bucher, Jacob Reinhold, and ——— Garber from Ohio.

Our much beloved and dear sister CATHA-

RINE HAINES, relict of Israel P. Haines fell asleep in Christ, on the 30th of January, after an illness of eleven days, aged 77 years 4 months and 36 days. She bore her sufferings with Christian fortitude and resignation, and we believe died in peace with God and all men.

Funeral services by the Brethren, at the Pipe Creek meeting-house, Md. It has pleased God to take from our midst a very kind mother in Israel, and we confidently trust that she has gone to the mansions of rest, to enjoy the fruit of her labors.

David Johnson.

Of Consumption, in Lower Deer Creek congregation, on the 3d of June DAVID MUSSELMAN, Son of brother John and sister Nancy Musselman ; aged 18 years 10 months and 7 days. Before his departure he called some of the Brethren together and made a confession of faith, but too late for the ordinance of Baptism to be performed.

We leave him in the hands of God to await the coming of Christ, when he will gather his jewels home.

Funeral discourse by Elder Jacob Flory & Henry Gish, from 1 Cor. 5 : 12—20.

In the Huntington arm of the Church, Huntington county, Ind , June 25th, of Consumption, BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, son of brother and sister OLIVER ; aged 22 years 2 months and 10 days.

In the bloom of youth he was snatched from among his own associates· A while before he died,he and all the friends thought he was getting better. Perhaps a week before his death he told his aunt that when I would come to my next appointment in their neighborhood he was going to meeting to be baptized ; but alas, just two weeks one day less, before my regular appointment I preached his funeral discourse, from Romans 5 : 12. Young people, warning take.—Surely in the midst of life we are in death.

Samuel Murray.

LIST OF MONEYS received for subscription, books, &c.,

Eld. Geo. Wolf,	$6,00	K. Heckmaa,	1,50
D. B. Klein,	2,00	B. S. Whitten,	1,50
W. H. Landis,	,75	Joseph Myers,	4,00
S. Eiller,	,75	D. B. Gerber,	,75
S. H. Caylor,	2,25	Daniel Artz,	1,50
N. A. Cover,	,75	J. J. Solomon,	,75
E. Williams,	,75	D. Workman	1,20
P. Fahnestock,	1,50	J. S. Thomas,	3,75
David Eshelman,	1,00	J. J. Cover,	,75
J. M. Masemore,	,75	Jane Reinhart,	,63
J. Harley,	1,50	Samuel Lidy,	,75
A. H. Cassel,	,75	Daniel Rodes,	,75
S. Beaver,	3,00	A. Pearsall,	,75

Universal Guide for Cutting Garments.

By which every family may cut its own garments for men and boys, of twenty six different sizes ; for Coats, Pants, Vests, and Shirts, and Ladies' Dress Bodies. Agents wanted to sell State, County, and Family Rights. For Particulars address MILLER & QUINN,

Tyrone, Blair Co., Pa.

SALEM COLLEGE.

The Fall Term of this Institution, (open for both sexes) situated at Bourbon, Marshall county, Ind., will begin Sept. 6th, 1871. A class in Didactics will be organized for the special training of teachers.

For further particulars apply to

O. W. MILLER, President.

BOURBON, IND.

BOOKS

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price, $4.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol., $2.25. Indispensable.

Life at Home; or the Family and its MEMBERS.—Including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed. The Altar in the House, etc. By Wm. Aikman. $1.50 ; full gilt, $2.

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. THOMPSON. Fancy Cloth. $1.00.

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand-book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners, with a Chart for recording the sizes of the different Organs of the Brain, in the Delineation of Character, with upwards of 170 Engravings. Muslin, $1.25.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S R. WELLS. $1.50 ; Extra gilt, $2.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By W. PITTINGER. $1.50.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Beautifully Illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth, gilt, beveled boards. Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75 cents.

Any of the above sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

The Phrenological Journal, An Illus- TRATED, First-Class Family Magazine, devoted o the "Science of Man" subscription price, $3 00 a year By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50, or with the Pious Youth, for $4 00. We commend the JOURNAL to all who want a good Family Magazine, and who does not ?

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post office, county and state written in unmistakable letters, and address-ed [illegible] Tyrone Pa

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEET BINDING

One copy, post paid	0.75
12 copies, post paid	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	$0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN & ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid	$1.00
Per dozen,	10.00

Turkey Morocco, Ger. & Eng·

One copy, post paid,	1,25
Per dozen " "	13.00

Plain Single German

One copy, post paid	.50
Per dozen" "	$5.50

The Christian Harp, containing 32 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP.

Per dozen, post paid.	$0.20
Per hundred, post paid,	1.50

Marriage Certificates.

On good, heavy paper, per doz., post paid,	0.30
" " per hundred, "	2.40
COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.70
Reserved at the office,	2.25
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40

BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.

Single copy, Post Paid	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express,	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	60
German & English Testaments,	.75

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Revised New Testament.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25

32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid	25
25 copies to one person, by express,	5.50
Roan binding, red edges, post paid	50

Where one or two dozen is wanted, in places adjacent to Railroads, they may be sent cheaper by express.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

1780 1871

ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK ?

Use Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

CLEANSE YOUR BLOOD !!

An Alterative and Cathartic, or Tonic and Purge combined, for diseases arising from bad blood ; such as Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Erysipelas, Worms, Chills and Fever, Scrofula, Pimples, Tetter, &c. TRY IT.

Established 1780 in package form. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form which was brought to its present state of preservation and perfection some years later, by Dr. P. Fahrney, Chicago, Ill's, who conducts the trade west of Ohio. Great reputation ! Many Testimonials ! Ask for that prepared at Waynesboro, Pa , and Chicago, Ill's. Beware of Imitations. Genuine retails at $1.25 per bottle. Druggists and Medicine dealers sell it.

Dr P. Fahrney's "Health Messenger" gives the history and uses of the BLOOD CLEANSER testimonials, and other information, sent free of charge. Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.

WAYNESBORO, PA.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price $6.00 per dozen. One copy 60 cents.

TRACTS.—Religious dialogue, 12 pages five cents single copy; thirty cents a doz.

All orders should be accompanied with the money, and the name of person, postoffice county & state written in unmistakable letters

Address,
H. R. HOLSINGER, Tyrone Pa

BEES.

Pure Italian Queen Bees for sale, at $2.25 each. Full directions sent with each order.
I. S. HEDDINGS.
Box 22, Lewistown,
24,1mo. Mifflin Co., Pa.

SHORT HAND WRITING.—Students of Phonography and all others who are interested in the art can obtain instruction books. Send stamp for price list and tracts.
"AMERICAN PHONETIC DEPOT.
Tyrone, Pa.

Excelsior Bee Hive.

This hive being now well established is extensively manufactured, and for sale. $3 for single hive, also Bee-keepers Instruction, 15 cents single copy. Liberal inducements to agents. Address S. B. REPLOGLE,
Roaring Spring,
7-12-ms. Blair Co. Pa.

J. S. THOMAS, & CO.
WHOLESALE GROCERS
and
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
No 305 Race St. above 3rd, Philadelphia,
N. B. Country Produce taken in exchange for goods or sold on commission.

THE PIOUS YOUTH.
A MONTHLY PUBLICATION

Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.

It comes about as near pleasing everybody as any paper published.

One dollar a year in advance.
Address H. R. HOLSINGER,

CABINET MAKING & UNDERTAKING

The undersigned keeps on hand and manufactures to order all kinds of Furniture. He is also neatly fitted out for conveying the dead to their last resting place.

Manufacturer of the Common Sense Dasher Washing Machine. Shop at the Cross Roads, near Warrior's Mark, Pa.
JAMES S. COX.

A Washing Machine may be seen and purchased at this office. v6n48tf.

Wm. M. Lloyd, Altoona, Pa. D. T. Caldwell, Tyrone Pa.
LLOYD, CALDWELL & CO.,
BANKERS,

Receive monies on deposit, and pay interest if left 6 months, at 4 per cent per annum, or 5 per cent. if left one year.

Special contracts made with parties acting as administrators, executors, guardians, and persons holding monies in trust. Dealers in every description of Stocks and Bonds.—Government Securities made a speciality.

Gold and Silver bought and sold, and a general Banking business transacted.

ALDEN'S READY BOOK BINDER.—An article for universal use! For filing or Binding Books, Magazines, Papers, Music, Sermons, Manuscripts, etc., etc. See them at Book Stores and News Stands, or send stamp for circulars, or 25 cents for sample, saying where you saw this advertisement, to BRIGHT SIDE CO., Manufacturers, Chica-Co, Ill.

TYRONE BANK.
TYRONE, PA.

This Bank, intending to do a general banking business, solicits accounts from Banks' Bankers and others. Collections made on all points. Interest allowed on DEPOSITS left on time. Paper discounted on liberal terms.

Wm. P. Orbison,	D. I. Gwin,
John Scott,	H. G. Fisher,
Thomas Fisher,	J. H. Glazier,
Wm. Dorris,	G. C. Wilrins,
G. W. Garretson,	and others.

Beers' Expanding Scroll Water-wheel.

[Patented 1868] This wheel is now running with the overshot, in a Flouring Mill, and is using less water than the overshot. Inventor being a Millwright, and having seen and used all the new waterwheels, does not hesitate to say it is the first iron wheel that can compete with the overshot, and is one half cheaper, simpler and better. For farther information address J. L. Beers and Sons, Millwrights and Manufacturer's of wheel shafting and mill gearing of all kinds, continued Sawmill feed and Sawmill irons.
J. L. Beers & Sons
Cocolamus, Juniata Co. Pa.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine, with Drop Feed, new Take-up, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted First Class, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted traveling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $200 per month. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. Co.
Union Square, 33 East 17th St., New York

For Sale.

The undersigned offers for sale his farms, situated in Oliver township, Mifflin county, Penna.

No. 1.—Containing about 196 acres, 2 1-2 miles from McVeytown, about 125 acres under cultivation, balance well timbered; two large orchards, grapes and cherries in abundance; three-story log-house, 32x34, fountain and well pumps at the door, barn 98x48, and all necessary outbuildings, all in good repair.

No. 2.—Within view of No. 1, contains 90 acres, 45 or 50 acres cleared, barn and house quite new, one of the finest orchards in the country, 130 apple trees, about 300 peach trees, pears, cherries, grapes, all coming into bearing, fountain and well pumps. This si considered one of the most desirable locations in the country. For further particulars, address,
Peter S. Myers,
27, 4t. McVeytown, Pa.

A Card.

Drs. D. Fahrney & Son, Uroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.
7-10-1 yr. pd.

To Nebraska, California, and Kansas, and the B. & M. R. R. Lands.

The "Burlington Route," as called, lies right in the path of the Star of Empire. It runs almost immediately in the center of the great westward movement of emigration. Crossing Illinois and Iowa, it strikes the Missouri river at three points.

These three points are the gateways into three great sections of the trans-Missouri region.

The Northern gate is Omaha, where the great Pacific road will take you to the land of gold and grapes, sunny mountains, and perpetual summer.

The middle gate is Plattsmouth, which opens upon the south half of Nebraska, south of the Platte river, a region unsurpassed on the continent for agriculture and grazing. Just here are the B. & M. Railroad lands, concerning which Geo. S. Harris, the land officer at Burlington, Iowa, can give you all information, and in the heart of them is Lincoln, the State Capital and present terminus of the road.

The Southern gate leads to Kansas, by connections with the St. Joe Road at Hamburg running direct to St. Joe and Kansas City

The trains of the Burlington run smoothly and safely, and make all connections. It runs the best of coaches, Pullman Palace and Pullman dining cars, and should you take the journey for the journey's sake alone, you will be repaid; or take it to find a home or a farm, and you cannot find either better than among the B. & M. lands. where you can buy on ten years' credit, and at a low price.

THE
Christian Family Companion

Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements; that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
Tyrone, Pa.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum.

VOLUME VII. TYRONE, PA. TUESDAY, JULY 25, 1871. NUMBER 30.

For the Companion.

The Narrow Way.

The path of life is said to be a narrow way. A narrow way, unless it is hedged, is easily departed from, and may be difficult to regain: it requires a watchful eye and steady step. But a narrow way is not necessarily a rough one, on which, while he keeps it, the traveler finds it difficult to walk. It is worth while to study the scriptural account of the path of life, contrasted with the broad road that leads to destruction; for it seems that men have by some means found a third way, which answers to neither the one nor the other, and which, if less narrow and exclusive than the former, and less broad and well-peopled than the latter, is more difficult than either. And besides, they are those who call themselves Christians that are toiling on this difficult and dangerous road, mistaking it for the one appointed them.

Jesus tells of two ways only, and throughout the scriptures there is no mention made of any other. He says that one is broad—full, because the gate is wide, easily entered; and because the way is broad, not easily departed from without design. Some have therefore concluded that this way is smooth, pleasant, unobstructed. Jesus does not say so. He speaks of the largeness of the entrance, the plentitude of space, the multitude who walk there, and the destruction in which it terminates. The scriptures speak of it as a crooked, dark, miry, thorny and slippery way. Let not the inexperienced deceive themselves about this road; it is easily found, and easily kept, but an easy walk it is not.

Jesus tells of but one other; and because it is narrow, men have concluded that it is difficult. Jesus does not say so. The scriptures declare that the way of holiness is plain—"a fool need not err therein;" that it is a way of pleasantness and peace, lighted by the dayspring from on high.

The way by which some Christians try to reach their end is a difficult one indeed; but it is not of God's appointing. There is no way-mark of his upon it but what bids them leave it. The erratic traveler, less mindful of the "which he makes for" than of the objects by the way, choosing to forsake the beaten track, trying every defile and plunging into every thicket, meets a thousand dangers that were not in his path. If Christians choose to travel forward thus, it is no wonder that their way is difficult; but it is not religion makes it so. Such is not the path the Savior trod: His is a way of uprightness—straight, direct, uniform; their's is a way of compromise and equivocation; it is neither the broad road of the world, nor the narrow road of the gospel; and since there is no other, it is no road at all, but a traceless and inextricable wilderness. They who stray into it, never know where they are; they see not which way to turn; all is uncertainty.

The word of God is a lamp unto the feet, and a light unto the path of the Christian; but the lamp of God is fixed where he lighted it; it sheds a steady blaze on the heavenward track, wherein they who walk can never be in darkness. But it is a lamp that cannot be removed: men cannot take it down and carry it with them wherever they choose to go. There was a straight way from Egypt to Cannaan; sooner must the Red Sea part its waters, than Israel's steps be turned aside; hosts of armed enemies could not have said to him, "Go around." It was his unfaithfulness that caused him to wander forty years in the wilderness. When spiritual adventurers, who have involved themselves in mazes of doctrinal error, with weariness, fatigue, and many hurts, come back again and find themselves no farther on their way to heaven than if they had walked forward with the company whose sobriety they despised, let them never say they got their hurts, and dangers, and fatigues on the narrow path to Heaven.

N. J. GILLISS.

Ohio, July 13, 1871.

"Jesus Wept:" shall our cheeks be dry?

Selected for the COMPANION.

Portuguese Hymn and Scriptural Reflections.

How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord,
Is laid for your faith in his excellent word!
What more can he say than to you he hath said—
You who unto Jesus for refuge have fled?

"The eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears are open unto their prayers; but face of the Lord is against them that do evil.—And who is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good?" 1 Pet 3: 12,13.

In every condition—in sickness, in health,
In poverty's vale or abounding in wealth,
At home and abroad, on the land, on the sea—
As thy day may demand, so thy succor shall be.

"The God of all grace, who hath called us unto his eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that ye have suffered awhile, make you perfect, establish, strengthen, settle you."—1 Peter 5:10.

Fear not, I am with thee; O be not dismayed!
I, I am thy God, I will still give the aid;
I'll strengthen thee, help thee, and cause the to stand,
Upheld by my righteous omnipotent hand.

When through the deep waters I call thee to go,
The rivers of sorrow shall not overflow;
For I will be with thee, thy troubles to bless,
And sanctify to thee thy deepest distress.

"Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you." 1 Peter 4: 12. "Though now for a season, if need be, ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations; that the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise, and honor, and glory, at the appearing of Jesus Christ." 1 Peter, 1: 6, 7.

When through fiery trials thy pathway shall lie,
My grace, all sufficient, shall be thy supply;
The flame shall not hurt thee, I only design
Thy dross to consume and thy gold to refine.

E'en down to old age, all my people shall prove
My sovreign, eternal, unchangeable love;
And when hoary hairs shall thy temples adorn,
Like lambs they shall still in my bosom be borne.

"Give diligence to make your calling and election sure; for if ye do these things ye shall never fall; for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.—2d Peter 1: 10—21.

[Let all sing triumphantly the song of the Lord.]

The soul that to Jesus hath fled for repose,
I will not, I will not desert to its foes;
That soul, though all hell should endeavor to shake,
I'll never, no, never, no, never forsake!

WILLIAM H. QUINN.

Tyrone, Pa.

For the Companion.

SUICIDE.

Two Great Men Kill Themselves With Their Own Swords.

It may be almost too late to apprise the public of the mad career of two of the most learned men of the present century, but as many of the readers of the Companion may not yet have learned that they have killed themselves, we will relate the circumstance which is as follows:—Two men, Campbell and Rice, who could not agree, met for the purpose of fighting a duel. Campbell drew his sword and threw it at his antagonist, (inflicting a deadly wound,) who in turn hurled it back at Campbell, when both found that they were mortally wounded. This circumstance, which is a spiritual affair, is published, for the benefit of the world, in a work entitled "Campbell and Rice's Debate." Turn to the 252 page of this debate, and you will find that Rice not only gives to Campbell the deathblow, but also kills himself. Campbell, also, wounded himself, and we think mortally too, when he referred to Tertullian, the historian, to prove single immersion; but Rice admits that neither single immersion or sprinkling and pouring are of divine origin. Hence Rice, at least, admits that trine immersion is the only apostolic mode of baptism. Such admissions are not very common among those who advocate the institutions of papal authority. If they are not careful many of them will, perhaps, unintentionally make a dmissions similar to that of Rice, and thus expose Satan, their real author, and cause him to lose so much power that he will be caught and bound. May God speed the day.

E. UMBAUGH.

Collamer, Ind.

A beautiful life—a life of truth and purity, and affection.

For the Companion.

Pure Religion.

What is the religion of the gospel? It is pure and undefiled; and the individual who is in possession of it, can boast of wealth superior to all the gold of California. And the beauty of the whole is, this is the gift of God—a free gift, purchased for poor, fallen, rebellious man, by the death of Jesus Christ. Had man been left to run over the sea of life without a guide, or compass, he would have been in a sad condition; but thank God we are not left without a pilot to guide our barque over the tempestuous sea of life. What a glorious hope is the Christian's! When he has true religion for his covering, we need no other; but he can journey safely all through his pilgrimage—his eye rests undeviatingly on that heavenly world, where the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest.

Then, fellow travellers, secure this glorious covering, and you need not go astray; but faith and hope will buoy you up; difficulties will vanish away.

Trembling Christian, gird on your armor. Be firm in your course; search your directory prayerfully; understand its teaching; receive the engrafted word, and it will cause fresh hope to spring up in your pathway; and you will discover new beauties arising on your journey, which will be encouraging to you. But bear in mind that you, in order to become a good soldier of the cross, must be firm and unyielding when you are surrounded by temptations, which often will assail you as you journey over the restless sea of life.

But be not discouraged. Aim after that high and noble state in an humble, confiding manner, and you will discover to the joy and comfort of your soul, that the God of all grace will sustain you; and bright hopes will take possession of your heart, and you will be encouraged to go onward. Remember, my dear friend, at the same time to study your Bible, which is a true guide, and will be a safe directory. All you have to do is to obey its pious teachings, and follow its wise instruction; and a halo of light will go with you all along your journey, and a holy guide will be your attendant.

But alas! Sad will be our condition if procrastination seizes upon us and we neglect to keep our lamps trimmed and burning. But we hope better things and trust we feel like saying as did Joshua, "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." Then, my friends, let hope buoy us up, and the great love of God inspire us with humble aspiration to press forward to the mark of our high calling in Christ Jesus. Life is the time given unto us to prepare for that bright home; and why should we neglect to secure unto ourselves that rich inheritance, which is incorruptible and which fades not away! The door of mercy is still open, and the invitation is still given, "Come unto me, all ye that are heavy laden and I will give you rest." May God's love encourage our hearts to search after the hidden treasure, which will be of more value than rubies, is my humble prayer.

W. B. Shane.

Luna, Ohio.

A Plea for a Popular Bible.

A writer in the Watchman and Reflector, taking up the suggestion of Hawthorne, that the Scriptures should be issued, like other books, in portable volumes, says:

"God's book has suffered much from its enemies in the world; But its friends are not guiltless. Few books could endure what it has passed through. Take any book you please—or, better, take the masterpieces of many authors—History, philosophy, poetry, laws, letters—jumble them together with little regard to order; slice them all alike into paragraphs three or four lines long; print them in small type two columns to a page; begin two chapters at tolerably regular intervals, without regard to connection, and head each with an absurd summary of its contents, repeating parts of this for a running title; and then bind it into a volume of inconvenient shape or unwieldy size, and expect a large circulation for it. Why can we not have our histories of the Jews in handy, large-paged, clear-typed volumes like our Macaulays or Prescotts? our Life of Christ, by Matthew, Mark, Luke or John, as attractive in typography as the same life—or the life of the same person—written by Strauss or Renan? our copies of Paul's and Peter's Letters in as good shape as Cowper's or Daniel Webster's? Why must David's poetry be printed like prose, any more than Longfellow's?"

Selected for the COMPANION.

The Hour of Prayer.

Child, amid the flower at play,
While the red light fades away;
Mother, with thine earnest eye,
Ever following silently;
Father, by the breeze of eve,
Called thy harvest work to leave;
Pray!—ere yet the dark hours be,
Lift the hand and bend the knee.

Traveler, in the stranger's land,
Far from thine own household band;
Mourner, haunted by the tone
Of a voice from this world gone;
Captive, in whose narrow cell
Sunshine hath not leave to dwell;
Sailor, on the darkening sea,
Lift the heart and bend the knee.

Warrior, that from battle won,
Breathest now at set of sun;
Woman, o'er the lowly slain,
Weeping on his burial plain;
Ye that triumph, ye that sigh,
Kindred by one holy tie;
Heaven's first star alike ye see—
Lift the heart and bend the knee.

H. FORNEY.

Hudson, Ill.

For the COMPANION.

An Appeal to the Young Brethren and Sisters.

BY J. S. FLORY.

Having the welfare of the church at heart, I have for some time felt like making an earnest appeal to the beloved young members of the body of Christ, that they, with me, as well as all others of the household of faith, might labor more earnestly for that oneness of mind, that characterized the church in days of yore more than at the present day; and to do all in our power to kindle and keep burning that love which neutralizes all isms and divisions, and cements together in one universal compact of brotherly regard and affection, every member, whether old or young, of the body of our Lord Jesus Christ. Oh, the value of sincere, brotherly love! it is a gem of inestimable worth—being a counter part of God, "who is love."

First, let us duly and solemnly consider the important fact, that the care and government of the Church will ere long pass from the hands of our dear old fathers, who are now instruments in the hands of God, working the welfare of Zion, over into ours, who are yet struggling up the steep of life. A weighty influence is now being exerted upon the church and would by the consistent, humble, and godly walk and conversation of our fathers and mothers in Israel; but alas! these temples, wherein dwells the light of divine influence, must go down to the grave, and from us will be expected to emanate that light, love, and zeal sufficient to the furtherance of the cause of Christ. Yea, to us will be entrusted the Church of the Living God! O then, dear brethren and sisters, feeling that these weighty obligations must eventually fall upon us, how willing we should be to learn of those who have had experience in the controlling of church affairs. Deep in our very souls, let their counsels and warnings take root. As the last words of a dear, dying parent, fall on the ears of the weeping children, let their admonitions fall with lasting remembrance on our hearts. Let us now earnestly contend, by word and example, for that faith and simplicity of church government and order, that has ever caused us to be a "peculiar" and distinct people from the world.—Let us be content to run safely, rather than with dangerous speed. Outside pressure is getting heavier and harder to resist; but for the sake of our holy religion, and in keeping with the spirit of Christ, let us keep within the bounds of the simplicity of the Gospel; and if we do this, we will be in union and harmony with "old, established customs."

And now, dearly beloved in the Lord, permit me in the spirit of love to present a few pointed ideas. I freely confess that there was a time with me when something within seemed to whisper: "Need not be so precise," and "those peculiarities do not belong to the religion of Jesus," &c., &c. But experience, observation, and other things, have pressed home to my heart the conviction that that voice savored not of the true Spirit of God. There is really more in outward appearances than I at one time was willing to admit, or is admitted now by many. The adapting principles of the gospel are such, that whosoever accepts of them becomes a cross-bearer. The cross is the crucible in which pride and self-will are cast, which are by the fire of the Holy Spirit burned up, and humility is brought to view, if there be any in the lump. The hotter the fire the more brightly shine the christian graces.

The order of the Brethren relative to dress is consistent with the principles of the Gospel. To adopt the established uniform is not at all times congenial to our carnal feelings;—therefore there is a cross here. But to dress to please our fancy, or that of the world, or as self-will dictates, there is no cross; consequently pride and self, to some extent, are manifest and live; and if humility does exist in the heart, it is not apparent in this respect.

I know the adversary has a sterotyped saying: "Religion is not in outward appearance, but in the heart." When there is true religion in the heart, there will be a true evidence of its existence manifest outwardly;—even in the habiliments of the outer man, and a willingness to submit to such rules of the church as are found to be good, and in harmony with the spirit of the Gospel. As with true religion, so it is with a religion that is false. Both are manifest, as a general thing by outward appearances. The heart that accepts of a religion that admits of a free indulgence of the lust of the eye, lust of the flesh, and pride of life, soon gives evidence of such a religion being in the heart, from outside appearances and practices. If Satan has a foot-hold in the heart, he will have a hand-hold in the dress! and if Jesus Christ is all in all clothing the inner man, he will have an influence in "adorning" the outward man.

Again, I must believe these peculiarities are of much benefit to the church, and have the sanction of high heaven. They are as bars set in the boundary of Christ's kingdom here on earth, just as God designed there should be. The proud and worldly minded cannot stoop to them, because they are too "stiff-necked"; consequently they are in the main kept out. But the soul that has become humble meek, and lowly, can enter gladly.—I have heard it said that those customs and restrictions keep our neighbors and our children from entering the church. Not so, because any one can enter, just as soon as they come where Christ would have them come. He is "the door," not a high door, but "meek and lowly." It is true it keeps them from entering with a proud and self-willed spirit; but just so soon as they stoop just so low as the cross will bend them, they can enter, "and go in and out and find pasture." God forbid that we should ask a soul to stoop lower than the testimony of God demands. And God forbid, that I, or you, dear brethren or sisters, should lend a helping hand to tear down those bars one after another, and then say:—"Come all ye proud and gay, we have made the gate as wide as others have theirs! Oh, yes, truly we might get large numbers then, but methinks it would be like turning a herd of wolves into a sheep-fold!

It may be, dear brethren and sisters, some of you can see no use in conforming to the order of the Brethren in all these things; but let me appeal to you to look at the matter as having a greater bearing on your welfare and the welfare of Zion than you may have imagined. You cannot possibly lose anything that pertains to your eternal interest, and in all probability will gain a greater respect with all the members you come in contact with than otherwise you would. No brother that is a brother indeed, will think any the less of you for being in plain, tidy uniform; but many may think less of you if you have been a member for a long time and yet have the mark of the body of the world. Even the world frequently has a higher respect and confidence in those that are consistent to all the rules and regulations of the church. Such cases have come to my notice.

Ordinarily there is no good reason why every brother or sister should not have the same mind and spirit of obedience in these matters. There is nothing in the order of dress that will debar a brother or sister from entering the most worthy society even in our social intercouse with the world. Have not brethren, in their "peculiar" dress, entered the legislative halls on business, and been listened to with attention and respect—even been received into the house of the President of the United States, and treated with cordial politeness by the chief magistrate of our country?

Oh, then, come, one and all, and bear the cross in all things; and you will never regret it. Greater will be your reward in heaven.

Now, brethren and sisters, it is within our power, by the help of God, to perpetuate the time-honored mark, that we may know where we belong when we meet. In this respect we find it a good thing to be uniform. Of course, we do not claim that our religion is in our clothes, but if the cpirit of true religien is in our hearts we have the right and privilege to dress according to the spirit of that religion. A true soldier that goes forth to war, has courage in his heart; putting on his uniform makes him not a better soldier, but an obedient heart prompts him to draw on just such a uniform as is specified, whether he likes it or not: then he is known where the belowing.

It makes us "thank God and take courage," when we meet congregations that give evidence of being of one mind in all these things; especially to see the young brethren and sisters bearing the cross, shoulder to shoulder with their fathers and mothers. O, may they continue in these things! Let every member use the power and influence he has at command, to perpetuate these, all things, and the work is done; that is, each one "heal thyself," and the body will be whole. Otherwise, if we let go of those things that we think of little importance, by and by we may lament the sad condition of the church; for one departure follows another, and should we live to see so sad a state as the "glory of Israel departed," truth and conviction may point to us as aiding in her downfall. But we hope better things; so once more let me appeal to one and all to come to the rescue. Let us not offend, neither in word nor deed, but with one mind and one heart for the welfare of Zion, and manifest such a zeal for the "old land-marks," that our fathers may have a hope that their sacred charge may fall into the hands of such as will continue to to contend for that "faith once delivered to the saints." And now is the time to learn in the school of Christ, that we may be qualified for the duties that now do, and hereafter will devolve upon us; and then when we must be called home, oh, may we leave the church in no worse condition than we found it.

This appeal goes forth with the prayer that God will bless it to the stirring up of many minds to a remembrance of their promises and duty to do all in their power for love and union in the Brotherhood.

May the communion of God's Holy Spirit be with you all, now and forever!

Fayetteville, W. Va.

Mammon of Unrighteousness.

Brother Holsinger: In perusing one of your papers of the 6th volume, No. 32, I found a query asking an explanation on Luke 16: 6—9.

"Mammon of unrighteousness," as it stands connected in this passage, may mean that we should so wisely use the mammon of unrighteousness, or the unsatisfying riches of this world, that we may secure friends in God and Christ, and in sinners saved and blessed by our instrumentality.

Do not keep thy pound laid up in a napkin, "but rather give alms of such things as ye have; and behold, all things are clean unto you." Luke 11: 41. "Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not high minded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy; that they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate; laying up in store for themselves a good fonndation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life." 1 Tim. 6: 17-19. And in Daniel you may read: "Wherefore, O king, let my counsel be acceptable unto thee, and break off thy sins by righteousness, and thine iniquities by showing mercy to the poor, if it may be a lengthening of thy tranquility."

ROMULUS HARRY.

Feetwashing and Kissing.

In Rome, on Holy Thursday, the Pope washes the feet of twelve persons, in commemoration of the Savior washing the feet of his disciples. This unique ceremony,—a novelty on this side of the Atlantic,—was performed on Thursday, April 14th, in New York City, in the church of St. Anthony, belonging to the Franciscans. Immediately after the high mass, the pastor, Rev. J. Guerrini, disrobed himself of his principal vestments, and girt on a linen apron—Twelve persons took their seats on a platform, and each bared his right foot of boot and stocking. The pastor then took a basin of water and a towel, knelt down and washed the feet, and after wiping, kissed them—Prot. Christmas

For the Companion.

This World is not our Home.

I feel to-day after reading the Companion—I scarcely can tell how—it it a mingling of joy and sorrow; but whether it will benefit any one to write it on paper, I cannot tell. Were it not that Christians are anticipating the joys of a future and permanent home, we would indeed be unhappy: but with the mind fixed on our future home, we can enjoy our earthly homes to great advantage. And why should we not improve the opportunity to prepare ourselves for that home, "Eternal in the Heavens!" Who that has ever looked yonder with the eye of faith, and beheld the glories of the home that our Redeemer has purchased for all the faithful, would wish to remain always here in this polluted world?

O, home! sweet home, where all the ransomed of every age and clime will meet never more to part again! Not like our Annual Meetings from which, as soon as they are over, all scatter, each one to his earthly home, some never to meet in this world again. Nevertheless I greatly injoy those annual meetings: they give us an opportunity to become acquainted with brethren and sisters from all parts of the union; it is such a sweet foretaste of the great family of brethren and sisters meeting. That will be permanent, lasting through all Eternity.

Oh! that I could oftener feel as I do just now, looking forward to that happy time! It creates such pleasant feelings that we really wish we were in the enjoyment of it already. But we must await our time, and, perhaps, that won't be long. We have no assurance how long we may continue here. One after another is dropping off; and the time will come, when my soul too, must leave this tenement of clay.

I see in Companion a notice of the death of sister Gray. It is just what I expected to hear before long. We visited her on our way home from Annual Meeting. I had never visited any sick, with more assurance that death was near at hand. But our sister seemed willing to submit herself to him who knows all things best; and was willing to leave this world, if it was his will; and no doubt she will be one of the family that will meet in that beautiful home —the New Jerusalem—City of our God.

I said my feelings were mingled with joy and sorrow, after reading a about the future home of the COMPANION family. The editor had set the time, fourth of July, twelve o'clock, noon, to decide what to do. We anxiously awaited the decision and now we have it; and were it not that the COMPANION can reach us as well from Dale City as from Tyrone, I would have made it my business to bring in some objections to the decision.

But the editor says it is the best he can do; if so, why not enjoy it? All I have to say is, that I wish that God might bless them in their incoming and in their outgoing, and also bless him with health both in soul and body, and that he may live long to be an instrument in the hands of God for the furtherance of the gospel truth, and the salvation of souls, and for the benefit and consolation of Zion's children.

Yours Truly, in Christian Love,
MARGARET DEARDORFF.

For the COMPANION.

Election of Speakers.

"And straightway he preached Christ in the Synagogues, that he is the Son of God." Acts 9: 20.

The above is part of Paul's history; and as we think Paul good authority in some cases, so I will try by the help of God to take him as such in what I intend to say in this article.

But before entering on the subject, I will say, that I hope that no one will take offence at what I say, much less do I hope that it will be taken as finding fault with the Church or Annual Council, but let me assure all that I am and claim to be, in full harmony with the church, and firmly hope that I will be so unto my end, as I firmly believe there is no salvation any where else.

The subject on which I wish to write, is often not examined or considered as carefully as it should be; and it may be one of those we do not care about. Let it be as it may, one thing is certain, there are points contained in it which are not so easily explained.

It may be said it is the rule to elect preachers by vote. But will this be satisfactory? It will, if such rules are founded on the Word of God; otherwise they are worthless. We claim that all our rules are gospel rules,—and well with us if they are, —but, as I said, there are some dark points in this subject, and I would like to have light on them.

In our congregation we have a young brother, who says God wants him to preach; but the church is not willing to give him the privilege, or elect him, and consequently he preaches contrary to our rules; and it seems there will be some trouble concerning him.

Of course some make light of it:—they say, put him out. Yes, that is easy to say; but will it meet the approval of the Lord, our Head? When we are referred to the case of Paul, the apostle, it is said, that if a brother would come and bring such proof as Paul that the Lord wanted him to preach, the church would be satisfied. Now let us examine this point, not only carefully, but prayerfully, and see what can be made of the case.—Read the chapter until you come to the 26th verse, when Paul came to Jerusalem, they were afraid of him. Why? Because they knew of what character he had been the last time they saw him; and having heard nothing concerning his conversion, they had cause for fearing him: but when Barnabas explained to them, all their fear vanished. Neither did say, "You have not been elected by the Church, therefore you cannot preach." Oh, no! they were glad, not only to accept him as a brother, but as a minister, or speaker in the church.

It is claimed that the church has the power to elect their speakers.—Where and when this power was given to the church is not known to me. Our Master says, "All power is given unto me, therefore go ye—Who? Of course those whom he had selected; and nowhere, I believe, we read that any other should go. We may say the church says so. But we ought to have a "Thus saith the Lord."

A brother a few days ago said to me: "The church does not follow the example of the Lord in electing her speakers; she generally elects the rich, where Christ took men from the poor. Brethren be careful in the matter. The principles of our church are right; let us carry them out or we may get astray. When you want to set brethren apart for that noble work, take nothing like wealth or relationship, &c., into consideration. Follow Jesus; take him for a pattern in all things, and we are right; else the poor will be discourged their faith weakened, and who can tell the consequences? Ask yourself the question, what shall a poor brother do? He may be certain that the Lord hath called him; but let him do like Paul, go and preach, and what will be the consequences? Now let us look at it. Do we not then fight against the Lord, and by doing so can we claim to be God's peculiar people? will he claim us as such? are questions which we should consider well. May the Lord help us to see and feel as we should; and then be obedient, so that we can indeed claim to be Christ's church is my prayer.

For the COMPANION.

Sinners Awake.

Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light."—Eph. 5:11.

Death is compared to sleep, and sleep is compared to death. By the apostle men are said to be dead in sin and trespassers. Sleep is an unconscious state—a state in the which we know nothing of what is passing on around us. Now sinner, this is your condition. You are in a state of spiritual unconsciousness—spiritually asleep. Then awake from thy slumbers of carnal security; awake to a true sense of thy condition; awake, put on the armor of light; arouse thyself from the sleep into which the tempter has lulled you; "Awake to righteousness, and sin not."

In our natural slumbers we sometimes have dreams that disturb our rest. Perhaps this is the case with you, in your slumbers of sin; perhaps the Spirit has been striving with you, and has disturbed your rest and caused you to dream. God grant that you may have one more dream and that it will arouse you to a sense of your awful condition, and awaken you to a full sense of your duty; so that you may arise from the dead, and come to Christ for light—arise from a state into which sin has brought you, to a union with Christ. Arise, then, and come to Christ, and he will give you light. Remember Jesus is the light of the world; "The true light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world." Then arise, and come to Christ; throw off your load of guilt and sin; take upon you the yoke of Jesus: his yoke is easy, and his burden light. Awake to the glorious light and liberty of the gospel: arise now, and say, with the prodigal of old, "Arise now, and come to Jesus, whilst all heaven is waiting to carry home the glad tidings, "sinners are turning to God." Now is the accepted time; to-day is the day of salvation. Jesus says, "Come unto me, and I will give you rest." "The Spirit and the bride say come. And let him that heareth say, come. And whosoever will let him take the water of life freely.' Jesus turns none empty away; then why will you not come to him, and seek an interest in his blood that cleanseth from all sin?—Come while there is time and opportunity to make your calling and election sure, before the night of death cometh in wherein no man can work. O, sinners, how can you bear the thought of going down to people the regions of despair—to take up your abode with the damned, to be shut out from Heaven and all blessed consequences—to hear the awful sentence, "Depart ye cursed into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels." Remember God has said that the "wicked shall be turned into Hell with all the nations that forget God." Then awake, thou that sleepest: arise and come to Christ. O sleeper, arise, and call upon thy God. May God help you to awake from your slumber.

AMOS S. CHAMBERLAIN.
Locktown, N. J.

FAITH AND BAPTISM.—"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved: he that believeth not shall be damned." "He that believeth and is baptized"—we omit nothing that God has said. "He that believeth and is baptized"—not he that is baptized and believeth (which were to reverse God's order.) "He that believeth is baptized"—not he that is baptized without believing, but the two joined together. He that believeth with his heart and is baptized, confessing with his mouth—"he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Do you neglect one part of it? it is at your peril, sir! "He that believeth and is baptized," says God. If any of you have neglected one portion of it, you have believed and have not been baptized, God shall save you.—Still this promise saith not so. "He that believeth and is baptized" It says the two together; and "what God hath joined together let no man put asunder;" what he hath ordered let no man disarrange.—SPURGEON.

A Great Curiosity in Florida.

Silver Springs, Florida, is one of the greatest curiosities in the South. It bursts forth in the midst of the most fertile country in the State. It bubbles up in a basin near one hundred feet deep, and about an acre in extent, sending from it a deep stream sixty to one hundred feet wide, and extending six to eight miles to the Ocklawaha river. In the spring itself fifty boats may lie at anchor—quite a fleet. The Spring thus forms a natural inland port, to which three steamers now run regularly from the St. John's making close connections with the ocean steamers at Palatka. The clearness of the water is truly wonderful. It seems even more transparent than air; you see the bottom ninety feet below the surface of your boat, the exact form of the smallest pebble, the outline and color of the leaf that has sunk, and all the prismatic colors of the rainbow are reflected. Large fish swim in it, every scale visible and every movement distinctly seen. If you go over the spring in a boat you will see fissures in the rocks, from which the river pours upward like an inverted cataract.

IMMORTALITY. Turn whitheresover we will, we find the belief in immortality. In every nation ever known in every race that has ever lived, in every age of this changing world, we find it. Every language known to man, as now or heretofore spoken among the babblers of this earth, is constructed in accordance with it. In all ages, men in dying have looked on death as simply the soul's putting off its tabernacle. There are exceptions, but they are so few that they hardly attract our attention, and do not destroy the practical accuracy of our statement. The belief in immortality is one of universal convictions of the race.

A beautiful life—a life of truth and purity, and affection.

For the Companion.

Is Methodism of Christ, No. 2.

We take the position that the Christian Church was visibly set up; and consequently must have had a definite organization, laws, or ordinances, to be perpetuated. When was the visible Church of Christ set up? In what period of the world was it originated and made manifest? The Jewish commonwealth was no Christian church, as many Methodists claim now a days; because that was an imperfect type—a dim shadow of the Church of Christ, and not the very image. How, in the name of reason, could it be both type and anti-type—the shadow and the reality—at the same time? It is to secure grounds for infantile rites that this Judaistic position is urged. Jeremiah says, "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and the house of Judah: not according to the covenant that I made with their father's in the day when I took them by the hand and led them out of the land of Egypt; because they continued not in my covenant." The prophet Daniel, speaks of the setting up of a kingdom by the God of Heaven, in the day of the fourth Universal Empire, which all writers admit was the Roman. It had not been in existence previous to Daniel's day, else he would not have spoken of it as to be set up at a period six hundred years in the future. We pass to Malchi, four hundred years before the advent of the Savior, who foretells his coming as the messenger of the covenant, and promises to send a herald to announce his approach.—What next do we hear? Lo! we hear the following language: "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath visited and redeemed his people, and hath raised up an hour of salvation for us in the house of his servant David: As he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began; that we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us; to perform the mercy promised to our father, and remember his holy covenant; the oath which he swore to our Father Abraham. * * * * * And thou, child, shalt be called the phophet of the Highest; for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways."—Luke 1: 68–76.

Next we hear the declaration from the great harbinger himself: "I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight."

We find the King born in Bethlehem of Judea, (see Matthew 2: 5,) "And thou, Bethlehem, in the land of Juda, are not the least among the princes of Juda; for out of thee shall come a Governor that shall rule my people Israel." This Governor (king,) positively declares that his kingdom is not of this world: but he institutes certain laws in his kingdom, by which his subjects are to be governed, and which the world does not engage. He tells us how to enter his kingdom, saying: "Except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.' I understand the term "born" to mean, emerge from, (out of) into a new state of being—simply, life brought to light. So we see the legitimate heir is begotten by the word of God which liveth and abideth forever; is quickened by the spirit, and born of water in the ordinance of baptism. So here we see their illegitimacy by not entering the kingdom according to the law prescribed by this Governor, who should rule his people Israel. But I pass on.

We see on the pages of his law, at last, when he ate the supper with his disciples, he institutes three prominent injunctions, which should be perpetuated in his kingdom till he should come again. And the three injunctions are so plainly, and explicitly set forth, that the wayfaring man though a fool, should not err therein; viz., the washing of feet, the Christian Supper, and the communion; and it seems, with these completed the setting up and setting in order of his kingdom: for we find no change made from his ascension until Pentecost, and nothing new was added to a Savior's finished work upon that day. It only received its world wide commission, and was endorsed with the Spirit's power; and Peter declared the terms of admission to its blessings, by saying to the multitude: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." But the church of Christ was to be unchangeable, and permanent, and to be perpetuated through succeeding ages, and ultimately fill the whole world.

The prophet Daniel declares that the God of Heaven shall set up a kingdom, "which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people,"—no change in the character of its citizens, or members,—"and it shall stand forever and ever." The Savior also asserts the fact: "Upon this rock will I build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." It is upon these plain, unmistakable predictions, that I base my assertions that the kingdom of Christ has existed entire and unchangeable as the Allwise Father finished it; as he ordained it so will go on more and still more gloriously, until it shall have redeemed his precious jewels and filled the whole world, and restored the sceptre of its loyalty to the hands of the Prince of Peace, when he "shall descend from Heaven with a shout, with the voice of the arch-angel, and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the cloud to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words." Oh! is it not enough to fill the breast of the loyal of his kingdom with emotions of joy unspeakable and full of glory?—"Wherefore, comfort one another with these words." What a consoling passage.

But again, in the Acts, and in the Epistles of the Apostles, we have the history of the Christian Church down to the death of John A. D. 100. But where shall we find their history for a period of 1260 years after? In their history given by Christ in Revelations of things which must shortly come to pass. In the 12th and 13th Chapters we have the history of the Red Draggon, (Pagan Rome) and his conflict with the Church; and of his being cast out. In the 13th and 14th verses, "And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men, and deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracle which he had power to do in the sight of the beast; saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image of the beast, which had the wound by a sword and did live." Can we not see the image? do we not see the day of Papal Rome (the Methodist) in the image of the Mother of harlots and abominations (the Catholic?)—See again the 17th chapter: "So he carried me away in the spirit into the wilderness; and I saw a woman sit upon a scarlet-colored beast, full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns. And the woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet color and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand, full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication: And upon her forehead was a name written MYSTERY, BABYLON, THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH."

This woman, (Popery) is "the mother of harlots and abominations." Are there not many in the world now, and even on this American continent who are committing fornication with the woman,"—the mother of harlots', by many new births, new organizations, or splitting off and framing new societies and claiming to be followers of Christ, while at the same time they repudiate strongly the very door by which we are commanded to enter the kingdom, as does "the mother of harlots?" Are those different branches of the so-called Christian Church, not decking themselves with gold and precious stones; viz., the rich luxuries and fashions of earth, and using the golden cup which is full of abominations and filthiness?—Yea, they will tell you that anyway a man thinks is right, just so the heart is right. In the name of reason, can the heart be right while they are not willing to render due obedience to the law of this mighty Governor, who was born in Bethlehem, who died upon the cross, who arose from the dead, and who is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens?

Who were the saints and martyrs of Jesus, with whose blood the whore was drunken? They could not have been Methodists. Ask Mr. Wesley, and he will tell you, A. D. 1739, and that it never ought to claim to be a church, yet fears his followers would make it one. Ask the Methodist Discipline of this matter; I think it will tell you that in 1739 it was a society, and in '84 it was established a church.

Again ask Mr. Wesley about the apostolic method of baptism, he will tell you it was done by dipping the candidate thrice face forward into the water, once after the utterance of each name of the holy Trinity. And even when he baptised adults he chose to do it by trine-immersion, if the persons would submit to it. For proof of the above, see the life of Wesley, by Henry Moore, vol. 1, p. 425, published for the M. E. Church in 1824. This Mr. Moore was the only surviving trustee of Mr. Wesley's MSS. So we see they are too young for any of their members to be old martyrs, and from Mr. Moore's account of John Wesley, that his words and actions prove the illegitimacy of his organizations. And in answer to the question above, who were the saints and martyrs of Jesus? does not Mr. Wesley answer the question in his language when he says, "The apostles and primitive christians baptized by trine immersion." It would then be reasonably supposed that they were of those despised "Dunkards."

Truth forces us to decide that their claim to the title and consideration of a christian church is wholly groundless and invalid: since their organization is not old enough by almost 1754 years; and being only 84 years old since it was called a church. And more than this, the lineage of their society is very obnoxious and repugnant. Why, modesty alone ought to forbid their claim to fellowship with the Church of Christ; according to their own frank admission of being a derivative from the old Romish Church, the great whore and mother of harlots—anti-christ, which is the child of that serpent, the Devil and Satan. And while we write and meditate upon those solemn reflections, we are aware they are, to some, offensive facts— unwelcome truths; but if the mere mention of them be offensive, how much more awful their reality! So we conclude from every investigation that we have seriously and candidly made for some years, as a sincere seeker for truth, that it is a mere human institution—a man-invented society—an organization similar to the institutions of Odd-Fellowship and Masonry, and like them subject to all the modifications of man's ever fluctuating and capricious fancy.

Dear reader, please bear in mind the language of the Savior of world when he says, "Except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." The laws of his kingdom must be obeyed I care not how good and moral any society or organization may appear to the eyes of the world, which has been invented by man, they cannot save a soul. God has invented a plan, whereby we shall be saved if we render obedience to that plan: "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the City."

A STALNAKER.

[To be Continued.]

The Sacred Scriptures.

To every man who feels the need of religion and cannot surrender his reason to the tyrannical and preposterous claims of the papacy, the four gospels, as we now have them in the New Testament, are of priceless value. The human soul in its wants, and sorrows, and conscious weakness in view of its brief existence on earth and the dread unknown which awaits it beyond the grave, is greatly in want of some objective truth to rest upon, and without it the only wise philosophy is that which says, "Let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we die." If the four gospels be received as objoetively true; if Jesus Christ, as therein described, be an actually existing personage and our ever-living, ever present friend and guide, then we have what we need: then the soul can rest and rejoice; then the spiritual can gain a permanent ascendency over the physical—our life on earth can be made a time of usefulness and peace, and our death a season of triumph and joy. Moreover having Jesus, and the gospels objectively true on their authority, we have also the other writings of the New Testament, and the historians, the poets, and the prophets of the Old; and now with an unmutilated, unimpeachable Bible in our hands, we, like our fathers, can march through the world with heads erect, and joyous courage, bidding defiance to Satan and sorrows and wicked men.

WM. H. PULLEN.

Parkersburg, Ill.

One of the finest qualities in a human being is that nice sense of delicacy which renders it impossible for him ever to be an intruder or a bore

Christian Family Companion

Tyrone City, Pa., July 25, 1871.

The Lord's Supper.
Number 1.

We do not use the expression, "the Lord's supper," in the popular sense, as referring to the communion, or bread and wine; but in the scriptural sense, as meaning a full meal to be eaten in the evening.

As introductory to the subject we will quote a part of the eleventh chapter of 1 Corinthians.

Verse 1. "Be ye followers of me, even as I also am of Christ.

2 Now I praise you, brethren, that ye remember me in all things, and keep the ordinances, as I delivered them to you.

17 Now in this that I declare unto you, I praise you not, that ye come together not for the better, but for the worse.

18 For first of all, when ye come together in the church, I hear that there be divisions among you; and I partly believe it.

19 For there must be also heresies among you, that they which are approved may be made manifest among you.

20 When ye come together therefore into one place, this is not to eat the Lord's supper.

21 For in eating every one taketh before other his own supper: and one is hungry and another is drunken.

22 What! have ye not houses to eat and drink in? or despise ye the church of God, and shame them that have not? What shall I say to you? shall I praise you in this? I praise you not.

23 For I have received of the Lord, that which also I delivered unto you, That the Lord Jesus the same night in which he was betrayed took bread:

24 And when he had given thanks he brake it, and said, Take, eat: this is my body, which is broken for you: this do in remembrance of me.

25 After the same manner also he took the cup, when he had supped, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood: this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me.

26 For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come.

27 Wherefore, whosoever shall eat this bread, and drink this cup of the Lord, unworthily, shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord.

28 But let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup.

29 For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body.

30 For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep.

31 For if we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged.

32 But when we are judged, we are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world.

33 Wherefore, my brethren, when ye come together to eat, tarry one for another.

34 And if any man hunger, let him eat at home: that ye come not together unto condemnation. And the rest will I set in order when I come."

It is to be observed that the letter of which the foregoing is a part, was addressed to the church of God at Corinth—to those who were "sanctified in Christ Jesus—called to be saints."

In the Corinthian church there was much that was worthy of commendation, but also much deserving of censure; hence this first inspired epistle to this congregation, abounds with praises and reproofs, encouragements and corrections, eulogies and criticisms: in the same chapter, and in close connection, the apostle expresses approbation and blame, all, however, accompanied by wholesome directions and admonitions. Paul thanks God for the grace given them by Jesus Christ, but deplores their carnality; he rejoices that in every thing they were enriched by Christ "in all utterance, and in all knowledge," yet in sorrow he must speak to them "even as unto babes in Christ; he commends them for not falling behind in any good gift, and is hopeful that they may be confirmed unto the end, that they "may be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ," still he must denounce "envying, and strife, and divisions," which had made inroads among them to their hurt, and entreats them to "speak the same thing," to do away with divisions, and to be "perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment."

The church at Corinth had been built up under the labors of different ministers, among whom the principal were Paul, Apollos, and Peter; and as some admired the vast reasoning powers of Paul, so others were captivated by the fascinating eloquence of Apollos, and others were best suited by the simple, straight-forward, bold, yet unpolished style of Cephas; but there were others again, who were more interested in the important doctrine taught, than they were in these excellent accomplishments in the ministers: these looked through the ministers up to Christ; but the first three classes saw little beyond their favorite men. These divisions into parties gave rise to the contentions of which Paul speaks when he says:—"Every one of you saith I am of Paul, and I of Apollos, and I of Cephas, and I of Christ." This was indeed a sad state of affairs, as it detracted from their religious enjoyment and was a great hindrance to the progress of the gospel. Let us consider these facts as beacons, that we may sail free of the rocks which so harrassed and retarded them ; let us be careful how we cling to "pet ministers," lest we too, be divided into schisms and become contentious, to our own detriment and to the great hindrance of the cause of Christ

Accident.

The COMPANION family came very nearly losing one of its young members, by one of those sudden accidents that we are always in danger of. As our little Lottie was merrily tripping down the stairs from our Sanctum, and when (perhaps—for no one saw her,) within five or six steps from the foot, she stumbled and fell to the floor. She was picked up by a neighbor who happened to stand by, and hearing the commotion, we ran to the scene. For several minutes we believed her to be dead ; then respiration returned, but for near eight hours there was no hopes of consciousness. Then hope began to dawn, and she has been constantly regaining her mind and strength, though she is still (Friday eve,) confined to her couch. The accident occured on Wednesday morning.—Thank God for restoring her to us again.

Quotas Again.

No doubt some of our readers are anxious to see our list of quotas ; so here it is :

M. R. Charles,	1	J. S. Thomas,	2
Dr. J. J. Solomon,	5	J. J. Cover,	1
J. M. Messamer,	1	J. R. Rinehart,	1
J. Hoff,	1	S. Lidy,	1
R. H. Miller,	2	Ellie Williams,	2
Jos. Bowman,	2	J. M Masemore,	1
J. S. Flory,	1	John Harley,	1
J. Mohler,	1	A. H. Cassel,	3
M. M. Mummert,	3	J. M. Elliott,	1
Wm. Stephens,	1	B. F. Masterson,	1
J. Kessler,	1	John Fisher,	1
Wm. Moser,	1	John Crowel,	2
Amos Wright,	1	S. A. Moore,	1
J. Miller,	1
D. B. Gerber,	1
Total			41
Reported before,			300
Grand Total,			341

Just six hundred and fifty-nine more. Another effort and then——

Æ.

A Good Book.

The American Peace Society, will send "Dymond on War," a book of 124 octavo pages, price 50 cents. FREE to every minister who will send six cents with which to pay the postage on it. The same offer is made to the Librarian of every public library in the country; To others it will be forwarded postpaid on reception of the price.

They will also send packages of Peace Tracts free to any one who will agree to distribute them judiciously after reading them.

Address Rev. H. C. Dunham, at 36 Bromfield Street, Boston.

Friend Holsinger :—Permit me to ask, through your Companion, "Is sin FINITE or INFINITE?

MOSES CLAPPER.

Des Moines, Iowa.

ANSWER.

It is somewhat difficult to apply the term finite or infinite to sin. Sin is a violation of law. If, therefore, we violate a finite law, or sin against a finite being, the sin finite; but if we break an infinite law, or sin against the infinite Being, the sin will be infinite. For this reason we need not so much fear them which kill the body ; but are not able to kill the soul ; but rather fear him fer him who is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." We know that "sin when it is finished, brings forth death; therefore we should avoid it.

Editor Companion :—Please answer through the Companion, without giving name or locality, whether it is bound in Heaven, according to Matt. 18 : 18, when a District Meeting disowns a member, he neither being present, nor having any previous notice of the charge, or of what it consisted; and to report in the church where such a member had membership, through a committee of its own appointing, or at least not by the counsel of District Meeting, that if said disowned member be reconciled to two brethren, living in two other different congregations, he could be a member at home. And whose duty is it to go, and try to effect said reconciliation? The accused or the offended? Offense seems to consist in writing private letters regard to the case, by disowned to those who led the case disowning him. They themselves made the contents known to others, as far as it is known. It is admitted that the letters contained some good, but the wrong has not been pointed out. Are such proceedings legal?

ANSWER.

We would say such proceedings are not right. In the first place, no District Meeting, we think, has any right to exclude a member. Such business belongs to the congregations. So we view it. 2. No meeting of any kind has a right, according to the Gospel, and the decisions of the Annual Meeting, to expel a member without giving the accused a hearing first. 3. Self-appointed committees have authority to act for themselves, but for no other body. 4. The Savior says : "If thy brother sin against thee, go and tell him," &c. Again, he directs, that if we are about to make an offering, and should remember that a brother had something against us we should leave our gift and go and be reconciled to our brother, and then make our offering. In the one case the offended is to go and in the other the offender. So that the duty devolves upon both, and neither is exempted. It would be a good rule to say that it is the duty of the party who is in possession of the greatest supply of love and self-denial, and who feels the greatest concern for the peace and prosperity of the Church. And there could be no serious results if both parties should meet by the way, like the two honest Quakers who had "swapped" horses.

The above are our answers to the questions propounded. We do not pretend to decide the case for we have heard only one side. If the questions have not been properly stated, as they relate to the circumstances alluded to, then the answers do not reach the case.

Answers to Correspondents.

D. B. KLEIN. The subscription for the Youth for E. M. K and A. K. G. expired with April number.

S. Z. SHARP : One dollar and eighty-one cents.

ROGERSVILLE, TENN. Why is Lydia Baker's C. F. C. not taken out of the office?

CORRESPONDENCE

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Brother Holsinger: I submit to you the following for the C. F. C.—Brother Quinter was with us and preached for us, commencing March 3rd, and continued for one week; in which time he preached thirteen sermons: presenting many practical and useful ideas in the most forcible manner, so that the attentive hearer could not fail to comprehend them properly. And as an evidence that some did come to a saving knowledge of the truth, two young maids were received into the church by baptism in brother Quinter's presence; and in a few days, some more, and so on;—never very many at one time; evidently they have been weighing the matter and counting the cost. Up to this date there have been thirty-one received by baptism.

On last Saturday two came in, as we might say, at the eleventh hour; one of them being in the seventy-second year of his age, the other probably about sixty. And as the angels in heaven rejoice when sinners turn to God, so also does the church; and if the seeds sown are fallen "into good ground" and bring forth fruit, there is a continual rejoicing; but on the other hand, if they are fallen "upon stony places," and "among thorns," and soon begin to fall away—mixing light with darkness—endeavoring to carry Christ in one hand and the world in the other, that continual rejoicing is turned into continual sorrow.

Now I would say to all young members, with myself: If we want to live respected by the church, and become "vessels of honor" in the church, we must live in strict compliance with the order of the "Brethren," as we promised to do when we were received into the church; if we do not, we break the covenant that we made with God and the church; and we deceive the church; for had we given a negative answer when we were asked those important questions, whether we would conform to the order of the church, they never would have received us. Therefore let us have respect for ourselves—do what we promised to do and also for those old gray-headed fathers and mothers and not grieve them with our fopperies, and nonessentials; and become objects of offence to them. Had we not rather have the mind of Paul? He says, "if meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend." The world even will not respect us when we are out of order in the church; it knows just as well as we do that it is an impossibility to serve "God and mammon"; and when we try to do that, it is to them a strong evidence that there is something wrong with us; that we are spiritually insane; which really is the case. Therefore let us subject ourselves strictly to the order of the church, for our mutual benefit;—knowing that it will have a tendency to make us humble, and at the same time be ensamples to others; let our chief object be, not to offend the church, and to endeavor to walk "in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless."

LEWIS W. TEETER.

Hagerstown, Ind.

Brother Henry: Although the rod of affliction is laid upon me at present, I feel like writing a few lines for the Companion, since I believe all your readers are fond of reading church news; and as we are isolated from the main body, it would be interesting, perhaps, to your readers to hear from this branch of the church.

Our lovefeast came off on the 11th and 12th of June; and we have good reason to believe that it was a lovefeast in truth—that it was good for us to be there. Brethren James Miller from Indiana, and John Stretch from this state, were the only strange speakers with us. Brother Miller being the only elder a good share of the labor was resting upon him.—They labored however faithfully in the cause of Zion.

I would here say that we have a very extensive field to labor in: The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few. We have frequently petitioned the Lord of the harvest to send more faithful laborers into his vineyard: and we trust divine Providence will grant our petitions in his own appointed time. I will give you the bounds, if there are any, of our field of labor: bounded on the south by the M. C. R. R., on the west by Lake Michigan, on the north by Lakes Michigan and Huron, and on the east by Lakes St. Clair, Huron, &c. We have members living in the counties of Ionia, Kent, Clinton, Barry, Gratiot, and Eaton, that we know of, and perhaps in many more.

I am writing these lines to try to impress upon the Brotherhood the necessity of preaching the Gospel in its purity to the scattered members and to the kind people of Michigan. Brethren, who will fill this "Macedonian" call, your labor is solicited, and I presume would be appreciated by the people of Michigan. There are some five or six organized districts in the state, with her 1,200,000 inhabitants. Think of this, brethren. "Preach the gospel to every creature," is the holy behest given by the great head of the Church. I sometimes think, if those who profess to be the followers of the Lamb of God, would use a little more energy, and improve some of those talents that are perhaps rusting in the earth, and appropriate some of their spare dimes to defray expenses, much good might be accomplished. Dear brethren let us be up and a doing. We ought to be earnestly engaged in so glorious a cause, while we know that at some day we must give an account for our stewardship here; and oh! what joy and gladness when we shall hear that welcome plaudid, "Well done thou good and faithful servant enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

But on the other hand when the unjust steward buried his talent in the earth, it was said, "Bind him hand and foot and cast him into outer darkness; where there is weeping and gnashing of teeth."

Brethren let us work while it is called to-day; for the night will come when no man can work. I said in the start I would give the readers of the Companion some church news; but I have not much of importance, more than we are made to rejoice that once in a while one or more makes application to be received into the fold; so you see, amid all ado, the children of God are made to rejoice at times. The ark of the Lord is moving on slowly; and, considering the trying circumstances we are laboring under, it goes about as well as can be expected.

Brethren let your prayers ascend to a throne of mercy in our behalf, if you cannot come in person to help us.

J. G. WINEY,

Campbell, Michigan.

Answer to Query signed "A Sister," No. 27.

Dear Sister in the bonds of the Gospel :—Your query is one of vast importance, yet it is so much neglected that I will not consult my own feelings concerning my incapacity, but by the grace of Him with whom we have to do, I will present a few facts of my experience and realization. You ask advice about attending churches of the popular religion. I am young in years, also but a babe in Christ, and during this time, until the last few weeks, I have lived among those of the popular sects, and was isolated from the Brethren, and consequently I could not attend our meetings often. Since my baptism I lived with a preacher of another denomination and attended their meetings very frequently. I felt since that there was no harm in going to hear a discourse delivered by a minister of any kind; but soon I found by the word of God, that my precious time was being wasted in going to hear that which I did not believe; and I hope that I have repented of giving my presence to hear God's word misrepresented.

You say you have no desire to go. Then don't cultivate one. Jesus will tell us our duty. "He that gatherth not with me, scattereth abroad."—Mat. 12:30. Luke 11:23, Paul will tell us, as he told or notified Timothy "If any man teach otherwise and consent not to wholesome words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to godliness, he is proud, knowing nothing, but doting about questions and strifes of words, whereof cometh, envy, strife, railings, evil surmisings, perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds, and destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness; from such withdraw thyself.—1st Tim. 6:35.

Paul says: "He that doubted is damned if he eat."—Rom. 14:22. So we doubting, or rather knowing that they do not worship God in his appointed way, let us not eat of the food they call spiritual food. "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." As we said before, so say I now again, if any man preach any other gospel unto you than that, ye have received, let him be accursed."—Gal. 1:8, 9 Jesus says: "Let them alone," Matt. 15:14. I begin to feel like Paul when telling the Hebrews of the faith of those of olden times; but the time fails me to tell, as it is a late hour in the night, and I feel like resting, after performing the duties of the day. Let this suffice, "Above all things hold fast to the good." My experience has taught me that it has caused harder feelings by answering their questions after going to their meetings, (which will be asked) than by at once saying that we did serve the same God.

May God's blessing rest upon us, and keep us with him, that we scatter not abroad.

A YOUNG SISTER.

Dear Editors : I would like to send you more names to your list, but the brethren here would rather spend their money for tobacco. May the Lord forgive them. There are one hundred members belonging to this congregation, and only about three subscribers to the Companion. I believe that seventy-five to eighty of the members are slaves to the filthy weed, and had rather satisfy the lusts of the flesh, than save the amount for a good purpose. Can you fail to still cry aloud and spare not. for the people are still in idolatry. I know some of the brethren have flinched, but so do children when their parents chastise them for doing wrong. We must continue to do our duty if somebody does complain. May the Lord bless all our brethren and sisters who do not see as we do in this matter, and may the time come when they will hunger after a knowledge of God's truth, and an acquaintance with his people, much more than they now lust after the filthy weed.

THOMAS BERRY.

White Horn, Tenn.

Change of Address.

Sister Lydia Jordon, wishes us to say for the satisfaction of her friends, that she has changed her address from Penn's Creek, Snyder county, Pa., to Hartleton, Union county, Pa.

Mammon of Unrighteousness.

I find a query in Companion, No. 27, which reads as follows: "And I say unto you, make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness: that when ye fail, they may receive you into everlasting habitations." Luke 17:9.

I will in short give my humble views of the mammon of unrighteousness, and of the right use of it. As the original implies, mammon is a word signifying riches. It is called the mammon of unrighteousness, as being with unrighteous men the great object of pursuit, and too commonly sought, morever, by unrighteous means. "That when ye fail,"—are discharged from your stewardship by death,—"they may receive you";—that is, the friends whom you have made by bestowing your property in deeds of love and mercy. Our blessed Master uses the words, "they may receive you," in allusion to the steward's language, "they may receive me into their houses." They do not receive us by any right of their own, for this belongs to Christ; but they welcome us to heaven, and bear witness to our deeds of mercy as being the evidence of that faith which worketh by love.

HENRY FORNEY.

Hudson, Ill.

Brother Holsinger : I will also send you a little church news, by way of encouragement to others.

Last Nov., brother J. H. Filmore came here and preached for us about a week, and baptized two. On the last day of December he returned and labored zealously another week, baptizing one more, and our little church seemed much revived and strengthened. He then made arrangments to move up, which he did about the first of March. About the middle of May our much beloved brother George Long stopped here, and favored us with three meetings, and immersed one "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Since then nine more were received by baptism: eight of these last were young people—three of them about the age of fifteen, the youngest being brother Filmore's son. We have an encouraging prospect of many more being added this summer. May the Lord of the harvest greatly bless our "Doctrinal Revival" to the reclaiming of many perishing souls, and extend it all over this western land, till his house be filled and his kingdom come.

To brethren desiring good and cheap homes, we say, for health, climate, abundance of rich, inexhaustible soil, wood and water, and R. R. privileges, there is no place west of the Mississippi, superior to this.

ISAAC DELL.

Letter from D. M. Holsinger.

No. 2.

Dear Brethren and Sisters : Two weeks ago to-day, I wrote out my first report of our visit, at brother Daniel Holsinger's in the West Branch church. This morning finds us in the Milledgeville church. On Sunday, the 9th, we attended two meetings : one at 10 A. M. the other at 3.30 P. M., in the West Branch church, Ogle county, Ill. The week was spent in visiting among the brethren, sisters, and friends. It is rather out of season now to be visiting in this country : harvest is here, and every one is busy ; so that we do not get around as much as we would like, or otherwise would at other seasons. But we do not complain ; for we are receiving all the attention we could reasonably expect under the circumstances. On Saturday we were brought to this arm of the church ; had meeting that evening and on Sunday at 10 A. M. and 3.30 P. M. ; good attendance considering the time. At this time we are at the house of brother Daniel M. Miller, formerly of Somerset, Pa., one of the laborers of this church. The elders are Jacob S. Hauger and Martin Myer, also of Somerset, Pa. They have quite a convenient meeting-house here ; and the church seems to be in a prosperous condition. The general appearance is a plentiful harvest. At no other season of the year would the aspect be so enticing as now, which fully repays us for the lack of accommodations we would receive at other seasons. The health generally is good ; no prevailing sickness. We enjoyed fully as good health as could be expected, and still feel and try to thank God for his goodness ; and the brethren and sisters for their kindness and attention.

On the 25th, we expect to start for Piatt county, to meet the committee appointed for that place. Brother F. P. Lœhr will please inform me by letter, what route to take, or what points to aim for from Chicago, (either by R. R. or steamboat, as we have not fully decided which to take,) and give such other information and instruction as he may think necessary for us on our journey to Michigan.—We still aim at arriving there (the Lord willing) about the 1st of Sept. Address as before directed.

"Now while we are parted and scattered abroad, We'll pray for each other and trust in the Lord."

D. M. HOLSINGER.

Milledgeville, Ill., July 17th.

Dear C. F. C. : Permit me to say a few words to the Brethren, through your columns, as they are all interested, or should be, therefore they can all read and consider. My subject is : "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature." Mark 16 : 15.

But says one, 'How can I, living in Pennsylvania, preach to the people of Oregon ?"

Your Master says, "Go."

"But I have a farm that I cannot leave."

Christ says, Sell your farm and give the money to the poor.

"Yes, but I have a wife, I cannot leave her."

Very well, that is all the better ; we want men with wives to come and stay with us ; for if they are single men they are apt to stray off, but men of families are apt to stay.

We do not want any one to come to Oregon that does not want to come ; but I will tell you what we do want : we want the brethren to contribute to a fund to send such men as are willing to come and stay with us and preach for us. Think of it, here is Oregon, with a population of a hundred thousand souls, and not one "Dunkard" preacher in the state, and plenty of room for five times the inhabitants that it now contains.—Now there is one brother—John B. Allensworth—that proposes to come to Oregon to take up his abode, providing the Brethren will assist him with means to bring him and his family here. Now the tax will be very small if we will all respond to the call. And why should we not ? for how many of us have vaults full of gold, rusting, and are building new vaults to hold their surplus, and spending money in buying new safes to protect their wealth from thieves ? Who is there among us that cannot raise one dollar for such a cause ?

And again, one dollar apiece would send several preachers and their families to Oregon, and help to locate them, and furnish them with the necessaries of life, until they could provide for themselves.

I am poor in this world's goods ; but I will pay my dollar, at any time that I am called on, to defray expenses of one or a dozen of the brethren to Oregon to work in the Lord's vineyard ; and how many of the Brethren do I know that are better able to pay a hundred, yea, hundreds of dollars, than I am to pay one dollar ! But a living is all that I expect in this world, and whatever I have more than that at death, will be left to the enjoyment,—or annoyance,—of others ; therefore I think if the Lord has prospered us so as to give us more than we actually are obliged to consume, we cannot do better than spend it in the furtherance of the Gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Now as brother Allensworth is a poor man, and is willing to emigrate to Oregon, and as far as I know,,the kind of a man that we want here, I hope the Brethren will not be long in providing him the means to bring him and his family here among us. Brethren out of your abundance contribute a little ; and give us a man, or men, to preach the gospel of our Lord and Master.

What I have written I have written in love and for our Father's cause.

I remain yours in love.

G. R. KISTLER.

Elk City, Benton co., Oregon.

Announcement.

We intend, the Lord willing, to hold our Communion, Sept. 2nd and 3rd, near Plymouth, Lyon county, Kansas, to commence on the 2nd, at 10 o'clock a. m. A general invitation is extended, especially to those contempleting a journey west. Plymouth, on the Atchison, Topeka and Santafee R. R., will be the stopping point.

By order of the church.

JOS. M. ELLIOTT.

Plymouth, Kansas.

The Brethren in Mercer county

Mo., called the Somerset arm, intend, the Lord willing, to hold a communion meeting on the 23d and 24th of September, to which we extend a cordial invitation. The meeting will held about 5 miles S. E. of Lineville, near the Chicago and South-western Railroad.

In behalf of the church.

WM. H. HILLARY.

Brother Henry: Please inform the brethren and sisters that, the Lord willing, we will hold our communion on Saturday, Sept. 2nd, one week after the lovefeast in Shelby Co. We expect to have the assistance of Elders Samuel Garber and Christian Long, and hold meetings the week previous. All are cordially invited to attend.

Those coming by railroad, will stop off at Mo., Valley Junction.

ISAAC DELL.

Correction.

The text used at the funeral of bro. Samuel Ikenberry, Wabash county, Ind., noticed in No. 26, was Job 14 : 14, and not Gal. 14 : 14.

SAMUEL MURRAY.

Page 382, second paragaaph, second line, after "is" read whether it be of God or of men.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with obituary notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In Champaign Co., Ill., June 8th, 1871, AARON SNIDER, infant son of brother John B. and sister Susan Roe, aged 3 months and 6 days.

Funeral service by the writer from Rev. 19 : 9. "Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb."

J. H. MOORE.

In the bounds of the Mohican church, Wayne county, Ohio, July 2nd, after an illness of five weeks, MARY ROSELLA, daughter of brother Samuel and sister Ann Maria GAULT; aged 1 year 2 months and 15 days.

Funeral occasion improved by Elder Jacob Garver and others from Mark 10 : 13—16.—Little Mary has gone to rest; she has escaped the troubles and sorrows of earth; and while the parents mourn the loss of their little one, she is singing the praises of God, with the angels in heaven, safely landed in the arms of him who has redeemed her.

H. S. JACOBS.

In Wyandott county congregation, Ohio, June 6th, brother MARTIN HEASTEN;—aged 47 years, 2 months and 27 days.

Disease, Lung Fever. He was a faithful brother and a kind father and husband—beloved and respected by all who knew him.—He leaves a wife and six children and many friends to mourn his death. Funeral discourse by brother Henry Keller, from Rev. 14 : 12, 13.

Daniel Chambers.

Died February 24th 1871, at the house of her daughter, in Pleasant Valley, Washington county, Md., sister NANCY CASTLE, aged about 82 years.

She survived her husband but about two years, whose age when he died was 76 years, 11 months and 7 days. They lived in holy wedlock nearly fifty years. Both were members of the Church for nearly or quite the whole time. Not only did they covenant to live with each other in the sacred relationship of holy wedlock according to the ordinances of God. But evidently they were desirous to sustain still higher relationship.—Hence they entered into covenant with their God. And to all human appearance they adhered to that covenant to the end of their lives. The result of which is that they are now in the enjoyment of eternal life, and recognize each other as the angels of heaven.

Funeral services by the writer on John 14 : 1, 2.

LIST OF MONEYS received for subscription, books, &c.,

Leroy Broyles,	10,40	J. M. Elliott,	$0,75
S. G. Arnold,	1,00	B. F. Masterson,	1,50
J. Crowel,	1,00	S. Z. Sharp,	2,00
E. Williams,	,65

BURLINGTON.

Leaving the East and arriving at Chicago or Indianapolis, how shall we reach the West? The best Line is acknowledged to be the C. B. and Q., joined together with the B. & M. Railroad by the Iron Bridge at Burlington, and called the Burlington Route.

The main line of the Route running to Omaha, connects with the great Pacific Roads, and forms to-day the leading route to California. The Middle Branch, entering Nebraska at Plattsmouth, passes through Lincoln, the State Capital, and will this year be finished to Fort Kearney, forming the shortest route across the Continent by over 100 miles.

Another branch of the B. M., diverging at Red Oak, falls into a line running down the Missouri through St. Joe to Kansas City, and all Kansas. Passengers by this route to Kansas, see Illinois, Southern Iowa, and Missouri, and, by a slight divergence, can see Nebraska also.

Lovers of fine views should remember the Burlington Route, for its towns "high-gleaming from afar"—its tree-fringed streams—its rough bluffs and quarries—its corn-oceans stretching over the prairies further than eye can reach.

Land-buyers will be sure to remember it, for they have friends among the two thousand who have already bought farms from Geo. S. Harris, the Land Commissioner of the B. & M. R. R. at Burlington, Iowa, or among the four thousand home-steaders and pre-emptors who last year filed claims in the Lincoln Land Office, where "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm."

A Sure Cure for Dyspepsia.

Upon the receipt of one dollar, I will send the the Medicine, with Directions, by return mail. DAVID ESHELMAN.

MOUNTVILLE, PA.

J. S. THOMAS, & CO.

WHOLESALE GROCERS

and

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

No 305 RACE ST. ABOVE 3RD, PHILADELPHIA,

N. B. Country Produce taken in exchange for goods or sold on commission.

CABINET MAKING & UNDERTAKING

The undersigned keeps on hand and manufactures to order all kinds of Furniture. He is also neatly fitted out for conveying the dead to their last resting place.

Manufacturer of the Common Sense Dasher Washing Machine. Shop at the Cross Roads, near Warrior's Mark, Pa.

JAMES S. COX.

A Washing Machine may be seen and purchased at this office. v6n48tf.

Wm. M. Lloyd, Altoona, Pa. D. T. Caldwell, Tyrone Pa.

LLOYD, CALDWELL & CO.,

BANKERS,

Receive monies on deposit, and pay interest if left 6 months, at 4 per cent per annum, or 5 per cent. if left one year.

Special contracts made with parties acting a administrators, executors, guardians, and persons holding monies in trust. Dealers in every description of Stocks and Bonds.—Government Securities made a speciality.

Gold and Silver bought and sold, and a general Banking business transacted.

TYRONE BANK,

TYRONE, PA.

This Bank, intending to do a general banking business, solicits accounts from Banks' Bankers and others. Collections made on all points. Interest allowed on DEPOSITS left on time. Paper discounted on liberal terms.

Wm. P. Orbison,	D. I. Gwin,
John Scott,	H. G. Fisher,
Thomas Fisher,	J. H. Glazier,
Wm. Dorris,	G. C. Wilkins,
G. W. Garretson,	and others.

Beers' Expanding Scroll Waterwheel.

[Patented 1868] This wheel is now running with the overshot, in a Flouring Mill, and is using less water than the overshot. Inventor being a Millwright, and having seen and used all the new waterwheels, does not hesitate to say it is the first iron wheel that can compete with the overshot, and is one half cheaper, simpler and better. For farther information address J. L. Beers and Sons, Millwrights and Manufacturer's of wheel shafting and mill gearing of all kinds, continued Sawmill feed and Sawmill irons.

J. L. Beers & Sons

Cocolamus, Juniata Co. Pa.

A Card.

Drs. D. Fahrney & Son, Uroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.

7-10-1 yr. pd.

Universal Guide for Cutting Garments.

By which every family may cut its own garments for men and boys, of twenty six different sizes ; for Coats, Pants, Vests, and Shirts, and Ladies' Dress Bodies. Agents wanted to sell State, County, and Family Rights. For Particulars address MILLER & QUINN,
Tyrone, Blair Co., Pa.

SALEM COLLEGE.

The Fall Term of this Institution, (open for both sexes) situated at Bourbon, Marshall county, Ind..will begin Sept. 6th, 1871.

A class in Didactics will be organized for the special training of teachers.

For further particulars apply to
O. W. MILLER, President.
BOURBON, IND.

1780 1871

ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK?

Use Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

CLEANSE YOUR BLOOD!!

An Alterative and Catharic, or Tonic and Purge combined, for diseases arising from bad blood ; such as Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Erysipelas, Worms, Chills and Fever, Scrofula, Pimples, Tetter, &c. TRY IT.

Established 1780 in package form. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form which was brought to its present state of preservation and perfection some years later, by Dr. P. Eahrney, Chicago, Ill's, who conducts the trade west of Ohio. Great reputation ! Many Testimonials ! Ask for that prepared at Waynesboro, Pa., and Chicago, Ill's. Beware of imitations. Genuine retails at $1.25 per bottle. Druggists and Medicine dealers sell it.

Dr. P. Fahrney's "Health Messenger" gives the history and uses of the BLOOD CLEANSER testimonials, and other information, sent free of charge. Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.
WAYNESBORO, PA.

SHORT HAND WRITING.—Students of Phonography and all others who are interested in the art can obtain instruction books. Send stamp for price list and tracts.
"AMERICAN PHONETIC DEPOT.
TYRONE, PA.

Excelsior Bee Hive.

This hive being now well established is extensively manufactured, and for sale. $3 for single hive, also Bee-keepers Instruction, 15 cents single copy. Liberal inducements to agents. Address S. B. REPLOGLE,
Roaring Spring,
7-12-ms. Blair Co. Pa.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine, with Drop Feed, new Take-up, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted FIRST CLASS, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted traveling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $200 per month. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. Co.
Union Square, 33 East 17th St., New York

BOOKS
GOOD BOOKS FOR SALE

For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price, $4.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol., $2.25. Indispensable.

Life at Home; or the Family and its MEMBERS —Including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed. The Altar in the House, etc. By Wm. Aikman, $1.50;

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. THOMPSON. Fancy Cloth, $1.00.

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand-book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners, with a Chart for recording the sizes of the different Organs of the Brain, in the Delineation of Character, with upwards of 170 Engravings. Muslin, $1.25.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50:

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By W. PITTINGER, $1.50.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Beautifully Illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth, gilt, beveled boards. Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75 cents.

Any of the above sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

The Phrenological Journal, An IllusTRATED, First-Class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50, or with the Pious Youth, for $3.00. We commend the JOURNAL to all who want a good Family Magazine, and who does not?

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and state written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to H. R. HOLSINGER, Tyrone, Pa.

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING

One copy, post paid	0.75
12 copies, post paid	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	$0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN & ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid	$1.00
Per dozen,	10.80

Turkey Morocco, Ger. & Eng.

One copy, post paid,	1,25
Per dozen " "	13.80

Plain Single German

One copy, post paid	.50
Per dozen" "	$5.50

The Christian Harp, containing 32 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents $6.00 per dozen.

COMPANION Volume 8, bound post paid,	$2.70
Reserved at the office,	2.25
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express,	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	.60
German & English Testaments,	.75

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25
32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION.	25

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Certificates &c.

Marriage Certificate, per doz., postpaid, 0.30
CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP. Per doz, 0.30

TRACTS.—RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE, 12 pages five cents single copy; thirty cents a doz.

All orders should be accompanied with the money, and the name of person, postoffices county & state written in unmistakable letters

THE PIOUS YOUTH.
A MONTHLY PUBLICATION

Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.

One dollar a year in advance.

THE
Christian Family Companion

Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements ; that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
TYRONE, PA.

Christian Family Companion.

BY S. W. BOLLINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum

VOLUME VII. TYRONE, PA. TUESDAY, AUG. 1, 1871. NUMBER 31.

Selected by S. W. Bollinger.

What Then?

An old man, crowned with honors nobly earned,
Once asked a youth what end in life he sought.
The hopeful boy said: "I would first be learned:
I would know all that all the schools e'er taught."
The old man gravely shook his head, [said.
"And when you've learned all this, what then?" he "Then," said the boy, with all the warmth of youth,

"I'd be a lawyer, learned and eloquent;
Appearing always on the side of truth,
My mind would always grow as thus 'twas early bent."
The old man sadly shook his head,
"And when you've done all this, what then?" he said.

"I will be famous,' said the hopeful boy;
Clients will pour upon me fees and briefs,
Twill be my pleasing task to bring back joy
To homes and hearts near crushed with darkest griefs."
But still the old man shook his head,
"And when all this is gained, what then?" he said.

"And then I will be rich, and in old age
I will withdraw from all this legal strife;
Known in retirement as an honored sage,
I'll pass the evening of an honored life."
Gravely again the old man shook his head;
"And when you've done all this, what then?" he said.

"And then—why—then, I know that I must die—
My body then must die, but not my fame;
Surrounded by the fallen great I'll lie,
And far posterity shall know my name."
Sadly the old man shook again his head,
"And after all this, what then?" he said.

"And then—and then?" but ceased the boy to speak;
His eyes, abashed, fell downward to the sod;
A silent tear dropped on each burning cheek;
The old man pointed silently to God;
Then laid his hand upon his drooping head,
"Remember, there's a place beyond!" he said.

For the Companion.

The Resurrection

"And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." Dan. 17: 2.

The subject of the resurrection is one of vast importance and amazing interest. Who does not want to be resurrected from the dark and lonely grave? Ah! none of our readers, I am sure. But, friendly reader, are we prepared, should the icy hand of death to-day close our transient stay upon earth, to enter that blessed state of a resurrected and immortal life?

In almost every Scripture bearing on the subject of the resurrection, there is quite a distinction made in regard to persons and classes. And why? Why does the Prophet in our text use the phrase "some to everlasting life, and some to everlasting contempt?" Why does Jesus say "Marvel not * * * for the hour is coming in which all that are in the graves * * * shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation? (John 5: 28, 29.) It undoubtedly is to teach us that it is alone through obedience and love to Him who died to redeem us, and thus become "the first fruits of them that slept," that we can enjoy the real worth of the blessed resurrection. How necessary then that we avail ourselves of the means of the righteous, after we have passed through "the valley of the shadow of death."

True, the subject of death is a grave one. But thanks be to God, though "in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." As he arose from the dead and ascended up into Heaven, so shall his blessed followers arise and ascend. But ah! says the skeptic, how are you going to make it appear that the resurrection of Christ is typical of his followers and will eternally save them, when he rose from the grave in three days, having seen no corruption? This question is easily solved. Lazarus was entombed one day longer than the blessed Jesus, and at his bidding came forth from the lonely tomb, bound hand and foot. Also soon after the death of our Savior, "the graves were opened and many bodies of the saints which slept arose." Matt. 27: 52. Therefore, dear reader, let the skeptic say what he will, we will take Jesus at his word, trust in him, and believe that he is mighty to save. Over eighteen centuries have been numbered with the past, since Christ has risen triumphantly over the grave, and cannot you trust Him who has said "come unto me," though he must needs lead you through the grave? If your lot should be cast amongst the poor, the riches of the gospel are as easily obtained by you as by the king upon the throne, whose possession when he leaves time for eternity will be no more than yours, a narrow cell, the lonely grave.

You of course believe in the resurrection of the dead. But glance again at our text: Oh the contrast! "Some to everlasting life and some to everlasting shame, &c." Some to the mansions of eternal bliss and some to the abode of black despair. This is what the Revelator means by the termt "redeemed from amongst men." Not all will be saved from the second death, when the Lord comes to collect his jewels home. Not all will have part in the first and blessed resurrection. Dear reader is not the thought of this enough to terrify you; Will you have part in the first resurrection, or will you not? Will you live for Satan all your life and dwell in the presence of such a fiend after death too? If not come to the arms of Jesus to-day. Solicit the aid of Him who will safely lead you through the cold waters to a heaven of rest. On that bright and flowing plane where "the tree of life is ever blooming" and "the river of life ever flowing," thou shalt have perfect ease, if thou only wilt serve him who has died to redeem you. To-day is none too soon to secure your eternal all. Procrastinate the day of grace, and this night thy soul may be required of thee. "Now is the accepted time." COME.

F. M. SNYDER.

For the COMPANION.

Christ Our Example in the Condition of Life.

Of all who have come into existence here, Christ Jesus is the only one who chose his own condition; and his choice was adverse to all that human wisdom would have suggested. We would have said of Him, as we say of ourselves, that an elevated station would afford the greatest means of doing good. We would have thought a great deal about influence and opportunity, and the effect to be produced by a descent from princely greatness to a malefactor's grave, with all the contrast to be exhibited, by the way, between the humility of his deportment and the dignity of his station. But God judges otherwise. Whether to manifest that, while the instrument is nothing, all power and effect depends on the hand that wields it, or with intent to pour contempt on whatever seems great and glorious to us, he has not chosen the great things, or the great ones of this world to do his work with, even when they seem the fittest for his purpose.

What an effect, as we should think, would have been produced, had Jesus made the throne of the Roman empire the stepping stone to the cross, and exhibited his passion and humilitation before the delegates of the universe assembled there, through whom the report would have gone forth to every nation under heaven! But this was not what he intended: he chose his birth-place in a tributary province, and not among the great ones there.

Jesus chose the same poverty and condition for the companions and instruments of his work. He took his disciples from among the poor and unknown. We would have thought that the sudden conversion of twelve persons of elevated station and distinguished talent, would have produced a great sensation, tending much more directly to the evangelizing of the world.

Our judgment is not unnatural, nor perhaps altogether unreasonable; but it is a matter of surprise that, after so long experience that God judges otherwise, we should persist in attaching so much importance to great names and great means, for the advancement of religion. There is a day coming when the "kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord." Till then, learning, and wealth, and greatness will never be on the Lord's side—ignorance, poverty, simplicity, never will be evidences against the value of a religious profession. It is as individuals that we are to be conformed to the image of our Lord. He chose poverty; he chose lowness of condition; he chose to be least of all men. Who besides him does so?

It may be said, "He chose it not of preference, but because it exposed him to the suffering which was the object of his coming." This is not true; an exalted station is an exposure to more danger than an obscure one. We know very well it is not true with us. The toils we go through to obtain an eminence, the difficulties we contend with to maintain ourselves upon it, are ample proofs that it is not for ease or safety that we desire to rise. But who is of the mind of Christ? The Scripture says "Let the rich rejoice in that he is made low;" but the world is quite of another mind. Followers, (so they profess,) of him who had not where to lay his head, they can find no place high enough for the repose of theirs. Worshippers, (so they say,) at the Manger and the Cross, no mansion is large enough, no acres broad enough, no tables so richly spread, as to suffice them.

A child of God, whose mind is as it should be, never fixes his heart on his powers or his possessions. He wears his honors, and uses his gifts, and men drop as usual their congratulations; but God alone distinguishes, at such moments, between the inflated bosom with its '"I thank thee' that I am gifted more than others," and the modesty that only whispers, '"Be merciful' to my inadequate return." We have an example; and if we mistake, it is because we will not follow our example.

It is a common saying, that men must buy their experience; and a truer one, that experience comes too late. The Scripture shows us the first Adam in the heighth of prosperity, Lord of all that he beheld, possessed of the world's good things when they were good indeed, falling on the first temptation by desire for something more; and after him, all who are moulded in his likeness. It also exhibits to us Christ, the second Adam, choosing lowliness as the fittest state in which to recover what the first in his plenitude had lost: to triumph in adversity, as he in prosperity had fallen; and it shows us those who are renewed after his likeness, doing all the same thing. There has been seen from that time forward the likeness of both: in the likeness of one or the other all men must be found. There are the rich and the poor, the prosperous and the afflicted, the high-born and the base, the rising and the sinking; but the line that separates these does not separate the image of the first Adam from the image of the second, the lowly from the proud, the earth-renouncing from the earth-aspiring. There is a line visible from the heights of heaven. On one side of it are those who are ashamed of a position which their Master chose, or proud of one which he refused to occupy; and in spite of all God's declarations to the contrary, persist in accounting the proud happy and their end honorable. On the other side there are some, born indeed in the similitude of Adam, but changed by grace into the image of Christ. They have broken the scale by which this world's good was measured, and taken the word of God to measure it by instead. N. J. GILLISS.

Madisonburg, Ohio.

For the Companion.

Unity.

"Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!" "A spiritual unity binds together every member of the human family." Unity implies oneness in essence, as the unity of God, or of action, feeling, &c., as unity of design, of affection, &c. A spirit of unity was most certainly the spirit of man before the fall, and to this he must attain if he ever is redeemed from his deep degredation. We learn the necessity of a perfect union from the language of Christ, when he says, "A house divided against itself, cannot stand." No wonder Christ prayed so earnestly to his Father for the unity of his followers. He no doubt was greatly impressed, and concerned for their unity, or he would not have repeated that little word "one" so often; and he gives us the reason; namely, that the world may believe that God, his Father, had sent him. Yea, Christ says, "That the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them as thou hast loved me."

This unity will furnish increasing evidence of the divine excellence of his religion, and lead increasing numbers to embrace it; as Christ plainly intimates by saying, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven;" for "by this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another"

The institution of the Communion is another strong evidence that Christ labored for the unity of his people; as we must know that there can be no communion where there is not first a union. Division was the first fault of the Corinthians, referred to by the apostle Paul, that had disqualified them to receive the communion. "Where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work." Wherefore, brethren, let us always be "endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." Eph. 4: 2. Read the entire chapter. Let us "love as brethren." NOAH LONGANECKER.

For the Companion.

Is Methodism of Christ? No. 2.

My position will doubtless be regarded, by some unreflecting minds, as uncharitable in the extreme. But Charity rejoices in the truth. Many may hate and persecute me for my honest convictions presented: "He that will live godly in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution." O, reflecting reader, we are taught not to fear them that can kill the body only, but to fear him who can destroy both soul and body in hell.

If Methodism is a mere human contrivance or scheme, (as some of their first writers have denominated it,) then this fact of itself decides that it can lay no claims to the regard and authority of a Christian church. If John Wesley instituted Methodism, how can men be saved by the institution separate and apart from the ordinances of the house of God? It is evident that a stream cannot rise higher than its source or fountain head; no more can a man clothe an institution, or religious system of his own creation, with authority superior to that of which he himself possessed.

For Christians to support such inventions or schemes of religion and observe the traditions and commandments of men for religious duties, is, to be the followers and servants, yea, worshippers of men; for we are the servants of those whom we obey, and the worshippers of him whom we serve. Man has evidently felt the force of this in all ages of the world.

No one thing so determines the destiny of a nation or community, as its government. A good government will conduct a nation to prosperity, and secure the welfare and happiness of its subjects; while a bad one will, sooner or later, overwhelm it in ruin, and entail wretchedness and woe — No nation or community can be truly prosperous with an ill-regulated government. Well said the immortal Milton, "Some do not think it, for the ease of their inconsequent opinions, to grant that church discipline is platformed in the Bible, but that it is left to the discretion of men. To this end it of theirs I answer that it is both unusual an untrue; for there is not that thing in the world of more grave and urgent importance throughout the whole life of man, than is discipline." But he [illegible] the discipline originated in heaven and brought from the celestial courts above by the Lamb of the lake in Bethlehem, and taught to us to obey the laws of that discipline, and closes up with the following solemn and lasting words: "And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book.' He that has a wish to find out of nations and communities, of cities and camps, of peace and war, sea and land, will readily agree that the flourishing and decaying of all civil societies, all the movements and turnings of human occasions, are moved to and fro as upon the axle of discipline. Is it then reasonable to suppose that man can frame a discipline better than God. Yea it is awfully true that men have tried it: the discipline that the Great Head of the church has handed us does not suit them: its requirements are too simple and low for the dignified and elevated mind of man to stoop to. All must admit that the unity of the Christian faith and practice is of the highest importance, since the world will never be persuaded to believe the gospel until Christians are one; and this is what the Savior prayed for. John 17:20,21 "Neither pray I for these alone, but them also which shall believe on me through their word; that they all may be one; as thou, Father art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

Now a diversity or waiver of forms of church organization and [illegible] Christians, and this caused strife, discord, emulation, and hatred. They become attached to [illegible] with the peculiar [illegible] they have selected, and they are tempted to resort to all means to preserve it, promote its existence, and to resist the encroachment of a different one; and the many diverse forms precipitate all Christendom into a fierce and deadly antagonism — This state of things will never improve, infidelity is driven from the world, nor the heathen receive the gospel, until Christians see eye to eye, be of the same mind, preach the same doctrines of God alike, and speak the same thing. For there is but the one fold and one Shepherd, and the sheep see and will hear his voice and follow his precept.

If Christ appointed any of the externals of his church, we are compelled to conclude that he fixed the most important ones. To say he did not, is to impeach his wisdom. The government of his church is the most important of all externals, from every conceivable consideration. He must then have appointed it, by giving principles that would determine it, by giving a pattern or example; which he did, by still adding the great force of responsibilities by saying, "If I, then, your Lord and Master have washed your feet, ye also ought to wash one another's feet; for I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you." It would not only be an impeachment of his wisdom, to suppose that he left that part of his church to be devised by man, which if badly devised would prove the subversion of his whole design, and would reflect upon his goodness and dignity.

How can we believe that God would leave His frail and feeble, though not less beloved church, here below, to the perpetual stumble of conjecture and disturbance, in this our dark voyage, without the map and chart and compass of discipline. Such a position would make Christ a less desirable and less faithful Lawgiver than Moses.

Did not God charge Moses saying, "See thou, make all things according to the pattern showed thee in the mount." Yes, he was to make every part of the old tabernacle, which was only a shadow of the new and true house, according to the heavenly pattern — And is the glorious and real, true house left to be shaped and patterned according to the many, varying, and capricious fancies of men! — like Methodism, subject to be changed by every General Conference? Yes to the language of one of old, while [illegible] Lord of all wisdom, who [illegible] the Episcopal Church framers of the day, several hundred years after this discipline was handed down by the God of heaven: "Did God take such delight in measuring out the pillars, arches, and doors of a material temple? Was he so particular and circumspect in [illegible] altars, and sacrifices, and [illegible] be altogether, lest any of these should have been made contrary to his mind? Is not a far more perfect work, more agreeable to his perfections? To the most perfect [illegible] earth, the new alliance of God to man, God never intended to leave the government of his church, ordained here, to be patched afterwards and varnished over with the many devices and [illegible] of men's [illegible]."

No, the heathen [illegible] this work to the inventions or direction of men nor angels; but [illegible] himself to set up his kingdom; and he not only published the principles of its [illegible] but gave us its example as stated before: "If I your Lord and Master have washed your feet, ye also ought to wash one another's feet." And in calling his band of his disciples [illegible] the turning of the forth to [illegible] from his presence. And before he ordains into the [illegible] to appear in the presence of God for us, he says, "My friends, the gate of the tomb opens into the world of life eternal to all those who live and keep my commandments. All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore and teach all nations; baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you always even unto the end of the world. Amen."

There is no promise that I can see anywhere on the pages of truth, that God will be with men on earth always even unto the end of the world, except, they teach the nations of the earth to observe all things whatsoever he has commanded: and the term "observe" I do honestly understand to mean simply a moral performance of the things taught when [illegible] to the world.

The language of the commission itself forbids the observance of any thing religiously, save that which he has commanded. The government of the kingdom which Daniel said the God of heaven should set up, must of necessity be of a definite character, to promote the highest welfare and happiness of its subjects; for the great lawgiver himself said, while instituting the discipline or law of the kingdom, "If ye know these things happy are ye if ye do them." Who, better than God, knows the character of a government that would be the best calculated to secure the greatest good and to promote the welfare and eternal salvation of his children?

I would solemnly ask the question, where, in the New Testament Scriptures, has Christ or his apostles authorized any man or set of men to change this all important work?—Where has he empowered to determine the discipline, to make and change laws for his kingdom? Angels might as well presume to fix the laws that regulate the worship of the church of the first born in heaven, as men to change God's law or the laws of Christ's kingdom on earth.

Though these be very serious, solemn reflections they are awfully true that mortal man has invented and instituted a form of Godliness to suit his own capricious fancy, and repudiated the terms or door of admission into his kingdom, and calls it non-essential; when the Law-giver himself declares with the following and last[illegible] words, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."

A. STALNAKER.

[To be Continued.]

For the Companion.

Pride and its Influence.

He who does not set his affections on things above, disobeys the command, and loses the most gracious and delightful discoveries of the word of God. Of these blessings which God has bestowed upon an apostate world, the Bible is the richest and the most precious. In this Book the Almighty has made a plain and full revelation of his will, so that "a wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err therein." It is the light which falls on man's pathway to direct him to peace, and God and heaven. Whatever is necessary to our peace and happiness both in reference to the present and the future, is here fully unfolded: insomuch that all who have access to the book, and yet continue in ignorance, are guilty of closing their eyes against the light, and putting away from them the only means by which they can secure immortality and eternal life.

In the perusal of this sacred volume, it becomes us to regard it as a great and important whole, [illegible] by no means to read away detached passages from their proper connections; lest we thereby make the Bible speak a language which the Holy Spirit never intended, and countenance pride and vanities to make a gaudy show in the world. These things are utterly at variance with the genius of Christianity. For instance, the depraved and dissolute in order to justify themselves in their worldly career, may select passages from the Holy Scriptures, which, separated from their connections, have the appearance of justifying the depraved propensities of the human heart.

I have particular reference to the professors of Christianity; because sinners seldom pretend to justify their course of unhallowed amusements, by the word of God; for they say that they have made no profession, and, therefore, they have a right to use those superfluities and fashions which belong to their kingdom. I have reference to those who profess to be the sons and daughters of God, and are cutting their display in a gaudy show, and who in the house of worship, seated under the sound of the watchman's voice, while in gaudy attire, still try to justify themselves in their superfluity, by referring to the language of Solomon: "Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth and let thy heart cheer thee in the days of thy youth; and walk in the ways of thine heart, and in the sight of thine eyes." Eccl. 11: 9. But hear Solomon farther say: "For all these things will God bring thee to judgment." Solomon also says:—"When pride cometh, then cometh shame; but with the lowly is wisdom."

I am surprised to hear the proud and haughty make their appeals to Solomon to bolster their tottering cause. The votary of intemperance, may justify his ruinous indulgence, by referring to Solomon, where he says: "Eat thy bread with joy, and drink thy wine with a merry heart." The advocates of pride have taken the above language, as a defence of unruly amusements. The time when pride presents itself in its gayest garb, is generally when its votaries enter the house of worship.

The lessons intended to be taught by such language as the above [illegible] and diversified conduct of the children of men during their earthly pilgrimage. Human life is marked by seasons of gladness and rejoicing, and by seasons of sorrow and distress; and these alternate elations and depressions are accompanied by their appropriate manifestations of exultion or of weeping. By such language, also, the humble and pious are reminded that the time is at hand when their joys shall be unmixed, and their rejoicing uninterrupted forever. With this interpretation before us, it cannot be supposed that the seductive and dangerous amusements of pride receive any countenance from any passage in the inspired writings.

I am sorry to say, my brother, my sister, there are some that profess to be the salt of the earth, and the light of the world, raising their pen in defence of pride; saying that the door might be enlarged that the many thousands might come flocking home. Oh! let those who have put their hand to the Gospel plow, put their foot upon this daring evil that is so fast flooding our country, and is the means of making shipwreck of hundreds daily. It must appear then, to every impartial inquirer after truth, that pride, in the common acceptation of the term, cannot be defended by the word of God.

There are seasons in which Holy and devout gratitude and joy may manifest themselves by leaping, as David did on certain occasions.—The proud professors often make use of St. Luke 15: 24, 25, in defence of pride: "For this my son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost, and is found. And they began to be merry; now the elder son was in the field; and as he came and drew nigh to the house, he heard music and dancing." That profane dancing is not intended here, is evident from the following considerations: The father of the prodigal was, I believe, designed by our Lord to represent the Father of mercies, and the lost son, the Gentiles in general, and every sinner in particular, who returns unto God in sincere penitence. The joy of the household servants was intended, I believe, to represent the joy that there is among the angels of God "over one sinner that repenteth." We are, therefore, bound to believe that the whole transaction was conducted with the spirit of devout and grateful rejoicing. On any other ground we destroy the whole force of our Lord's application of this parable to the conversion of the Gentiles, and mutilate one of the most beautiful and touching narratives of the New Testament.

My friends, where can you find an occasion so full of touching interest? It would be expected that there should be manifestions of deep and sincere joy, so that a grateful Father might display his gladness by leaping. The father of the prodigal, no doubt, felt rather to rejoice, than to mourn over the cheering reformation of a son of his love.

There are many more passages that the proud professor brings up to try to justify himself in his course of frivolous amusements. Oh, what a pity, that the professed teacher of the Gospel will stand before God and man, and proclaim to the people that there is no harm in superfluity, if the heart is only right. The beautiful foliage of the tree does not always represent fruit: it most likely turns out as the barren fig tree—more leaves than fruit. Those proud teachers also confirm their belief by their examples in decorating their own body.—O brethren and sisters, take warning with myself, (for these are solemn and impressive truths,) lest we, too, might hold that spiritual sword, which is the word of God, at too great a distance from us, and allow the enemy of souls to steal in on us. We should be very careful that we do not get so high above our fellow creatures that we cannot come down to converse with our brother and sister in the Lord. The great eagle-minded, that soar in the sky, must come down on a level with the poor snail that sloths on the earth, in order to enter in by the door into the sheepfold. We cannot even be a part of that spiritual building, except we come on that good old leveling system that our blessed Lord laid out for us to walk in; and we are safe in saying that no proud heart can walk in that narrow way that leads to life. There is not a word in the Holy Book that was ever intended to give any countenance to pride in its various forms; this is evident from the fact that God is a being of infinite holiness and purity, and must necessarily abhor sin in all its forms. Pride, we are sorry to say, is generally practiced by professors: it is an unholy and sinful amusement, consequently all who practice it, incur the divine displeasure and are exposed to the wrath of God.

I say pride is sinful in the sight of God. We shall attempt to prove it by the following arguments.

No person can engage in it with a good conscience. Conscience is that faculty by which we discern the moral quality of actions; or the soul's opinion of its actions and duties. If the mind be mistaken in reference to the moral quality of any action or course of conduct, an incorrect testimony will be rendered. That every human heart is under the influence of darkness and error respecting divine things, until enlightened by the grace of God, is the uniform testimony both of scripture and experience. This was the case with Saul of Tarsus, according to his own declaration in Acts 26: 5, "I verily thought with myself that I ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth." Many of the most bitter persecutors of the church of God have acted under the influence of similar erroneous feelings. John 16: 2, "The time cometh that whosoever killeth you, will think that he doeth God service."

From these facts we learn how important it is that the mind should be illuminated by divine grace and guided by the Spirit and word of God, in order to form a correct opinion of the moral quality of actions.

It is the uniform testimony of the word of God, and is corroborated by the personal experience of all true Christians, that the Spirit of the gospel, infused into the heart of a true believer in Jesus Christ, lays the axe to the root of all pride and vanity, and turns away the mind from sinful amusements and unholy recreation, in all their varieties and modifications. This implanting of new affections, by which the entire current of the soul is changed and turned to God, is the most effectual way in which individual actions, which are immoral in their character, can be prohibited. In this comprehensive and singular provision of the gospel of Christ, we recognize the wisdom of God in a very clear and impressive exhibition. Were prohibition attached to some individual acts of immorality, or sinful recreation, the incessant invention of new diversions, or the remodeling and revival of old ones, all possessing a similar, demoralizing tendency, would speedily render the commandment obsolete and nuigatory; but in the individual act of pride, the disposition towards its indulgence is removed when the heart comes under the saving influence of the gospel. To a sincere and humble christian, whose paramount desire is to keep "a conscience void of offence towards God and man, pride is deadly to everything fair and beautiful in the soul. The entire testimony of the wise and good is, and ever has been, that the amusement here spoken of stands intimately connected with the kingdom of the devil, and is one of the most powerful and seducing weapons; else why is it that the mind instinctively associates pride with every unholy and licentious amusement? Why is it that all holy men instinctively shrink from pride as from the breath of a plague? Why is it that the gay, and thoughtless, and licentious part of every community are the firm supporters, and constant attendants on this species of amusements? My Brothers and Sisters, let us be careful that we are not ensnared, and slain with this deadly weapon of the devil. Why is it that, by means of gay and costly dresses, brilliant lights, garlands of flowers, and the soft accompaniment of music, in the house of worship, a witchery is thrown over the entire scene, which has a tendency to exclude serious thoughts from every breast? It is just because the amusement itself is irrational and immoral, and needs such collaterals to amuse and engross the attention; it is because conformity to the world is the ruling passion of the soul; and the carnal mind demonstrates its enmity against God, and establishes its affinity to all that is evil, by carefully excluding every remembrance of God and eternity from the scenes of pride Hence I arrive at the conclusion, that the practice no good man can follow with a clear conscience, but which has always been the fashionable and favorite amusement of the most dissolate and profane characters, is in itself a sinful practice.

WM H. QUINN.

(To be continued.)

The World Our Battle Field.

A mind of wandering and melancholy thought, impatient of the grievous realities of our state, may, at some moments, almost breathe the wish that we had been a different order of beings, in another dwelling-place than this, and appointed on a different service to the Almighty. In vain! Here still we are, to pass the first part of our existence in a world where it is impossible to be at peace, because there has come into it a mortal enemy to all that live in it.—Amidst the darkness, that vails from us the state of the universe, we would willingly be persuaded that this, our world, may be the only region (except that of penal justice) where the cause of evil is permitted to maintain a contest. Here, perhaps, may be almost its last encampment, where its prolonged power of hostility may be suffered in order to give a protracted display of the manner of its appointed destruction. Here our lot is cast, on a ground so awfully preoccupied; a calamitous distinction! but yet a sublime one, if thus we may render to the Eternal King a service of a more arduous kind than it is possible to the inhabitants of any other world than this to render Him; and if thus we may be trained, through devotion and conformity to the Celestial Chief in this warfare, to the final attainment of what he has promised, in so many illustrious forms, to him that overcometh. We shall soon leave the region where so much is in rebellion against our God. But we shall go where all that pass from our world must present themselves as from a battle, or be denied to mingle in the eternal joys and triumphs of the conquerors.—John Foster.

The Last Judgment.

What discoveries will be made then! What development of hidden virtue and of secret vice! How that which is covered now will be revealed! and how that which is hidden now will be displayed, as upon the house-top! How those who in the present world have been despised and rejected, on account of the character of their external employment, will be found exalted to the high places of honor; while those who have here held high station in the world, and it may be in the professing church, will be found in a station of shame and everlasting contempt. What discoveries will be made then!

And what unions will occur then! The saints of God, from various climes and in various ages, reciprocally unknown to each other but by distant report, or probably unknown to each other at all, will mingle together; while those who have trodden the same path of pilgrimage will rush to each other's arms, under the sanction of the great President, acknowledging themselves to be to each other a glory, a crown of rejoicing, and a joy in the day of his coming. What unions will be then!

And what separations will be then! Besides the grand separatian of the classes—the righteous and the wicked, what separations will there be of those who formerly were joined in social habitudes and relations of life—pastors from people, teachers from scholars, husbands from wives, parents from children, friends from friends! And the separation is irreversible! It will be—my heart trembles as I utter the expression—it will be the scene and the season of everlasting farewell. How overpowering then is to be that great event, when the assembly shall separate, never to approach and never to commingle more!—James Parsons.

SHAVINGS.—Whenever a minister has preached a sermon that pleases the whole congregashun, he has probably preached one the Lord won't indorse. If you want to find out a man's real disposition, take him when he iz wet and hungry. If he iz amiable then, dry him and fill him up, and yu have got an angel. The man who has never been tempted, don't kno how dishonest he iz.—Josh Billings.

AS THE spokes of a carriage-wheel approach their center, they approach each other; so, also, when men are brought to Jesus Christ, the center of life and hope, they are drawn toward each other in brotherly relationship, and stand side by side journeying to their heavenly home.—F. J. Sergeant.

A HELPING word to one in trouble, is often like a switch on a railroad track—but one inch between wreck and a smooth-rolling prosperity.

I do not preach here everything that I think. Why do I not? Because I do not know that I believe it yet. There is nothing in this world that requires such long seasoning and ripening as new thoughts —BEECHER.

The reward of a thing well done is to have done it.

Christian Family Companion

Tyrone City, Pa., Aug., 1, 1871.

The Lord's Supper, No. 2.

It is not difficult to see how such divisions and contentions as those existing in the church at Corinth, would operate against a proper performance of any duty, or a faithful observance of any ordinance, that required unity of sentiment and common action. They no doubt were zealous; but their zeal was not always guided by knowledge and prudence, nor executed by that power which is found alone in union.

In 1 Cor. 11 : 2, Paul says : "Now I praise you, brethren, that ye remember me in all things, and keep the ordinances, as I delivered them to you." But in the 17th verse he says : "Now in this that I declare unto you, I praise you not." He then made his declaration. It had reference to one of the ordinances,—the Lord's Supper,—and was equivalent to saying that, through their schisms, their effort to keep the Lord's supper was rendered futile, there was no eating of the Lord's Supper, but of their own. Having declared this important fact, in the 22nd verse he says : "What shall I say to you ? shall I praise you in this? I praise you not." In one sense they kept the ordinances and Paul praised them for it; but the, Lord's Supper is an ordinance, and in some sense they failed in its observance, and Paul censures them. To keep the ordinances properly they must be kept in number and in order : in number none should be omitted, nor should any be added ; and in order they should be observed in harmony with the form, spirit, and design of the original institution. It is evident that the Corinthian brethren kept the number, but did not observe the order.

It is admitted by all that they pretended to eat the Lord's Supper; and as they made a significant failure, we will here institute an inquiry to ascertain what was the cause of the failure—why their observance was not the eating of the Lord's supper ? If we can ascertain the hindering cause, it will only be necessary to take that cause out of the way to enable us to see what was necessary to a proper observance of the Lord's supper. As Paul was setting things in order it was necessary for him to mention the points of disorder ; and in our inquiry we shall proceed with this rule : Only what Paul disapproved and censured was objectionable, and necessary to be abandoned in order to observe the Lord's supper. To this rule we think no one can object.

From the fact that the manner in which they ate rendered the meal their own supper, we learn two things : first, they brought provisions in considerable abundance ; and, second, they ate the meal in the evening.

Does Paul reprove them for bringing together too much food ? No, he said nothing against the bountiful supply of provisions ; and, therefore, according to our rule, that was not objectionable, and need not be abandoned. But, as, in the observance of every ordinance of the Lord's house, every thing that is not objectionable must be in harmony with the form, spirit, and design of the original institution, so it is evident that an abundant supply of food, which was not found objectionable, is in harmony with, and a part of, the original institution of the Lord's Supper.—Examine this argument ; turn it around and over, and look at it from all sides : it will bear inspection.

Does Paul censure his Corinthian brethren because they had the meal in the evening ? Again we answer, no : not one word of objection is urged against that ; therefore, that practice need not be abandened : it, too, is in harmony with the original appointment of the Lord's Supper.—This position is confirmed in the 23d, 24th and 25th verses, where Paul declares that Jesus instituted the Communion, or Bread and Wine, after supper, on "the same night in which he was betrayed." Every Bible reader knows that the Lord's Supper was instituted in the evening, and that it was observed in the evening, or at night, in Apostolic times.

If then, Paul neither objected to the quantity of provisions nor to the time in which they ate, what did he object to ? what was it that was so subversive of their design and so destructive to the ordinance of the Lord's Supper ? We answer :

1. As they were divided into parties so that Paul censured them saying, "Every one of you saith, I am of Paul, and I of Apollos, and I of of Cephas, and I of Christ," (1 Cor. 1 : 12,) so they came together not for the better, but for the worse—their meeting together instead of being a benefit to them, was injurious ; for they were divided into schisms, or sects, and there was such contention among them, that they ate in parties, and not as one body—the Lord's body. Paul (Ch. 1 : 13,) had asked the significant question : "Is Christ divided ?" Nay, verily, "A bone of him shall not be broken."—We showed before that the Passover which was a type of Christ, could not be divided, and part be eaten in one house and part in another, and so "Christ our Passover" is not divided. And as Christ is not divided, so the Lord's body or church, is one, "There is one body" : (Eph. 4 : 4.) even as our Savior prayed : "That they all may be one ; as thou Father art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us." John 17 : 21. They ate as sects, schisms, parties, not as the one, united, unbroken body of the Lord ; and consequently they could not eat the Lord's Supper.

2. They were carnal. Paul had said to them : "Ye are yet carnal ; for whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and divisions, are ye not carnal, and walk as men ? For while one saith I am of Paul ; and another, I am of Apollos, are ye not carnal?" 1 Cor. 3 : 3, 4 Now, these divisions among them were evidence of their carnality ; and as 'the carnal mind is enmity against God" : as "it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be," so, while they were carnal, they could not properly observe the Lord's Supper ; for the carnal, or "natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness to him ; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." They were carnal and could eat only a carnal meal—their own supper.

3. They were exclusive, selfish and gluttonous. While some ate to the full—were drunken, others, no doubt of the poorer class, (perhaps rich in faith,) were hungry and put to shame. Thus they excluded the Lord's poor, manifested their selfishness, and gratified the lusts of their flesh, feeding themselves fearlessly, even to drunkenness ; and consequently they could not eat the Lord's Supper.

4. They were disorderly in not tarrying one for another, and all eating at the same time. God is a God of order, and everything connected with his worship is to be conducted "decently and in order"; but these Corinthian brethren were disorderly, and in their eating had not even respect to common propriety ; and consequently their meal could not be the Lord's Supper.

5. By eating in a disorderly, schismatical, and gluttonous manner, they made themselves guilty of the enormous impropriety, if not crime, of devouring, without discernment, the emblems of the broken body and shed blood of the Lord. The Lord, when he instituted his supper, in "the same night in which he was betrayed, took bread ; and when he had given thanks, he brake it, and said, Take, eat : this is my body, which is broken for you," &c. (verse 24) In this verse, as also in Matth 26 : 26, the bread, emblematical of the broken body of Jesus is called the Lord's body," 1 Cor 24 [illegible] 27 verse, the literal body of Jesus is called "the body of the Lord." The church is also frequently spoken of as being the Lord's body—the body of Christ. See Rom. 12 : 4, 5 ; 1 Cor. 12 : 12—28 ; Eph. 1 : 22, 23 ; 4 : 4.

We see therefore, that "the Lord's body" may mean, either the literal body of Jesus, the spiritual body of Christ—the church, or the Communion bread. In the 29th verse, Paul says, "He that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body." The Lord's body in this text does not mean the literal body of Jesus : it therefore means either the church, or the communion emblems, or both. Discern means, "To distinguish ; to mark or note as different ; to discriminate."—Worcester. "Not discerning," therefore means, not to distinguish ; not to mark or note as different ; not to discriminate. The Corinthian brethren did not discern the spiritual body of the Lord—the church : they did not regard it in its true light ; they did not distinguish properly between it and the body of the world ; they did not mark the great difference between this spiritual body and carnal societies ; for it was before shown that they were schismatical—carnal.

Now, in their carnality, they ate in a divided, carnal, exclusive, selfish, gluttonous, disorderly manner : they even devoured that which should have been distinguished, —set apart, —the bread and wine of the communion ; and thus, in not eating upon these emblems according to the instructions Paul had received and delivered unto them, they failed in discerning the Lord's body. No wonder that Paul said, "Ye come together not for the better, but for the worse." No wonder that he warned them against eating and drinking unworthily—in an improper manner and without preparation of their own hearts. No marvel has he said, "[illegible] into one [illegible] Lord's Supper" ; or, according to the original reading, "To eat [illegible] Lord's Supper" ; or according to the Revised Translation by Dr. A. B. C. "There is no eating of the Supper of the Lord."

We will now contrast what the Corinthian brethren had and did with what they should have had and done : the column headed SUPPER contains the former : and that headed LORD'S SUPPER, the latter. The items marked with a star (*) were not objectionable, and hence are to be retained.

SUPPER	LORD'S SUPPER
1. [illegible] abundant provision.	1. They should have provided abundantly.
2. They ate in the evening.	2. They should have eaten in the morning.
3. They were divided into several parties.	3. They should have been perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment.
4. They were disorderly in eating.	4. They should have tarried one for another.
5. They were exclusive, selfish, and gluttonous.	5. They should have made no distinction between themselves and should have eaten temperately.
6. They owed no duty to the poor of the church.	6. They should have had a supply for the poor. "Whether any brethren, have no relations to help, let the church help them."
7. They did not discern the Lord's body, and did not distinguish between the church and the world, and did not set apart a portion of their provisions for sacred purposes.	7. They should not have been conformed to the world. They should have discerned between the Lord's body and the evils of the world—and thus should have set apart a portion of their food and wine, which they should have given thanks for to the Lord and consecrated as Paul has informed us in the book of the Lord.
8. They had their own supper.	8. They should have had the Lord's Supper.

After carefully comparing these columns, read by lines, the column under the head of 'supper," and you will have a fair view of the manner in which the Corinthian brethren came together to their hurt, and ate their own supper. Then read the column under the head of "Lord's Supper," and you will have a tolerbly distinct view of the manner in which they should have met, been together, and eaten, in order to have eaten the Lord's Supper.

We have conducted this inquiry on the evident facts, that the church at Corinth was out of order; that Paul was endeavoring to set things in order; that to do this it was necessary for him to enumerate the points of disorder; that only those things observed by them that Paul disapproved and censured were objectionable and were to be abandoned or corrected; that, whatever they observed to which Paul did not object, was in harmony with the original appointment and design, and was to be continued. In this way we have found the hindering causes that prevented the meal which they ate from being the Lord's Supper. These causes we have taken cut of the way, and in the column headed "Lord's Supper," the reader will see what is left to constitute the Lord's Supper. Thus the Corinthian brethren should have observed the Lord's Supper; and as the abuse of an ordinance cannot do away with its use, so we should do away with such abuses and observe this ordinance in its beautiful and significant order.

We will now suppose that Paul's letter to the Corinthians had its designed effect, and that they resolved to keep the Lord's Supper.

They found it necessary first of all, to do away with divisions, and instead of saying, "I am of Paul, and I of Apollos," &c., to regard Paul, and Apollos, and Cephas, as ministers by whom they believed; and to look through the ministry up to Christ. By a prayerful and persevering effort they were delivered from their carnal and divided condition:—they all spake the same thing; there were no divisions among them; they were "perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment": they were one body,—the Lord's body,—a separate, distinct, people: not conformed to this world, but transformed by the renewing of their minds.

In their renewed, spiritually minded, and united state, they joined together and made provision, every one in proportion to his ability, to observe the Lord's Supper: and although the food provided did not consist of rich and unwholesome dainties, the supply was abundant.

They came together in the evening; and after the services appropriate and necessary to prepare them for a worthy eating together as the Lord's people, they surrounded the Lord's table to partake of the Lord's Supper.

We now have the Corinthian brethren before us in proper order. How delightful is the scene! See how they love each other: there is no distinction between the rich and the poor! Behold! how humble, unpretending they are! These persons certainly have a desire to minister to each other's wants, to serve one another, to build each other up: it would seem as though the richest were willing to even wash the feet of the Lord's poor.

There is one sight that is very attractive. The sisters are all modestly attired; their adornment is that of a meek and quiet spirit; and they all have their heads covered. What can this mean? They observed Paul's instructions, and are wearing this covering, not merely as a token of subjection, but as a power—to signify that they claim the attention, care, and protection of their brethren.

Union is portrayed in every action, love beams from every eye, and gratitude to God for the privilege they enjoy of observing the ordinances of his house fills every breast: thanks are offered to God, and every member says "AMEN."

They have tarried one for another; and now they eat together in love, simplicity, and union. How expressive and impressive is this sight! It is evening; the toils of the day are over; the member's of the Lord's house have met together in a family capacity, each one from his field of labor, and are partaking the Lord's Supper. Surely this is Bethel! surely these are the Lord's chosen and peculiar people! surely this is the eating of the Lord's Supper.

But we see bread and wine that are not used; what does this mean? It is all clear: they have properly discerned the Lord's body; and have also set apart this portion of their provision, according to the commandment, after the supper to commemorate the death of their Lord.

Editorial Correspondence.

DALE CITY, PA., July 24th, 1871.

Dear C. F. C.: I will now for the first time indite you a few lines of editorial at our prospective home. Dr. Buechly's office therefore has the honor (?) of having furnished facilities for writing the first editorial in this city.

We arrived at this place on Saturday morn last. We undertook to practice a little feat of economy by stopping off at Brinton's, and walking over to Port Perry, on this Road, a distance of about one-half mile; but we paid for our learning. It was about half-past twelve o'clock at night when we left the cars, and we were obliged to travel the streets, roads, and alleys until daylight, as we could find lodgings nowhere, except for a few hours in a watchman's box. It was the most desperate expedition of our life.

Yesterday forenoon we tried to preach at Greenville meeting-house; and spent the afternoon with brother

Elias Fadely, who delivered us safe at this place in the evening, where we again attended a meeting.

To-day we are attending to the business of arranging matters for erecting our new office. We are finding the price of building material, and mechanical labor much higher than we had expected. However we expect the work to go on promptly, and to be ready for us by Oct. 15th.

We are still highly pleased with our location. One source of our gratification is, that we will be on a first class Railroad, and one of the main thoroughfares of the State. We have now passed twice over the western part of the road, and are favorably impressed with its condition and management. True, the road is yet new and unfinished, yet trains pass with remarkable smoothness and regularity, and perfect safety. Brook's Tunnel, through Shoo Fly Hill, is not yet finished, and the Hill is crossed by a direct heavy grade route, at such speed as to insure safety. Our train, the Express, was in charge of conductor W. W. Gaither, late of the P. & E. R. R., with whom it is a pleasure to travel. He is cautious, attentive, and obliging. But the most popular man connected with the road, is the President, Mr. Hughart. It is truly surprising that any official can maintain such a universal reputation with employees and citizens.—We hope he is in every way deserving of it, and may ever maintain it, and the order and system of his new line of Railroad. Persons traveling from Pittsburg, or any other point in the North-west, to South-eastern Pennsylvania, and Maryland, will find this route much the shortest and cheapest.

The members, as well as the community at large, are well, and everything is pleasant and agreeable. The meetings are interesting and the people are attentive. We have been making our headquarters at Dr. Buechly's, and the Doctor has accompanied us on our business expeditions. When we get through with business, we expect to make a few visits.—Wednesday we expect to leave here.

Yours, H. R. Holsinger.

The Brethren's Tune Book.

Considerable interest is being manifested in the Brethren's Tune and Hymn Book, and a number of inquiries have lately been received, concerning it. It had been our intention when the first announcement was made, to have the work completed a year before this time. But we have been detained from sources from which we had not expected it. And now we cannot definitely state when we shall be able to issue the first edition, but expect to give something more positive in a few weeks.

Charity Fund.

As it is some time since we made a report of the charity list and fund, we now make the following statement:

CREDITS.

Balance on former report,		$46 55
One copy 7 1-2 months		.90
" " six "	50c pd.	.25
" " " "		.75
Total,		$48 45

DEBTOR.

C.	$2 60
D. Wolf,	.50
X.	.15
Christian Shank,	.75
C. A.	.50
D. C. M.	.65
Ruhama Riley,	1.14
J. Renner,	.50
S. S.	1.00
R. E.	.75
E. Brumbaugh,	.40
Total,	$8.94
Total Balance,	$39 51

We notice that, since our last report, the credits have been reduced seven dollars and four cents. This is encouraging, and it strengthens us in the confidence that the Lord's people are still willing to minister to the wants of the needy. E

Answers to Correspondents.

D. B. Teeter:—All right: it was an oversight.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Our Flower In Heaven.

We heard the voice of the Lord,
One cold and wintry night,
Saying, "Give me one of your fairest flowers,
For mine Heavenly garland bright."

We looked from the window at eve,
We looked forth again in the dawn;
We only saw the desolate street,
And shuddered, that bleak, cold morn.

We wandered away to the woodland,
By paths that were leafless and bare:
There was tangled weed and wither'd grass
But never a blossom there.

So we gave our human flower,
The flower we loved the best,—
The Lord received it tenderly,
And laid it in his breast.

And when the Sabbath bells ring out,
Wherever we may roam,
We shall know the Lord, who watches all,
Has taken our darling home!

E. A.

How to Use Money

He who would do good with his worldly posessions had best do it now. In this, as in all other acts of obedience to God, the present is the accepted time. One to-day is worth two to morrows. He who would win the golden stream of worldly wealth, and escape the perils of perdition, must make broad channels through which that stream may flow, and bless and water those around him. If he would have the oil in his cruse gush like a perennial fountain, he must borrow empty vessels far and near, and pour it out until all are filled.

"We ought not," says Wesley, "to forbid people to be diligent and frugal We must exhort Christians to gain all they can, and to save all they can; that is, in effect, to grow rich. What, then, can we do that our money may not sink us to the nethermost hell? There is one way: and there is no other way under heaven If those who gain all they can, and save all they can, will likewise give all they can, the more they gain the more they will grow in grace, and the more treasure they will lay up in heaven."

Minister's Nerves.

[illegible] upon the nervous vitality of the men who are enthusiasts in the work of the ministry. With clergymen of rapid temperament some kinds of men—there is no danger at this point. The [illegible] and [illegible] themselves and [illegible] suggestive writing the better it is for them, and the more useful they become. But with many nervous, rapid men, a little trouble keeps awake nights, the case is altered. Such men should guard themselves with jealous care, and never make either a useless or wasteful expenditure of their nerve-power. For this power is a precious gift. It is a talent, one of the best. You may let it loose a little in the delivery of your sermons, and in conversation with individuals about their souls, and in the work of guiding the membership. But do not waste your lightning on things of no account. "It is better to lose a pint of blood from your body than to have a nerve tapped. When a man's nerve power is expended his useful ministry is at an end, even though he be still young.

Short Temperance Sermons.

"Every moderate drinker could abandon the intoxicating cup if he would; every inebriate would if he could."—JOHN B. GOUGH.

"Is the intoxicating cup discontent? make it comfort, cowardice for courage, foolishness for confidence, sadness for joy; and they all find rain."

"What man should put an enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains! that we should with joy, pleasure, and applause, transform ourselves to beasts."—SHAKESPEARE.

"Those men who destroy a healthful constitution of body by intemperance and an irregular life, do as much as in them lies kill themselves, as those who hang, or poison, or drown themselves."—SENECA.

"I challenge any man who understands the nature of ardent spirits, and yet for the sake of gain continues to be in the traffic, to show that he is not involved in the guilt of murder."—DR. LYMAN BEECHER.

"I am deeply convinced that the evils of intemperance can never cease till the virtuous in society unite in [illegible] the man who attempts to accumulate wealth by dealing out poison and death to his neighbors as intemperance."—JOHN PIERPONT.

"Some of the dismal evils of drunkenness are houses without windows, gardens without trees, a life without things, home without love, children without clothing, principles, morals, and manners."—SEARCH.

"Who has a stupid intellect, a broken memory, a blasted wife, and, which is worse than all, a lacerated and benighted conscience, but the intemperate? So impossible is it to earn sin without making oneself a blockhead too."—SEARCH.

"Truly, there is no enemy more dangerous than drunkenness, and no slavery more terrible than that of the drunkard. At one time it encounters under the form of custom, habit, friendship; at another, under the deceitful garb of pleasure! But when it has once completely fastened on its victim, to what a pitiable state of misery degradation is he reduced! He will readily barter his own liberty, his honor, his character, his peace, and the very existence of his family—for what? For mere brute gratification for senseless, stupid indulgence!"—DANIEL KIMBALL.

A Pagan Legend of Jesus.

Publius Lentulus, assumed by some to have been Procensul of Judea prior to Herod, is reported to have seen the Savior, and to have written the following letter to the Roman Senate: "At this time appeared a man who is still living and endowed with mighty power; his name is Jesus Christ. His disciples call him the Son of God; others regard him as a powerful prophet. He raises the dead to life, and heals the sick of every description of infirmity and disease. This man is of a lofty stature and well proportioned; his countenance severe and virtuous, so that he inspires beholders with feelings of both fear and love. The hair of his head is of the color of wine, and from the top of his head to his ears, straight and without radiance; but it descends from the ears to the shoulders in shining curls. From the shoulders the hair flows down the back, dividing into portions after the manner of Nazarenes; his forehead is clear and without wrinkle; his face free from blemish, and slightly tinged with red; his physiognomy noble and [illegible] the nose and mouth faultless. His beard is abundant, the same color of the hair, and forked. His eyes are very blue and brilliant. In reproving or censuring, he is awe-inspiring; in exhorting and teaching, his speech is gentle and caressing. His countenance is marvelous in serenity and grace. He has never been seen to laugh, but many have seen him weep. He is slender in person, his hands are straight and long, his arms beautiful. Grave and solemn in his discourse, his language is simple and quiet. In appearance he is the most beautiful of the sons of men."

For as the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them; even so the Son quickeneth whom he will.

For the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son:

That all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father. He that honoreth not the Son honoreth not the Father which hath sent him. —Jesus.

The Irishman and the Priest.

Never was a better answer made than a poor Irishman made to a Catholic Priest while defending himself for reading the Bible. "But," said the priest, "the Bible is for the priests, and not for the likes o' you." "Ah! but, sir," he answered, "I was reading in my Bible, 'You shall read it to your children,' an' sure the priests have got no children." "But, Michael," says the priest, "you can't understand the Bible. It is not o' you to understand it, my man."—"Ah, very well, yer reverence, if I can not understand it, it will do me no harm, and what I can understand does me a heap o' good." "Very well, Mike," said the priest, "you must go to the church, and the church will teach you. The church will give you the milk of the Word." "And where does the church get it from but out of the Bible? Ah! yer reverence, I would rather keep the cow myself."

Idleness never yielded the least mite of pleasure or profit; yet the body and limbs require rest but this rest should be earned by legitimate manual labor.—Ohio Cultivator.

May our happiness be sincere and our joys lasting.

CORRESPONDENCE

Correspondence of every sort intended for this paper, must be addressed to the Brethren. Every letter must contain the name and address of the writer, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscripts will not be returned. All communications intended for this paper must be written on one side of the sheet only.

Brother Holsinger:—I send you an editorial, cut from the "Philadelphia Post." It excites a glorious effort, without alluding to the great and potential cause—the widespread circulation of the word of God aided by the enlightening influence of the increasing education of the people of all nations. Please give it a place in the "Companion."

Fraternally,

SILAS THOMAS.

THE POPE OF ROME.

So rapidly are events of tremendous importance transpiring in Europe, that the mind almost staggers as it attempts to grasp them. The unification of the German States, the humiliation of France and deposition of Napoleon III, the Blood less revolution in England, the establishing of the Italian capital at Rome, and now the probable banishment of the Pope from the city and his retirement to some insignificant island, follow so closely upon each other that there is no bounded for change in the political status of European powers that can cause us surprise.

A few years ago the mere suggestion of Victor Emanuel attacking the authority to rule the Eternal City would have induced the boldest man with the most big and threatening, and the consternation would have brought Europe upon the Italian nation in a host of bayonets to hurl back its king as a usurper of the sacred rights of the great head of the Catholic Church, and would have certainly cost him his throne, if not his life.

To day the Pope in vain appeals to France; Austria runs a deaf ear to his supplications; Spain cannot and will not give him help; Germany takes no interest in the temporal sovereignty, and Pius the Ninth, after ruling the Church until his tottering feet just tremble upon the verge of the grave, and four score years have been spent in his splendid palaces and magnificent city, is obliged to turn away without a hand to sustain him, or a voice strong enough to aid him in his desperate extremity.

Truly the nineteenth century is the crowning point of all time. The dreams of tyrants are spurned, the power of aristocracy and aristocracy shattered, the baneful influence of religious control over the ruling of nations, that has grown hoary with centuries of age, blown to the winds; the destiny of whole nations that seemed doomed to unending submission to the will of a few rulers changed with the changing of the seasons.

Let the good work go on. The bright day of liberty to the people has dawned, and soon the glad cry of universal freedom will resound from nations to nations.

Brother Holsinger:—Permit me to inform the brethren and sisters through your valuable paper in reference to brother Jesse Crosswhite of Tennessee, who has proposed thro' the "Companion" to travel through the Northwest and preach the gospel of our blessed Savior, on condition of the brethren bearing his expenses, in sending their names, (even their direct P. O.) I assure the members who send him any assistance that liberality will make the proper use of it, and do as he has stated.

But my principal object in this brief article is this. Brother Crosswhite is an aged worthy Minister and an ordained Elder of the church, possessing talents and wisdom of which congregations would be benefited, even in the country as well. The object to me seems laudable in sending him the means which he must have to travel new scenes. Our brethren often have made to enjoy, hearing him expound the word acceptably, while he was visiting [illegible] Penn, and North Carolina, riding horseback through heat and cold, rain and storm, swimming our horses across the streams that [illegible] the mountain slopes. I hope brother Crosswhite may succeed in his proposed journey, and give us a call here in Northern Indiana, where he will find many warm hearts and open purses. "Go ye," and we will help send you.

P. R. WRIGHTSMAN.

South Bend, Ind.

Brother Holsinger:—Many are good lessons received through the Companion: and we derive much comfort from the same. There are thoughts to cheer us, and hope to cheer us while on our way where many pilgrims have gone. While we are meditating upon that bright, happy realization of those who have gone before, we are encouraged to go on with lighter steps, and more zeal than ever; for we know that our labor is not in vain in the Lord. We learn much of that country by reading the Companion. We hear of the increase of the government of Jesus, the enlargement of the borders of Zion, and the zeal of the vindicators of God's truths. Glorious news to every lover of Soul! Sinners are coming to Jesus; they have been reconciled under the hammer of God's word. The two-edged sword has separated the corruptions of sin from the new-born souls; and the oil of God's grace had been applied—the wound is healed—they have become new creatures. Angels rejoice; Jesus smiles; the Father forgives, and all is well. But the enemy is getting angry. He is showing his [illegible]. His agents are on the look out. They are preparing their swords to wake the threatened blow. Then look out for the little season of rest will be fulfilled to the souls under the altar, where their fellows must be killed—Has this time been finished?—Rev. 6:9-11.

SAM. C. BARNES.

Waitsville, Md.

SHANESVILLE, OHIO, }
July 22, A. D., 1871. }

Brother Holsinger, greeting:—I take my pen in hand to write a few lines to you to inform you that our beloved mother, Jane Hardesty, is lying very sick and is expected to die. He was not expected to live; but this morning he appears a little better. The Doctor has some hopes for him this morning, although we know not how it may terminate yet, he is so weak that he cannot talk much. Brother John took his bed on the 11th of this month. He greatly desires the prayers of the church everywhere in behalf of himself and family. Three are also these of his sons sick with the same fever; but they are not so bad. Oh, may it be the Lord's will that brother John can remain with us a while longer, as he greatly needed in the church. He moved into this arm of the church last March, a year ago. There are three speakers in our church with brother John. The other two are both young speakers yet, so the most of the preaching lies on him; and if it is the Lord's will that brother John will get well, he will not be able to preach much this Summer. He has an appointment to fulfill in Columbiania county, Ohio, on the 12th of next month, but he will not be able to do so. I hope some of the brethren will take his place and fulfill his appointment.

We have had ten additions to the church this Summer, principally young persons. We hope the sinners will come flocking home to Jesus; for Jesus is our friend. I would say then, let us live faithful unto the end, that, when the Lord calls us home, we may be prepared to meet him.—What a happy time that will be, when we can meet in that spirit world where parting is known no more. Let us partake of the water of life freely, for we know that our lives at the longest are not long. Let us be ready at any time to meet our blessed Savior; for he is the giver of every good and perfect gift. May the Lord be our helper in every time of need.

Your Brother in Christ,

SAMUEL J. BURGER.

An Appeal

To the Brethren whom the Lord has blessed with this world's goods, whose store-houses are filled and to whom want is a stranger:

We have just received a letter from Brother John B. Allensworth, the minister who wants to move to Oregon this fall. He is just recovering from a spell of sickness. He lay under the physicians hands four weeks. He says he has only received $15,00 toward bearing his expenses: $5,00 from Ohio, $5,00 from Indiana, $5,00 from Iowa. The church where brother Allensworth lives is small, and the most of the members are poor, like himself.

The Bible directs and commands and exhorts us to the giving of alms, and their promises such large rewards to those who heed; then I see so many good pieces in the Visitor and Companion to urge us to deeds of charity, that I think it ought to move all the Lord's people to distribute, according to their means. We are placed here to help each other, and if we neglect our duty, it will be too late in eternity.

Send your aid to Michael Forney Parkersburg, Richland Co., Ill.

HANNAH KNAUFF.

Ottumwa, Iowa.

Brother Henry: — As church news is desirable in the Companion, and as I have seen none from our arm of the church here on Jonathan's Creek, Perry county, Ohio, I concluded I would send you a little. The Lord has not forgotten us here; but has visited us, and there are being added to the church such as should be saved. Since this year has commenced there have been 18 added to the church here, and there are others that we hear of that are halting between two opinions, as it were. May the Lord help them to decide while it is day with them.

ELIE STONER

Rushville, O.

Announcements.

We the Brethren of the Salem Branch, Marion county, Illinois, have appointed our Communion meeting to commence at 4 o'clock, on the evening of the 26th of August, five miles south-east of Salem.

A general invitation is extended.—All those coming by Railroad, will stop off at Salem. Any informing us of their coming will be met at the station.

J. F. NEHER.

The Lord willing we will hold a Communion meeting near Dresaen, Poweshick county, Iowa, on the 2nd and 3d, days of September.

A hearty invitation is hereby extended to the brethren and sisters, and in particular to laboring brethren. Those coming by railroad will stop off at Brooklyn. J. S. SNYDEL.

Brooklyn, Iowa.

Query.

Brother Henry: It has been a query to my mind for some time, whether those who get home to heaven will know those they had been acquainted with while living here on earth. Will you, or some other brother or sister, give your views on the above. I understand we will; for the rich man recognized poor Lazarus. Some contend we would not be happy if it was the case, because we would know that some of our friends were in perdition, and therefore we would not be happy,

LEROY BROYLES.

Princeton, W. Va.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with obituary notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In the bounds of the Four-mile congregation, near Blooming Grove, Franklin county, Indiana, June 21st, sister ELIZABETH MOSS; aged 92 years, 2 months and 24 days. Funeral services by brethren A. Moore, and J. Rife, from Job 14: 14.

Wm. McWhorter

In Solomon Creek Church Elkhart co., Indiana, March 29th, Sister MAGDALENE CAY, aged 82 years, 3 months and 28 days.

She was born in the State of Penna. and emigrated from there to Ohio, where she lived some years, and where a large number of her relatives still reside; from there to Indiana, where she spent the remainder of her days. She has seven children still living, 87 grand children, and 76 great-grand children. Her disease was Cancer, with which she had been afflicted for more than twenty years. Although she suffered very much, she was perfectly resigned to the will of her Heavenly Father, and we are made happy to know that we need not sorrow as those who have no hope. A few months before she died she was "annointed in the name of the Lord." Funeral discourse by brethren Jesse Calvert and George M. Cripe.

Rebecca Gallagher.

In the Yellow Creek congregation, Bedford county, Pa., July 17th, Brother DANIEL REPLOGLE, Sr., aged 72 years, 9 mos. and 3 days.

The subject of this notice tried to live in the fear of the Lord. In early life he chose to live with the people of God: consequently he showed his obedience by complying with the gospel of Jesus, and he lived a faithful member of the church for 45 years, of which time he served 32 years in the office of Deacon. He was father of 14 children, all living except the youngest, who died at the age of 18 years. He lived to see his children all become members of Christ's fold. He was grandfather to 102 children, and great grandfather to 4. In his death the church has lost a faithful brother, the children a kind father; the neighborhood a benevolent friend and the surviving widow sister a dear husband. She has our sympathies, and our prayers that in the decline of life, her faith may not fail her. Ever remembering that the loss which is so deeply felt among us here in these low lands, where sorrows grow is our brother's great gain. The messenger, death, was not unexpected. His health during the summer was feeble, although not confined to his room; until perhaps the last three weeks of his life. His disease may probably be termed general debility, due to a probable derangement of the Liver. On the 18th his remains were followed to their last resting place, by the largest concourse of people we ever witnessed, on any funeral occasion. The funeral services by the brethren from Heb. 2:11.

S. A. Moore.

New Enterprise, Pa.

At Churchtown, Lower Cumberland church, Pa., July 15th, of Heart Dropsy, our beloved young brother CYRUS B. PLANK; aged 21 years 9 months and 24 days.

He enjoyed good health until within six months. In the month of January, he and his loved one entered as bridegroom and bride upon the stage of married life. Soon afterwards he became afflicted. His sickness soon seemed to set defiance to the skill of the physicians, though it seemed to indicate changes. The good Lord continued his skill by "the Grace of God that bringeth salvation." He succeeded in opening his heart; the Spirit of the Lord entered in. The heart, with the affections and desires thereof, is now changed, consequently he has a will to obey the Lord. The heart rending exhortations and admonitions, given by him to his loving wife and dear brothers and cousins, cannot here be inserted. May the Lord impress them lastingly upon their hearts! In his renewed state of mind he applied to the church to be baptized. On the 8th instant he was conveyed to the flowing stream, and being carried in on his chair he kneeled down and was baptized. Like a soldier of Jesus Christ, by a little help, he walked out of the stream, to the astonishment of the people; and when he had received meat, he was strengthened. The love of Jesus was in his heart; he desired to unite with the church in observing the commandments and ordinantes. On the evening of the 10th, the members met with him at his residence with his parents, (brother John and sister Eliza Plank). "It was good to be here.?" He, brother Cyrus, united with us in obeying the Savior in feet-washing, the Lord's Supper, the holy salutation, the breaking of bread, and the emblem of his blood. May the good Lord bring the realities of the religion of Jesus Christ powerfully home to the hearts of the dear friends, who occupied the entry, spare rooms, and porch, viewing in such a quiet order these solemn ordinances. Brother Cyrus felt his body to be frail, but in his soul he was gaining strength: his rational and intelligent mind brought home to his heart the command of calling the Elders of the Church and be anointed. He did so, and the next day his call was complied with. On Thursday following, his sickness became more severe,—his soul still gaining courage, triumphing in faith,—until Saturday evening, when he calmly and resignedly breathed his last breath. Funeral services by Elder Moses Miller, assisted by others, from Numb. 22: 10, to a large concourse of people.

We earnestly condole with the surviving widow, the parents and brothers, in the loss of their dear friend.

Adam Beelman.

Dillsburry, York co., Pa.

LIST OF MONEYS received for subscription, books, &c.,

R. E. Reed,	$1,50	R. Gallaher,	,75
J. M. Wolf,	1,25	A. Pheil,	,75
C. Hoover,	1,50	T. V. Renecker,	,75
J. Rineheart,	1,00	John Etter,	1,50
M. Longenecker,	1,50	A. B. Wallick,	5,00
A. Bender,	,50	S. R. Deppin,	1,50
J. J. Musselman,	1,50	N. Longanecker,	2,00
S. A. Moore,	,75

Advertisements.

WE will admit a limited number of select advertisements at the following rates.
One insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.
No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations.

Wm. M. Lloyd, Altoona, Pa. D. T. Caldwell, Tyrone Pa.

LLOYD, CALDWELL & CO.,
BANKERS,

Receive monies on deposit, and pay interest if left 6 months, at 4 per cent per annum, or 5 per cent. if left one year.

Special contracts made with parties acting a administrators, executors, guardians, and persons holding monies in trust. Dealers in every description of Stocks and Bonds.—Government Securities made a speciality.

Gold and Silver bought and sold, and a general Banking business transacted.

TYRONE BANK,
TYRONE, PA.

This Bank, intending to do a general banking business, solicits accounts from Banks' Bankers and others. Collections made on all points. Interest allowed on DEPOSITS left on time. Paper discounted on liberal terms.

Wm. P. Orbison,	D. I. Gwin,
John Scott,	H. G. Fisher,
Thomas Fisher,	J. H. Glazier,
Wm. Dorris,	G. C. Wilkins,
G. W. Garretson,	and others.

Beers' Expanding Scroll Water-wheel.

[Patented 1868] This wheel is now running with the overshot, in a Flouring Mill, and is using less water than the overshot. Inventor being a Millwright, and having seen and used all the new waterwheels, does not hesitate to say it is the first iron wheel that can compete with the overshot, and is one half cheaper, simpler and better. For farther information address J. L. Beers and Sons, Millwrights and Manufacturer's of wheel shafting and mill gearing of all kinds, continued Sawmill feed and Sawmill irons.

J. L. Beers & Sons

Cocolamus, Juniata Co. Pa.

A Card.

Drs. D. Fahrney & Son, Uroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.

7-10-1 yr. pd.

A Sure Cure for Dyspepsia.

Upon the receipt of one dollar, I will send the the Medicine, with Directions, by return mail. DAVID ESHELMAN.

Mohrsville, Pa

J. S. THOMAS, & CO.

WHOLESALE GROCERS

and

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

No 305 Race St. above 3rd, Philadelphia,

N. B. Country Produce taken in exchange for goods or sold on commission.

CABINET MAKING & UNDERTAKING

The undersigned keeps on hand and manufactures to order all kinds of Furniture. He is also neatly fitted out for conveying the dead to their last resting place.

Manufacturer of the Common Sense Dasher Washing Machine. Shop at the Cross Roads, near Warrior's Mark, Pa.

JAMES S. COX.

A Washing Machine may be seen and purchased at this office. v6n48tf.

BURLINGTON.

Leaving the East and arriving at Chicago or Indianapolis, how shall we reach the West? The best Line is acknowledged to be the C. B. and Q., joined together with the B. & M. Railroad by the Iron Bridge at Burlington, and called the Burlington Route.

The main line of the Route running to Omaha, connects with the great Pacific Roads, and forms to-day the leading route to California. The Middle Branch, entering Nebraska at Plattsmouth, passes through Lincoln, the State Capital, and will this year be finished to Fort Kearney, forming the shortest route across the Continent by over 100 miles.

Another branch of the B. M., diverging at Red Oak, falls into a line running down the Missouri through St. Joe to Kansas City, and all Kansas. Passengers by this route to Kansas, see Illinois, Southern Iowa, and Missouri, and, by a slight divergence, can see Nebraska also.

Lovers of fine views should remember the Burlington Route, for its towns "high-gleaming from afar"—its tree-fringed streams—its rough bluffs and quarries—its corn-oceans stretching over the prairies further than eye can reach.

Land-buyers will be sure to remember it, for they have friends among the two thousand who have already bought farms from Geo. S. Harris, the Land Commissioner of the B. & M. R. R. at Burlington, Iowa, or among the four thousand home-steaders and pre-emptors who last year filed claims in the Lincoln Land Office, where "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm."

For Sale.

The undersigned offers for sale his farms, situated in Oliver township, Mifflin county, Penna.

No. 1.—Containing about 196 acres, 2 1-2 miles from McVeytown, about 125 acres under cultivation, balance well timbered; two large orchards, grapes and cherries in abundance; three-story log-house, 32x34, fountain and well pumps at the door, barn 98x48, and all necessary outbuildings, all in good repair.

No. 2.—Within view of No. 1, contains 90 acres, 45 or 50 acres cleared, barn and house quite new, one of the finest orchards in the country, 150 apple trees, about 300 peach trees, pears, cherries, grapes, all coming into bearing, fountains and well pumps. This is considered one of the most desirable locations in the country. For further particulars, address,

PETER S. MYERS,
McVeytown, Pa

27, 4t.

Universal Satisfaction for Lasting Ornaments.

[illegible] Agents wanted in every State, County, and Town in the Republic.

MYERS & QUINN,
[illegible], Pa.

SALEM COLLEGE.

[illegible] Session commences [illegible] Spring Term begins Feb. 6th, 1871. [illegible] will be opened for the reception of Students.

For further particulars address
J. W. MILLER, President.
Salem, Ind.

1780 1871

ARE YOU SICK OR SICK?

Use Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

CLEANSE YOUR BLOOD!!

An Alterative and Cathartic, or Tonic and Purgative combined, for diseases arising from bad blood, such as Scrofulous, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Eruptions, Worms, Chills and Fever, Scrofula, Pimples, Tetter, &c. TRY IT.

Established 1848. In pamphlet form. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form which was brought to its present state of concentration and perfection some years later, by Dr. P. Fahrney, Chicago, Ill's, who conducts the [illegible] of Ohio. Great reputation. Many [illegible]! Ask for that [illegible] Waynesboro, Pa., and Chicago, Ill's. Beware of [illegible]. Genuine retails at $1.25 per bottle. Druggists and Medicine Dealers sell it.

Dr. P. Fahrney's "Health Messenger" gives the history and uses of the BLOOD CLEANSER [illegible], and other information, sent free of charge. Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.
WAYNESBORO, PA.

SHORT HAND WRITING.—Students of Phonography and all others who are interested in the art can obtain instruction books. Send stamp for price list and terms.
AMERICAN PHONETIC DEPOT.
TYRONE, PA.

Excelsior Rug Machine.

This [illegible] has been [illegible] established [illegible] and for sale. $3 by mail, [illegible] Instruction, 15 cents. [illegible] to
E. F. SMITH,
[illegible]
Pine Co., Pa.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine,

[illegible], with Open Head, and Tucker, are now offered to agents on [illegible] terms. Also, Singer's Machines, [illegible], or for sale low for cash.

[illegible] PILEY CLARK,
[illegible]

[illegible] $ 50.00 [illegible] New York

For Sale at this Office.

The Sceptic Stagbolt; Or, The New [illegible] Containing the [illegible] With [illegible] and S. S. [illegible] Price $1

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: [illegible] How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," "How to Do Business." By [illegible]

Life at Home; or the Family and its [illegible] By [illegible]

How to Converse and be Agreeable; or, The [illegible] By [illegible]

How to Read Character. A New Phrenological [illegible] Illustrations of the Natural Language of Looks, and Signs by which any one may read the Character of those with whom he may associate. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50.

Gladness; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Containing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and the Right Way for Those who are not Married. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chesterfield's Guide [illegible] Public Worship, according to the [illegible] By W. PITTENGER. $1.50.

Aesop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. [illegible] Designs, with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth, [illegible] Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New [illegible] Dictionary and Reference Book, [illegible] Technical Terms, Abstruse [illegible] Writing for the Press, Correct Reading, and other Valuable [illegible] Cloth, 75 cents.

[illegible] sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price.

The Phrenological Journal, An Illustrated [illegible] First-Class Family Magazine, devoted to [illegible] Man." Subscription price, $1.50 a year. [illegible] special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal and Christian Family Companion together for $2.75, or with the [illegible] $3.00. We recommend the Journal as [illegible] Family Magazine, and those who [illegible]

[illegible] to be accompanied with the money [illegible] post office, county and [illegible] be sent, and address [illegible]

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

[illegible] paid 0.75
[illegible] per dozen $ 7.50

PLAIN EMBOSSED BINDING.

[illegible] paid $ .85
[illegible] per dozen $ 8.50

GERMAN & ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid $1.00
Per dozen, 10.50

TURKEY MOROCCO, GOT. & EDGE.

One copy, post paid, 1.35
Per dozen " 13.50

[illegible] Single Copies

[illegible] per dozen $5.00

The Christian Harp, containing [illegible] pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 85 cents. $8.00 per dozen.

The Spirit-Crowned King. A new Sunday-School Singing Book. 144 octavo pages. [illegible] tunes. Price 35 cents; $3.60 per dozen.

COMPANION Volume 3, bound, post paid, $2.75
Received at the office, 2.25

NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" WISDOM & POWER of God Post Paid	1.40
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA,	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder, single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express,	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Brown's Pocket Concordance,	.60
German & English Testaments,	.75

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.25
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.62
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.90
32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION	1.25

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Certificates &c.

Marriage Certificate, per doz., postpaid, 0.50
CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP. Per doz, 0.25
FACTS.—RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE, 12 pages five cents single copy; thirty cents a doz.

All orders should be accompanied with the money, and the name of person, postoffice county & state written in unmistakable letters

THE PIOUS YOUTH.

A MONTHLY PUBLICATION

Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.

One dollar a year in advance.

THE
Christian Family Companion

Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promises of salvation without observing all its requirements; true among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, social, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, this purpose [illegible] will endeavor [illegible] with [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum

VOLUME VII. TYRONE, PA. TUESDAY, AUG. 8, 1871. NUMBER 32.

Little Will.

A great crowd of people had gathered around
A small ragged urchin stretched out on the ground
In the midst of the street; and some cried, "For shame!"
For that poor little boy, now bleeding and still,
Was all that was left of once bright little Will.
A great heavy cart had come rattling that way
Where Willie and others were busy at play,
And the poor little fellow, now stretched on the stones,
Seemed only a mass of bruised flesh and crushed bones.
But still there was life; and a kind doctor said,
"We must take the child home and put him to bed.
He must have all the care we can possibly give,
And it may be the poor little fellow will live."

But alas for poor Willie, he had no nice home;
He lived in an alley, in one little room;
And his poor mother, working from earliest light,
Had often no supper to give him at night.

But joy for poor Willie! for not far away
From the place where, all bleeding and shattered, he lay,
Is a very large house standing back from the street,
With everything round it so quiet and neat,
Which many good people had built in His name
Who healed all the sick, when from heaven He came;
And who promises blessings that ever endure
To those who shall comfort the sick and the poor.
So there in a room, large, and cheerful, and bright,
Little Willie was laid on a pillow so white.
The walls with bright pictures were covered all o'er,
Will never had seen such a clean place before.
Long rows of small beds, with small tables between,
The coverlets white and the beds painted green;
And so many children, all sick, but so bright,
Will almost forgot his great pain at the sight.

But the poor little boy suffered terrible pain
When the good surgeon came to examine again
Those poor little limbs; and he said that next day
He must bring his sharp knives and cut both legs away.
Oh, how could he bear it? Oh, what should he do?
So small and alone, he could never get through.
And then he knew well that he never could run
And play with the boys, as before he had done.
Poor Willie! he felt that in all that great city
There was no one to help him and no one to pity.

It was night: in the hospital ward all was still,
Save the low moans of anguish from poor little Will,
When a dear little girl in the very next bed
Turned round on her pillow, and lovingly said,
"Little boy, what's the matter; are you very ill?"
"O yes," said poor Willie, "and what is worse still,
The doctor is going to hurt my leg so
To-morrow; I never can bear it, I know."
"But Jesus will help you," said dear little Sue;
"He suffered and died, you know, Willie, for you."
The child was astonished, and thus made reply,
"Why Susie, who's Jesus, and what made him die?"
"Oh, Willie! how sad, I thought every one knew.
You don't go to Sunday-school, isn't that true?"
"No, I never have been," the boy made reply;
"But tell me of Jesus, and what made him die."

"Well, Jesus," said Susie, "came down long ago,
Because he was sorry we all suffered so,
And would be so naughty. And He was a child,
Just as little as we, but so gentle and mild.
And when he grew up, he went all through the land
And healed all the sick with a touch of his hand;
And he took little children right up on his knee—
Oh, Willie, I wish it had been you and me.
But soon cruel men caught Jesus one day,
And beat him, and mocked him, and took him away,
And nailed him with nails to a great cross of wood.
Oh, wasn't it hard, when he'd done them such good?
How he must have loved us, to die on the tree!"
"But," said Will, "if he's dead, how can he help me?"
"Why, I'll tell you," said Susie, "though now he's in heaven,
In the Book he has left us, a promise is given,
That whene'er we want him he'll come to our aid,
I'm so sure he loves me, I'm never afraid,
And though folks can't see him, they feel he is near
I know, for I've tried it again and again,
He helps us bear sickness, and sorrow, and pain."

"Oh, how good!" said the boy, with a long, thankful sigh,
"But I am so small, that he might pass me by;
So I'll put up my hand, just so he can see,
Then he'll know that I want him, and come right to me."

When the bright sun peeped in on that little white bed,
The hand was still raised, but dear Willie was dead!
The sad look of pain had gone from his face,
And the sweetest of smiles had taken its place;
For far off in heaven, that beautiful land,
Kind Jesus had seen little Will's lifted hand;
The smile on his face Jesus' kissing had given,
And he waked in the morning with Jesus in heaven.

Dear friends, who have read this sweet story, you see
That trusting in Jesus will save you and me.
Oh, that all who of Jesus' great mercy have heard,
Would, like dear little Willie, take Him at His word.

—M. L. V. W.

For the COMPANION.

"Am I my Brother's Keeper?"

No, but you have an interest in his welfare, I hope; and if you truly love all the dear brethren and sisters, you will do them such favors as are right and proper and in your power; especially when it will add to their comfort and happiness, and also add lustre to your crown of glory. Come, then, brethren and sisters, and send a few more mites to help liquidate the indebtedness standing on the subscription books of the Family Companion, for copies sent to the poor; yes, poor in this world's goods, but, we trust, rich in divine good. Shall the Editor be left to bear the burden, because of his generous heart and desire for those poor to have the Companion. We sent on the names of a few of the number, hoping the Lord would put it into the heart of some to send and help pay for the paper. Notwithstanding the papers so sent are received with gladness and consolation we will feel some reluctance in sending such names if we find the weight of the burden must fall on the Editor. I do believe if those brethren and sisters, whom the Lord has blessed with the good things of this life, could know what good those copies so sent out are doing in comforting and strengthening dear fellow pilgrims, who live where they seldom get to preaching, and to what extent they are often lent and read by others who have an interest in their soul's salvation, by which they are first aroused to an interest in the doctrine of the Brethren, they would respond willingly to the calls made for a little assistance in that way. You often, no doubt, pray for the Lord to remember the poor; which prayer the Lord no doubt hears, and blesses you with the means to help him in assisting them, but if those means stop with you, or are spent in luxuries, where are the poor blessed in the things pertaining to this life.

It might be said, "They can do very well without books and papers." Yes, they could, and without preaching too, but these things have a tendency to steadfastness and growth in grace, qualities none too abundant in these times of sin and iniquity.

I hope the Lord will impress a few more hearts to lend a helping hand, that it might be said, "The poor have the gospel preached to them." There are many ways of preaching the gospel; and through the press is one way. I believe, brethren and sisters often have a mind to throw in their mite, but often forget it, but the Editor don't forget the unpaid list when he comes to pay heavy bills. May the Lord abundantly bless us all in heaven. Written in love for the good cause. J. S. FLORY.

May avarice lose his purse and benevolence find it.

For the COMPANION.

Enigma.

I am composed of 13 words.
My First is the 4th word, Deut. 19 : 19.
" Second " " 3rd " Jude 2.
" Third " " 17th " Gen. 31 : 24.
" Fourth is a word in every chapter in the Bible,
" Fifth is the 8th word, 1 Peter 4 : 16.
" Sixth is the 13th word, Lev. 20 : 5.
" Seventh is the 9th word, Rev. 1 : 9.
" Eighth is the 1st word, Job 14 : 3.
" Ninth is the 3rd word, Amos 5 : 26.
" Tenth is the 14th word, Luke 13 : 24.
" Eleventh is the 17th word, Mat. 5 : 26.
" Twelfth is the 9th word, Dan. 4 : 19.
" Thirteenth is the 4th Mal. 3 : 14.

My whole forms two questions, the latter certainly interests the Editors at present.

KATE M. SNYDER.

For the Companion.

Why do the ministers of the word of God stand during their preaching?

It is some time since the query came in the "Companion," but as it relates to a practice of the church, I deem it worthy of some notice. The querist remarked that 'Christ always sat, and never stood." It would be well for him to read John 7 : 37. "In the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, &c." Other passages might be adduced to prove that Christ did not always sit; but sometimes stood, and as Christ was both pleader and Judge, he could justly do so, but as his ministers are only pleaders, they take the position of pleaders. In worldly "courts" the judge sits, and the pleaders stand. So the ministers, as pleaders, stand, but the hearers sit in order to judge what is said. Where is the command from Christ to sit. The command is "go and preach." Taking then all these things into consideration, and then add to it the example of the apostles standing, as in Acts 2 : 14. 13 : 16. 15 : 7. 17 : 22. &c., and finally, we will turn to a command found in Acts 5 : 20. "Go, stand and speak in the temple to the people all the words of this life." Much more might be said, but I deem this sufficient. "Prove all things, and hold fast that which is good."

N. LONGANECKER.

For the COMPANION.

The Perishing Theory of the Dying Infidel.

At death, the trembling fabric crumbles into atoms; the imagined foundation sinks away into oblivion, and the eternal truths of Almighty God fill the irrevocable past, and the darkened future. In its own revolving scenes of horrible condemnation, the lamenting soul in disaster lies, and sees others ascending into unspeakable and everlasting joy.

Stung with the thoughts of the blissful home of the faithful, and with the thought of the loss of his soul, like a bird robbed of its nest, the dying wretch wanders vainly round and round, through the doleful void, to find an anchor. He finds neither peace nor hope. The consciousness of his sinking soul, calls forth all the vigor and energies of his being in the augmentation of the awaiting calamity. In vain he attempts to grasp what he had knowingly, erroneously called reality. Nothing but black despair and horror fill the space. Far from the track and the blessed abode of saints, the resistless night of death is closing fast around him. If he calls not "in spirit and in truth" upon that God whose love and mercies he hitherto spurned and trampled under his feet; if he yet persist in sin, every breath of unbelief brings a howling tempest of woe upon his distracted mind, rendering his bitter grief more wild. The Spirit of God has ceased to strive and chide. Delusive spirits encourage the determination "to believe a lie and be damned." Reeling—trembling, he leaps—tropples over into eternity. Waking he calls upon huge imaginary mountains of oblivion to hide him from the presence of truth. Yet his fearful descent is not checked: down he sinks beneath the frowning justice of Almighty God, conscious of all the bitterness of the second death, and of the cause and the inevitable justness of his awful calamity. There, in the horrible, unfathomably deep pit, the dire descent continues beyond the power of help. Alas! how plainly do the gay and the licentious proud say in their hearts, like the fool, "there is no God!"

Those who know the commandments of God, and yet seek for the pleasures, the power and affluence of this world only, are infidels. Oh, hasten! the glorious period when all shall know the Lord from the least unto the greatest; when there shall be no more cause to draw pictures of the dreadful fate of the dying infidel!

J. B. GARVER.

Shirleysburg, Pa.

May the fear of sensibility never cease to flow.

Alive without the Law.

Henry Ward Beecher, commenting on Paul's saying that "I was a live without the law once; but when the commandment came sin revived, and I died," presents the following thoughts:

Paul was very rich so long as he was allowed to put his own estimate upon his conduct; but there came the intrusive light of the gospel, which taught him that he must measure in a different way, and by another test; and the moment he began to accept that test, what was the revelation? "I was alive before the law came," he said; "but when the law came, and I saw what it was, and that I was to measure with that, sin revived. It sprang up where I never knew there was sin. I took this law of divine love, and carried it to my conscience, and my conscience was covered all over with sin. I carried that law, and held it on my motives, and they stood up in their hideousness. Sin lived there. At every point, and in every faculty of my nature, I found sin. When I brought that law of God and held it on my life, it was like a grave-yard in the morning of the resurrection; and in every part of myself sin revived; in my thoughts and affections and conscience and worshipping tendencies. It lived in every living impulse, in every moral sentiment, everywhere in me; and when I came to bring God's law to bear, I found sin populous and immense; and I died. The sight was such that when I beheld it I was carried away captive. I was as good as a dead man, and no better."

For as the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them; even so the Son quickeneth whom he will.

For the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son:

That all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father. He that honoreth not the Son honoreth not the Father which hath sent him.—Jesus.

It is very dangerous to any man to find any spot on this broad globe that is sweeter to him than his home.

To bring forward the bad actions of others to excuse our own, is like washing ourselves in the mud.

It is our own vanity that makes the vanities of others intolerable to us.

For the Companion.

Is Methodism of Christ? No. 4.

We will briefly notice the authority to prove that the economy of the Christian Church is of heaven, and not of man; for he who will not hear Christ, will not hear the prophets.

Daniel 2: 44, "In these days of the kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed." This kingdom, set up in the days of the kings of the fourth universal empire, must have been something visible and tangible—a distinct organization, with specific and external laws, by which it should be entered and to be perpetuated, otherwise it could not have been seen: but it shall break in pieces all these kingdoms and stand forever. Unless it had a visible organization, it could not oppose other visible and literal organizations. If the kingdoms broken were visible, so is the stone or kingdom which is set up by the God of heaven. It was a kingdom that was set up; and there can be no kingdom without some sort of laws in it, by which it is known, for subjects to obey.

The term kingdom of itself implies three particulars: first, a king; second, a law; and third, subjects. "Forasmuch as thou sawest that the stone was cut out of the mountain without hands," Dan. 2: 45. I understand this stone was not the work of man's device: God was its author, and he will carry it on until it shall fill the whole earth, as the waters cover the sea. Though its progress may appear, to the eyes of its subjects, rather slow, yet we remember that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day. We know that the sails of the ship Zion are high; for they reach into heaven; and the blood-stained banner shall at last prevail; or why do we say "thy kingdom come," looking ahead with fond anticipation to that glorious millennial reign, when the Lord shall be king over all the earth, and not every man shall teach his neighbor and every man his brother saying, know the Lord but all shall know him from the least to the greatest.

But the stone was to roll upon the image, not in fifty disruptured fragments, one piece upon the image and the rest against each other, doing more harm to each other than to the image, as Christendom is now doing, if they call all other existing religious societies true churches. We wish to call the special attention of those who maintain that this is right, or that is right to that which I think becomes them to review. This stone was to smite the feet of the image, and break them in pieces; and afterwards to destroy the whole image. How is the church to break in peices the monarchies of earth? It is not to be done with the sword and bayonet, nor with physical force; for her weapons are not carnal. But fellow laborers in the vineyard, and especially officers in the vineyard, (ministerial brethren) use "the sword of the Spirit which is the word of God," which we are taught "is quick and powerful, sharper than any two edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart."

Let us notice that the feet and legs of this image are composed of iron mixed with miry clay, two substances God never made to unite. What two elements now compose the feet and legs of the image? Answer: Church and State. Friendly reader, the Savior positively declared that his kingdom was not of this world; for if his kingdom were of this world, then would his subjects, or servants fight. What do we understand by the whole image? Answer; The mother church of Rome, and the pedobaptists, descendents from her. And what is the cement that now unites them in the chain of lineage? Answer: Infant sprinkling.

"Well," says one "if none of those be the subjects of Christ's kingdom, where shall we find them? Answer: First, the infant, even without this so-called baptism; second, those who have arrived at the years of accountability and obey all things whatsoever he has commanded.

It was the mission of Christ to cut out this stone—to set up the kingdom—to make the new covenant—to ratify it, and upon it to establish his church so firmly that the gates of hell should not prevail against it. The Christian Church he did organize; taught its doctrines; appointed its ordinances; determined its polity, and left the solemn warning, when on the mount of Olives, to his disciples, to teach (we understand in all time to come) the observance of all things whatsoever he had commanded, and gives the glorious promise that he will be with such until the end of the world.

I would ask here a very simple question:

How can it be accounted for, that the different sects, or denominations of pedobaptists, from Rome down, contend that church government, discipline, rites and ceremonies are not definitely determined in the New Testament, while there is a people who invariably contend that they are, unless it is that pedobaptists are conscious that their system and practice are not countenanced by the great head of the church? I maintain, dear reader, that there is a peculiar people in the world, but not of the world, because they have come out from the popular practices of the world, who claim, and are fully conscious and boldly confident, that their church polity and practices are fully warranted, because they practice literally the simple things that Christ instituted to be observed by those who enter his kingdom.

We are now compelled to conclude the difference between Methodism and the Church of Christ: the latter is from above, is of divine origin, cut out without hands, built by Christ the Lord of glory himself when tabernacling here in the world, has continued unchanged, and will stand for ever and for ever the Gilead of its district and the Pharos of the world, and shall stand when the rocks and hills and man's device shall melt and crumble at his appearing; while we think Methodism may be justly represented under the form of a two horned beast, (see Rev. 13,) possessing temporal and spiritual power, with horns like a lamb,—the emblem of innocence because this power is exercised by the clergy, who ought to be lamb-like,—as coming up out of the earth, because it was originated by man—the good JOHN WESLEY.

Christ's law was specific: "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." This most positively forbade them to teach and enjoin upon the nations the observance of any thing Christ had not taught or commanded. If reason, revelation, or the principles of civil law can determine any thing, this point is determined. To overturn this is to overturn the principles of all language. If it is urged that the Holy Spirit taught the apostles what instructions to give the churches, we reply: He was only to comfort and guide them into all truth; "for he shall not speak of himself, but whatsoever he shall hear that shall he speak." The Spirit was not to be an independent teacher: he was to speak nothing of himself, but was to guide them (the apostles) into all truth. Christ was the teacher, not of himself, for he plainly tells us that the words that he spake were not his, but the Father's which sent him; and upon another occasion he says: "But the Comforter who is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you:" he enabled the apostles to recall to mind all the teachings of Christ.

We are taught that Jesus Christ is the same, yesterday, to-day, and for ever. If so, his commandments are as obligatory upon us in this nineteenth century, as they were in the apostolic age; and if the door of admission into the Christian Church was performed according to the formula as given in the commission, (by trine immersion, as can be proven by the writings of some of the leading followers of Wesley as denominated by Wesley himself,) in the apostolic age, it is as obligatory upon us in this nineteenth century as it was in that day and age of the world. If these be facts, nothing short of these will be accepted as the law of his kingdom which he came to set up and which the gates of hell should not prevail against—the church militant on earth, which should roll on with its majestic splendor, gathering here and there a traveller until it should fill the whole earth. But we think the fulfillment of the above will not be, until he shall come in the clouds of heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God, to execute judgment upon all, and to convince all. Christ is the head of the church, and no one man or society of men, have a right to organize and institute laws or ordinances to be observed as christian obligations, save the great head of the church, the Governor himself, who was born in Bethlehem in the land of Judea.

We do earnestly and conscientiously maintain that no one, but the legitimate Lawgiver of a kingdom, has authority to make laws for that kingdom. Christ is the only legitimate Lawgiver in Zion: consequently John Wesley had no authority to change the law. Yet many boldly claim that he (Wesley) was inspired of God to change the apostolic practice, and saying these little outward performances are unnec-cessary, making God's word of none effect.

In conclusion we would say to all whom it may concern, in the most striking language of the apostle to Timothy, that men will, in the last days, have a form of Godliness: we understand, a form of worship instituted by man contrary to the form that Christ delivered: "Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof, from such turn away," 2 Timothy, 3: 5.

In answer to the question in the beginning of our investigations, we are compelled to say: Nay, verily, Methodism is not a legitimate organization of Christ. A. STALNAKER.

Pride and its Influence, No. 2.

We think when we look around us, that we can see pride practiced and taught by those that profess to be teachers of the word of God. Oh, how inconsistnt with the Christian profession! This maxim will pretty generally hold good, that whatever trade or calling an individual, may lawfully practice himself, he may lawfully teach to others. It has been already shown that no Christian can conscientiously practice this sinful amusement; and it therefore follows that no Christian can conscientiously teach it. In all records, both divine and human, in which the lives and characters of eminently good and holy men are faithfully delineated, it does not appear that any of them were engaged in teaching the art of pride. And why not? If the amusement were innocent and harmless in itself, it would be no more disparagement to a good man than any other profession or calling. Moses the Hebrew legislator and leader, was a keeper of sheep; Elisha was a tiller of the soil; and John, Peter, Thomas, and Nathanael were fishermen; while Paul, the great apostle of the Gentiles, was a tent-maker. All these eminently holy men followed their different callings to the glory of God, and were a public benefit to the world. In pursuing their various avocations, they were strictly consistent with the profession of christianity, and had this testimony that their ways pleased God. We learn from the word of God that to violate a positive command, or to neglect a positive duty is to commit sin; for "sin is the transgression of the law." I hold that every individual that decorates his body with superfluities, and by a lofty appearance influences others to follow his steps, directly violates God's commandments. With respect to dress, it is commanded in 1st Tim. 2: 9, "that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with broidered hair, or gold, or pearl, or costly array." Again, 1st Peter, 3: 3, "whose adorning, let it not be that outward adorning of plating the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on apparel; but let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price." Were any female to make her appearance in many places of worship at the present day, clothed in conformity to the commands of the Holy Ghost, and manifesting in her appearance that "shamefacedness and sobriety," insisted upon by the apostle, we hazard nothing in saying that she would be regarded by many of the assemblage as ridiculously singular, or actually insane. O sister! have you not felt these scoffs? Be not discouraged, for they did worse things to our blessed Master.

How frequently is it the case that those who would laugh at a humble Christian, present themselves in the place of worship, clothed in a garb which, besides being actually immodest, has caused a lavish expenditure of that money which, if otherwise applied, would have dried the tear on many an orphan's cheek, and caused many a widow's heart to sing with joy! We are aware that very many who conform to the fashions of the world, do not possess the means of procuring dresses so costly. The day of terrible retribution alone will reveal the ruinous consequences, which have fallen, as a withering blight over female innocence and purity, arising solely from a fatal passion for pride, and a reckless determination to eclipse some brilliant rival in personal decoration. Pride has a direct tendency to dissipate the mind, and to render it light and vain. "Be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind," is a positive command of God. But such is the mental influence of pride that all religious duties become irksome and unpleasant, and are consequently neglected. The Holy Bible, that only "lamp to our path," is eagerly exchanged for the glimmering corruption of the novel or romance. Secret communion with God in the closet, gives way to the heartless brilliancy of the crowded saloon. This commandment is violated which was inscribed by the finger of Jehovah; and, from the summit of Sinai, delivered to Moses. and which, from our Savior's interpretation in Matth. 5: 28, we are to understand as extending, not only to the overt action, but to the secret thoughts of the heart. The evils which have resulted from this practice can never be unfolded until the decisive day of accounts.

The holy scriptures have placed a mark upon pride sufficiently awful to prevent the most thoughtless from venturing upon an amusement so evidently condemned of God. Take, for instance, Matth. 14: 6-8: But when Herod's birth-day was kept, the daughter of Herodias made her appearance before them in her decorated form, and pleased Herod, whereupon he promised with an oath to give her whatsoever she would ask. By her mother's instructions, she asks for the head of John the Baptist. What a brilliant and accomplished young lady, with the ghastly head of a murdered man swimming in its own blood! O yes! all her brilliancy and accomplishments cover a ferocious and cruel heart; all her sensibility, all the finer feelings of her soul, are blunted in her breast: there reposes a deadly enmity against God, and against his faithful servant John. He was a faithful reprover of sin, a burning and shining light; he has denounced the wickedness of the proud Herodias; and she having trained her daughter according to her own depraved heart, finds her the ready and willing agent of her bloodthirsty purposes. Now the parent reaps the fruit of the labor expended upon her child. With watchful care she had superintended her education, and marked with pleasure her advancement. She now beholds her an accomplished belle and the possessor of a firmness by which she can solicit, as the reward of her performances, the head of Heaven's ambassador!—Think of this, ye professors, that mingle in superfluities. Imagine to yourselves the beautiful daughter of Herodias, adorned in splendid and costly attire! Behold the smiling, sparkling beauty! See how gracefully she floats through the royal dance in high and holy appearance! But look at the diabolical, blood-thirsty spirit which lurks under a form so fair! A very angel in outward seeming—a very devil in inward reality! Think of this, ye mothers, while you lead your daughters along the dangerous road of pleasure. Recollect that your conduct is fully and faithfully recorded on high; and will be exhibited in terrible and stern colors of eternal truth, when the books shall be opened, and the secrets of all hearts revealed

But this is not the only passage in the insipred volume in which the Holy Spirit has fixed an awful mark on pride. Dear Brother and Sister, and all professors, read in the book of Job, and see how many flocks of little youths were trained. They were taught all the embellishments of fashionable education; if so, at the same time they could not be trained in the "nurture and admonition of the Lord." They say unto God, "Depart from us; for we desire not the knowledge of thy ways." Mark! these very persons that will train their children up in superfluity and pride! How true is this saying, "ye cannot serve two masters;" and how dreadful must be the destiny of such misguided parents, who, instead of leading their children to an early knowledge of the way of rectitude and safety, cruelly conduct them to that dark and crowded avenue, the end of which is death. Do, we then, hazard any thing when we solemly assert, that a practice, upon which the Holy Spirit has indelibly stamped the mark of Heaven's righteous disapprobation, is sinful and unholy?

Permit us now to propose a few solemn questions to those who practice pride, and who teach it by personal declaration. Professor, we take it for granted that you possess some respect for religion, and for the word of God; that you have not yet entirely shaken off all restraint: now, that Bible which you profess to respect commands you to "pray without ceasing," and upon all the engagements of life to supplicate the divine blessing. You undoubtedly propose to yourselves some object in that upon which you are about to enter; you expect to derive some benefit—some advantage from it. If your engagements, of pride therefore be innocent, and the end proposed laudable, why not pray for the divine blessing to rest upon it, and secure to you the anticipated advantage? We are commanded to pray for our daily bread, because we are dependent upon God, and prayer is the acknowledgment of that dependence; consequently, to refuse to pray is so refuse to acknowledge our dependence, and to act independently of that God in whose hands are our lives. You contend for, and practice pride, and yet dare not ask for the blessing of God to rest upon you in its performance! What, then, is the necessary result? As long as you continue to practice that which you feel can never be associated with prayer, you are self-convicted of a sad inconsistency of conduct, and are guilty of persisting in a practice which your own hearts tell you is utterly at variance with Christianity. If pride be so innocent as you represent it, why are you unwilling to meet death while engaged in that pride of life, the end which is death? Your minds; I fear, instinctively revolt from such a scene; you shrink from contending with death, and entering upon eternity, and meeting your Judge under such circumstances.—Why, then, do you now love and practice that which is planting thorns in your dying pillow? and that which you cannot look upon at death but with shame and horror? Oh! why continue in such a course of procedure? Is dress the only engagement of pride? No, if we would undertake to write on pride in all its ways, it would fill volumes. Let us be careful and keep ourselves clear of this deadly evil, that is slaying its thousands. I exhort you to lay aside this growing besetment, and run the race that is set before us, with patience, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith.

WM. H. QUINN.

Influence of a Newspaper on Children.

A school-teacher who has enjoyed the long practice of his profession, and has watched closely the influence of newspapers upon the minds of a family of children, states as the result of his observation that without exception, those scholars of both sexes and all ages who have access to newspapers at home, when compared with those who have not, are:

1. Better readers, excelling in pronunciation, and consequently read more understandingly.

2. They are better spellers, and define words with more ease and accuracy.

3. They obtain a partial knowledge of geography in almost half the time it requires others, as the newspapers have made them familiar with the location of important places and nations, their governments and doings.

4. They are better grammarians for having become so familiar with every variety of style in the newspaper, from common-place advertisements to the finished and classical orations of the statesman, they more readily comprehend the meaning of the text; consequently analyze its construction with accuracy.

5. They write better compositions, using better language, containing more thought, still better expressed.

From these simple facts, three important things can be better deduced:

1. The responsibility of the press in supplying literature which shall be both healthful in tone and likewise understandly expressed.

2. The absolute necessity of personal supervision of a child's reading by its parents.

3. Having got a good, able paper no matter what the price, don't begrudge it a hearty support.

Many a man intending to do good with his money when he gets through with it, finds out that the Lord has got through with him, as this world is concerned, long before he thinks of getting through with his money. The devil persuades him to delay, and outwits him in the bargain; and in reaching for more, he loses what he had.

May we be slaves to nothing but our residence.

May care be a stranger where virtue resides.

The greatest man in history was the poorest.

May reason be pilot when passion blows the gale.

May the honest heart never know distress

Christian Family Companion

Tyrone City, Pa., Aug., 8, 1871.

The Lord's Supper, No. 3.

The expression, "Lord's Supper," occurs in 1 Cor. 11 : 20, but nowhere else in the Bible. It is our purpose now to inquire into the meaning of this unique expression. The Greek term translated Lord's Supper is kuriakon deipnon. Kuriakon means "of or pertaining to the Lord, i, e. Messiah, the Lord's,1 Cor 11: 20; Rev. 1: 10." —GREENFIELD. Deipnon is the word that is translated supper, and consequently it is the term whose meaning we shall seek.

Liddell and Scott define deipnon as follows: "A meal, or meal-time, used by Hom. quite generally, sometimes = ariston, Ill. 10, 578, sometimes = dorpon, as Od. 17, 176 : V. Buttm. Lex. V. deile 12, Nitzsch, Od. 1.124, who holds it to be the principal meal, whenever taken; in Att. certainly the chief meal, answering to our dinner, Lat. coena, begun towards evening, and often prolonged till night.

"Deipnon, a morning repast; dinner, prandium; in N. T. supper, the principal meal of the Hebrews, and taken by them in the evening, Lu. 14: 12; Jno. 13:2, 4, et al.," (and in other texts); by "metonymy, food, 1 Cor. 11 : 21; from the Hebrew a feast, banquet, Matth. 23 : 6; Mark 6 : 21; 12 : 39, et alibi." — GREENFIELD, LEX. to N. T. In remote antiquity deipnon signified "a morning repast," and sometimes dinner; but in the time of Christ it meant supper—an evening meal, feast, or banquet; and according to the authority cited, the term is so used in the New Testament. We shall now quote several texts in which this term occurs, so that its use may be the more deeply impressed on the mind of the reader.

"And when a convenient day was come, that Herod on his birth-day, made a supper (deipnon — a feast) to his lords," &c, Mark 6 : 21.

"When thou makest a dinner (ariston,) or a supper, (deipnon—evening meal or feast) call not thy friends, nor thy brethen, neither thy kinsmen nor thy rich neighbors," Luke 14 :12

"Then said he unto him, A certain man made a great supper, (deipnon,) and bade many," Luke 14 : 16. Verse 17th: "And he sent his servant at suppertime, (horai tou deipnou—hour of the supper,) to say to them that were bidden, come," &c. Also verse 24th: "For I say unto you, that none of those men which were bidden, shall taste of my supper," (deipnou.)

"Likewise also the cup after the supper (deipesai) saying," &c., Luke 22 : 20.

"There they made him a supper (deipnon); and Martha served."—John 12 : 2.

"And supper (deipnou) being ended," John 13 : 2. Verse 4th: "He riseth from supper, (deipnou,) and laid aside his garments."

"Then Peter, turning about, seeth the disciple whom Jesus loved, following,—which also leaned on his breast at supper, (deipnoi) and said," &c., John 21 : 20.

"For in eating every one taketh before other his own supper," (deipnon,) 1 Cor. 11:21.

"Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage-supper (deipnon) of the Lamb," Rev. 19 : 9.

"Come, and gather yourselves together unto the supper (deipnon) of the great God; that ye may eat the flesh of kings, and the flesh of captains, and the flesh of mighty ones, and the flesh of horses and of them that sit on them, and the flesh of all men, both free and bond, both small and great." Rev. 19. 17, 18.

There are several other texts in which the word, in some of its forms, occurs; but as it is used in the same sense as in those given, they are omitted.

The studious reader has, no doubt, observed, that, of the foregoing texts, some directly assert lateness in the day, or evening, or in the age of the world; others clearly imply the same idea, while none of them are contradictory to it: every place in which comparative time is indicated, it is the evening, either of the day or of the world. He will also notice that, in every case where the term is employed, it expresses the idea of plentitude, abundance—a feast, a banquet. We therefore insist upon it that it is irrational and dangerous to assert that the word does not mean a plentiful supper in 1 Cor. 11 : 20; and that doing so betrays a degree of recklessness and presumption of which no minister of the gospel and no disciple of Christ should be guilty.

We shall now introduce two witnesses who will readily be acknowledged to have no bias in our favor, as both belong to the pedobaptist school, and neither observes a full meal for the Lord's Supper. The first we bring upon the stand is Dr. Seiss. In discoursing upon the term under consideration, he says:

"What, then, is the meaning of deipnon? There is little room for diversity as to the true answer. It denotes a full meal, and that an evening meal. All authorities agree that it stands for the principal meal of the Greek's and Roman's."

Then, after referring to the different meals as found in the Homeric writings he continues:

"The principal meal, however was the deipnon. It was usually eaten rather late in the day; frequently not before sunset. (Smith's Antiquities, pages 303, 304.) Dr. Halley says: "Long before the apostolic age, deipnon had become regularly and constantly the evening meal. Nitzisch says that it denoted the principal meal. French does the same. Hence all great entertainments were called deipna, and always came off in the latter part of the day, or at night."

He then quotes several texts of scripture in some of which the term is translated supper, and in others feast, after which he adds :

"Deipnon means a full meal,a banquet, a plentiful supper, an ample repast, the principal and most abundant meal of the day ; which occurred in the evening, between midday and midnight. Dr. Fuller says that deipnon was, among the ancients, 'the most social and convivial of all their repasts,' and that the word means a banquet, a feast.

"It is also to be observed that the Lord's Supper, or deipnon, was instituted and first celebrated at night.—Not only the meaning of the word which was chosen described it, but the very hour of its appointment and first observance, connected the Lord's Supper with the evening—the close of the day.

"According to the plain, evident, and well established meaning of words, therefore, and sustained by circumstances, two things would be assigned to the sacramental deipnon : first, it must be a full and plenteous meal ; and, second, it must be eaten in the evening. A fragment of bread a half inch square, and a sip of wine that would scarcely fill a teaspoon, is not a deipnon, as the Greeks used that word, any more than sprinkling a few drops of water on a man's face is an immersion of him. Neither do we eat our suppers in the morning.—It is as great a contradiction in terms and confusion of ideas to speak of supping in the morning, as to speak of plunging a man by pouring water on him." (Baptist System, examined pages 226, 227, seq.)

Thus speaks this eminent author. Next we will hear Mr. Hibbard of the M. E. Church, who says about the same. The following is from "Hibbard on Baptism," part 2, sec. 9 :

"The word deipnon, in the New Testament signifies a supper, which, with the Hebrews, was the principal meal of the day. It also signifies feast, banquet. Lu. 14 : 12, et alibi. Now, it is well known that Paul uses this same word to signify the institution of bread and wine, called the Lord's Supper,' kuriakon deipnon. 1 Cor. 11 : 20. Hence if we adhere strictly to the primitive meaning and general usage of the word, we shall arrive at this conclusion, viz., that the Lord's Supper is a sumptuous repast, a full meal, a feast, a banquet. which is exactly contrary to the true meaning of the word in that connection, and to the proper manner of celebrating that institution. But there is no reason, so far as the mere philology of the question is concerned why we should use Baptizo in its primitive sense immerse, and not as uniformly use deipnon in its primitive sense of a "feast or banquet."—And if we can obey the command to "eat the Lord's Supper by eating a morsel of bread and taking a sip of wine, analogy would teach us that we might obey the command to be 'baptized' by having a small quantity of water applied to us."

We regard this philological argument as complete ; and if words are used to convey ideas, and the meaning of words has anything to do in determining the nature and character of the obligation or ordinance which they enjoin ; then our position is established beyond controversy or doubt, that a legal observance of the Lord's Supper requires a full, an abundant evening meal or feast. It cannot be denied that Christ and his apostles ate a supper in the evening in which he instituted the Lord's Supper. This circumstance sustains the view that the Lord's Supper is a full meal, and that it should be observed in the evening. Then, as has been clearly shown, the term deipnon which was chosen by the Holy Spirit to represent this ordinance, describes it as an ample, abundant evening meal or feast. All the instances of the use of this term that we have quoted, and we add, all the instances of its use in the New Testament confirm this definition. It is admitted by all, that, in the 21st verse, of the 11th chapter of Paul's first epistle to the Corinthians, this same word, deipnon, means an abundant evening meal. Taking all these facts into consideration, it is an enigma which we cannot solve, how any man, not to say minister, laying any claims to consistency and uprightness, can say that this word does not mean a plentiful supper, in the 20th verse of this chapter. No, it evidently means a full meal, similar to the meal which Christ ate with his apostles in the night in which he was betrayed—such a meal as the Corinthian brethren would have observed, if they had done away with their schisms and disorder, according to Paul's instructions as already shown. Here we leave this argument with the candid reader, and turn aside to remark briefly upon another point.

Perhaps the reader is curious to know why the pedobaptist authors quoted from should define the word deipnon so exactly in treating on the subject of baptism. Well, we will tell you. You are aware that we immersionists claim that the primary meaning of the Greek term baptizo, anglicised baptize; is "dipplunge immerse;" and we maintain, upon this ground, that Christian baptism is properly administered only by immersion : the term means immerse ; hence we immerse, and hold that nothing short of immersion of the whole body in water is Christian baptism. All Baptists are united upon this point.

Some Baptists, however, call the Communion, or Bread and Wine, the Lord's Supper. In this they agree with the pedo-baptist societies. Pedo-baptists, who are as wise as many serpents and necessarily avail themselves of everything that seems to favor them, have seized upon this inconsistency of these same Baptists, and they make a strong argument them.

They admit a fact, which they cannot deny ; namely, that the primary meaning of the Greek term baptizo is dip, plunge, immerse. But they also know, and stoutly maintain, that the Greek word deipnon means a full meal, a banquet, a plentiful supper, an ample repast, a feast, that it occurred in the evening, and that the term is so used in the New Testament. Now for the argument. Baptizo is used to express one ordinance—baptism, and deipnon expresses another—the Lord's Supper. If it is necessary to immerse in order to observe the ordinance of baptism, because the term used to express it signifies immerse, it is equally necessary to have a full evening meal in order to observe the Lord's Supper, because the term chosen to describe it means a plentiful supper. To depart from the plain, literal meaning in the one case, "presupposes and implies the existence of the right to exercise the same liberty in the other case;" but Baptists do depart from the well established meaning of deipnon in their observance of the Lord's Supper; for, instead of eating a full meal in the evening, they use only "a fragment of bread half an inch square, and a sip of wine that would scarcely fill a teaspoon," and that before evening sets in; therefore, this liberty on the part of these Baptists convicts them of flagrant inconsistency, and implies the existence of the same right on the part of pedobaptists to depart from the literal meaning of the term denoting the other ordinance. The cases are parallel; and therefore sound logic in the one case is sound logic in the other: if Baptists are justifiable, pedobaptists are not to be condemned.

The forgoing is a faithful statement of the pedobaptist argument: and it explains why they so faithfully define this Greek term. They hold this as an impregnable argument in support of their practice; and we frankly confess, that, so far as such Baptists are concerned, we consider the argument unanswerable. There it is. The balances are before us, with Baptists on one end and pedobaptists on the other. They are on a perfect balance; and all their efforts to outweigh each other are as fruitless as the boy's attempt to lift himself by his boot-straps: if the Baptists claim more truth, the pedobaptists claim greater consistency.

But we have one question for our pedobaptist friends: What will become of your boasted consistency if Baptists are not justifiable in their departure from the well established meaning of the Greek term used to denote the Lord's Supper? Ah! there's the rub! You remind us of disobedient children, who try to justify themselves by pointing out each other's errors. A mother says to her children, James and Mary, "Do not go into the garden to play. I want you to be very careful not to destroy the vegetables in the garden." But the children disregard their mother's injunctions. Mary goes into the garden to play; James does the same, and when he is in, he begins to pull up the beans and beets. "Naughty James," cries Mary, "don't you know that mother said we should be careful not to destroy the vegetables in the garden?" "True," replies James very logically, "but mother said, too, that we shouldn't go into the garden to play; and, Mary, you know you did come in here to play; now if you had a right to come in here to play, I have the same right to pull up the beets and beans." How does the little boys's logic suit our friends? We want no squirming nor evasion.—Come right up to the mirror, and in shame behold the reflection of your guilt-smitten countenances.

Baptists depart from the plain, evident, and well established meaning of words in their effort to observe the Lord's Supper; pedobaptists do the same thing, and by this departure they justify themselves in departing from the primary and literal meaning of the term denoting baptism. "Disobedient pedobaptists," say the Baptists, "don't you know that the term expressing the ordinance of baptism demands the immersion of the entire body in water?" "True," reply the pedobaptists, and then logically retort, "but you know that the term denoting the Lord's Supper demands a full meal to be eaten in the evening, and you Baptists do not have it so; now if you have a right to depart from the meaning in one case, we certainly have the same right in the other." Yes, so it is. James had the same right to destroy the vegetables as Mary had to go into the garden to play; but Mary had no right at all to go into the garden to play contrary to her mother's injunction; and consequently James had no right at all to destroy the vegetables, and James and Mary both did wrong.—So pedobaptists have the same right to depart from the literal meaning in baptism that Baptists have to depart from the literal meaning in the Lord's Supper; but Baptists nave no right whatever to depart from the evident meaning of the term chosen by the Holy Spirit to denote the Lord's Supper; therefore pedobaptists have no right whatever to depart from the plain meaning of the term denoting the ordinance of baptism; both classes do what they have no right to do, and consequently both are wrong.

Truly, "the way of transgressors is hard." We invite both parties to cease from biting and devouring one another; to abandon their inconsistencies and disobedience to God's requirements, and to unite with us in a literal observance of both ordinances, according to the clearly established meaning of the terms denoting them.

Facts—Read Them.

Sometime ago, the editor of the Companion, being discouraged by fruitless efforts, annouced his resolution to publish no more duns. We were sorry that he did it, fearing that it might be necessary to do so. Now the time has come, and as the editor is absent, we assume the privilege to present the facts in the case.

1. It is not agreeable to our feelings to ask a friend or brother for our dues; therefore we would rather suffer a little than to do so.

2. It is not pleasant to the debtor to be dunned; and because we regard his feelings we prefer not to publish duns.

3. It places both publisher and subscriber in an unfavorable light before the public: this we would not wish to do.

4. It is difficult to ask dues from delinquents without interfering with the pleasant feelings of the punctual.

5. It is devoting space in the paper to a purpose that savors of complaint, which we would rather use to utter a word of praise, or something edifying. &c., &c.

These unpleasant facts not withstanding, as the time is now past when most of our delinquent subscribers proposed to pay, and as it is absolutely necessary to have means (we mean money) to publish a paper, we are constrained to publish this as a reminder, in the hope that there will be such a favorable response (is this understood?) that the editor may, two weeks hereafter, express his thanks, and avoid all the unpleasantness of publishing duns.

We make this appeal reluctantly, because it seems somewhat officious; but it is dictated by love, and in the hope that it will be kindly received and cheerfully complied with. If each delinquent responds for himself, all will be easily paid up; and besides the great help it will afford the editor we promise that all concerned will feel relieved, and we will feel rewarded for our unpleasant service.

J. W. B.

Answers to Correspondents.

Martha Brott.—It will answer.

C. Forney.—$4.23 including C. F. C. for S. F., G. W. P. and I. F.

MISCELLANEOUS

The Value of Style.

Style, according to the London Spectator, means such an arrangement of words as shall make the authors meaning rise up in the logical order of the ideas, and thus save the reader all needless toil; such a choice of phrase and balance of clause and structual grace of sentence as shall satisfy the sense of beauty; such a propriety, economy, and harmony of expression as shall tell the reader exactly what the writer means, tell it with a business like brevity and artistic beauty. All these qualities characterize style of the highest order. Style is therefore an expedient to make reading easy, and to perpetuate the life of written thought. Of all the badly written books bequeathed by past generations, none have lived but those of transcendent intellectual merit, or those to which a supreme historical value is lent by their pictures of vanished days; whereas writing of the second intellectual rank may be kept green by the vitality of its artistic workmanship.

How to See Down a Well.

It is not generally known, says the Lancaster (Penn.) Intelligencer, how easy a matter it is to explore the bottom of a well, cistern, or pond of water by the use of a common mirror. When the sun is shining brightly hold a mirror so that the reflected rays of light will fall into the water. A bright spot will be seen at the bottom, so light as to show the smallest object plainly. By this means we have examined the bottoms of wells fifty feet deep, when half full or more of water. The smallest straw or objects can be perfectly seen from the surface. In the same way one can examine the bottom of the ponds and rivers, if the waters be somewhat agitated by winds or rapid motion. If a well or cistern be under cover, or shaded by a building so that the sunlight will fall near the opening, it is only necessary to employ two mirrors using one to reflect the light to the opening, and another to reflect it down into the water. Light may be thrown fifty or a hundred yards to the precise spot desirable and then downward. We have used the mirror with success, to reflect the light around the house to a shaded well, and also to carry it from a south window through two rooms and then to a cistern under the north side of the house. Half a dozen reflections of light may be made, though each mirror diminishes the brilliancy of the light. Let any one not familiar with the method, try the experiment. It will perhaps reveal a mass of sediment at the bottom of the well that has been little thought of, but which may have been a frightful source of disease by its decay in the water.

Going to Law.

A farmer cut down a tree which stood so near the boundary line of his farm that it was doubtful whether it belonged to him or his neighbor. A neighbor, however, claimed the tree, and prosecuted the man who cut it for damages. The case was sent from court to court, time was wasted, money spent, and temper lost. A third man stepped into the ring, whose farm also cornered where the tree stood, and claimed it as his property. The last we heard of the transaction was, that the man who gained the cause went to the lawyer's office to execute a deed of his whole farm, which he had been compelled to sell to pay costs! Then, houseless and homeless, he thrust his hands into his pockets, and triumphantly exclaimed, "I've beat him!"

A Hint to Grumblers.

"What a noisy world this is!" croaked an old frog, as he squatted on the margin of the pool. "Do you hear those gesse how they scream and hiss? What do they do it for?"

"Oh, just to amuse themselves," answered a little field mouse.

"Presently we shall hear the owls hooting, what is that for?"

"It's the music they like the best," said the mouse.

"And those grasshoppers, they can't go home without grinding and chirping, why do they do that?"

"Oh, they're so happy they can't help it," said the mouse.

"You find excuses for all; I believe you don't understand music, so you like the hideous noises."

"Well friend, to be honest with you," said the mouse, "I don't greatly admire any of them, but they are all sweet in my ears, compared with the constant croaking of a frog."

CORRESPONDENCE

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address in every case must accompany communications for publication. Rejected communications will not be returned. All communications for publication should be written on one side of the sheet only.

Explanation on Query, Luke 16:9

"And I say unto you make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness, that when ye fail they may receive you into everlasting habitations."

Brother Henry: — As it is the third time, to my notice, that an explanation has been desired on the above, and as the brethren are so slow to respond, I will, with your permission, try to give my views on the subject. It is a subject of importance, and no wonder it interests the minds of the brethren.

"Make to yourselves friends"—What it is to have a friend in time of need, is more than I can express; and I have also learned, by sad experience what it is to have no friends; therefore I say again, the subject is of importance. Where friends and friendship are there is love; and love goes beyond the grave; and thither is where our query will direct our minds. The friends our Savior alludes to, I understand, are those referred to when he will say: "Inasmuch as ye have done it to one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom"—the everlasting habitation; and how glad these friends will be to receive us, if we should be so unfortunate as to fail to have part in the first resurrection. "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power."

Those that fail to have part in the first resurrection, will be brought into judgment; and if some of us unfortunately, as foolish virgins, should be among that class, woe be unto us, if we have no friends there. Now, as to how to make these friends, I think we all can understand our Savior when he says: "For I was a hungered, and ye gave me meat, I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick and ye visited me; I was in prison and ye came unto me." These are some of the means to make these friends; but there are many more, too numerous for me to mention; but one I will name, and I think it would be very acceptable by our Savior too, and that is, when we hear a brother or sister say, one in the far west, that they would like to read the COMPANION, as they are deprived from associating with the Brethren, but they are not able. O what a joy to them if they would get their desire, from those that are able! The mammon of unrighteousness belongs to the world; but with it we can make ourselves friends, that when we fail, they may receive us as I have stated.

Brethren let us work together:—work while it is to-day; for the night is fast approaching when we will in silence lie. Dark and gloomy will our heavenly prospect be, if we do not faithfully labor for eternity.

If we read the Holy Scriptures, what advantage will it be if we do not understand them? Some one must be our guide, therefore, brethren, let us read the true COMPANION. In it we have all we need: wisdom, knowledge, understanding—all we have in it complete.

"If we read with understanding,
Let us not forgetful be;
But in love let us remember
Those who not as we do see.
Love and union let our christian motto be,
Let us labor, faithful labor, labor for eternity.

JOHN HAMMER.

Gettysburg, Pa.

"Squibs."

H. R. H., Dear Brother: I have taken pen in hand to write you a familiar letter, and I will try to tell you how I come on it. I was thinking over the report of the proceedings of the Annual Meeting, and of several items therein, that did not recommend themselves to my judgment; so it occurred to me that, just now, I had a little spare time to write a little something for the Companion.—Then again I thought, perhaps I had better walk over to see brother Sammy Lehman for He has a "very great fever." He has been afflicted in this way, at intervals, for several years. This last attack came on him less than a week ago, and it seems to be the most severe spell that has taken hold of him yet. So then, it would be better pay in my mind. I thought now I would write first, and go over there in the cool of the evening, and see how Sammy was, then I could add something at the end of this letter, before I mail it in the morning, and still let you and all his friends know whether he is better or worse.

It appears to me I am very much like a violin, which, you know, when it is tightly wound up and properly attuned, makes most delicious music: its exquisite sounds vibrating and even piercing the very tenderest chords of the human heart. So with the immortal, human mind, when wound up to proper tension, it makes your pen run like a steam engine, fairly screaming along or quivering. So with everything else you undertake to do, no trouble, no perplexities. On the other hand, when the keys are turned back, and the tension relaxed, and all out of tune, then there is no music—no spirit. So with us: the mind is sluggish, the members unwilling, our feelings easily crossed: like a candle burning low down in the socket, we emit but a dim light—an occasional flicker amid the surrounding gloom; and despondency, like night and darkness drear, settles down over us. Then we cannot take hold of a pen, not even to write to our best earthly friends: it is entirely out of the question. But so it is; alas, for human frailty! Is all this in consequence of sin? is it because no good thing dwelleth in the flesh? doth the flesh so influence the spirit? does the body of this death cling to us so closely—death by sin? does the atonement of Christ more than restore us back to the primeval state?

The Annual Council has interdicted the discussion of the merits of its conclusions, so it has. This may possibly be justifiable in the Christian Church, but it would deluge in blood almost any Christian State,—so-called,—if persisted in. Yet, if we cannot exchange sentiments on the merits of their conclusions, I believe we still retain the cheap privilege of saying whether we are willing to obey or not; rather, whether we obey willingly or unwillingly the behests of the Council.

Now brother H., you have invited brethren to wield their pens in the interest and promotion of peace, harmony, and general good fellowship in the Church. This, at first sight, appears to be what we all should unite for, and we are ready to co-operate it; but the manner of accomplishing this state of things, does not appear so clear; whether it is the most peaceful labor that brings about the greatest harmony in the Church, is doubtful.

Truth is not peace, in a gainsaying world. A man with too peaceable a disposition is not likely to accomplish much good or evil in this world.—Such a person is liable to permit the introduction of abuses and corruptions; being naturally so kind and benevolent he would be too timid to object, for fear of causing contention or unkind feelings, when the enemy was engaged in sowing "tares" in the field, whilst he himself was reposing on his peaceful pillow.

So we think the Council was napping in too peaceful heaviness of slumber, when it allowed such foreign "tares" to be sown by the enemy, as "German" Baptists, as the proper appellation for the Brethren to adopt in their official transactions, papers, certificates, &c.

Now then, what, in the name of all that is consistent and truthful, has a man's nationality to do with his spiritual birth and life in Christ Jesus? Why not say "Lager Beer Baptists" as well? I see no difference in principle, both are world names, the last has more water in it than the first;—but seriously, where, I ask, in all the Book of God, is the authority to be found for this geographical misnomer? "Every plant that my heavenly Father hath not planted shall be rooted up." Is it better to hearken unto men more than God? Judge ye. I am willing to be judged in this matter; but much as I respect my German ancestry, I am not willing to confound my spiritual birth-right with foreign, geographical divisions, or nationalities of any kind. We shall sign no such papers. Others have liberty in full, to decide upon their own course, as to the truthfulness and consistency of this foreign "plant."

Since we have run into this track we may as well pull at another "tare" of the same national origin.—You will find it on the title page of our new English and German Hymn Books:

"The Fraternity of the Brethren." this word in its root or primary sense has not the smallest particle of Church or party exhibited in it. This is also a "plant which my heavenly Father hath not planted," and the Master has nowhere given authority to his "witnesses" to substitute this name for that of "Church." Yet, we meet with it in the proceedings of the Annual Council frequently, as well as elsewhere in church literature. The word is applicable to such clans or associations as the "Senger Bund," "Fenians," "Free Masons," 'Odd Fellows," and other societies open or secret.

Our appointment today was nullified by a "Bush Meeting," so that brother Sanny did not consider it worth while to fill it. Those "Bush" meetings have so much of "good Lord, good Devil," "Heaven or Hell, company plenty," in them, that nothing can be done "decently and in order" for the Master, in the neighborhood where they are held.

Below I append a list of our official members from second degree preachers up, in obedience to your call for such information. I take it that they are all too modest to do it themselves.

And now, so it be not forgotten. I have seen brother Sanny, and have only room to say that his complaint is a bad case of "Western Fever" He will recover.

Yours for the Truth.

P. H. Plaver

Montandon, Pa.

A Terrible Picture.

The following account of the fearful ravages of that devastating scourge—yellow fever, was clipped and sent us by an Ohio correspondent:

No more graphic and terrible picture of a plague stricken city was ever contemplated by horror stricken mortal eyes, than is now presented by the fearfully afflicted capital of the Argentine Republic- Buenos Ayres. For the second time within a few months, has that fell scourge of our race, the yellow fever, visited that city. At the first dread visitation 25,000 human beings fell beneath the deadly disease, then the fatal epidemic abated and was thought to be over: pass no who had fled from the devastation were recursed, but no sooner had loathsome form resumed than the pestilence broke out with renewed vigor and intensity. All communication was cut off with the doomed capital: It is only known that men, women, and children are dying there by thousands, and a correspondent from Montevideo forcibly remarks that Buenos Ayres is a "City of the Dead." Never has the yellow fever performed its work of death as effectually as in this unfortunate city.

Brother Henry: As duty binds me to write a few lines, as I have not been able to do any thing for about five weeks, and have been under the doctor's hands. I thought at times, that I would have to exchange time for eternity; but God still has preserved my life. As yet I am unable to work and I do not know when I will be able to work. Some of my grain suffered before it was cut, and some suffered after it was cut; but the neighbors helped me what they could, considering the busy time.

Now the most that caused me to write this letter is this: I received a letter from brother Garman in Oregon, and he stated in his letter that it was not a healthy country; that there was too much damp air for a man with weak lungs; and stated that some were leaving there, going to other places for their health. This sounds different to what I always have heard of Oregon. I always heard that it was a healthy country, but he states that he had only been there ten days yet. I have written to some of the Brethren in Oregon, but never received a word in answer, so I began to think I will not force myself on them. I waited for information, and then I wrote to a man that does not belong to the church.—He gave me an answer in a few days, but never received a scratch of a pen from the Brethren. As I do not call this country that I am living in a healthy country, I thought I would change location and have my health better. Now, a few open, liberal hearted brethren and sisters that seem to want to enlarge the borders of our church, sent in what they could spare. I do not know how much has been sent in. The Brethren don't make a report. It seems that the Yearly Council did not take my case into consideration. It does seem to me that some questions of less importance were noticed. I waited with all the patience that I possessed to hear favor against me, but as was in vain. Now I want the brethren of California and Oregon to inform me of the health of the country and that soon and if the means come in time, I still will go this fall; if not means enough this fall, perhaps enough till Spring.

I made all the preparations to see the Brethren in Oregon and preach for them this Fall; but God's ways are past finding out, and his judgments unsearchable. As my health will not permit me to go to the coast this Fall, I hope and trust to kind Providence, I shall be able again Spring. I am bound to leave Egypt, (Illinois,) if all goes well, and I want to go where I can do the most good. I do not care where I settle, in California or Oregon. I would like to hear from the Brethren in both places in regard to the health. I would like to receive a letter from brethren Wolf and Myers of California. As this is such a changeable country in the Winter, I did want to leave this Fall; but now things seem to go hard with me. Now all the brethren that want to write to me will address me at Parkersburg, Richland county, Illinois.

J. B. ALLENSWORTH.

Brother Henry: I do not feel fully satisfied since our last District Meeting, about that appeal, as it is called, of brother F. P. Lœhr.

At a place where so many are speaking,—and some such fast speakers, as we had at our District Meeting,—I cannot express myself fully. I cannot force myself in like some; but I will now try here to give some of my views.

In the first place, I would like to be a little better satisfied of the actual necessity of sending a brother to assist brother Lœhr. Does not bro. Lœhr live there, right among them in Michigan?

If there are any persons there just ready to be baptized, as I understand brother Lœhr to say, why did he not baptize them? why first come to Middle Pennsylvania District Meeting for assistance, not knowing whether his appeal would be granted or not? And even now, as it is granted, if I understand it aright, they are not to go to work until next Fall. By this time these persons might be dead, and be lost long before this brother will come. When Philip met with the eunuch, and after he professed to believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, Philip did not leave the eunuch in the desert, and travel over land and water, hills and dales, to Jerusalem, nor to the Middle District of Pennsylvania, for assistance; but he baptized him, and the eunuch went on his way rejoicing. Why could not brother Lœhr do so here? And if any assistance is necessary to organize churches, or otherwise, has not Indiana churches, one adjoining another upto the Michigan line, so that brother Lœhr might get assistance near at hand? as I am well aware that the Indiana churches are not short in ministering brethren.—And if they were, do we not know that the Northern part of Ohio is well supplied with ministers? Also the western part of Pennsylvania, west of the Alleghany mountains, has ministering brethren enough and to spare; and these would be nearer at hand to assist the brother if necessary.

These are some of the things that I cannot understand, and could not express myself at the District Meeting; and beside all this, I was instructed by the church which I represented, to give no encouragement to traveling missionaries, in the way of raising funds, as it is called. So I think the brethren ought not to blame me for being faithful in carrying out that which I was sent for; and if they had known it, there would have been no need for brethren to come up to me and say, "Why brother M——s I am surprised at you." This is a part of the reason I did what I did: it is not at all that I have anything against the brother who is sent; if I wanted to send any at all, he would be my choice.

Another expression was made that I do not understand: that "the preacher makes the church." I always thought the church makes the preacher. Let that be as it may, our churches and our preachers,—as far as our three "Dutch" churches are concerned,—don't believe in sending missionaries and paying them. It is not the general belief of our members. But we do not want the brethren to think that we are opposed to spreading the Gospel. We only differ in the plan. We are not aware of a great deal of good being done by missionaries. We heard and read of the two brethren who went to California and Oregon, and spent over six hundred dollars; and some think the good they did is not worth what it cost. It appears to me like a steamboat or other vessel, running through the water, making a great noise and drawing the attention of the people, and leaving some mark behind for a little distance and a short season, but very soon it will all disappear and be forgotten; or like a large bird flying through the air and everybody gazing after it; as soon as it is out of sight it will be forgotten. Such will be the case with the missionary. But we find that, in the days of the apostles and up to this time, the gospel was spread by emigration; and God always found means to induce his people to emigrate where He wanted them to go, and stay there, and spread and organize churhes.

The apostle says, "God that made the world and all things therein, . . . has determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation, that they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after him,"

The Gospel light appeared first in the East over eighteen hundred years ago, moved on westward until it was carried to the shore of the Pacific Ocean—not by missionaries, but by emigration.

We can remember very well that, not more than twenty or twenty-five years ago, when brother Joseph Emmitt went to Lee county, Ill's, also brother Jacob Long to Carroll county, where there were no churches, and I think no brethren. Some time after that brethren John Fitz, and Jesse Danner, went to Fulton county, Illinois. Now let us see what the result is: one church planted against another with hundreds of members, in so short a time. But they moved there, and staid there, and preached both by word and example. This is the way that we believe the Gospel should and will be spread. In this way there is no need of a ten cent tax. Now we would like to hear the brethren tell us what they have done through their missionaries. The above mentioned brethren are only a few of the many that might be mentioned, that emigrated and spread the gospel.

There is another idea that I will not pass over; the ten cent tax was accepted by the most of the delegates and laid before their churches. Some of them, and perhaps all, except the three York county churches, have already responded to the call, and thus there will be a surplus in the treasury. Now the next question will be, What shall we do with it? Why, if it is necessary to send a brother to Michigan, there will soon be scores of places equally as necessary. Now, if we want to do justice, we must send to them all, and instead of ten cents, it will soon run up to ten dollars. "Well, what if it does?" says one. But we would like to see the good result from it before we encourage it.

I have now stated some of my objections to the missionaries; about the danger and mischief I can see in it, I may write hereafter.

JOSEPH MYERS.

East Berlin, Pa.

Announcements.

LOVEFEASTS.

We have appointed a communion meeting in the Buck's Creek Church, Henry county, Indiana, on the 28th of September. The usual invitation is given to the brethren and sisters.

Yours in Gospel affinity,

LEVI HIMES.

Rogersville, Ind.

We intend to hold a communion meeting, if the Lord is willing, on the twenty-ninth day of September, in the meeting-house of the Lick Creek congregation, Owen Co., Ind. A general invitation is given to all the brethren and sisters, and especially to the ministering brethren.—Stop off at Freedom on the Indianapolis and Vincennes Road. First give us notice by mail. Address R. R. Goshorn, Hausertown, Owen Co., Indiana.

Plymouth, Lyon co., Kan., Sept. 2nd.

Somerset arm, Mercer co., Mo., Sept. 23d and 24th.

Shelby co., Iowa, Sept. 2nd.

Salem branch, Marion co., Ill., Aug. 26th.

Dresden Powesheik co., Iowa, Sept 2nd & 3d.

Buck's Creek church, Henry county, Ind., Sept. 28th.

Lick Creek congregation, Owen county, Ind, Sept. 29th.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with obituary notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In Thomasboro, Champaign county, Ill's, July 16, JESSE D. son of brother Noah and sister Elizabeth KINSEY. Age, 1 year, 6 months and 2 days.

Funeral services improved by brother Aaron Snider and the writer, from John 14 : 3, "I go to prepare a place for you."

J. H. Moore.

Thomasboro, Ill.

In the Stony Creek district, of the church at Nobleville, Hamilton county, Indiana, July 6th, ELIZABETH GASHO, wife of brother John R. Gasho; aged 22 years 4 months and 18 days. Disease, Consumption. Funeral services by brethren William Pierce, Enoch Fry, and Eli Caylor.

The subject of the above notice, was a sister much loved and respected. She expressed a willingness to go home where she might be at rest.

John H. Caylor.

In the Lick Creek congregation, Owen co., Indiana, July 14th, of Consumption, brother JOSEPH C. CULLER, son of Elder David and sister Anne Culler; aged 19 years 8 months and 25 days. Brother Joseph bore his lingering sickness with remarkable patience; and after he saw that his end was near, he called his friends and bade them all a tender farewell, leaving them a blessed hope of a happy meeting in heaven. Funeral services by Elder Moses Hochstetler and others, from Hebrews 9 : 27, 28.

"Visitor" please copy.

R. R. Goshorn.

May 15th, in Lena, Ill., at the house of his son Lewis, MICHAEL LAUVER; aged about 80 years. He was formerly from Juniata county, Pa., and a Mennonite by profession.

Funeral occasion improved by Paul Wetzel, Charles Royer, and the writer, from John 11 : 25, 26.

In the Waddam's Grove congregation, July 6th, of Consumption, sister SUSANNAH EBY, daughter of brother Enoch Eby; aged 16 years and 29 days. Funeral occasion improved by A. M. Lutz, Isaac Myers, and the writer, from 1 Peter 1 : 23, 24.

"Visitor" please copy.

Allen Boyer.

In the Middlefork branch, Clinton county, Ind., July 28th, sister CATHARINE, wife of brother S. METZGER; aged 26 years, 2 months and 12 days. Funeral occasion improved by brethren John Shively, Jacob Wagoner, Stephen Metzger and J. W. Metzger, from 2 Cor. 5 : 1, 2.

A. E. Metzger.

Died at Pekin, Ill., friend ISAIAH HORNER, son of brother Solomon S. Horner, of Elderton, Armstrong county, Pa.

The deceased was born in Somerset county, Pa.; came here with his father a few years ago; was married to sister Elizabeth Kelso. Then removed to Illinois, became engineer on a railroad a short time, was unwell for some time—received injury by stepping off the train when stopped; then he lived about 9 weeks, during which time he lamented his past life; and sister Horner has reason to hope that he repented and found peace with God. A few days before he died he expressed a desire to be baptized; but as sister Horner knew of no brethren near Pekin, and he was very weak, the desire for baptism was not gratified; and now we trust the Lord will accept the desire. His time here was only 27 years 7 months and 13 days. Let us, dear reader, reflect, repent, and observe the gospel injunction, "Seek first the kingdom of heaven," &c. Funeral services at Plum Creek, Armstrong county, Pa., on July 26d, from Matth. 24 : first clause of the 44th verse.

Lewis Kimmel.

LIST OF MONEYS

received for subscription, books, &c.,

D. B. Teeter,	,60	J. M. Steele,	$3,00
A. Puterbaugh,	2,25	D. Heiny,	2.25
S. R. Deppin	1.50	Henry Garber	.95
J. Clingingsmith	3.00	F. A. Hendricks	1 50
Martha Brott	.75	E. K. Buechley	.80
John Etter	1-50	Sarah Baker	.75

Advertisements.

WE will admit a limited number of select advertisements at the following rates.

One insertion, 20 cents a line.

Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.

Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.

No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations.

Beers' Expanding Seroll Waterwheel.

[Patented 1868] This wheel is now running with the overshot, in a Flouring Mill, and is using less water than the overshot. Inventor being a Millwright, and having seen and used all the new waterwheels, does not hesitate to say it is the first iron wheel that can compete with the overshot, and is one half cheaper, simpler and better. For farther information address J. L. Beers and Sons, Millwrights and Manufacturer's of wheel shafting and mill gearing of all kinds, continued Sawmill feed and Sawmill irons.

J. L. Beers & Sons

Cocolamus, Juniata Co. Pa.

A Card.

Drs. D. Fahrney & Son, Uroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.

7-10- 1 yr. pd.

A Sure Cure for Dyspepsia.

Upon the receipt of one dollar, I will send the the Medicine, with Directions, by return mail. DAVID ESHELMAN.

MOUNTVILLE, PA.

Wm. M. Lloyd, Altoona, Pa. D. T. Caldwell, Tyrone Pa.

LLOYD, CALDWELL & CO.,

BANKERS,

Receive monies on deposit, and pay interest if left 6 months, at 4 per cent per annum, or 5 per cent. if left one year.

Special contracts made with parties acting a administrators, executors, guardians, and persons holding monies in trust. Dealers in every description of Stocks and Bonds.—Government Securities made a specialty.

Gold and Silver bought and sold, and a general Banking business transacted.

TYRONE BANK,

TYRONE, PA.

This Bank, intending to do a general banking business, solicits accounts from Bankers Bankers and others. Collections made on all points. Interest allowed on DEPOSITS left on time. Paper discounted on liberal terms.

Wm. P. Orbison,	D. I. Gwin,
John Scott,	H. G. Fisher,
Thomas Fisher,	J. H. Glazier.
Wm. Dorris,	G. C. Wilkins,
G. W. Garretson,	and others

Universal Guide for Cutting Garments.

By which every family may cut its own garments for men and boys, of twenty six different Sizes; for Coats, Pants, Vests, and Sacks, and Ladies' Dress Bodies. Agents wanted to sell State, County, and Family Rights. For Particulars address MILLER & QUINN, Blair Co., Pa.

SALEM COLLEGE.

The Fall Term of this Institution, (open for both sexes) situated at Bourbon, Marshall county, Ind., will begin Sept. 6th, 1871. A class in Drawing for ladies will be organized for the special training of teachers.

For further particulars apply to
O. W. MILLER, President.
Bourbon, Ind.

1780 1871

ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK?

Use Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

CLEANSE YOUR BLOOD!!

An Alterative and Cathartic, or Tonic and Purgative combined, for diseases arising from bad Blood: such as Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Erysipelas, Worms, Chills and Fever, Scrofula, Pimples, Tetter, &c. TRY IT.

Established 1781. In packages for use. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form, which was brought to its present state of preparation and perfection some years later, by Dr. P. Fahrney, Chicago, Ill's, who controls the trade west of Ohio. Great reputation! Many Testimonials! Ask for them. Prepared at Waynesboro, Pa., and Chicago, Ill's. Beware of imitations. Genuine retails at $1.25 per bottle. Druggists and dealers sell it.

Dr. P. Fahrney's "Health Messenger" gives the history and uses of the Blood Cleanser and Panacea, and other information, sent free of charge. Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.
WAYNESBORO, PA.

SHORT HAND WRITING.—Students of Phonography and all others who are interested in the art can obtain instruction books. Send stamp for price list and tracts.
AMERICAN PHONETIC DEPOT.
TYRONE, PA.

Excelsior Bee Hive.

This hive being now well established is extensively manufactured, and for sale. $3 for single hive, also Bee-keepers Instruction. 15 cents single copy. Liberal inducements to agents. Address S. B. REPLOGLE.
Bowers Spring,
7 12 18s Blair Co Pa.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine. With Hem, Feed, and Tucker, new Hemmer, etc., is now offered to agents on most liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the cash at most moderate rates allowed.

Every Machine is warranted First Class, and if the purchaser does not find it so, it can be returned at our expense, and money refunded.

N. B. We want a few agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining our system of sales, etc., who can make a good income. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. CO.
Head Office and Salesroom 17th St., New York

For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament with Interlinear Word for word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price, $4.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business." In one vol. $2.25. Inducements.

Life at Home; or the Family and its Members—including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed. The Altar in the House, etc. By WM. ARNOT. $1.50.

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. THOMPSON. Fancy Cloth, $1.00.

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand-book of Phrenology and Physiognomy for Students and Examiners, with a Chart for recording the size of the different Organs of the Brain in the Delineation of Character, with upwards of 170 Engravings. Muslin, $1.25.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Including the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By W. PITTENGER. $1.50.

Aesop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Royal 12mo. Illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth gilt, beveled boards. Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Containing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Quotations, Words, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, gilt. 75 cts.

Any of the above sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

The Phrenological Journal, An Illustrated, First-Class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3 00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50, or with the Pious Youth, for $3.00. We commend the JOURNAL to all who want a good Family Magazine, and who [illegible]

[illegible] and be accompanied with the money [illegible] name of person, post office, county and [illegible] plain intelligible letters, and address [illegible] TYRONE, Pa.

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING

One copy, post paid	0 75
12 copies, post paid	8 50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	$0.75
Per dozen, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN & ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid	$1.00
Per dozen,	10.80

Turkey Morocco, Ger. & Eng.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	13.80

Plain Single German

One copy, post paid	.50
Per doz " "	$5.50

The Christian Harp, containing 32 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.70
Reserved at the office,	2.35
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder, Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express,	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	60
German & English Testaments,	.75

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25

32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION. 25

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Certificates &c.

Marriage Certificate, per doz., post paid, 0.30
CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP. Per doz, 0.30
TRACTS.—RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE, 12 pages five cents single copy; thirty cents a doz.

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, postoffices county & state written in unmistakable letters

THE PIOUS YOUTH.

A MONTHLY PUBLICATION

Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.

One dollar a year in advance.

THE

Christian Family Companion

Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements; that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
TYRONE, PA.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum.

VOLUME VII. TYRONE, PA. TUESDAY, AUG. 16, 1871. NUMBER 33.

The Lord's Leading.

Thus far the Lord has led us, in darkness and in day,
Through all the varied stages of the narrow, homeward way;
Long since he took that journey—he trod that path alone,
Its trials and its dangers full well himself hath known.

Thus far the Lord hath lead us; the promise hath not failed,
The enemy encountered oft, has never quite prevailed;
The shield of faith has turned aside, or quenched each fiery dart,
The Spirit's sword in weakest hands has forced him to depart.

Thus far the Lord hath led us; the waters have been high,
But yet in passing through them, we felt that he was nigh.
A very present helper in trouble we have found,
His comforts most abounded when our sorrows did abound.

Thus far the Lord hath led us; our need hath been supplied,
And mercy hath encompassed us about on every side;
Still falls the daily manna; the pure rock-fountains flow,
And many flowers of love and hope along the wayside grow.

Thus far the Lord hath led us; and will he now forsake
The feeble ones whom for his own it pleases him to take?
Oh, never, never! earthly friends may cold and faithless prove,
But his is changeless pity and everlasting love.

Calmly we look behind us, our joys and sorrows past,
We know that all is mercy now, and shall be well at last;
Calmly we look before us—we fear no future ill,
Enough for safety and for peace, if THOU art with us still

Yes, they that know thy name, Lord, shall put their trust in thee,
While nothing in themselves but sin and helplessness they see,
The race thou hast appointed us, with patience we can run.
Thou wilt perform unto the end the work thou hast begun.

For the COMPANION.

Christ Accepted.

BY D. B. MENTZER.

Shortly before the apprehension and execution of our blessed Savior Jesus Christ, he was particularly diligent in fulfilling his missionary labors. The great Jewish feast was at hand, and we read of certain Greeks who asked for an interview with Jesus, and he told them that "the hour is come that the Son of man should be glorified," and gave his reasons. Then he preached some great truths to them, and prayed unto the Father who audibly answered him. He gave them to understand that just then was the judgment of this world, and said: "And, I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." This declaration made known the manner of his death, and that was by being "lifted up from the earth." The people no doubt knew what he meant when he said "lifted up," but they did not know how he would draw all men unto him. He made his "being lifted up," the condition of drawing all men unto him. "And I will draw all men unto me, if I be lifted up from the earth." That is the idea. He meant, if his blood were shed by his being crucified, or "lifted up" on the cross, through this he would draw all men—he would make this grand occurrence the means of reconciling mankind unto himself. Gentle reader, is not the plan a grand one? The sacrifice of himself, the shedding of his own blood, these brought about the fulfilment of his glorious promise that he would thus "draw all men" unto him.

Though all nations should reject Jesus, yet some will believe on him, for he has power to draw, and none come without being attracted by his unspeakable love. Blessed attraction! Dear reader, has he drawn you,? Has his love in his death, no attraction for you? Can you not love him? A goodly number have been drawn to him, and they will tell you they are happy in his love and joyfully walk in his commands. May every reader say with joyous heart—"Christ accepted," and walk with him.

For the Companion.

Habits.

There is something peculiar about human nature in the formation of habits. There are some habits which require long and continued practice before they become habitual. This, however, varies in different persons; and depends very much on the age, nature, and temperament of that person. The young form habits more readily than the aged: especially bad habits. The Americans are particularly noted, for bad habits, several of which affect all classes. I shall only notice two or three of the most prominent.

The over indulgence of eating is one which we all have to contend with, more or less; and its effects may be seen in almost every American household, not only by weakening the digestive organs, constituting that form of disease, which we call Dyspepsia, but it weakens the mind, and fails to work out those true and noble objects which God intended it should.

While the Chinaman is content with his bowl of rice, or the Turk with his cheese and crust of bread, we, who live in a land of Bibles and claim to be the only true Christians, imagine that we can not live decently, if we have not our tables loaded with almost everything that the earth produces. This fixing and feasting is, more particularly indulged in, on the Sabbath, which we all know is contrary to the commands of Christ.

Chewing and smoking tobacco have become quite prominent among all classes, in these fast times. The rich as well as the poor, the professor with the nonprofessor—all go hand in hand. The strong current drifts them on, on, until the iron grasp of this vile habit holds them. Fast? No, not fast. They can break the iron hand, if they will but do it.

Brethren, consider well before you say, "I can't quit chewing" or, "I can't quit smoking;" because you are a slave to your own natural propensities and we must throw off nature to become new creatures.

There is a great deal said' in this country about American liberty, or freedom; but there is one Liberty, one Freedom, to which others bear no comparison; and that is, freedom from our own lusts and passions.

I would say to my young brethren and sisters, who, like myself, are battling with many trials and temptations, who are trying to rid themselves of all their bad habits, fight on, and the prize will be yours. Oh! that we all would raise our thoughts above the tempting scenes of life,& direct them to things imperishable.

A. SAGER.

Foe the COMPANION.

Quickened.

On page 181 current Volume, C. F. C., brother Leedy gives an answer to the query propounded to him about Christ's Spirit being quickened, in which he says, that it was not necessary that his spirit should be killed in order to be quickened; that the word "quicken" has diverse meanings. In this we mutually agree. He says a great many people can attach but one idea to a word, when it has many; and rather intimates that I am one of them. Now, for the satisfaction of my dear brother I will just say, that I attach but one idea to the word "quickened," in the connection in which it stands. That is the way in which my brother says we determine it. In this we also agree.

Now let us try and read the passage understandingly, and correctly: (1 Peter 3: 18, 19.) "For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he (Christ) might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the (not in the) Spirit: by which also he (Christ) went and preached unto the spirits in prison." Now, my dear brother Leedy, if I am capable of understanding the passage correctly, it was his body that was quickened: "put to death in the flesh but quickened by the Spirit: by which he went and preached." It seems plain to my mind, that he went with that very body that was quickened by the Spirit. "Now he that ascended is the same that descended;" and he "descended first into the lower parts of the earth." It was Christ that ascended—body and spirit; and he that ascended is the same that descended; therefore it must have been a whole Christ that descended. If the passage should read as my dear brother has used it, it would favor his idea: "quickened in the spirit." Effect always follows cause, and just so soon as that body was quickened, he by that made-alive body, preached to those that were disobedient in the days of Noah, and, no doubt, exhibited to them the wounds that he received on calvary, "that they might be judged according to men in the flesh but live according to God in the spirit." Let this suffice for the present.

J. THOMAS.

For the COMPANION.

Faith.

Having a few spare moments before us, we thought to devote the time in presenting a thought or two upon the important subject of faith. We are taught in the sacred volume of God's Word, that those who come "to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." The apostle tells us that "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Hence it is that faith and hope are contemporary, seeing that faith is the substance, or evidence, and hope the prospect yet unrealized.

We also learn in the Scriptures, "that faith without works is dead, being alone. And to more fully comprehend the matter, that we may be more clearly understood, suffer us to present an illustration.

Suppose we tell to you that on yonder mountain stands a very noted tree, and give you a description by which you may easily comprehend it; and on the south-east, twenty paces from the trunk of that tree, stands a small bush, noted for its peculiarity; and on the south side of said bush, six feet under the surface, is buried twenty thousand dollars in specie, which you can have at your own disposal if you will go and get it. Now if you have faith in me, you know the specie or substance is there; because you have the evidence (my words), hence the hope of realizing the substance unseen, will cause you to act immediately, from the fact that faith, causes to spring up within you the hope of realizing the substance or thing not seen.

With what anxious desire and energy would works begin, and with what precision would you execute the labors before you! With what earnest zeal would you ascend the crest of the mount, regardless of the many drops of sweat trickling from your brow and glowing cheek, caused by the hope of gain which faith created. You gaze for a moment with expectant joy, and lo! you see the tree as described. Imagine with what glowing emotions of the heart, works confirm your hope and increase your faith. You cast your eye as directed, and see the bush with all its described peculiarities. Do we not see how, at every new observation, works confirm your hope and strengthens your faith? For, had you not started to the top of the mount, there would be no confirmation to your hope, neither an increase of faith;—yea, your hope would be void and your faith dead. With what eagerness would you still prosecute the work begun, finding all I have told you is true. You would dig in the earth as directed, with earnest zeal, and fresh encouragement, with the hope of realizing the substance. How diligently would you perform the labors attached to the reward! With what precision would you observe all the directions as given you in the start, till at last you win the prize, and gather up the twenty thousand with a heart filled with joy; because hope is at an end; and faith is made perfect. We say here that hope is at an end, or extinct; for the apostle tells us: "But hope that is seen is not hope; for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for?" Hence it is that your hope is at an end and faith completed.

So it is with the Christian life. The sinner sees his deplorable condition; he concludes that, unless he seeks an inheritance beyond the tomb, he is undone forever. He stops in his wild career; and abandons an indulgence in the idle and transitory scenes of life. The moment he stops, a voice speaks: "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest to your souls."

With what care and attention will the earnest inquirer learn of him who is able to give the prize. How carefully will he learn the instructions from the Savior as couched in the Testament which was dedicated by the blood of the son of God, our great sacrificial offering. How carefully will he observe the standing point: "Repent and believe the gospel.' When he believes, then he will obey the gospel; yes, repent and be baptized for the remission of sins. And when a compliance with the first instructions is observed then faith still will increase, and at every observance of Christ's commands through the dark voyage of our pilgrimage in this world, our faith is increased and our hope confirmed.

Thus the Christian travels onward and upward: we say upward, because the mind is elevated above the deceitful lusts of the world; taking Christ's instructions as a lamp to their pathway and a light to their feet; passing through the many autumn breezes and frosty winters, until at last they shall pass through the gate of the tomb, and enter the spring of eternal glory in the midst of the paradise of God, where hope is at an end and faith completed.

A. STALNAKER.

The Sea of Galilee.

What the traveler will see when he catches his first eager glimpse of the limpid sheet of water will be a small oval-shaped lake, thirteen miles long and six broad. It is evidently of volcanic origin, and the earth-quakes which have rent the walls of Tiberias as well as the hot springs at several places in the vicinity of the lake, show that volcanic agencies are still at work. All along the eastern side runs a green plain, which, except at one spot (the probable scene of the destruction of the swine after the heal-of the Gadarene demoniac) is every where about a quarter to a half a mile in width. Beyond this, rises to the height of about 2,000 feet an escapment of desolate-looking hills scored by various ravines, and having a plateau at the top. As there are neither trees nor villages to be seen on that side, and no signs of cultivation, the view in that direction has a certain monotony, but, this is atoned for by the air of mystery derived from its very desolation, and from the fact that even in our Lord's time it was so unfrequented that He had but to visit it when he required the refreshment of solitude. It was of this lovely shore that we are reminded in the lines of the beautiful hymn—

> "'Come to a desert place apart,
> And rest a little while.'
> So spake the Lord when mind and heart
> Were faint and sick through toil."

It was somewhere among these featureless hills probably toward the north-eastern corner of the lake—that he fed the five thousand who had flocked after him on foot; it was somewhere about these gray ravines that He spent the night in prayer.—And how many times must his eye have rested with pleasure on the dimpling surface of the inland sea! a sight delightful in any region of the world, but doubly refreshful and delicious in this sultry land.

Denying a fault doubles it.

For the Companion.

Life, Sick-bed, and Burial of a Christian Father, vs. his Children.

The Christian father is a man who tries to do his duty unto God and man. He tries to rear his children in the "nuture and admonition of the Lord." He tries to show them their duty by precept and example. He is a man of not very much account to the world, and will not become very popular in the world. In a certain sense the world loves him not, because he is an alien to it. His eyes are set on higher objects than pertain to the earth.

The Christian Father lives in this world as an husbandman, taking care of such things as are given under his supervision by the Heavenly Father—not clinging to them as though they were his own; but only as a steward,—he uses the world but does not abuse it.

He often reminds his children of their duty to a God whom they should obey, and warn them of sin and unrighteousness—of everlasting perdition, and a judgment to come.

But they heed him not: they turn a deaf ear to him, and take their own way for it; and become disobedient children, and break the first commandment with promise—all to their own hurt. They are blind: with seeing eyes they see not; with hearing ears they hear not, and with stubborn hearts they obey not, and thus cause grief to spread over the path of the father.

Yet he loves them; he admonishes them again and again. He prays with and for them, but they heed it not—they will have their own way. The Father looks to a higher source and to a higher hand. He prays a merciful God to have mercy on his children and friends who are yet in the world, to draw them and to call to them—if they will not hear now, they may hereafter. The father lives and tries to do his duty until cares and sorrows have wrinkled his brow, and disease has taken hold on his mortal frame.

He is laid upon his sick bed. Means of health are applied, but of no avail. He grows weaker, and the disease stronger. He must soon pass through the bitter waters of Jordan. But he dreads them not; he has lived to die, and death is no terror to him. He has "a desire to depart and to be with Christ, which is far better." (We are sorry that a part of the copy was lost; but the good man died.—E.)

He is gone. Children and friends are gathered around. They weep and mourn, but he is gone. They have heard his last word; they have witnessed his last breath—he is gone. They pay him the last tribute of respect,—to have his mortal remains entombed,—and as the grave is closed, as it gives forth the doleful sound, the kind admonitions of the father, his prayers for them, and his all are brought to remenbrance in the children. They are so weighty, they press so hard that they cause those haughty eyes, that were too proud aforetime to weep, to gush forth tears of bitter woe. Their mortal frame is shaken as with a mighty power; the heavenly Spirit calls loud unto them to repent, make peace with their God, and follow in the footsteps of their parent; and like Agrippa they are almost persuaded to become Christians; but like Felix of old, they bid the Spirit depart until a convenient season.

LEVI ANDES.

Lincoln, Pa.

For the Companion.

Universalism.

We have written several articles upon the subject of Universalism; but when we know that new assertions are continually being made and palmed off, upon the people for arguments in favor of this hell-begotten doctrine, we are convinced that those who are willing not only to favor, but defend that only which is right, must remember that their duties will not be fully performed until their Master shall call them from his service. With these reflections upon our mind, we will proceed to expose another poisonous pill, which Satan has employed his agents to prepare for the people. We hope that but few will nibble at this bait at all, for it is such a poor one that almost everybody can see the bare hook. The poison which we have seen last presented as a crumb of spiritual food, is the following proposition: "The Lord's prayer is designed for universal use."

Now we will show to every intelligent man and woman that, if this proposition is true, our Savior taught a falsehood when he said unto his disciples, "when ye pray, &c." We are also prepared to show that, if the proposition is true, he who designed the Lord's prayer designed that a portion of the human family should ask God never to forgive them.

That our Savior taught a falsehood, if the assumption be true, when he said, "when YE pray, &c.," is evident from the fact that the pronoun ye refers to none but the disciples as its antecedent of the pronoun ye, the Lord's prayer must be designed for the disciples only. We wish to be understood to say that, if the Lord's prayer is designed for universal use, as is claimed by Universalists, then, and upon those conditions only, our Savior taught a falsehood.

Every one, we think, knows, that Christ claimed for his mission, not only the redemption of the world, but also the great work of teaching the way that leads to eternal Glory. It is certain that when it was said to him, "Thou art a teacher sent from God," he did not deny it; and we think that he always reproved every erroneous idea that was advanced in his presence, whice is sufficient evidence to prove that this was a part of his mission. He acknowledged himself to be a teacher when he said: "I sat daily with you teaching in the temple," &c. "For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might believe." Now can any honest Universalist claim that the Savior taught the world that he did not come to condemn the world, and yet taught them to pray for their own condemnation, as would be the case if he designed every one to say "Forgive our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us?" As there are those who have no disposition to forgive their enemies, or those to whom they are enemies, is it not plain that they would ask for their own condemnation if they would make use of the Lord's prayer? Yet Universalists claim that it is designed for universal use! "Consistency where art thou?" Can we find thee in Universalism? No, naught but thy groans of pity can there be found; yet thou canst not make them hear. The handsome salaries which their ministers receive have closed their ears against thy cries.

E. UMBAUGH.

Collamer, Ind.

For the COMPANION.

Passing Away.

How transient is life! How soon we pass away and are forgotten! Kind providence may bless us with health to-day; to-morrow affliction may hang in agony over us, and we be laid upon the bed of sickness, perhaps, never to rise again. In a few days our neighbors, and those who have been so dear to us, may gather round us, and wipe from our brow the cold, damp dew of death. Then the hands may peacefully be clasped o'er the breast: they have no more work to do. Those glassy eyes may be closed: they have no more tears to shed. All is silenced: all things have come to an end with that departed being, as regards his temporal life. Body and soul are now separated; the body is hid beneath the sod, and the soul has gone to meet its just reward. When we look upon the face of one of our mortal beings from whose body the spark of life has fled, it causes us to meditate, and to think of our insignificance, that we, too, must soon pass away, and e're long our heads may lie low with the sleeping, silent dead. But then for some wise purpose 'tis not given us to know when we must die, or where, or how. Some of us may be afflicted a long time, and have plenty of time to prepare for that solemn hour. Others may without a moments warning be ushered into the presence of God, there to give an account for every deed done in the body. Then how necessary it is to be ready; for we know we all must die, every one of us. "Remember, blooming youth, you must die." Oh! stop for one moment, and think what you are doing for your own precious soul. We should not put off preparing for death until the evening of life; but begin in the morning of life, and very early, too. There is no time to be lost; we will soon pass away. Remember, death is applicable to the young as well as the old. When we look around in our immediate vicinity, and see the young pass away with the old, dear little infants very often before they can comprehend the difference between right and wrong—before their little feet have made a sinful step, or their lips uttered a word, God's angels touch their weary eyes with a dreamless sleep. Hushed is that sweet voice. It has passed from earth to heaven. Then let us all try to be ready, so when the summons of death shall come bright angels may bear us to our home, where we shall meet those loved ones gone before, is the prayer of your sister in Christ.

EMMA A. STOUFFER.

Breathedsville, Md.

Doing truth is obediance to God's Law.

Example.

BY JOHN KEBLE.

We scatter seeds with careless hand,
And dream we ne'er shall see them more;
But for a thousand years
Their fruit appears,
In weeds that mar the land,
Or healthful store.

The deeds we do, the words we say—
Into still air they seem to fleet,
We count them ever past;
But they shall last—
In the dread judgment they
And we shall meet!

I charge thee by the years gone by,
For the love's sake of brethren dear,
Keep thou the one true way,
In work and play,
Lest in that world their cry
Of woe thou hear.

Why Should I Wait?

Why should I wait? I cannot flee,
To other refuge than to Thee,
And vile and helpless though I be,
Jesus, I come to Thee.

Why should I wait? I look within,
And nothing there I see but sin;
And thou alone canst make me clean,
Jesus, I come to Thee.

Why should I wait? while now, to-day,
I hear thy voice, in mercy say,
Sinner! I'll wash thy sins away.
Jesus, I come to Thee.

Why should I wait? I must not wait;
To-morrow's sun may be too late;
And death may seal my helpless state.
Jesus, I come to Thee.

Why should I wait? O Lord, I plead,
Thy mercy in this time of need,
And as my hiding place indeed.
Jesus, I come to Thee.

For the Companion.

God Is Love.

In these three short, expressive words, is contained more sublime and divine eloquence to an appreciative ear, than ever emanated from the most brilliant orator in whose attainments the world ever boasted. The sentiment is attributable only to deity himself. Very many have been the charming expressions escaping the lips of man, pregnant, perhaps, with deep significance, that may, perchance have carried us away in imagination into elsyian bowers of extatic bliss, (only to relax back into the wonted channels of disappointed expectancy, having been only the shadow without the substance,) but in the pertinent expression before us, if sounded in all its bearings, we have the substance, the essence and quintessence of all that perfection can claim—attributes that we dare not ascribe to any other than him; Magestorial honors no earthly, princely Potentate can attain to; creative powers only peculiar to him; saving efficacies that can emanate from no other, and prerogatives of destruction that all the combined powers of earth, hell and the devil cannot evade. But let us not diverge from the attribute so justly ascribed to him, upon which we desire in our weakness, to base a few imperfect thoughts. But when we attempt to approach even toward its incomprehensive magnitude, the solemnity of its character, the immensity of its fullness, the characteristics of its deep humility, language becomes inadequate to give full expression to the awfully grand and magnanimous results flowing from it—from God to man. All nature but the creation of nature's God; every visible object, as well as the many unfathomable results of the invisible, but attest the sublimity and plentitude of his power, and the wonderful works of his hands. Even those who have but the indefinite conception of a finite being without the pales of civilization, with no knowledge of a saving power beyond the confines of this life, when they behold the wonderful works of creation, have a glimmering conception which appears to penetrate their obscure vision; and although they bow down to stocks and stones, or graven images, whom they worship as God, yet an instinctive principle, which is even common to the brute creation, seems to awaken their blunted sensibilities to the fact that there is some great power behind the throne. If then the benighted heathen, yet wallowing in the cespool of idolatry and superstition, can form a faint conception of natures God,—what, let me ask, in the name of common humanity, ought to be the vivid conception of the enlightened and civilized portion of the world, with the light of divine truth, together with the great profundity of historical research accompanying it, permeating into almost all, and even the most obscure avenues of life?

The very impress of the finger of God's love, is indelibly written upon the face of common humanity, which led him to mould man in the express image of his person—the imprint of God manifest in the flesh! It was his divine love that brought order out of chaos and confusion; it was its infinite and expansive nature, that created the world with every living creature that inhabits it; and its great benignity of character that made all things to subserve to every want of humanity; and in its ever existing capacity continues to supply and develop substitutes for every exhausted product. His exhaustless store-house of temporal supplies will continue until time shall cease to be; and the undiminishing supplies of his divine grace are no less than when the first portion was given to sinful man, with the promise that as we advance in a divine life dedicated to his service, the increase shall but become the more abundant

Oh! that our souls might always be lit up with the flames of his precious love—that it might be the ever-living and innate principle of our being—that we may daily become more worthy recipients of the riches of his goodness and mercy toward us—that we might lean as confidingly upon his bosom as did that holy apostle of old, calmly reposing under the sanctifying influence of his holy and divine love, with his strong and defensive arm ever extended over us in protective and defensive solicitude.—But we ought to appreciate this one grand fact, that his love does not always manifest itself toward us in the refulgent rays of sunshine and prosperity. It is no cross to look up and smile under the fortuitous enhancement of our prosperity; but it requires an effectual supply of the riches of divine grace, to look up through the dark and hovering clouds of adversity, when it would seem as though the angry elements of Heaven and earth were conspiring against us, to drag us down into the vortex of apparently interminable tribulation and trials. But let us remember, my dear reader, that behind the most terrible exhibition of his apparent wrath, lie the placid sunbeams of his divine love. The darkest hour may be just before the gray beams of morning-light break forth upon our beclouded vision. The first, flickering rays of the bright orb of day, cast but the shadows of the bright felicity of eternal day. Our affliction was only to correct some principle not in consonance with God's holy will. Our adversity was perhaps to stay the false delusion of coveted, earthly possessions, which weighted in the balance with the supremacy of his love, dwindle into utter insignificance. The loss of that loved one that may wring our hearts in bitter anguish, but forms a connecting link between us and heaven. Bereft of that doting mother, in whom was the centralization of all earthly love can claim, but reminds us the more forcibly of the certain dissolution of all earthly ties, and the necessity of those things pertaining to our christian perfection, that can only fit us for a happy reunion in heaven.

Have ye "forgotten the exhotation which speaketh unto as unto children My son, despise not thou the chastenings of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked by him? For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourageth every son whom he receiveth." Have we not had our fathers in the flesh who corrected us? and did we not give them reverence? why shall we not much rather be in subjection unto the Father of spirits, and live? "No chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous; nevertheless, afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruits of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby."—We may not fully comprehend the designs of the Almighty when over shadowed by the dark clouds of affliction and trouble; yet some specific and wise purpose, governed by the undying love he entertains for us, is directing and sustaining us in that that makes for our eternal peace and happiness in the world to come. He will not allow us to be tempted beyond that we are able; but at the proper time, will lift the veil, when we can look back with discerning minds upon all the gloomy vicissitudes, trials, and sore temptations's hour, and philosophically exclaim, "It was good for us to have been afflicted: it was but the refiner's fire, separating the dross from the gold, purifying our souls, and fitting us for the sanctified associations of Heaven!"

And may we yet give further expression to the invaluable sentiment of a Paul! "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or sword?—Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors, through him that loved us," and gave his only begotten Son for us that we through him might obtain a right to the tree of life. May we all, by the riches of his grace, be permitted to rejoice in the fullness and significant pathos of the pertinent expression, falling from the lips of inspiration of one who abounded in all the comforting assurances of Christ, and who was not barren or unfruitful in his labor of love toward his fellow man, from whose clarion voice rang out the glad tidings of salvation with such emphatic decision as ought to convict and convince the world of sin, of the just and Holy attributes of his character, and the inflexibility of his demands in his redemptive plan of salvation, all inaugurated under the auspices of his divine love from God to man: "For I am pursuaded, that neither death nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

In conclusion, permit me to submit the pert exhortation of a celebrated divine: "Take your part with Christ and his despised people; and when the day comes when he shall distribute his reward, happy shall that man be who never flinched, and blessed shall he be who stood fast in the evil day, and stood still in the integrity of the Lord and in the firmness of his truth—firm even to the end.

Not death nor hell shall e'er divide
His chosen from his breast,
In the dear bosom of his love,
They must forever rest.

P. S. Newcomer.

For the Companion.

Scattered Flakes.

If we possess a spirit of forgiveness, and a reasonable principle, we can say of a truth that we are rich; and we truly have something good to boast of. Then there would seldom be any difficulty; or if there should be, there would be no trouble in the settlement thereof. Truly if all of us, as a family, could justly boast of the possession of such pure gems, we would have but little occasion to feel sad, or downcast; because we would then be entirely reasonable. Then there would be no danger of us speaking so rashly, or acting so unbecomingly, as to touch and keenly smart the sensitive feelings of some good brother or sister, which is often done: not because we lack reason, for we think that most of us at least are blessed with a portion, but we fear that some few quench, or depress that faculty, or in other words, will not allow that faculty to act. Indeed we fear that there are some who depress reason so far as not to acknowledge to an error, or fault, no difference how much they are convinced of it. Sad thought, that any human being would harbor such an unreasonable principle! Let us away with such foreign plants and cultivate a reasonable principle, and then our words and actions will be good, becoming, and lovely, and will be admired by all, and owned in heaven as good, delicious fruit, and all will seek for our presence as much as we, when entering into a fruit orchard, make our way to the most delicious fruit. We seek not the most beautiful tree, for that might prove to be a crab-apple; but we at once go to the tree that bears good fruit, not alone to partake of its fruit, but we love to recline there beneath it. From the fact that we love that tree because its fruit is good, we do not stop to rest beneath the crab-apple, although we might enjoy more shade, and beauty, too, for we are fearful we would happen to taste its sour fruit.

Just so, if we do not prune and cultivate our principles, people will wisely shun our presence, no difference how beautiful we may appear; for they fear they might be compelled to taste our bitter fruit—harsh words or actions.

Let us never rest idle, but ever be making some peogress in the cultivation of our ways; and thus be engaged in a good work that will ever be met with pleasant smiles on earth, and in heaven with divine approbation, there we can fully realize the benefit of this cultivation.

Reader, own me as your weak sister,

Rebecca Snavely.

— He who esteems trifles for themselves is a trifler; he who esteems them for the conclusion to be drawn from, or the advantage to which they can be put, is a philosopher.

—Where gold and silver dwell in the heart, faith, hope, and love are out of doors.

The Too Popular Creed.

Dimes and dollars ! dollars and dimes !
An empty pocket's the worst of crimes !
If a man is down, give him a thrust—
Trample the beggar into the dust !
Presumptuous poverty's quite appalling—
Knock him over ! kick him for falling !
If a man is up, oh ! lift him higher,
Your soul's for sale, and he's a buyer—
Dimes and dollars ! dollars and dimes !
An empty pocket's the worst of crimes.

I know a poor but worthy youth,
Whose hopes are built on a maiden's truth ;
But the maiden will break her vows with ease
For a lover cometh whose claims are these :
A hollow heart and an empty head,
A face well tinged with the brandy red,
A soul well trained in villainy's school—
And cash—sweet cash !—he knoweth the rule:
Dimes and dollars ! dollars and dimes !
An empty pocket's the worst of crimes.

I know a bold and an honest man,
Who strives to live on the christian plan
But poor he is and poor will be,
A scorned and hated wretch is he—
At home he meeteth a starving wife,
Abroad he leadeth a leper's life:
They struggle against a fearful odds,
Who will not bow to the people's gods,
Dimes and dollars ! dollars and dimes !
An empty pocket's the worst of crimes.

So get ye wealth, no matter how,
'No questions asked' of the rich I trow !
Steal by night and steal by day,
(Doing it all in a legal way,)
Join the church and never forsake her,
Learn to cant and insult your Maker ;
Be hypocrite, liar, knave and fool,
But don't be poor—remember the rule :
Dimes and dollars ! dollars and dimes !
An empty pocket's the worst of crimes.

The Great Hereafter.

Written by Otway Curry, 1848.

'Tis sweet to think, when struggling
The goal of life to win,
That just beyond the shores of time
The better years begin.

When through the nameless ages
I cast my longing eyes,
Before me, like a boundless sea,
The great hereafter lies.

Along its brimming bosom
Perpetual Summer smiles,
And gathers like a golden robe
Around the emerald isles.

There, in the blue, long distance,
By lulling breezes fanned,
I seem to see the flowering groves
Of old Beulah's land.

And far beyond the islands,
That gem the waves serene,
The image of the cloudless shore
Of holy heav'n is seen.

Unto the great Hereafter—
Aforetime dim and dark—
I freely now and gladly give
Of life the wandering bark.

And in the far-off haven,
When shadowy seas are passed,
By angels hands its quivering sails
Shall all be furled at last.

For the Companion.

Pride and its Influence. No. 3.

"Yea, all of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility; for God resisteth the proud and giveth grace to the humble." 1 Pet. 5 : 5. The chief ingredient in the first sin ever committed on earth, was pride. Our first parents, aspiring to be Gods, fell into crime, and wandered away into sin and vanity, and made themselves the prey of degradation and misery. Pride is one of the most generally prevalent sins of humanity : all persons are in danger of its deadly influence ; and perhaps there are but few that are entirely free from it : there is no remedy for it, save the grace of God. My own experience tells me that, to deliver the soul from it, is about the last thing that divine grace effects. Yet, it must be dispensed with entirely, before we can be fit to die or fit for heaven. There is nothing more offensive to God or more injurious to the soul. The Word of God is full and expressive on this subject. With the lowly, God will dwell, and such he will honor : "Whosoever exalteth himself shall be brought low." As the elect of God, put on humbleness of mind. Be clothed with humility.

All virtues and graces have their counterfeits; so that we must examine narrowly to distinguish between that which is real and that which is not. The apostle speaks of a "voluntary humility." Col. 2 : 18. There is often displayed an affected humility, a pretended self-degradation, merely designed to obtain the good opinions and popular applause of men, which is, in fact, the worst kind of pride.

Some inquire, "What is the definition of pride ?" I would answer : It is for a man to think more highly of himself than he ought to think. If we, my brethren, think more highly of ourselves, our good farms, our fine carriages, our fine horses, or of any thing that pertains to our secular things than we should, we have made them our gods. Why ? because we have more concern for the temporal things that perish, than we have for the things that pertain to our eternal interests. So, by this state of mind, we lose sight of our heavenly Master and place our trust in earthly vessels.

Humility consists in low and abased views of ourselves and our attainments. The humble man will feel the native unworthiness of his own state and character. He will feel the imperfections of all his attainments. He will be conscious of his moral weakness and defects, and he will lament and confess them. He will entirely depend upon divine grace, and give all honor and glory to God. Yes, brethren and sisters, in the language of the apostle Peter, let us "be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility." It is to be our garment, and to cover us all over ; our experience must be clothed with it.

I have heard some, even brethren, say that they did not see the propriety of being so particular about the outward adorning, if the heart is right. So say I, but if the heart is right, the outward appearance will be right ; if the heart is clothed with humility, the whole body will be clothed after the manner of God's command ; if our hearts are right, our bodies will be right. I can with just as much propriety reject the institutions of God's house, as to neglect to have the body clothed with humility.

Whatever we may be in our Christian experience, we shall have great need of humility ; it should clothe our profession. Religion must be professed boldly, cheerfully, yet humbly. Humility must clothe all our religious exercises. When we draw near to God in any religious duty, we must do it with great humility of soul. In reading the Word, in hearing the Gospel, in praise, in prayer, it must clothe all our duties, and labors in the cause of our blessed Master.

We cannot fulfil any office acceptably without humility. Pride like the plague spot, will taint everything, and render everything loathesome to God. This garment of humility must cover us all over. The creature must be concealed and Christ displayed—

"not I, but the grace of God that is in me." Our life must be hid with Christ in God. It must clothe all ages, and will clothe all Christian followers, the young and the aged, the poor and the rich, the illiterate and the wise, the private member, the deacon and minister—all are addressed: "Be clothed with humility."—"Though the Lord be high, yet hath he respect unto the lowly; but the proud he knoweth afar off." Humility is the rich and fertile vale watered by the streams of the river of God. It will abundantly promote the happiness of the Christian, and save him from a thousand mortifications, and secure the constant presence of God. See Is. 57: 15. God will abase the proud. "Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall." "Better it is to be of an humble spirit with the lowly, than to divide the spoil with the proud."

Brethren, let us be on the alert for Satan, when he offers the kingdom of the world, and the beauty of it; for we have the account of one holy man, namely, Peter, that was occasioned to fall by being seduced by this monster evil. I feel safe in saying that none but the humble shall inherit the kingdom of heaven. Heaven is the region of humility: "Blessed are the poor in spirit for theire is the kingdom of heaven." "Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven." Not a proud look or thought can enter there.

Let us look at ourselves in the history of our creation, and ask, what is there to be proud of? Let us look at some of the models of humility placed before us in the word of God: Abraham—"Dust and ashes"; Jacob—"I am not worthy," Gen. 32: 9; David—1 Chron. 29: 40; Job—"Behold I am vile." O yes, look at the daily humiliation of the meek and lowly Jesus. Phil. 2: 6—8.

Much prayer will necessarily tend to make us humble. God alone can keep our hearts low before him; and if our hearts are right, our bodies will be right, and everything else.—Brethren let us ever keep this view before us, and not be contaminated with the world's god of this unhallowed kingdom. And let us have perfect charity among ourselves; and not begin to say that we can conform to the fashions of the world and still be humble! Remember the word of God denies the assertion; for a fashionable form of decoration, plainly indicates a proud heart; and such a heart is destitute of charity, (love) and will never stoop so low as to supply the wants of the needy and suffering poor. I have heard some professedly good men say in reference to such, "Let them work as I have done: they have been lazy, let them starve, they deserve nothing better." I think there is some pride there, because his language is decorated with that spirit.

Now let us weigh this part of the subject a little. We know that all men are not circumstanced alike in this world; all men are not born with fine farms at their command, nor yet with greenbacks by the thousand. I think I know some that have to labor, working with their own hands, while sorely oppressed with the hand of affliction. Are they lazy? Let God be the Judge. No, let us examine the word Charity. Remember the word charity is love. "Charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly." In other words, charity is modest, and humble, and considerate to others. There is no pride in true charity. The man who really loves his neighbor does not question whether he is as good as he is; he is far above those mean and miserable thoughts which the world is always putting into our heads, of measuring ourselves one by another by differences of birth, or wealth, or position. He obeys the rule, "Mind not high things, but condescend to men of low estate." And so he is always humble, and gentle, and kind, and thoughtful to all. Charity "seeketh not her own"; that is, charity is not selfish; it obeys the rule St. Paul gives in a former chapter of the epistle, "Let no man seek his own, but every man another's wealth," (or well-being, as the word wealth means). Instead of this, is not self the idol every man worships? Is not every man helping himself first, and caring nothing for his neighbor's welfare? Is not each thinking only of self, and how he may get on in the world, and make his way, and gain his desires? Is it common to see a man give up anything—even a pleasure or a sin—for another's good? Oh, how little know we of true charity!

There could be much written on this essential grace. The grand cause of it being so illy treated is pride.—The proud and lofty has nothing to spare for the poor.

Take heed to a proud and a lofty spirit. There is such an antipathy between this sin and God, that thou wilt never get thy heart near him, nor get him near thy heart, as long as this prevaileth in it. If it cast the angels out of heaven, it must needs keep thy heart out of heaven. If it cast our first parents out of paradise, and separated between the Lord and us, and brought his curse on all the creatures here below, it will certainly keep our hearts from paradise, and increase the cursed separation from our God. Intercourse with God will keep men lowly, and that lowliness will promote their intercourse. God is so far from dwelling in the soul that is proud and lofty, that he will not admit it to any near approach:—"The proud he knoweth afar off," "God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble." A proud mind is high in conceit, self-esteem, and carnal aspirations; an humble mind is high, indeed, in God's esteem, and in holy aspirations. These two sorts of high-mindedness are most of all opposite to each other, as we see most wars are between princes and princes, and not between a prince and a ploughman. Well, then, art thou a man of worth in thine own eyes? Art thou one that looketh strange at the godly poor, and art almost ashamed to be their companions.—Canst thou not serve God in a low place as well as a high? Dost thou desire to have all men's eyes upon thee, and to hear them say, "this is he?" Oh! proud worms of the earth, humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and he shall lift you up!

WM. H. QUINN.

Tyrone City, Pa.

Christ is Coming.

How soon he will come we do not know, but He is coming. The Bible says so and it must be true. Every year that passes brings us nearer that great event. He will come personally from heaven, attended by all the holy angels, much sooner than multitudes of people expect. Search the Scriptures to learn how he will come and what he is coming for; and let us all watch, wait, and be ready for his appearing.—The Youth's Visitor.

—It is as easy to be a good business man as a poor one.

Christian Family Companion

Tyrone City, Pa., Aug., 15, 1871.

From Elder D. M. Holsinger.

Our last note from father was dated at Cerro Gordo, Ill, July 31st. They were then in good health. He says: "We have had five meetings already since in Piatt county. Met with many brethren and sisters, a few of whom I knew, but the greater part entire strangers. At 9 o'clock this morning our council is to open. Brother J. R. Gish, will not be in attendance. He is laboring in Virginia, building up a church at a new place."

A letter has since come to hand, which we give elsewhere.

The Almanac.

Don't forget the Almanac brethren and sisters. We fear there are yet many names not sent in. Will you not favor us with an immediate response? We also lack other matter for its columns. What you wish to do, do quickly. By the first of September the work ought to be ready for press.

The Pious Youth for August.

Our Juvenile Monthly for August, has gone forth. We are glad to learn by letters and otherwise, that the Youth is highly respected, and pleasantly entertained by all its patrons, just as all pious young men and women will be, who study and labor to make themselves agreeable to their friends and associates. The editor leads off with an article on "Chignons," those contemptible things, which he says "silly women wear on the backs of their heads." A provoking error occurs in the next to the last line of the fourth paragraph, where it reads "in the page" instead of in that part of the cephalic domain.

Send ten cents and get specimen copies, of which we can furnish an abundance, and they are well worth their money.

Change of Addresses.

When you want your address changed, please give us both the name of your present post-office, and that to which you wish it changed. Bro. Joseph Blickenstaff informed us that he was moving to Salem, Ill's, but does not give us his present postoffice. His letter was postmarked Lafayette, Indiana. Not finding his name at Lafayette, we examined every office in the same county in which Lafayette is located, without finding his name. After much trouble it was found. All this labor is given us for want of a little care on the part of our correspondents. A few seconds often would spare us hours of precious time. When will this be understood and heeded?

The 1000 Call.

In No. 11, March 14, of the present volume, we appealed to our friends to raise us a thousand new subscribers, and since then we have been publishing the names of those who have responded to the call, with the result. This week we added the following, and we now propose to close that call.

Ross E. Reed,	1	S. R. Deppin,	1
J. M. Wolf,	3	John Ritter,	1
Cyrus Hoover,	2	Sarah Baker,	1
Jacob Rinehart,	1	J. M. Garber,	2
Mary Longnecker,	1	W. Leatherman,	1
Rebeca Gallagher,	1	M. Deardorff,	1
D. B. Teeter,	1	Philip Grabill,	1
C. Forney,	1	B. Beshore,	1
E. K. Buechley,	1	S. R. Myer,	1
B. F. Koons,	1	A. Stalnaker,	2
Jos. Maugans,	1	John Harley,	1
W. Wyland,	1

Total,	27
Reported Before,	341
Grand Total,	368

Although we have not reached the thousand, we have added 368 names, and nearly all paid cash. Although we are obliged to give up all hopes of reaching the thousand, and will now cease counting, and calling for that number, we still hope our friends will not cease to put forth their best efforts to increase our circulation, and we will spare no pains in making the Companion worthy of their patronage. Fifty cents will pay for the remainder of the volume. For ten cents we will send a bundle of specimen copies. Brethren please order specimen copies to distribute among the people.

Pocket Bibles.

We have at last succeeded in obtaining a convenient and substantial edition of Pocket Bibles, such as we have been wishing for, to add to our list of Good Books for sale. It contains nothing but the Bible, and List of the Books and chapters of the Old and New Testament, with References and Marginal Readings. It has a fair, clear print, on fine paper, and is bound in flexible, morocco, tuck binding. It is just such a Bible as ministers and others should have for pocket use. We can send them post-paid for one dollar and fifty cents, ($1.50) which we regard as very cheap for a book of the quality.

Public Sale.

We have advertised the Companion Building at Public Sale, at one o'clock P. M. of the 19th instant. It has afforded us a comfortable home for several years, but as we have now decided to leave Tyrone, we will have no farther use for it. And as we will need what little means we possess to build our new office at Dale City, we will sell at such price as our neighbors or others may think good to offer us. Can any of our readers send us a bidder?

Answers to Correspondents.

A Subscriber wants to know whether there are any Brethren in Ottawa and Dickinson counties, Kansas. Who will inform him?

J. M. Wolf. What is David Snyder's address?

Leroy Broyles. We are informed that the last edition of Nead's Theology is exhausted. Another edition will be published, and then your order will be filled.

Will Christian Wertz please let us hear from him? we have lost his address.

What has become of H. H. SPANGLER, formerly of Floyd Court House, Virginia?

J. K. CULLEN has been lost sight of.

D N. WENGERT: Percentage was omitted. You now have a credit of 36 cents.

JOS. MAUGANS: No. 23 is out. Will SAMUEL LAIR report at this office? We have lost his address.

Notice.

WOOD'S HOUSEHOLD MAGAZINE, S. S. Wood & Co., Publishers, Newburg, New York. Terms: One dollar per year. Three month's numbers will be sent free to any person who will furnish his address, after examining which the reader will know whether to subscribe or not.

The PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL for August is on our table, full of sound reading. We regret that we have not time to read it through. S. R. Wells, Publisher, 389 Broadway, New York. The price is three dollars a year, but we can furnish it to our subscribers at two dollars. Subscriptions may begin with January or July. We have a few specimen copies which we can send at ten cents.

GOOD HEALTH.—Alexander Moore, Publisher, Boston, Mass. Two dollars a year. Single copies, twenty cents. It is an excellent work of its class. And the subject upon which it treats, is, next to religion, the most important that can engage the attention of man—the preservation of health.

Imperfect Books.

An error occurred in binding an edition of our hymn books, some time ago, and without being discovered many of them have been sold. These we will all replace with good ones if apprised of the fact and the imperfection pointed out to us Please turn down leaves at the place, and say what is wrong. We replace only those purchased from us.

MISCELLANEOUS

Let us speak well of our Brother.

Oh, be not the first to discover
A blot on the fame of a friend,
A flaw in the faith of another,
Whose heart may prove true to the end.
A smile or a sigh may awaken
Suspicion most false and undue;
And thus our belief may be shaken
In hearts that are honest and true.

How often the light smile of gladness
Is worn by the friends that we meet
To cover a soul full of sadness,
Too proud to acknowledge defeat.
How often the sigh of dejection
Is heaved from the hypocrite's breast,
To parody truth and affection,
Or lull a suspicion to rest.

How often the friends we hold dearest
Their noblest emotions conceal;
And bosems the purest, sincerest,
Have secrets they cannot reveal.
We none of us know one another,
And oft into error may fall;
Then let us speak well of our brother,
Or speak not about him at all.

The Little Tyrant.

Who have we here, with a scowl on his face and a whip in his hand? The hens and the little birds fly away at his approach. Carlo, the dog, gives one look at him, and then scampers off. Even little girls press their dolls to their hearts, and get out of his way as fast as they can.

This is a picture of little Henry the tyrant, as he once was. He liked to scare or harm all who came near him, whether beasts of the field, or birds of the air, or little girls of the household, or little boys of the playground.

But the time came at last when Henry had to go to school; and there he met with a bigger and stronger tyrant than he was himself, and one who kept him in fear, or made him cry with rage and grief every day. This bigger tyrant was a boy of the name of Ralph.

Henry went to the teacher and complained of Ralph; but the teacher said "You are the boy who, before Ralph came, was a terror to all the little boys and girls in the school. You knocked off their hats or bonnets, you pushed them about, you took away their playthings. I hope you will now learn that we ought to do as we would be done by."

"Do unto others as you would have others do unto you," that is the golden rule; and Henry has at last found it out. He is no longer the little tyrant, but the little gentleman.

He is kind to his sister, and to all the litle girls he meets. If they ask him not to blow his trumpet, or not to make a noise, he stops at once. He is kind even to the lower animals—the birds and the beasts.

Dear child, if, like Henry, you have a fault, learn to correct it while you are young; for it will be very hard to get rid of it when you grow up.—The Nursery.

Put Salt in it.

"Mother, what makes you put salt in everything you cook? Everything you make you put in a little salt, and sometimes a great deal."

So spoke observing Annie as she stood "looking on."

"Well, Annie, I'll make you a little loaf of bread without any salt, and see if you can find out."

"O mother, it doesn't taste a bit good," said she after she had tasted of it.

"Why not?"

"You didn't put any salt in it."

"Mother," said Annie a day or two afterward, "Jane Wells is the worst girl I ever saw; she slaps her little brother, and pulls his hair, and acts real hateful. When I told her it was naughty to do so, and if she would be kind to her brother he would be kind to her, she only spoke rough to me, and hit him again. Why won't she take my advice, mother?"

"Perhaps you didn't put any salt in it. Season your words with grace, my child. Ask help of God in all you say and do, and your words, spoken in the spirit of Christ, will not fall to the ground. Don't forget to put salt in it, or else it won't taste good."

Denying a fault doubles it.

—The golden vein in the mount of duty lies deep; and because it is not met with as soon as expected, the lazy heart throws by the shovel, and cries, "Dig, I cannot."

Cowper speaks of the "bubbling and loud-hissing urn." The same little machine, when it won't either bubble or hiss, may be described as tacit-urn.

CORRESPONDENCE

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

To the Companion Family :—Grace, mercy, peace and love, from God the Father, and Jesus Christ his dear Son our Saviour, be with you all; so that you may be able and willing to stand fast in your calling and to be diligent in performing your duties: patient, meek, long-suffering, and forbearing with one another; through the many perplexing, shifting scenes of life through which you and all the servants of the Lord have to pass on their way to an everlasting inheretance in the land of Peace and Rest, which is promised into all those who love the Lord Jesus and have given themselves as willing subjects of His Kingdom, and have enlisted under His banner, to fight and never to yield until the battle is won and all His and our enemies subdued.

While I was in meditation this (Monday) morning, my mind passed over the ground of my late journey in the East, and caused sweet and bitter, joy and sorrow, to rise in my breast, stimulating me to action in taking up my pen for the purpose of trying to rekindle the fire of love, if possible, in your breasts, and to buoy up the drooping spirits, if need be, by saying to you go on—go on in your calling, unflinching, unfaltering and undismayed, write, print, fold, and mail the messengers of peace, knowledge, comfort, consolation, instruction, warning, threating, inviting counselling; hoping and trusting that He who has called you will abundantly bless while you labor and toil, and finally receive you into the eternal rest.

It is sweet to my soul to recall to mind the many pleasant, heart cheering meetings with those whose hearts seemed to be wholly in the work of the Lord, and especially those in the bloom of youth. Dear ones! may I say to you, go on, take courage, persevere, fight—fight manfully, fight lawfully, never cease, never turn back, nor stand still, but say with the poet:

"Joyfully, joyfully, onward I move,
Bound to the land of bright sprite above." &c.

Me think, I see you now seated round that table in the dining tent of brother Merkey's, as you did that evening when all seemed happy, when thanksgiving, and prayers were offered from every heart. And many other such scenes force themselves to my mind here and there as I passed through the State of Pennsylvania. To all of you I would say, faint not, fear not, when troubles assail and foes all unite; yet one thing secures, the Lord will provide. Only be sure that you reserve nothing to yourself; but give all to the Lord—body, soul and spirit. "For you are bought with a price:" "You are not your own."

We cannot serve two masters. The servitude is too heavy; that is a reason why many give up the service of Jesus as too hard; because they desire to serve the world also. Better, by far, come out from the service of the world, and serve Him wholly and entirely that will give you the greatest reward—peace and joy here, and an everlasting abode in the bright mansions above.

Sorrow presents itself to my mind under the contemplation, that there is still too much want of better understanding among those who ought to be men in understanding, and are but as children, and even not willing to be taught; who have made up their mind not to go any further. There are perhaps but a small number among those who read the productions of their brethren and sisters that have not improved, or do not improve, themselves, and gain a little more knowledge, and with it temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, and charity which is so highly necessary, and essential to make us fruitful in the vineyard of the Lord.

Will not the readers of our periodicals exert themselves a little more, for the benefit of the whole brotherhood, to introduce the papers by lending the same, and talking to those who seem to oppose them. I remember in the time the of war that I assisted several churches in the south of Indiania, when there was not one of the papers of the brethren to be seen, but scarcely a home without some trashy reading. I talked about it, and reasoned with them, and the effect is, that I see many names, and some contributors for the general good. Though it has been said the Brethren's church becomes too popular, and is outside of her sphere, citing us to the 12th Chap., of Rev., where the church is represented as in the wilderness, under the figure of the woman. But if the woman is to remain in the wilderness, then it would certainly be more prudent to not preach publicly, and of course not print anything, even a book where our doctrine is treated upon; but we know that there was a time specified for the church to remain hidden, and when that time had expired she came forth into notice, and we desire her to come forth in all her splendor and beauty; decked with humble boldness and ornamented with a meek spirit; not fashioning herself with the gaudy pebbles of popular christianity; nor with a repulsive seclusiveness, but with a generous forbearance and meekness towards all mankind.

I have digressed from my incention and design. When I commenced writing it was designed for the Companion Family only; but in remembering them, my heart overflowed, and so it is that it speaks to all the readers of the Companion and I trust that now as ever, "Whatsoever comes from the heart, will reach the heart." And so what is given in love will be received in love.

Adieu,

F. P. Lœhr.

Epistolary.

To Brother Abraham Funk,

Hill Valley, Pa.

Brother John Funk of our (Duncansville) congregation, requested me to relate to you, through the columns of the Companion, the sad accident which befell him on last Tuesday, July 25th. He, in company with Mr. John Bowser, and little boy, of Duncansville, had taken a load of hay to Hollidaysburg. When about half a mile from the latter place, on their homeward road, at a place called the bluff, they approched a train of cars laden with ties, the pike and the railroad running parallel. When they came near the train, the engineer gave three shrill whistles from his engine, which frightened the horses. The driver (Mr. B.) begged the engineer should cease whistling until he could get by the train. Just then he gave three more shrill whistles, and then sent off a rush of steam from the safety valves so that it rushed into Mr. Bowser's face, and over the horses. By this time the horses became so frightened that they were unmanageable. In passing the telegraph posts at the side of the road, he escaped the first one, but the horses running at such full speed, struck the second one they came to, and threw brother Funk, who was sitting on the left side of the ladder, about fifteen feet, on his back, on the solid limestone pike. At this moment he felt as if all his bones were crushed. He screamed for "God's sake," some one should come to his relief, but the men of the train turned a deaf ear to his cries. Some men from the brick kiln not far distant, hearing the screams, came to their relief. One ran a short distance, brought his horse and buggy and took brother Funk home, a distance of about four miles, while another started for a doctor. As brother Funk was thrown from the wagon, the harness broke and Mr. Bowser's horse ran against the fence. He, hanging with one foot in the stirrup, and one hand to the rein, caught with the other to the fence.—His hold of the rein almost gave way, and should it so have happened,, he might have been instantly killed. The other horse with, the little boy (only six years of age) upon his back, ran some distance, but was caught. His father's words were "hold tight, Willie," and well he did.

Mother and I were to see brother Funk on last Friday, July 28th, and found him prostrate upon his couch, in a suffering conditon. The doctor pronounced "no bones broken," but his flesh was very much bruised and mangled. There are hopes of his recovery, but the Lord knowth all things best. The little boy did not receive any bruises, but the father was very much bruised, but had no bones broken. They feel very thankful to the Giver of all good, that they were so fortunate as to retain their lives. Oh, the cruelty of causing poor humanity thus to suffer, and to endanger three lives merely for fun! Oh! that the Lord would enlighten the hearts of such cruel men, and bring them to the knowledge of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus! But we have one great consolation given us in Matth 10:28.: "Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul."

Dear brethren and sisters, let us be united in pleading God's mercy upon our dear afflicted brother, that he may bear his affliction with Christian fortitude. In his conversation to us he said "these light afflictions which are but for a moment, work for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." We commit him with us into the care of the Great Jehovah, trusting that we may all, meet in the New Jerusalem, to sing praises forever and ever.

Your Sister in Christ,
E. R. STIFLER,
Hollidaysburg, Pa.

A Touching Incident.

Editor Companion: I have selected the following for the columns of your valuable paper, believing it to be worthy of publication:

"There is one touching incident of the life of William Wirt. In his younger days he was a victim to that passion for intoxicating drinks which seems peculiarly the bane of our profession. Affianced to a beautiful and accomplished young woman, he had made and broken repeated pleges of amendments, and she, after patiently and kindly enduring his disgraceful habit, had at length dismissed him, deeming him incorrigible. Their next meeting, after the dismissal, was in a public street in the city of Richmond. William Wirt lay drunk and asleep on the sidewalk, on a hot Summer day, the rays of the sun pouring down on his uncovered head, and the flies crawling over his swollen features. As the young lady approached in her walk, her attention was attracted by the spectacle, strange to her eyes, but alas! so common to others who knew the victim, as to attract little remark. She did not, at first recognize the sleeper, and was about to hasten on, when she was led by one of those impulses which forms the turning points in human lives, to scrutinize his features. What was her emotion when she recognized in him her discarded lover! She drew forth her handkerchief and carefully spread it over his face and hurried away. When Wirt came to himself, he found the handkerchief, and in one corner the initials of the beloved name. With a heart almost breaking with grief and remorse, he made a new vow of reformation. He kept that vow, and married the owner of that handkerchief. Well might he preserve the handkerchief, as he did, all his life, guarding it with the jealous care with which Othello kept the Egyptian charmer's gift, and "making it a darling ike his precious eye."

B. N. HARDMAN.

Friend Holsinger:—An answer is requested through the Companion, from the Brethren, in regard to the following lines; "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I come not to send peace, but a sword. For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law; and a man's foes shall be they of his own household. He that loveth father or mother more than me, is not worthy of me; and he that loveth son or daughter more than me, is not worthy of me." Mat. 10:34–37. Here in this chapter, did Christ have reference to man only or to woman also.

Now we find in the fifth chapter of Ephesians, 22d verse, "Wives submit yourselves unto your own husbands as unto the Lord;" also, 23rd, "For the husband is the head of the wife even as Christ is the head of the church, and he is the Savior of the body. An explanation is requested of this chapter from the 24th verse to the 33rd verse. I have heard this subject preached from by sectarian preachers, but as they only preach for the fleece and not for the flock they cause many to profess, but whether they possess pure religion is the question. How many are they, who have made a confession before many witnesses, and promised to forsake the evil ways of this world, but, Oh! how soon do they, as it were, forget their promise to God! As soon as they get away from the church members, where they think there is no one to inform on them they soon are found in dancing rooms, gambling shops, and even heads of families are found with their mouths filled with vain and vulgar repetitions, and in place of admonishing their children they will take the name of God in vain before their children. I have heard the remark made by such persons: "God had all power both in heaven and in the earth; then why don't he give me the strength to quit swearing?"

(Post-marked Newton, Oregon,

Letter from D. M. Holsinger. No. 3.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—I will give another short sketch of our visit. My last was written from Milledgeville, Carroll county, Ill. Nothing of note transpired that week; every one being so busily engaged in harvesting, so I joined in too, but soon felt that I was too much out of practice, and hence felt the effects of it for some time. On Sunday 23rd meeting at West Branch. Members pretty well collected. On Tuesday 25th started south; arrived at Minonk, Woodford, county, met by brother and nephew, John H. Leedy, next day by him and family to Painter Creek Meeting House, where an appointment was made for the evening. Here we met with the largest congregation that we saw since in the State. Brother George W. Gish, a member of the committee for Piatt county, offered to take me in his buggy there and back about 70 miles. I accepted the offer, as a means of saving some fare. So I left my companion among the brethren and sisters in Woodford county, (where, at my return I learned, she enjoyed herself very well) and landed at Cerro Gordo church in the afternoon of the 28th. Preaching that evening, Saturday, A. M. and evening, in said church. Next day (Sunday,) A. M. and evening at the Milmine meeting-house. Good attention to the word preached. On Monday 31st council opened at 9 A. M. with a well filled house of members; whose very countenance proved the interest they felt in the case at issue; and which inspired our hearts with a hope of success. Brother J. R. Gish being absent, the church accepted the three present, as a full committee.

We laboured with and for them till Tuesday about one o'clock, when, after some preparatory exhortations we read our report to them, which was received and submitted to without a dissenting voice. We felt that the Lord was there, and we felt, and do still feel to thank him for his blessing and aid.

From there we were taken to the Okaw branch, same county, preaching in the evening of the 2nd in school house. Council on the 3d in Okaw grove, opened at 10, A. M. Labored all day till quite dark, without effecting any thing. Night overtook us, so we were obliged to leave off where we begun in the moring. Our arrangements were to leave at 4 next morning, brother Gish, had sent his buggy home, so we took cars at 4:15, A. M. and arrived in Woodford county, on the 4th in time for evening meeting. Saturday evening, Sunday at 11 A. M. and 5 P. M., meetings in same church: of which I will give a short sketch:

In June, 1852, eight members were baptized at one time. That Fall they were organized, brethren George W. and James Rufus Gish, were called to the ministry. They labored under the disadvantages incident to new organizations, and contended against opposing influences, which no doubt drew forth latent virtues that otherwise would have lain dormant. Since, then brother John Gish was called to the ministry, and latterly brethren Philip Moore and Jacob Kindig, were also set apart for the work of the Lord. Of the first eight baptized, seven are still living, of whom three are in the ministry. Since that time several branches were struck off which are supplied with ministers, and are in a prosperous condition. At this time the Painter Creek Church of which the above is a sketch, is said to number about 200 members, to all appearance in a healthy, prosperous condition, manifesting love to one another, and to strangers of the same faith coming among them, of which we have shared a due portion while with them, for which they have our thanks and God the praise; and our prayers are that God may still continue to be with them.

At 9:45, this evening, we expect setting out for Iowa, expecting to arrive at Panora, Guthrie county, about the 15th and at Waterloo about the 22nd inst.

We found the members generally well. Elder John Metzger, had been sorely afflicted some time since but is quite lively again. Our health is right good now: better than when we left Pennsylvania.

Cease not to pray for us.

D. M. HOLSINGER.

Minonk, Ill., Aug. the 7th.

Election of Speakers.

Brother Holsinger: I saw an article in the C. F. C., No. 30, under the heading, "Election of Speakers," in which the writer sets forth some ideas, different from my understanding of the Bible. Although I do not claim perfection, nevertheless I have views and ideas on Scripture, as well as other members.

In the first place I will notice the seventh paragraph of the article referred to a little. There the writer says: "It is claimed that the church has the power to elect their speakers. Where and when this power was given to the church, is not known to me."

First, I would inform that dear member, that this power was given to the Church when Christ said: "Go ye therefore," &c. At least we see that little body of eleven members making use of the "power," when they needed a minister to fill the place of Judas. For proof of the above, see Acts 1: 26.

And again, the Savior said to that same body or church, "Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven," and we read elsewhere that, "In the multitude of counselors there is safety." So I think the church has a perfect right, according to divine inspiration, to elect speakers by vote.

These few lines, imperfect as they are, are not intended to offend; and I hope they will not. Let us ever be faithful. Yours in love.

JOSEPH HOLDER.

Hagerstown, Ind.

Recognition.

Brother Henry: I was glad to see brother L. B. in last week's Companion ask the question about knowing our friends and acquaintances in heaven. I believe that we will all know each other, and all others that we never knew in this world. Peter, James, and John knew Moses and Elias in the spirit. Moses and Elias knew in the spirit what was in contemplation about the death of Jesus. Luke 9th chapter. Abraham and the rich man did not only know each other, but they both new what was going on in this world at the time. The rich man, as well as Abraham, knew that his five brethren were living ungodly lives: he being in hell could see what was transpiring here; and Abraham being in heaven could see it, too. Abraham knew how Lazarus and the rich man had lived; for he said, "Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things: but now he is comforted and thou art tormented." Luke 19 : 25.

But some say: "How could we be happy, even in heaven, if we knew how things were going on in this world?" I think if we are in happiness, in the spirit things will not affect us like they do in the flesh: we will see farther into the future, and know more of the wherefores—perhaps see to the end. Jesus said to the Sadducees that we shall be as the angels in heaven. They know what occurs here, or they could not rejoice when sinners turn to God. I want others to write on the subject, too.

HANNAH KNAUFF.

Ottumwa, Iowa.

Announcements.

The Lord willing we will hold our communion on Saturday, Oct. 21st, in the Walnut Level district, Walnut Level meeting-house, eight miles south of Bluffton, in Wells county, Ind. A hearty invitation is extended to all; especially do we desire laboring brethren to be with us, as we need help Those coming by rail will stop off at Bluffton, where they will be met and conveyed to place of meeting, by giving timely notice.

JONATHAN WARNER.

The brethren composing the Middle Creek Branch, Somerset county, Pa., intending, the Lord willing, to hold a communion on the 21st of September, commencing at 4 o'clock P. M. A hearty invitation is extended to the ministering brethren, as we intend to continue the meeting over Sunday.

Yours in love,

JOSIAH BERKLY,

We, the brethren of the Logan church, Logan county, Ohio, have appointed a communion meeting, God willing, on the 29th day of September, to which a hearty invitation is given to all that wish to be with us, and especially to the ministering brethren.

Yours truly, in the Lord.

J. L. FRANTZ.

DeGraff, Ohio.

LOVEFEASTS.

Yellow Creek, Bedford county, Pa., Sept. 27th. 4 P. M.

Plymouth, Lyon co., Kan., Sept. 2nd.

Somerset arm, Mercer co., Mo., Sept 23d and 24th.

Shelby co., Iowa, Sept. 2nd.

Salem branch, Marion co., Ill., Aug. 26th.

Dresden Poweshelk co., Iowa, Sept 2nd & 3rd.

Buck's Creek church, Henry county, Ind., Sept. 28th.

Lick Creek congregation, Owen county, Ind, Sept. 29th.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with obituary notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In Ephrata congregation, Lancaster county, Pa., July 19th, of Consumption, brother JACOB H. KELLER; aged 55 years 10 mos. and 15 days.

Our departed brother was confined to his bed about nine weeks. Although the disease had taken hold of him for many years, it was kept out of sight. He patiently endured his affliction, looking forward in a living hope to meet the blessed Savior and to partake of that endless glory in heaven, for which he had been striving. He leaves a sorrowing widow, (a sister) 8 children, and a large number of relatives and friends, who need not sorrow as those who have no hope.

Funeral services by brethren Jacob Reinhold, C. Bomberger, S. Harley and others, from Rom. 6 : 23, "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

LEVI ANDES.

On the first day of August, infant son of brother Alfred and sister Catharine RISH, aged 7 months and 15 days.

Funeral improved by brother Jos. N. Kauffman and the writer. From Matthew the 18:2,3.

J. L. FRANTZ.

DeGraff, Ohio.

LIST OF MONEYS received for subscription, books, &c.,

M. Deardorff,	,75	S. R. Myer,	1,80
C. G. Lint,	20,00	J. M. Johnson,	,75
J. R. Ringer,	6,50	B. F. Koons,	1,00
D. W. Wengert,	5,00	J. Warner,	,75
P. Graybill,	,75	Jos. Maugans,	,60
Wm. Domer,	1,50	E. S. Numer,	1,00
B. Beshore,	,60	D. Wagoner,	,50
I. B. Keller,	1,70	D. B. Condrie,	,50
L. C. Nissly,	2,35	John Harley,	6,50
J. Zuck, jr.,	1,10	M. O. Horn,	1 50

Advertisements.

WE will admit a limited number of select advertisements at the following rates

One insertion, 20 cents a line.

Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.

Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.

No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations

A Card.

Drs. D. Fahrney & Son, Uroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.

7-10- 1 yr. pd.

A Sure Cure for Dyspepsia.

Upon the receipt of one dollar, I will send the the Medicine, with Directions, by return mail. DAVID ESHELMAN.

MOORESVILLE, PA.

Wm. M. Lloyd, Altoona, Pa. D. T. Caldwell, Tyrone Pa.

LLOYD, CALDWELL & CO.,

BANKERS,

Receive monies on deposit, and pay interest if left 6 months, at 4 per cent per annum, or 5 per cent. if left one year.

Special contracts made with parties acting a administrators, executors, guardians, and persons holding monies in trust. Dealers in every description of Stocks and Bonds.—Government Securities made a speciality.

Gold and Silver bought and sold, and a general Banking business transacted.

TYRONE BANK,

TYRONE, PA.

This Bank, intending to do a general banking business, solicits accounts from Banks' Bankers and others. Collections made on all points. Interest allowed on DEPOSITS left on time. Paper discounted on liberal terms.

Wm. P. Orbison,	D. P. Gwin,
John Scott,	H. G. Fisher,
Thomas Fisher,	J. H. Glazier,
Wm. Dorris,	G. C. Wilkins,
G W. Garretson,	and others.

1780 1871

ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK?

Use Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

CLEANSE YOUR BLOOD!!

An Alterative and Catharic, or Tonic and Purge combined, for diseases arising from bad blood; such as Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Erysipelas, Worms, Chills and Fever, Scrofula, Pimples, Tetter, &c. TRY IT.

Established 178 in package form. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form-which was brought to its present state of preservation and perfection some years later, by Dr. P. Fahrney, Chicago, Ill's, who conducts the trade west of Ohio. Great reputation! Many Testimonials! Ask for that prepared at Waynesboro, Pa, and Chicago, Ill's. Beware of imitations. Genuine retails at $1.25 per bottle. Druggists and Medicine dealers sell it.

Dr. P. Fahrney's "Health Messenger" gives the history and uses of the BLOOD CLEANSER testimonials, and other information, sent free of charge. Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.

WAYNESBORO PA

Universal Guide for Cutting Garments.

By which every family may cut its own garments for men and boys, of twenty six different sizes; for Coats, Pants, Vests, and Shirts, and Ladies' Dress Bodies. Agents wanted to sell State, County, and Family Rights. For Particulars address MILLER & QUINN,

Tyrone, Blair Co., Pa.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine, with Drop Feed, new Take-up, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted FIRST CLASS, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted traveling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $200 per month. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. Co.
28 East Union Square, 17th St., New York

BURLINGTON.

Leaving the East and arriving at Chicago or Indianapolis, how shall we reach the West? The best Line is acknowledged to be the C. B. and Q., joined together with the B. & M. Railroad by the Iron Bridge at Burlington, and called the Burlington Route.

The main line of the Route running to Omaha, connects with the great Pacific Roads, and forms to-day the leading route to California. The Middle Branch, entering Nebraska at Plattsmouth, passes through Lincoln, the State Capital, and will this year be finished to Fort Kearney, forming the shortest route across the Continent by over 100 miles.

Another branch of the B. M., diverging at Red Oak, falls into a line running down the Missouri through St. Joe to Kansas City, and all Kansas. Passengers by this route to Kansas, see Illinois, Southern Iowa, and Missouri, and, by a slight divergence, can see Nebraska also.

Lovers of fine views should remember the Burlington Route, for its towns "high-gleaming from afar"—its tree-fringed streams—its rough bluffs and quarries—its corn-ocean stretching over the prairies further than ey can reach.

Land-buyers will be sure to remember it, for they have friends among the two thousand who have already bought farms from Geo. S. Harris, the Land Commissioner of the B. & M. R. R. at Burlington, Iowa, or among the four thousand home-steaders and pre-emptors who last year filed claims in the Lincoln Land Office, where "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm."

SHORT HAND WRITING.—Students of Phonography and all others who are interested in the art can obtain instruction books
Send stamp for price list and tracts.
"AMERICAN PHONETIC DEPOT.
TYRONE, PA.
J. S. THOMAS, & CO.

WHOLESALE GROCERS
and
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
No 305 RACE St. ABOVE 3RD, PHILADELPHIA,
N. B. Country Produce taken in exchange for goods or sold on commission.

CABINET MAKING & UNDERTAKING

The undersigned keeps on hand and manufactures to order all kinds of Furniture. He is also neatly fitted out for conveying the dead to their last resting place.

Manufacturer of the Common Sense Dasher Washing Machine. Shop at the Cross Roads, near Warrior's Mark, Pa.
JAMES S. COX.

A Washing Machine may be seen and purchased at this office. vol18tf.

BOOKS
GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL
For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price, $4.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol., $2.25. Indispensable.

Life at Home; or the Family and its MEMBERS.—Including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed. The Altar in the House, etc. By Wm. Aikman, $1.50;

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. THOMPSON. Fancy Cloth. $1.00.

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand-book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners, with a Chart for recording the sizes of the different Organs of the Brain, in the Delineation of Character, with upwards of 170 Engravings. Muslin. $1.25.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50:

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By W. PITTINGER. $1.50.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Beautifully Illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth, gilt, beveled boards. Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75 cents.

Any of the above sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

The Phrenological Journal, An Illus-TRATED. First-Class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3 00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50, or with the Pious Youth, for $3.00. We commend the JOURNAL to all who want a good Family Magazine, and who does not?

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post office, county and state written in unmistakable letters and address- S. R. WELLS, Tyrone Pa.

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING

One copy, post paid	0.75
12 copies, post paid	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	$0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN & ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid	$1.00
Per dozen,	10.80

Turkey Morocco, Ger. & Eng.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	13.50

Plain Single German

One copy, post paid	.50
Per dozen" "	$5.50

The Christian Harp, containing 32 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.20
" Reserved at the office,	2.25
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder, Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express,	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	.60
German & English Testaments,	.75

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50
18 MO. EDITION.
Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25
32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION.	25

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Certificates &c.

Marriage Certificate, per doz., post paid, 0.30
CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP. Per doz, 0.20

TRACTS.—RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE, 12 pages five cents single copy; thirty cents a doz.

All orders should be accompanied with the money, and the name of person, postoffice, county & state written in unmistakable letters.

THE PIOUS YOUTH
A MONTHLY PUBLICATION
Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.
One dollar a year in advance.

THE
Christian Family Companion
Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements; that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.
Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
TYRONE, PA.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum.

VOLUME VII. TYRONE, PA. TUESDAY, AUG. 22, 1871. NUMBER 34.

An Aged Saint Entering Heaven.

[From the SUNDAY MAGAZINE.]

At length the door is opened, and, free from pain and sin,
With joy and gladness on his head, the pilgrim enters in;
The Master bids him welcome, and on the Father's breast;
By loving arms enfolded, the weary is at rest.

The pilgrim staff is left behind—behind the sword, the shield:
The armor, dimmed and dented, on many a hard fought field;
His now the shining palace, the garden of delight,
The psalm, the robe, the diadem, the glory ever bright.

The blessed angels round him, 'mid heaven's hallowed calm,
With harp and voice are lifting up the triumph of their psalm:
"All glory to the Holy One, the infinite I AM, Whose grace redeems the fallen! Salvation to the Lamb!"

"Another son of Adam's race, through Jesus' loving might,
Hath crossed the waste, hath reached the goal, hath vanquished in the fight;
Hail, brother, hail! we welcome thee! join in our sweet accord;
Lift up the burden of our song—Salvation to the Lord!"

And now from out the glory, the living cloud of light,
The old familiar faces come beaming on his sight;
The early lost, the ever loved, the friends of long ago,
Companions of his conflicts and pilgrimage below.

They parted here in weakness, and suffering, and gloom,
They meet amid the freshness of heaven's immortal bloom;
Henceforth, in ever-enduring bliss to wander, hand in hand,
Beside the living waters of the still and sinless land.

Oh, who can tell the rapture of those to whom 'tis given
Thus to renew the bonds of earth amid the bliss of heaven?
Thrice blessed be his Holy Name, who, for our fallen race,
Hath purchased by his bitter pains such plentitude of grace.

For the Companion.

Obey the Whole Gospel.

"And to you, who are troubled, rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." 1 Thess. 1: 7-8

There is a time coming when the Savior will make his second advent into the world. Yes, he will come to judge the world in righteousness. Blessed is that man who worketh righteousness, for he shall be accepted of him; but woe unto the man that has not fulfilled all righteousness, for he shall take vengeance on all them that obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus. Oh! let us prepare to meet our blessed Savior when he shall come. May we have our lamps trimmed and burning, and be watching; for the time is not far distant, according to the divine record; for we have signs in heaven above, and in the earth beneath; there are wars and rumors of wars; men are departing from the faith, giving heed so seducing spirits and doctrines of devils; and the Savior asks the question, "Nevertheless, when I come, shall I find faith on the earth?" Oh, will there be any? Methinks sometimes there will be little; for we see that iniquity is abounding, and the love of many is waxing cold. But thanks be to God, those that endure to the end shall be saved. Yes, reader, he shall come in flaming fire. How terrible to meditate on the heart rending scenes that we will then behold! Those out of Christ will cry for rocks and mountains to fall upon them and hide them from him that sitteth upon the throne. Alas! it will be of no avail! they observed not the gospel, and he shall take vengeance on all such. O reader! if out of Christ, flee the wrath that is to come; and lay hold on eternal life, while you have time, place, and opportunity. Make this Lord Jesus your friend; then you shall meet him with a smile on his countenance, and instead of taking vengeance on you it will be said: "Come thou blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared from the foundation of the world."—What a happy time will that be, when we shall arrive in that glorious home prepared only for those that obey the gospel. There peace and holiness reign forever. How many professors are there in the world that obey not the gospel! And how many there are who are so blind as to think, that. if they obey a part, they still may be saved! Jesus says, "Whosoever loveth me, keepeth my commandments." Reader, remember, when it says gospel, it means the whole word; and we are to be judged out of this book—the gospel, and if your doings are not in conformity with the gospel, you can rest assured that you will not meet the divine approbation: you can only expect to be condemned, "Depart, ye workers of iniquity, I never knew you." Again, "If any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things that are written in this book." Rev. 22: 19. "Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction, from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power." What a dreadful thought, forever burning, and never burned; dying, and never dead! Wilt thou then, O vain man, flee the wrath that is to come? Obey the gospel and thou shalt be blessed. But we who have put on Christ, let us have the whole armor of God, that we may be able to withstand the wiles of the devil; ever looking unto Jesus, who is able to save when the trying time shall come. May we strive to be perfected in obeying the truth. May we love God, with a fervent heart, prize him above everything else. We ought to love him, because he first loved us. "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." What a loving Savior, willing to die for us, that we through his death and sufferings might have life; and to open the door into that celestial city, for all who love and keep his commandments. Brethren, when we come to the Jordan of death, he will be our friend; and he will be our friend in the resurrection. "Blessed are the pure in heart,for they shall see God." He shall be glorified in his saints and admired of all them that believe. Joyful meeting, brethren, that will be, when we meet to part no more! May God give us grace to live faithful until death, and then be so happy as to hear the welcome: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord," is my prayer. Amen.

D. B. CONDRIE.

Allen, Pa.

For the Companion.

Christ the Word.

"In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." Gen. 1: 1. "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." John 1: 1.

We are informed by the sacred historian, that the "word was made flesh," that is, became incarnated, by the power of the Holy Spirit, and was made manifest in the flesh. It is generally, if not universally admitted, by theologians that the 'Word,' that was with God, and that was God, is Jesus Christ.

In Gen. 1: 1, as quoted above, God is said to have created all things, and in John 1: 1, Jesus Christ is said to have created all things. The same unerring Spirit spoke in Moses and in John therefore Christ, and God are one.

I will now change the reading of King Jame's translation of John 1: 1, and the reader may be the judge to decide, whether I do justice to the verse under consideration. I will, instead of the 'Word,' write creative power; then the reading of the verse will be as follows: "In the begining was the creative power, and the creative power was with God, and the creative power was God.

The 'Word,' as it is rendered in our translation is in the original, Logos, and signifies, a word spoken, as when God said, "let there be light, and there was light," God spoke the word, and the mighty work was performed. God created all things by the power of his Word,whether they be thrones, or dominions, principalities, or powers, all were created by the omnipotent power of Jehovah. But as we understand, that the Bible teaches us, that Jesus Christ in his divine nature, is the eternal God, it also teaches us, that Jesus Christ in his human nature is the Son of God. We are informed by the evangelist, Luke (1: 35,) that the angel said unto the blessed virgin Mary, "That, holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." That holy thing, or person, shall be called the Son of God. The divine nature could not be born of the virgin, the human nature was born of her, and is the Son of God. Christ cannot be the Son of God, as to his divine nature, for the divine nature is eternal, and unoriginated; If Christ be the Son of God, as to his divine nature, then he can not be eternal, for son implies a father, and father implies in reference to son, precedency in time; father, and son imply the idea of generation; and generation implies a time in which it was effected, and if Christ is the Son of God, as to his divine nature, then there must have been a period in which it did not exist, and a period when it began to exist. This idea would destroy the eternity of our blessed Lord, and consequently would be a creature of time, and a dependent being; and to say that Christ was begotten from all eternity and consequently is an eternal Son is a positive self-contradiction. Paul, Rom. 1: 3, informs us, that Jesus Christ the Son of God, was made of the seed of David, according to the flesh, that is in his human nature. He is the Son of God, the Son of man, and the man Christ Jesus.

J. K. TEETER.

Pleasant Hill, O.

Which was the Gentleman?

Look at those two men who went up into the temple to pray. That bold, proud, well-dressed Pharisee, satisfied with himself, stands in the centre of the court and prays with well-made sentences, and surely those who look upon him will say, "There is the gentleman of the age;" but as Jesus comes into the hall, he points to that plainly-clad publican, who stands with trembling knees and bowed head in that obscure corner near the door, and prays, in broken words, for mercy, and Jesus tells us that this one, "rather than the other," is the Christian gentleman.

On that wild and rocky path that leads from Jerusalem to Jericho, lies a man near that dark pass in the mountains who has been left "half dead" by robbers. That well-dressed Levite who looked upon him a few moments ago, and found that he was one of the common people, and passed on, showed his breeding as a gentleman in saving himself from the touch of such a man; that priest, who glances scornfully upon the penniless sufferer as he passes by on the other side, shows that he is of high blood, that must not be contaminated with the common crowd. Surely they are gentlemen complete! But Jesus, by some strange oversight of their Jewish rank, and fine clothes, points us to the low-born Samaritan, bending over the suffering man, soft-wiping away the ugly clots of blood, binding up his wounds, turning back from his journey, mounting him on his own beast, and paying for him at the inn, and tells us that this Samaritan is the only gentleman of the three. In the public gardens of Boston you may see his monument, on a thousand hospitals you may see his name. Where are the monuments and hospitals that honor the manhood of the priest and Levite?

Around that box at the temple into which the people drop their gifts of charity, you can hear the rustle of silks and the tinkle of jewelry, as those well-dressed ladies drop in their gold; but how they knit their brows and draw back their dresses as that poor widow, in her threadbare garments, with her poorly-dressed little one in her arms, crowds up towards the box and drops in those two mites. No one thanks her, although it is "all her living;" but Christ tells us that this poor, meek, gentle giver is a lady "more than they all."

Then lepers cried out for help, as Jesus passed by. "As they went" in the path which he had pointed out, "they were cleansed."

Those who were Jews went on their way. One, a low Samaritan, came back, and on his knees uttered his thanks. Was not "this stranger" a gentleman above all the other nine?

If you had inquired in the streets of Jerusalem, in the Bible days, for their best specimen of a gentleman, they would have shown you a man with a long beard, and tall cap, with a breast-plate full of precious stones and garments of richest silk and purple, and said, "This is he."

But Christ took a little playful child from the crowd that gathered about him, and set him in their midst as their model, and said, "Except ye become as little children," &c.

Gentleness is the first qualification of a gentleman. "In regard to malice, be ye children."
—Cor. of Zion's Herald.

☞ Casual thoughts are sometimes of great value. One of these may prove the key to open for us a yet unknown apartment in the palace of truth, or a yet unexplored tract in the paradise of sentiment that environs it.

For the Companion.

Love One Another.

"A new commandment give I unto you, that ye love one another, as I have loved you, that ye also love one another." John 13 : 34.

In this passage we are notonly requested, but we are commanded to love our fellow creatures; to entertain for them a feeling of love equal to that bestowed upon us by our Savior. Can you conceive of greater love than that which prompted him to leave the shining home above, and take upon himself our burdens and infirmities? He was rich, and for our sakes became poor. For us he endured the scoffs and jeers of the Jews, and for us poured out his precious life blood, that we might have eternal life. Each drop as it trickled from his bleeding side proclaimed the immensity of his love for our sinful race. Each groan that issued from his dying lips bespoke the magnitude of the sacrifice made for sinful man.

Christ loved not a few select friends, but all humanity; and for his enemies he gave his life! Then shall not we take the pattern he has given, and love our enemies?

We all have a race to run, and for us who are in the spring time of life the greater part is yet before. Many paths lead out into the field of active life. We must choose one, and tho' our choice be wisely made thorns will sometimes spring up amid the flowers and pierce our hearts. Clouds that blast our fondest wishes, will sometimes gather over the brightest horizon : but if we love one another with pure hearts fervently, and endeavor to bear the burdens of our weaker brothers and sisters, many a cloud may be dispelled, and the sting of many a thorn be healed with balm of loving words, from true and earnest hearts. If we would live the Christian life ; if we would prove ourselves valiant soldiers in the army of the Lord, we must work our work of faith and labor of love, with patience and perseverance. We must strive earnestly to possess that love which thinketh no evil; which suffereth long, and is kind : which envieth not; which vaunteth not itself; is not puffed up; and when we have this love in our hearts, we will manifest it in our lives. Kind words cost nothing, and their value is beyond estimation. Unkind words have cost many of us bitter, bitter pain and sorrow. They furnish food for life-long regrets, and in that great day, they will stand like monuments against us, telling of heart-aches which we have caused by unkind and unloving words, and of tears which have been shed because of our indifference. Little do we realize the responsibilities that rest upon us; little do we know what influence an idle word which we may utter will have upon our companions; and far less do we realize that we must stand before the Judge of judges, and give an account for all that we have said and done. Let our actions then be upright, and our words kind and gentle as becometh the children of God. Let a vein of love run through our life, and then when death calls us we can look back upon a race well run, a battle well fought. Friends will rise up and call us blessed, and our memories will live in the hearts of those with whom we have associated. In our home in heaven, love reigns supreme ; there is nothing but joy, and peace, and love. May we all be enabled to anchor safely within that harbor, and join in singing the new song with the immortal throng which surround the great white throne. May this be the happy lot of all, is the prayer of your brother.

J. W. Green.

For the Companion.

Christ our Example.

We learn that Christ said on one occasion, "I am the way and the truth, and the life;" and at another time, that we should follow his steps. Now we, as the people of God, or followers of Christ, claim to have no other creed to go by than the pure word of God; and farther, we claim to follow our Lord, both in word and example, which also is our duty to do; but I am prompted to write a few lines to the general Brotherhood, out of love, for I sometimes fear that perhaps we do not follow the example of our Lord as closely as we should, and therefore give occasion for stumbling to others. I shall mention a few particulars here that I have often thought about, and I hope the brethren will bear with me if my thoughts do not meettheir approbation.

We, as a church, are very strict in following our Lord in his steps in baptism, and claim that no way is valid except immersion. So far all right; but I claim that one command is as valid as the other. Now we will see if we have truly the example of our Lord in Feetwashing, for we learn that he gave us an example that we should do as he had done.

He took a towl und girded himself, and washed and wiped; but I have always seen that one of the brethren girded the other, and one washes and another wipes. Now what I was going to say is this, I fear sometimes if we can deviate that far from our Lord's example, in feetwashing, and still meet his approbation, then others might say, "The Brethren do not follow the example of our Lord in feetwashing, therefore we need not to be so particular about baptism ; we need not to go into the water; any way will do." If we have the right to deviate from one command, they may from another. I believe if we do not do a thing right, we might as well not do it at all.

Now I claim that according to the example given by our Lord in feetwashing, the one that washes must also wipe ; although I have been a member of the church for twelve years, and never saw it practiced in that way. I claim that the command of feetwashing is as binding as baptism, or any other command.

Now I have given my views in the fear of the Lord, and I will forbear, and if I have written anything that does not correspond with the example of our Lord it was done in a mistake, and if I am wrong I wish the brethren would correct me.

Noah B. Blough.

For the Companion.

Christians.

What does the term Christian mean? It means one who searched the scriptures, and found therein his duty to God, and does it without exception. Where do we find the will of Christ but in his word? Some want to say conscience tells them what is right and wrong. We must be very careful with our conscience. Sometimes it may tell us that some of Christ's plain teachings are not essential to the salvation of the soul—not necessary to be observed. But let us take an example : A is a very just man, and he employs B to do his work. A has the plan of the work all drawn out clearly, so that B can easily understand it; and the agreement states that if B adds to the plan, the plagues shall also be added to him that are written in the plan, and if he takes away from the plan, his reward for his work shall be taken away. Now this binds B up to take the plan as it is, and make no additions, subtractions or substitutes to this plan, but to do it as he has agreed. When he has done all, and received his reward, then he shall be permitted to see the necessityof doing these things.

If we can see why they are done, so much the better, it affords more pleasure in doing them; but we must have an experimental knowledge, before we can know anything of the nature, of the design of the Christian's work. By obeying the truth we are made free: not by thinking it. As long as we think some of the precepts and examples are foolishness, so long we deny Christ as being pure, holy, righteous; for he never did anything in the presence of man that did not tend to the salvation of the soul. If he did, it was trifling with earthly things; and who would blame our blessed Master with a thing of that kind? I tell you thousands do, both by their words and actions. Do think how you treat him. He only showed us what was his will; and if we are Christians we will do it.

But doing what he taught us to do is not all: he told us several things not to do; and them we are very apt to do, a great deal more so than the things he told us to do. But the sooner we rid ourselves of them, the better; for by this we may prove ourselves whether we are right, and also see who is right: "Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistle?" "O generation of vipers, how can ye, being evil, speak good things? for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." In these two passages we have works and words; for by the fruits we shall know whether the tree is good: for a bad tree cannot bring forth good fruit, nor a good tree bring bad fruit. Now who will say a person is a Christian, who never is heard talking about Christ and his word, so kindly spoken, nor ever see him doing what we know he taught his people to do? Let us go where there is a gathering of any kind, if Christ is abundant in their hearts, their mouths will speak of him, and they delight in it; they sing hymns of praise unto him. This is a very good way to tell where Christ's abiding places are. Wherever we see them doing what he told them and showed them to do, we feel at home.

But how often do we forget ourselves, and wander away. Often before we get out of the meeting-house we hear professing Christians talk all kinds of wordly matters. We never hear one say to the other: "Now I resolve anew to follow my Master, and try by word and action to turn sinners to God." Always the sign is hung out by which a person may tell what is kept there. The mind should be full of good things, and there would be no room for the evil to crowd them out; but sorry to say it, many are the other way, the good is crowded out and the heart is full of abomination. Well has the Redeemer said, "Wide is the gate, and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat; because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth to life, and few there be that find it." Matth. 7:13,14.

When we are together, let us try to give good examples to those around us, in conversation and in everything we do; for an account we must give for the deeds done in the body, whether good or evil; and if we die in our sins, where he is we can never come. Hence the necessity of pure Christianity.

E. R. Holsinger.

Tyrone, Pa.

For the Companion.

A Wager.

While I was gone to Annual Meeting last year, a certain Dr. came to my house, telling my wife that he had learned that there were "Dunkard" Brethren in this neighborhood, having meeting sometimes; himself being acquainted with them and their doctrine: he desired to have meeting in his neighborhood, since in talking with religious professors about the "Dunkard" doctrine, they expressed a desire to hear them preach, as it seemed to them a novelty. I shall remark, by the way, that this Doctor moved from the southern parts to where he now resides, only a few years ago. He left his address; but then I could see no time to answer the request until this spring, when my co-laborer reluctantly complied while I was gone to the Annual Meeting.

In his preliminary remarks, after opening the meeting, he stated that it was not money honor or popularity, nor anything else caused him to come and preach to the people, but to discharge his duty according to his calling; and he would preach to them the pure gospel as he understood the same, and if they were willing to accept it, well and good, and if not, they were at liberty to reject it. So he commenced with the commission. He continued for several Sundays, until ten persons became willing to accept the gospel, and united with the church.

That which appeared to these people the most novel, was, that this man should have no other motive for preaching than the good of the people and the glory of God, doing thereby his duty without dollars and cents. "I'll bet," says one of the crowd, "there is money at the bottom of the scheme, in one way or the other."—Another declared there was not, that he knew these people in Ohio, and they never take pay for preaching.—The first speaker offered to stake his watch, that it will come out as he said, which offer was taken by the second party, and the watches were given into the hands of a third party.

The above may be looked at as a matter not proper for publication, or at least not edifying. But I desire to call the attention of the reader to the fact that preaching the gospel has become a money-making operation; and like any other mechanical art, some persons devote themselves to it, and in order to be successful, study the art, and so apply themselves thereto, and to keep pace with the times and fluctuations, fluctuate themselves;—and if Paul says he became all things to all men, they make use of the expression by isolating it from the rest of his speeches and practice. This practice then of making merchandize of the word of God, or all religion, has brought preaching into disrepute; and thousand have become disgusted and will not come near, especially in this State of Michigan where people have been humbugged so much and so long by gospel peddlers.

It requires continued exertion, or protracted efforts, to call the attention of the people; and we don't think it strange if people act shy when they hear our preaching, fearing there is after all something in the back ground. But give them time to see us live out our doctrine in our lives, and the result will certainly be that they will glorify our Father which is in heaven. This applies to all our members, that they adorn their profession by their lives. If the preacher of the Gospel is to convince the multitude that come to hear him talk, by his actions and dealings, that it is not riches and honor that he is seeking, it becomes every member's duty to "Walk as they have us for an ensample," as Paul saith. And how do some brethren put us,(will not say the Gospel) to shame, when God has blessed them with the abundance of perishable things, that they scarcely have a dime to give, where a hundred dollars would scarcely be an equivalent to one trip that a poor preaching brother makes, where he denies himself of home and family for days, and they could give from their abundance, and yet enjoy the sweets of home.

Perhaps you say there is no call, really, in which I can trust to invest my money safely. Ah! my brother, you are a little too careful, if not too skeptical! You fear bad use will be made of your charity! Pardon me my brother, pardon me my sister, when I encourage you to have a little more faith in your brethren, and a little more trust in the Lord; for "it is more blessed to give than to receive"; and besides, had you not better dispose of your surplus yourself, and thereby lay up a treasure in heaven, instead of leaving it to be divided after your death?

Could not a few hundreds, or even some thousand dollars be madea available in counteracting the mischievous pamphlets, periodicals, and novel-books, by printing and distributing something true and useful? How long must our brethren printers be charitable alone to supply the poor with reading matter? Is there no brother that is in danger that his lump of riches will prevent him from squeezing through the "Eye of a needle"? And finally, are we not all afraid the Master will come and call us to a reckoning before we have cast up our our accounts, and find a balance in our favor?

So long as our private members show an unscrupulous desire to amass and hoard up the blessings of God, chiefly, or rather exclusively, for their and their children's private use, their practice will retard the spread, as well as the acceptance, of the simple and pure Gospel. If I had not faith in my brethren that they are willing to do all that the Gospel requires of them as soon as they are convinced of duty, I would not touch my pen nor trouble the printers to set type; but past experience and present indications confirm me, that to attain a certain object, requires perseverance, and I shall always stand ready for correction.

F. P. Lœhr.

For the Companion

The Bread and Cup in the Communion.

We are often asked the question by both brethren and sisters, "Why is it that the Brethren break the bread and divide the cup one to the other, while the minister breaks and divides to all the sisters?" The same inquiry was in my mind in my younger days. Once a brother told me that it was because the woman had stretched forth her hand, and took of the forbidden fruit, and gave to her husband, and it brought death upon the human family; and that she therefore was not allowed to break with her hand the bread of life and divide it also.

But that never seemed to satisfy my mind, as to be a lawful cause, to make woman's hand inferior to the man's; for I think the Lord has long since removed the inferiority or shame, if there was any in that respect on her, and crowned her with honor and glory, in this, that God gave woman the preference and said: The seed of the women shall bruise the serpent's head. God made choice of her to overshadow her with the Holy Ghost, and to give birth to the great Redeemer of the world, who was to abolish death and to bring life and immortality to light by the Gospel. Thus we see God has highly exalted his handmaid,and accomplished all this through her, independent of the man; and hence I am obliged to take a different view of the subject; because I am still ready to believe the Brethren have a scriptural foundation for their order in breaking of bread.

We might look at the other side of the subject, and we think we have sufficient evidence to exempt the woman from breaking the bread and dividing the cup with her hand; that bread and cup which are emblematic of the body and spilling of the blood of the Lord Jesus Christ. Now we learn plainly from the Scriptures of divine truth that it was by the voice of man, and not by woman, that our Lord was mocked and condemned to be crucified; that it was the hand of man that scourged him, and nailed him to the cross, to have his body broken in death; it was the hand of man that made his cup bitter; it was the hand ot man that laid hold of the spear to open the side of the body of Jesus, and spilled his blood; it was the hand of man that did all the breaking and mangling of his body, and the spilling of his blood; and not one single voice of a woman, nor a hand of the same, do we see engaged in the breaking of that body, and the spilling of that blood. But on the other hand we see the women beholding him, and bewailing and lamenting him; we also hear the voice of the wife of Pilate, "Have thou nothing to do with this just man."

And yet we believe the woman received all the benefit and blessing of the broken body and shed blood of the Lord, as much so as the man ever did; and hence we claim, if she partook of the power and fruits of his death equal with the man, without the breaking of the body, and the spilling of his blood with her own hand, but was dealt out to her by the hand of man, we think, she equally shares the same benefits from the bread and cup in the Communion, when it is conferred upon her by the hand of the man as in the former.

And again, we learn only of the men breaking the bread and dividing the cup, in the Scriptures, and not of one woman have I ever read in my Bible, that brake the bread in the Communion. So these are some of the best reasons I know to assign why the church has established and preserved this order, that the brethren only break bread. If any one thinks the above reasons are not sufficient or scriptural, I am open for instruction or criticism. What I have written I have written in love, as a well-wisher of the church of Christ, and defender of the cause. Your well-wishing brother.

John Forney, Sr.

For the COMPANION.

Dissolution.

The term dissolution implies being joined together. We can form a great may copartnerships which must ultimately be dissolved, from whatever cause that may be, whether from causes effecting sorrow or pleasure.—Parties may join together in business, each pledging himself an equal partner in profits and losses. They transact business a long time, perhaps accumulate a vast amount of wealth. Finally one of the parties becomes dissatisfied, and a dissolution of the firm is the consequence. Again, parties succeed well and anticipate a pleasant time while doing business together; but amidst all their prospects, as we have experienced to our sorrow, the grim monster death comes along and takes one of those active partners away, and lays him in the cold embrace of death, which again causes a dissolution—a shock from which the surviving partner or partners may never fully recover.

Again, a young man and young lady may join themselves in holy bands of wedlock; with bright anticipations of the future, they select a spot of earth, somewhere, on which to erect a cozy little house, where they may enjoy a happy home. A short season of happiness ensues, and then, alas! idle jealousy, or some other foolish whim, real or imaginary, brings on a prolonged quarrel, a divorce is obtained, their partnership in life dissolved, their coveted home deserted, and they wander through the world forever miserable.

Again, another wedded pair live together in different circumstances: peace and comfort are theirs; success attends their efforts; they have a disposition to do well, and a garden home is theirs to dwell in. Little olive plants appear around the festal board to grace the family circle; all is love, all are happy. Time rolls around, the children grow up, the parents grow old and grey; a brother leaves home to seek one of his own; perchance a sister, wooed and won, leaves the paternal roof to share the joys and sorrows of life with the one of her choice. The parents grow older; they descend the declivity of life and halt at Jordan's stream. The voyage is cold and dreary; but the haven of rest they obtain is warm with angel's love, and lit up with the pure light of God. Under those glorious anticapations they embark.—But to see them cross the Jordan of death, is a dissolution which often brings sorrow to the heart. The children who were gone for years return, but 'tis no longer home to them, they do not meet the whole family circle any more. No, they are gone; "strangers have taken the kinsman's place." Perhaps all that can bring home to their fond recollection is a mossy grown fruit tree that father planted, or a bending weeping willow that dear mother planted by the well curb, thinking that long after her demise, the returning children might bring to memory some fond recollections of that loving heart that lies in yonder cemetery. Perhaps a sparkling little spring, gushing forth its rippling waters beneath yon steady oak, is the only mark that brings any recollections of a happy home.

Thus we see that whatever partnership or associations we may form here, or be connected with, it must finally be dissolved. We may visit kind friends and they may visit us in return, yet we must part. We may greatly enjoy ourselves and bring up reminiscences of joy while together, yet 'tis momentary. Life may cling to its prison house of clay with the utmost tenacity, yet this tenement of clay must be dissolved. Those separations already hinted at are but momentary, in comparison with that great dissolution of friends and relatives, which will take place at the great tribunal of the Lord, when he shall judge the world. Then the separation will last for ages. Hear the sentence: "Depart, ye cursed, into everlasting fire."

Seeing, then, that all associations or partnerships here on earth are dissolvable, the insatiate mind asks, is there not an association somewhere from which there can be no separation? The answer is: Yes, in heaven, in the company of angels, in presence of the holy of holies. Jesus says: "In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you, * * * that where I am, there ye may be also."

Then brethren and sisters, take courage: and while we are here accumulating some of this world's goods for our comfort while we live here on the earth, let us not forget the interests of that living principle within our breasts, that, when our days shall all be numbered and this earthly house of ours must be dissolved in death, our souls may be escorted to that heavenly mansion above, where there shall be no more separation, no more sorrow, no more sickness, no more death.

S. T. BOSSERMAN.

Dunkirk, Ohio.

A Holy Spot.

It is common to speak of the house of public worship as a "holy place"; but it has no exclusive sanctity. The holiest spot on earth is that where the soul breathes its purest vows, and forms or executes its noblest purposes; and on this ground, were I to select the holiest spot in our city, I should not go to your splendid sanctuaries, but to the closets of private prayer. Perhaps the "Holy of Holies" among you is some dark, narrow room, from which most of us would shrink as unfit for human habitation; but God dwells there. He hears there music more grateful than the swell of all your organs; sees there a beauty such as Nature in her robes of Spring does not unfold; for the he meets, and sees, and hears, the humblest, most thankful, most trustful worshipper; sees the sorest trials serenely borne: the deepest injuries forgiven; sees the toils and sacrifices cheerfully sustained, and death approached, through a lonely illness, with a triumphant faith. The consecration which such virtues shed over the obscurest spot is not and cannot be communicated by any of those outward rites by which our splendid structures are dedicated to God.—Channing.

—Four things come not back—the broken word, the spent arrow, the past life, and the neglected opportunity.

If you promise to meet a man or do a certain thing at a certain moment, be ready at the appointed time.

—There is no virture that adds so noble a charm to the finest traits of beauty as that which exerts itself in watching over the tranquillity of an aged parent. There are no tears that give so noble a lustre to the cheek of innocence as the tears of filial sorrow.

Christian Family Companion

Tyrone City, Pa., Aug., 22, 1871.

The Lord's Supper. No. 4.

Having shown that the term chosen by the Holy Spirit to express the ordinance of the Lord's Supper, denotes a full, evening meal, "a banquet, a feast," our next inquiry will be to ascertain whether Christians in apostolic times observed a feast. If they kept and recognized a feast in the church, we assume, that, as the term Kuriakon deipnon means the Lord's east, or Lord's Supper, the feast which they observed was the Lord's feast—the Lord's Supper. We shall first show, by reference to the inspired record, that they did observe a feast; and then we will show that the feast which they observed was the Lord's Supper, and that its observance was continued among the early Christians, immediately succeeding apostolic times.

"Jude, the servant of Jesus Christ," in his letter "to them that are sanctified by God the Father, and preserved in Jesus Christ, and called," in speaking of certain froward characters who had "crept" into the church unawares, among other things, says: "These are spots in your feasts of charity, when they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear." (Jude, 12th verse). Peter, in reference to the same lewd characters, says: "Spots they are and blemishes, sporting themselves with their own deceivings when they feast with you." (2 Peter 2 : 13). It is evident from these texts that both Peter and Jude recognized the existence of feasts among those to whom they addressed their epistles. It is also manifest that they were rebuking errors that had been practised among them.—Now we assume, that, as they recognized the existence of feasts, and as they said nothing against those feasts while they were reproving errors, it is obvious that they sanctioned the observance of such feasts. If these feasts were innovations; if they were not of divine appointment, and consequently were injurious, they should have, and no doubt would have, spoken of and denounced them as such. But there is not the faintest intimation in the entire connection, to indicate that they disapproved of these feasts. These facts speak in unmistakable terms, that they approved of the feasts, and that they were of divine appointment. Now, since the word translated supper in 1 Cor. 11 : 20, means feast, and since Peter and Jude declare that those who had obtained like precious faith with the apostles,—those who were sanctified, preserved, and called,—observed a feast, who can doubt that the feast which they observed was the Lord's feast, or Lord's Supper?

We will now inquire into the meaning of the Greek term agapais translated "feasts of charity," in the 12th verse of Jude's epistle.

Liddell and Scott define agape thus "Love, brotherly love." But Henry Drisler M. A., editor of the American edition of their Lexicon, adds: "Plural, agapai, the love-feasts of the early Christians, Jude 12, compare 1 Cor. 11 : 21—24."

Greenfield defines it; "Love; plural, love-feasts."

Brown, in his Bible Dictionary, has the following:

"Agapæ. This is a Greek word, and signifies properly friendship. The feasts of charity, which were in use among the Christians of the primitive church, were called by this name.—They were celebrated in memory of the last supper which Jesus Christ made with his apostles, when he instituted the Holy Eucharist. These festivals were kept in the church, towards the evening, after the common prayers were over, and the word of salvation had been heard. When this was done the faithful ate together with great simplicity and union, what every one had brought with them; so that the rich and the poor were nowise distinguished. After an economical and moderate supper, they partook of the Lord's body and blood, and gave each other the kiss of peace. This custom, so good and laudable in its original, soon degenerated and was abused. St. Paul complains of this in his first epistle to the Corinthians, chap. 11 : 20—22."

The reader's attention is here called to the fact, that the editor to the American edition of Liddell & Scott's Greek-English Lexicon, and Brown, agree that Paul, when speaking of the "Lord's Supper" in the eleventh chapter of 1 Corinthians, refers to the same feasts that Jude calls "feasts of charity"; that is, the deipnon of Paul and the agapais of Jude, were the same. There are many considerations which go to show that this is the case, a few of which we will notice.

1. That the primitive Christians had feasts among them, and that their feasts were observed in the evening, has been clearly shown.—The Corinthian brethren were so schismatical and disorderly as to convert their feast into their "own supper," or evening meal. The whole church was in disorder, division, and confusion; and therefore their feast could not, with propriety be called the Lord's feast, nor "feast of charity"—love-feast, but their "own supper." Those to whom Jude addressed his epistle were not so far out of the way. They observed the feast according to its original form, spirit, and design. They were not divided, but united—"preserved in Jesus Christ," and hence they kept their feasts in union and love; they were therefore properly denominated agapais—love-feasts or feasts of Charity. But while Jude does not complain of divisions, he does declare the sad fact, that there had "certain men crept in unawares,"—without being detected,—"turning the grace of God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ." In speaking of these hypocrites he says: "These are spots in your feasts of Charity, when they feast with you." Their feasts were all right,—love-feasts,—but in their "feasts of charity" these unholy, unsanctified men, were spots, marring the beauty and purity of the divine institution. The Greek term epilades, translated spots, means, "a rock at sea, a sunken rock." Farmers know how sunken rocks interfere with them and are often a cause of loss; but mariners know better how rocks at sea, sunken rocks, rocks just hidden beneath the surface, are frequently the prolific source of the destruction of life and property. So these sanctimonious hypocrites were "a concealed source of evil," and if not avoided would be the cause of serious loss: they might even destroy their harmony and love, and ultimately convert their love-feasts into their own suppers. Jude could yet speak of the feasts of his readers as being love-feasts; but Paul could not say so much for the Corinthians, and hence he made inspired choice of the term deipnon, which means supper as well as feast, which rendered the transition from the idea of the Lord's feast, or supper, to that of their "own supper," at once more natural and easy.

2. The term used by Jude means feasts—love-feasts; and the term used by Paul also denotes a feast, and is frequently so translated. So also does the term used by Peter, suneuochoumenoi, (from sun, with, and euocheomai, to feast, to banquet,) mean, "to feast together with." (See Greenfield Lex. to N. T.) These different terms might certainly signify one and the same feast, with as much propriety as we employ the terms Eucharist, Bread and Wine, and Communion to designate one and the same ordinance.

3. The "feasts of charity" were observed in connection with the "bread and wine"; and Paul reproves the Corinthians also for this disorder, that they did not discern the Lord's body—did not distinguish or set apart, a portion of bread and wine, as emblems of the broken body and shed blood of the Lord.

4. Peter and Jude were reproving errors; they approvingly mention the feasts of charity, but rebuke improprieties connected with them; so Paul denounces the disorder of the Corinthians, but gives them instructions how to observe the Lord's Supper in an orderly, worthy, and beneficial manner.

5. Jude says that those of whom he was complaining were guilty of "feeding themselves without fear." Paul also says: "one is hungry, and another is drunken." He complains of their eating without due preparation, and without proper order, and thus they ate their own supper: they too, were guilty of "feeding themselves without fear."

All these facts go to show that the Lord's Supper of Paul, the feast of Peter, and the feasts of charity of Jude, were the same. They were properly called feasts, because of the abundant provisions brought together. They were fitly styled "feasts of charity," because it was through love to Christ, who instituted the ordinances of his own house, that they were observed, and they were expressive of their love to each other. They were also appropriately denominated the Lord's Supper: first, because the Lord enjoined their observance; secondly, because they were observed by the Lord's people, in love and union as the Lord's family; thirdly, because they were observed in connection with the bread and wine—the communion of the body and blood of the Lord—which "show the Lord's death till he come"; fourthly, because, in the language of Brown, "they were celebrated in memory of the last supper which Jesus Christ made with his apostles, when he instituted the holy Eucharist; and finally, because they are expressive of the blessings enjoyed in the Lord's house or church, and typical of the great supper or feast in the evening of the world, when the Lord shall gird himself and serve.

We will next introduce a few testimonies to show that these feasts were observed by the early Christians, who lived immediately after the times of the apostles. But that the reader may understand these testimonies correctly, he must bear in mind, that the authors from whom we quote lived and wrote after the Lord's Supper proper, or feasts of charity, had been abused and generally abandoned, and the name Lord's Supper was applied to the bread and wine. In their use of the expression they adhere to the custom of the times in which they lived, and the usage of the people for whom they wrote. Be it remembered, therefore, that the simple fact that these authors call the bread and wine the Lord's Supper, is no evidence at all that the Eucharist was called the Lord's Supper, before the feast, or supper proper, was faithlessly discarded.

John Laurence Mosheim a learned church historian of the last century in speaking of the church at Jerusalem in the first century, says:

"The first Christian church, founded by the apostles, was at Jerusalem, the model of all those which were afterwards erected during the first century. This church was, indeed, governed by the apostles themselves, to whom both the elders, and those who were entrusted with the care of the poor, even the deacons, were subject. The people, though they had not abandoned the Jewish worship, held, however, separate assemblies, in which they were instructed by the apostles and elders, prayed together, celebrated the holy supper in remembrance of Christ, of his death and sufferings, and the salvation offered to mankind through him; and at the conclusion of these meetings, they testified their mutual love, partly by their liberality to the poor, and partly by sober and friendly repasts, (Acts 2 : 42,) which thence were called feasts of charity.—MACLAINE'S MOSHEIM, Vol. 1, Book 1, Part 1, chap. 4, sec 5.

Farther on, in speaking of the rites and ceremonies of the church in the first century, he says :

"The prayers which formed a considerable part of the public worship, were introduced at the conclusion of these discourses, and were repeated by the people after the bishop or presbyter, who presided in the service.—To these were added certain hymns, which were sung, not by the whole assembly, but by persons appointed for that purpose, during the celebration of the Lord's Supper and the feasts of charity. Such were the essential parts of divine worship which were observed in all the Christian churches, though, perhaps the method and order in which they were performed were not the same in all.—(Vol. 1, Book 1,part 2, chap. 4,sec. 6.)

After speaking of the religious assemblies of Christians in the second century, Mosheim says: "During these sacred meetings, prayers were repeated; the holy scriptures were read; short discourses upon the duties of Christians, were addressed to the people; hymns were sung, and a portion of the oblations presented by the faithful was employed in the celebration of the Lord's Supper and the feast of charity." (Vol. 1, Book 1, part 2, chap. 5, sec. 8.) Of the third century, he says: "These sacred feasts, which accompanied this venerable institution, preceded its celebration in some churches, and followed it in others." (Vol. 1, Book 1, part 2, chap. 4, sec. 3.)

Adam Clarke, in his comment on Jude 12th, remarks: "The feasts of charity, the agapai or love-feasts, of which the Apostle speaks, were in use in the primitive Church till the middle of the fourth century, when, by the council of Laodicea, they were prohibited to be held in the churches, and having been abused, fell into disuse."

In the Cyclopedia of Biblical, Theological, and Ecclesiastical Literature, by McClintock and Strong, under the head of "Agape," it is said :

"If we reflect upon the profound impressions which the transactions of 'the night on which the Lord was betrayed' (1 Cor. 11 : 23) must have made on the minds of his apostles, nothing can be more natural, or in closer accordance with the genius of the new dispensation, than a wish to perpetuate the commemoration of his death in connection with their social meal (Neander, Leben Jesu, p. 643 ; Planting of the Christian church, i, 27.) The primary celebration of the Eucharist had impressed a sacredness on the repast of which it formed a part (comp. Matt. 26 : 26 ; Mark 14 : 22 ; with Luke 22 : 20 ; 1 Cor. 11 : 25) ; and when to this consideration we add the ardent faith and love of the new converts on the one hand, and the loss of property with the disruption of old connections and attachments on the other ; which must have heightened the feeling of brotherhood, we need not look farther for the institution of the Agapae, at once a symbol of Christian love and a striking exemplification of its benevolent energy. However soon its purity was soiled, at first it was not undeserving of the eulogy pronounced by Chrysostom : 'A custom most beautiful and most beneficial ; for it was a supporter of love, a solace of poverty, a moderator of wealth, and a discipline of humility.' Thus the common meal and the Eucharist formed together one whole and were conjointly denominated Lord's Supper (deipnon tou kurion, deipnon kuriakon) and feast of love (agapa)."

In the same article in speaking of the decline of these feasts the author says : At a still later period the Agapæ were subjected to strict regulation by various councils. Thus by the 28th canon of the Council of Laodicea it was forbidden to hold them in churches. At the council of Carthage (A. D. 397) it was ordered (can. 29) that none should partake of the Eucharist unless they had previously abstained from food ; but it is added, excepto uno die anniversario, quo cæna domini celebratur, (excepting the anniversary, for the celebration of the Lord's feast or Lord's Supper." Æ.) This exception favors the supposition that the Agapæ were originally held in close imitation of the Last Supper, i. e. before, instead of after, the Eucharist. The same prohibition was repeated in the sixth, seventh, and ninth centuries, at the Council of Orleans (can. 12) A. D. 533 ; in the Trullanian Council at Constantinople, A. D. 692 ; and in the council held at Aix-la Chapelle, A. D. 816. Yet these regulations were not intended to set aside the Agapæ altogether. In the council of Gangra, in Paphlagonia (about A. D. 360), a curse was denounced on whoever despised the partakers of the Agapæ or refused to join in them."

Is Methodism of Christ ?

Brother Stalnaker's articles under the above heading have called forth the following letter from one of our subscribers, whose name we omit.

"Your paper has always been received and read with great pleasure, until within the last three weeks, and you will please not send it to me any longer. There are a great many good things in it ; but I see there is a great evil beginning in it, and that is judging other churches. There is a passage in Scripture that says : "Judge not that ye be not judged." You should remember your subscribers are not all German Baptists. For my part I am a Methodist, and love the Methodist church and am trying to serve God, and get to heaven. And if you want to go there under your doctrine I say well. If I want to go there under the Methodist doctrine why let me go. If my brother wants to go there under some other, let him go. There is but one God and one heaven, and if we want to get there let us in all try, for there are good and bad in all churches, and yours not excepted.—. . * Keep the balance of subscription, and also the paper."

The above sounds decidedly Methodistic. Each one is to sail under his own banner, (doctrine.) We all want to go to heaven, but we want to take our own way to get there. Well, we would be pleased to retain all our subscribers, but we can tickle no such itching ears. There is but one God, and one Heaven, and also but one way to God and Heaven, and that is by and through Jesus Christ. "I am the way and the truth and the life; no man cometh unto the Father, but by me." Jesus Christ became the way for us, and there is no other name given among men whereby we must be saved, but by the name of Jesus. It is high time that the delusive notion "Do as you please and you shall be saved," should be exposed by every sentinel upon the walls of Zion. It is one of the most destructive doctrines that has ever been instituted by the enemy of man's salvation. It is directly contrary to the religion of Jesus Jesus taught that men must be born again; must be born of the Spirit; but this popular religion would teach us that the service of God consists of any form of worship the imagination of man may invent, and no matter how absurd, only so one can work up his faith to such a degree that he can believe his fanciful notions to be true. No sir; we have no sympathy with such fanciful religion. We do not believe you can go to heaven at all under Methodist doctrine, or any other man-made system. You must come under the doctrine of Jesus Christ. Through its teaching and influence you must come to a knowledge of the truth and be saved; and that by obedience to his will; "bringing unto captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ;" obeying, from the heart, the doctrine of Jesus Christ.—Rom. 6:17.

We however find a shade of difference of opinion between brother Stalnaker's views and our own, and yet we do not know that our views can afford our Methodist friend very much consolation, as it simply consists in shifting the ignominy from the child to the parent. Most of what brother S. says of the Methodist Church we would not have said of that organization. It belongs more properly to Mourner's Bench Religion. We do not think that the second beast spoken of in Rev. 13: 11, represents Methodism alone. Mourner's Bench Religion is the Beast, and Methodism might be one of the horns. There are other churches which partake as deeply of the nature of the Beast as the Methodist, though they may not be as popular. The Pope is generally conceded to have been the first Beast, that rose up out of the water. He claimed and exercised the power to forgive sin. The second Beast is to exercise all the power of the first beast. This is virtually done by this new system of religion. The convert, by divers grimaces, and physical contortions works himself up to such a state of mental disorder, as to usurp the power of Jehovah, by proclaiming his own sins forgiven, of which he has not the slightest proof, nor indeed does he regard any other necessary, but his own animal feelings. In these things the two beasts are alike, for they worship at the same shrine: Self.

Don't Forget the Almanac?

Send us the names and addresses of all our ministering brethren who were not published in last year's Almanac Do it at once! No time is to be lost! Send also the announcement of District Meetings for next year, and any other matter that would be adapted to the work. Also any advertisements that are consistent with a religious almanac. Price 25 cents a line.

Our New Office.

Our new office at Dale City, is rapidly propressing, and we are assured that it will be ready for occupancy by the middle of October.

Clermont Academy. We have received circulars announcing an educational enterprise under the above name. The institution is located along the Western Maryland Railroad. The building to be used is known as the "Clermont House," which had been carefully arranged to furnish all the conveniences of a Summer boarding-house, and with little change will be well adapted to the wants of a large Boarding School. The school is to open on the fifth of October next. Jonathan Emmert will act as Principal, employ assistants, and preside over the Institution in all its interests. For particulars address Jonathan Emmert, Benevola, Washington Co., Md.

Mr. Emmert is a son of brother Leonard Emmert, of Washington Co., Maryland, whose family we visitied last Spring. He is a graduate of Lafayette College, Pennsylvania, and is recommended to us as an able scholar, and a man of good parts, and well adapted to this calling.

The above institution is the one referred to by brother P. S. Newcomer, in another column.

Trine Immersion.

We have a few copies of the Debate on Trine Immersion, Feet-washing, and the Lord's Supper, between Quinter and McConnell, which will be sent upon receipt of price: $1.25.

Answers to Correspondents

F. P. Lehr.—You gave in the name of H. H. H., and the money $1.

Samuel Baker.—With this Number. Balance of Volume 7, 50 cents.

CORRESPONDENCE

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

"HYGEIAN HOME,") Wernersville, Pa., Aug. 12, '71.)

RUDOLPH B. REIGERT, et al.

Esteemed Friend: You wish to know how I am faring, and what prospects I entertain of the favorable issue of my case. I have been under treatment four months, and have barely kept my own. This looks rather ominous, but my vitality is so low, and the treatment necessarily so mild, that a marked change is not expected in so short a time. A malady of 20 years, which has become like a second nature, cannot be eradicated but by judicious and persevering treatment. Even if the Lord has better days in store for me, I do not expect to do more than maintain an equipoise between the recuperative force and disturbed functional action, for two or three months to come. I am my own physician, adapting to my vital capabilities the principles which are taught in this institution. My treatment is rigidly hygienic. The facilities here for a thoroughly physiological regimen, are very ample. Drugs are discarded, as bearing the same relation to vitality as moral evil does to the spiritual life. The law of recovery is nothing else than an extension of the law of health. Obedience to divine arrangements is the condition of salvation physically no less than spiritually.

As to my restoration, the Lord knows: to human judgment it is problematical. I am still speechless, and do not expect a return of the vocal faculty within a year, even under the most favorable circumstances. I am feeble and attenuated, but have perhaps as good assimilative power as when I came here. I am not expecting much save from Infinite wisdom and Sovereignty, which bring salvation when the predictions of human philosophy have proved themselves utterly empty and pretentious. This is a healing art, and all its elements sustain an essential relation to the principle or force that is to use them. By this reciprocal relation all diseases can be overcome, but not all stages of disease, and, consequently, not all sick persons. As in the economy of grace "there is a sin unto death," so in the economy of sentient matter there is a "sickness unto death," for which no cure is possible apart from miraculous agency. God has not one law for health and another for restoration: not one class of agencies for preservation and another for recuperation. There can be no broader application of law in the recovery of health, than God designed there should be for its maintenance. This is true of the entire constitution of man, and is the basis of order and harmony in heaven and on earth.—What is employed for the removal of disease has an essential relation to the restorative principle, or it has not; if it has, it cannot be dispensed with when health returns; if it has not, it belongs not to the category of elements that heaven has ordained for the art of healing.

My furnace is heated seven times, but Love has kindled it, and the Ever-Loving walks with me in the flames. "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." I need not even wait for the morning, but "rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory" in the midnight of my suffering and sorrow.

You pity me, I know, because I suffer; and I pity you more because you have no better solace than good health. You see only the wormwood in my cup; but it is brimming with the new wine which angels never tasted. Your sunshine is midnight; my night season is noon-day. You are in the "mountain of leopards;" I am on the "hill of frankincense." Are not you to be pitied and I congratulated?

Be wise. "Redeem the time."—Although you are in the enjoyment of vigorous health, you may stand at the bar of God before I. Consecrate yourself to your Redeemer, and employ your wealth, health, and influence for the promotion of his glory.

Thanking you for your sympathy, and wishing you joy coeval with your immortality,

I am, very truly, your friend
C. H. BALSBAUGH.

Educational.

Brother Editor of the Companion:—Feeling a strong desire for the developing of the educational interest of the church by encouraging the facilities tending in that direction, I desire to submit a few thoughts for your columns, which I think will not incur the displeasure of any reasonable, reflecting mind. By the the enclosed circulars you will be advised in reference to a projected enterprise in contemplation, which should receive the favorable consideration of the Brethren, by giving it such encouragement and support as will promote its success. Why should not the east be an honorable competitor with our western Brethren whose efforts are being abundantly crowned with success.—We have just as much material among us, whose minds are susceptible of cultivation, who long since have felt the want of an institution under the auspices and control of the church, whose religious influence can be just as consistently extended toward the enhancement of the interest of the Brotherhood as that of other denominations, who are so zealously employing every instrumentality in that direction for extending their borders; yea, even proselyting from among those whom they are so fortunate as to get under their control.—This alone should be an argument, powerfully in favor of our instituting nurseries within and under the immediate supervision of our own fold, so that those who are indissolubly connected with us by the ties of consanguinity, whose minds may be aspiring toward that cultivation that may place them upon an equal footing with the associations thrown around them, can be accommodated. If we do not establish asylums of educational refuge, uncontaminated by the deleterious influences being disseminated to entrap the unwary, they will finally fall a prey to the nefarious designs extensively used to bring them under subjection to their peculiar religious instructions, whose popularity are becoming renowned for rapid advancement. It is high time our people awake up to a sense of duty, by becoming advised of our dangerous adversaries, lurking by the way, endeavoring to impede our progress. For the promotion of the interests of the church, let us throw aside such of our primitive educational opinions as we can without conflicting with the spirit and teaching of the gospel; not forgetting that, with new emergencies arise new necessities, which were not apparently, as obvious in the early days of the church as they are being so frightfully developed in these latter days. It is suicidal not to admit that in knowledge there is power.—Let it be used in whatever capacity it may, whether in the promulgation of good or evil, its energies are untiring in developing resources for the advancement of the multitudinous designs sought to be propagated toward the peculiar interests involved.—Whether pertaining to State Nationality, or in a religious point of view, these conflicting interests must be met; and in order to combat successfully, we must use the same powerful weapons of defence that are fast becoming such engines of propelling force to carry them onward to success. Dare we for a moment doubt, that the same attainments and qualifications used toward the propagation of evil can be sanctified, (by the word of God and prayer, with wholesome and correct influences, being brought in subjection to them,) toward the dissemination of good—the perpetuation and material prosperity of the church? I think it admissable, when I reflect upon the characteristics and extraordinary attainments of St. Paul, who was brought up a profound scholar at the feet of Gamaliel; taught according to the perfect manner of the law of the father: persecuting the church of God, and wasting it even unto the death of those whose opinions conflicted with the Judaical teachings; and yet we find this persecutor, with all his profound and argumentative powers, sanctified by the power of God through his conversion, toward the combatting of the very errors and superstitions he once labored so assiduously to perpetuate, even at the behests and rigor of the Jewish Laws. Hence, why is it that we have emanating from him so many epistolary writings, couched in language of such sublimity of character and terseness of style, but an exemplification of the wisdom of God in using the same powerful influence and profundity of thought to counteract the very same doctrine which once characterized his ambitious career? Is it not then admissable, that we who profess to be God's peculiar people can make the demand for divine assistance, that we may successfully control the efforts put forth for the advancement of our educational interests, which may fit our posterity for such positions, either agricultural mechanical, or professional? And if there be those among them who may be called to important positions in the church, the foundation will only be laid to assist in making such acquirements as may promote the best interest of the church, the safety honor and welfare of precious souls who may be floundering in the slough of sin and iniquity, or those who may be in danger of the influences that are being sowed broad-cast around them to allure them from the most holy faith, which we labor so persistently to establish as the basis of our most holy religion. These are truths that are palpably staring us in the face; and if, for the sake of relinquishing a few antiquated opinions, we permit supineness to control our actions, we will at no distant day be awakened to a vivid sensibility of our situation. Trusting you may present the institution of the means so kindly proffered us for our support, and influence to the favorable consideration of the Brotherhood, through the medium of your columns, with such editorial support as the emergency of the case requires, is the desire of one who feels the need of better qualifications to fit him for the position to which he has been called.

Fraternally your Brother,

P. S. NEWCOMER.

Brother Henry:—In as much as some earnest appeals have been made by individual members, for means to forward brother J. B. Allensworth, in moving to Oregon, to improve his health and to preach the gospel, and but little means contributed, and lastly a remark by brother A., himself in Companion No. 32, implying some dissatisfaction on his part that the Annual Meeting did not consider his case, for all this there must be a cause. Brother A., lives in the Southern District of Illinois, a district composed of twenty-one organized churches, yet but little seems to be known of him here, only that we have seen his name as used by the individual members in asking assistance for him. There are living in Southern Illinois, brethren who have means, and who are willing to contribute some of them to enlarge Zion's borders, but they fear that by responding to such calls, made by individual members for means to help young ministers, whom they know not, out into new places like Oregon, they possibly might be the means of enlarging Zion's troubles. In view of all this, they prefer working with the church in her regular order. The Annual Meeting of 1868 adopted the plan of having a district treasury, regulated by the District Meeting, for the purpose of assisting in spreading the gospel, and it is farther the order of the Brethren, that all cases to be considered at the Annual Meeting must come through the church to the District Meeting, and from there to the Annual Meeting.—Brother A.'s case, not being forwarded in this way, he need no longer wonder why it received no attention. Now if the church in which brother A., lives, feels impressed with the necessity of doing something for him and feels too poor to furnish him the necessary means, then let her bring the case in proper shape to the District Meeting in October, accompanied with such testimonials of his character and standing as she as a church, is willing to furnish him, and if the District Meeting will be similarly impressed, no doubt, means will be forthcoming; but until such cases coming up in the Southern District of Illinois will be proceeded with according to the regular order, they no doubt will, as they also should, receive but little attention, either by the brethren in Southern Illinois, or the Annual Meeting.

DANIEL VANIMAN.

Virden, Ill

A Horrible Death.

Dear Brother:—Much intense excitement pervades the entire vicinity east of Urbana, in consequence of the sudden and horrible death of one of our fellow-men, who was killed by a train, about one o'clock, Sunday morning, July 30th.

James I. Arledge, the object of our sketch, was born in Ohio, April 23rd, 1830, and was at the time of his death 41 years 2 months and 7 days old. He moved to this county about three years ago, and has been much respected as a good neighbor, a kind father, and an affectionate husband. As a workman (carpenter) he was a useful man. He was employed most of the Summer in building for the Brethren. Like all other men, he had his failure; but alas! it proved fatal to him.

About sundown, Saturday evening while walking the crowded streets of Urbana, I saw him, and perceiving much to my surprise that he was intoxicated, I quietly passed him by.—This was my first knowledge of his drinking. Although he had previously indulged a few times, but few knew much about it. During the evening I saw nothing more of him, and returned to the country.

Sunday morning, while busily employed preparing my mind for a funeral, which I had been called on that day to preach, news came that Mr. Arledge was found about 4 miles east of Urbana, that he was dead, had been run over and cut in two by the cars.

He had remained by the side of the track some four hours, and when found presented a horrible spectacle. One foot cut off, one leg crushed throughout, his body shamefully mangled, his entrials, heart, &c., out, one arm torn off and one side and the top of his head badly bruised, while the blood and many pieces of hisbody and head were scattered some distance around. His scattered and mangled remains were collected on a blanket, and by an engine, sent for that purpose, were conveyed to Urbana, where a coffin being procured, piece by piece the collected mass of flesh and bones was quietly but sadly laid away in the best possible order and sent to his heart broken family, which had been called to one of their relatives some three miles east of town.

No pen can describe, no mind can imagine, the feelings and sadness of his heart-broken wife, when for the first time she beheld the horrible condition of the one around whose heart she was wont to twine and cling, as the vine around the steady oak, for shelter and protection.

We were called upon to officiate in the necessary religious exercises, and must confess that it was the most critical condition in which we have been placed during our ministerial labors.

The place of his death was the most private in the country. How did he ever get there? What called him to such a place directly away from home, and prompted him to remain upon the track in the face of the train? are questions which perhaps can never be solved, but have given rise to almost every possible speculation respecting the manner and cause of his death. However suffice it to say that he is dead: he is gone and is with us no more. He is now placed in the hands of a just God who at all times manifests a willingness to give the children of men credit for all the good they do.

Let this be an example of the ultimate consequences of the use of whiskey: a heart broken wife left weeping and lamenting day after day, three children with no father to provide for their wants, and the last and most terrible of all, a soul, whose condition all see, landed into an endless eternity.

J. H. Moore.

Thomasboro, Ill.

Report of Travel.

I am frequently asked, "Why do you not report your visits from the different churches?" Were I to give a reason at all it would be simply this: I am fearful of being too tedious for the editors of the Companion and its numerous readers. I will, however try and give a short report of my doings in the last month or so.—On the 22nd of June I set out for Ursina, on the P & C. R. R. Was met at this place by brother John Holiday, who brought me to his house, and from thence to Sylbaug's meeting-house, where we preached a funeral. From this we were kindly conveyed to brother Jacob Beeghley's. From here to Smithfield town, where I preached that same evening. On the 23rd was taken to Fairview Meeting-House, where I preached a funeral for three children. From this point to Markleysburg, in the evening.

On the 24th, A. Humble conveyed me to Sandy-Creek church, Preston county, West Virginia, where, at 2 o'clock we gathered together for Love-feast services. Here I met with many of my former acquainances, among whom was P. J. Brown, of Wayne county, Ohio, who is the very picture of good health. At this place we divided the labor between us two. We had a very pleasant time at Sandy Creek. This arm has our respected brother Jacob M. Thomas as house-keeper. On the 25th, morning services at 10 o'clock at same place. After meeting brother Humble took me to a place called Jockey Hollow, where I preached to a respectable congregation. This closed our meetings for this trip. The meetings were all well attended, good attention to the word preached.

On the 26th brother G. Smith brought me to Confluence, a station on the P. & C. R. R. where at 10:25 we set out for Dale City, where we arrived at 12:04, found my family in a much better condition than I had left them, for which we tried to feel thankful.

I enjoyed myself and the meeting more than usual. The brethren, sisters, and kind friends, have my heartfelt thanks for their kind attention manifested toward their unworthy brother in Christ.

On the 13th of July we met with the brethren in the Shade Branch, Allegheny county, Md., E. Wertzel, overseer. Here I met brother J. M. Thomas and Jacob Beeghley. Of the many things that might be said, I will but say that we here had a very pleasant meeting, and the church is in a prosperous condition. All that is wanting here is a good house in which to worship, and there has a move been made in that direction. In another year or so, the brethren in the Shade Creek will sing the Songs of Zion within their own walls. I have learned, of late, and especially in this last trip, that the laborers are not sufficient for the work. Brethen, spread out; hoist the banner, and we will succeed.

Yours in Love,

C. G. Lint.

Correction.

In No. 32, in the obituary notice of sister Metzger "S. Metzger" should be A. S. Metzger.

Queries.

An explanation is desired on the fore part of the third verse of the eleventh chapter of Revelations.—Give the names of the two witnesses. Will some brother or sister be prompt in giving an explanation?

Jonathan Warner.

Reiffsburg, Ind.

Is it wrong for a sister to pray in public when called upon by the bishop of the church? Will you, brother Henry, or some one, give your opinion on the above question?

Sarah Baker.

Answer to Enigma in No. 32.

Do you take the Christian Family Companion? and have you paid for it?

Answered by I. Secrist and Mary S. Johnson.

Announcements.

Montgomery church, Indiana Co., Pa., a meeting season commences

September 20th, in the evening, at the Rarigh School-house in the Spicher settlement, to continue for one week; then move the meeting to Gettysburgh in the same congregation, and continue there as long as may be thought good.

We give a general invitation to all that can be with us, and especially to laboring brethren. We expect brethren C. G. Lint and Stephen Hildebrand, and invite as many more as can be with us. Brethren coming to Indiana, will please inform me of the same in due time. The Lord bless you all. Amen.

PETER BEER.

Decker's Point, Indiana Co., Pa.

LOVEFEASTS.

Brethren that wish to pay us a visit, will please to come to our Communion Meeting on the last day of September next. Bloomingdale is the R. R. station to step off, on the Kalamazoo and South Haven Road. Three miles South-west is our home.

F. P. L ŒHR.

We intend, the Lord willing, to hold a Love-feast at Claar's Meeting-house, in the Yellow Creek church, Bedford Co., Pa., on the 27th of September next; to commence at four o'clock P. M. Also meeting next day, A. M. The usual invitation is extended

DANIEL SNOWBERGER.

Middle Creek, Somerset county, Pa., Sept. 21st, 4 P. M.

Logan church, Logan county, Ohio, Sept. 29th.

Walnut Level, Wells county, Ind., Oct. 21st.

Yellow Creek, Bedford county, Pa. Sept. 27th, 4 P. M.

Plymouth, Lyon co., Kan., Sept. 2nd.

Somerset farm, Mercer co., Mo., Sept. 23d and 24th.

Shelby co., Iowa, Sept. 2nd.

Salem branch, Marion co., Ill., Aug. 26th.

Dresden Poweshiek co., Iowa, Sept 2nd & 3rd.

Buck's Creek church, Henry county, Ind., Sept. 28th.

Lick Creek congregation, Owen county, Ind, Sept. 29th.

Spring Creek, Rockingham county, Va., Sept. 23, 24.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with obituary notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In Knox county, Ohio, June 16th, of Heart Disease, brother JOHN STEINMETZ, aged 75 years. Funeral services by the writer.

On the 15th, in the same county, near North Liberty, MARY GRANT, aged 20 yrs, 2 months and 8 days. Funeral services by the writer.

In the same county, some four months ago, wife of Elder Worden EDMINISTU. Funeral services by the writer.

Caleb H. Price.

In Champaign county, Ill., July 24th, SARAH JANE, daughter of William C. and Margaret DALE; aged 1 year 9 months and 9 days. Funeral services by Aaron Snider and the writer, from Matth. 18: 3.

J. H. Moore.

In the Waterloo congregation, Iowa, June 26th, FRANKLIN, infant son of brother Cornelius and sister MILLER; aged one year 0 months and 15 days. Funeral services by brother Henry Gochnour, and the writer.

C. P. L. Roberts.

In Benton county, Iowa, June 27th, ELIZABETH BUSLER, infant daughter of friend Wm. and sister Catharine Busler; aged 1 year and 28 days. Funeral preached by the brethren. Text Matthew 19: 13, 14.

At some place, July 12th, ZENAS, infant son of brother and sister Lizzie JOHNSON; aged 11 months and 14 days. Funeral services by the brethren. Text Rev. 14: 13.

W. J. H. Bauman.

LIST OF MONEYS received for subscription, books, &c.,

P.R.Wrightman	20.00	M. Hady	1.25
D. M. Miller,	12.00	S. Crowel	1.00
Isaac Book	1.50	E. A. Johnson	1.50
M. T. Baer	8.00	F. Forney	1.60
S. T. Bosserman	9.00	A. H.Snowberge r	1.70
Peter Pfoutz	6.00	B. Clemmer .	4.50
Noah G. Neher	.50	Joseph Zook	3.00

Advertisements.

WE will admit a limited number of select advertisements at the following rates

One insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.

No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations

FARM FOR SALE.

In Kosciusco county, Indiana, one mile north of Millwood, on the road between Bremen and Etna, containg 200 acres, 50 acres improved, some marshy, and the balance in timber.

JOHN MOW.

7—34-3ts.

Beers' Expanding Scroll Water-wheel.

[Patented 1808] This wheel is now running with the overshot, in a Flouring Mill, and is using less water than the overshot. Inventor being a Millwright, and having seen and used all the new waterwheels, does not hesitate to say it is the first iron wheel that can compete with the overshot, and is one half cheaper, simpler and better. For farther information address J. L. Beers and Sons, Millwrights and Manufacturer's of wheel shafting and mill gearing of all kinds, continued Sawmill feed and Sawmill irons.

J. L. Beers & Sons

Oddoldmill, Juniata Co. Pa.

A Card.

Drs. D. Fahrney & Son, Uroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.

7-10-1 yr. pd.

A Sure Cure for Dyspepsia.

Upon the receipt of one dollar, I will send the the Medicine, with Directions, by return mail. DAVID ESHELMAN.

MORRSVILLE, PA.

Wm. M. Lloyd, Altoona, Pa. D. T. Caldwell, Tyrone Pa.

LLOYD, CALDWELL & CO.,

BANKERS,

Receive monies on deposit, and pay interest if left 6 months, at 4 per cent per annum, or 5 per cent. if left one year.

Special contracts made with parties acting a administrators, executors, guardians, and persons holding monies in trust. Dealers in every description of Stocks and Bonds.—Government Securities made a speciality.

Gold and Silver bought and sold, and a general Banking business transacted.

TYRONE BANK,

TYRONE, PA.

This Bank, intending to do a general banking business, solicits accounts from Banks' Bankers and others. Collections made on all points. Interest allowed on DEPOSITS left on time. Paper discounted on liberal terms.

Wm. P. Orbison,	D. P. Gwin,
John Scott,	H. G. Fisher,
Thomas Fisher,	J. H. Glazier,
Wm. Dorris,	G. C. Wilkins,
G W. Garretson,	and others.

1780 1871

ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK?

Use Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

CLEANSE YOUR BLOOD!!

An Alterative and Catharic, or Tonic and Purge combined, for diseases arising from bad blood; such as Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Erysipelas, Worms, Chills and Fever, Scrofula, Pimples, Tetter, &c. TRY IT.

Established 1780 in package form. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form which was brought to its present state of preservation and perfection some years later, by Dr. P. Fahrney, Chicago, Ill's, who conducts the trade west of Ohio. Great reputation! Many Testimonials! Ask for that prepared at Waynesboro, Pa, and Chicago, Ill's. Beware of imitations. Genuine retails at $1.25 per bottle. Druggists and Medicine dealers sell it.

Dr. P. Fahrney's "Health Messenger" gives the history and uses of the BLOOD CLEANSER testimonials, and other information, sent free of charge. Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.

WAYNESBORO PA

Universal Guide for Cutting Garments.

By which every family may cut its own garments for men and boys, of twenty six different sizes; for Coats, Pants, Vests, and Shirts, and Ladies' Dress Bodies. Agents wanted to sell State, County, and Family Rights For Particulars address MILLER & QUINN,

Tyrone, Blair Co., Pa.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine, with Drop Feed, new Take-up, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted FIRST CLASS, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted traveling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $200 per month. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. Co.
38 East Union Square, 17th St., New York

BURLINGTON.

Leaving the East and arriving at Chicago or Indianapolis, how shall we reach the West? The best Line is acknowledged to be the C. B. and Q., joined together with the B. & M. Railroad by the Iron Bridge at Burlington, and called the Burlington Route.

The main line of the Route running to Omaha, connects with the great Pacific Roads, and forms to-day the leading route to California. The Middle Branch, entering Nebraska at Plattsmouth, passes through Lincoln, the State Capital, and will this year be finished to Fort Kearney, forming the shortest route across the Continent by over 100 miles.

Another branch of the B. M., diverging at Red Oak, falls into a line running down the Missouri through St. Joe to Kansas City, and all Kansas. Passengers by this route to Kansas, see Illinois, Southern Iowa, and Missouri, and, by a slight divergence, can see Nebraska also.

Lovers of fine views should remember the Burlington Route, for its towns "high-gleaming from afar"—its tree-fringed streams—its rough bluffs and quarries—its corn-ocean stretching over the prairies further than y can reach.

Land-buyers will be sure to remember it, for they have friends among the two thousand who have already bought farms from Geo. S. Harris, the Land Commissioner of the B. & M. R. R. at Burlington, Iowa, or among the four thousand home-steaders and pre-emptors who last year filed claims in the Lincoln Land Office, where "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm."

SHORT HAND WRITING.—Students of Phonography and all others who are interested in the art can obtain instruction books Send stamp for price list and tracts.
"AMERICAN PHONETIC DEPOT.
TYRONE, PA.
J. S. THOMAS, & CO.

WHOLESALE GROCERS
and
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
No. 205 RACE ST. ABOVE 3RD, PHILADELPHIA,
N. B. Country Produce taken in exchange for goods or sold on commission.

CABINET MAKING & UNDERTAKING

The undersigned keeps on hand and manufactures to order all kinds of Furniture. He is also neatly fitted out for conveying the dead to their last resting place.

Manufacturer of the Common Sense Dasher Washing Machine. Shop at the Cross Roads, near Warrior's Mark, Pa.
JAMES S. COX.

A Washing Machine may be seen and purchased at this office. v6n4Stf.

BOOKS
GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL
For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price, $4.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol., $2.25. Indispensable.

Life at Home; or the Family and its Members – Including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed. The Altar in the House, etc. By Wm. Aikman. $1.50;

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. THOMPSON. Fancy Cloth. $1.00.

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand-book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners, with a Chart for recording the sizes of the different Organs of the Brain, in the Delineation of Character, with upwards of 170 Engravings. Muslin, $1.25.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50;

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By W. PITTINGER. $1.50.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Beautifully Illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth, gilt, beveled boards. Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth. 75 cents.

Any of the above sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

The Phrenological Journal, An Illustrated. First-Class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50, or with the Pious Youth, for $3.00. We commend the JOURNAL to all who want a good Family Magazine, and who does not?

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and state written in unmistakable letters, and address[illegible] PITTINGER, Tyrone Pa

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING

One copy, post paid	0.75
12 copies, post paid	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	$0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN & ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid	$1.00
Per dozen,	10.30

Turkey Morocco, Ger. & Eng.

One copy, post paid,	1,25
Per dozen "	13.30

Plain Single German

One copy, post paid	.50
Per dozen" "	$5.50

The Christian Harp, containing 32 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

COMPANION Volume 8, bound post paid,	$2.70
Reserved at the office,	2.25
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express,	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	.60
German & English Testaments,	.75

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25

32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION. 25

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Certificates &c.

Marriage Certificate, per doz., post paid, 0.30
CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP. Per doz, 0.20
TRACTS.—RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE, 12 pages five cents single copy; thirty cents a doz.

All orders should be accompanied with the money, and the name of person, postoffice county & state written in unmistakable letters.

THE PIOUS YOUTH
A MONTHLY PUBLICATION
Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.
One dollar a year in advance.

THE
Christian Family Companion
Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements; that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
TYRONE, PA.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum

VOLUME VII. TYRONE, PA. TUESDAY, AUG. 29, 1871. NUMBER 35.

Selected by G. W. ENGLISH, SR.

Home of the Soul.

I will sing you a song of that beautiful land,
The far away home of the soul;
Where no storms ever beat on that heavenly strand,
While the years of eternity roll.

Oh! that home of the soul, in my visions and dreams,
Its bright, jasper walls I can see;
'Till I fancy but thinly the veil intervenes,
Between that fair city and me.

That unchangable home is for you and for me,
Where Jesus of Nazareth stands;
The King of all kingdoms forever is he,
And he holdeth our crowns in his hands.

There the great trees of life in their beauty do grow,
And the river of life floweth by;
And no death ever enters that city you know,
And nothing that maketh a lie.

Oh! how sweet it will be in that beautiful land,
So free from all sorrow and pain;
With songs on our lips and harps in our hands.
To meet one another again."

Milroy, Pa.

For the Companion.

God's Time.

Time is allotted to man in this life for various purposes; but the one great design seems to be to serve God and prepare the soul for the entering into that future state of being to which all are destined, and toward which every rolling year is bearing its millions of living beings, like the ocean billow bears its foam crest to dash it to pieces at the base of some mighty Gibraltar. And while time divides into past, present, and future—yesterday, to-day, and to-morrow,—one gone to dwell where eternal ages dwell, the other yet resting in the invisible future, the moment, to-day, is ours to live in, to labor in, to sicken and die in—all that is given us, all with which we have to do, till we rush into that state where time changes his grey locks for the bloom of youthful eternity.

The present, then, is the all important time to us—the time that must make us happy or render us miserable to eternal ages. The present, is the golden moment—the gold dust of all moments. For this, then, as for all other gifts of God, we will be held to an impartial account for its improvement or misimprovement.

How many minds might be stored with useful information, did we but spend the fleeting moments in reading something useful, instead of strolling about in the evening, and, by unnecessary exposure, in a great measure ruining both body and mind: wasting the energies which God has bestowed upon us for nobler purposes than the mere sportive pleasures of a youthful dream! While time is thus wasted by some, how many of that same class do we sometimes hear saying "I have no time to peruse the pure word of God, no time to study God's word!" But they have plenty of time to read the light trash of the day that is flooding our tables and libraries. No time to give to God, and still a superfluous abundance to waste the strength of the body, impair the mind, ruin the soul, and make your bed in hell!

Dear young man or young lady, beware! the recording angel is writing in the roll book of memory, and you must meet it in the day of God's fiery indignation. And how many of us who profess to love the Lord and to be walking in the light, acknowledging time to be God's great gift to the human race, give him very little in return, either as time directly devoted to his service, or any of its acquisitions in aid of his work in spreading abroad the light in which we profess to walk.

Oh! we seem to have so little time to give to God, and yet he gives us all time! Sometimes we have time enough to devote the sabbath to his worship and the improvement of the spiritual man. We meet with those frequently who labor so hard during the week that, when the sabbath comes, they are so fatigued with the toils and cares of six days, that they are utterly unable to compose the mind for anything good! Whether this is in harmony with God's design in the division of time or not, we will let the friendly reader judge. Others again are able to follow the carnal toils of the world for six days; but when God's sacred day calls for praise and prayer, to go to the house of God and wait on him in the holy assembly of his saints, they yawn and gasp as if near their latter end. Ask them whether they are going up to the house of the Lord, and they will sigh, and, with thousands of imagined aches and pains, answer you: "I am not able to go to-day: you must do without me." And the minister who has wrestled in prayer and tears that he might have a sweet word of counsel for them, must speak his message to their empty seat, or content himself to see the face of a stranger in their seat. When Monday morning dawns, bright and early they are ready for the pursuit of the world, till sabbath again dawns and paralyzes their strength. Others we meet with, again, who never can leave their secular toils, to meet with God's people for a few hours on a week day for his service, but are hurried along as though they must even occupy the time he has given them for his service, and in which he has provided special means of grace, in other ways than feasting the soul on heaven's food.

We sometimes ask ourself, Will such careless, worldly professors have time to die when the summons comes? Will they have time to remain in the grave till the trump of God calls them up? Will they have time to rise and come to judgment? Will they have time to stand and hear the Judge say, "Come ye blessed of my Father?" Or are they too much wearied by the toils of earth to obey? Oh! I fear, my dear brethren, if we have no time to give to God here apart from our sabbath devotions, and too weary to make at least an ordinary effort to do our duty, we will be cut short there. But will the careless worldling have time to hear the crash and rush of dissolving worlds? Will he have time to hear the book of doom read to assembled worlds? Yes, the demands of God will then be imperative: none will then refuse when he calls, though they should cry for rocks and mountains to hide them from the wrath of the Lamb.

My dear readers, if we would gain that holy, happy place where God resides and angels dwell, we must remember to run with patience the race which is set before us. If we would escape the perdition where demons dwell and dark despair holds its reign, we must flee from it as Lot fled from burning Sodom. And for all these things God has given us time enough, and only enough. Let us then improve it.

MINNIE WAYNE.

Oakland, Pa.

For the Companion.

Recognition.

In Companion No 31, page 498, a query is asked, by brother Leroy Broyles, whether those who get home to heaven will know those they had been acquainted with while living here on earth. I in my weakness will try to answer this solemn and much disputed question, from a scriptural stand-point, as that is the only source from which we can get undeniable testimony, of things pertaining to the future state of man.

I am constrained to believe through the many testimonies of the Bible, that saints, with all the righteous, shall not only know those after the resurrection with whom they had formed acquaintance on earth, but will also know Jesus, with his redeemed which they never saw in the flesh; such as Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and the holy prophets. I believe farther that we have scripture to prove to us that even the unhappy will be permitted to see and to know the righteous. Here I will give a few of the many testimonies, which the Bible affords, in favor of this answer.

First, we learn from Luke 16: 23, that the rich man saw both Abraham and Lazarus after death, and knew them both.

Again, in Luke 13: 28, "There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust out."

Again Christ tells us (Matth. 12: 41): "The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: * * * the queen of the south shall rise up in judgment with this generation, and shall condem it." Now if they will not know each other, how could there be condemnation brought by the one party upon the other? Let this suffice for the sinner.

For the righteous John would say: "And it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him." 1 John 3: 2. And Paul says: "We look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body. Phil. 3 : 21. Now I believe Christ knows every man and every woman ; and Paul says ; "Now we see through a glass darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known." When that which is perfect is come, then our knowledge, and our all will be perfect: our judgment also will be perfect, or else the saints would be disqualified to judge the world, much less qualified to judge angels, as Paul saith, 1 Cor. 6 : 2, 3.

When man was created in God's likeness, he had an extensive mind, or knowledge : he knew all God's creatures, and could name them all; even when God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept; when God, made the woman and brought her unto Adam, he now recognized her at once and names her, with God's whole intent in woman. And if man before the fall knew all this, and had knowledge enough to know God's creation, we will look for no less in him when once fully redeemed, from the last enemy, which is death ; when we can all rejoice together, in the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

JOHN FORNEY, SR.

Thy Will be Done.

Through the long, lonely hours of the night, a mother sat at the bedside of her suffering child, and the grey, morning light, heralding another day of pain and anxiety, found her a faithful watcher, still at her post, tenderly striving, by every means that love could invent, to soothe and quiet the restless sleeper ; now gently smoothing the rumpled pillow, and moistening the parched lips, and now bathing the flushed cheeks and heated forehead, while her tears fell thick and fast, as ever and anon she paused for a moment to pass her hand caressingly over the tangled curls, and imprint a kiss, so full of pity and affection, so fraught with sympathy and mother-love, upon the fair brow of the unconscious boy. He was an only son—a widowed mother's only earthly treasure, and perhaps more dearly beloved because of the three little mounds on the hill-side, each with its marble slab, marking the spot where, with bleeeding heart, she had resigned a baby form to mother-earth. Perhaps more tenderly cherished, that the strong arm of the husband and father had been removed, leaving her, frail and delicate, alone to brave the world's fierce strife, sole guardian and protector of her orphan boy. Dark and gloomy the future rose up before her, as the clods fell upon the coffined form of the loved and honored dead ; dark and gloomy, with but a single ray of light to beckon her on adown the thorny path, where the trembling feet must now walk unaided. Drear and desolate the home to which the mourner returned, and took up the burden of a now weary life, and fervently she prayed that the widow's God might direct and strengthen her in the discharge of her duties to the fatherless babe. Her prayer was answered, and the prattling child had grown a sturdy boy, by nature passionate, yet brave and kind. The opening bud disclosed rare beauties to the parent eye, and the mother's heart was satisfied.

But now the hand of disease was upon her darling, and she trembled lest she should be called again to pass under the rod; lest the one bright star that had illumined her otherwise darkened life, should go out in midnight gloom. "God be merciful," came despairingly from the lips of the stricken creature, as the kind-hearted physician, in a broken voice, informed her of the coming change, endeavoring, as gently as possible, to prepare her mind, in part, for the trying ordeal through which she was about to pass. "Trust him in the hands of the Lord," murmured the good man, reverently ; "He doth all things well."

Again it is night ; but the wail of suffering childhood is unheard, hushed is the mourner's plaint, and a solemn quiet broods over the house. Death, the stern messenger, has again crossed the threshold. In obedience to the summons, the pure spirit of the child has burst its fetters, and soared beyond the reach of mortal ken ; and wearied with her vigils, the mother sleeps, forgetful of her great sorrow, while the tear is yet warm upon her cheek.

The glad voice of her boy is sounding in her ear. She sees him as erst he sported, full of life and joy ; watches jealously over the youth, upon whose brow the seal of manhood is set, lest temptation should ensnare his unwary feet, lest sin should mar his spotless fame ; sees him, deaf to her entreaties, he mingles with the low and vile, in den of infamy ; hears the brutal oath, and sees the glittering steel, as in the frenzy of intoxication his hand is raised against a fellow-man ; visits him in his solitary cell, where, heart-sick and alone, he must pass the residue of his young life, in expiation of his crime ; and listens to his fearful ravings, as he pleads vainly for pardon, and curses the day of his birth. She can endure no more. Her brain reels, and terrified, she awakes. It was all a dream ! And falling upon her knees, beside the lifeless form of her beautiful boy, the chastened spirit of the mother bowed submissively to the Divine decree, as she meekly murmured, "Not my will, oh, God, but Thine, be done."—E. D. E.—in People's Lit. Com.

For the COMPANION.

Baptism.

"And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water." Matth. 3: 16.

For the example of Christ and an account of his baptism, see Matth. 3: 13–17, and Mark 1: 9–11. In Matthew the account runs thus: "Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan unto John, to be baptized of him. But John forbade him, saying, I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me? And Jesus answering said unto him, suffer it to be so now; for thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness. Then he suffered him. And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water; and lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him; and lo, a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased."

By Mark it is narrated thus: "And it came to pass in those days, that Jesus came from Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan. And straightway coming up out of the water, he saw the heavens opened, and the Spirit like a dove descending upon him. and there came a voice from heaven, saying, Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased."

Here, in these inspired narratives, it is said that Jesus was baptized of John in Jordan; and when he was baptized, he went up straightway out of the water. These expressions make it very plain that Jesus was immersed, and not sprinkled, by John in Jordan. This has been honorably confessed by Calvin and others. Calvin says: "Here we perceive how baptism was administered among the ancients: for they immersed the whole body in water." (Com. on Matth. 3: 23: Acts 8: 23.)

The phraseology used in the above cited scriptures, seems to forbid the thought that Jesus was sprinkled of John in Jordan. Was it ever known that any of our pedobaptist brethren went down into a river to sprinkle or pour water in the administration of the ordinance of baptism? Surely not. Nor should we have heard of going down into the water and coming up out of the water, if John and the apostles had administered the sacred ordinance by sprinkling or pouring. How strange it would sound to say, Jesus went down into Jordan and was sprinkled of John! but nothing could be more intelligible and natural than to say, Jesus went down into the water and was immersed by John in Jordan.

But to evade the force of this strong and convincing argument, flowing from the example of our Lord, in favor of immersion, it is alleged by some, that the Greek preposition apo means from, and that the passage ought to be rendered, "And Jesus when he was baptized went up straightway from the water. And again it is said the prepositions en and eis translated in and into may be rendered by at, unto, &c. But then we would ask, where has there ever been a good translator of the Bible who thus translated these prepositions. Luther, Doddridge, Van Ess, the translators of our English Bible, and many others, who have given us the best translations of the sacred scriptures, have all rendered apo "out of," en "in" and eis "into." Certainly these men understood the original better than our modern quibblers and quack-critics.

There are others, again, who, finding that this kind of desperate caviling, or fruitless criticism, will not save their sinking cause, and who, like drowning men will catch at anything to save themselves, tell us that our Lord was not baptized as an example to his followers; but that John thereby consecrated or set him apart to his priest's office, and that the consecrating or separating act under the law, was always by sprinkling or pouring. In reply to this vague opinion we would say, it is nowhere said that Jesus was consecrated a priest by baptism. This is a mere supposition: it cannot be proven.

Besides, Jesus Christ was a priest after the order of Melchisedec, and not after the order of Aaron. (Heb. 7: 17.) Now, Melchisedec was not consecrated or set apart to his office as a priest by baptism; nor were any belonging to the Levitical priesthood thus brought into office. The regular way of installing a priest under the law, was, as we read Numbers 8: 5–22, by the usual ceremony of purifying, and not by baptism. Baptism was never practiced on such occasions.

But "Jesus," it is said, "came from Galilee to Jordan unto John, to be baptized of him." This baptism was no priest-making ordinance. It was from heaven and was chiefly designed to manifest the Messiah to men; and hence we hear John say: "And I knew him not; but that he should be made manifest to Israel, therefore am I come baptizing with water." Since, therefore, Christ is declared a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec, and as Melchisedec received no consecration to the priesthood save his appointment of God, and as the priests under the Mosaic law were never set apart to their office by baptism, we cannot agree with those who explain our Lord's baptism as a mere act of separation to the priest's office.

What violence party-men will frequently do to explain precepts and precedents given us in the Scriptures, in order to support their own favorite systems!

But we observe a further argument in favor of immersion from the practice of the apostles and the primitive churches. As the apostles of Jesus Christ were to form and organize his visible church, our blessed Lord continued with them after his resurrection forty days, speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God. Among other subjects, baptism was doubtless fully explained to them. Therefore when they entered on their mission to preach, teach, and baptize, a part of their teaching would consist in pointing out the nature design, mode, and subjects of baptism. The word baptism throughout the whole of the New Testament signifies immersion only. John and Philip administered by immersion; and the Lord Jesus Christ himself went down into the water, and being immersed by John in Jordan, he straightway came up out of the water. And as the Savior, the great head of the church, in his commission used the word baptism, to immerse, in preference to those words which signify to wash, pour, or sprinkle; and as the apostles themselves when speaking of this ordinance invariably used the same word (immersed,) we may certainly conclude that immersion was the only mode used by the churches they planted, and that it continued unchanged for some time.

The design of baptism is, to represent the burial and resurrection of Christ, and, by consequence, the ultimate resurrection of the body at the last day. That a burial and resurrection are represented by baptism, seems quite clear from Rom. 6: 4, Col. 2: 12. Now as none can properly be said to be buried unless put under ground, or covered over with earth, so none can properly be said to be baptized, but such as are immersed or put under water; as nothing short of this can be a representation of the burial and resurrection of Christ, and ours with him.

A right understanding of baptism may assist us to comprehend the passage in 1 Cor. 15: 29, "Else what shall they do who are baptized, for the dead if the dead rise not at all? Why are they then baptized for the dead! Baptism was undoubtedly observed by the Corinthians; and the apostle argues from their own practice; as though he had said: "What do ye mean by baptism, if the dead rise not at all? why, then, are you baptized for, or with reference to, the dead?—why do ye keep up a figure or representation of a resurrection from the dead, if the doctrine be not true? If there be no resurrection, baptism is a mere, idle, insignificant ceremony; but we are all aware that baptism represents the burial and resurrection of Christ."

SILAS HOOVER.

Berlin, Pa.

For the Companion

Remarks.

The point under consideration is in the 18th verse of the 18th chapter of Matthew. The verse reads: "Verily I say nnto you, whatsoever ye shall bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." We think this verse is generally misunderstood, and will give our views. When people are initiated into the church they make a covenant, they are married to the church and unto Christ. This we consider the binding part, being bound to the church on earth and to Christ in heaven by a covenant; and hence they are amenable to the church so long as they are bound. They are not at liberty to do anything contrary to the rules or order of the church, which people who are not bound thereto are at liberty to do: hence they are not loose. But when one violates the law of God, against the church, he breaks his covenant, and is no longer bound, but his claim to the church and to Christ ceases, and the church in disowning, or expelling him, only loosens him from the obligations of membership. But when a church council out of envy, or on the strength of false accusations, disowns or expels a member, his covenant not having been broken, he is not loosed in heaven. These are my views, wishing to be corrected if wrong. JAS. Y. HECKLER.

Harlemsville, Pa.

For the Companion.

Hints to Preachers.

Ye ministers of the Gospel, ye chosen of God, permit your unworthy servant to approach you with a few plain hints. The salvation of the human family is your interest,—the success of the minister and his advancement, the laity's desire.

The salvation of fallen humanity too, is, or should be, the concern of every lay-member.

Therefore, ye ministers of the glorious Gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, we come to you in plain language, to inform you of what we think will tend to advance the cause of Christ, and thus recompense your labors. We know the minister labors hard, but we also believe that he can labor in such a manner that his labors will be more appreciated.

One fatal error is committed in seeking popularity. We don't want popular preachers. Our fraternity does not demand such; and the great Head of the Church, Jesus Christ, does not. Though "His fame went throughout all the land"; though he, with unfaltering steps traveled across hill and dale, and upon the bed of the mighty deep itself, we believe he was one of those old fashioned preachers, who preach as they are moved by the Holy Spirit, and not by popularity. Hence if you would be an humble instrument in the service of the Most High; one that will tend to pull down the strongholds of Satan and build up the walls of languishing Zion, keep thyself in the channel of humility. Insist on plainness of apparel; but first free thyself from all superfluity. Some preachers insist on the old order (this they should), and yet in the warmest weather wear a fancy necktie, or some other useless ornament. Still they claim to be in order, simply because they in other respects are uniformed soldiers of Christ. O ye ministers of the Gospel, ye ambassadors of Christ, hold to the old order by opposing all superfluity, whether it be in apparel, or in the use of tobacco, alcohol, &c.

You cannot put too much stress on the words "costly array," and "unnecessary apparel." But should some of the lambs of the fold of Christ not be as consistent as they ought to be, deal gently with them; knowing that many may yet grow in grace and a knowledge of the truth as it is Jesus. You perhaps have labored hard to get them into the fold of Christ. Then encourage them, and rebuke them not too severely. Chastisement is not always worth more than admonition. Do not think the young and tender plants, after being taken from nature's wild and barren soil can be transplanted into the vineyard of the Lord to grow and flourish without being nourished by the tender care of the church of Christ.

And in regard to the conversion of the sinner, let me entreat you, as one who can call vividly to memory the droppings of the gospel falling upon a penitent soul, to wield the sword with true courage. Bind on the whole armor of faith and righteousness. "Having your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace," "fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life," that ye may win soldiers to Christ. Encourage sinners to "flee the wrath to come." Tell them the great inducements offered them in the gospel. Tell them of heaven and its happiness. Tell them Jesus died. Tell them salvation is free. Tell them the duty, yea, the blessed privilege, of being an heir of glory. And, oh, above all else, tell them to "repent for the kingdom of God is at hand." But in all this keep as calm as circumstances will admit.

We believe there are great inducements offered; hence hold forth both crown and cross. Tell them of the happiness they may expect as well as trials they must endure. By so doing you will help them to count the cost. This should always be done; for if the minister does not help the sinner to count the cost, Satan will, and his calculations of course are upon the cross alone. He holds forth the dark side and thus keeps his servants in the dark. Then persuade sinners to look at the bright side of eternity. After telling them of the trials they must encounter, the difficulties they must surmount in order to be valiant soldiers of the cross, tell them of the tranquil scenes of immortality. Talk to them about Heaven's dazzling beauty. Look with an eye of faith right into glory. Take poor sinners while you have their earnest attention, and lead them where they can have a peep at the celestial city — Show them its pearly gates, its diamond walls, its golden streets, and its pure and crystal waters of life. Ah! yes, show them the blessed inhabitants of that holy city. Talk freely to them of that bright company. Tell them they have many friends there in the society of white-robed angels, and that all the holy prophets and apostles are there. Yes, tell them that Jesus is there, too, and that his soft hand, his once bleeding hand, is staying the sword of vengeance, that mercy may yet have here free reign in order that sinners may repent and enter that narrow path which leadeth to true joys on high. Tell them how you would like to meet those plain old prophets, apostles, and the blessed Savior himself, and that you would like to have them go along and dwell in that holy sphere, in peace and harmony throughout the ceaseless ages of eternity.

F. M. Snyder.

For the Companion.

Emigrant Missionaries.

Reading an article in No. 22, current volume, in correspondence department, asking some explanation,—I think he, at least has some dark things on his mind, relative to the sending of brother D. M. H., to Michigan, upon the request of brother F. P. Lœhr, bringing this under the head of Missionary. Likely the Middle District of Penna. termed it so.—The only thing that I can see that looks anything like missionary business is, the money arrangement, &c. Let this be as it may, it matters not what they christened it at said meeting, the writer then refers to the Indiana brethren; and from there he comes to the Ohio brethren, that are living in the northern part; and from there to the Western District of Penna. Here is where I am trying to labor in word and doctrine. As for Indiana and Ohio I have nothing to say; they are of age, let them speak if they feel like doing so.

Now, then, to Western Penna. we will turn our attention for a little while. Brother M. says:—"Also the Western part of Pennsylvania, west of the Allegheny Mountains, has ministering brethren enough and to spare, and these would be nearer at hand, to assist the brother if necessary."

I am pretty well acquainted in this district, and I must confess that I cannot find the spare ones; in truth, we have not quite enough to send out to visit the spare places in said district where the brethren's doctrine is not known. If we must send emigrant missionaries among them, I am fearful it will be some time before they become acquainted with our doctrine. But if the churches are willing to bear theheat and burden, we might interchange and establish churches among them.—This thing of having a brother to sell out and leave a good market, a good productive soil, and move to where there is no market nor good land, is more than I think any religious people can ask of their ministers. "Yes, but that is not what we meant; the West is open, where there is plenty of good land and markets." True, but there are more places than "the west," to be attended to; and I am fearful that by stopping the 10 cent tax, or such a matter, these poor brethren in poorer climates would have to shift as best they could; that is, if the emigration principle is to be adhered to.

Let us look into this system.—What has emigration for its object? is it spreading the gospel? I fear not. I have conversed with these migrated missionaries. "This must have been quite a cross at first, to leave your brethren and sisters all back and come out here into the wilds."

"Yes, it was, but down east the the price of land is high and my family large; there I could not possibly have helped my children to any land; here it was cheap, and by selling my land in the east at a very high figure I could by a section for each of my children, and besides, help in setting up the standard of the church of the Brethren, whose motto is "good will to all men."

This is the moving cause in most of the cases Well but how is it that they prosper so well in religion or in setting up churches? Let us look at this a little. You go to these newly settled countries and localities where the Brethren have built up churches, and examine into the material with which those churches are composed, and, in nine cases out of ten, you will find that two-thirds of the membership composing the churches, were members before they came there; and a great portion that are there brought out are brethren's children, or some connections. This is not what I call evangelizing the world.

Again, you read the letters that are published, and see if not in nearly all the calls we get the country, with all its advantages, its beauty, &c, are the leading topics. And I am very forcibly impressed that were it not for some of the causes above stated, there would not be so many churches in our western states.

"But we find that, in the days of the apostles, and up to this time, the gospel was spread by emigration." The emigration of the apostles was caused through severe persecutions. I do not remember of reading anything at all of a migration preaching in the apostles' time, unless it was caused by persecution. And so the brethren that crossed the ocean to America, were persecuted, and so may it again come to pass; and if so, then land, its beauty, its cheapness, will not draw us. On the other hand, when the Savior sent his missionaries, when they had finished their work, they came and reported to him that had sent them. See Luke 9: 6—11; and 10: 17. This was the manner in which the Master acted; that is, he sent them, and I presume the apostles acted out the same; and I think I am safe in saying that, if the church does the same at present, she is not far from the order of the Savior and the apostles, and if it even requires a little tax to carry it out.

C. G. Lint.

Dale City, Pa.

Work's of Darkness.

What works can we be sure are those of darkness? Now, were I to give the most positive answer of the gospel, to the above interrogation, I should at once be branded by some as having an evil spirit; so, as my object is, if possible, to do good, I shall try in words more tender to reach my aim.

I must now bring up a few plain questions, and first, I would ask. How can those be in the light, who claim that some of the most positive commands of the gospel are nonessential? Is it not the most gross darkness, thus to deny the efficacy of the requirements of the Savior? Can it be, that any who ever began to be obedient, can so far fall away as to look on the traditions of men, as taught by the popular churches, as being any other than the works of darkness? "But," says one, "there are so few in the Christian Church, that are living in obedience" Granting this to be true, I would ask, when is it that we begin to see so much wrong and imperfection in the brethren? I for one, must say in answer, that it is when my feet are going astray in some direction. With some it is in the way of becoming enamored of the easy way in which the members of other churches go on in the world. Yet, alas! we forget the words of the Lord of life, when he said: "In the world ye shall suffer persecution," etc. The promise following is only to such as endure to the end. I for my own part, often as I go astray, am not in the least inclined to be enticed from the way of life in that way; yet with all the pity I feel toward them that "teach for doctrines the commandments of men," still I have often been regretful in view of the course that I have taken against such teaching. It is surely right and justifiable for those in the light to hate the doctrine of those in darkness. "But," says one, "you are then hating your fellow-beings." To such I would say, God hates sin, but not the sinner; so I claim that his people may hate the sins of the works of darkness, and yet truly love the souls of those engaged therein. It is most truly a source of deep sorrow to me to see a man evince the deepest earnestness, and also the ability that would make him useful in proclaiming the truth, spending his time in teaching the commands of poor, frail man. It is most assuredly a source of joy to Satan, to see men thus deluded and blindly leading the blind, that they may together fall into the ditch.

In conclusion, I would say, dear brethren let us be very careful that we do not uphold or in any way countenance the works of darkness; but rather reprove them. We must, however, learn the art of reproving in true love, and not in anger. I feel to urge upon all, with the most sincere and earnest desire for the well-being of all God's chosen people, that we should be a separate people, and not assimilated with, or in anywise enticed by, those easy, downward floating arks devised by man.

I. N. Crosswaite.

The greatest pleasure in life is love; the greatest treasure, contentment; the greatest possession is health; the greatest cure is sleep; and the greatest medicin is a true friend.

Christian Family Companion

Tyrone City, Pa., Aug., 29, 1871.

The Lord's Supper, No. 5.

In addition to the evidence already adduced to show that the Agapae were generally observed, not only in the apostolic age, but also for several centuries thereafter, we make the following extract from the Debate on the Lord's Supper, between Quinter and McConnell, pages 188, 189.

"Neander, in his 'History of the Christian Religion and Church during the Three First Centuries,' says: 'After the model of the Jewish Passover, and the first institution of this rite, the celebration of the Lord's Supper originally was always joined with a general meal, and both together formed one whole; and because the communion of believers with the Lord and their brotherly communion with each other, were represented by it, the two together were called, the Supper of the Lord (deipnon ton kurion, or deipnon kuriakon), or the love-feast (agape). It was the daily rite of Christian communion in the first church at Jerusalem. In Acts ii: 46, we are most probably to understand both together under the phrase klan arton. We find both connected together in the first Corinthian church, and one is inclined to suppose that this was also the innocent, simple meal of the Christians, of which Pliny speaks in his report to the Emperor Trajan.'

"I may here remark that Neander, with many other eminent men, believed that the communion was originally taken daily.

"Coleman, in his 'Ancient Christianity Exemplified,' says: 'After the example of the Jewish Passover, and of the original institution, the Lord's Supper was at first united with a social meal. Both constituted a whole, representing a communion of the faithful with their Lord, and their brotherly communion with one another. Both together were called 'The Supper of the Lord' (deipnon ton kurion or deipnon kuriakon), or 'The Supper of Love' (agape).'

"Cave, in his 'Primitive Christianity,' says: 'We come last of all to consider the manner how the eucharist was celebrated in the ancient church. But before we describe that, we are to take notice that after the service of the catechumens, and before the beginning of that of the faithful, at which the eucharist was administered, the custom was to present their offerings, every one according to his ability bringing some gifts as the first fruits of his increase, which was by the minister laid upon the altar, or communion table; none of them then thinking it fit to appear before the Lord empty. Out of these oblations, also, it is probable they took (at least sent provisions extraordinary), to furnish the common feast, which in those days they constantly had at the celebration of the sacrament, where the rich and the poor feasted together at the same table.—These were called agape, or 'love-feasts' (mentioned by St. Jude, and plainly enough intimated by St. Paul), because hereat they testified and confirmed their mutual love and kindness—a thing never more proper than at the celebration of the Lord's Supper.'

"Bingham, in his 'Antiquities of the Christian Church," Book XV, chap. vii, after describing minutely the eucharist and the agape or love-feast, makes the following remark upon the latter: 'From whence it appears that this was a ritual always accompanying the communion.'

"Macknight, in his new translation of and commentary on the Epistles, says, in his notes on 1 Corinthians, xi: 21: "Christ having instituted his supper after he had eaten the passover, his disciples very early made it a rule to feast together before they ate the Lord's Supper. These feasts were called (agapæ, charitates) 'love-feasts.' They are mentioned by Jude, verse 12, as also by some of the ancient writers."'

Such, kind reader, is the testimony offered you; and we feel assured that it is sufficient to convince every one who carefully and candidly examines it, that the primitive Christians, both in and after apostolic times, did observe a full meal, or feast in connection with the Eucharist, or bread and wine. More might be presented, but we would regard it as superfluous, as enough has been given to satisfy those who wish to arrive at a knowledge of the truth. As to the character of the testimony, it is a harmony of sacred and profane history; and is as unimpeachable as can be produced in support of any other proposition: it is precisely the same as would be offered, and, in fact, all that could be adduced, to prove that the ordinance of baptism was observed in and after the apostolic age. If the evidence is reliable in the latter case, (and who dare doubt it?) it is equally so in the former, and no one can be justifiable in rejecting it. If you admit the one you admit the other, and if you deny either you deny both, and we know how to regard you.

That the primitive Christians invariably observed a full meal in connection with the bread and wine, is a well established fact; that they had some observance which they denominated the Lord's Supper, is equally well attested; that this observance was either the bread and wine only, the full meal only, or both taken together as one whole, no one can for a moment doubt; that they sometimes called the full meal, at other times the bread and wine, and again both together, the Lord's Supper no one will assume; and therefore our next point will be to determine if possible, the proper use of the expression.

The reader will remember that the Greek term translated supper, means a full meal, a feast; therefore as the primitive Christians observed such a meal, we assume that the meal, or feast, which they observed was called the Lord's Supper, in accordance with the invariable use of the term deipnon and that the bread and wine which in no wise constituted a full meal, or feast, were not called the Lord's Supper. To establish the correctness of this position, we will now introduce a few arguments.

1. Our first argument shall be based on the primary observance of the Lord's Supper, on the night of its institution—the night before our Lord's crucifixion and death. It was before shown that Christ and his apostles did eat a meal on that night; that the meal which they ate was not the Jewish Passover; that Christ's active observance of the ceremonial code was at an end, and that he then, in that night, instituted ordinances to be observed by his followers. Having washed and wiped the disciples' feet, and when about eating the meal at the close of which the Bread and Wine was instituted, in speaking of the things he was then engaged in he said: "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." At the conclusion of this meal, "He took bread, and gave thanks, and brake it, and gave unto them, saying, This is my body which is given for you: this do in remembrance of me. Likewise also the cup after (Greek meta) supper (deipesai), saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you." Luke 22: 19, 20. This scripture teaches in positive terms that the cup,—that cup which was a part of the Eucharist,—was taken "after supper." Now, as the cup was after supper, it is an indisputable fact, that the cup was no part of the supper. This is as undeniable, as it is, that, "after the sabbath," (Neh. 13: 16,) was no part of the Sabbath. Jesus, in that same night said to his disciples: "After (meta) I am risen again, I will go before you into Galilee." Now just as certain as it is that the going into Galilee here spoken of followed the consummation of the resurrection, and constituted no part of the resurrection, so certain it is that the cup after supper followed the consummation of the supper, and that it formed no part of the supper. From the phrase: "Likewise also the cup after supper," we conclude that the taking of the bread, and the giving of thanks for it, were also after supper, but just at its close; as though it were said:—"He took the bread after supper; 'likewise also the cup after supper." This view is confirmed by the fact that the bread and wine constitute the Eucharist, and as the wine,—one of the elements,—was taken after supper, so we would conclude that the bread,—the other element,—was taken after supper. Then, as the bread was also taken after supper,—it was no part of the Supper.—To sum up this argument, we make this statement: They did have a supper on that night; but both of the elements of the Eucharist were taken after supper and were no part of it; and consequently the Eucharist, consisting of these elements, was no part of the supper. It is, therefore, an incontestable fact, that in the primary observance of the Eucharist, it formed no part of the supper; or, in other words the full meal, which preceded the bread and wine, was called the supper.

2. When Paul was reproving his Corinthian brethren, having mentioned several points of disorder, he censures them for disregarding the original order, which he had delivered to them as he had received of the Lord. The Lord took bread, gave thanks, brake the bread, and said, "Take, eat; this is my body which is broken for you: this do in remembrance of me. After the same manner also he took the cup, when he had supped," &c (1 Cor. 11: 24, 25). "When he had supped," means, when he had eaten supper. The German translation by Luther reads: 'Desselbigen gleichen auch den Kelch, nach dem Abendmahl:' (in like manner also the cup, after the supper); and this agrees exactly with the translation of B. Wilson in his Emphatic Diaglott. This was the order of the original observance at the time of the institution; this order Paul had received of the Lord and delivered to the Corinthians;—but they had disregarded it, and had not set apart a portion of bread and wine, after supper to show forth the Lord's death. The full meal he calls supper (20, 21 verses). If they had observed this supper in order, it would have been the Lord's Supper; but observing it as they did, it was their own supper. It was, however, still a full meal, a supper. But in speaking of the bread and wine, the emblems of the Lord's broken body and shed blood of the Lord, he calls the wine the "cup of the Lord," (verse 27); and the bread and wine, "the Lord's body," (verse 29). In the 10th chapter, Paul speaks of the bread as being "the communion of the body of Christ," and of the wine, or cup as being "the communion of the blood of Christ," (verse 16); hence the bread and wine taken together as one whole, is the Communion of the body and blood of Christ. But this ordinance is nowhere in the inspired record called either Lord's Supper or supper. It is understood therefore, that the Communion, (bread and wine), is not denominated supper by the inspired writers; but Paul determines the proper order to be, first the supper, and then the bread and wine, after they have supped.

3. Let us view this subject in the light of reason. We have among us two observances; but although they are two, one immediately follows the other. The first of these observances is a full meal, and the second consists in partaking a bit of bread and a sip of wine. Now we want names for these observances, and we want appropriate names—such names as will convey to others some idea of the nature of these observances. By the way, we must not omit to state that our observances are limited to the evening of the day. The meal is observed in memory of the last meal eaten with an esteemed friend and in anticipation of another in the future which he has promised that we shall enjoy. The second, consisting of a small bit of bread and a sip of wine, is to commemorate the sufferings that our friend endured for us, thus keeping alive within us as appreciation of his love to us, and of our interest in him. The first we have said was a full meal and it is observed in the evening. Now what would be the most appropriate name that we could give to this evening meal? We think nine of every ten would say: Call it supper; and the tenth would say, Amen. But we must not conclude too hastily. Perhaps the name Supper would be more suitable for the other observance. What do you say, brethren? Brother A says:—"Although the second is also observed in the evening, it is in nowise a full meal; but the word supper means a full meal, eaten in the evening; now, therefore, as our first observance is just such a meal, I move to call that supper which is a supper." Brother B says: "I endorse brother A's sentiments; and think it would be very unreasonable to call that supper which is no supper at all, and withhold the name from that which is; therefore I second brother A's motion." The motion is put, and is carried unanimously; and who will dare to say that the decision is not reasonable? Not one. Well, that is our case exactly. The meal and the bread and wine were observed in connection in the evening; deipnon is an evening meal; and therefore reason decides, the fitness of things demands, that the full meal be called by that name, if it be given to either of the observances.

From the foregoing it will be seen that in the primary observance the full meal was called Supper; Paul also speaks of the full meal as being the supper; reason says the full meal ought to be called Supper; and consequently we maintain that the full meal was called supper.

It is proper here to remark that some of the authorities quoted state, that "both together were called, 'The Supper of the Lord.'" To this we have no objection when one name is used to imply both; neither have we any objection to using the phrase, "breaking of bread," which properly applies to the bread and wine, to imply both. But we do object to designate the meal exclusive of the bread and wine, by the phrase, "breaking of bread"; and we do as emphatically object to calling the bread and wine Supper, to the exclusion of the full meal. If one of the ordinances only is to be designated, let the appropriate name be used, as we have shown is the case in the inspired record. So we use the terms among us. When we speak of the Lord's Supper or Love-feast, we imply the bread and wine; and when we speak of our Communion we imply the Supper. But when we speak of either exclusive of the other we use its proper name.

Passover and the Lord's Supper.

When we entered upon our articles on this subject, we called attention to it, and invited friendly criticism. A few more articles will conclude the series; and as we have received no criticisms either friendly or otherwise, we call attention to the subject again, but in another form.

Feeling deeply in earnest in this matter ourself, and being encouraged also by others, we purpose to publish our essays, with some amendments, in book form, as soon as circumstances will allow. With this purpose before us, we once more call upon all who feel interested in this subject, to review our articles carefully, prayerfully, critically, and impartially; and if, after such an examination, you have any criticisms to offer, write them out as briefly, plainly, and pointedly as you can—just as you would be willing to have them appear over your full name, accompanied by our own answer to them.

If you have more than one criticism, do not confound them, but keep them separate, and number them, First, Second, &c.

If there should be any criticisms or objections which are not already sufficiently ventilated, they will appear over the signature of the critic, in an appendix to the book, accompanied by our own answer thereto.

If this subject is worthy of your attention, dear brethren, now is the time to give it, as we wish to hear from you by the first of October.—Any suggestions will be cheerfully and thankfully received.

☞ Be particular to address all criticisms, objections, or suggestions, to the Assistant Editor of the Companion.

J. W. Beer.

Longevity.

An old man by the name of Jacob Fournais, died, at Kansas City, on Saturday, August 12th, inst, at the age of one hundred and thirty-four years, as near as it can be fixed from the best evidence. He is said never to have been sick, and only a few minutes before he died was walking about the room. He said to the family in the morning that he would "never see the sun go down again," and sure enough before sunset the old man was dead.

The Almanac.

What you mean to do for the Almanac for 1872, do now. By all means send the names of, and addresses of all ministers who are not in this year's Almanac. Do it now.

Answers to Correspondents.

D. D. Horner. Your time had expired with No. 17. We have entered your name for a year from that time. We have no remembrance of the letter you speak of, but have filled your order.

Orange Blossoms, Fresh and Faded—By T. S. Arthur. Philadelphia : J. M. Stoddart & Co.

For more than a quarter of a century Mr. Arthur has maintained a prominent and eading posltion among authors. His books have had a wide circulation both in America and Europe. His writings possess peculiarities that endear them to all good people.—They are full of beautiful truths, and are designed to awaken and keep alive the tenderest affections of our nature, to strengthen virtue, to increase domestic joy, and to sweeten home life by the abiding presence of mutual trust and love.

In this new volume he gives us a series of life-pictures drawn with that skill and power which is peculiarly his own : never weak, always deeply in earnest and frequently intense in his dramatic effects, he has brought to the subject here discussed his subtlest discrimination and highest effort. Men and women bound by the conjugal tie are brought before the reader and he looks down into their lives and sees the pulses of feeling—sees in some cases the "little foxes" at work "spoiling the tender vines," and in other cases the peace and rest and joy of married hearts.

At this time, when so many talented writers are putting forth false and pernicious views of marriage, thereby doing untold social injury. "ORANGE BLOSSOMS," comes as a true and healthy book, and its wide circulation cannot fail to do a large amount of good.

The volume is handsomely printed and elegantly bound, and contains a fine steel portrait of the author besides many illustrations from original designs by Schuessle and Bensell. It is sold only by agents. To active men and women it offers a rare chance for a lucrative business, and we would advise all wanting employment to apply to the publishers for an agency.

CORRESPONDENCE

Letter from D. M. Holsinger. No. 4.

Dear Brethren and Sisters : My last report was dated at Minonk, Ill. We arrived at Washington, Iowa, on the 8th, at 11.30 A. M. Were met there by brother Daniel H. Snyder, and conveyed to the friends in Keokuk county, and visited among them till Sunday, the 13th. Had one meeting a day during our stay with them.

On Sunday a council was announced for settling serious difficulties. The church requested me to be present, and to have more help; and as we expected to stop with Elder Christian Long on our way to Guthrie county, I was instructed to bring him along.

We were taken to Marengo, on Monday, the 14th, and that night, about 11 o'clock, arrived at brother Long's. Next day he and his companion took us to our friends in Guthrie county. On the 16th I was brought back to brother Long's bynoon, leaving my companion with the friends in Guthrie. Brother Lgon and I came on to Dallas las Centre; there took cars, and with considerable perplexity and trouble, made our way to Brooklyn, where we were met by Elder J. S. Snyder, and conducted to his house for the balance of the night. Next day, the 17th, he took us in his buggy, and conveyed us to South English, Keokuk county. Distance about 35 miles.

On the 18th and 19th, we sat in council, and about 6 P. M. on the latter day, we closed our labors, as far as we could learn to the satisfaction of all. On yesterday, 20th, brother Snyder brought us back again to his place, where we enjoyed a good night's rest, and such other accommodations necessary to make the traveler comfortable. Now I am seated in the house of his mother, where we came on a visit this forenoon, she being in quite feeble health. At noon we expect taking the cars again at this place for Dallas Centre, where I expect to meet my companion again, and then start for Waterloo, &c.

Our health has been good since I last wrote, for which great blessing we still try to be thankful to the Giver of all good. The friends and members among whom we visited, are generally well; and we enjoyed ourselves very well in their society.

Farewell for the present.

Continue to remember us in your prayers. D. M. Holsinger.

Brooklyn, Iowa Aug., 21st.

Brother Holsinger : Please make known, through the Companion, that our address hereafter will be changed from Kansas City, Mo., to Paola, Miami county, Kansas, Box 588.

As many of the brethren may be anxious to hear how we are getting along in the West we will contribute a few items. We were at meeting at brother J. Yoters yesterday, in company with brother Daniel D. Sell. Brother Daniel gave us wholesome instructions; after which brother Eli Yourtee was advanced to the second degree, with tears. Brother Eli now has charge of the little flock in Kansas City. We hope and pray that the Lord will be with him. We truly sympathize with him and hope our brethren will not forget him in their devotions, that he "may be delivered from unreasonable and wicked men; for all men have not faith." We expect to move to our new home on the 24th. We acknowledge our choice to the city was a little Lot like, in a pecuniary point of view. I do not know whether we will, sooner or later, look back; having no certainty of its being destroyed, suppose we are not under a particular command not to look back. We have bought a piece of land in Miami Co., Kansas, and expect to make that our home. What we may accomplish through the prayers of our brethren, is yet in the future. We have involved ourselves, considerably in the purchase of this property; and expect to have to labor hard and use economy to get it paid for. All I have to regret is, that I will not have time to attend to our calling as we would wish, as the people of Miami seem to be anxious to hear the brethren preach. "But I have bought a piece of land, and I hope the Lord will excuse me;" for he that will not provide for his own, and especially for those of his own house, has denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel. The neighborhood we are moving into has afew members,—some four families. The district is known by the name of Pleasant Grove. Bro. James Hellsy is the Elder. The nearest point on the R. R. is Wellsville, 5 mile distant. I have an idea to present to the brotherhood that I have learned by observation since I am in the West, but I will forbear for the present; it may come some future time. This leaves us all reasonably well, thank the good Lord for the same. Our respects to all whom this may concern. Yours Fraternally.

George Myers.

Christ sendeth out at once seventy disciples to work miracles, and to preach: as we read in Luke 10th chapt. It was told them to go their way: behold, I send you forth as lambs among wolves. Carry neither purse, nor scrip, nor shoes: and salute no man by the way; and into whatsoever house ye enter, first say, Peace be to this house." An explanation is desired through the Companion, from the 4th and 5th verses of said chapter.

If Christ commanded those seventy first to say, peace be to this house, why is it not practised among the brethren now? J. E. Bowser.

Abbottstown, Pa.

Brother Henry:—I see in the Companion, Vol. 7, No. 30, a call from Oregon for the preaching of the Gospel there by the Brethren, and a plan to fill the call, which seems to meet my approbation in respect to Christ's commission to the Apostles for the promulgation of the Gospel, more effectually, than the sending of Brethren by taxing the Brotherhood, and have them to preach some weeks at certain points, and then leave for and indefinite period. The spiritual man is in his wants similar to the physical man; and we all know that our bodies need daily refreshments.—So the Spiritual man must frequently be fed with the bread of life.

His plan for obtaining ministerial aid will be found on page 482, in the above No.; and I will here say for one, my part of the fund is ready to assist a brother of the proper qualifications for the Oregon Emigrant family or families. In addition to the above, I suggest that a brother in the full office (Bishop) would be much preferable in my estimation; and I would farther say, that the Church, (for I certainly believe it to be the only authority,) should be guided in the above business by having respect to Acts 6:3, for proving men's qualifications for the Oregon mission.

I will further say to the Brotherhood that I verily believe more should be done for Oregon than brother Kistler asks; and therefore I will propose the following: I will pay ten dollars provided the Brotherhood will raise a fund of one thousand dollars, to aid Emigrant families to move to Oregon; i e. families of the Brethren and Sisters, and provided, farther, that, at least ten families of our church should first be found willing to emigrate to the country before the fund can be drawn for Emigrants. My reason for the above restrictions is this: I am fully persuaded that a colony of Brethren of the proper order and character would have manifold more influence on the community, and would be a great source of comfort and encouragement to such as are inclined sometimes to get, as we call it homesick.

Perhaps some are ready to say such feeble minded people should stay at home. My answer to this is: We have no means whereby to test the ability of men and women to stand such a test, and for this reason I would rather raise a thousand or two dollars and a small colony go at once. And I would further state let us have a free-will offering in this business; and also those persons who intend going west should not be overly much pursuaded to do so. Let there be a perfect will to serve the Lord and the Brotherhood; but let me say to you, Brethren, if any have a better plan for the same end make it known.

Yours fraternally,
JONOTHAN KESSLER.

A Few Words Of Caution.

Brother Holsinger: As you solicit church news for C. F. C., and as I have no objections to offer, unless the flaterer, by the way, may induce or create carnal pride, and thereby create a feeling that the enemy of God and man may take advantage of, and we may become entangled in his snares: as he is ever ready to deceive as Jesus himself has said, if it were possible the very elect. And now, dear brethren, this little preface is given by way of putting us on our guard against pride, when the enemy tempts any one to think more highly of himself than he ought, when he writes or preaches, or holds an argument and gains the victory, or is right apt or eloquent in words, in prayer, so that the people will say (and even the Brethren, and that right before your face) you have done well. We would say, beware of the flaterer! Or when considerable numbers are added to the church, which every God-fearing person is glad to hear and see, there is still danger, as the crown is not promised in the beginning nor in the middle, but he that holds out faithful to the end will be saved. Now I do not wish to be understood that the Christian on his pilgrimage here on earth should not be vigilent and diligent in business, but to caution, that when there is Christian success, those that succeed well receive not or take not the honor to themselves, and thereby grieve their weaker brother who may not be so gifted or fluent in language or manners, and may thereby become discome discouraged. But let him that glorieth glory in the Lord.

Now, after the above considerations I will try in the spirit of meekness and fear, to comply with the solicitation, by saying that the ark is moving slowly in our arm of the church, and a goodly number of dear and blood-bought souls have been added to the church by baptism within the present year; whereby the hearts of many have been made glad, and we hope there was joy in heaven. And what appears the more important and interesting is, that a few weeks ago it was made known that a little female youth wished to start on her pilgrimago the next Sabbath. So when next Sabbath morning came, the father and mother of another family wished their two youngest daughters to get ready to go along to meeting, which they desired to do. But little Mary could not get ready; she had something to tell, and she was so young, so tender, and it went so hard to tell it; but God, who is faithful, and Jesus, who is willing to pardon sinners, gave her grace to reveal it to mother that she wished to go along with Lizzie and be baptized and follow Jesus in the way. So her mother made her desire known to her father and her desire was made known unto the church and the church assented to her wish. So the two young pilgrims set out on their pilgrimage. May the blessing of the good Lord be with them until they reach the celestial city, is our prayer. Both were in their fourteenth year. Last Sabbath a young David set out in his sixteenth year. Many and deep were the impressions upon both occasions, which could be seen by the tears that were shed by old and young; some, the tears of joy, others, no doubt feeling their unsaved state and almost ready to say, "I can hold out no longer, I will surrender." But Oh, the trouble in the way to get ready! and in many, very many cases, there is a more convenient season, until the head becomes white and hoary, and at last it will be said, "The harvest is past, the Summer is ended, and I am not saved!" and all for want of the word, "I am ready."

J. P. LEREW.

Editors Companion:—For reasons which it is unnecessary for me to give here at length, my address will hereafter be changed from Bourbon, to Warsaw, Kosciusko county, Ind., where I will conduct a school for the Brethren under the name of "Pleasant Hill College."

The excellent Railroad facilities, grounds peculiarly appropriate for the location of a school, the desire of the brethren of other districts to take part in it, and many other reasons which would no doubt render satisfaction to the brethren, seem to make the change desirable. Suitable rooms have been procured for school purposes till buildings can be erected, and the fall term will begin September 6, 1871. All who wish to correspond with me, will address me at Warsaw, Indiana.

O. W. MILLER.

Brother Henry:—As we love to hear from all the churches through the Companion, I thought I would give you our church news. Our church is situated in Darke county, Ohio, known as the West Branch, or Palestine church. We are not in as prosperous a condition as we would like to be; although the Lord has not forsaken us. There have been six added by baptism since this year began. We have had some trouble here. The Annual Meeting has appointed a committee to come here. We now appeal to all who have the good of the church at heart, to join us in sending a petition to God, that love and union may again be restored.

SAMUEL BAKER.

Greenville, O.

Editor Companion,

DEAR SIR:

I submit the following to the careful attention of the readers of your highly valued paper, sincerely hoping that it may be of some interest to them.

SECURE A HOME.

"A man with a family should own at least a little home, if it be in his power to make such an acquisition. When a laboring man owns a home, he feels stronger, more confident, more cheerful, much happier, in the midst of all worldly trials, troubles, and temptations, than he would or could feel, if he were without so substantial an anchorage, so to speak, for his purposes, aims and resolutions, affections and aspirations. Money bearing interest and well secured, are all very well in their way, but a home is more sure and safe for the head of a family. A man having a home of his own, can there worship the divine Omnipotence, with none to hinder or make him afraid; and the love, hope and trust of which it will become the center, will, under the blessing of heaven, yield golden fruit through all his years on earth, and finally, when it is the will of the Almighty and everlasting Creator to remove him from time to eternity, if he be prepared, he will have an everlasting and peaceful home in heaven, where he can sing praises to God and the Lamb forever."

Sincerely yours,

B. N. HARDMAN.

To the Elders and Church Clerk of German Baptists, at Myasrtown. Penn'a.:

Dear Brethren:—Having read of you in the American Christian Review, of July 11th, 1871, and being desirous of learning of your doctrine, faith and practice more perfectly, we address you as strangers, yet friends, hoping this may find you, and that you may answer as soon as convenient. From what we learned from the American Christian Review, (which was signed Banner,) we think if you are a humble, spiritual people, that there are thousands in this State that would unite with you. Should you see cause to answer this by writing, sending books, papers, tracts, &c., we will give you names and post office addresses for you to correspond with.

N. B.—My Post office address is Skowhegan, Maine.

Yours, in the bonds of the gospel,

JOHN DENNIS.

As the above has been handed to me by our Elder John Zug, I will try, in the fear, and by the help of the Lord, to answer.

The New Testament is our book of doctrine, discipline, and articles of faith. We profess to believe every thing contained in it. We believe "that all have sinned and come short of the glory of God," Romans 3 : 23, therefore we preach "repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ," Acts 20 : 21, to all those that have come to the years of accountability, Acts 17 : 30. For, "thus it is written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day; and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem" Luke 24 : 46–47."

Peter, with the rest of apostles, started at Jerusalem with the instruction to penitent inquirers: "Repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, Acts 2:38. Any one passing through the foregoing process, becomes changed in mind, heart and will, and of necessity a change of works follow. "Then they that gladly received his word, were baptized," and added unto them.—Acts 2 : 41. Hence we do not consider any one a member until baptized. Infant baptism is practiced no more among us than it was with Christ and his apostles. Reason:—Infants cannot be taught, Mat. 28:19; connot believe, Mark 16:16, and Acts 8 : 37; cannot repent, Luke 24 : 47. Acts 2 : 38; and are not capable of the answer of a good conscience toward God, 1 Peter, 3 : 21, because they know not good from evil—James 4 : 17.

Persons making application for membership, are examined in regard to repentance of their sins and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ; and if considered to be sincere, the applicants are brought before the church—the members present—Acts 10 : 44–48, and instructed in regard to non swearing, (only affirming) non-resisnce, and non-conformity to the world.—Then, generally, after a sermon is preached, Matth. 18 : 10–22 is read to the applicants, in presence of the whole audience, and asked if they are willing to be governed by these gospel rules. When we come to the water, we sing and pray with the candidates; then the minister and candidate both go down into the water; (Acts 8 : 38.) The candidate now kneels, and the following questions are asked:—Dost thou believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and that he has brought from heaven a saving gospel? Answer—I do

Dost thou willingly renounce Satan and all his pernicious ways, and all the sinful pleasures of this world? Answer—I do; dost thou covenant with God in Christ Jesus to be faithful until death? Answer—I do—Then the minister continues: upon this thy confession of faith, which thou hast made before God and these witness, thou shalt—for the remission of thy sins—be baptized in the name of the Father, (immersed, face forward) and of the Son, (immersed face forward), and of the Holy Ghost (immersed face forward.) Then the minister lays his hand upon the head of the candidate, and offers a prayer to God in his behalf. Then the candidate rises out of the water and is received by hand and kiss, (if a brother by the brethren, and if a sister by the sisters, and by the opposite sex only by the hand,) into church fellowship.

Now they are full members of the Church, and remain so long as they conduct themselves according to the gospel; and are privileged to partake with the church of the following:

Whenever a seasonable opportunity presents itself to salute one another with the holy kiss, or kiss of charity; Romans, 16 : 16; 1 Cor. 16 : 20; 2nd Cor. 13 : 12, 1 Thess. 5 : 26; 1 Peter 5 : 14.

When the Lord's Supper is prepared, "to wash one another's feet, John 13 : 4-17; changing around until all are washed; after which follows the eating of the Lord's Supper. By this we understand, not the communion of bread and wine, (because the bread and wine are nowhere in the New Testament writings called the Lord's Supper,) but a real meal—a supper, which we understand the Lord Jesus Christ did eat with his disciples in the same night he instituted the communion; Mat. 26; Mark 14; Luke 22; John 13, and Jude 12 verse calls it the "feast of charity." See also 1 Cor. 11 chap. where Paul reproves them for their disorder in observing the Lord's Supper, and tells them to tarry one for another, &c. After the ceremonies of the Lord's Supper are ended, the breaking of bread or communion comes in. For this purpose we use unleavened bread, (an emblem of Christ's body, which was without sin,) which is baked in flat loaves. An Elder is the proper officer to break these loaves into narrow slices; whilst doing this another minister, generally, makes remarks concerning the sufferings and dying of our Savior. When said Elder has finished his work, the brethren and sisters, respectively, that is, the brethren to the brethren and the sisters to the sisters, unite and pledge themselves one to the other with the Holy kiss of charity, till they are all encircled in a perfect ring, the emblem of love, to be faithful to the Lord, and to one another, in the days of joy as well as in the days of tribulation.

Next in order is the giving of thanks for the bread. Whilst this is being done the members all rise.—Then the brethren break the bread among themselves, and the Elder to the sisters. After the same manner also thanks are given for the cup, which is then partaken of by all, in the same manner as the bread.—Thanksgiving and the singing of a hymn, closes these exercises.

While the members partake of the Lord's Supper and Communion, they are all seated around tables, particularly provided for the occasion, the same as the Lord Jesus did with his disciples. These ordinances are also held in the evening, as near the same time the Lord instituted and held them as possible, so as not to eat the supper in the morning. We contend that there is no change to be made by any human being, as regards mode or time. If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them. John 13 : 17.

We also practice the anointing of the sick, James 5 : 14, 15. Should be plain in all respects, and that they should abstain from all superfluities. Our meeting-houses have no steeples.

Here I will rest the matter. If any farther information is desired, please let us know.

Your humble servant.

C. Bucher.

Schasfferstown, Pa.

I saw in a late No. of the Companion a request for brother John Lair's address. It is Goshen, Clermont Co., Ohio. Your's in Love.

Landon West.

Sisters Praying in Public—Answer to a Query.

Sarah Baker asks: "Is it wrong for a sister to pray in public when called upon by the bishop of the church?"

The apostle Paul writes thus:—"Every woman that prayeth or prophesieth with her head uncovered, dishonoreth her head," &c. 1 Cor. 11: 5.

From this passage we infer that women not only prayed in public, but prophesied in apostolic times, therefore we cannot deny our sisters the right, unless we presume to improve upon primitive practice.

The conclusion is that a bishop, elder, or deacon, who, for the time being, has charge of the services of God's people, may, with the same propriety, and with equal scriptural authority, call upon a brother or a sister to pray.

Silas Thomas.

Announcements.

Editors Companion, Brethren:—Please insert a notice of our approaching Communion meeting, and as you desire brief notices we will say:

At the residence of brother Wm. J. Stout 12 miles east of Leon, Decatur Co., Iowa. September 26th and 27th.

L. M. Kob.

Dear Companion:— Please make known to the brethren and sisters who have a desire to be with us at our Love-feast, that it will be held with the brethren in the Whitesville branch, if the Lord will, at the house of brother Daniel Glick in Andrew Co., Mo., on the 30th of September and 1st of October; services to commence at 4 P. M.

Brethren and sister are invited to be with us especially those who labor in word and doctrine. Come brethren and be clothed with love and zeal and show to our neighbors that there is a reality in the religion of Jesus.

Samuel C. Bashor.

Franklin, Iowa.

Our Lovefeast will be held in the Salamony congregation, Huntington county, Indiana, in the meeting-house at Lancaster on the 29th day of Sept. next. The usual invitation is extended.

A. H. Snowberger.

The Lord willing, we will hold a Communion meeting on the 23rd and 24th of Sept., at Beaver Creek, Rockingham county, Va. We cordially invite laboring brethren and others to be with us. There probably will be other meetings, before and after in rotation. Those who contemplate coming, will stop off at Harrisonburg, and inform us when they will be there, and we will bring them to Spring Creek.

Jacob Thomas.

Spring Creek, Rockingham Co., Va.

We intend to hold a Communion meeting, if the Lord is willing, on the 5th day of October, in the Meeting-house, in the Conemaugh congregation, Cambria Co., Pa., to commence at 3 o'clock, P. M. A general invitation is given to all the brethren and sisters, and especially to the ministering brethren. We hope that some will be here without fail. By order of the church.

Solomon Benshoff.

Johnstown, Pa.

Lovefeasts,.

Middle Creek, Somerset county, Pa., Sept. 21st, 4 P. M.

Logan church, Logan county, Ohio, Sept. 29th.

Walnut Level, Wells county, Ind., Oct. 21st.

Yellow Creek, Claar's meeting-house, Bedford county, Pa. Sept. 27th, 4 P. M.

Plymouth, Lyon co., Kan., Sept. 2nd.

Somerset arm, Mercer co., Mo., Sept. 23d and 24th.

Shelby co., Iowa, Sept. 2nd.

Salem branch, Marion co., Ill., Aug. 26th.

Dresden Powesheik co., Iowa, Sept 2nd & 3rd.

Buck's Creek church, Henry county, Ind., Sept. 28th.

Lick Creek congregation, Owen county, Ind, Sept. 29th.

Spring Creek, Rockingham county, Va., Sept. 22, 24.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with obituary notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In the Stony Creek Church, Madison county, Indiana, April 5th, 1871, brother JOSHUA THOMPSON, formerly from Tennessee, aged 32 years, 10 months and 9 days, leaving a wife and three children. In him his companion has lost a kind and affectionate husband, his children a loving father, and the churrh a faithful and zealous minister. His remains were followed to the grave by a large concourse of people, which gave evidence of the respect and esteem in which he was held by the community. Funeral discourse by brethren J. W. McClure and Enoch Frey, from Rev. 14 : 12, 13, to a large and attentive audience.

Samuel Book.

In Milledgeville congregation, Carroll county, Illinois, sister SARAH HEITZMAN, consort of brother George Heitzman. She departed this life on the 15th of June, 1871, aged 30 years and 14 days. She was a very consistent member, much esteemed by all her friends and neighbors. She leaves a sorrowful husband, but not to mourn as those that have no hope. Funeral discourse from Philip. 1: 21, by brethren Elder J. S. Hauger and M. Kimmel, in Dutchtown Meeting-house, to a large and attentive congregation.

Near Briddleburg, Clay county, Indiana, in the Lickereek congregation, Owen county, Indiana, July 10th, 1871, SAMUEL BAKER, son of brother Jacob J. and sister Fanny Baker, aged 15 years, 8 months and 12 days. Disease, Inflammatory Rheumatism and fever. Funeral services by the brethren to a large audience from Job, 14 : 1, 2.

At Ephrata, Lancaster county, Pa., July 31st, sister ANNA, wife of brother J. E. PFAUTZ, aged 70 years, 9 months and 19 days. Funeral services by brethren Jacob Reinhold and Samuel Harley, from Philipians 1 : 23, "Having a desire to depart, and be with Christ; which is far better."

J. E. Pfautz.

In the Shade Creek branch, Somerset Co., July 23rd, sister ELIZABETH BLOUGH, aged 60 years, 8 months and 16 days. She leaves a sorrowing husband and eight children to mourn their loss, which we hope is her great gain. The deceased was at meeting on the same day, where we tried to impress the solemn word of the Savior: "Therefore be ye also ready; for at such an hour as you think not the Son of man cometh." On her way home she stopped in at brother Abraham Weaver's, and was well. After supper, on her way home she dropped her pocket-handkerchief. She reached home, changed her dress, milked her cow, and said she would go in search of her handkerchief. Not returning in time, her husband went in search of her. Not finding her, alarm was made, and about ten o'clock at night she was found dead in the path, about a quarter of a mile from home, not quite reaching the spot where the handkerchief lay. Appoplexy being the cause. Supposed, instant death, by the doctor; therefore, "be ye also ready." Funeral services by the brethren from Matth. 24 : 44, to a large and attentive congregation.

Hiram Musselman.

LIST OF MONEYS

received for subscription, books, &c.,

D. Hildebrand,	$7,10	J. Kintner,	4.00
R. H. Miller,	4,00	J. A. Sheller,	3,00
H. Knauff,	2.00	Jonath'n Emmert.	2.25
Peter Crick,	2.25	C. Prevost,	2,00
J. Holsinger,	.75	S. Yoder,	1,50
P. H. Caylor,	2,25	Isaac Price,	,50
C. Steese,	1,25	C. Bucher,	1,00
P. Fahrney's Bros, & Co.,	16,20	L. J. Bashor,	1,00
		D. S. Wine,	1 50
D. B. Mentzer,	8,00	J. H. Daub,	1,25
E. L. Yoder,	1,50	S. R. Holsinger,	5,00

Advertisements.

WE will admit a limited number of select advertisements at the following rates

One insertion, 20 cents a line.

Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.

Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.

No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations

A Treatise on the Salutation, Feet-washing, and the Lord's Supper.

Intended more especially for the Brotherhood. Now offered on the following terms: Single copy ten cents; by the dozen 80 cts. Address David Bosserman, Gettysburg, Pa. Send the money with the address, and they will be sent immediately.

35—4t.

FARM FOR SALE.

In Kosciusco county, Indiana, one mil north of Millwood, on the road between Bremen and Etna, containg 200 acres, 50 acres improved, some marshy, and the balance in timber.

JOHN MOW.

7—34-3ts.

Beers' Expanding Scroll Waterwheel.

[Patented 1868] This wheel is now running with the overshot, in a Flouring Mill, and is using less water than the overshot. Inventor being a Millwright, and having seen and used all the new waterwheels, does not hesitate to say it is the first iron wheel that can compete with the overshot, and is one half cheaper, simpler and better. For farther information address J. L. Beers and Sons, Millwrights and Manufacturer's of wheel shafting and mill gearing of all kinds, continued Sawmill feed and Sawmill irons.

J. L. Beers & Sons

Cocolamus, Juniata Co. Pa.

A Card.

Drs. D. Fahrney & Son, Uroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.

7-10- 1 yr. pd.

A Sure Cure for Dyspepsia.

Upon the receipt of one dollar, I will send the the Medicine, with Directions, by return mail. DAVID ESHELMAN.

Morrisville, Pa.

Wm. M. Lloyd, Altoona, Pa. D. T. Caldwell, Tyrone Pa.

LLOYD, CALDWELL & CO.,

BANKERS,

Receive monies on deposit, and pay interest if left 6 months, at 4 per cent per annum, or 5 per cent. if left one year.

Special contracts made with parties acting a administrators, executors, guardians, and persons holding monies in trust. Dealers in every description of Stocks and Bonds.—Government Securities made a speciality.

Gold and Silver bought and sold, and a general Banking business transacted.

TYRONE BANK,

TYRONE, PA.

This Bank, intending to do a general banking business, solicits accounts from Banks' Bankers and others. Collections made on all points. Interest allowed on DEPOSITS left on time. Paper discounted on liberal terms.

Wm. P. Orbison,	D. P. Gwin,
John Scott,	H. G. Fisher,
Thomas Fisher,	J. H. Glazier,
Wm. Dorris,	G. C. Wilkins,
G W. Garretson,	and others.

1780 1871

ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK?

Use Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

CLEANSE YOUR BLOOD!!

An Alterative and Catharic, or Tonic and Purge combined, for diseases arising from bad blood; such as Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Erysipelas, Worms, Chills and Fever, Scrofula, Pimples, Tetter, &c. Try It.

Established 1780 in package form. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form which was brought to its present state of preservation and perfection some years later, by Dr. P. Fahrney, Chicago, Ill's, who conducts the trade west of Ohio. Great reputation! Many Testimonials! Ask for that prepared at Waynesboro, Pa., and Chicago, Ill's. Beware of imitations. Genuine retails at $1 25 per bottle. Druggists and Medicine dealers sell it.

Dr. P. Fahrney's "Health Messenger" gives the history and uses of the Blood Cleanser, testimonials, and other information, sent free of charge. Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.

Waynesboro Pa

Universal Guide for Cutting Garments.

By which every family may cut its own garments for men and boys, of twenty six different sizes; for Coats, Pants, Vests, and Shirts, and Ladies' Dress Bodies. Agents wanted to sell State, County, and Family Rights. For Particulars address Miller & Quinn

Tyrone, Blair Co., Pa.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine, with Drop Feed, new Take-up, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted FIRST CLASS, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted travelling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $200 per month. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. Co.
58 East Union Square, 17th St., New York

BURLINGTON.

Leaving the East and arriving at Chicago or Indianapolis, how shall we reach the West? The best Line is acknowledged to be the C. B. and Q., joined together with the B. & M. Railroad by the Iron Bridge at Burlington, and called the Burlington Route.

The main line of the Route running to Omaha, connects with the great Pacific Roads, and forms to-day the leading route to California. The Middle Branch, entering Nebraska at Plattsmouth, passes through Lincoln, the State Capital, and will this year be finished to Fort Kearney, forming the shortest route across the Continent by over 100 miles.

Another branch of the B. M., diverging at Red Oak, falls into a line running down the Missouri through St. Joe to Kansas City, at half Kansas. Passengers by this route to Kansas, see Illinois, Southern Iowa, and Missouri, and, by a slight divergence, can see Nebraska also.

Lovers of fine views should remember the Burlington Route, for its towns "high-gleaming from afar"—its tree-fringed streams—its rough bluffs and quarries—its corn-ocean stretching over the prairies further than any can reach.

Land-buyers will be sure to remember it, for they have friends among the two thousand who have already bought farms from Geo. S. Harris, the Land Commissioner of the B. & M. R. R. at Burlington, Iowa, or among the four thousand home-steaders and pre-emptors who last year filed claims in the Lincoln Land Office, where "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm."

SHORT HAND WRITING.—Students of Phonography and all others who are interested in the art can obtain instruction books Send stamp for price list and tracts.
"AMERICAN PHONETIC DEPOT.
TYRONE, PA.
J. S. THOMAS, & CO.

WHOLESALE GROCERS
and
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
No 305 RACE ST. ABOVE 3RD, PHILADELPHIA,
N. B. Country Produce taken in exchange for goods or sold on commission.

CABINET MAKING & UNDERTAKING

The undersigned keeps on hand and manufactures to order all kinds of Furniture. He is also neatly fitted out for conveying the dead to their last resting place.

Manufacturer of the Common Sense Dasher Washing Machine. Shop at the Cross Roads, near Warrior's Mark, Pa.
JAMES S. COX.

A Washing Machine may be seen and purchased at this office. v6n45tf.

GOOD BOOKS FOR SALE

For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price, $4.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol., $2.25. Indispensable.

Life at Home; or the Family and its MEMBERS.—Including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed. The Altar in the House, etc. By Wm. Aikman. $1.50;

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. THOMPSON. Fancy Cloth, $1.00.

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners, with a Chart for recording the sizes of the different Organs of the Brain, in the Delineation of Character, with upwards of 170 Engravings. Muslin, $1.25.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50;

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By W. PITTINGER, $1.50.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Beautifully Illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth, gilt, beveled boards. Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75 cents.

Any of the above sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

The Phrenological Journal, An Illus- TRATED, First-Class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3 00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50, or with the Pious Youth, for $3.00. We commend the JOURNAL to all who want a good Family Magazine, and who does not?

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post office, county and state written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to H. R. HOLSINGER, Tyrone, Pa.

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING

One copy, post paid	0.75
12 copies, post paid	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	$0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN & ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid	$1.00
Per dozen,	10.80

Turkey Morocco, Ger. & Eng.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	13.50

Plain Single German

One copy, post paid	.50
Per dozen" "	$5.50

The Christian Harp, containing 32 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.70
Reserved at the office,	2.25
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express,	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	.60
German & English Testaments,	.75

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25

32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION. 25

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Certificates &c.

Marriage Certificate, per doz., post paid, 0.30
CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP. Per doz, 0.20
TRACTS.—RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE, 12 pages five cents single copy; thirty cents a doz.

All orders should be accompanied with the money, and the name of person, postoffice county & state written in unmistakable letters

THE PIOUS YOUTH
A MONTHLY PUBLICATION
Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.
One dollar a year in advance.

THE
Christian Family Companion
Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements; that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political Journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.
Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
TYRONE, PA.

Christian Family Companion

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum

VOLUME VII. TYRONE, PA. TUESDAY, SEPT. 5, 1871. NUMBER 36.

Infant Baptism.

Being but a babe in the cause of Christ, I do not endeavor to develop all that is opposed to infant baptism but I expect to give evidence as I go along to prove the position I take.

It is said that infant baptism may be concluded from the practice of the apostles baptizing households. As this argument is thought to be of particular weight, it is frequently and much insisted on. But by examining the few instances of household baptism recorded in the New Testament, we shall find several things in the accounts given of these families, which do not comport with infants, and which, therefore, invalidate this argument; and make it more than probable that there were no infants in any of these families.

The first family commonly instanced is Cornelius and his household; Acts 10: 48. But it is evident that there were no infants among these first Gentile converts: for just before their baptism, they all heard the word—they all received the Holy Ghost—and they all spoke with tongues and magnified God; yea, and after they had been baptized, they prayed the apostle to tarry with them. This plainly shows that these persons were not infants.

The next instance is that of Lydia and her household; Acts 16: 14, 15. But surely there is no argument here in favor of infant baptism; for it is not known whether Lydia was single or married; and if she was married it is not certainly known that she had children; and if she had, it cannot be proved that any of them were in a state of infancy; and even, upon the supposition that she was a married woman, that she had children, and that some of them were in a state of childhood, yet it does not at all seem likely that she would have brought them along with her from Thyaitira her native place down to Philippi; a distance of about three hundred miles, to sell purple, and perhaps transact some other business, for which purpose it seems she had hired a house during her stay at Philippi. It is reasonable, therefore, to suppose that her household consisted of clerks, or servants, whom she had employed to assist her in transacting her business. At any rate it is evident from the fortieth verse, that her household consisted of persons who were called brethren, and who were capable of being comforted by the apostles; all of which makes it highly improbable that there were any infants in her household. Another instance is, the baptism of the Philippian jailor and his household; Acts 16: 29–34. But that the jailor's household consisted of believing adults, and not of infants, is evident from three facts expressly declared: first, from the fact that they were all taught (verse 32): "And they spake to him the word of the Lord and to all that were in the house;" second, from the fact that they all rejoiced in the Lord; third, from the fact that they all believed in God: "He set meat before them and rejoiced, believing in God with all his house." All of which show that there can be no argument derived from this scripture in favor of infant baptism.

The last instance is the household of Stephannas; 1 Cor. 1: 16. That this household consisted of believers in Christ, and of such only, cannot be disputed; for it is said in 1 Cor. 16: 15, they were "the first fruits of Achaia;" that is, the first converts in those parts; and that they "addicted themselves to the ministry of the saints."

These are all the instances of household baptism mentioned in the New Testament; and from the examination of them we see that they furnish no argument for infant baptism, but on the contrary a very forcible one in favor of adult baptism.

But it is further urged that baptism has come in the place of circumcision. This argument is often used, and on it great stress is laid. But why is it? because it is such a potent argument, or because there is so much scripture evidence of it? If so we would like to know where it is to be found. The thing is frequently asserted but never proved. And the fact is, there is no direct evidence of it either in the Old or New Testament: it is a presumptive argument only

It is commonly argued from the analogy between the Old and New Testament dispensations, or from the unity of the church under these two dispensations. But to us it is not evident from the sacred writings that the church of God is a continuation of the Jewish church. What is generally called the Jewish church were the people of Israel, or the congregation of the Jews. These were never formed into a visible church state analogous to the church of God. And as the portrait of a man is not the living man himself, so the antitype is no identical continuation of the type. As Jesus Christ is the mediator of a new covenant, he has made the first old; and as he is the head and founder "of a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building," so he has made in himself of twain, to wit, of Jews and Gentiles, one new man; and now in him "all the building fitly framed together, groweth unto a holy temple in the Lord;"—(see Heb. 9: 11; Eph. 2: 15, 21).

And again, if baptism had come in the place of circumcision, why were they both in practice at the same time? why did Paul circumcise Timothy after he had been baptized? Moreover had the churches of Galatia understood that baptism came in the room of circumcision, is it not strange that they who had undoubtedly been baptized, should still insist on circumcision? But on the contrary, it is not to be wondered at, that, when circumcision was laid aside and nothing placed in its stead, they should still contend for that ancient rite. It is strange also that the apostles who said so much against the Judaizing Christians never mentioned that baptism came in the room of circumcision, which, if true, would have been an argument the best calculated to ease their minds, in laying aside that ancient practice. And if, according to the plan of some, the apostles and first ministers of the gospel practised infant baptism because it was substituted for circumcision, is it not very strange that some of them should be so ignorant of this fact, as to find it necessary to call a council to inquire whether they ought still to practice circumcision? SILAS HOOVER.

Berlin, Pa.

CHRISTIANITY is the light that begins to shine in the darkness.—Novalis.

For the COMPANION.

Rejoice.

This word signifies to be or make very glad; to gladden. We learn in the tenth chapter of Luke that when Christ sent thee seventy disciples to preach the glad tidings, and gave them a command what they should do, he told them among other things that they should heal the sick. They went and fulfilled their mission, and they returned with joy, saying, "Lord, even the devils are subject unto us, through thy name."

It seems that they were very glad that the evil spirits were subject unto them. But the Lord said: "Behold I give unto you power to tread on serpents, * * * Notwithstanding, in this rejoice not, that the spirits are subject unto you; but rather rejoice because your names are written in heaven."

By the above langauge we may infer that man can do nothing of himself, but all is of God. But we often rejoice when we hear that sinners are turning to God; and I think we have a right to do so, for we learn that the angels in heaven rejoice over one sinner that repenteth. But from our Savior's language, we might rejoice too much, as if it were by our own power that sinners turn to God; therefore if a minister preaches at a certain place, and a number of sinners become subject to his teaching and turn to God, there might be a possibility that the minister and people could rejoice too much about it as if it were by the elegant preaching that they turned to God. But our Lord would say, "rejoice that your names are written in heaven;" for we can conclude from the Savior's language that the seventy were subject to his rule or command, and therefore their names were written in heaven. So we, brethren and sisters, may conclude that, if we are subject to God's laws, and keep all the commandments, we have the assurance that our names are recorded in heaven. Then we shall rejoice, although our enemies are calling us Pharisees because we adhere strictly to God's laws, and oftentimes say we depend on our own works or strength. But we must not only obey the outward ordinances; we must obey from the heart: then, when they say all manner of evil against us, we shall rejoice and be exceeding glad for our reward is great, if our names are written in heaven. Paul wrote to the Thessalonian brethren, that they should rejoice, ever more, and pray without ceasing. So we may conclude that rejoicing is a command as well as prayer. Yours in brotherly love.

NOAH B. BLOUGH.

For the COMPANION.

On Temptations.

"My Brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations." James 1: 2.

As long as we live upon earth we have a continual warfare against temptation. We believe therefore that it is necessary, that we are continually on our guard, and watch and pray, that the adversary may never meet us asleep, or unprepared to resist all evil, as he is ever seeking a convenient season when we may be found prayerless, and be easily overcome. We believe that, as long as we live in this sinful world, none of us is so perfect and holy as to be exempt from temptations; but at times, at least, we are still beset with divers temptations. And according to the expression of the apostle we should rejoice in it, as temptations are calculated to make us more perfect. Although they are not pleasant to us, yet by them we are made humble, patient, and strong in our warfare against evil. Through temptations lies the path of all the saints. It is only by enduring to the end that we shall be saved. But if we are not willing to endure temptation, there is no promise for a conquerers crown. Well has the poet said:

"Crowns become the victor's brow."

This then is our lot, to meet temptations. When one temptation is overcome another is sure to follow, so that we are in a continual strife. In our Savior's footsteps an idler cannot follow. How many do we see who want to flee from temptation! But in the service of our Master it is our lot, and it is only by watching and prayer, faith and humility, that we can lawfully resist and overcome the evil.

As a ship without rudder, is tossed about by the wind, so is a man tossed by temptation, if he is not firm in the faith in Christ our rock. And as gold is purified by fire, so is the righteous man cleansed through temptation, if he endures without yielding to it. Ofttimes we do not know our ability to contend with the adversary, but in the hour of temptation our works become manifest. The adversary is always on the alert to offer temptations, but if we lawfully withstand his offers we overcome him, and he must flee from us.

Temptations may present themselves to us in numerous different ways. Sometimes in an evil thought; after that in a false imagination; then follows evil lust, and the evil spirit enters the heart of man, and then man is overcome by evil, because he did not resist temptation in its first stages, and the latter end of that man is worse than the beginning.

Sometimes the tempter appears to make his most severe attack when the sinner first becomes penitent. Others appear to have most temptations when they are old and feeble; others when they are called upon to preach the word of God, or do some other service in the church as deacons, or when they are set as overseers or shepherds of the flock. Sometimes the tempter may come in the garb of an angel of Light; when it requires wisdom and grace to prove whether it be an evil or a good spirit that presents itself; for "every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God;" but God, who knows our abilities better than we do, we believe, will not suffer us to be tempted our strength. Therefore we ought not to be discouraged when temptations arise; but boldly come to a throne of grace, and call upon him who is able and willing to grant grace to endure to the end. It is not much of a task to be a follower of Christ when everything goes well; but if in the time of adversity and temptation we are firm and steadfast, then it would appear as though our lives were hid in Christ.

The Savior said, "Blessed are they who are persecuted for righteousness sake." This is also our lot, sometimes; then will our persecution lead us into humility and patience, but we seek that true peace with God, and find it too, and all our temptations trials and adversities bring us nearer to God, and through his bountiful grace we hope to be saved in the end. JOHN KLINE.

For the Companion

Poor in Spirit.

"Blessed are the poor in spirit for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."

There is not one drop that flows from the fountain of redeeming love, which brings not with it soul refreshing properties to the humble follower of Christ.

The proud, the ambitious, and the mightiest men of earth, must, eventually, learn that heaven is the inheritance of those who are poor in spirit in this world. The crying of children for bread, when they are unheeded by parents or when there is none to give them, and the groaning and sadness of the poor beggar sitting by the wayside, suffering by reason of hunger, weariness, disease and many other ills common to impoverished humanity, are visible or tangible objects that lead the mind to a comprehension of the spiritual poverty to which Christ has reference. A full consciousness of the temporal and spiritual condition, and all the real wants of humanity, connected with a willingness to make any possible requisite sacrifice to save from a present, and a pending eternal destruction, is equivalent to pouring out the riches of the soul and becoming "poor in spirit" that heaven may be possessed.

Those to whom God has given power and affluence, cannot pass through this "wilderness of woe," enjoying to the utmost the goodness which God gave them to share with the needy, without becoming wilfully entwined in the iron clutches of selfishness, which hold them irresistibly fast as the heritors of hell. It is the height of folly for man, even in his highest natural attainments, to dwell but for a moment upon either the propriety or the possibility of nullifying or changing the positive decrees of God. It has pleased him, not by chance, nor by any thing else that does not intelligently agree with his inimitable justice and perfection, to bestow the riches of the world to come upon those who do not enjoy the corresponding riches in this world. As Lazarus had evil in this world and good in that which is to come, so they that are "poor in spirit" in this world, shall be rich in spirit in the next. God is just: of them to whom he has given much he will require much, and at the hand of those to whom he has given little he will require correspondingly, bestowing upon them as much as upon those that received and gave much.

There are three distinct positions relative to spiritual wealth or poverty:

1. To be "poor in spirit" without any effort upon the part of the creature to attain to the position.

2. An adaption to reach the highest state of spiritual affluence; yet becoming "poor in spirit."

3. The actual oposite of the "poor in spirit."

It is universally acknowledged that there are different degrees of unalterable capacity given by the Creator to different individuals; and the line between the "poor in spirit" and the opposite, divides mankind into two great classes in regard to spiritual capacity: one of them being included in the first and second propositions, and the other in the third. Illustrating by comparison, the three established positions occupied by the two classes, are like three lakes, whose intrinsic worth depends entirely upon an exact, specified size. But to make the distinction between them, the one representing the first position is fed by a small stream, and in consequence of evaporation has no outlet; while that representing the second is supplied by a larger stream, but having an outlet its size remains the same; and the third has a large stream flowing into it, but in consequence of having no outlet its waters become filthy, useless, and destructive.

It may be argued that the first proposition is not founded upon truth, because the kingdom of heaven is likened to a man giving to each of three servants a different number of talents. But this parable has reference to the disposition of available abilities only, while the declaration, "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven," has reference to both the discipline of abilities and to existing facts. None will presume to doubt that the little children, of which Jesus says, "of such is the kingdom of heaven," have become such as they are without any unnatural exertion upon their part. Nobody will assert that it is not required to make an effort to gain heaven; neither is there any one, who is responsible, so blind that he cannot see the indisposition of mankind to labor for that end; hence the reality, not only of the first but of the three positions. In view, of, these truths the true believer in the doctrine of Christ would readily chose to fill the space occupied by one whose spiritual poverty upon earth is innate. "But shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, why hast thou made me thus?"

The only consolation (and a glorious consolation it is) for them upon whom God has lavishly bestowed riches which if not properly disposod of, disqualify them for heaven, is, to become "poor in spirit," that they may be rich in the world to come.

JOHN B. GARVER.

Shirleysburg, Pa.

For the Companion.

Apostolical Succession.

In the present century and at the present time, there is, perhaps, more said in regard to Apostolical Succession, than there was at any century anterior to the present. Formerly the Roman Catholic Church alone laid claims to said succession; but quite recently some of her daughters have commenced howling, and that loudly, too, "Apostolic Succession!" and pronounce their anathemas upon all that will not say, "My dear Mother." What are we to understand by the above heading? and where must we go to gain a correct knowledge of this matter? One would suppose the BIBLE would be the place. The Bible is as silent upon this matter as the grave: it does not directly, nor indirectly, teach, nor convey the idea in the least, that any man at this age, or any age succeeding the twelve apostles of Jesus Christ's own appointment, should wear the badge. The Bible being Silent, we look to Church literature, Encyclopedias, and Standard Theological works, Catechisms, Creeds and the like, and there we find something of this kind held forth.

Mark you, I have reference to protestant histories and religion,—that people that claim to be protesting against the church of Rome,—these are the ones that lay claim to the high functionaries, and that unchurch all that make no pretentions of this kind. I am now ready to go with my friends, the German Reformed. The reason I partake myself with this people, is, the fact that they have found their way back, or can trace up their line without a doubt. We are now with a people that boast much of their church literature and college-bred "Apostles." You cannot expect me to give you a detailed history of all that happened on our way to the apostles; yet some we may give. About the first troublesome thing we came in contact with was a small set of people called Campbellites. These would not have been noticed, had they not asked us to take the Bible for our guide. And then, about halfway between the place we started from and the place we came to, we met with a small, unassuming people, called Brethren, latterly "Dunkards" or "German Baptists." These were so very insignificant, so low-bred that we would certainly have passed them, had not one of them asked: "Are you on your way to Rome?" "No Sir, we are tracing up apostolic succession." The next great character we shall notice, and the last one I was introduced to, was, Ulrich Zwingle. "Who is this gentleman?" "This Sir, is the great reformer of Switzerland who flourished in the fifteenth century, and is the founder of our church. This, then, is the Apostle Zwingle. We follow his parentage and it brings us into the church of Rome, the Mother of Harlots. It is, however, the impression of some, that Zwingle never held an ecclesiastical position of any note among the catholics, so that we would get into the brush here, except by stepping over on the side of Luther, who was a Monk, and no doubt had the hand of the POPE laid upon him. Now then, we are in Rome, with the great whore of Babylon the Mother of harlots. We are just where I had expected to arrive when we started. In this dark age we lose sight of nearly everything excepting harlotism. Yet, by looking far beyond these abominations, we see the Apostles that Jesus Christ selected; and we see about as much difference between the Apostles anterior to Roman harlotism and those posterior, as there is between their several heads, Jesus Christ and the Pope of Rome. I do not wish to throw any reflections upon these men above mentioned; they did a noble work so far as they went; but their children are not heeding their instructions,—the one branch in particular—and it is no wonder they cry for "Apostolic Succession," including, as a matter of course, apostolic power, so that they might change laws and customs. I mean the power we read of in histories. If we ask these "Apostles," Where was your religion before Zwingle brought it out?" they are slow in saying in the Roman Catholic Church, of which Zwingle was a member.

No, but they say in the BIBLE. Well then, how do you suppose they connect themselves with John, the last Apostle that lived? Had these people not better give themselves to the study of the Bible?

After all the founders of this great church of great literature was only a man, and not an Apostle. And further I see that the Apostle of the brethren was as legally installed as was the one of the G. R. These people are proud of their origin, and yet at the same time, they protest against all, and everything that has a Catholic tint They consider her, and have always, as "the great whore of Babylon," as the seven headed monster, as the beast that brought every thing under his power, the Bible not excepted. These same judges discard every church that denounces the church of Rome, and the Pope as an imposter, as well as all that pertaineth unto him; and even those that talk, act and walk like him, as being an invention of men. Ask them for their origin, and behold, they will take the wings of the morning and will fly high over the inventions of men and the Bible, and land in the midst of the Roman hierarchy, and say "Behold here is our Foster Father—here is our Apostolic origin!" Brethren, this we could scarcely believe, were it not that there are every day so to speak, actions indicative of these things. Look at their crosses, at their liturgiee, at their creeds and customs; they already speak more highly of their catechisms than they do of their Bibles.

Brethren, I to-day thank my God, that I need not go to the place of all abominations to seek the origin of my religion, or apostolic origin. I am sure I would sooner have such men as Mack or Campbell, if men are to be at the head of it, than all the officials of Rome.

In conclusion I would ask, What is an evidence of an "Apostolic Succession?" Reason would say, it is that which is in harmony with the doctrine of the Apostles of Jesus Christ; for instance, a man denying the authority of Immersion Feet-washing, the Lord's Supper, Communion, the Kiss, the Annointing, &c., can certainly not be considered an Apostle of the Bible.

Again one that baptizes unbelievers —(infants) and sanctions pride, and such like, looks more like Rome than the Bible. Brethren forget not your Bibles; read them and pray over them. Yours in the "one faith."

Oh! if you knew what it is to love! You say that you love; and many of your brethren are in want of bread, to sustain life, of vestments to cover their naked limbs, of roofs to shelter them, of a handful of straw to sleep upon, while you have all things in abundance.

Papal Infallibility and Mariolatry.

F. S DeHass, in a letter from Rome, published in a recent number of the Pittsburg "Christian Advocate," gives the following items of interest with regard to the pope's infallibility and the worship of the Virgin :—

Several things lately have tended to weaken the faith of the people in his infallibility. First, he told them that the Virgin would not permit the Italians to take the Holy City, but they did take it, and entered the holy places in defiance of the pope; and what is remarkable, the very first shot from their artillery, when before the gates, knocked the head from the statute of St. Peter, placed there to guard the sacred portal. The superstitious, regarding this as a bad omen, threw down their arms and gave up the contest. Again, when they were arranging for a special high mass in one of the chapels of St. Peter's, a thunderbolt struck the building, and so injured the chapel as to necessitate a suspension of the service. And at the time the pope was to announce publicly the dogma of infallibility, he had so arranged the time and the throne on which he was to sit that the sun at that particular moment would shine through a concealed window, throwing its rays on his head, thus leading the people to believe that Heaven approved the doctrine, but, lo! when the vast congregation assembled, and the hour had arrived for the annunciation, dark clouds obscured the sun, loud thunders rolled above the Vatican, the rain fell in torrents, and a vivid flash of lightening struck and shattered to pieces the very window through which the divine light was expected to stream; all of which was interpreted by the multitude as foreboding evil.

Passing through the Vatican one day, whom should I meet but the pope himself, taking his morning walk. He was dressed in scarlet from head to foot, and attended by Cardinal Antonelli, several bishops, and his body guard of Swiss soldiers. They who were near him knelt as he passed, some kissed his robe, and other acts of homage were paid him.—As all who were introduced to him, had to kiss his hand, I respectfully declined that honor. He is seventy-nine years old, and appears quite feeble. Poor mortal! his infallibility can't save him from human infirmities

I have been surprised at the amount of idolatry tolerated here. Rome is essentially a pagan city. Idolatry gross as that of Nineveh, or Greece, or Imperial Rome, is daily practiced in her churches. Go to St. Peter's any day, and you will see hundreds and often thousands, kissing the toe of an old bronze statute of St. Peter, though some of the people say it was cast for Jupiter.

In the church of St. Augustine there is a marble statue of the Virgin and infant Savior. The image is supposed to possess power to work miracles, and thousands of devotees may be seen crowding her chapel, kneeling before her, kissing her feet, and paying her divine honors. She is literally covered with the offerings of her worshippers, jewels of every kind, rings, lockets, bracelets, watches, necklaces, and every conceivable gift are hung about the idol, until you can scarcely see either mother or child for the ornaments, all given as votive offerings for supposed miraculous cures effected.

There is no denying the fact that all worship in the Catholic churches of this city is made subservient to the glorification of the Virgin; that more reverence and homage is paid her than to the Father, Son, or Holy Ghost. Everything is done in the name of the Madonna, our blessed Lord being nothing but a helpless infant in her arms.

The other Sabbath I visited St. Marria in Via Lata built on the supposed spot where Paul "lived two whole years," when in Rome. No church could be more hallowed in its associations or better calculated to inspire one with devotion, than this. And yet the whole service consisted in the adoration of a wax doll, about twelve inches long, representing the child Christ. Before this toy the priests bowed and crossed themselves in a hundred ways, as though it was the Almighty himself they were worshiping.

The sale of Indulgences seems to be as common here as that of meat and flour. Over most of the church doors may be seen in large letters: "Indulgence plenary may be obtained every day for the living or the dead." Also the most generous grants are made for the performance of certain duties; for instance, attending the church of Santa Croce on the second Sunday in Advent, 11,000 years of indulgence and remission of all one's sins. On many altars, you will see inscribed, "EVERY MASS SAID AT THIS ALTAR LIBERATES ONE SOUL FROM PURGATORY." Most of the worship rendered in Rome is to secure indulgence in some vice, pardon for some sin, or to fill the coffers of the pope. Yet this is all tolerated under the shadow of St. Peter's, and all in the name of Christianity.

Ingratitude.

It is an old saying that if you do a man nineteen favors, and for any reason decline to do him the twentieth, he will forget the ninteen requests that you have granted, and only remember the one that you have refused—and for that refusal he will hate you ever afterward.

And this is true of some men; it is true of men of mean and narrow natures; but it is not true of all. It is as natural for a noble soul to cherish a lively recollection of kindnesses received, as it is to breathe. And while we are often shocked to see acts of friendship towards others, which have cost us a good deal of time and of labor, entirely overlooked and forgotten, we not unfrequently on the other hand, are surprised by the grateful reciprocation of some favor long since rendered, and the very performance of which had passed from our town recollection, until reminded of it by the recipient.

We have always regarded gratitude as a feeling which is hardly susceptible of being taught to any one.—A lecture on gratitude, to whomsoever addressed, instead of awakening that emotion, is very apt to engender a feeling of indignation and hatred.—People never like to be told to be grateful. And it is no use to tell them. If it is not natural to a soul to appreciate the good nature of others, it can never be taught such appreciation.

"This little fellow," said Martin Luther of a bird going to roost, "has chosen his shelter, and is quietly locking himself to sleep without a care for to-morrow's lodging; calmly holding by his little twig, and leaving God alone to think of him."

For the COMPANION.

Meekness.

Happy the meek; for they shall inherit the earth.

The above is a part of that model sermon, which fell from the lips of him who speaks as never man spake.

In imagination we see the blessed Jesus seated on that mount; a divine dignity encircles his brow. Before his mental vision stand the entire human family. At once he comprehends the solemnity, and the importance of the occasion. He has come with a message of great importance to deliver to dying man. He makes not use of this occasion to display his own learning or eloquence. He must be about his Father's business. He has no time to dwell on other's faults. How short, and simple his paragraphs; and yet each contains a volume of thought. At once he commences at the very basis of the disease with which mankind are affected.

Some kinds of disease, produce a state of stupor or insensibility. Such inflections are considered the most dangerous. A skillful physician, who undertakes such cases, first endeavors to arouse the system to a state of action; though in doing this he exposes his patient to pain and suffering. Disease was formerly present, and was doing its sure and steady work, though the victim was all unconscious Now his system is aroused; nature begins to combat the disease; terrible, terrible is the conflict. The throbbing pulse, the burning fever, the torturing pain, give evidence of the violence of this conflict. The patient groans beneath the agony, and almost wishes he had not been aroused to such suffering; though he knows, that death would soon have ensued.

The kind physician watches his patient with the utmost care, giving him every help that kindness, or skill can dictate. With what anxiety he notes every change; and what joy is depicted on his countenance when he sees nature begin to assert her dominion.

The above, is designed to represent our condition morally; being diseased, and yet unconscious of our condition. It being the Father's work to arouse. The Savior commences right here. He pronounces those happy who have been aroused: "Happy the poor in spirit; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." Were there no balm in Gillead, no physician there, it would not be happiness for us to be aroused. It were better, to remain unconscious if there were no cure; but Jesus being able and willing to heal our maladies, happy indeed are we, when in a proper condition to receive his aid.

Various are the means which the Father employs to arouse us. The following text, most beautifully describes the dealings of God with man: "As an eagle stireth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings, so the Lord alone did lead him, and there was no strange God with him;" Dent. 32: 11. Who, but has at some time had his nest of carnal repose torn away. Then, oh then, when every earthly hope is shattered; when that which formerly offered us such a safe, secure asylum is torn away, in bewilderment in terror, we look around for some other support! We must have something to uphold us, none of us are self-sustaining. Then it is that Jesus hovers near us. In accents of love, he invites us to him.

He offers, to bear us on his blessed wings; to teach us to mount on high, above the sordid things of earth.

Sound health, an entire freedom from disease, is the end had in view in arousing the system to a state of action, and consequently to a state of suffering. A short season of great pain; to be forever succeeded by ease and healthful, tranquil repose.

Our text alludes to one who has been healed. Meekness will be the result of such a radical change. We understand meekness to be synonymous with submission. David says, "The meek shall inherit the earth; and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace;" Paslms 37; 11. Paul tells us, "As long as the heir is a child, he differs nothing from a servant, though he is Lord of all; "Gal. 4; 1. What a vast inheritance is in reserve for the children of God; a rich estate, their Father designs to present them. Good news indeed, are promises of such wealth in store for us. Peace, blessed peace, shall also then accompany this possession. How different will be the possession of the earth then from what it is now. Now its possession is accompanied with sorrow, vexation, and trouble.

Neither do the meek now possess it, but those of an opposite character.

Great as is the difference between the earth as is it now and what it will be then, equally great will be the difference, between its present possessors and those who shall possess it then. It is written, "If any man has not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his;" Rome, 8: 9. Our inheritance in this estate is wholly dependent upon our relationship with Christ. Through him we become the adopted sons, and daughters of God; and consequently, "heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ;" Rom. 8: 17. It behooves us, when so much is at stake, to try to learn exactly what was the character of him fater whom we are to patter,nand to make every effort to follow the example.

Perhaps the most striking feature in the character of our dear Redeemer, was his meekness, or entire submission to his Father's will. This blessed feature, particularly, he invites us to imitate. Said he, take my yoke upon you, and learn from me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls;" Math. 11: 29.

Our Savior is represented as a light that shines in the darkness. The light of a candle would hardly be perceptible in the glare of a midday sun; but in the absence of that luminary how plainly it is seen. So Jesus came into a world enveloped in Spiritual darkness. As his rays were emited, the darkness fled; and we see him surrounded by a halo of light. How transcendently beautiful he appears among the children of men. Solomon, gives him the following delicate compliment: "As the citron tree is among the trees of the wood, so is my beloved among the sons;" Cant. 12: 3.

The object of our Savior's incarnation, suffering, and death, was that he might draw all men unto him; draw them within the influence of that divine light.

There are some who "love darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil;" such will not come within the sphere of this light. Those however, who desire light, suffer themselves to be drawn closer and closer within its circuit. Every command and prohibition of God's word is an emanation from this luminary.

The Spirit of Christ, runs counter with that of the world. The spirit of the world is, that in proportion as a person occupies an exalted position, possesses wealth or talent, in that proportion, must he receive the honors, and the homage of his fellow man. Now behold the contrast in the kingdom of our Redeemer. See the opposite exhibited in the conduct of its glorious King. The lessons of humility which he inculcated, how hard to learn. It took time for even the apostles to learn them well. More than once were they astonished at what their Master did.

But in that eventful night, when they were assembled in an upper room to partake with him of his last meal, their astonishment reached its climax. Imagine their surprise, when they beheld their adored Teacher, arise from the table, and gird himself with a towel, pour water into a basin, and begin to wash their feet. This service they knew was considered the the most menial of all services. Ah! methinks they were struck dumb with amazement! At length Peter ventures to remonstrate: his noble nature shrinks from having his Master perform such a service for him. Nothing could be more impressive than this act of Jesus. Had he merely told his disciples to wash one another's feet, the command certainly would have been obligatory; but here, he arises without saying a word, he takes his basin, he kneels before his disciples, (Oh my soul, blush at thy pride, if any yet remains!) he washes and wipes their feet. The service over, he takes his garments again, and sits down. The apostles gaze upon him with profound wonder. Now hear his words: "Ye call me the Teacher, and the Master; and ye say well, for so I am. If I then, the Teacher and the Master, have washed your feet, ye also ought to wash one another's feet. Yes, we ought, dear Master, we know we ought — Thou dost appeal to our reason, to our nobler faculties. Thou dost treat us as intelligent beings. Thy followers have seen thy example, and they need only a hint from thee, that thou wilt have them do, as they have seen thee do.

But why did Jesus wash his disciples, feet? What lesson is therein taught? The spirit of it is what we want; for it is written: "The letter kills, but the spirit gives life:" 2 Cor. 3: 6. Our Savior, takes a custom out of the world, and places it in his church. In the world the service had been performed by the lowest servant, upon his master. Here the Master performs the work upon the servant. How clearly do we here behold the contrast between the world and Christ's kingdom. Jesus here exemplifies what he taught in Math. 20: 25—28. Here Jesus again teaches that wonderful lesson, that the greatest in his kingdom, are the most humble, the most submissive.

This subject is again elucidated, by the words of our Savior spoken to the multitudes after he had dismissed the messengers from John. Said he, "Among them that are born of women, there has not risen a greater than John the Baptist. But he that is least in the kingdom is greater than he.' Matth. 11: 11. John possessed elements of greatness inferior to none that had ever lived before him. When we call to mind the many great names that adorn the pages of history, both sacred and profane, (we doubt not but as much greatness existed before John's day as has existed since), we conclude that John was realy a great man. Yet the least, the meekest, the most submissive, in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he.

John possessed his Jewish prejudices, and, perhaps, his Jewish pride of ancestry. A distinguished descent was by them considered the highest honor. Their institutions being of a temporal nature, their kingdom an earthly kingdom, of course they would pride themselves in these things. Josephus boasts of his noble birth: he says that he was descended from the priests; and as nobility among several people is of a different origin, as with them to be of the sacerdotal dignity, is an indication of the splendor of a family. John was of the sacerdotal race. Now he is confined in prison, in his dungeon he hears of the wonderful works of Christ. He hears how He exerts his power in behalf of those in distress. He also hears that he is choosing his disciples; that he makes choice of those who occupy the humble walks of life. Hearing these things, he perhaps begins to ponder such thoughts as the following: "Why does he not exert himself in my behalf, and release me from this loathesome condition? He surely knows that I am suffering innocently. He knows that zeal for his cause brought me here. In making choice of servants, why does he overlook me? Surely my birth, my standing, my former faithfulness, entitle me to consideration. Why does he pass me by and choose those who are in every respect beneath me?" Such reflections, begat in his mind feeelings of discontent; hence his message.

We do not believe that John doubted the Messiahship of Jesus; for he could not doubt that after having heard and seen what he had. His language, "Art thou he that cometh, or look we for another?" savors of dissatisfaction with the Savior's conduct. That the above delineates the state of mind then possessed by John, we infer from the following language of Jesus: "Happy is he, whoever shall not be offended at me:' though my ways be beyond human comprehension; though to nature they may be trying in the extreme; yet, happy is he who will confide in me, under all circumstances and at all times. Happy indeed, for I will reward such confidence."

John possessed a martyr's courage, but he did not possess that entire resignation that would enable him to yield himself completely up to every change and every circumstance. He had not been fully initiated into that kingdom, whose subjects were born, "not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God," (John 1: 13); consequently he could not comprehend upon what principles greatness consisted here: the spiritual nature of this kingdom was but imperfectly understood by John. Courage may have other than divine origin; but meekness, entire resignation, can have none other than heavenly birth.

In the world, each nation has its own standard, upon which is painted some device or emblem, designed to represent the peculiar character of that nation. So in the kingdom of Christ, we have our standard, the motto on which is, "Peace on earth, good will among men"; Luke 2: 14. How perfectly our glorious King carried out the spirit of this motto the records of his life plainly show. He made choice of a position, so lowly, so unassuming, that it could not excite the envy or discontent of any one. No virtuous person need be poorer than was the Savior. "The foxes," said he, "have holes, and the birds of the air, nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his bead. (Matth. 8 : 20. Self-forgetfulness was exhibited in every act of his life. We see him "a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, (Isa. 53 : 3), toiling as a weary traveler through this sin-cursed world. Every form of sorrow or distress that mankind were subject to, excited his sympathy and drew his attention. To the ignorant he gave instruction; the afflicted he restored to health; the bereaved he gave back their friends; with the grief-stricken he wept in tender sympathy. Of him it is emphatically said, "he went about doing good." Never in one single instance, did he exert his great power to relieve his own wants, or bring ease to himself. Now says he, "follow me. I am the way, the truth, and the life." Who of us will volunteer to follow him closely? We can if we will.—As it was said to Paul upon one occasion, so it will be said to us, "My grace is sufficient for thee; for my power is made perfect in weakness"; 2 Cor. 12 :9. So be workers together with him, (2 Cor. 6 : 1), who would not? Can it be that he gives us this privilege, that he vouchsafes to us this honor? The apostle in the chapter last quoted from, from the third to the tenth verse inclusive, gives a synopsis of the works of the servant of Jesus; and how striking is the resemblance between these works and those of the Master himself. Surely, he who works thus will be a worker together with Christ.

Under the former dispensation God's prophets were sometimes made to bear the iniquity of the people.—Ezekiel in the fourth chapter of his prophecy, tells us how he was made to bear such iniquity. But the dispensation under which he lived, being that of justice, such terrible chastisements as he was enjoined to impose upon himself, could only portray to the people the impending wrath of God.

Christ the great prophet of this dispensation, a dispensation of mercy, must also bear the iniquity of the the people. It is written concerning him: "The reproaches of them that reproached thee, are fallen upon me;" Psalms 69 : 9. Had these reproaches reached, as they were intended, the eternal Father, awful indeed, would have been the consequences to those guilty wretches who had the audacity to offer them. But mercy, blessed mercy, provided an intervening object. Upon this object, these reproaches fall. He, the Son of God, intercepts this stream of guilt in its onward course. He opens his own spotless bosom, and himself receives the tide, so that it never reaches the eternal throne. For many, many years, he receives those reproaches. At length the time arrives when these, which have been accumulating for so many ages must be punished. The Son of God comes to the place whence they originated; but how does he come, with the sword of justice unsheathed to take vengeance on the guilty? No, no, he comes and takes upon himself the likeness of sinful flesh, and is made in fashion as a man.

Ah! behold this great Sin-bearer! See him in that garden! Oh, see! how he is crushed beneath that dreadful weight! As he looks up, and beholds the flood-gates of divine justice, now ready to open upon him, hear his plaintive cry: "My Father, if it is possible let this cup pass away from me." But immediately he remembers that sin must be punished. Either he or man must suffer, and straightway adds, "But yet, not as I will, but as thou wilt."

The fatal hour at length arrives, and the Son of God nobly opens his bosom to the punishment, as he had formerly opened it to receive the sin. The sun refuses to look upon that scene. Nature retires and veils her face. Imagination cannot conceive what Jesus endured, during those three hours that the earth was enveloped in darkness; but those were the hours of his most dreadful suffering. That awful accumulation of guilt that justice must meet within his soul, must have caused him to writhe in most extreme agony. But he endured. The reproaches have received their due punishment. That which intercepted the streams of love from God to man, has been cancelled, and taken out of the way. Again a communication is opened between heaven and earth; but this communication can only be held through him who opened the way through blood and suffering. To us, his followers, he has said: "Ye shall drink indeed of my cup;" Matth. 22 : 23.

We have taken a brief view of our Savior's sufferings. Therein we see portrayed our own. Though the sins that were present with him were imputed sins, yet they drew upon him the fierce flames of Divine justice. If God inflicted upon him such throes of wrath, can we, who are so completely defiled with inbred sin, escape punishment? Nay, verily; if those things were done in a green tree, what will be done in the dry? Sin must be punished wherever found; and oh! had not Christ drank that cup for us, had not he received that awful baptism, then, oh then! each one would, unsheltered and unprotected, have received the full tide of Divine justice.

In that beautiful passage contained in Matthew 23 : 37, our dear Redeemer has shown how willing he is to shield mankind from the threatening wrath of God. Though we cannot escape punishment, we may take refuge beneath his sheltering wings. There the streams of Divine justice will not fall directly upon us; they are received by him; upon his blessed head they fall in all their fury. With his own tender hand he metes out punishment to us as we can bear it; and in each cup of suffering he mingles so much of love that we scarcely taste the bitterness.

All he wants of us, is, that we yield ourselves completely up to him, and he will arrange all things for us. Every affliction, every sorrow, every trial, in the hands of this skillful Physician, will help to work out for us this great cure; and at the same time will be the means of bringing him to us. What Christ-loving soul would be deprived of his presence? Sooner than this he would draw in pain and grief with every breath.

MATTIE A. LEAR.

Urbana, Ill.

Hope is like the cork in the net, which keeps the soul from sinking in despair; and fear is like the lead to the net, which keeps it from floating in presumption.

RELIGION AT HOME.—"Let them learn first," said Paul, "to show piety at home." Religion begins in the family. One of the holiest sanctuaries on earth is home. The family altar is more venerable than any altar in the cathedral. The education of the soul for eternity begins by the fireside. The principle of love, which is to be carried through the universe, is first unfolded in the family.

Truth requires plain words; she rejects all ambiguities and reserves.

Christian Family Companion

Tyrone City, Pa., Sept., 5, 1871.

Suicide or Murder.

Our town was inflicted with a terrible tragedy on Tuesday, Aug. 22nd. Mrs. John Meinhart, residing on Front street, in the same house with her husband, but not as husband and wife, was missed on Monday morning. There was no general alarm raised, although the woman left a child of only eight months old. On Tuesday afternoon, the matter being noised about, some persons made search, and soon found the woman, in the smoke-house, hanging by the neck, dead. An inquest was held, and a verdict rendered that deceased came to her death by strangulation from the hands of some person or persons unknown. The parties having been on very bad terms with each other, added to Meinhart's indifference at the discovery of the body, created suspition that he had taken her life and hung up the body. Accordingly he was arrested, and is now in the county jail awaiting trial.

The Education of Our Youth.

In a letter, referring to Clermont Academy, Elder Isaac Price thus speaks upon the above subject:

"It is always acceptable to my mind to find a disposition among our Brethren to promote education. I have always encouraged our youth, male and female, to qualify themselves for teachers. When I travel, which is now seldom, I am always glad to find among our Brethren's children who are teachers, especially when, as is often the case, they are appointed, not only from their capability to teach the arts and sciences taught at school, but because they possess and impart a better code of ethics than is generally taught."

We heartily indorse the sentiment of our aged brother. We love all the children of the Brethren that are good and respectful; but cannot help preferring those who, in addition to virtue, have cultivated intellects. And we think our brethren should, above all others, feel it a duty to give their children a good English education.—We teach that each one is to read for himself, and to understand for himself, and therefore it becoms the duty of parents to see that their children have their faculties and powers trained for the performance of the important duties that will devolve upon them.

But if education were not really useful, to us it would be worth all it costs, as an ornament. Like the good house-wife who employs many hours in cultivating her flower garden, to adorn and perfume her home, so dutiful parents, and instructors of youth, cultivate the human soul, that it may enliven, entertain, and comfort its associates in the great family of minds.

Wanted.

A good paying investment, for a brother who has a thorough knowledge of business.

Also, brethren who are good mechanics, carpenters, masons, bricklayers, plasterers, &c., to move to a thriving town in Pennsylvania.

For particulars address the Companion office, Tyrone, Pa.

Apprentices Wanted.

We shall be able to furnish employment to several apprentices to the printing business, male or female, or both, to start in after our removal to Dale City, about the middle of October next. Good spelling, reading, and writing, are indispensable qualifications. The ages of sixteen to eighteen preferred. Application in all cases to be made in the applicant's own hand, as no one need apply who is unable to write an intelligent letter. Permanent employment will be guaranteed to those who serve an apprenticeship, and prove worthy—providing this C. F. C. office continues to be a permanent institution. Preference given to members of the church, or member's children. Apply at once. Address Companion Office, Tyrone, Pa.

For several days during the present Companion week, the senior editor has been confined to his bed by sickness, and at going to press is not yet able for sanctum duties, but is convalescent.

Brethren's Almanac.

Hurry up the names of any ministers who are not to be found on our list of the present year, and are not known to have been sent in since.

A sister says: "Reading the Tobacco Supplement has caused one brother here to discharge the poisonous weed."

That is encouraging. Only so we have the assurance that we are doing some little good. If that one brother has been permanently cured of the use of tobacco it is worth more than the entire cost of issuing the supplement—especially to him.

Of "Walks and Homes with Jesus," the Independent says: "In style, paper, printing, binding, this is one of the most elegant religious works we have ever seen. Dr. March has gone over the familiar ground from Bethlehem, through Nazareth, to Jerusalem, sketching with graceful pen the scenes in the life of our Lord, and drawing from them impressive lessons of practical piety, and many comforting thoughts and hopes for the afflicted.

Answers to Correspondents.

Landon West. We do not mean to print the tract unless several thousand will be engaged. As yet we have only about 400.

E. L. Yoder. It would require too much space to insert the name of the counties, in the addresses of ministers, in the Brethren's Almanac, as in many cases it would require two lines to each name. If the name of the post office and state are plainly given, letter will in all cases go as safely without the county, though not always quite as speedily.

CATHARINE STEES. It was your postmaster that wrote on your paper: "20 cents postage due." You have now paid for the Companion to Vol 8, No. 18. The postage is to be paid at your post office.

SUSAN A. TURNER. We do not know anything about it. The only cure we could recommend would be soap and cold water, and we would look upon anything else as a humbug.

MICHAEL FORNEY: No knowledge of the almanacs mentioned.

JOHN FRITZ: The subscribers you mention are at Eldora, Iowa: they were not charged to you.

J. B. MOWERY: No. 30 is entirely out.

S. A. WALKER. You misunderstood: we want the names and addresses of all the ministers.

An Agent's Dun.

We agents are beginning to think that we will have to pay for our subscriber's Companions. It looks favorable for it; the thirty-third number is now out—the year over half gone,—and a good many have not paid in.—Still the Companion comes with its smiling face, when it ought to come with a frown, with its countenance fallen.

Yours in brotherly love,
AN AGENT.

MISCELLANEOUS

Confidence in God.

"Why hast Thou forsaken me?"—So, indeed, many a one is crying at this moment. Why hast thou forsaken this weary, solitary soul? Why hast thou left the parent to bear the burden of ungrateful, rebellious children? Why hast thou left the wife or mother to bewail her only joy? Why hast thou cast those poor children on the world, with none to help them? Why hast thou permitted those cruel oppressions to go on under the sun, unrebuked and unchecked? Why hast thou permitted those vast multitudes to be born and die, as sheep without a shepherd?—Why hast thou forsaken so many churches which thy right hand had planted? Why has Christendom gone so far astray from its original purpose? Why has the human race—why has this church and nation—been allowed to lose so many great opportunities? Why has so many a noble spirit been snatched from us when we most needed him? Why do the evil prosper—why do the good fail? Why is human life so mysterious and so sad? Why is the divine life so far off—so difficult to attain unto? We ask these questions—we cannot help asking them. We even do well at times to ask them. Christ asked this one question which comprehends all. There is no other answer but what he gave to himself—not in word, but in act. He did not give way; he did not despair. He waited, he endured. He looked forward and upward. Though God seemed to have forsaken him, he yet had not forsaken God. God was still to him his God. "My God."—And therefore, in the strength of his endurance, the darkness broke away, and the desolation ceased. He felt that God was not only his God, but is always his Father. "Father," he said, "into thy hands I commend my spirit." The work which he came to do, and which seemed for the moment forsaken and interrupted, he felt was, after all, accomplished. "It is finished," he said. So we may be sure that, if we persevere, our Father will receive our spirit in calm and peace Our work will be finished; if not by ourselves, by others, when God's good time is accomplished.—Dr. Stanley.

Renewed Day by Day.

Paul says: "The first man Adam was made a living soul, the last Adam was made a quickening spirit."—What is the difference between "a living soul" and a "quickening spirit?" Let us try an illustration: Take a glass of water from a cold spring, and for a moment it is just as good as the water in the spring; but it immediately begins to lose its freshness, growing flat, and less palatable, till in process of time it becomes odious. This deteriorating process commences the moment it is taken from the spring, and begins a separate existence. It is good at the beginning, and yet its state is one that must end in staleness. That may represent the first Adam—a "living soul." There is life in such a soul, but is life under such conditions, and with such certainty of termination as in the case of the water we have described, which was separated from its sources. Its infancy is pure, but with a purity that cannot last.

Place another glass now in a situation where it will be constantly receiving from the spring, and the glass of water will be always fresh.—Though for a single draught you would not notice any particular difference between the water in the one case and the other the moment it was dropped from the spring, yet the state of the water in the two vessels is very different. The water that is constantly renewed from the spring, represents the "quickening spirit."—There is in that soul something more than mere life that runs itself out into habits, it is renewed life, quickening life, like the spring that is ever running.

Paul gives us that idea when he says, "Though our outward man perish, yet our inward man is renewed day by day." There is a blessed promise in Isaiah to the same effect: "even the youth shall faint and be weary and the young man shall utterly fall; but they that wait on the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary they shall walk and not faint."—J. H. Noyes, in Oneida Circular.

Love of the Beautiful.

Place a young girl under the care of a kind-hearted woman, and she, unconsciously to herself, grows into a graceful lady. Place a boy in the establishment of a thorough-going, straight-forward, business man, and the boy becomes a self-reliant, practical, business man. Children are susceptible creatures, and circumstances, scenes and actions, always impress. As you influence them, not by arbitrary rules, nor by stern example alone, but a thousand other ways that speak through beautiful forms, pretty pictures, etc., so they will grow. Teach your children, then, to love the beautiful. Give them a corner in the garden for flowers; encourage them to put it in shape of hanging baskets; show them where they can best view the sunset: rouse them in the morning, not with the stern, "Time to work," but with the enthusiastic "See the beautiful sunrise!" Buy for them beautiful pictures, and encourage them to decorate their rooms in his or her childish way.—Give them an inch and they will go a mile. Allow them the privilege, and they will make your home beautiful.

Tobacco Column.

There's naught exceeds
The filth that from a chewer's mouth proceeds:
Two ounces chewed a day, produce
A full half-pint of vile tobacco juice,
Which, if counted five and twenty years,
(As from a calculation it appears,)
With this foul stuff would near five hogsheads fill,
Besides old quids a larger parcel still.
Nor am I with this calculation done:
He in that time has chewed full half a ton;
A wagon-load of that which would of course
Sicken a dog or kill a horse.
Could he forsee, but at a single view,
What he was in his life destined to chew,
And then the products of his work survey,
He would grow sick and throw his quid away
Or could the girl, ere she had pledged to be
His loving wife, her future prospects see—
Could she but see that through his mouth would pass,
In this short life, such dirty, loathsome mass
Would she consent to take his hand for life,
And, wedded to his filth, become his wife?
And if she would, say, where's that pretty miss
That envies her the lip she has to kiss?

College Smoking.

The Independent, in an able article, speaks its mind concerning sundry "college customs," some of which are vile, and others only absurd; some dying and some expected to die. On the smoking of tobacco, it utters the following sensible remarks:

"And, speaking of tobacco, we might as well free our minds. There is a large number in every college class who do not smoke. They regard it as a foolish, filthy practice.—To them tobacco is disgusting, and they believe its use a physical injury, and indirectly a moral evil. They believe rum and tobacco have kindred affinities. We would suggest to their classmates, is it manly by the tyranny of custom or of class opinion to force upon them a ceremony like that of the so-called 'Pipe of peace,' which is distasteful to their moral sense?—The clasped hands, we have said, are beautiful. They mean something.—But to see a ring of refined young scholars going to the greasy Apaches, instead of the polished Athenians, for their models—sucking dirty smoke through a hole, is neither emblematic nor elevating. And when we think of the scores of young men who will this summer do violence to their own manliness, so as not to seem squeamish or narrow, a mild indignation takes the place of disgust."

CHEWING THE LIZARD.—A young man at Hopkinton, Iowa, noticing that his tobacco didn't "chew right," dissected the plug, and found a lizard had been pressed between its folds.—Altogether a matter of taste. We would as soon eat the lizard as the tobacco.

"They Say."

A great many excellent people have had their worldly prospects entirely destroyed and hundreds, nay, thousand have had their hearts wrung with anguish in consequence of the slanders of the family of They. If a man repeats a slander in the street, and he is asked who told him so, his answer is "They said so." They ought to be hooted out of society; for They have done more mischief in the domestic and social circles than any other family under heaven. How easy it is for a slander to be propagated, which, perhaps, may ruin a young man's prospects forever; and must be borne in mind that They are always implicitly believed. An example by way of illustration: A friend meets another in the street, and asks if he has seen Mr. Q. that morning.—His answer is no; that he heard he had been gambling all night. The response is—it is impossible, for he drank tea with me last evening, and did not leave until ten o'clock; who told you so? They told me so, is the answer; and, as he desired a favor of me to-day I shall not grant it until I know the truth of the business for I don't intend to assist gamblers. So poor Mr. Q., who had always borne a good character—who drank tea with his neighbor, and who, on his return to his residence, retired to rest—and withal, never saw a gaming table in his life, is branded with the title of gambler, because They said so. A slander is like dust; it finds its way into the most remote recesses, and spreads, like the clouds, over the whole face of the heavens. We advise our readers to place very little or no confidence in any story whose propagator is They. They should never be believed in religion, politics, or in any matter pertaining to social life.

Fear God and be wise.

CORRESPONDENCE

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Editor Christian Companion:

DEAR SIR:

Although my name does not appear as a subscriber to your paper, I nevertheless have the privilege and pleasure of occasionally perusing it. That there are many very excellent articles published therein, from week to week, every candid reader must admit. Recently, however, a series of essays upon the subject of "Methodism" have appeared, which seem to me to be not only without foundation but perfectly absurd: more particularly that article wherein the writer speaks of Martin Luther as being the father of infidels, and the "curse and bane" of the German people, &c.

When my thoughts wander back to the dark days of the sixteenth century, in contemplation of the great work Martin Luther was the instrument in accomplishing for God and mankind; when I see him,—actuated by the purest motives and inspired with a most holy zeal for the salvation of his fellow men,—leave his cell and gird on the gospel armor, praying that God would lead him in the true paths of life eternal, humbling himself at the feet of the Savior, and battling long and manfully in opposition to popes and kings, against superstition and error; and when, in after years, I see the fruit of his labors filling the world with a pure Christianity, and leading men to a higher consecration of themselves to God; then it is that I am at a loss to see the motive for denominating that unquestionably great and good man as being the curse and bane of the German people, and the father of infidels. Will your correspondent be kind enough to make that point clear?

Yours truly,

Mc Veytown, Pa. SENECA.

On the Missionary Cause.

Many brethren seem opposed to sending missionaries. I do not fully understand why the brethren oppose such a good cause? If you please, look around and notice all other churches, how busy they are in sending missionaries. Though blinded by bigotry or ignorance, they seem to have plenty of money; they seem to give willingly. There are German Reformed, the Lutherans, the Presbyterians, all contribute a large sum of money to college purposes, and they all send missionaries. They pay their thousands of dollars a year for such purposes; not a word of complaint about a ten cent tax. Now brethren, if all those so-called churches are sending off missionaries and spreading their doctrine, why should not we be spreading the doctrine of truth? The scriptures say we should resist the devil. While other churches preach that the commands of Christ are not essential, we,as followers of Christ, should do more than we are doing in proving that all the commands of Christ are essential to salvation. Christ called the twelve disciples together and told them to go and preach, saying, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand." What are these but missionaries?

"But," says one of our brethren, "they did not call for money to bear their expenses."

But, my dear brother, you must remember they were in possession of something better than money. God had blest them with power to heal the sick, to cure all manner of diseases. That is something that we are not in possession of now. That mighty power was wrought to take them without money. Christ told his disciples, "Provide neither gold, nor silver, nor brass in your purses; nor scrip for your journey; neither two coats; neither shoes, nor yet staves" Nor mind the words that Christ spoke in the same verse, "for the workman is worthy of his meat." Now I must believe that they were well rewarded, for they had the power to do a mighty work. Suppose we could do the works that the apostles did.—Why if I could do the works that they could, I would not call on my brethren to aid me to go to Oregon. But now it takes money instead of having the power to do miracles (or not having faith, I leave this for some of my brethren, to answer). If we lack that faith, may God help us to get it soon, is my prayer.

Now these twelve apostles were not all that he sent out to preach; but he sent out seventy others. Why it seems that the very devils were subject to them. These were all missionaries. They were to preach the gospel.

Then after Christ's death and resurrection, he gave the apostles the great commission: "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching themto observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen.

Brethren these are plain and positive words from our Lord and Master. Now all these were missionaries, by Christ's own appointment. I do not think any one will deny this. And we can read that some of them had families. Did they not all need some support? Certainly they did Where did they get their support from? from the world? No, from the church; for we read that they sold their possessions and had all things common. The poor had as much as the rich. This was brotherly love.

Christ told the apostles to observe all things and to teach others the same. Now if we claim to be the followers of Christ, why should we not observe all things. We can read the apostles did just as they were commanded to do. According to history they preached to all nations that existed; and they even suffered in order to fulfill that command. They seemed to love to do good to the perishing souls around them. There was no mighty dollar between them and God.

Now to you brethren who are opposed to missionaries. Brethren George Long and Daniel Summers, came through the part of Indiana where I lived, on a mission of love, about ten years ago; and that was the first time that I ever heard such doctrine. I heard of the the name "Dunkard" by way of ridicule; but never knew of their faith, but I was raised Calvinistic. I had a little water sprinkled on my head when sixteen years old. This was through blind teachers. There are hundreds of poor, deluded souls in our own land just as I was. May God help us all to help spread the truth as it is in Christ. I have a great love for those brethren Oh how I wish I could hear brother Long preach once more! May God help him to still open the eyes of the blind, as he did my eyes, to see the gospel light and truth. He was one missionary that did good. Not only did he do good to me, but to many others It is true we longed to see some brethren preach, for we were sometimes over eighteen months without preaching. This seems hard, when some churches had four and five speakers, but not one was sent to our aid. Was this fulfilling the command of Christ, when he said "go and preach?" Ah Brethren, wake up to a sense of duty.

Those brethren who have been raised up in the church, cannot sympathize with us that have not heard the Brethren preach, but about three times in five years. Those were lonesome times; and the wolves all aronnd us, ready to devour the flock. No shepherd or watch over us. Brethren, if you never had the trial, you do not know how we felt.

Think of our dear brethren that have been calling in Oregon, for ten years. I do not believe in sending preachers there to stay a little while, then come away again. This will not do. But send them that will go and stay. "How shall they hear with out a preacher; and how shall they preach except they be sent?" Thebrethren cannot observe the Lord's Supper nor any of the ordinances; they cannot enjoy themselves in these glorious means of grace: for they have no shepherd. Did not Paul send Timothy to ordain elders over the churches? (not elder but elders). Now this is passing strange, as many churches as we have in the east, that there cannot be one man sent to Oregon to watch over the flock. to help to build up churches! But I fear we have not the love or sympathy for our brethren that we should have. Oh, what a pity! the love of the world is cutting the cord of brotherly love! Oh, how much more we ought to love our brethren these dark times!

This is a subject that I have long been looking at, I often wondered why they did not assist or send our preachers to where they had none It is true the love of money is getting possesion of the heart too much in this our day. What a pity this love of money, this covetous principle, has got into the churches so much While this is the ruling principle of the heart, the love of Christ, & the love of a brother cannot dwell there. I here mention that I would not have called for aid to take me and my family to Oregon, but I had not means enough

Lovefeasts.

Middle Creek, Somerset county, Pa., Sept. 21st, 4 P. M.

Logan church, Logan county, Ohio, Sept. 29th.

Walnut Level, Wells county, Ind., Oct. 21st.

Yellow Creek, Claar's meeting-house, Bedford county, Pa. Sept. 27th, 4 P. M.

Plymouth, Lyon co., Kan., Sept. 2nd.

Somerset arm, Mercer co., Mo., Sept. 23d and 24th.

Shelby co., Iowa, Sept. 2nd.

Salem branch, Marion co., Ill., Aug. 26th.

Dresden Powesheik co., Iowa, Sept 2nd & 3rd.

Buck's Creek church, Henry county, Ind., Sept. 28th.

Lick Creek congregation, Owen county, Ind, Sept. 29th.

Spring Creek, Rockingham county, Va., Sept. 22, 24.

South Keokuk, Keokuk Co., Iowa, Sept. 30th, and Oct. 1st.

Yellow Creek, New Enterprise, Bedford County, Pa., Oct. 24th, 4 o'clock P. M.

Eeast meeting-house, Pine Creek congregation, St. Joseph county, Mich., Oct 19th, 4 o'clock P. M.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with obituary notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In the Manor branch, Indiana Co., Pa., March 17th Sister MARY KEPHART, aged 70y. 3m. 2d. Funeral discourse from 1 Thes. 4 : 13, by Mark Minser and D. Ober.

In the same branch, July 27th, Sister SARAH TIGLER, consort of the late Brother Michael Tigler, aged 59y. 4m. 11d. Funeral discourse from Rev., 2 : 11, "He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death," by the writer.

In the same branch, August 2d, Friend ANDREW DICK, aged 28y. 1m. 26d. He leaves a disconsolate widow and several small children to mourn their loss. Funeral discourse from Psalm 17 : 15, by Joseph Holsopple.

Near Marmaton, Bourbon county, Kansas, July 25th, MINNIE CATHARINE, daughter of brother David and sister Rachel BOLLINGER, aged 11 months and 15 days. On the 23rd, the child pulled a cup of boiling hot coffee over its face and breast, scalding it so severely that it died two days afterward. Funeral occasion improved by Eld. J. Harshy and the writer.

A. C. Numer.

In the Nettle Creek congregation, Wayne county, Indiana, on the 11th day of August, of Flux, CLINTON D. TEETER, only child of brother Lewis W. and sister Nancy E. Teeter, and grandson of the writer, aged 1 year 9 months and 25 days. Funeral discourse by brother Daniel Bowman and others, from Mark 10 : 13—16.

David Bowman.

Within the bounds of the Conemaugh congregation, July 23rd, Mrs. MARY McGRIGER, aged between 84 and 85 years. Funeral sermon by the writer.

Also, in the same district, on the 30th of August, JACOB G., son of brother Israel and sister Annie BERKLEY, aged 3 years 9 months and 4 days. Funeral sermon by the writer.

Stephen Hildebrand.

In the Yellow Creek district, Elkhart Co., Ind., July 30th, sister BARBARA EBERSOLE, wife of Elder Jacob Ebersole, aged 80 years 8 months and 8 days; leaving a husband and seven living children. Her funeral discourse was delivered by Elder Jacob Studebaker and Moses Hess. The text (chosen by herself) was 2 Timothy 4 :6, 8.

H. Rule.

In the Valley District, Augusta county, Va. July 22nd, 1871; sister ANNIE A. ANDES, daughter of brother William and sister Catharine Andes: aged 20 years 7 months and 4 days. Disease, Consumption. She was afflicted with this lingering disease for over three years, a good portion of the time she was confined to her bed and arm-chair; but she bore her affliction with Christian patience and fortitude. She was never heard to murmur or complain of her situation, but she looked forward with a triumphing faith, feeling assured that her light afflictions were calculated to work out for her a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. She united with the church when quite young, and lived and led in all respects a holy, Christian life. During her affliction, she ofttimes called for the brethren to hold meeting at her father's house, which was readily attended to. She strictly remembered all the commandments of the Lord, to do them, even to the anointing of oil in the name of the Lord; after which she called the family of which she was a member, to her bedside, and told them that she was now ready for her departure; and then giving those around her some words of comfort and consolation, encouraging them to be faithful to the Lord that they might meet her in heaven, she made her own selection for a text for her funeral services, (2 Cor. 4 : 17), also the 607th hymn in the Brethren's Book.

Services by brother Isaac Long.

May the above notice be read to much profit by all, both old and young, with such an example of a Christian life before us, of such a youth as the deceased was. The writer was at different times with her during her affliction, and it appeared to me that all her glory was in the Lord, and in the comfort of the Holy Spirit. She loved to talk about her Savior and loved to sing his praise, which caused me to rejoice in the God of my salvation with her. I have at other times been called to the bedside of youths as she was, who could not rejoice in their salvation from the fact that they had nothing but trampled privileges and neglected duty, to fix their eyes upon; who, instead of praying for the hour to come to release them from this sinful world, would pray for more time to live so that they could make their peace with God. My dear young friends, take the admonition of a friend: accept of God's mercy, while in the day of God's grace. Today you hear his voice; harden not your hearts. Serve the Lord while in youth;—serve him while in health; then when sickness comes, you can rejoice even in death.

Levi Garber.

LIST OF MONEYS received for subscription, books, &c.,

M. Beshoar,	$4,40	Adam Brown,	1,50
S. Yoder,	2,00	Eld. I. Price,	2,25
D. Senger,	1,50	J. S. Thomas,	18,25
J. L. Myers,	8,00	J. Holsopple,	6,30
R. R. Reigert,	1,25	J. Cristner,	6,00
P. Bolinger,	7,25	C. Miller,	,50
John Shick,	1,00	S. Bollinger,	3,75
M. Forney,	8,01	M. Frantz,	1,00
J. Maugans,	,50	L. Said,	1,00
A. Fultz,	1,5I	A. J. Sparks,	2,65
John Everett,	3,00	G. Myers for
A. H. Fike,	7,75	S. Sons,	1,50
M. A. Lear,	1.50	Daniel Keller, (for
W. B. Donathen,	,75	D. M. H.),	60.00
Martin Row,	1,50	W. Leatherman,	1,25
J. M. Hutchison,	1,50

Advertisements.

WE will admit a limited number of select advertisements at the following rates

One insertion, 20 cents a line.

Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.

Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.

No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations

ENGLISH ROOFING FELT.

Is found to stand well in all climates, being extensively used for Roofing Houses, Out Buildings and Sheds; for Laying Flat Roofs, Gutters, Lining Granaries, Storehouses, or Walls, (either outside or inside), and for placing under Slates or Tiles. It is also a cheap and effective Ceiling on the underneath side of rafters of a Slated or Tiled Roof, and as a Ceiling to Iron Roofs, counteracting Heat, Frost, and Condensation of Moisture.

The English Felt is put up in rolls of 25 yards in length, by 32 inches in width, and containing a surface of 500 square feet.

THREE-PLY FELT,

FOR ROOFING.

In Rolls, 26 inches wide, by 50 feet in length; each roll will cover a surfacee 10 feet square, or 100 square feet.

It ts to be laid across the roof, shingle fashion, with a lap of two inches, and secured by nailing the edges with 32 nails and tin caps.

When laid, the Felt is to be painted with Mastic Roof Coating, and Sanded. The Mastic Roof Coating is mixed, ready for use, and is applied with a brush.

TARRED ROOFING FELT.

Used extensively for Sheating Houses, and for Tar and Gravel Roofing, also for placing under Slate, Tin and Shingle Roofing.

It is used in packing Woolens and Furs to protect them from moths.

Put up in rolls weighing 45 pounds each. 15 pounds Felt will cover a surface of 100 square feet.

TWO-PLY FELT,

For Sheathing Houses, Roofing Tempoary Buildings, making Water Tight Floors, and for placing under Slate and Shingles.

In rolls, 26 inches wide by 50 feet in length. Each roll will cover a surface 10 feet square or 100 square feet.

For Sheathing it can be nailed upon the studding, making perfectly air tight sheathing, and sure protection from dampness.—Rats mice or vermin will not go near it.

MICA CANVAS ROOFING.

In rolls containing 250 square feet. Is to be laid across the roof, and lapped shingle fashion with a lay of two inches, and secured by nailidg the edges with 20 oz tacks.

This is the only Composition Roofing that does not require a finishing coat of paint or cement.

UNTARRED SHEATHING FELT.

For Carpet Lining, Deafening Floors, and for putting under Slate, Tin and Shingle Roofing.

Put up in rolls weighing 100 pounds. 10 pounds Felt will cover a surface 10 feet square, or 100 square feet.

MANUFACTURED BY THE

PENN ROOFING COMPANY,

105 South Second St. Phil'a.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine, with Drop Feed, new Take-up, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted FIRST CLASS, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted traveling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $200 per month. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. Co.
33 East Union Square, 17th St., New York

BURLINGTON.

Leaving the East and arriving at Chicago or Indianapolis, how shall we reach the West? The best Line is acknowledged to be the C. B. and Q., joined together with the B. & M. Railroad by the Iron Bridge at Burlington, and called the Burlington Route.

The main line of the Route running to Omaha, connects with the great Pacific Roads, and forms to-day the leading route to California. The Middle Branch, entering Nebraska at Plattsmouth, passes through Lincoln, the State Capital, and will this year be finished to Fort Kearney, forming the shortest route across the Continent by over 100 miles.

Another branch of the B. M., diverging at Red Oak, falls into a line running down the Missouri through St. Joe to Kansas City, and all Kansas. Passengers by this route to Kansas, see Illinois, Southern Iowa, and Missouri, and, by a slight divergence, can see Nebraska also.

Lovers of fine views should remember the Burlington Route, for its towns "high-gleaming from afar"—its tree-fringed streams—its rough bluffs and quarries—its corn-ocean stretching over the prairies further than eye can reach.

Land-buyers will be sure to remember it, for they have friends among the two thousand who have already bought farms from Geo. S. Harris, the Land Commissioner of the B. & M. R. R. at Burlington, Iowa, or among the four thousand home-steaders and pre-emptors who last year filed claims in the Lincoln Land Office, where "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm."

SHORT HAND WRITING.—Students of Phonography and all others who are interested in the art can obtain instruction books Send stamp for price list and tracts.
"AMERICAN PHONETIC DEPOT.
TYRONE, PA.

J. S. THOMAS, & CO.
WHOLESALE GROCERS
and
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
No. 305 RACE ST. ABOVE 3RD, PHILADELPHIA,
N. B Country Produce taken in exchange for goods or sold on commission.

CABINET MAKING & UNDERTAKING

The undersigned keeps on hand and manufactures to order all kinds of Furniture. He is also neatly fitted out for conveying the dead to their last resting place.

Manufacturer of the Common Sense Dasher Washing Machine. Shop at the Cross Roads, near Warrior's Mark, Pa.
JAMES S. COX.

A Washing Machine may be seen and purchased at this office. vol15tf.

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price, $4.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol., $2.25. Indispensable.

Life at Home; or the Family and its MEMBERS.—Including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed. The Altar in the House, etc. By Wm. Aikman, $1.50;

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. THOMPSON. Fancy Cloth. $1.00.

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand-book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for students and Examiners, with a Chart for recording the sizes of the different Organs of the Brain, in the Delineation of Character, with upwards of 170 Engravings. Muslin, $1.25.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50;

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By W. PITTINGER. $1.50.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Beautifully Illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth, gilt, beveled boards. Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75 cents.

Any of the above sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

The Phrenological Journal, An Illus- TRATED, First-Class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50, or with the Pious Youth, for $4.00. We commend the JOURNAL to all who want a good Family Magazine, and who does not?

All orders should be accompanied with the money, and the name of person, post office, county and state written in unmistakable letters and address to H. R. HOLSINGER, Tyrone Pa.

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING

One copy, post paid	0.75
12 copies, post paid	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	$0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN & ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid	$1.00
Per dozen,	10.30

Turkey Morocco, Ger. & Eng.

One copy, post paid,	1,25
Per dozen " "	13.30

Plain Single German

One copy, post paid	.50
Per dozen" "	$5.50

The Christian Harp, containing 32 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid, $2.70
Reserved at the office, 2.25

NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40

BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA. $1.70

Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder, Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express,	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	60
German & English Testaments,	.75

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25

32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION. 25

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Certificates &c.

Marriage Certificate, per doz., post paid, 0.30
CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP. Per doz, 0.20
TRACTS.—RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE, 12 pages five cents single copy; thirty cents a doz.

All orders should be accompanied with the money, and the name of person, postoffice county & state written in unmistakable letters.

THE PIOUS YOUTH
A MONTHLY PUBLICATION
Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.
One dollar a year in advance.

THE
Christian Family Companion
Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements; that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political Journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
TYRONE, PA.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum

VOLUME VII. TYRONE, PA. TUESDAY, SEPT. 12, 1871. NUMBER 37.

"Be Careful for Nothing."

PHIL. iv. 6.

Be careful for nothing, whatever betide,
Fear not, timid child, but keep close to my side;
Be careful for nothing; 'tis all plain to Me,
Though dark to thy vision,—enough that I see.

Be careful for nothing;—no want shall be thine,
Within my green pastures' at peace, then, recline;
Thine only care being with me to abide,
Thou'lt find from my fulness thy need all supplied.

Be careful for nothing;—art burdened and sad?
Oh Come unto me! rest thy soul and be glad;
Why should'st thou still take the trouble and care,
When thou hast MY strength every burden to bear?

Be careful for nothing; I know all Thy need,
Thy sickness and sorrow, and hasten to heed;
When trials surround thee, and troubles come fast,
Oh run to me quickly, and hide from the blast.

Be careful for nothing; I hold in my hand
The winds and the tempests that sweep o'er the land;
Fear not for the darkness, the clouds do not dread,
Remember, I've numbered each hair of thy head.

Be careful for nothing; when storms are all o'er,
The sweeter the sunshine that breaks on the shore;
And then, with rejoicing, my child, thou shalt see,
How each billowy wave bore a blessing to thee.

Be careful for nothing;—not even for Death,
With his dark'ning shadow and withering breath;
Oh, dread not his coming. I've conquered for thee
And safe is the soul that abideth in me!

Be careful for nothing; but watch, praise and pray,
And I'll never forsake thee till life's latest day;
Then, through the "dark valley," I'll walk by thy side,
And take thee, in triumph, with me to abide.

—Mariah West.

SEEK no toil to make yourself remarkable by some talent or other. Yet do not devote yourself to one branch exclusively. Strive to get clear notions about all. Give up no science entirely, for science is but one.—Seneca.

For the Companion.

The Brethren's Order.

The above may seem a very peculiar heading, to a great many of the readers of your valuable paper, but, inasmuch as there is so much said and written upon the three following phrases,—"The old order of the Brethren," "The old Brethren's Order," and "The Brethren's Order," I thought it not out of place to say a little upon this matter, explanatory.

What are we to understand by the phrase, "The old order of the brethren?" I understand it to imply, and to refer us to, the decisions the brethren made and tried to live up to a hundred or more years ago. These decisions or conclusions then agreed upon, were to cover existing cases, or, as they were looked upon, inovationns; being of such a nature, that the word of God could not be brought to bear directly upon them. But in many cases the monster-looks of those things passed away, by their becoming very useful to society and to Christianity. The conclusions and decisions, therefore, became obsolete; and hence they may, with propriety, be brought under the head ng.—"The old order of the Brethren."

In looking over the business transactions of the Brethren in an early day,—and we may even say, up to within twenty-five years of the present time,—we can readily discover, that many of the objectional things are now used to great advantage; yet, at the same time, we, of the present generation, should not look upon the decisions and conclusions of the church of former generations with disdain or disrespect: nay, verily, we should ever feel thankful to our heavenly Father, that our brethren were so careful concerning those new things that were then springing up. But now, since we see the utility of many of those things that were in their uprising viewed with a critic's eye,—seeing their usefulness and the great advantage we gain in the use of them,—we have brought those decisions under the heading of "The old order of the Brethren." Inasmuch, then, as many of those new things, that were in their time handled as a coal of fire, are now used by nearly all or altogether so, to a good advantage, we should not be so ready to censure our young brethren and sisters for not living up to "the old order of the Brethren, when we are all continually verging away from it ourselves. We must all admit that times and customs are continually changing; and so have many of these things changed, and will yet be changing; and in my humble opinion, it would be wrong in us to radically enforce the old order of the brethren upon the present generation of believers: it would bring upon us inconveniences, and would be detrimental to the cause of our blessed Master. How would we in our older congregations do, if we were made to worship in our dwelling houses? Our members, let alone the outsiders, could not be accommodated; and many, from this fact, would be deprived of hearing the truth preached.

2. What are we to understand by the expression, "The old Brethren's Order?" Brethren and sisters, you may think that in the phrase, "The old Brethren's Order," there is not much more contained than simply an expression of respect to age. If this were so, we would not have much to say under this division of our subject. I think it embodies more than many are aware of. What do we understand by the expression? Would it not convey the idea to every intelligent mind, that there were among us an order that had age for its foundation? This is what I mean: If an old brother, or a few of them, should get up an idea,—no matter whether right or wrong in the estimation of the younger ones,—and would have it put through (as the saying is), that is what I would call an old brethren's order. Age should be respected, but not above what it deserves. Here is an instance:—When the query came up before the A. M. as to whether it was right to teach, or play upon instruments,—and I think conveyed the idea as to whether it was right in us to have our children taught the science of instrumental music, &c.,—some of the old brethren asked for a thus saith the Lord, forbidding any such thing; and from the fact that this could not be done, the query was tabled. And later, I saw and read a few articles on singing, written, no doubt, out of love, saying, that there was too much singing at our late A. M.; and then brought in our regular meetings. The strength of these arguments was based upon the fact that we cannot find that the apostles had much singing, if any, in their public assemblies. Neither can we find that they had from ten to thirty minutes preaching before prayer; and I presume for this reason are we taught to do so. The reader may be anxious to know what I want with all this. I will now make the application.

When a non-compliance with the old brethren's order of wearing a round-breasted coat, a straight jacket, with a stand-up collar, no black colors, &c., is almost, and in some cases altogether, made a test of membership, asking for a plain "thus saith the Lord," we are pointed to the "Old Brethren's Order," and not to the Bible. And why? For the simple reason that the Bible is silent on those subjects. Why not dispose of these as has been done with many others for want of Bible evidence. Herein is where I think a great wrong is done; and where many of our young members are driven back, and treated with coldness by older ones. I am persuaded that these things ought not so to be; and the only way I know to overcome this difficulty is, to strictly comply with the

BRETHREN'S ORDER.

And what kind of an order is this? It is the order that agrees with the Bible in all its plain and unmistakable teaching. It may truly be said, "the Brethren's order" is the order of Heaven; for they have been taught out of Heaven's laws. It should make every brother and sister rejoice, to think that we at are an agreement with heaven. As long as we follow out this rule, we will have no trouble among us. By this can we overcome powers, dominions, kingdoms, and even the gates of hell cannot prevail; neither height, depth, things present nor things to come, can move our confidence and unity in him who is the head of all, and through whom we have been made the mighty people of God. And as long as we look to Jesus Christ, from a proper stand-point, who is said to be the author and finisher of our faith, we can never fall. But just as soon as we deviate from this rule and adopt any other, we will fall into the same pitiful dilemma as did the once mighty church of Rome: they heeded tradition, and the sayings of the father's, more than the written word of God, and have been swallowed up by Priests and Popes. Let Jesus Christ be our Standard bearer. In all things say, "Thy will be done;" and where God's word is not plain on a subject, then let not only a few, —whether old or young,—decide the subject; but all become united in the decision, and you will never hear of any dissatisfaction among us. In conclusion let me say to the old: Think not that you are always right in your conclusion, and that the younger know nothing. You may learn lessons of great importance even from babes. And to the young let me say: Stand under the arms of our old; help to carry out the principles of the Brethren's order, and by bearing one another's burdens you will fulfil the law of Christ. And be assured, brethren and sisters, that the day is not far off, where no distinction of age will be made, but all, all, will be but the Brethren, and that the brethren of Christ. C. G. LINT.

Dale City, Pa.

For the Companion.

Quickened.

In reviewing my article on page 181 of the C. F. C. brother Thomas says: "Just so soon as that body was quickened, he, by that made alive body, preached to those that were disobedient in the days of Noah, and, no doubt, exhibited to them the wounds that he received on Calvary, 'that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit.'" All the difference that there is between brother Thomas and I, is, he believes that Christ did his preaching to the ante-diluvians immediately after his resurrection; that his body, and not his spirit, was quickened; and I believe he did his preaching between his resurrection and crucifixion, and that his spirit, and not his body was quickened. I think it necessary for Christ to go disembodied to preach to those disemboddied ante-diluvians. He says Christ was not quickened in but by the spirit. Christ's troubled spirit, after its disembodiment was quickened, or refreshed, by the Spirit of God. He was "put to death in the flesh," and "quickened by the Spirit;" and "by," in, or with his quickened spirit "he went and preached to the spirits in prison." It is but little difference who is correct, brother Thomas or I,—our views both carry redemption and the means of salvation beyond the tomb; giving the dead, as well as the living, an opportunity of being saved from hells dreadful reality. I believe that God will give every man, dead or alive, one opportunity to be saved from the power of death; offering to him the means of salvation for him to accept or reject for his weal or woe.

Brother T. thinks that Christ without his body before its resurrection would not be a whole Christ. In the Mount of transfiguration, did Christ talk with a whole Moses and Elias when they appeared unto him, talking with him? O brother! this part of a Christ is all a whim.

You say it was his body that was quickened, and by it he went and preached to them that are dead. Well, let us see how that is: It was forty days between his resurrection and ascension; and Luke says, Acts 1: 3, "He was seen of them (the apostles) forty days and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God." Dear brother T. you see there was no time for him to preach to the ante-diluvians; and you do not believe that he was preaching at both places at the same time. Then the forcible conclusion is, that he was preaching to disembodied ante-diluvians while his body lay in Joseph's new tomb; and after his resurrection he again appeared unto his brethren in the body, and instructed them as he had before his crucifixion.

A. LEEDY, JR.

Antioch, Ind.

Every-day Religion.

We must come back to our point which is, not to urge all of you to give yourselves up to mission work, but to serve God more and more in connection with your daily calling. I have heard that a woman who has a mission makes a poor wife and a bad mother; this is very possible and at the same time very lamentable; but the mission I would urge is not of this sort.—Dirty rooms, slatternly gowns, and children with unwashed faces are swift witnesses against the sincerity of those who keep other vineyards and neglect their own. I have no faith in that woman who talks of grace and glory abroad and uses no soap and water at home. Let the buttons be on the shirts, let the children's socks be mended, let the roast mutton be done to a turn, let the house be as neat as a new pin, and the house be as happy as a home can be. Serve God by doing common actions in a heavenly spirit, and then if your daily calling only leaves you cracks and crevices of time, fill these up with holy service.—Spurgeon.

For the COMPANION.

"Brother Lœhr's Appeal."

In No. 32, brother Joseph Myers says, he would like to be a little better satisfied of the actual necessity of sending a brother to assist brother Loehr; and adds: "Does not brother Loehr live there, right among them in Michigan?" Now we conceive that this expression of brother Joseph is the mind of many brethren in the East, and especially those three "Dutch Churches." Therefore, Christian affection and love induces us to try and give them satisfaction, in the spirit of meekness and candor.

We would say then at once, the expression "Does not brother Loehr live there, right among them in Michigan?" betrays a too narrow conception of brother Loehr's position. The state of Michigan is very large. Brother L. has traveled and preached in a number of counties; but it is not always the case when people hear the Gospel preached that they say right then, "What doth hinder me to be baptized?" In such cases, where they are willing brother L. does not first travel over land and water, hills and dales, to Jerusalem nor to Pennsylvania, to ask for help; but does just as Philip did. Yet when brother L. is called two or three hundred miles, to baptize and preach, and he has no purse nor scrip,and but a staff,—and that even not like that of Moses, to perform miracles with,—brother L. is prevented from answering to the call.

Brother L. has indeed divested himself of temporal things,—excepting a small spot of earth for a temporary home,—and lets the few children he has yet, work out for their living, so that he could go unhindered. But, dear brother Joseph, though he has thus divested himself, and is devoted to his Master's service in his declining days, yet, since there is no treasury as there was in the days of the apostles, nor a Judas that carried the purse, that things can be bought when needed, he cannot answer all the calls. Yet he did go, after coming home from A. M., several hundred miles to baptize and to preach; and the Lord knows who enabled him to do so; it was not those that are afraid a "Ten Cent Tax" will do "Mischief."

But we will be charitable, and ascribe no other than pure motives, and hear you say, that you want to hear the good results (of sending missionaries of course) before we encourage it. Now to satisfy you on that head, we must first understand what it is. My understanding is, missionaries are persons that are sent out to preach the Gospel where it has not yet been preached. They may remain one year or ten years, one week or ten weeks, in a place. If they have preached the Gospel in a place till they see that the people reject it, they are at liberty to go to another, after the example of the apostles; and if the people accept their doctrine, they will organize churches, and proceed farther. This was the course pursued by the apostles. They went abroad and made protracted efforts, and continued long enough in one place to establish a church; and from time to time they revisited them. Thsu it was done till the then known world had heard the glad news of salvation. And when, in the wisdom of God "who made the world and all things therein," the time came that this western hemisphere was to be enlightened, persecution did the work like it did in the beginning, in the land of Judea. There is no persecution here; but an open door that no one can shut. Our brethren have been induced to move westward, not so much for the sake of the Gospel as that of their temporal interest: and I have no objection so that the Gospel is preached as Paul says.

Now brother L. has done all he could to induce brethren,—speakers,—to move to this state; but so far without effect, comparatively speaking; for he is as yet the only one that travels of any account. He has applied to Indiana, and it was responded to in part. But so long as brethren are sent that have large possessions at home, the time they can spare from their home concerns is too limited; therefore brother L. told you at your District Meeting, that, if you send a brother, send one that suffers no loss in being absent from home; and it was done so, I believe.

But here comes in the great danger. There are 23 churches composing the Middle District of Pa. Taking the three Dutch churches out leaves 20. Counting 200 members to a church, and 10 cents from each member, makes 400 dollars. But it was supposed that not more than the half could be counted on; that would leave only 200 dollars, which would certainly leave no dangerous surplus in the treasury.

But now suppose brother D. M. Holsinger's mission proves a success, there will be "scores of places equally necessary to be supplied." Now let us see how many souls must be converted by brother H's mission to call it a success? Are ten enough? Are not five enough? If so, then let us take the ten dollars, the brother supposes, which will make 100 times 10 cents; therefore if ten cents sends out one brother, one dollar will pay for ten, and ten dollars for a hundred. Having equal success, each converting five souls, there will five hundred souls be saved with four thousand dollars. Then, if one soul as Jesus says, is worth more than this world in which we live, those 4000 dollars have accumulated more in this wise than would have been possible in any other way imaginable.

But we are told that the mission to California and Oregon cost over six hundred dollars and "some say that it is not worth what it cost." That may all be so, but by what criterion are we to judge? "Doth our law condemn a man before he has a hearing?" I forbear to advocate the case of brethren Miller and Sturgis: they may have done wrong, and they may not. Is the church in California their judge? If it were my case I would want a hearing before the proper tribunal.

But this kind of reasoning is not correct. Does the intelligent farmer quit plowing the field that failed yielding his anticipated crop or income? Does he not send his team out again and again, until he realizes a crop that will pay?

Brother Myers says: "We do not want the Brethren to think that we areopposed to spreading the Gospel: we only differ in the plan." It is true our ancient Brethren rode many a day on horse-back 40 miles, with an early breakfast and a late supper,—and occasionally no supper at all,—serving the Master and laboring in the Gospel. And some brethren of modern date have done no less. Yet the question is, Have the members of the body done their duty? Must those scattered sheep wait till some rich brother comes and feeds them, or moves near enough that they can come to him? If so, I call on you brethren in the state of Pennsylvania, and everywhere, to deny yourselves of your pleasant homes, and come over to Macedonia and help us. Sell all you have, and come and feed the poor, then there will be no danger in the treasury. There is a great deal of good land here, even better than many of you have; and can be had as cheap, and cheaper, than yours is. And the temperate liver is as healthy here as any other place; for the temperature is not as changing in winter as in many other places. And, besides, the souls of men in Michigan are in equal value with any other souls; for Christ died for all. If this were not the case, I would rather be in your company in my old age; for it is indeed sweet communion to be with you. I would have but little self-denial, comparatively speaking, and more enjoyment. Yet I think it will be time enough to enjoy when our day's work is done. What sweet prattling there will be when all the little ones meet! Until then, fare you well.

F. P. Lœhr.

A Beautiful Illustration.

A florist will tell you that if you paint the flower-pot that contains a favorite, beautiful, flagrant flower, the plant will wither and die. You shut out the air and moisture from passing through the earth to the roots, and your paint is poisonous. Just so mere external accomplishments, or a too exclusive anxiety and regard for that, infuses the soul. The vase may be ever so beautifully ornamented, but if you deny the water of life to the flower it must die. And there are kinds of ornamental accomplishments, the very process of which is as deleterious to the soul as paint upon the flower-pot is pernicious to the plant, whose delicate leaves not only inhale a poisonous atmosphere during your very process of rendering the exterior more tasteful, but the whole earth is dried and devoid of nourishment. Nature never paints, but all her forms of loveliness are a growth, a native character, possession and development from the beginning. If the sun can never be called a painter, it is only because the plants absorb his rays, and receive them into the very texture and life of their vegetation. So, whatever is real knowledge, wisdom, principle, character, and life in education, is a process of the absorbing and development of truth, and is not mere painting.—Dr. Cheever.

Each New Day is a new glimpse into Eternity; and a new offer of eternal possibilities.—Carlyle.

They are Going One by One.

They are going one by one,
The friends I fondly love;
They are going to their home
In a brighter world above.
There is sorrow in my heart,
And the tear-drops dim my eyes,
As I watch them all depart
To their home beyond the skies.

They are going one by one,—
The young, the fair, the brave,—
Their work on earth is done,
Their rest is in the grave.
We see the vacant chair,
We hear the voice no more,
We miss their love and care,
And their early loss deplore.

They are going one by one,
The father and the mother,
The wife, the child, companion, friend,
The sister and the brother.
But we shall meet again
When life's ties are riven;
No sorrow, sickness, death or pain,
Can mar our joy in heaven.

AMANDA HOLSINGER.

Waynesboro, Pa.

I Need Thee, Precious Jesus.

I need Thee, precious Jesus,
For I am very poor;
A stranger and a pilgrim,
I have no earthly store.
I need Thee, precious Jesus,
To cheer me on my way,
To guide my doubting footsteps,
To be my strength and stay.

I need Thee, precious Jesus,
I need a Friend like Thee,—
A friend to soothe and pity,
A friend to care for me.
I need the heart of Jesus,
To feel each anxious care,
To tell my every trial,
And all my sorrows share.

I need Thee, precious Jesus,
I need Thee day by day,
To fill me with thy fulness,
And lead me on my way;
I need thy Holy Spirit
To teach me what I am,
To show me more of Jesus,
To point me to the Lamb.

I need Thee, precious Jesus,
I hope to see Thee soon,
Encircled with the rainbow,
And seated on thy throne;
There, with thy blood-bought children,
My joy shall ever be
To sing thy praises, Jesus,
To gaze, my Lord, on Thee!

An Alarming Evil.

A poor little lad once received a bit of sugar-coated tobacco from an older youth, who told him to eat it, as he was doing. The little fellow, supposing it some sort of confection, quickly swallowed it. But in a very few minutes he grew deathly sick, and hastened to his home. He grew ill so fast that a physician was called, and everything was done that could be to aid him; but in spite of all, the poor little victim died in a few hour's time. The poison had taken such a powerful hold on an empty stomach that it was carried rapidly through the whole system.

Is it not strange that any one can risk putting such a poison into the mouth, even if they do not intend to eat it? How surprising that any lad can be so foolish as to wish to acquire a taste for anything so loathsome. Yet how common the practice has become!

When the excellent Dr. Goodell had come back from a foreign land, and spent some time in visiting various places in this country, he said, "I see nothing in America so alarming as the increasing use of tobacco among the young men and boys."

He very well knew that tobacco and the pure religion of Jesus have no relationship—that tobacco and strong drink are twin brothers. Every boy who has learned to smoke and chew has started on the fair road to a drunkard's career. I hope that every reader will set his face like a flint against this loathsome vice, no matter though even a father's or a minister's example may point the other way. What would the Lord Jesus approve? should be the question, rather than what others practice.

Weeds.

I was once walking with a farmer through a beautiful field, when he chanced to see a tall thistle on the other side of the fence. In an instant he sprang over the fence and cut it off close to the ground.

"Is that your field?" I asked.

"Oh no," said the farmer, "but bad weeds don't care much for fences, and if I should leave that thistle to blossom in my neighbor's field, I should soon have plenty in my own."

I wish all fathers and mothers would think of that. The evil weeds in your neighbors field will scatter seeds into your own. So it is worth while to pull them up in self-defence. Try to influence the little, untaught child to follow the good, the true, and the beautiful, not only for his own sake, but lest he sow evil seed in the heart of your own child, in spite of all your careful tending. Every weed pulled up in your neighbors field, is a dangerous enemy driven away from your own.

Help to Save Souls.

Christian brother! Christian sister! Have you not a relative who is out of Christ? Have you not an acquaintance who is unconverted?—Doubtless you have. Are you doing your duty towards that one? He or she, as the case may be, is possessed of an immortal soul that must spend an eternity in bliss or in misery.—Ample provision has been made for the salvation of that soul. Are you willing that it should be lost? Surely every christian who reads this has sufficient influence upon some one to induce him or her to turn to the Lord. A soul is too valuable to go to perdition. No effort to save it is too great. Will you not do your duty, and plead with your unconverted friends? If there is joy in heaven over the repentance of a single sinner, will that not richly repay you for your labor of love? But a far richer reward will you have, if in the better land a dear one shall point to you as the instrument, in God's hands, of bringing him or her to the Savior. On the other hand, what a terrible account you will have to render if, through neglect to perform your duty a soul is lost? Dear christian reader, think of the consequences attending a failure to do right, and the happy results of doing right.

John Locke says, "All the entertainment and talk of history is of nothing almost but fighting and killing, and the honor and renown which are bestowed on conquerors who, for the most part, are mere butchers of mankind; misleading youth, who by these means come to think slaughter the most laudable business of mankind and the most heroic of virtues.

It were better to have no opinion of God at all, than such an opinion as is unworthy of him.

The Creator.

All things bright and beautiful,
All things great and small,
All things wise and wonderful,
The Lord God made them all.

Each little flower that opens,
Each little bird that sings,
He made their glowing colors,
He made their tiny wings.

The rich man in his castle,
The poor man at his gate,
God made them, high or lowly,
And ordered their estate.

The purple-headed mountain,
The river running by,
The sunset and the morning
That brightens up the sky.

The cold wind in the winter,
The pleasant summer sun,
The ripe fruits in the garden,
He made them every one.

The tall trees in the greenwood,
The meadows where we play,
The rushes by the water
We gather every day.

He gave us eyes to see them,
And lips that we might tell
How great is God Almighty,
Who has made all things well.

The Peril and the Escape.

A heavily-laden ship was sailing through the "Vineyard Sound," when a captain familiar with the rocks and shoals, rowing by, warned the crew of a rising gale and a dangerous ledge at hand. They disregarded the repeated alarm, and were left to their own course.

An hour later, and from the shore the signals of distress were seen from that vessel's deck. The captain who had tried in vain to induce the master and crew to seek safe anchorage, with a few friends, entered his boat, and went towards that bark, reeling in the storm on the rocks which held it fast.

Upon nearing it, the billows tossed the boat high in air, and then left it in the abyss of waters, making the rescue well nigh hopeless. At length a bed was thrown into the boat, and the cry went up, "Jump for your life, it is your only chance!" The imperilled group looked down upon the danger, and into the storm, and hesitated. The vessel began to part, and once more the shout was heard, "It is your last chance—come now, or you are lost?" The leap was made, and while the ship went to pieces on the boiling flood, the boat bore the rescued crew safely to the shore.

Thus the sinner disregards the warnings of those who see his peril; and when God in mercy brings him to feel his guilt and danger, he still clings to his foundering bark. If saved at all, he comes to the decision which costs the greatest struggle his soul can know, to spring into the arms of Christ without reserve. His heart exclaims:

"I can but perish if I go,
I am resolved to try;
For if I stay away, I know
I must forever die."

It is a wonderful fact in salvation that, with the certainty of ruin behind and of salvation before, when this last resolve is made, the souls extremity is a reality—it is a determined and yet a desperate spring of life. God intended that the surrender to His mercy should be unconditional, and the glory of the rescue for eternity His own.

A DREAM COMES TRUE. A Richmond paper contains an account of a murder committed in Wilkes county, North Carolina recently, the circumstances of which are not a little remarkable. A gentleman in that county a few days previous to the murder, sold to a neighbor a tract of land, for which he received $1,000 in cash. Business calling him away from home soon after, he left the money with his wife, and on returning he stopped over night with a friend living some ten or twelve miles distant from home. In the night he dreamed that some men had entered his house, murdered his wife and two children, stolen his money and destroyed his property. Knowing that he had left the money with his wife, he became uneasy and restless after his dream and requested a peddler who was stopping at the house with him, to accompany him at once to his home, for he feared there was a reality in his dream. On arriving at his home, to his horror he found his wife murdered, and two men sitting at a table counting out the money he had left with her. He and the peddler being armed, immediately fired upon the men and killed them. They turned out to be the man to whom he had sold the land, and from whom he had received the $1,000, and his son

Boy Smokers.

Here and there about the street corners and around the doors of places of amusement you will see a lot of urchins, some of them decently clad and presenting a respectable appearance, who are engaged in asserting their manhood by puffing away at execrable cigars. It is fair to presume that their anxious mammas are not aware of the foul habits their darling boys pick up and practice outside of the parental roof; but for their benefit they should know that it is stated that a French physician has investigated the effect of smoking, on thirty-eight boys, between the ages of nine and fifteen, who were addicted to the habit. Twenty-seven presented distinct symptoms of nicotine poison. In twenty-two there were serious disorders of the circulation, indigestion, dullness of intellect, and a marked appetite for strong drinks; in three there was heart affection; in eight decided deterioration of blood; in twelve there was frequent epistaxis; ten had disturbed sleep, and four had ulceration of the mucous membrane of the mouth. It is easy, then, to see how the ranks of drunkards and dissolute men "about town" are recruited, when there are so many boys in training for delirium tremens and the horrors of dissipation.—Louisville Journal.

FOLLOWING OUR LOVES TO HEAVEN.—Ah! how many men have found heaven by following their children there! How often is it that a man, wretchedly following after his companion, has found heaven by standing on the threshold of it and looking in upon the loved one that he has lost! The brute creation can be led and allured by taking young ones and carrying them on before them. And where a heart loves idolatrously, and is to be trained for heaven, and if the object loved is taken to heaven, how often does it follow crying as it goes as a bird cries out while it follows the boy that has the nest in his hand! How often have men learned at the cradle what they would not learn at the altar; and at the grave, what they would not in the sanctuary.

Our desire is, not that nature may obey us, but, on the contrary, that we may obey nature

The Bible Land and the Bible.

The following article is clipped from an exchange; and it is given to our readers in the hope that it will prove both interesting and instructive to them. A knowledge of the geography, climate, and customs of the Land in which the Bible writers lived and the Savior of the world himself figured, is essential to a clear understanding of the Book of books—the Bible.

In making an exploration of the Holy Land, there is nothing that so interests the Christian traveller, as to observe the abounding light that the country of the Bible sheds upon the Bible itself. Viewed from this stand-point, Palestine is a great "Chamber of Imagery," in which every object may be used as a key to interpret Scripture. Every tree that grows there; every flower that colors hillside or plain; every bird that attunes the morning echoes; every star that glitters from heaven to suggest the glory beyond; every fountain whose water revives the thirsty traveler—everything has a voice to explain this volume, and open hidden allusions, making "dark things light, and crooked things straight."—"Verily," cries aloud the enthusiastic traveler when he first realizes the Land is the God of the Book. He has preserved the Land, that our faith may be thoroughly confirmed in the Book."

To make this matter available to the Christian student, a few of these remarkable evidences are brought forward* as witnesses upon the stand.

I. The birds of the Holy Land are tuneful witnesses to many of the statements of the biblical narrative. Still the stork "knoweth the appointed time of her coming;" the eagle mounteth up in the clear, blue sky, the sparrow "chatters" upon the house top, and is sold "five for a farthing"; the young ravens cry aloud to God for their food; the fowls of the air that "sow not, neither reap, nor gather into barns," are fed by our Heavenly Father. Other references under this head, might be greatly multiplied.

II. The clothing of the people of the Holy Land is still of the same fashions worn in distant times. Customs of dress, so whimsical and eccentric in our country, are as settled in the orient as the eternal hills—they never change. And so the girdle of Judah, the sandals of the Gibeonites, the mantle of Elijah, the turban of Daniel, the cloak of Paul, and the seamless robe of Jesus, may all be met with any day, in the streets of Jerusalem—witnesses to the marvelous accuracy of the word.

III. The climate of the Holy Land sufficiently confirms the statements of the Holy Page. When "the south wind blows," there is heat (Luke 12: 55), when a cloud arises in the west there is rain (Luke 12: 54). The oriental year is still divided into seasons, by the fall of the early and the late rains; and any marked deficiency in the rainfalls of a season, is still followed by terrible droughts, accompanied by famine, disease and death.

IV. The diseases of the Holy Land are of the same types as those that existed in scriptural days, and so bear witness to scriptural truth.—Around the Sea of Galilee, fever abounds such as prostrated the little daughter of Jairus, and the mother-in-law of Peter. At Bethany sudden and fatal diseases are experienced, like that which overcame Lazarus, whom "Jesus loved." Sunstrokes are common upon the plains, as when the son of the Shunamite woman fell under its influence. Leprosy, in its utmost loathsomeness, is as prevalent as when Moses made it a type of mortal sin, and Jesus Christ of his power to heal. Blindness is fearfully frequent. In the town of Lydda, one-third the inhabitants are blind.—And the blind still sit by the wayside begging, clamoring for aid in those pitiable notes that moved the pitying heart of their Lord.

V. The domestic life of the inhabitants of Palestine, as it was so vividly depictured by the Bible writers, has remained substantially unchanged for forty centuries, and so bears its part of Bible testimony. In the sultry hour of noon, the people still sit under "their own vine and fig tree," and sleep at night in booths upon the house tops. The bread they eat is still that "daily bread" for which Jesus taught us to pray—thin, small loaves, five making a meal, baked once a day, and always eaten fresh. New wine is still kept in new bottles, and so "both are preserved." People recline at the table while eating, as they did at the Last Supper of Jesus. The sound of the grinding is still heard through the quiet night, the mill-stones small and always turned by women, as in the olden time. The salt used is still of that sort that easily loses its savor and cannot be salted again. The virgins at the weddings still go forth by night, with lighted lamps to meet the bridegroom. And the dead, at the funerals, are still carried without a coffin, upon an open bier, amid the death songs of the minstrels and the lamentations of the mourning women.

VI, The farmers of the Holy Land still use the tools of labor, and practice the systems of husbandry, to which so many references are made upon the Sacred Page. Traveling there, we see Cain a "tiller of the earth," and Elisha, "plowing with a yoke of oxen." Whenever the ravages of war are intermitted for a season, the ground yields with its ancient abundance. Then "the mountains drop down sweet wine," as in the poetical figures of Joel, and "the hills flow with milk." The olive-tree still "sucks its oil from the flinty rock," and the honey-bee stores up her luscious treasures in "the hollow rock."

Then the glowing words of Josephus are literally verified. Then the descriptions of Moses become again true, wherein he describes old Canaan as "a land of wheat and barley, and vines and fig trees and pomegranates; a land of oil, olive, and honey; a land in which the inhabitants eat bread without scarceness; there is no lack of anything in it."

"The sower going forth to sow," still scatters a portion of his seed among "the thorns," and a portion upon "the rocks," and a portion "by the wayside," where the "fowls of the air come and devour it up." And still that which falls upon good ground "brings forth, some thirty, some sixty, some an hundred-fold."

VII. The geography of the Holy Land is a solemn witness that He who created the country inspired the Book. The traveler cannot fail to experience the sensation that he is standing upon "the old ways," the ways of God. All the sacred places are there, there just where they should be, to answer the requirements of the Holy Narrative. There is Bethlehem, you can almost fancy you see the Eastern Star pointing to it, the birth-place of Jesus. And there are Bethany, Bethel, Jericho, Jerusa lem, Joppa, Shiloh, Shechem, Samaria, Nain, Nazareth, Tiberias, Capernaum, Dan, Damascus, Gibal, Sidon, Sarepta, Tyre, Acre, Cesarea, Gaza, Beersheba, Hebron. Looking more closely we find Gethsemane, where Jesus was betrayed, and Aceldama, bought with the price of that treason; Siloam and Gihon. All the memorable localities may be found, affecting our minds like well-remembered features upon the countenances of the well beloved.

* For a comprehensive treatment of this subject, see Thomson's "Land and Book."

The fountains are there that used to slake the thirst of prophets, preis'ts, and kings; that of Elisha, near Jericho; and of David, near Hebron; and of Joab, at Gibeon; the wells at Bethlehem and Shechem, and many others from which the traveler rejoices to drink and be refreshed.

The mountains, stern and awful in their sublimity, stand as mountains of God's truth. Nebo, whence Moses gathered his last view before he went up to the heavenly hills; Hermon, glittering with his diadem of unmelting snows; Carmel, looking westward over the broad, blue sea; Tabor, Gilboa, Ebal, Gerizin, glorious summits that afforded God's prophets their best images of his grandeur and majesty; all are there, faithful to their trust, speaking witnesses to Bible truth, as they will be to the end of time.

VIII. The heavens of the Holy Land still "declare the glory of God," as when they inspired the soul of the Psalmist. In that "blue, etherial sky," "the Seven Stars and Orion", still wheel and glitter as in the times of Amos; "Arcturus and the chambers of the South," as in the times of Job. The promise of "a countless seed" to Abraham is sublimely illustrated by a view of that oriental sky, crowded and dotted and powdered with stars.

IX. The houses of the people in the Holy Land bear their witness to the accuracy of the ancient text.—Everything about them—the "foundation upon a rock," the roof, movable as in the miracle of the paralytic man—"the guest-chamber upon the wall, as in the narrative of Elisha—the "Court"—the "lattice"—the "needle's eye," that the loaded camel cannot pass—everything illustrates the biblical account so vividly that when we enter one of those houses we almost look for the Samuel, the David, the Isaiah, the Peter, who once occupied such dwellings.

X. And even the insects of the Holy Land still bear a part as witnesses to the divine truth. The scorpion explains the parental figure of Jesus, as well as the terrible image of John. The locust in his year of visitation, still devastates the country as in the time of Joel: before them, the "land is as the garden of Eden, behind them is a desolate wilderness."

XI. Nature, who works everywhere with unvarying laws, has her story to tell upon this subject. Still her "lily of the field" is arrayed in a splendor that the glory of King Solomon could in nowise rival. Still her serpent is an emblem of wisdom, her ant of industry, her dove of innocency. Still her grain of mustard seed in her quick climate and congenial soil, becomes so great a tree that "the fowls of the air lodge in the branches of it." Still the husks, such as the prodigal son did eat, hang profusely upon the carob-tree, affording a rich food for swine; the tares grow among the wheat; the stone, easily pulverized, covers the traveler's feet with dust, as it did the feet of Jesus and his followers; earthquakes still afflict the land, sometimes, as in January, 1837, producing calamities as frightful as that in "the days of Uzziah, king of Judah"; sometimes less severe, as those of the crucifixion and resurrection of nature's Lord. But nothing less than a volume suffices for a theme like this.

XII. The seas of the Holy Land boom forth THEIR chapter of our great story, with mighty voices. The Dead Sea lies awful in its silver basin a tell-tale of Jehovah's anger. The Sea of Galilee is subject to suddden storms of wind such as terrified the timid fisherman. Off the coast of Joppa, the Lord still sends "great winds." Then the "mighty tempests" arise as in the flight of Jonah and the poetry of David.

XIII. The shepherd still watches his flock by night, as on the birth-night of the Son of Man. Still he goes before them; and calls them by name; and they know his voice; and they follow him; and "he maketh them to lie down in green pastures, and leadeth them beside the still waters," all as in those affecting passages which our children have by heart.

XIV. The state of society has preserved unnumbered testimonies to Bible truth. We touch only upon a few. Laborers still "sit in the market-place," waiting to be hired; and their wages are paid them at the close of each day as Moses enjoined, and as Jesus described in his beautiful parable. Merchants and traders still use the balances of deceit, wicked balances, "a bag of deceitful weights, and scanty measure," as charged against them by the prophet Micah; hatred and malice still abound as in the time of the Maccabees, when the wolf had no fellowship with the lamb, nor the hyena with the dog, neither the rich with the poor."

XV. The very ruins into which opulent and popular cities have fallen, when we dig into them and explore them carefully, yield sure testimonies to the verity of the Bible. In their stony bosoms are the very objects needed to make our case complete:—the penny still bearing "the image and superscription of Cæsar," the mites, two to the farthing, such as a "certain poor window" cast into the Temple Treasury, and "the piece of silver," such as that which Peter found in the mouth of the fish, and Judas Iscariot received as the price of treason.

XVI. And finally the trees of the Holy Land still "clap their hands," overjoyed at the privilege of coming into the witness box, when the truth of God is in peril. Upon great Lebanon the cedar rears his lofty top as in the reign of Solomon: upon the slopes of Olivet, the olive tree bends under its weight of fatness, and justifies the ancient title of the mountains; along the sea-cost the palm tree, most graceful of trees, stands, a beautiful shaft, the Psalmist's best emblem of an upright man; and far and near, from Dan to Beersheba, "the fig tree, while his branch is yet tender, sends forth his leaves," precisely as it did when the divine finger pointed it out as the subject of an inimitable moral, so many centuries ago.

And so, for volumes, this subject may be expanded. But enough has been advanced to prove that every fact, gathered in the Holy Land, is a living monitor, a sure witness, having a tongue of its own to tell God's truth with fulness, greatness, energy, and a great blaze of light. To read the Holy Bible in the Holy Land is, to the pious believer, a treat worth whole years of ordinary experience.

Christian Family Companion

Tyrone City, Pa., Sept., 12, 1871.

Almanac.

Many have already responded to our call for the names and addresses of ministers. It is desirable to have this department complete. If any have not yet reported, we hope they will do so immediately, now A little longer and the curtain will drop, and those who have not been registered must be debarred another year.

We also make an especial appeal for the names of the Districts and the number of congregations in each, with the time and place of their next council meeting, and the name and address of the Secretary. Very few have yet been heard from. This is certainly important; and it should not be overlooked.

We suppose the main trouble is that there are so many brethren in each District, and each thinks some other one has given the desired information. We would rather receive a score of letters from each District that this important feature should be omitted. It is hoped that those who can given the desired information will say: "I will give it; and if others do the same, there will be no harm done."

The Pious Youth.

For September has been mailed to its subscribers. We hope it will reach its destination everywhere, and be the means of doing at least some good. The want of editorial was occasioned by the illness of the editor.

Convalescent.

In last week's COMPANION it was noticed that the senior editor was confined to his bed by sickness. We are happy to inform our readers that he is convalescent; although he is not yet sufficiently recruited for the duties of the sanctum. This accounts in part for the meagerness of the editorial department in this number.

Our Make Up.

In order to give the earliest possi notice of the Fall Lovefeasts, we are obliged to insert some announcements in the editorial department. Our prayer is that much good may be accomplished during the coming feasts; and we hope to be favored with joyful tidings, from the different parts of the Brotherhood.

Address.

The address of Samuel Strayer, instead of Dry Creek Iowa, will hereafter be Dallas Centre, Dallas County Iowa.

Answers to Correspondents.

JOHN R. NISEWANGER: Paid to the close of this volume.

STOCTON CAL.: We received a Money Order for four dollars, dated Aug. 31st, at Stockton, Cal. There was no letter accompanying it,—not even the name of the sender. We assigned it to Eld. Geo. Wolf. Is it right?

DANIEL ASHENBACK: We did not insert the notice of your Lovefeast; because you did not state where it is to be.

JOS. R. ROYER: As you omitted the address of Jonas Herr we directed the papers to Brickerville, Pa. If not right, please let us know.

A Debate.

Between brother R. H. Miller of Ladoga, Ind., and W. Jewel, Disciple (Campbellite), of La Fayette, Ind.

SUBJECTS:—Baptism, Feetwashing, the Lord's Supper, and the Holy Kiss.

The discussion is to commence on the 3rd of October, and is to be held in the Brethren's meeting house, 3 miles east of Noblesville, Hamilton county, Ind.

Brethren and friends are invited to attend; but those attending are solicited not to depend too much on the church for entertainment, as the number of members is too small to accommodate all as we would wish to do.

By order of the Committee of Arrangements.

JOHN H. CAYLOR.

Announcements.

We expect to commence our meeting in the Indian Creek church, Westmoreland Co., Pa., on the 23rd of September, (inst.), and continue till the 26th, when we will have our lovefeast, and then conclude. The usual invitation is extended.

JEREMIAH FOUST.

We expect to hold a Communion meeting in the Mohican church, 12 miles N. W. Wooster, in Wayne Co., Ohio, the Lord willing, on the 25th of October next, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M. The usual invitation is extended. By order of the church.

P. J. BROWN.

The brethren of the Buffalo Valley church intend holding a Lovefeast on the 20th of October, beginning at one o'clock P. M. Preaching next forenoon. Laboring brethren and other members are invited to be with us on the occasion. By order of thechurch.

ISAAC MYERS.

We intend having our Lovefeast in the Dry Valley meeting house on the 11th of October next, commencing at one o'clock P. M, and preaching on the 12th in the forenoon. We invite all who may have a desire to be with us, especially ministering brethren.

JACOB MOHLER.

The brethren in the Antietam congregation, Washington Co., Md., God willing, to hold a Communion meeting on the 24th of October next, at Welty's meeting house; commencing at 10 o'clock A. M. The usual invitation is extended.

JOS. F. ROHRER.

We intend to have a Lovefeast at Dunning's Creek, Pa., on Saturday, October 21st, commencing at 4 o'clock P. M. Also meeting next day. We give a hearty invitation to all that wish to be with us, especially ministering brethren.

Six Roads Pa.

THOMAS S. HOLSINGER.

A Communion in the Palestine congregation, in the west end of White county, Ind., on the 23rd and 24th of Sept., to commence at 2 o'clock.

Also in the Monticello congregation, at our meeting-house 3 miles north east of Monticello, Ind., on the 20th and 21st of October, to commence at 2 o'clock P. M

J. S. SNOWBERGER.

We intend to hold a Communion meeting, if God wills, on the twenty-ninth day of Sept., in the Dry Creek congregation, Linn county, Iowa.—The usual invitation is given.

Yours in Gospel Love.

THOS. G. SNYDER

The Lord willing, we will hold our Communion on Tuesday, Sept. 27th, in the East Nimishilon church, in our meeting-house eight miles north of Canton. The usual invitation is extended.

DAVID BOWERS.

We have appointed a Communion meeting in the Angwich congregation, Huntingdon county, Pa., on the 16th and 17th of October. A cordial invitation is extended for members in general to be with us. Ministerial help especially solicited.

JOHN SPANOGLE.

At the Brethren's Meeting House in the Mill Creek church Adams Co., Ills., the 30th day of Sept; And on the 3rd of Oct., in same church in Pike Co., near Barry. A general invitation is extended to the Brotherhood.

In coming to Adam's Co., by Rail, stop at Coatsburg; in coming to Pike Co., stop at Barry. Brethren coming by Rail will address the undersigned,

DAVID WOLF

Liberty, Adams Co., Illinois.

MISCELLANEOUS

"Such as I Have, Give I Thee."

These words of Peter to the lame man he healed in Jesus' name, should be a lesson to us all in our daily life. Such as we have we are to give, and so doing we may give that which is more precious than silver or gold.

Heap up the treasures at a poor helpless cripple's feet, and say, "Take these, or take soundness and strength of limbs," which would he choose?—Ask some unfortunate one whom you know, and see if he would not choose health and vigor. The well man may think he would be willing to forego health for the treasures, but he knows not of what he affirms. The healed cripple to whom the above words were addressed, was not satisfied to go walking into the temple, he went in leaping also, at the same time words of praise and thanksgiving gushed from his new-found powers. Do you think he was found asking alms again? I can but think that he was ever after too grateful for the power to earn his daily bread to sit patiently down and ask for charity.

There are cripples all about us, crippled bodies, crippled minds, crippled souls. How shall we best help them? Till we can do something better, we must give them alms. They walk our streets, they hide in tenement houses, they are in our alms-houses, hospitals, prisons, and various reformatory institutions. Now, if while thus sustained by the community, some of Christ's disciples passing by, shall, in the name of Jesus, bid them rise up and walk, and give them their right hand to raise them upon their hitherto unused feet, and Christ shall own and accept the effort made to relieve a brother in affliction, because of the faith of his follower, the most priceless gift will have been bestowed upon the lame one, and as he goes on his way it will be with bounding steps and grateful songs.—Guardian

Old age Without Religion.

Alas! for him who grows old without growing wise, and to whom the future world does not set open her gates, when he is excluded by the present. The Lord deals so graciously with us in the decline of life that it is a shame to turn a deaf ear to the lessons which he gives. The eye becomes dim, the ear dull, the tongue falters, the feet totter, all the senses refuse to do their office, and from every side resounds the call, "Set thy house in order, for the term of thy pilgrimage is at hand."

The playmates of youth, the fellow-laborers of manhood die away, and take the road before us. Old age is like some quiet chamber, in which, disconnected from the visible world, we can prepare in silence for the world that is unseen.—Tholuck.

Sydney Smith says, "The greatest curse that can be entailed on mankind is a state of war. All the atrocious crimes committed in years of peace, all that is spent in peace by the secret corruptions, or by the thoughtless extravagance, of nations, are mere trifles compared with the gigantic evils which stalk over this world in a state of war. God is forgotten in war; every principle of Christianity is trampled upon.

WORTH CELEBRATING.—The American Peace Society propose to celebate the ratification of the treaty recently made between this country and Great Britain by a grand jubilee meeting. No event of recent occurrence is more worthy of general congratulation than this act, which has not only closely cemented the two powerful Anglo-Saxon nations, but has shown to other nations a more excellent way to settle difficulties than than by cruel, wasteful, desolating war,

With the preservation of an upward character, if the opportunites for acquiring knowledge and cultivating the mind, which lie in every one's way, be properly improved, respectability, influence, and perhaps wealth, may be the reward.

MEN OF FINE FEELINGS.—Men of fine feelings fascinate through a certain affectionate watchfulness of the little wants of others, through a divining of their most softly-whispered wishes, and a continual sacrifice of their own; through politeness, whose silken bands twine more gently and closely round our hearts than do the rough cords of one great benefit.

Look not back upon your dark, stumbling paths, nor within on your fitful and vacillating heart, but forward to scenes of integrity and usefulness; be more than a cipher in life.

School-masters and professors in colleges are like bones: they sharpen all kinds of blades, and wear themselves out in doing it.

From the bottom of my heart I hate those principles that found sects. I should hate truth itself if it were the founder of a sect.

Philosophy is properly home sickness; the wish to be everywhere at home.

To dispel darkness make light of your troubles.

Christianity is the light that begins to shine in the darkness.

Constant occupation prevents temptation.

MISCELLANEOUS

Learn to Keep House.

No young lady can be too well taught in anything that will affect the comfort of a family. Whatever position in society she occupies, she needs a practical knowledge of household duties. She may be placed in such circumstances that it will not be necessary to perform such domestic labor, but on this account she needs no less knowledge than if she was obliged to preside personally over the cooking stove and pantry. Indeed I have thought it was more difficult to direct others, and requires more experience than to do the same work with our own hands.

Mothers are frequently so nice and particular that they do not like to give up any part of the care to their children. This is a great mistake in their management, for they are often burdened and need relief. Children should be early taught to make themselves useful; to assist their parents every way in their power, and to consider it a privilege to do so.

Young persons cannot realize the importance of a thorough knowledge of housewifery; but those who have suffered the inconvenience and mortification of ignorance can well appreciate it. Children should be early indulged in their disposition to bake and experiment in various ways. It is often but a troublesome help that they afford, still it is a great advantage to them. I know a little girl who, when nine years old, made a loaf of bread every week during the winter. Her mother taught her how much yeast, salt and flour to use and she became quite an expert baker. Whenever she is disposed to try her skill in making simple cakes and pies she is permitted to do so. She is thus, while amusing herself, learning an important lesson. Her mother calls her, her little house-keeper, and often permits her to get what is necessary for the table, She hangs the keys by her side and very musical is the jingle to her ears. I think that before she is out of her teens she will have some idea how to cook.

Some mothers give their daughters the care of housekeeping each a week by turns. It seems to me a good arrangement and a most useful part of their education. Domestic labor is by no means incompatible with the highest degree of refinement and mental culture. Many of the most elegant and accomplished women I have known have looked well to their household duties, and honored themselves and their husbands by so doing.

Economy, taste, skill in cooking, and neatness of the kitchen, have a great deal to do in making life happy and prosperous. The charm of good housekeeping is in the order, economy, and taste, displayed in attention to little things; and these things have a wonderful influence. A dirty kitchen and a bad cook have driven many a one from home to seek comfort and happiness somewhere else. None of our excellent girls are fit to be married until they are thoroughly educated in the deep and profound mysteries of the kitchen.

Home, Sweet Home.

Though the trite old song, "Home, Sweet Home," has been sung within the circle of almost every household, yet how few persons of all who have heard its sweet strains, know who was the author of those beautiful words—

"Mid pleasures and palaces, though we may roam,
Be it ever so humble, there is no place like home."

It perhaps has never occurred to the mind of any one unacquainted with the circumstances, that the writer of a song, which has found an echo in so many hearts could be other than one who had experienced all the pleasures of a happy home; but sad as is the reflection, it is nevertheless true, that John Howard Payne, the author of "Home, Sweet Home," though he has contributed to the happiness of so many homes, never had a home of his own. We clip the article below, suggesting that a monument be erected to the memory of Payne, and give it a place in our columns, believing that it will find a response in the hearts of our readers:

THE AUTHOR OF "SWEET HOME."—As I sit in my garret here in Washington, watching the course of great men, and the destiny of party, I meet often with strange contradictions in this eventful life. The most remarkable was that of John Howard Payne author of "Sweet Home." I knew him personally. He occupied the rooms under me for some time, and his conversation was so captivating that I often spent whole days in his apartments. He was an applicant for office at the time—consul at Tunis—from which he had been removed.

What a sad thing it was to see the poet subjected to aid the humiliations of office seeking! Of an evening we would walk along the street. Once in a while we would see some family circle so happy, and forming to be so beautiful a group that we would stop, and then pass silently on.

On such occasions he would give a history of wandering, his trials, and all his cares incident to his sensitive nature and poverty. "How often," said he once, "have I been in the heart of Paris, Berlin, and London, or some other city, and heard persons singing, or the hand-organ playing 'Sweet Home,' without a shilling to buy the next meal, or a place to lay my head. The world literally sung my song, until every heart is familiar with its melody. Yet have I been a wanderer from my boyhood. My country has turned me ruthless from office; and in old age I have to submit to humiliation for brerd.'"

Thus he would complain of his hapless lot. His only wish was to die in a foreign land, to be buried by strangers, and sleep in obscurity.

I met him one day looking unusually sad—"Have you got your consulate?" said I.

"Yes, and I leave in a week for Tunis, I shall never return."

The last expression was not a political faith. Far from it. Poor Payne! his wish was realized; he died at Tunis. Whether his remains have been brought to this country I know not. They should be, and if none others would do it, let the homeless throughout the world give a penny for an inscription like the following:

HERE LIES J HOWARD PAYNE, THE AUTHOR OF "SWEET HOME," A WANDERER IN LIFE, HE WHOSE SONGS WERE SUNG IN EVERY TONGUE AND FOUND AN ECHO IN EVERY HEART NEVER HAD A HOME. HE DIED IN A FOREIGN LAND.

SCRAP BOOKS.—A good idea is for children to make a scrap-book. Let each child in a family make one, and at the end of the year trade with their brothers and sisters, just to read, and see how near alike were their tastes and selections of articles. A good scrap-book, with poetry, stories, jokes facts and items of interest is very valuable—better than an ordinary book.

CORRESPONDENTS.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Brother Holsinger :—

There is no change in York Center as to the Brethren's doctrine. As I am here alone, and do not see my brethren often, I take this method of informing my brothers and sisters that I am in love and fellowship with the church and the order of the church.

When I look around and see such variation with the professors of religion, I am led to hold fast to the plain teaching of Christ, when he says "Observe all things that I have commanded you." Then to see what a rich blessing each individual has the promise of. And what is there in man that draws such an interest from our Father in Heaven? Ah! he has within this body a living soul, that Christ suffered for; not because man was holy and separate from sin : no, for sin rested on the soul through disobedience. God made man, originally, but a little lower than the angels, the body but a little lower than the soul—the Earth a little lower than Heaven. We come at the soul only through obedience of the body. We have scarcely begun to recognize the great truth that man in his character made up of body, mind and heart—a trinity little less mysterious than that of the Divine Being—for we are taught most distinctly that we have souls as well as bodies, which by their union forms a temple of the living God. Did you ever think my brothers and sisters, how near the body was to worms on one side, and on the other side how near the soul was to angels, and archangels, and to God himself, so that the Father considered the soul of great value? Paul says ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." We read that it is an eternal inheritance secured by Christ, whose name is far above all principality and power, and might and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come. Hope is the result of experience. Paul says this "hope maketh not ashamed; because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us." In Christ we have redemption, through is blood, the forgiveness of sins, in obedience according to the riches of his grace. I will now close in the language of one who was inspired :"—The God of Hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing; that ye may abound in hope through the power of the Holy Ghost. Rom. 5 : 13.

York, Ohio. ALBERT FORD.

Letter from D. M. Holsinger. No. 5.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—

My last report was dated at Brooklyn, Iowa. Therein I mentioned old Sister Snyder's sickness. Before we left her residence, she requested to be anointed "with oil in the name of the Lord." Her request was attended to; and it was a very solemn and impressive ceremony, to behold an aged saint bowed down by affliction, still desirous to obey all the commands of the New Testament, in order to be fully prepared as a well matured sheaf, to be gathered into heaven's garner

This seemed to have been her motive in having said ordinance administered, and not the restoring of the body only; for she seemed fully reconciled to the will of God.

At noon on said day Elder C. Long and I took the train for Dallas Centre, where we arrived in due time, and where I was met by my companion, having enjoyed good health during our separation. Here, by not carefully examining our Railroad Guide, we made a miscalculation, and took the wrong train; so when we arrived at Grand Junction, our train put us off about 3 A. M., with no prospect of going farther on that road till late that evening.

What a lesson such disappointments afford us, on our spiritual journey; for, in order to make our point, we were obliged to take an other route much farther, and thus suffered considerable loss,—and all for want of consulting the Guide which we had procured for that purpose.

In this very way, it is to be feared, souls will suffer loss,—by not taking heed to that sure word of prophecy," which is intended as a guide to the Christian traveler, and which will ever show the right way, and the proper time to start.

We however made our point, visited among our friends in Bremer and Chickasaw counties till the 28th when we came to this (Black Hawk) Co, and have been visiting among the friends and members here this week.

We attended two meetings since in this county. Found the members and friends mostly well; but learned that there are a great many cases of chills in the city.

Remember us still.

DANIEL M. HOLSINGER.

Waterloo, Iowa, Sep., 2nd.

Brother D. M. Holsinger informs us that he cannot come before the 14th of September. And as I learned that the Northern Indiana brethren and he, have an understanding that he will first visit them, and they then will return the labor to us in Michigan, which arrangement we accept, and look for him a few days before our Communion on the last day of Sept. And then the brethren at Thornapple can have their Communion by the 7th of October; and at Eureka and Shepardsville they can appoint theirs to suit after that, and all make it known through the Companion. At these places we expect to form the arrangements for the fall and winter meetings. There are still new fields of labor opening. Brethren need not fear to be left stand idle if a dozen would come. We claim help from Indiana, and would ask it of Northwestern Ohio. Come over to Michigan and help us.

F. P. LŒHR.

Brother Henry : I feel like writing a few lines to you by way of encouragament.

In the Companion, No. 34, I see that some people of our day are not able to bear sound doctrine; and rather than have the truth published for their benefit, they refuse to receive the Companion.

Well, I think you are about right, brother Henry, to stand firm, unmovable, in advocating the principles of the doctrine of Jesus Christ. For every subscriber you lose by so doing you will get two again. You may ask, how do you make that appear? Well, if the Companion shall continue to come until the end of the present volume, breathing the same spirit it has since the "Tabacco war,"—the last war in it,—I can promise you a number of new subscribers. I hear praises,—many and hearty praises,—from those who now get it.

Brethren, write about faith, repentance, baptism, and an implicit obedience to all the commandments of Jehovah,—matter enough to write about,—by which and through which we come under the promises of life everlasting; and I, for my part, can say, "God speed." More anon.

S. R. Zug.

Mastersonville, Pa.

LOVEFEASTS.

A Lovefeast at Clover Creek, Blair Co., Pa., Oct., 20th, commencing at 4 o'clock P. M., the meeting to be continued over Sunday. Usual invitation.

Also the first meeting to be held in the new meeting-house at Martinsburg, on the 15th of October. Brother Grabill Myers is expected to be present. Ministerial aid is solicited, as we purpose to continue the meetings till the Lovefeast.

J. W. Brumbaugh.

We of the mineral Creek church, Johnson Co., Mo, intend holding our Lovefeast on the 14th day of October next. Brethren contemplating visiting this state, will please bear in mind our meeting. The usual invitation is given.

S. S. Mohler.

The brethren will hold their Lovefeast in Schuyler County Missouri on the29th of September and first of October. The general invitation is given. The meeting will be at the house of Lewis West, one mile east of Green Top Station, on the North Missouri railroad. By order of the church.

The brethren in the Antioch church purpose holding their Annual Lovefeast in their meeting house at Antioch Huntington Co., Ind, on the 4th day of Oct., commencing at 5 o'clock, P. M. A hearty invitation is extended to all, especially to ministers.

A. B. Miller, Secretary.

The brethren at Pipe Creek, Md., intend to hold a Communion meeting, at their meeting house at Meadow Branch, commencing at one o'clock P. M., on Saturday the 30th day of September, and close on the following day. We extend a cordial invitation to our ministering Brethren to come to us at that time.

Phillip Boyle

Brother Henry: Please announce in the Companion that brother Peter Hollowbush desires to visit the brethren in Mifflin, Huntingdon, and Bedford counties, and perhaps, to Perry county. He wishes that I should accompany him and make the appointments as follows:

October 13th and 14th, at Spring Run; 17th and 18th, at Aughwick;—18th and 19th, at James Creek; 20th and 21st, at Clover Creek; 22nd and 23rd, at Yellow Creek; 25th and 26th, at Snake Spring Valley; 27th and 28th with the Dunning's Creek brethren, and if we visit any others, there will be after arrangements.

Yours in brotherly love.

Joseph R. Hanawalt.

McVeytown, Pa.

Cowanshannoe congregation, Armstrong county, Pa., Sept. 29th, 2 o'clock, P. M.

Wabash congregation, Ind., Sept. 28th, and Somerset congregation, Ind., Sept, 30th. Stop at Wabash City.

Raccoon Creek congregation, Montgomery county, Ind., Oct. 26th. Stop at Ladoga.

Columbiana church, Ohio, Sept. 2lst.

East Nimshillin, Ohio, Sept. 26th.

Bristolville, Ohio, Sept. 30th.

Monticello, White county, Ind., Oct. 20, 21; 2 o'clock, P. M.

Wayne county, Ohio, 12 miles N. W. of Wooster, Oct. 25th, 10 o'clock, A. M.

Antietam congregation, Welty's meeting-house, Washington county, Md., Oct, 24th, 10 o'clock, A. M.

Buffalo Valley, Pa., Oct. 20th, 1 o'clock P. M.

Dry Valley, Pa., Oct. 11th, 1 o'clock P. M.

Clover Creek, Blair county, Pa. Oct 20th, 4 o'clock, P. M.

Schuyler county, Mo., 1 mile east of Green Top Station, Oct. 1st.

Meadow Branch, M. H. Pipe Creek, Md. Sept. 30th.

Mineral Creek, Johnson county. Mo. Oct. 14th.

Antioch, Huntington county Ind., Oct. 4th.

Logan church, Logan county, Ohio, Sept. 29th.

Walnut Level, Wells county, Ind., Oct. 21st.

Yellow Creek, Claar's meeting-house, Bedford county, Pa. Sept. 27th, 4 P. M.

Somerset arm, Mercer co., Mo., Sept. 23d and 24th.

Buck's Creek church, Henry county, Ind., Sept. 28th.

Lick Creek congregation, Owen county, Ind, Sept. 20th.

Spring Creek, Rockingham county, Va., Sept. 22, 23.

South Keokuk, Keokuk Co., Iowa, Sept. 30th, and Oct. 1st.

Yellow Creek, New Enterprise, Bedford County, Pa., Oct. 24th, 4 o'clock P. M.

Ecast meeting-house, Pine Creek congregation, St. Joseph county, Mich., Oct 19th, 4 o'clock P. M.

MARRIED.

By the undersigned at his residence. August 13th, JONATHAN HOOVER, and Miss MARY BALEY; both of Bedford county, Pa.

Also, at the same time, DAVID L. WINELAND and MISS ELIZABETH SEEDENBAUGH; both of Blair county, Pa.

S. A. Moore.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with obituary notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In the Waterloo congregation, Black Hawk county, Iowa, August 14th, EVA, daughter of brother William and sister Mary LICHTY, aged 1 year 2 months and 23 days. Disease, Cholera Infantum.

In the same congregation, BARBARA ELLEN, daughter of the above named parents, aged 3 years 3 months and 2 days.—Disease, Diphtheria. Thus in the short space of 6 days were our brother and sister deprived of their children. Funeral on both occasions by the writer and others.

Jacob A. Murray.

In the Yellow Creek congregation, Bedford county, Pa., August 12th, our much beloved brother JACOB LONGANECKER, aged 71 years 2 months and 26 days. Brother Longanecker served many years in the office of deacon, which position he filled, alike an honor to himself, to the church, and we believe to his God. He never faltered or shrank when duty demanded his presence as a faithful soldier. He ever labored to have union exist in the church. The poor were ever thought of by him, be administered freely to their wants. The vacancy occasioned in the church by his death, it will require time to fill. Five days previous to his death he filled his place at meeting. His disease may be called Enterites. On the 13th, his remains were followed to their resting place by a large concourse of people: and the occasion was improved by the Brethren, from Isaiah 3: 10, 11, to an attentive audience.

S. A. Moore.

In Montgomery county, Pa., May 9th, bro. JOHN PRICE, aged 84 years 2 months and 27 days; his remains were interred in the Germantown church yard, where the doctrines of the Brethren were first established in this county. He was, in the earlier part of his ministry, associated with brother Peter Keyser, and after his death had pastoral charge of the church. He labored in the ministry about 33 years or over. He was remarkable for his knowledge of the scriptures and good memory, which he retained until about the last two years, when it was impaired by Palsy and infirmity. His recollections of the Brethren dates back to his earliest days, being literally reared in the church, his father being an Elder in the church at Indian Creek.and his acquaintance of the Brethren, with their mode and practice, of which he often spoke in conversation, and also to some extent in his public ministration. His faith and hope were strong in Jesus, and in the truth and doctrines of the Gospel, which he labered to uphold and teach.

Jacob K. Reiner.

At his residence in Funkstown, Md., after an illness of two years of intense suffering from depression of mind, brother JOSEPH SHERRICK, aged 69 years 8 months and 28 days.

The subject of the above notice has been long and favorably known in our county a sa man of unimpeachable character and strict integrity of purpose, a good citizen, a kind, indulgent husband and parent, an exemplary member of the Church of the Brethren ;—whose loss we deeplyfeel,but we sorrow not as those without hope ; believing that whilst we have committed the casket to its native element, his free spirit is basking in the sunlight of God's countenance, enjoying sweet communion and fellowship with the saints in glory.

Words of comfort and consolation were administered by brethren Wolf and Emmert, from the 14th verse of the 14th chapter of Job : "If a man die, shall he live again ? All the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come.

P. S. Newcomer.

LIST OF MONEYS received for subscription, books, &c.,

L. W. Teeter,	$ 5,76	J. S.McFadden,	1,00
I. L. Glass,	1,00	J. Amick,	8.68
Albert Ford,	,75	J. Metzler,	6,20
M: Halterman,	,75	Susan Keysear,	1,50
C. Bucher,	1,25	S. E. Cart,	5,50
A. Michael,	2,00	P. L. Swine,	6,00
D. S. Aungust,	1,50	E. Brallier,	3,75
HF.Rosenberger,	1,25	H. McCartney,	1,50
S. Marsh,	,50	Orvel Fisher,	2,00
S. Stram,	1,00	Wm. Culp,	3,75
S. Sellers,	.50	Stockton, Cal.	4,00
A. Boyer,	34,00	D. D. Horner,	1,50
F. P. Loehr,	,75	Wm. Sadler,	1,35
Bish and Ellenberger,	3,00	J. Reiff,	,50
J. M. Steele,	1,75	A. B. Barnhart,	,75
		J. R. Niswanger,	1,50

Advertisements.

WE will admit a limited number of select advertisements at the following rates
One insertion, 40 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.
No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations

TYRONE BANK,
TYRONE, Pa.

This Bank, intending to do a general banking business, solicits accounts from Banks' Bankers and others. Collections made on all points. Interest allowed on DEPOSITS left on time. Paper discounted on liberal terms.

Wm. P. Orbison,	D. P. Gwin,
John Scott,	H. G. Fisher,
Thomas Fisher,	J. H. Glazier,
Wm. Dorris,	G. C. Wilkins,
G W. Garretson,	and others.

A Treatise on the Salutation, Feet-washing, and the Lord's Supper.

Intended more especially for the Brotherhood. Now offered on the following terms : Single copy ten cents ; by the dozen 80 cts. Address David Bosserman, Gettysburg, Pa. Send the money with the address, and they will be sent immediately.

35—4t.

Universal Guide for Cutting Garments.

By which every family may cut its own garments for men and boys, of twenty six different sizes ; for Coats, Pants, Vests, and Shirts, and Ladies' Dress Bodies. Agents wanted to sell State, County, and Family Rights. For Particulars address MILLER & QUINN,
Tyrone, Blair Co., Pa.

ENGLISH ROOFING FELT.

Is found to stand well in all climates, being extensively used for Roofing Houses, Out Buildings and Sheds ; for Layiny Flat Roofs, Gutters, Lining Granaries, Storehouses, or Walls, (either outside or inside), and for placing under Slates or Tiles. It is also a cheap and effective Ceiling on the underneath side of rafters of a Slated or Tiled Roof, and as a Ceiling to Iron Roofs, counteracting Heat, Frost, and Condensation of Moisture.

The English Feit is put up in rolls of 25 yards in length, by 32 inches in width, and containing a surface of 500 square feet.

THREE-PLY FELT,
FOR ROOFING.

In Rolls, 26 inches wide, by 50 feet in length; each roll will cover a surfacce 10 feet square, or 100 square feet.

It te to be laid across the roof, shingle fashion, with a lap of two inches, and secured by nailing the edges with 3d nails and tin caps.

When laid, the Felt is to be painted with Mastic Roof Coating, and Sanded. The Mastic Roof Coating is mixed, ready for use, and is applied with a brush.

TARRED ROOFING FELT.

Used extensively for Sheating Houses, and for Tar and Gravel Roofing, also for placing under Slate, Tin and Shingle Roofing.

It is used in packing Woolens and Furs to protect them from moths.

Put up in rolls weighing 45 pounds each.

15 pounds Felt will cover a surface of 100 square feet.

TWO-PLY FELT,

For Sheathing Houses, Roofing Tempoary Buildings, making Water Tight Floors, and for placing under Slate and Shingles.

In rolls, 26 inches wide by 50 feet in length. Each roll will cover a surface 10 feet square or 100 square feet.

For Sheathing it can be nailed upon the studding, making perfectly air tight sheathing, and sure protection from dampness.—Rats mice or vermin will not go near it.

MICA CANVAS ROOFING,

In rolls containing 250 square feet. Is to be laid across the roof, and lapped shingle fashion with a lay of two inches, and secured by nailidg the edges with 20 oz tacks.

This is the only Composition Roofing that does not require a finishing coat of paint or cement.

UNTARRED SHEATHING FELT.

For Carpet Lining, Deafening Floors, and for putting under Slate, Tin and Shingle Roofing.

Put up in rolls weighing 100 pounds.

10 pounds Felt will cover a surface 10 feet square, or 100 square feet.

MANUFACTURED BY THE
PENN ROOFING COMPANY,
105 South Second St., Phil'a.

Beers' Expanding Scroll Waterwheel.

[Patented 1868] This wheel is now running with the overshot, in a Flouring Mill, and is using less water than the overshot. Inventor being a Millwright, and having seen and used all the new waterwheels, does not hesitate to say it is the first iron wheel that can compete with the overshot, and is one half cheaper, simpler and better. For farther information address J. L. Beers and Sons, Millwrights and Manufacturer's of wheel shafting and mill gearing of all kinds, continued Sawmill feed and Sawmill irons.

J. L. Beers & Sons
Coeolamus, Juniata Co. Pa.

A Card.

Drs. D. Fahrney & Son, Uroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.

7-10-1 yr. pd.

Wm. M. Lloyd, Altoona, Pa. D. T. Caldwell, Tyrone Pa.
LLOYD, CALDWELL & CO.,
BANKERS,

Receive monies on deposit, and pay interest if left 6 months, at 4 per cent per annum, or 5 per cent. if left one year.

Special contracts made with parties acting a administrators, executors, guardians, and persons holding monies in trust. Dealers in every description of Stocks and Bonds.—Government Securities made a speciality.

Gold and Silver bought and sold, and a general Banking business transacted.

FARM FOR SALE.

In Kosciusco county, Indiana, one mil north of Millwood, on the road between Bremen and Etna, containg 200 acres, 50 acres improved, some marshy, and the balance in timber.

JOHN MOW.

7—34-3ts.

1780 1871
ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK ?
Use Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea.
CLEANSE YOUR BLOOD!!

An Alterative and Catharic, or Tonic and Purge combined, for diseases arising from bad blood ; such as Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Erysipelas, Worms, Chills and Fever, Scrofula, Pimples, Tetter, &c. TRY IT.

Established 1780 in package form. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form which was brought to its present state of preservation and perfection some years later, by Dr. P. Fahrney, Chicago, Ill's, who conducts the trade west of Ohio. Great reputation ! Many Testimonials ! Ask for that prepared at Waynesboro, Pa., and Chicago, Ill's. Beware of imitations. Genuine retails at $1.25 per bottle. Druggists and Medicine dealers sell it.

Dr. P. Fahrney's "Health Messenger" gives the history and uses of the BLOOD CLEANSER testimonials, and other information, sent free of charge. Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.
WAYNESBORO, PA.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine, with Drop Feed, new Take-up, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted FIRST CLASS, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted traveling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $200 per month. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. Co.
33 East Union Square, 17th St., New York

BURLINGTON.

Leaving the East and arriving at Chicago or Indianapolis, how shall we reach the West? The best Line is acknowledged to be the C. B. and Q., joined together with the B. & M. Railroad by the Iron Bridge at Burlington, and called the Burlington Route.

The main line of the Route running to Omaha, connects with the great Pacific Roads, and forms to-day the leading route to California. The Middle Branch, entering Nebraska at Plattsmouth, passes through Lincoln, the State Capital, and will this year be finished to Fort Kearney, forming the shortest route across the Continent by over 100 miles.

Another branch of the B. M., diverging at Red Oak, falls into a line running down the Missouri through St. Joe to Kansas City, and all Kansas. Passengers by this route to Kansas, see Illinois, Southern Iowa, and Missouri, and, by a slight divergence, can see Nebraska also.

Lovers of fine views should remember the Burlington Route, for its towns "high-gleaming from afar"—its tree-fringed streams—its rough bluffs and quarries—its corn-ocean stretching over the prairies further nthan eye can reach.

Land-buyers will be sure to remember it, for they have friends among the two thousand who have already bought farms from Geo. S. Harris, the Land Commissioner of the B. & M. R. R. at Burlington, Iowa, or among the four thousand home-steaders and pre-emptors who last year filed claims in the Lincoln Land Office, where "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm."

SHORT HAND WRITING.—Students of Phonography and all others who are interested in the art can obtain instruction books Send stamp for price list and tracts.
"AMERICAN PHONETIC DEPOT.
TYRONE, PA.

J. S. THOMAS, &CO.
WHOLESALE GROCERS
and
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
No 205 RACE St. ABOVE 3RD, PHILADELPHIA,
N. B. Country Produce taken in exchange for goods or sold on commission.

CABINET MAKING & UNDERTAKING

The undersigned keeps on hand and manufactures to order all kinds of Furniture. He is also neatly fitted out for conveying the dead to their last resting place.

Manufacturer of the Common Sense Dasher Washing Machine. Shop at the Cross Roads, near Warrior's Mark, Pa.
JAMES S. COX.

A Washing Machine may be seen and purchased at this office. 7nu3tf.

BOOKS
GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL
For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price, $4.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol., $2.25. Indispensable.

Life at Home; or the Family and its MEMBERS.—Including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed. The Altar in the House, etc. By Wm. Aikman. $1.50;

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. THOMPSON Fancy Cloth. $1.00.

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand-book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners, with a Chart for recording the sizes of the different Organs of the Brain, in the Delineation of Character, with upwards of 170 Engravings. Muslin, $1.25.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50:

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By W. PITTINGER. $1.50.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Beautifully Illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth, gilt, beveled boards. Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75 cents.

Any of the above sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

The Phrenological Journal, An Illus- TRATED, First-Class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50, or with the PIOUS YOUTH, for $3.00. We commend the JOURNAL to all who want a good Family Magazine, and who does not?

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and state written in unmistakable letters, and address-ed to H. R. Holsinger, Tyrone, Pa.

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING

One copy, post paid	0.75
12 copies, post paid	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	$0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN & ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid . . .	$1.00
Per dozen,	10.30

Turkey Morocco, Ger. & Eng.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	13.30

Plain Single German

One copy, post paid	.50
Per dozen" "	$5.50

The Christian Harp, containing 32 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

COMPANION, Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.70
Reserved at the office,	2.25
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express,	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	.60
German & English Testaments,	.75

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25

32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION. 25

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Certificates &c.

Marriage Certificate, per doz., post paid, 0.30
CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP. Per doz, 0.20

TRACTS.—RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE, 12 pages five cents single copy; thirty cents a doz.

All orders should be accompanied with the money, and the name of person, postoffice county & state written in unmistakable letters.

THE PIOUS YOUTH
A MONTHLY PUBLICATION
Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.
One dollar a year in advance.

THE
Christian Family Companion
Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements; that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.
Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
TYRONE, PA.

Christian Family Companion

BY G. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum

VOLUME VII. TYRONE, PA. TUESDAY, SEPT. 19, 1871. NUMBER 38.

Selected for the COMPANION.

Evening.

"Man goeth forth unto his work, and unto his labor until the evening."—Psalm.

The stream is calmest when it nears the tide,
And flowers are sweetest at the eventide,
And birds most musical at close of day,
And saints divinest when they pass away.

Morning is lovely, but a holier charm,
Lies folded close in evening's robe of balm,
And weary man must ever love her best,
For morning calls to toil, but night brings rest.

She comes from heaven, and on her wings doth bear
A holy fragrance like the breath of prayer;
Footsteps of angels follows in her trace,
To shut the weary eyes of day in peace.

All things are hushed before her, as she throws
O'er earth and sky her mantle of repose;
There is a calm, a beauty and a power,
That morning knows not, in the evening hour.

"Until the evening" we must weep and toil,
Plow life's stern furrows, dig the weedy soil,
Tread with sad feet our rough and thorny way,
And bear the heat and burden of the day.

Oh! when our sun is setting, may we glide
Like summer evening down the golden tide;
And leave behind us as we pass away,
Sweet starry twilight round our sleeping clay.

For the Companion.

The Creation.

The Phrase,—"In the beginning," has, perhaps, as many imagined significations as there are persons living; yet it is clear that there is but one correct meaning, and that is God's conception of it.

"To writing many books there is no end;" out of the many books that have been and shall be written, there is but one that is strictly correct, and that is the Bible. Notwithstanding the great advantages of writing, there is not the one hundredth part of what is written that is worth reading, not the one millionth part of what passes through the brain is worth writing.

The opinions of man are based upon a changing sentiment; his last conviction always seems to him better founded than those it has superseded. There is none that can tell what his last conviction will be. No one ought to be so bold as to assert that no truer or higher view of truth than his own will ever be held by those that come after him, or that his view is nearer correct than that of any who have gone before. Men are apt to think that which they know of anything is all that it is.

The little child when first told that "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth," naturally grasps with the mind all of the heaven and the earth that it has ever seen or heard of, and supposes its conception embraces all that it is. So it is with all. If the minds of some men are capable of entertaining a higher and more extended conception of God than those of others, God knows it, and he will hold them accountable.

Great nations have lived, flourished, and passed away with very different ideas from ours in regard to the "beginning." Even now there are millions of persons,—some of them in our immediate neighborhood,—who have different views from each other in regard to the gulf which the word 'begining' bridges; and to attempt to make all the mystery connected with the creation of the universe disappear from the mind of finite man, and to proclaim that it has been accomplished, is equivalent to an assertion that an infinite God has vanished. Such a declaration would certainly incur the divine displeasure. It is defined by God as a sin of no small magnitude. To exalt ones self "against the knowledge of God," is to contradict God. He has revealed himself to man as infinite, and has declared that man is finite, therefore it is absurd for man to give a perfect definition of God: though He has given such a definition, and to Him alone belongs the perfect understanding of it. But this does not by any means justify a misunderstanding of God or his word: the man who is willfully ignorant of the things which God designed that he should know is not acquitted as a servant that has done his duty.

It must not be always taken for granted that men who have thought most upon God—who have meditated most upon his word, are more apt to define him more fully than those who do not investigate. The heathen claims that his knowledge of deity is nearer correct than that of any other being upon earth: he assumes at once that he has arrived at the end and will not be entreated or forced to look or investigate any farther; his earthly appetites, propensities or enjoyments induce him to regard a further examination useless. This prejudiced, superstitious condition of the mind must not be supposed to exist only in some far off country; but in every land, in every nation, and in every community it holds its sessions.

It is now quite frequently very unintelligently asserted, that the alleged discoveries made by modern philosophers in regard to the "beginning," tend to weaken or deny the truths contained in the Bible relative to the creation. The word "beginning" is far more mysterious in length and power than the length of duration which man has fixed and applied to the time elapsed between the beginning and the present. "In the beginning" reaches far outside, or beyond, the point where man can put its commencement: as far as the existence of God reaches beyond man's conception of Him. Hence if man has found anything that bears date of existence prior to the beginning of any conceivable number of periods, he has not by any means discovered any thing that existed before the "beginning" referred to in the first chapter of the book of Genesis. "One day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day."

JOHN B. GARVER.

Shirleysburg, Pa.

The Guiding Eye.

"I will guide thee with mine eye." Some interpreters seem anxious to empty these words of their peculiar significance, and reduce them from the striking and dramatic character they have, as usually taken, to as low a level as possible of common-place. Taken just as they stand they are rich in suggestion. There are two kinds of obedience. One is the mechanical. It is that of the horse or the mule, spoken in the verse, "which have no understanding," and "whose mouth must be held in with bit and bridle." Men also sometimes show this sort of obedience. It is where service is performed, and things are done or avoided, simply because they must be; because the restraint or the compulsion is such as to apply a species of force, and so as that there can be in the action no test whatever of the spirit of obedience. The other sort is where mind and heart are so in sympathy and harmony with the thing required and the authority requiring it, as that obedience almost anticipates commands; where slight indications answer, for direction, all the ends of positive precepts; and as it were a glance of the eye, avails as much as the most powerful impulse or check of the hand.

There seems to be here, in this beautiful psalm, the thirty-second, especially in the two verses, eighth and ninth, now considered, a contrasted suggestion of these two kinds of obedience. We are instructed to be not as the horse or mule. We are invited to a measure of near fellowship with God such as that he may guide us with his eye. If we are of those "blessed" ones mentioned in the first verse, "whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered," and of whom again the song speaks in its closing strain, calling them as the "righteous ones," the "upright in heart," to "be glad in the Lord," to "rejoice" and "shout for joy," this shall be true of us. For such as these, bit and bridle are not needed. It is love in these which fulfills the law. The consciousness that God's eye is on them furnishes all the restraint they need; the glance of that eye, gleaming in mere suggestions of the written word, lighting up dimmest indications of Providence, "guides" them. "The appearances of evil" are to them as evil itself, and there is for them as real a law of the Lord in the whisper of the still, small voice, as in the thunder-tone that proclaimed the statutes of Sinai. A delicate sense of right and wrong, sensitiveness to all indications of a divine will, feet swift and ready to run in the Lord's way, and that harmony of mind with God's mind which these imply, must be important as evidences of spiritual condition. At all events, what sort of a child of God, a Christian, must that be whose mouth must be forever held in with bit and bridle; whose obedience is simply a turning hither and thither, as the rein of unmistakable precept or the lash of certain penalty compels?—The Standard.

For the COMPANION.

Piety.

God is love; and God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son to come into the world to redeem it. Yes, to redeem a world that was lost. Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and was with his Father in his kingdom. God saw this ruined world, and so loved it, and sympathized with it, that he gave his Son, who left the glorious mansions of eternal bliss, and descended into a sinful world; and here he labored to establish the gospel according to his Father's will. Before he ascended to his Father again, he was suspended between heaven and earth,—nailed to a cross,—and there suffered and died and shed his precious blood for our redemption, and that man might acquire grace to help in time of need.

Could this world but comprehend, or appreciate, the sufferings and the death of our Savior? If Jesus then so labored and suffered for our salvation, and God the Father so loved us, is it not now our duty to love the Lord our God with all our heart, and with all our soul, and with all our mind, and with all our strength? which is the first and great commandment. Now is our time to have piety, and veneration, with love to God; and to serve him with reverence and godly fear, which is our indispensable duty. And we must have piety if we would serve God acceptably. If we then have obtained piety, we are willing to obey all the Lord has commanded us to do.

Now I will mention some small commandments in the gospel of eternal truth. Jesus said, "Every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give an account thereof in the day of judgment; for by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned;" Matth. 12: 36, 37. And one of the apostles positively prohibits foolish talking and jesting. "Let it not once be named among you, as becometh saints." Now I fear there is too much foolish talking and jesting among brethren and sisters of the church of God, who profess to do all the requirements in the Gospel.

Brethren and sisters in the Lord, we have but one life to live in this world; let us try, therefore, and live with fidelity; being vigilent and faithful, to the Lord. The more pious and just and devout we are, the happier we are in this world, and much more so in eternity. Watch ye therefore, and pray that ye enter not into temptation. We must watch and pray, that Satan cannot get us into evil, nor into a snare. If he will we shall find some difficulty to get out again. So we should have our eyes Zionward,—toward heavenly things, and things eternal. Let us try to not let the sun once rise and set without us once praying to God, and asking him to forgive our sins, as we forgive those that are indebted unto us. Jesus our blessed Master went out into a solitary place and there prayed to his heavenly Father. Let us do as Jesus did,—pray in solitude; "Enter into thy closet, and pray in secret, and thou shalt be rewarded openly." May we all obtain that reward, and through obedience obtain eternal life, is my prayer.

JACOB I. GOOD.

North Liberty, Ind.

For the Companion.

A form of Godliness.

It seems the apostle Paul foresaw how, in the last days, some should depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils, and still having a form of godliness, swelling themselves up to a great magnitude of self-esteem, thereby denying the power of godliness. And, because they will be proud and lovers of their own selves, therefore the times will be perilous. They shall be covetous; which is a part of idolatry. They may not covet money so much as honor and office, and high stations whereby to receive honor and applause from men. They will also be false accusers, speaking lies in hypocrisy, having their conscience seared with a hot iron, despising those that are good and accusing them of faults,—such faults as they themselves have,—and all the while having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof. They no doubt belong to that class of which the Savior speaks, who come and go in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves, biting and devouring the sheep.

Where shall these people be found in the last days? Brother Stalnaker says, among the Methodists; but let us see. "All is not gold that glitters," saith the proverb. Do the Methodists have a form of godliness? I think not. I think they have only the form of the world. I can not see any godliness in any form about them, more than about any sect of infant sprinklers descended from the "MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH." My opinion is, to find people, having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof by their evil works, we must come nearer home. Judge ye what I say. It is certain they are not, or will not be meek and lowly, though they may have such form and appearance. And it is equally certain that they will be men of influence. They are no doubt such as have crept in unawares, at some places more than at others, and trouble the flock. JAS. Y. HECKLER.

Harleysville, Pa.

For the COMPANION.

Adultery.

Recently I saw, in the Gospel Visitor, a lenthy article, on the subject of Divorce, in which the writer seems astonished that the brethren cannot see alike upon such a plain question. It seems just as plain to me to the reverse of what he has written as that does to him, that a second marriage, after a divorce, is committing adultery. I admit that Jesus did admit of a separation for one cause (Matthew 5: 31), "It hath been said, Whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement; but I say unto you, that whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery; and whosoever shall marry her that is divorced committeth adultery." Did God command a divorce? The Pharisees demanded of the Savior to give them an answer, —"Why did Moses command to give a writting of divorcement, and to put her away? He saith unto them,—Moses, because of the hardness of your hearts, suffered you to put away your wives; but from the beginning it was not so:" Moses took this reponsibility upon himself. God never gave Moses that command. (Matthew 19: 7). "For the woman which hath an husband, is bound by the law to her husband, so long as he liveth." And she cannot be loosed from the law of her husband, while he liveth. (Romans 7: 2, 3). "And unto the married I command, yet not I, but the Lord, let not the wife depart from her husband; but and if she depart, let her remain unmarried." (1 Cor. 7: 10). I suppose the apostle Paul understood that God had no hand in divorces. And Christ says, "It was not so in the beginning,"—that either party has a right to marry after a bill of divorce. Some say the innocent party may marry. But this is only their opinion, and cannot be justified by the word of God. In the 24th chapter of Deuteronomy you can see the authority for divorce: it was not commanded by the Lord, but by Moses; and he never entered the promised land.

ELD. HENRY KOONTZ.

For the Companion.

"Come unto Me." Matth. 11: 28.

These are words of the Lord Jesus whilst upon earth, that should affect the hearts of all men; especially the sinner who lifts the puny arm of rebellion against the Lord. If the sinner, who is day by day engaging in enjoyments that have a tendency to lead his soul into perdition, would give heed to those words,—"Come unto me,"—from him who suffered and died, that man could again have access to the tree of life and live for ever, he could certainly crucify the Lord of glory no longer. O then sinner, be up and a doing, for the Savior is calling, as in the language of the prophet Amos, "Prepare to meet thy God." He says, "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." Will you not give heed to the admonition of a kind Savior,—"Come unto me?" Shall the prayers of the righteous be bestowed upon you in vain? How many prayers have been sent to the very throne of infinite mercy in behalf of dear friends and relatives, who are yet traveling on the broad road that leads to despair! And still you will not come. "If you could draw aside the curtain and look down to hell, 'where the worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched,' & could see the licking flames, & curling smoke, & hear the wails of the damned as they writhe in agony, cry in pain, & howl in their heavy woe, you would not so eagerly press toward that awful place." While on the other hand, if you could see the light, the joys of heaven, you could no more crucify your Lord and Master. Will you then come to Jesus? "Behold! now is the accepted time; behold! now is the day of salvation." Then come without delay; for it is appointed unto man once to die, and after that the judgment. And how awful will it be with them that obey not the gospel of Christ! Where Jesus is, you can come, if you become a disciple of his. Oh! what a happy day, when we can meet around the throne of God, where parting hands are known no more. SILAS HOOVER.

Berlin, Pa.

For the COMPANION.

The Way of Life.

'In the beginning was the word, and the word was with God, and the word was God. * * * In him was life; and the life was the light of men. And the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehendeth it not." John 1 : 1—5.

From every conceivable consideration, we conclude that there is but one way which leads to life. When we go back into the history of the past, nearly six thousand years, and see when God looked upon the earth, and behold it was corrupt,—for all flesh had corrupted his way,—we are forced to the conclusion, that God's way is the only way; and that it is a peculiar way; and that man's way is not His way; neither is his way man's way, but as one of old has represented it,—"the King's high way."

We think it is surely a highway; because it was originated on high;—and handed down to man both by precept and example, by the Babe of Bethlehem, who is King of kings and Lord of lords.

Go back with me, if you please, to the garden of Eden, which signifies a garden of delight. When God made man and placed him in the garden, he then delivered a law for man to obey, and demanded spontaneous obedience. He placed before him all the luxurious fruit necessary for all the demands of his nature: but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, he was not to partake.

But man puts forth his hand and partakes of the forbidden fruit: he disobeys the God that made him; he is fallen, is fallen—has lost the image of innocence with which God placed him there. How is man to be restored to his former state? Imagine what sorrow and grief surrounds the throne of God with the angels of heaven, to see man who was created a little lower than the angels, marked with a guilty conscience. We see him driven out of the garden of delight—banished from Jehovah, to leave the peaceful presence of God. Imagine the solemn silence in heaven. With awe and amazement did the rich retinue of angels behold the consultation in heaven by the Father and the Son. Oh! what a council meeting,—devising a plan for the redemption of man! Which things the angels desire to look into. There was nothing that would appease the wrath of a sin-avenging God, save the great sacrificial offering of His only begotten Son upon Calvary's brow.

We see from the history of the past, that, in the different ages of the world, God had appointed different laws and ordinances for the observance of man; setting forth in them the coming of the Savior of the world and the laws of his kingdom. But man was dull of hearing, and inclined to disbelieve, Few adhered to the counsel of God, in comparison with the number that inhabited the earth. Many of the old patriarchs and prophets desired to see the day approach, but were cut down with the frosts of many winters. At last the full time approached. God's own appointed time came when the Sun of righteousness should arise with healing in his wings. King Emmanuel was born in Bethlehem of Judea, of the lineage of David, as promised. He came to establish his Father's kingdom. He went about doing good to the bodies and souls of men. When he was reviled he reviled not again; leading an exemplary life, which should govern his loyal subjects; and teaching, both by precept and example, such institutions in his kingdom for its subjects to obey as his Fathhr had prescribed. No ostentatious principles ever harbored within his breast; but he was ready to administer to the wants and necessities of suffering humanity, at all times. He emphatically declared that he was "the way, the truth, and the life," and that no man could come to the Father but by him.

We do honestly understand the principles of his doctrine as delineated in the New Testament scriptures are by him, and the only way; for we are taught that he was a Teacher come from God, and that there is no other name given under heaven or among men, whereby we can be saved.

The way is represented by the Savior as being a narrow way; and he adds, "Few there be that find it." But we believe, although the way is narrow, yet there is room for the whole world to march to the celestial courts, if they would only enter upon the way and walk in it. And the Savior further says in another place: "Verily, Verily, I say unto you, he that entereth not by door into the sheep-fold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber." So we are forced to the conclusion that there is but one way, and that is the way that Christ has prescribed.

O fellow traveler to the grave and to the Judgment, come let us reason together from the scriptures; Let us lay aside our way, and Naaman's way, (may I not wash in them and be clean), and not engage in the way of Baalam, nor enter upon the way with of Korah, and Dathan, and Abram; but let us walk in the King's highway of holiness—in the way of Jesus, which is the way of obedience. There is no other way; because "he that saith I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him; but whosoever keepeth his word, in him, verily, is the love of God perfected. Hereby know we that we are in him;" 1 John, 2 : 4, 5. Hence it is that when we keep his word we are in the way.

We are taught by the apostle Peter, that we are begotten again "unto a lively hope, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith and salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time. We see that it is represented by an inheritance, and that inheritance is only obtained by them "who are kept by the power of God."

"Well," says one, "what is that power, or how is it manifested?"

The apostle says: "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."

Suffer us to try to present it more clearly by way of illustration. Suppose we have no home or inheritance here, temporally speaking, and are tossed to and fro by those covetous mortals of earth. But we have a friend, who tells us that we shall have an inheritance which is marked out—already surveyed,—if you will only re-survey,—commence at the beginning corner, and run the lines according to the chart or map. How careful would we be in searching the bearings of the map to ascertain how we must run the lines! Yea, how eagerly would we commence the survey! We would set our compass at the beginning corner, and then turn the compass with the tangent bearings of the map,—for from our experience in the surveys of land, unless we turn the compass with the title or map, we get wrong, and can never make the survey properly,—but we turn the compass with the chart, or map, and with great precision would we observe and note every corner represented in the map. How careful would we be in turning the compass at every point with the proper calls on the map,so as to make the survey properly close. At last we get around, we find every corner properly marked—the distance all right,—the survey complete, and we have a home.

So it is with the way of life. We, as sinful creatures, are tossed to and fro with the old, covetous wretch the devil, who is coveting our souls, leading us hither and thither upon the barren mountain of sin and folly. But we have a friend whose name is Jesus, the Son of God, who has surveyed and marked out the way, and left us a chart or map, by which, if we follow his steps, we may obtain the "inheritance which is incorruptible, and undefiled, and fadeth not away," reserved in heaven for us.

Come, friendly sinner, do you want the inheritance beyond the tomb? If so, you must re-survey the foot-steps of Jesus. Set your compass, (the mind), on the bearings of the map, (the New Testament), and follow the directions, closely observing every corner noted on the map. But be very careful that you start at the beginning corner,—faith, ; for without faith it is impossible to please God.

We here observe that unless you turn your compass, or mind, with the directions of the chart, the teachings of Christ, you never can close the survey and obtain the inheritance ;—for we are taught in the chart, in the apostle's language, to "be no more children, tossed to and fro,and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive ;" Eph. 4 : 14. So, do we not see already, that unless the compass, (the mind), is turned with the chart, or teachings of Christ, there is great danger of the mind leading you into error? You will get off the lines, miss the corners, and not properly close the survey, and lose the inheritance. Yea, the corners are all marked on the chart so plainly that a way-faring man though a fool, should not err therein. Perhaps it might not be amiss, here to refer you to some of the most prominent corners spoken of in the great chart and map of our eternal salvation. Faith, as before stated, is the starting-point ;—Repentance, Baptism, Nonconformity to the world, Nonresistance, Feet-washing, the Supper, the holy Eucharist, to love the brotherhood, to do good for evil ; and one noted corner that is laid down in the chart is, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren ye have done it unto me." "And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue, knowledge ; and to knowledge, temperance ; and to temperance,patience; and to patience, Godliness ; and to Godliness, brotherly kindness ; and to brotherly kindness, charity. For if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ."

A. Stalnaker.

For the Companion.

Bold in Christ.

"Before Heaven and Earth, I affirm the conviction, that there is but one true Lord, one true faith, and one true baptism ; and that baptism is immersion : I care not, so far as my popularity is concerned, how unpopular the affirmation may be !"—Campbell and Rice's Debate on Baptism, Page 257.

"Before Heaven and Earth."—What greater witness could Mr. C. have called to the stand? What a solemn declaration ! What boldness does this show! What more could he have said? Heaven and Earth should be the Christian's witnesses in all his ways.

"There is but one true Lord."—This implies that there are false lords besides this true one. Satan wants to be a lord, and oh, what a pity, he has so many subjects under his command! There are many lords but only one true Lord; namely, Christ Jesus,—the one whom the true Christian obeys in all he says.

Reader, do you obey him in all his commands? Do you show it before "Heaven and Earth," that you are a Christian? Are you bold in his cause, or are you a coward? Are you an every-day Christian or only a Suday hypocrite? Do you fight the battles of the Lord wherever you meet the enemy, or do yo you depend altogether on your fellow Christians too do the work, and when your Lord appears still expect the reward? You who professed to be tired of sin, and made a solemn vow, in your baptism, to forsake all that was evil,and follow Christ in his footsteps,—are you today engaged in the service of this one true Lord? Can the sinner, as well as the Christian, see that you are a child of God ; or are you, like a Nicodemus, only showing your religion when no one sees you? These are questions of great importance. Let us examine ourselves carefully,whether no other but this one true Lord is our King. Let us form this resolution,—and not only form it but carry it out,—I belong to Christ's Church, and I will show it wherever I am. Do not be afraid that you will lose anything by it. The child of God will love you ; sinners will respect you ; for they know that we all must be Christians in order to be saved. Do not carry water on both shoulders : do not try to serve God and the devil at once. The load will get too heavy for you ; you cannot hold out; for the Master has said: "You cannot serve two masters." I have heard it said: "You may serve one Lord and fool the other." Well, all the fooling you can do is this,—you can fool yourself out of heaven and into hell. But if you serve only this one true Lord, you are sure of heaven and all its blessings. If we examine the matter carefully, we come to this conclusion, I and my house will serve this "one true Lord."

"One true Faith."—In order to be a true faith it must be a living faith ; and consequently must have exercise; for without works faith is dead. The Christian shows his faith by obedience: whenever he believes, he will obey ; and this faith will save him. There are persons who say they believe, but think it is not necessary to obey. Such faith is dead ; and if not dead, it certainly will and must die, just because it has no exercise. Our faith must be strong enough in the Lord, that he will make us happy when he has promised, and not at our own option. And if we have such faith, let the devil, with his whole army,meet us in order to annihilate us, and we will conquer ; for the Lord is with us. Who can harm us if we are followers of Jesus?

This faith is very strong. When waves of trouble around us roll high, when all seems lost ; when,like Peter, we commence to sink, but still have faith in the Lord that he can help us, all will be safe. Like the ship captain on the broad ocean, when all seems lost, he tries to anchor; if the anchor takes hold, all may yet be saved. So the Christian, by faith, sees Jesus. Stephen, by faith, saw heaven open, and Jesus at the right hand of God. And so he could pray for his enemies. But we must, like Paul, keep the faith, never lose it. If we should keep it three-score years, and then lose it, all our reward would be gone. The Lord wants us to be saved; the Christian wants our company on his way to heaven; so let us keep the true faith in the Lord.

"One true Baptism, and that baptism is immersion."—So says Mr. Campbell. Brethren and sisters, we try to serve and obey this one true Lord; we try to exercise this one true faith; and so we will practice this one true baptism.

We read on page 258, same work: "Not only Mosheim, Neander, but all the historians, as well as professor Stuart, trace trine immersion to the times of the apostles." Now if this is correct, then we are also right in this, and we can indeed claim to be Christ's true Church. But all this will not benefit us any if we are not true members. Brethren, I fear we depend too much on this. "Oh, we belong to the church, and so all is right." So it will, if we obey the church; if we are living and active members of it. We may be members and after all be lost, because we may act the hypocrite; but if all is right with us, the devil with all his angels cannot keep us from heaven. But let us take God's word for our guide, and obey him in all he says to us; and we will enter heaven together, where all our temptations will have an end; and we can then be with our true Lord forever and ever. Amen.

M. HADY.

The Church and the World—Christ and Belial.

"The church and world amalgamate,
A union worse than with the state,
Though motives are the same;
The love of pleasure and of gold,
On some professors have such hold,
They oft forget their name."

Is money to be raised for church debts, church building or repairing? A Sabbath school or a missionary enterprise? For the increase of the minister's salary? To relieve the poor, or for any benevolent operation? What now? How is this money to be forthcoming? In a sober, rational, gospel way? Nay; a feast is prepared, a soiree introduced, a fancy fair, a picnic, a concert or exhibition of some kind, a donation, tea or strawberry party, a sleigh-ride, oyster-supper, a tin or golden wedding—something to inflame the passions, excite and enlarge the appetite, produce a little fun or vulgar merriment. The entire community is put in requisition for weeks. The excitement is intense, outbursting on the right and on the left. To open the purse-strings worldly policy is resorted to, foolish talking and jesting, feasting and frolicking! These festivals are the rage and fever of the day; the world is on fire with them? Where is there a church or society, white or colored, popish or Protestant, that does not resort to these unholy excitements, these stratagemse of Satan, to raise funds for some object of benevolence? It is money! money! Money we want, money we will have, gospel or no gospel, heaven or no heaven. Gospel and soul-saving laid aside. "Away with serious or sober looks, away with them! On for a jolly time of feasting!" "On with the dance, let joy be unconfined!" "Know ye not, friends, the friendship of the world is enmity with God!" "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin."

"Will ye play, then, will ye dally
With your music and your wine?
Up! it is Jehovah's rally!
God's own arm hath need of thine!"

Conviviality is the ultimatum, the first and the last. "Let us have a jolly time, eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow we die." The excitement for weeks is more or less dissipating, swallowing up every thought of the soul's welfare. Children and youth are on fire for a spree—and what else are very many of these festivals and picnic excursions but sprees or frolics?

All false religions seek to attract interest by amusement and animal gratifications. The worshipers of the golden calf sat down to eat and drink the oblations to their new god, and then rose up to play. And a bait of sensuality in some form has always been the lure to heathen worship. Popery has always followed in the same line. Even its Sabbath worship connects a dance with the mass. And throughout the whole structure of that "mystery and iniquity," the sensual and the comic are interwoven with the pomps and ritual of worship. And one of the most common methods by which decay advances upon sound churches is by pleas of amusements to give an attractive and hilarious character to religion, which usually are so many pleas for conformity to the world. We are not unaware of the value of a cheerful religion. We respond to the reasonableness of the command to "rejoice evermore." And yet we read that the "joy of the Lord is your strength," and yet our rejoicing must be in God to make it a religious joy. It is not a religious joy where professedly religious men indulge in gratifications that are worldly, sensual, and frivolous.

"There is a path that leads to God;
All others go astray."

—D. F. NEWTON.

Negative Kindness.

Do the doctors know that half the wives in the world die of this complaint? 'He never spoke an unkind word to his wife.' Yes; but did he remember, now and then, to speak a kind one? Did he have any sympathy for her bodily or mental ails? Or was he blind and deaf to both, treating them with that cutting indifferrence, which in time chills the most loving heart, and silences its throbs forever? Men are verily guilty in this regard. They take a young girl from the warm atmosphere of a loving, cheerful home; and after a few brief weeks of devotion, leave her to battle, single-handed, with new cares and new duties, and to bear sickness with what courage she may; and go their ways into the tangled paths of life, without a thought of the responsibilities they are shirking, or the solemn vows they have really broken.

God did not take up the three Hebrews out of the furnace of fire; but he came down and walked with them in it. He did not remove Daniel from the den of lions; he sent his angels to close the mouths of the beasts. He did not, in answer to the prayer of Paul, remove the thorn in the flesh; but he gave him a sufficiency of grace to sustain him.

Do your duty, and be secured against the day of judgment.

For the Companion.

Methodism.

In reading the Companion, I find a series of articles entitled, "Is Methodism of Christ?" The writer says, that what he has written has been done in the fear of God, through love of the truth, and good will to men; earnestly desiring not to offend, but to search after the truth as it is in Christ Jesus our Lord. He then proceeds to condemn Metdodists in the most uncharitable manner possible, and that too, in the face of Christ's own commandment, "Thou shalt not condemn nor judge any man." And what is the ground for his condemnations? I answer, first, he condemns "Revivals." He does not say whether he means revivals of Religion or revivals of Sin; but is, apparently, as much astonished at them as were the Jews in the days of the Apostles, when Peter preached on the day of Pentecost, and three thousand believed and were added to the church.

My dear brother, you seem to be alarmed; and no wonder,—when the power of God comes down, sinners generally get alarmed, as did the sinful Jews in the days that Christ wrought miracles, and the apostles preached repentance toward God and the remission of sin through faith in Jesus, and declared that the blood of Jesus cleanses from all sin. Now my dear brother, don't be alarmed; but try and catch a little of the holy fire, and see if it will not do you good.

In the second place, the brother tells us, that the Methodists teach that we may believe anything, so the heart is right Now, my dear brother, you certainly let your pen run away with your better judgment:—the Methodists teach holy living; and they also teach that we must have faith in the Lord Jesus Christ and toward God; that we must live holy lives, and that we must take the Word of God for our guide; and also that the Bible is a "lamp to our feet and a light to our pathway," to guide us from earth to glory. They also believe in worshiping God as our Maker and Preserver, and Jesus as our Redeemer; and we do not believe the doctrine of believing anything and yet please God and secure a home in heaven; for we believe that without faith in the Lord Jesus Christ it is impossible to please God.

And you seem to be troubled about the different church organizations, and their hostility to one another. I suppose my dear brother does not belong to any "church organization"; or if you do, I suppose it is the Church, and you are its standard-bearer; and, of course, you are right, and everybody else is wrong; and that salvation is alone through the Tunkard Church. Well, have it so,: I won't fall out with you about that; but I differ with you. We Methodists do not believe that salvation is through any "church organization," but that it is through the blood of Christ.

In the third place, you condemn Methodists because they don't teach the doctrine of feet-washing. Now, my brother, are we purged from our sins by the blood of Jesus, and thereby made partakers of the holy covenant, or are we purged from our sins by feetwashing and immersion? In short, are we saved by the blood of Christ, or are we saved by ordinances? If by ordinances, then the blood of Christ is of no effect, and Christ has died in vain.

It is true brother S—— has made a great many assertions; and if we admit his assertions, we will find ourselves to be Roman Catholics.—But I guess brother S—— is as much a man as was John Wesley; and therefore, we will make use of brother S——'s own language, and call his assertion "Manism." He also quotes a considerable amount of Scripture, but fails to apply it to condemning the doctrine taught by the Methodists. It certainly looks to me as though brother S—— had waged war against the membership of the church, and not against the doctrine of the church; for his communications abound with fault-finding,—not with proofs of unscripiural doctrines as taught by the Methodists. For brother S—— denounces them as anti-christian, without giving his ground for condemning them.

And now, my dear brother, you would not pretend to say that the Methodists deny the ability or power of Christ to deliver and to save us from our sins. If I understand what constitutes the spirit of anti-christ, it is, denying that Christ is the true Messiah—the Son of the living God. Now we Methodists believe that he is the Messiah—the Son of the true and living God; and that he came into the world and suffered and died for our sins, and not for ours only, but for the sins of the whole world; and that he rose for our justification, and by his stripes we are healed from the malady of sin. For we believe that Christ was very man and very God; and that through him alone we have redemption: not in a bench—not in water—not in man, but in the Lord Jesus Christ, whose blood cleanses us from all sin. We do not believe in bench, water, nor man religion; but we believe in Holy Ghost religion; for that alone can make the soul happy, and carry us above the waves and troubles of life, and make us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus, and fit us for the mansions in heaven.

And now, brother S——, can you not see a little something that corroborates with the teachings of Christ in the doctrine taught by the Methodists? And now, let me advise my good brother to look around among the Dunkard friends, and see if he cannot find some sore places among them: and while you are looking do not forget to examine your own case and apply the remedy; and when you and your household get well, and are enjoying good spiritual health, then come and help the Methodists.

My prayer to God is, that we may all live holy lives, and die the death of the righteous, and live with God and his Christ forever.

GEORGE M. KERSHNER.

Martinsburg, W. Va.

I am more afraid of my own heart than of the Pope and all his cardinals. I have within me the great pope, self. —Luther.

Whatever Midas touched was turned into gold. In these days, touch a man with gold, and he'll turn into anything.

A lady, in reply to some guest who praised the mutton on the table, said: "Oh, yes, my husband always buys the best; he is a great epicac.

Grace teaches us, in the midst of life's greatest comforts, to be willing to die, and in the midst of its greatest crosses to be willing to live.—Matthew Henry.

Evil things are not entities; but good things are entities, since they are of God, who truly is.

Christian Family Companion

Tyrone City, Pa., Sept. 19, 1871.

The Lord's Supper. No. 6.

That the Lord does nothing in vain, that all his designs are framed by infinite wisdom, every person acquainted with his word and works must admit; but that man should understand all of the Lord's designs, fathom all his purposes, or comprehend all his doings, is no more to be expected that the finite should comprehend the Infinite, or by searching, find out the Almighty to perfection. It is, however, a source of gratification, that the Incomprehensible has made such a revelation of himself and of his purposes as is most conducive to his own glory and the greatest good of his creature.

The more we acquaint ourselves with his works, the more we will know of him who wrought them. In every blade of grass; in every twig and leaf; in every flower that blows; in every grain of sand, drop of water, breath of air; in the vapor-emitting earth and flood, and the weeping cloud that reposes on the bosom of the buoyant air; in the cattle on a thousand hills, the birds and insects of every clime, and no less in our own complicated being,—in everything tangible on this teeming earth, and in everything visible in the star-spangled dome of heaven, we may learn something of the wisdom, the power, the goodness, or the justice of God But we may explore the wide field of nature,—travel through the world with untiring feet, and penetrate the blue ether that fills all space,—to acquaint ourselves with the Maker of all, and to gain a knowledge of his laws; yet it is by the light of divine revelation above all, that we can attain unto a knowledge of his being and attributes,—our own existence, circumstances, and wants, and of the will of God concerning his creature man. After making the most diligent and laborious search, and bringing together the accumulated results of the best efforts of all nations in all generations, we must still say with the expressive lines of the poet:

Upon the gospel's sacred page
The gathered beams of ages shine;
And, as it hastens, every age
But makes its brightness more divine.

And still, with the gospel light shining into our hearts, because of our own imperfections, we now only see as through a glass,—darkly; and not until we have passed through the valley of the shadow of death,—until this mortal shall have put on immortality, this corruption, incorruption,—shall we be able to see as we are seen, and to know as we are known.

God, at different times and in various ways, in bygone dispensations, spake unto the fathers by his prophets, declaring important facts, enjoining his will, vouchsafing encouraging promises, and pronouncing fearful penalties in connection with his law. As God does nothing without a wise purpose, so there was a wise design in everything he enjoined upon man. It is true, however, that God did not always fully reveal his designs in the duties which he commanded—in the ordinances and services which he enjoined; but it is equally true, that, by a complete observance of his injunctions on the part of the creature, his purposes were fully accomplished, whether they had been revealed or concealed. A few instances will now be given to illustrate and confirm this important fact.

The Lord on a certain occasion said to Abraham: "Take now thy son, thine only son Isaac, whom thou lovest, and get thee into the land of Moriah; and offer him there for a burnt offering upon one of the mountains which I will tell thee of." There is nothing in the context to indicate that the Lord revealed his design to Abraham when he gave this command. But Abraham had confidence in God; and, believing that the Lord would not require this of him if he had not some important purpose to accomplish, he obeyed. And when he had offered his son upon the altar the Lord called to him again, saying: "Lay not thine hand upon the lad, neither do thou anything unto him; for now I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son, from me."—Now God's design was accomplished and his faithful, obedient servant was justified. James, in reference to this circumstance, says: "Was not Abraham our father justified by works, when he had offered up Isaac his son upon the altar? Seest thou how faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect? And the scripture was fulfilled, which saith, Abraham believed God, and it was imputed to him for righteousness; and he was called the Friend of God." When the command was given the intent of the Lord was not revealed; but through obedience his design was accomplished, and his faithful servant was blessed.

When the Lord sent Moses to deliver Israel, He said to him: "What is that in thine hand?—And he said, A rod." The Lord said to him: "Cast it on the ground. And he cast it on the ground, and it became a serpent; and Moses fled from before it. And the Lord said unto Moses, Put forth thine hand, and take it by the tail. And he put forth his hand, and caught it, and it became a rod in his hand." When the Lord commanded Moses to cast the rod upon the ground he did not tell him that his purpose was to transform it into a serpent; but Moses obeyed, and the Lord's design was accomplished and manifested It was the same in converting the serpent again into a rod.

The Lord also said to Moses: "Put now thine hand into thy bosom." He did not say why he should do so. Moses obeyed; "and when he took it out, behold, his hand was leprous as snow:" the Lord's design was accomplished. The Lord added: "Put thine hand into thy bosom again"—Again Moses did as commanded; and when he plucked his hand out of his bosom, "behold, it was turned again as his other flesh." Although the Lord's purpose was concealed, it was fully accomplished as soon as Moses obeyed.

The only revealed design in the original appointment of the Passover was, a condition of security from the hand of the destroying Angel, when the first born throughout the land of Egypt were to be slain. The Hebrews observed the appointment and were delivered. When its annual observance was enjoined, it was declared to be a commemorative institution, that they might remember the day of their deliverance. This was also the revealed design when it was incorporated into the law. By a faithful observance of this ordinance, they were kept in continual remembrance of the oppressive bondage of the Hebrew nation, and of the mercy and goodness of God in their deliverance. This had a direct tendency to make them thankful, and to keep them faithful; and by bringing the whole nation together from year to year, they received other civil and religious benefits. But the most important design of the ordinance was not so clearly revealed; for it was at once the most direct and complete type of "Christ our Passover" contained in the entire typical system. Whilst it commemorated their deliverance from Egyptian bondage, it also pointed forward to the very day and hour of a greater deliverance from a more rigorous, humiliating, and oppressive bondage.—And it also prefigured the spotless purity, the blameless character, of the Lamb of God, and our feasting upon the Lamb that was slain. All this they did not see as it is now revealed unto us; but by a strict observance of the ordinance as it was enjoined, the type met the antitype in all its designed points, and thus affords one of the strongest testimonies that Jesus of Nazareth was the Mesiah—the Prophet that was to come. If the Hebrews dad done away with the Passover, or if they had changed the appointed time and order, it is easy to see how the design of the ordinance, both as a commemorative institution and as a type, would have been mutilated, if not wholly frustrated. Let this deeply impress our hearts with the importance of observing God's appointments, even though we should not be able to fully comprehend his design in them.

The Passover may be regarded as a fair specimen of the ordinance of the Lord's appointment; and therefore we shall notice another feature of it, which pertains to all positive divine law. It was the duty of the Hebrews to observe it as enjoined, and consequently they would have incurred the divine displeasure by neglecting its observance. But why was it their duty to keep the Passover?—What imposed the obligation? Was there anything in it, philosophically considered, that required its observance at the time, and in the manner specified? We answer,—God commanded it to be observed; and in this fact lay the obligation. When the Lord speaks, appoints, commands, it is the duty of his creatures to hear, regard, obey. If the Israelites had kept only such of the Lord's ordinances as they considered right in themselves—right in their inherent nature and tendency,—the ceremonial code would have been vastly reduced, if not entirely disannulled. And so it is under the Christian dispensation. If we should observe only what we can, as philosophers, see to be right in the nature and fitness of things, the gospel service would be reduced to morality only, and Christians to moral philosophers; and then, instead of walking by faith we would walk by sight. They who obey the Lord's injunctions because he has enjoined them, and without pausing first to inquire into all the why's and wherefore's, are they who follow the commendable example of faithful Abraham, and are the true friends of God. It is thus that the Lord tests our confidence in him, and our loyalty to his government. Where would be our loyalty—where the exhibition of our faith in Christ our Savior, if we were unwilling to observe his appointments until we can fully comprehend his purposes in them—understand their design—see their end. "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" Luke 6: 46.

Christ instructed the apostles to baptize "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost;" and he said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Baptism is given as one of the conditions with which the promise of salvation is connected; but farther than this he says nothing about the design of the ordinance. He did not tell them why he ordained this service in preference to something else He said nothing about its being an external sign, or symbol, of an internal, spiritual work. He did not say that it should be the rite of initiation, and a test of faith and loyalty. But the Lord did say, prefatory to his instructions concerning baptism: "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth."—This is sufficient for him who believes and trusts in Jesus. No loyal convert will tarry to inquire whether the service which he who has all power in heaven and earth demands, mean's anything. We freely admit that baptism is the rite of initiation into the visible church; that it is a test of loyalty, and that it is the most appropriate external symbol of the cleansing of the soul from sin by the blood of Christ, that infinite Wisdom could devise; but we as unhesitatingly deny that it is essential to the validity of the ordinance, that the believer in Jesus must understand all this when he is baptized, in order to realize the design of baptism. The believer in Christ, who is baptized because the Lord commands it, is loyal to his Lord and Master; and he is just as certain of realizing the promised blessing, as is he who understands more about the design of the ordinance.—The suitableness of the symbol to the thing signified, and the full design of the ordinance, are, however, themes of pleasant and profitable investigation to the adopted child of God.

The same may be said of other ordinances. When Christ instituted the Eucharist he said, "This do in remembrance of me." And Paul says: "As often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come." The Eucharist evidently is a commemorative ordinance: it is to be observed in remembrance of our Lord, and his sufferings and death. But the more we think of our Lord, and of his suffering for us, the more we will know about him, the better we will love him, and the more self-denying and submissive we will be. Many are the spiritual benefits accruing to us from a faithful remembrance of our Lord. He who merely partakes of the bread and wine, does not observe the ordinance, and he loses these benefits; but he who partakes of the bread and wine as commanded,—in remembrance of the Lord,—does observe the ordinance and will be benefitted by its observance. When the ordinance is willingly, heartily, faithfully observed, the Lord's purpose will be accomplished in it.

When Jesus instituted the humble ordinance of Feetwashing, he stooped and washed the feet of the disciples. This was his Father's will; for he said himself: "I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me;" John 6: 38. After having washed their feet he said: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, The servant is not greater than his Lord; neither he that is sent greater than he that sent him." They were the servants, and he was their Lord; he was sent, and his Father sent him; they were not greaterthan he was, and he was not greater than his Father. As his Father who sent him was greater than he, and as it was his Father's will that he should wash their feet to give them an example, he could not exalt himself against his Father's, will but had pertormed the service; so as he was their Lord,—greater than they,—and as he had taught them by percept and example to wash one another's feet, according to the will of his Father, they must not exalt themselves above him,—they ought to wash one another's feet." He added, "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."

If we want to know more about the design of this ordinance, we must learn from incidental allusions to it, from the nature of the service, or, what is still better, from the sincere, consistent observance of the ordinance; for Jesus says: "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God;" John 7: 17. He who washes the feet of one brother, ought to be willing to wash those of any brother; he who is willing to wash the feet of any brother,—and to do it without hypocrisy,—is willing to minister to his wants, to render every needed service. He loves the brethren and the brethren's Lord.—He harbors no animosity ill-will, nor pride. He is in the delightful vallley of humility, walking with his Lord.—He has a good conscience, an approving God, and he is truly happy.

Discrepancy in the Minutes of A. M.

There is a discrepancy between the fifth query of the minutes of our late Annual meeting as published by you and that published by brother Quinter. The former reads: "Is it according to the gospel for a brother to swear his life against a man for any cause?" the latter: "Is it lawful for a brother to swear his life against a brother," &c. The answer is;—"Not according to the gospel." This is a very important difference. Would you ascertain which is correct, and make it known through the Companion?

Yours in Love,
DANIEL SNOWBERGER.

REMARKS.

In response to the above we will say, that we were aware of the difference. We were present and heard the query read, and discussed; and when we came to read the proof we noticed the mistake,—at least we thought it a mistake. Comparing with the minutes as published at the Visitor office, from which we copied, it was ascertained that the compositor was faithful to his copy. Still we were not satisfied.

Next we appealed to our notes, taken at the Annual Meeting, and there we found it "Man." Then we examined the minutes of the District Meeting from which the query came, and found "Man" in them. From this testimony, in connection with our own remembrance, we made it "Man" instead of "brother;" and we still feel that we are correct. How the change was made from "man" to "brother" we cannot tell; but are sorry that it occurred, and think it was through mistake.

J. W. B.

Death of Brother Peck.

A private letter informs us of the death of brother D. J. Peck, of the Canton congregation, Ohio, on the 20th of August last. Brother Peck was a member of the Standing Committee at last Annual Meeting, and gave fully as much promise of life as any one in that body. We have not yet received an obituary notice.

We learn that brother Adam Hollinger, of Adams county, Pa., has now a severe spell of sickness, but is recovering.

Answers to Correspondents.

J. M. GARBER: It was received.

J. W. All right,—thank you.

MATTHIAS FRANTZ: We make no charges for inserting Lovefeast notices.

CORRESPONDENTS.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

From Oregon.

Dear Companion, and all interested,—a friendly greeting: We desire, through your kindness, to inform our friends of our safe arrival in this country, on the 8th of June last.—Found the brethren and friends generally well. We soon after established regular meetings; received four members by baptism, and affairs among the brotherhood generally, wore a pleasant and prosperous aspect. Lately we suspended regular appointments on account of ill health. We believe that an energetic and well regulated ministry, through the blessing of God, would be able to do much good here; and we would therefore, urge the brethren East to make prompt efforts to have ministering brethren (hale men preferable on account of unpleasant influences of climate during a large proportion of the year), come and remain here until affairs in the "little flock" in Oregon could be so arranged as to dispense with aid from the East, which, in our humble opinion, would not be many years. Labor in the ministry being injurious to our health, we purpose returning to the "States" during the coming summer, if we live and the Lord will.

In reference to the country we wish to say that we are not sufficiently acquainted to recommend it very favorably or otherwise in any one particular, except the sea-breezes and pure mountain air, which are truly refreshing.

PETER S. GARMAN.

Lebanon, Oregon.

Will we Know our Friends in Heaven.

In Companion, current volume, number 31, there is a query over the signature of brother Leroy Broyles, in regard to our friends and neighbors in heaven, and whether we will know them if we are so fortunate as to get there. I notice a reply to the same by a Sister; and in the Companion now before me, I see a reply to said query by brother John Forney, neither of which gives my mind the desired satisfaction, as I do not believe we will know our friends, that are gone to heaven with any distinction whatever.

Brother Forney advances some scripture to sustain him in the belief of recognition of friends in heaven. I fail to see this in the light he does.—As regards the wicked knowing friends absent, or in the pit of darkness and despair, I will not gainsay; for I believe everything that will render them miserable will be brought to bear.

I believe with the brother, that when we are made perfect through the refiners fire, we shall know him even as we are known, and we shall be perfect in judgment,—"we will be like unto him." Now if we be like Christ, there will be no respecter of persons with us; for this is the mind of Christ. The Apostle says: "Know no men after the flesh." But we must know them after the Spirit; for we are all born of God, and according to the Spirit. God is our Father, with him we are all equally alike, and we must have the mind of Christ.—Christ knows no one,—only as children, bought with his blood; and as to rebels, he knows them as such; but he knows no one after the flesh. "They that are after the flesh, do mind the things of the flesh. But they that are after the Spirit, the things of the Spirit." And I believe we will know no one, as we know them here according to the flesh. If we are born of God, and have been baptized into one Spirit, we will "call no men Father upon the earth." To call them father we know them as such; and when we get home to heaven, we will not know them to call them father, mother, sister, brother. No, but we will walk the streets of the New Jerusalem hand in hand, and arm in arm, not knowing that they were ever our fathers, mothers, sisters, brothers, in the flesh. We will not know that there are any missing. Nothing there to mar our feelings,—for I believe, if we shall know our dear ones, we will with the same reason know the missing ones. As the sister says, it will not be there like it is here. Things will be changed. Yes, dear sister, "former things will have passed away."—Earthly relationships, and the ties that earth have made,—all earthly bonds,—will be severed, and we all shall be one; all our fathers and mothers, all our brothers and sisters, will there be bound together by the bond of God's love, where Jesus is our brother.

According to the flesh we love our relations the best; but according to the Spirit there is no difference; we love all alike, and know them alike, and when this earthly tabernacle is put off, we will know no one, only after the Spirit.

SAMUEL C. BESHORE.

Whitesville, Mo

Brother Henry: I see that some have given church news through the Companion, of which I do love to read; and I rejoice to know that the cause is still progressing. I thought I would give the news of the church here, in the cause of our Master,—the Lord Jesus Christ. The meeting-house was completed, and ready to have meeting in on the second of September, and had a council meeting in it to prepare for a communion on the 30th; and the same afternoon they baptized two (man and wife). Oh! how it cheers us up on our pilgrimage, when we see sinners forsake their sins, and turn to God while young. That night brethren Shepley, Shively, and Wolf, preached to a large concourse of people, and had good order. Sunday morning we went to the river were baptism was administered. An old woman (eighty-four years old), very feeble, saw her condition before it was too late, and was baptized, while the lamp of life held out to burn. She was formerly a Methodist. Her companion, who has been dead several years, was a Methodist minister. When we arrived at the meeting-house it was already crowded with people. The brethren spoke ably; and as soon as meeting was dismissed, a young girl of fifteen years, was deeply convinced and desired baptism,—quite a contract between the one in the morning and her. So they went to the river and baptized her. Our meeting ends in the new meeting house. May the good cause go on, and may sinners be brought to a knowledge of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus our Lord, is my prayer.

JANE MARQUIS.

Somerset, Ind.

Brother Holsinger: I see in the Companion, that a subscriber wish es to know whether there are any Brethren living in Ottawa or Dickinson counties, Kansas. In answer I will inform you, that there are some in Dickinson Co., that I know of.—They have a church there, if I am not mistaken; at least there are two ministering brethren there, and they hold meetings. We expect to move there next Spring, and would be glad to see some more brethren make a start for that place; as there is still government land to be had there; and I am informed that it is a pretty and healthy country, and good land. I will close, hoping that some more will make up their minds to go soon.

Your's in love.

SAMUEL MARSH.

Le Roy, Ohio.

Brother Henry: We attended a communion on the 2nd of August, at Frederick, Iowa, where we gave in our letter. I can say that I felt it a heavenly place in Christ Jesus: the brethren are so earnest in the work of the Lord

There were six ministers present; brethren Daniel Miller, and John Hansell, residing there; brethren David Sink, Alfred Ogle,—Beard and —— Miller from other arms of the church.

They had the supper on the table at the time of Feet-washing; and could then with propriety read,—"He riseth from supper, and laid aside his garments."

I feel perfectly at home with the brethren in Iowa, as far as I have become acquainted.

HANNAH KNAUFF.

Ottumwa, Iowa.

Brother Holsinger: Permit me through the C. F. C. to acknowledge the receipts of monies, received in behalf of J. B. Allensworth for the Oregon Mission, up to this date, as follows:

A. B. Fisher, Xenia, Ind.	$5,00
Brother and sister, Woodville, Ohio,	5,00
Hannah Knauff, Ottumwa, Iowa.	5.00
J. D. Rosenberger, Souder's Station, Pa.	2,00
Ella Williams, Funkstown, Md.	4,00
A Sister, Lancaster, Pa.	1.00
H. Renner, Mt. Carroll, Ills.	5.00
G. R.	,50
A Sister, Montgomery Co, Pa.	2.00

MICHAEL FORNEY.

Brother Allensworth received as follows:

A. C. Ban, Lancaster Co., Pa.	1.00
A Sister in Christ, Lancaster, Pa.	1.00
Synonymous.	2.00

In connection with the receipt of the above donations, for the Oregon Mission, I return my sincere thanks to the donors; and I hope the Lord will bless them with much good. I will here say, I cannot tell at present how soon I will be able to start. I want the brethren satisfied with my going; otherwise I will refund each donors money.

J. B. ALLENSWORTH.

Brother franklin Forney, after some business correspondence, says:

"Our church (Berlin) is in a healthy state at present. They have had some eight or ten additions by Baptism, and one reclaimed, this summer. Peace and union. Thanks be to the Lord for it."

Enigma.

I am composed of 16 words.

My 1st is in John 7: 19, 16th word.
My 2nd is in Matth 13: 55, 1st word.
My 3rd is in Prov 16: 12, 1st word.
My 4th is in Saml 17: 23, 5th word.
My 5th is in Matth 5: 30, 26th word.
My 6th is in Gen 19: 15, 2nd word.
My 7th is in Matth 3: 1, 9th word.
My 8th is in Prov 7: 27, 3rd word.
My 9th is in Judes 21: 23, 7th word
My 10th is in John 19: 42, 16th word.
My 11th is in Jer 21: 5, 4th word.
My 12th is in Gen 19: 24, 32nd word.
My 13th is in Matth 14: 22, 26th word.
My 14th is in Ezek 22: 20, 25th word.
My 15th is in James 1: 27, 13th word.
My 16th is in Matth 5: 29, 26th word.

I ask the question that may be well for us to consider, as members of the church.

MOLLIE S. VANDYKE.

Correction.

The Lovefeast in the Raccoon Creek congregation, Montgomery Co. Ind., will be on the 26th of October, instead of the 27th as published in No. 37.

☞ Where this note stands there was a vacancy that should have been filled by an item of correspondence; but as we had nothing suitable we insert this explanation. Such are some of our troubles, and thus we dispose of them. J. W. B.

Announcements.

The Lovefeast will be in the Warrior's Mark congregation, Pa., on the 7th of October. There will be meeting in the Brethren's room at Tyrone on the evening of the 6th. The usual invitation is extended. Those wishing to attend will stop off at Tyrone, where they will take the Bald Eagle Valley R. R, to Bald Eagle station.

We intend, the Lord willing, to hold a Lovefeast at our meeting-house, three miles north-east of connersville, Fayette county, Indiana, in the Four Mile congregation, on the 4th of October, to which a hearty invitation is given. Those coming by Railroad will stop off at Connersville. There will be conveyances to take them to the place of meeting.

MARTIN WITTER.

We intend to have a Lovefeast, on the 27th and 28th, in the Sugar Creek congregation, 3 miles east of Auburn and 16 miles south-west of Springfield, Ill. We would be pleased if brethren traveling west, would stop off at Auburn, on the Alton and St. Louis Railroad, and be with us during our meeting.

By request of the church

JOHN BEECKLY.

The Lord willing, the communion meeting will be at brother J. Hershey's, the 30th of September and first of October, Neosko Falls, Woodson county, Kansas.

Also five miles south-west of Marmaton, Bourbon county, Kansas, October the 4th at one o'clock, meeting next day. Thence east-ward in Missouri, on the 7th and 8th of October.

ADAM C. NUMER.

We intend, the Lord willing, to hold a lovefeast in the Grundy county Curch, Iowa, the 7th and 8th of October, to which the general invitation is given.

HENRY P. STRICKLER.

The Lord willing, the Brethren intend to hold a Communion Meeting, in the Hamilton branch, Mo., four miles north of Hamilton, on the 27th and 28th of September, commencing at 2'oclock P. M. The usual invitation is extended. Brethren and friends coming by Railroad, will stop off at Hamilton.

GEORGE WITWER.

We intend having a communion meeting at Beaver Creek meeting house Washington county M. D., on the 12th of October, the Lord willing and continue next day General invitation is given.

J. M. WOLF.

The brethren at Waterloo, Iowa, intend having a communion season, commencing 3, P. M., Saturday Sept. 7th and close next day at one P. M, a general invitation is hereby extended. E K. BUECHLEY.

A Change.

The Communion at Walnut Level, Wells county, Ind., Oct. the 27th, instead of Oct. 21st, as was formerly announced. JONATHAN WARNER.

Four Mile, Connersville Fayette Co, Ind, October 4th.

Conemaugh Cambria county, Pa, Oct, 5th, 3 o'clock.

Clover Creek, Blair county, Pa, Oct, 20th, 4, P. M.

Mineral Creek, Johnson county, Mo, Oct, 14th.

Schuyler county, Mo, Sept,29th and Oct, 1st.

Antioch Church, Huntington county, Ind, Oct, 4th, 5 P, M.

Pipe Creek, Md, Sept, 20th 1 P, M.

Indian Creek, Westmorland county, Pa, Sept, 26th.

Mohican Church, Wayne county, Ohio, Oct, 25th.

Buffalo Valley, Oct, 20th 1 P, M.

Dry Valley, Oct, 11, 1 P, M.

Antietam. Washington county, Md, Oct, 24, 10 A, M.

Dunning's Creek, Oct 21th, 4 P, M.

Palestine, Wayne county, Ind, Sept, 23 and 24th.

Yellow Creek, Stephenson Co., Ill., Sept. 26, 27.

Dry Creek, Lynn county, Iowa, Sept, 29th.

East Nimishillin, Canton, Ohio, Sept, 27th,

Augwich, Huntingdon county, Pa, Oct, 16th, and 17th,

Mill Creek, Adams county, Ills, Sept, 30th,

Mill Creek, Pike county, near Barry, Oct 3rd,

Cowanshannoc congregation, Armstrong county, Pa., Sept. 29th, 2 o'clock, P. M.

Wabash congregation, Ind., Sept. 28th, and Somerset congregation, Ind., Sept, 30th. Stop at Wabash City.

Raccoon Creek congregation, Montgomery county, Ind., Oct. 26th. Stop at Ladoga.

Columbiana church, Ohio, Sept. 21st.

East Nimshillin, Ohio, Sept. 26th.

Bristolville, Ohio, Sept. 30th.

Monticello, White county, Ind., Oct. 20, 21; 2 o'clock, P. M.

Wayne county, miles N. Ohio, 12 W. of Wooster, Oct. 25th, 10 o'clock, A. M.

Antietam congregation, Welty's meeting-house, Washington county, Md., Oct, 24th, 10 o'clock, A. M.

Buffalo Valley, Pa., Oct. 20th, 1 o'clock P. M.

Dry Valley, Pa., Oct. 11th, 1 o'clock P. M.

Clover Creek, Blair county, Pa. Oct 20th, 4 o'clock, P. M.

Schuyler county, Mo., 1 mile east of Green Top Station, Oct. 1st.

Meadow Branch, M. H. Pipe Creek, Md. Sept. 30th.

Mineral Creek, Johnson county, Mo. Oct. 14th.

Antioch, Huntington county Ind.,Oct.4th.

Logan church, Logan county, Ohio, Sept. 29th.

Walnut Level, Wells county, Ind., Oct. 27st.

Yellow Creek, Claar's meeting-house, Bedford county, Pa. Sept. 27th, 4 P. M.

Somerset arm, Mercer co., Mo., Sept 23d and 24th.

Buck's Creek church, Henry county, Ind., Sept. 28th.

Lick Creek congregation,Owen county,Ind, Sept. 29th.

Spring Creek, Rockingham county, Va., Sept. 22, 23.

South Keokuk, Keokuk Co., Iowa, Sept. 30th, and Oct. 1st.

Yellow Creek, New Enterprise, Bedford County, Pa., Oct. 24th, 4 o'clock P. M.

Eeast meeting-house, Pine Creek congregation, St. Joseph county, Mich., Oct 19th, 4 o'clock P. M.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with obituary notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

Near New Windsor, in the Pipe Creek arm of the church, Carroll county, Md., the first day of May, sister NANCY ENGLE, relict of our friend John Engle deceased; aged 71 years 8 months and 19 days. She had been a consistent member of the church for many years. She was the eldest daughter of our aged brother Christian Roop deceased. Her last illness was Bilious Pleurisy, which resulted in her death, in the course of a few days. On the third, her remains were consigned to their last resting place in the graveyard attached to the Brethren's meeting-house at Pipe Creek. She has left seven children, and a large number of relatives to mourn their loss, which we hope was her great gain. Funeral services by the Brethren. Philip Boyle.

"Visitor" please copy.

Near Lena, Ill's, RICHARD COLLINS HOWARD, son-in-law to brother Isaac Kemper; aged 33 years 10 months and 11 days. He leaves an affectionate companion, seven little children, and many relatives and friends to mourn their loss. Funeral services by brother Enoch Eby and the writer, from John 17 : 4, to a large and interesting audience.

At Yellow Creek, Stephenson county, Ill's, of Consumption, brother ABRAHAM, son of brother John & sister Mary KAMERER; aged 26 years 7 months and 11 days; leaving a wife in Minnesota, parents here, and relatives to mourn their loss. Funeral occasion improved by the writer and brother M. Fowler, from John 9 : 4.

The above seems to call for a more than ordinary notice. Abraham Kamerer did as too many do.—put off the Lord till late, (sometimes too late). When he began to decline he became greatly concerned, and told those about him of it, and that he wanted to be baptized. Then counsellors seemed to be plenty, some thought that he was so weak—he would be right without baptism; but he insisted that he must be baptized.—Then he was advised to have himself sprinkled. "No," said he, "I want to be baptized according to the scripture." Then he applied to the Brethren, and we met him at his father's house, and found him helpless in his rocking chair, not able to talk above a whisper. He was taken in his chair to the carriage; then conveyed to the water, where we met many people, who seemed to be solemnly impressed in the matter: for many supposed he would die in our hands in the water. Now we had the ordinary exercises. Then he wished to shake hands with all, which was done. He was then carried on his chair into the water, where he was baptized with as much ease as we ever baptized any one. Then he was brought on his chair out again, greatly rejoiced and revived, and lived two weeks to the astonishment of many.

In Lena, Ill's, infant son of brother Thomas and sister Hannah BOGENREIF. Occasion improved by the writer, from Matth. 18 : 1—4.

Allen Boyer.

In the Lick Creek branch, of the church, Williams county, Ohio, August the 26th;—sister MARY LANDIS, wife of brother Samuel Landis, aged 39 years 7 months and 26 days; leaving a husband, one daughter, and many friends and relatives to mourn their loss, which is her great gain. She was faithful in the house of the Lord, and is gone in peace to the spirit land. Funeral services by the writer and others, from 1 Corinthians 15 : 22—26.

D. M. Rittenhouse.

("Visitor" please copy.)

Near Perrysville, Juniata county, Pa, Aug, 30th, DAVID, son of friend Ephraim and Magdelain HERTZLER; aged 4 months and 6 days. Text, "Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?" Genesis 18 : 25.

In the Astoria congregation, Fulton county, Ill's, on the 21st of August, Elder JACOB MACK, formerly from Fayette county, Pa., aged 67 years 9 months and 18 days. He was buried on the following day. His funeral was attended by a large concourse of people. Services By the Brethren.

John Fitz.

("Visitor" please copy.)

In Chippewa church, Wayne county, Ohio, August 25th, LUCINDA, daughter of brother George and sister HESTAND; aged 10 years 6 months and 23 days. Disease, Diphtheria. After a few days of suffering the good Lord was pleased to take her home to rest from all her earthly trouble. Funeral services by brethren Eld. Jacob Kurtz, and others. J. B. Shoemaker.

In the Bachelor Run church, Carroll Co., Indiana, September 1st, brother DANIEL OVERHOLSER, aged 70 years 7 months and a few days. He was a faithful brother and deacon in the church for many years. He leaves a sorrowing widow. (a sister), and 11 children, and a large number of relatives, who need not sorrow as those who have no hope. Funeral services by Elder Hiel Hamilton and Abraham Ford, from Revelations 14 : 13. Jacob B. Landis.

In the Solomon's Creek Congregation, Elkhart county, Ind., March 29th, old sister

MAGDALENA COY; aged 82 years, 3 months, and 28 days. Funeral was preached by Jesse Calvert, some time after, from Acts 2: 26.

JOHN ARNOLD.

In Marshall county, Ind., July the 13th, MARY MOLOCH, daughter of George Moloch, aged 1 year, 2 months, and 10 days.—This little child was drowned in a cistern.—It was missed by the family but a few minutes, when it was found dead. Funeral service by the writer and others.

JOHN KINSELY.

Near Middleberry, Clay county, Ind., in Lickcreek Congregation, Owen county, Ind., August 18th, George Shidler, son of brother Daniel and Mary Shidler; aged 20 years, 1 month, and 20 days. Funeral services by the brethren, Robert Gosborn, Daniel summer and the writer, from 1 Cor. 15: 12—58, to a large congregation.

ANANIAS HENSEL.

In Bloomville, Seneca county, Ohio, Aug. 26th, of Consumption, SUSAN, wife of Benjamin KNOPP. She was born in Stark county, Ohio, March 23rd, 1821; and was, consequently, 50 years 5 months and 3 days old. Her maiden name was Troxell. Her father was one of the early pioneers of this country. She was an estimable woman, and a consistent member of the Menonite church. She leaves a husband and large circle of friends to mourn their loss; but this, we hope is her eternal gain. Funeral discourse by brother David Roop, from 2 Timothy 4:7,8.

S. A. Walker.

LIST OF MONEYS received for subscription, books, &c.,

J. A. Sell,	1,50	J. W.	3,00
E. D. Book,	1,50	A. A. Maust,	1,25
C. Bucher,	,50	J. M. Garber,	1,50
J. Everett,	,50	P. S Newcomer,	1,50
A. C. Numer,	,50	D. Forney.	5,00

Advertisements.

WE will admit a limited number of select advertisements at the following rates

One insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.
No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations

Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

TYRONE BANK,
TYRONE, PA.

This Bank, intending to do a general banking business, solicits accounts from Banks' Bankers and others. Collections made on all points. Interest allowed on DEPOSITS left on time. Paper discounted on liberal terms.

Wm. P. Orbison,	D. P. Gwin,
John Scott,	H. G. Fisher,
Thomas Fisher,	J. H. Glazier,
Wm. Dorris,	G. C. Wilkins,
G W. Garretson,	and others.

Answers to Correspondents.

A Sure Cure for Dyspepsia.

Upon the receipt of one dollar, I will send the the Medicine, with Directions, by return mail. DAVID ESHELMAN.
MONROEVILLE, PA.

FARM FOR SALE.

In Kosciusco county, Indiana, one mile north of Millwood, on the road between Bremen and Etna, containg 200 acres, 50 acres improved, some marshy, and the balance in timber.

JOHN MOW.

7—34-3ts.

1780 1871

ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK?

Use Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

CLEANSE YOUR BLOOD!!

An Alterative and Catharic, or Tonic and Purge combined, for diseases arising from bad blood; such as Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Erysipelas, Worms, Chills and Fever, Scrofula, Pimples, Tetter, &c. TRY IT.

Established 1780 in package form. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form which was brought to its present state of preservation and perfection some years later, by Dr. P. Fahrney, Chicago, Ill's, who conducts the trade west of Ohio. Great reputation! Many Testimonials! Ask for that prepared at Waynesboro, Pa., and Chicago, Ill's. Beware of imitations. Genuine retails at $1.25 per bottle. Druggists and Medicine dealers sell it.

Dr. P. Fahrney's "Health Messenger" gives the history and uses of the BLOOD CLEANSER testimonials, and other information, sent free of charge. Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.
WAYNESBORO, PA.

Beers' Expanding Scroll Waterwheel.

[Patented 1868] This wheel is now running with the overshot, in a Flouring Mill, and is using less water than the overshot. Inventor being a Millwright, and having seen and used all the new waterwheels, does not hesitate to say it is the first iron wheel that can compete with the overshot, and is one half cheaper, simpler and better. For farther information address J. L. Beers and Sons, Millwrights and Manufacturer's of wheel shafting and mill gearing of all kinds, continued Sawmill feed and Sawmill irons.

J. L. Beers & Sons
Cosolamus, Juniata Co. Pa.

A Card.

Drs. D. Fahrney & Son, Uroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.

7-10- 1 yr. pd.

Wm. M. Lloyd, Altoona, Pa. D. T. Caldwell, Tyrone Pa.

LLOYD, CALDWELL & CO.,
BANKERS,

Receive monies on deposit, and pay interest if left 6 months, at 4 per cent per annum, or 5 per cent. if left one year.

Special contracts made with parties acting a administrators, executors, guardians, and persons holding monies in trust. Dealers in every description of Stocks and Bonds.—Government Securities made a speciality.

Gold and Silver bought and sold, and a general Banking business transacted.

A Treatise on the Salutation, Feet-washing, and the Lord's Supper.

Intended more especially for the Brotherhood. Now offered on the following terms: Single copy ten cents; by the dozen 80 cts. Address David Bosserman, Gettysburg, Pa. Send the money with the address, and they will be sent immediately.

35—4t.

Universal Guide for Cutting Garments.

By which every family may cut its own garments for men and boys, of twenty six different sizes; for Coats, Pants, Vests, and Shirts, and Ladies' Dress Bodies. Agents wanted to sell State, County, and Family Rights. For Particulars address MILLER & QUINN,
Tyrone, Blair Co., Pa.

ENGLISH ROOFING FELT.

Is found to stand well in all climates, being extensively used for Roofing Houses, Out Buildings and Sheds; for Laying Flat Roofs, Gutters, Lining Granaries, Storehouses, or Walls, (either outside or inside), and for placing under Slates or Tiles. It is also a cheap and effective Ceiling on the underneath side of rafters of a Slated or Tiled Roof, and as a Ceiling to Iron Roofs, counteracting Heat, Frost, and Condensation of Moisture.

The English Felt is put up in rolls of 25 yards in length, by 32 inches in width, and containing a surface of 500 square feet.

THREE-PLY FELT,
FOR ROOFING.

In Rolls, 26 inches wide, by 50 feet in length; each roll will cover a surface 10 feet square, or 100 square feet.

It is to be laid across the roof, shingle fashion, with a lap of two inches, and secured by nailing the edges with 3d nails and tin caps.

When laid, the Felt is to be painted with Masti Roof Coating, and Sanded. The Mastic Roof Coating is mixed, ready for use, and is applied with a brush.

TARRED ROOFING FELT.

Used extensively for Sheating Houses, and for Tar and Gravel Roofing, also for placing under Slate, Tin and Shingle Roofing.

It is used in packing Woolens and Furs to protect them from moths.

Put up in rolls weighing 45 pounds each. 15 pounds Felt will cover a surface of 100 square feet.

TWO-PLY FELT,

For Sheathing Houses, Roofing Temporary Buildings, making Water Tight Floors, and for placing under Slate and Shingles.

In rolls, 26 inches wide by 50 feet in length. Each roll will cover a surface 10 feet square or 100 square feet.

For Sheathing it can be nailed upon the studding, making perfectly air tight sheathing, and sure protection from dampness.—Rats mice or vermin will not go near it

MICA CANVAS ROOFING,

In rolls containing 250 square feet. Is to be laid across the roof, and lapped shingle fashion with a lay of two inches, and secured by nailing the edges with 20 oz tacks.

This is the only Composition Roofing that does not require a finishing coat of paint or cement

UNTARRED SHEATHING FELT.

For Carpet Lining, Deafening Floors, and for putting under Slate, Tin and Shingle Roofing

Put up in rolls weighing 100 pounds.

10 pounds Felt will cover a surface 10 feet square, or 100 square feet

MANUFACTURED BY THE
PENN ROOFING COMPANY,
105 South Second St., Phil'a.

The Florence & Lyon Sewing Machine, with Drop Feed, new Tucker, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted First Class, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted traveling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $200 per month. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. Co.
33 East Union Square, 17th St., New York

SHORT HAND WRITING.—Students of Phonography and all others who are interested in the art can obtain instruction books. Send stamp for price list and tracts.
"AMERICAN PHONETIC DEPOT.
TYRONE, PA.

J. S. THOMAS. &CO
WHOLESALE GROCERS
and
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
No 305 RACE St. ABOVE 3RD, PHILADELPHIA.
N. B. Country Produce taken in exchange for goods or sold on commission.

CABINET MAKING & UNDERTAKING

The undersigned keeps on hand and manufactures to order all kinds of Furniture. He is also neatly fitted out for conveying the dead to their last resting place.

Manufacturer of the Common Sense Dasher Washing Machine. Shop at the Cross Roads, near Warrior's Mark, Pa.
JAMES S. COX.

A Washing Machine may be seen and purchased at this office. v6n48tf.

BURLINGTON.

Leaving the East and arriving at Chicago or Indianapolis, how shall we reach the West? The best Line is acknowledged to be the C. B. and Q., joined together with the B. & M. Railroad by the Iron Bridge at Burlington, and called the Burlington Route.

The main line of the Route running to Omaha, connects with the great Pacific Roads, and forms to-day the leading route to California. The Middle Branch, entering Nebraska at Plattsmouth, passes through Lincoln, the State Capital, and will this year be finished to Fort Kearney, forming the shortest route across the Continent by over 100 miles.

Another branch of the B. M., diverging at Red Oak, falls into a line running down the Missouri through St. Joe to Kansas City, and all Kansas. Passengers by this route to Kansas, see Illinois, Southern Iowa, and Missouri, and, by a slight divergence, can see Nebraska also.

Lovers of fine views should remember the Burlington Route for its towns "high-gleaming from afar"—its tree-fringed streams—its rough bluffs and quarries—its corn-ocean stretching over the prairies further nutha eye can reach.

Land-buyers will be sure to remember it, for they have friends among the two thousand who have already bought farms from Geo. S. Harris, the Land Commissioner of the B. & M. R. R. at Burlington, Iowa, or among the four thousand home-steaders and pre-emptors who last year filed claims in the Lincoln Land Office, where "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm."

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price, $4.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol., $2.25. Indispensable.

Life at Home; or the Family and its MEMBERS.—Including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed. The Altar in the House, etc. By Wm. Aikman, $1.50;

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. THOMPSON, Fancy Cloth. $1.00.

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand-book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners, with a Chart for recording the sizes of the different Organs of the Brain, in the Delineation of Character, with upwards of 170 Engravings. Muslin, $1.25.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50;

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By W. PITTINGER, $1.50.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Beautifully Illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth, gilt, beveled boards. Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75 cents.

Any of the above sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

The Phrenological Journal, An Illus- TRATED, First-Class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50, or with the Pious Youth, for $3.00. We commend the JOURNAL to all who want a good Family Magazine, and who does not?

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and state written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to H. R. HOLSINGER, Tyrone, Pa.

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post pain,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid	1.25
Per dozen " "	10 30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post paid,	.50
Per dozen, " "	5.50

The Christian Harp, containing 32 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 85 cents. $8.00 per dozen.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents $6.00 per dozen.

COMPANION Volume 8, bound post paid,	$2.7
Reserved at the office,	2.25
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder, single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express,	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	.60
German & English Testaments,	.75

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25

32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION. 25

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Certificates &c.

Marriage Certificate, per doz., post paid, 0.30
CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP. Per doz, 0.20
TRACTS.—RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE, 12 pages five cents single copy; thirty cents a doz.
All orders should be accompanied with the money, and the name of person, postoffice county & state written in unmistakable letters

THE PIOUS YOUTH

A MONTHLY PUBLICATION

Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.

One dollar a year in advance.

THE
Christian Family Companion

Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements; that among those are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
TYRONE, PA.

Christian Family Companion

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum

VOLUME VII. TYRONE, PA. TUESDAY, SEPT. 26, 1871. NUMBER 39.

WATCHING AND WAITING.

Oh! the days are passing, fading, and the years glide slow away,
And our hearts are aching, yearning, longing for the coming day
When the warfare will be ended, and the weary rest in peace,
When our Lord from Heaven descended gives from pain a long release.

Day by day our loved ones perish, sparkling eyes grow dim with pain,
Fair forms stiffen into silence, all our tender care is vain;
Sadly, and with tears, we lay them low beneath the sod to rest;
Free are they from all earth's troubles and the storms that sweep its breast.

Seek we o'er the rolling water some fair spot to sin unknown,
Vain our search, for dread disaster reigns upon the ocean's throne.
Men go shuddering down to silence ne'er to wake while surges roar;
Waves are moaning for redemption, sobbing on the trembling shore.

Oh! the weary, weary ages! oh! the years so filled with woe!
Still there follow in their seasons summer's heat and winter's snow.
Patience, patience, ye despairing; soon will come the King sublime,
And eternal hands are weaving off the measured thread of time.

L. D. SANTEE.

Dixon, Mo.

For the Companion.

Are the Brethren Ready?

Yes, are the Brethren ready, for the work they have to do, and for discharging the important trust committed to their hands? Are the Brethren laboring and praying that they may be able to answer the high calling they have received; and also to extend it, and place it within the reach of others in other places, where they have never yet come? These questions have been suggested to our mind by the following facts, that have lately come to our notice.

A few months ago, a brother said to us,—"Our Brethren are coming into notice everywhere." The expression impressed our mind at the time. But lately other things have come to our knowledge that convinced us of the truth of what he said. For more than 150 years our Brethren have lived in this highly-favored America, and thousands of people never yet heard of them. Their number, though, at first so small, and their circumstances limited as regards riches in this world, was, perhaps, why they escaped notice for so long a time. But their character as Christians, and the principles and doctrines they held as a religious people; and more than all, their peculiar traits as a separate and peculiar people, should have given them, we think, a world-wide reputation, long before this time. Whose fault it has been we can not tell; neither can we recall the past; but for the future, are we ready and willing to do our part, and our duty too, to spread far and wide the truths we try to practice? Human nature seems to be the same everywhere, and in all times; and professed Christians have ever shown a disposition to attach a great deal of importance to some portions of Scripture, to the neglect of all the rest. And our Brethren are no exception to this rule. in every particular, although they claim to follow Jesus the nearest of any people. This we believe as far as we know about our Brethren and about other professing people. But if they claim that they do follow him in everything, attaching the proper importance to every truth he uttered, we say we cannot see it in that light, and think and will say that the Brethren do not certainly claim so much.

Jesus preached the kingdom of heaven in all the cities of Judea, by the rivers and on the mountain, throughout Galilee and in Samaria, and to every one he met, in the short time of three years, or a little more. Paul preached at Damascus, at Jerusalem, Antioch, Athens, and at Rome, on land and on the sea, in Spain, and it is thought by some that he visited and preached in England; and when he wrote to Timothy, his son in the gospel, saying "the time of my departure is at hand," he had been preaching, doing all this labor and traveling, no more than 31 or 32 years. Are these two examples — Jesus and Paul,—not enough to show what can be done in the work? And are words not plain enough to convince every man that the command,—"Go, teach all nations,"—"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," is binding upon us all with as much force as any other truth that Jesus taught? That the Brethren have not followed their great and good Leader in this duty as they should have done, a few facts will soon show.

We have, in these United States of America, the very country where Christianity should flourish most, and where its truths should spread widest and quickest, about 40 states, besides a number of large and fast settling territories. And in many of these every facility is being afforded for spreading the gospel, all of which advantages Paul knew nothing of; and the cry from every place, almost, to the ministers of the gospel, is, "Come, preach to us the doctrine of peace." And while Paul was imprisoned, and threatened, and whipped, and at last slain for his attachment to his Master, the ministers of this same gospel, in this country, are favored by rulers and people, honored and respected by all classes, and have every advantage to preach the gospel, and hundreds of invitations, "Come and preach for us the unsearchable riches of Christ."

"But how well have our brethren improved these great blessings?" you ask. Well, we will let the truth speak. In the above 40 states, besides territories, there are less than 20 states in which our brethren are found, either in large or small numbers; and in many where they are now found, there is no organized body; while in most of the states where they are found in the largest numbers, there are large portions of these same states, where the Brethren are not known. Does this not show a great want of that heavenly zeal which prompted the early Christians to brave every danger, meet every opposition, and amidst it all, to cry, "Behold, behold, the Lamb?" But further, there are 20 or more entire states in this free America, exclusive of territories, where our Brethren have never come to preach the gospel. We certainly cannot be of that people whose sound went out into all the earth.

We are not now asking that we should send the gospel to heathen lands, and to other nations; but we are asking it, for our own people, who speak the same language, enjoy the same liberty, and are now inviting us to come. Will we go and preach the word, and thus do all our Savior bade us do; or will we act as others do, —take and practice that which suits us best?

In the last year or two our brethren have been brought before the public, by notices of the public press; and we think the impression made has mostly been favorable, at least. And to such an extent has this been, that some have been led to make public inquiry after the Brotherhood, of their doctrines, their practices, tracts, books and papers.

What effect this will produce upon the minds of our brethren, we can not now know; but we hope it will be a good one; that it will prove to be a lasting impression, and that a united effort will be made by the Brotherhood, to let the people of our land know that there is a people within its border who are not ashamed to hold the doctrines of peace, humility, and self-denial; and that their practice accords fully with the same.

We regret very much, that our Brethren have so few books that are written in defense of the truth as we hold it; but perhaps there are enough at present for a good impression, if they were more widely circulated. The same may also be said of its papers; and we think our brethren should labor to introduce them more widely, especially among the Brotherhood, and when read they can be loaned to our neighbors, often with much benefit. But why our Brethren do not write and publish essays in tract form, illustrative of peace, humility, patience, and many other things; we can not now tell. And why our brethren did not make use of the notices that the Press have taken of our brethren, and have used for the churches benefit, we can not tell. We wish our brethren of the Press to consider our thoughts, and give us an expression of their views upon the subject; and, above all, to keep the subject before the brethren and public, until our land shall have that sound, that should long ago have gone out into all the earth. Let us ever be ready to hear every call, and attend every invitation, and the good work will go on. Fare-you-well.

LANDON WEST.

For the Companion.

Immortality.

"And whosoever liveth, and believeth in me, shall never die. Believest thou this?" John 11: 26.

The immortality of the Christian is, here very clearly taught by our Savior. We are led, by the honest conviction of reason, to believe he means the Christian never dies. If there is any other conclusion to be derived from this position of scripture, we fail to comprehend it. The time has been when we doubted the reality of this doctrine. We failed to search the Scripture to inform ourself of the correctness of this, which we wanted to believe. Like many others, we tried to believe just because we wanted it to be so. This is human nature. There should be evidence sufficient to satisfy the mind, for or against any cherished opinion harbored in the heart. To be honest, we should search the Scripture," and know what we do advocate. If we believe in the immortality of the soul, we should know "what saith the scripture." For we do believe, if the soul is immortal, the word of God teaches us so; for it is something directly concerning us, and what concerns us is revealed in God's will to man. We invite you, kind reader, to examine closely the meaning of our text, and you will find that we are correct in believing the Christian never dies. And oh, what a consoling thought, to believe that the inward man will never enter the dark, dismal tomb, and there remain with the body, dead to every sensation, conscious that we ever lived. Ah, can we believe this; when the voice of Jesus is heard, which should send conviction to every soul,—"He that liveth, and believeth in me, shall never die?" Do we believe this? Do we doubt the meaning of our Savior? Can his language be construed so as to make it appear that the Christian dies? They who have been baptized in the likeness of his death, and have been raised in the likeness of his resurrection to walk in newness of life,—shall they die? No, no. Away with such doctrine; for it is advocated by those who keep not the commandments of our Lord Jesus Christ. It conflicts with the belief of Paul; and it is in direct opposition to the language of Jesus. Did the apostle Paul die, or enter the dismal tomb both soul and body? We believe he did not. Hear him: "Therefore we are always confident, knowing that, whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord: * *. We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord;" 2 Cor. 5:6, 8.

We are composed of two parts, soul and body; and, according to Paul, if, what he says is worth anything, the two will and can be separated. When Paul was caught up into the third heaven, he knew not whether he was in the body or out of the body. This is a strange proof of soul and body separating. He does not say so in so many words; but his language indicates this belief. The thief upon the cross had the promise of being with Jesus in paradise; "Verily, I say unto you, To day thou shalt be with me in paradise." The thief believed in Jesus; and hence his words were made good. Even the very idea of the thief being with Jesus in paradise on the same day he was crucified, is evidence sufficient within itself to prove that the soul does not enter the tomb with the body. The thief was not buried with Jesus: they were not entombed together. But still Jesus says, "To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise." Surely, then, he refers to where living souls exist.

John the divine, "saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, under the altar." Was John mistaken in this, when they were revealed to him by Jesus Christ? What absurdity, to think that something that does not really exist, should be revealed to John; and that, too, when he heard them crying to be avenged of their blood, on them that dwell on the earth. Ah, there is no soul-sleeping doctrine here. How true it is! How clearly does the word of God prove that the language of our Savior,—"He that liveth, and believeth in me, shall never die," means the Christian never dies! What words of cheer to the Christian! "Nearer, my God, to thee;" and when this body sinks into the grave, then, nearer still to thee. Nearer, nearer, Zionward we march. Onward and upward is the beckoning of the spirit of the gospel. "Come up hither," at the last when our work is done—the battle fought, and victory won

SAMUEL C. BARRICK.

Whitesville, Mo.

Positive Divine Law.

The following article is clipped from the "American Christian Review." We recommend it as worthy of a careful perusal.

From the very beginning of all law there has been positive divine law, as well as moral law. The main difference, if we understand it, between positive law and moral law is as follows:

Positive law makes that right which is commanded, or in any way required, by the sheer force of arbitrary authority. There can be no reason seen in the nature and fitness of things, aside from the authority of the law, for doing that which is commanded. In itself it can not be seen that the thing commanded can do any good, or that the thing forbidden can do any harm. In looking at the thing commanded, no philosophical tendency can be seen for the accomplishment of the object had in view; nor can there be seen in the nature and fitness of things, aside from the law, any reason for doing the thing commanded. We are left with no reason for doing the commandment, except that the law requires it. If the law is positive divine law, the reason for obeying, and the only reason, is that the sovereign divine will, or law, requires it.

Moral law commands and, in various ways, requires things to be done because they are right in themselves, always were right, and would have been right if they had not been commanded at all. The things commanded are right in themselves, and commanded because they are right.—There are men well disposed, good men in themselves, who do these things simply because they can see that the things are right in themselves, just and good in all their relations and tendencies, who have no faith and act not in reference to God at all. They do these things, as philosophers, because in the nature and fitness of things they see that they are right. They would do what they do if there were no God nor Bible.—They do things that are right in themselves, because they are right, and they can see that they are right in themselves. This is doing right merely as philosophers, and not as Christians. It is acting from philosophy and not from faith. It is simply morality not piety. It is done with reference to the nature and fitness of things, and not with reference to divine authority.

But how different from all this the commandment of God, to sprinkle the blood of a lamb on all the door-posts of the houses in which the Israelites were dwelling in Egypt, in order to being saved from the destroyer, who smote with death the first-born, in every house in Egypt, where the blood was not sprinkled on the door-posts. Who can see any reason for sprinkling this blood on the door-posts? What could that do toward saving the first-born? What saving virtue, or efficacy, could there be in the blood of a lamb to save from the destroyer? What effect could that blood have on the door-posts to save life? Could not the Lord save without that blood? Would not the blood of a kid do as well as the blood of a lamb? Then, this "is a mere outward ordinance," an "external rite," "a mere bodily act!" There is no room here for talking of "the eternal nature and fitness of things."—This is not the place for the unbelieving philosopher. It is the place for faith, for piety, devotion to God. Why sprinkle the blood? Not because I can see how it will save me; or that it can do anything toward saving me, or any good in any way in itself, but solely because the sovereign will requires it; to please God. My faith in God moves me to do it; my respect for his divine and supreme authority, impels me in the action. My loyalty to the throne of the Almighty Ruler of heaven and earth, and respect for his Infinite Will, move me in my action; my devotion for him and love for him, lead me in doing what he commands, though I can not see that the thing commanded can do any good in itself.

The command in Eden was a positive divine command before which philosophy stands heedless. Who can see that there was any harm in eating the forbidden fruit? Certainly no one can see that there was any harm in it, in itself, or aside from the divine commandment. Still, there was death in it, not in itself naturally, or philosophically, but as connected with the divine authority. The Lord said, "Thou mayest not eat of it."—The faith, devotion to God; the piety and love to God, ought to be sufficient reason for doing what he commands, if we can see no other. It is enough for faith to know that the Lord commands. It is the highest exercise of faith that bows the soul in humility, and says, I can not see that, in itself, it is any harm, or can do any harm to eat the forbidden fruit; but it is harm; it is sin to eat, and I eat not, because the supreme authority says, "Thou mayest not eat."

Positive divine commandments are intended as tests of faith, trials of our love, respect and loyalty to the supreme and divine authority. They are, therefore, put in such shape that we can see no reason for doing them, in themselves, or nothing that can be accomplished towards our salvation in obeying them, or any reason for our compliance, only that the supreme authority requires it. There is then no reason for obeying only to please the Lord. Baptism is a positive divine command; not commanded because it is right it the "eternal nature and fitness of things;" not because it always was right; nor because there can be seen or shown any philosophical connection between the immersion of a person in water and the salvation of the soul from sin.—The water has no effect on the soul to purify it from sin; nor does the water cleanse the body from sin. It has no power, virtue, or effect to take away sin. It never did nor never can take away sin. We understand to say that the Lord purposely selected that which all men would know never could take away sin or save the soul from sin, that the glory might be given to the Lord in saving us, and not to what we have done ourselves. When Naaman was healed, on his dipping himself seven times in Jordan, he did not give the glory to Jordan, nor to his dipping seven times in Jordan, but to the God of Israel. "Now I know," said he, "that there is no God in all the earth, like the God of Israel; a God that can help lepers." So the man of faith, on rising from his baptism, does not give glory to the water, to his immersion in water, which he knows could not take away sin; but gives glory to the Lord Jesus who has washed him from his sins in his own most precious blood.

Could not the Lord have washed the sinner from his sins in his blood without the baptism? We doubt not he could. But we have no assurance that he will. Why not? We know hot, only that so it does not please him. Why be immersed? Not because water can take away sin. It evidently has no power to do this.—Not because immersing a person in water can in itself change soul or body spiritually. Not because the Lord can not save us without immersion, nor because we see that immersing a person in water can in itself do any spiritual good. Not because it always was right; but because it was made right by the positive divine commandment—the supreme authority requires it. Here it stands and meets every person at the entrance into the kingdom of God; a divine test of loyalty; a trial of the faith, the love and respect for the Supreme Will; a trial of the state of the heart and soul. There can be no reason given for being immersed, only that the Lord commands it. Do you require why he commands it? We know no answer, only so it pleased him.

Why is baptism but once required of a person? Because a person enters the kingdom but once—is "baptized into Christ," or, which is the same, "into one body" but once. It is the initiation of the proper subject "into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit."—As the same person enters the covenant but once, we need this divine test; this trial of the faith and heart and love to the King, of the persons loyalty. Has the subject faith enough in Jesus; love enough for him; loyalty enough to him to bow at his command, when there can be no reason given for doing so, only that he commanded it; when no human being can see that the thing to be done can in itself do soul or body any good, or have any philosophical tendency to accomplish the object had in view? If the subject has this faith, loyalty, devotion and love to the Savior, there is reason to expect implicit obedience to subsequent commandments.

Some one recently said it was suspicious that those who take the ground here maintained go to the Old Testament for their illustrations. But we must pay a little attention for the use of the words "Old Testament." We use these terms as a designation for the book containing all the sacred writings from the beginning down to Christ. But "Old Testament" strictly speaking means Old Covenant. While these illustrations are found in the volume called the "Old Testament," there are very few, if any of them, in the "Old Covenant." Some of them were facts before the giving of the Old Covenant, and some of them were no part of the Old Covenant. But there was certainly nothing suspicious in the circumstance of Paul finding so many examples illustrating faith as we find in Heb. xi. But there was something suspicious in the attempt to find reasons for obeying the command to be immersed in the nature of immersion. This is merely finding reasons for being immersed as a philosopher and not as a believer on Jesus. The man immersed as a philosopher, because he sees, or professes to see, in the nature of immersion, that it is right in itself, acts not from faith at all, nor from love or devotion to Christ at all. But the man who sees, and professes to see, no reason in the nature of immersion for being immersed; sees and professes to see no good it can possibly do in itself, but humbly bows in obedience because the wisdom of God requires it, gives an evidence of his faith, his devotion to the Lord, of his loyalty to Jesus in the highest order. It is his devotion to the Savior, and nothing else, that impels him. He is not doing this because he can see that it is right in itself, but because the Lord who commands it is above him, and the circumstance that he commands it is evidence sufficient with the believer that it is right. In bowing to the will of the Lord in being immersed, he relies solely on the wisdom and goodness of the Lord. He is too wise and good to command anything that is not for our good. Action from this view is from faith, piety, devotion and love to the Savior. Acting from our reasonings on "the nature and fitness of things" is not from faith, nor is it piety or devotion to the Lord. It is merely devotion to what a man can see to be right in itself, and there is no God or Christ in it.

For the COMPANION.

Methodism—An Explanation.

Dear Sir:—When we look around at the distracted state of Christendom as it now stands, we are forced here to observe, that it reminds us of an instrument strung with a thousand strings, and each one giving his own sound, suited to his own capricious fancy. When we wrote the articles, referred to on the 576 page of the Companion in your essay, while touching but very briefly upon the Methodist string, we perceive from the sound, that we accidently let a finger barely tip the Lutheran string, by using the name of Martin Luther, —and, if I am not mistaken, but once. We did not desire to injure the feelings of any of our follow mortals; but tried to expose error and elucidate truth.

As to the foundation of which you seem to think we are without, we claim Jesus Christ as the foundation, and his commandments the material with which we build thereon; and and we are boldly confident that we presented nothing else in the essays which you say are very absurd.

We are not surprised to hear whole families talk so: even our own near and dear relations, who have attached themselves to those other societies of whom we spake, have given us some very dark looks and unpleasant countenances, simply because we inculcate the principles of obeying, literally, the commands of God our Savior.

And when we go back with the history of the past to the beginning of the sixteenth century, and see Martin Luther leave his cell at Enfurth, we, like you, are constrained to believe that he was prompted with pure motives, and earnest zeal for the salvation of immortal souls; but he failed to have the proper instructions given to him, as Apollos had, who was an eloquent man, and mighty in the scriptures:" "whom, when Aquilla and Priscilla had heard, they took him unto them, and expounded unto him the way of the Lord more perfectly;" Acts 18: 26. And in the language of the apostle to the Romans, (Rom., 10: 2) we believe he had "a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge;" but he went about trying to establish a way of his own, like Naaman,—"May I not wash in them and be clean?"

Luther was an eminent man—a man of great influence; and while preaching, in the month of October 1522, many of his hearers proclaimed him a second Elijah: thus in his great eloquence in presenting to them his new articles of faith, he led Many astray—kept many from obeying the truth as it is in Christ Jesus, to wit, the simple ordinances of the house of God,—trine immersion, feet-washing, the kiss of charity.

We have no better things to say of Luther than of Wesley; yet we believe they were both very pious men. But does their piety justify them before God in organizing those new Modes of worship, and setting aside immersion and feet washing, which Christ has instituted in his organization? We do not.

If to found a new sect is an evidence of superior piety, protestants cast the apostles far in the shade.—We find no record in the New Testament where Peter, James, and Paul founded churches and called them by their names.

They loved the Savior too well to disobey his commands. But shortly after the death of the last apostle, the wicked work of church building began, as we are taught, Miss Quintilla leading the way. Nor was she the only one who aspired to this honor. Miss Anna Lee of Toad Lane, and Lady Huntingdon organized churches, which are yet in existence.

We will ask you the question,—who shall decide which of the past, or recent human schemes of church organization is most authoritative, and deserves the most regard,—that of Luther, Zwingle, on Schwenkfeld—that of Henry VIII, Calvin, George Fox, on count Zinzendorf—that of John Wesley, John Irvin, or William Otterbein—that of Bill Miller, Isaac Smith, A. Campbell, or Jesse Furguson? Are they not one and all human institutions, though they be composed of pious and good men? Have I not as good authority to start a new system of worship as any of the afore named, and would it not be be as pious in me as in them? Yes, had I the hardihood to do so, I could get followers; but may the God of Heaven forbid that I should glory in anything save in the gospel of Christ.

The time will soon come, when this church and sect making business shall cease; "when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power."

Did not the God of Heaven set up a kingdom which should never be destroyed? Did he not send his Son into the world to organize his church, institute its ordinances, determine its polity, and start the stone to rolling? Yea, he did The Lawgiver in Zion was born in Bethlehem of Judea, and of the lineage of David: who led an exemplary life; organized his church both visible and tangible; taught both by precept and example, such institutions in his Kingdom as his Father directed him. And while instituting some of the laws of his kingdom he says: "If I your Lord and Master have washed your feet, ye also ought to wash one another's feet; for I have given you an example, that he should do as I have done to you!" and during his tabernacling here, upon one occasion he said: "Why call ye me Lord Lord, and do not the things which I say?" So say we to Luther, and Wesley's progeny,—Why call ye him Lord, and do not practice the institutions of his kingdom?

We say here again, that the Christian church he did organize; taught his doctrines, appointed its ordinances and determined its polity or discipline; and left the solemn warning to its disciples, when on the mount just before he ascended to heaven, to "teach all nations, baptizing them in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Does he stop at those instructions? Nay, verily, but he continues by saying,—"teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen."

Did he teach and command feet-washing? He unquestionably did: so says John, that beloved disciple. Do Luther's progeny teach the same? If so, you are filling the language of the commission, and the Savior is with you; and you and I are in the unity of the faith, as heaven's discipline directs us to be: if not, we are not together; and consequently we are not obeying the law of that discipline which says,—"Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ:—That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the slight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive." Eph., 4: 13, 14.

But again we remark, that opposites and contradictories must of necessity antagonize. You, or any other sane man, will admit that the unity of the Christian faith and practice, is of the highest importance; since the world will never be pursuaded to believe the Gospel, until Christians are one. And that is what the Savior prayed for in his ardent devotion to his Heavenly Father, saying: "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word: that they all might be one, as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me. And the glory which thou gavest to be, I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one."

Now a diversity of adverse forms of church organizations, separates; which causes strifes emulation discord, animosity, and hatred. Each one becomes identified in feeling and interest with the peculiar form of polity he has selected and will resort to every possible means to preserve it and to promote its extension, and also to resist the encroachments of all others; and these diverse forms of church polity, most evidently, do precipitate all Christendom into a deadly antagonism, in direct opposition to the teachings of God's word.

God's legitimate children are one in him. The beneficent Savior has never spoken a word without weight. We dare not insult the dignity of Jehovah by saying, that it is not necessary to do what Christ has commanded us to do. Yea, we delight in his commands; for they are good for the soul in this barren land of sin, and will take us through the desert, and land us on the sunny banks of eternal felicity beyond this vale of tears.

Yours Respectfully,

A. STALNAKER.

For the COMPANION.

The Ten Virgins.

Christ Jesus with this parable points us to the last times, shortly before his second coming. The marriage points us to the millennium, Rev., Chap., 20. That here he speaks of five wise and five foolish virgins, shows as the condition of the church in its last days: that one half of the church was wise—true believers, and lovers of Christ; the other half were foolish, who with their outward form and church ordinance can say with pharisee, Luke 18: O God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican," that is common sinners. "I fast twice a week," &c. Indeed man can, at the outward form, see nothing but holines in words reading prayers, singing, going to church, to the Lord's Supper; yea, everything belonging to outward appearance; like at the "stony churches," founded by man, they are always diligent; and for this reason they are, before others which live after the flesh, called virgins. Gal,, 5: 19 "For the works of the flesh are manifest," &c. But they only filled their lamps with the righteousness after the outward form, and not with the righteousness by faith through the love of Jesus Christ,

But the half at that time (not counting the band of anti-christians) are true believers; the other half only appeared so, but like the wise, try to take part at the marriage of the Lamb. Therefore he says: those that took their lamps; viz., all ten. The foolish took their lamps, but no oil with them; the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps. Here we can see that the foolish also took their lamps, but no oil, while the wise took their vessels with their lamps and oil. This is to show us that the righteous after the merely outward form, (the foolish), like the true Christian, try to enter the marriage hamber; but the true, inward faith, which worketh through love, they forget, which is the oil of the Spirit But the wise not only took this to their lamps, but also in their vessels, to supply the want of their lamps, so that, if the bridegroom tarried, they might have enough, or, when in the hour of temptation, it might be said, —the Lord tarrieth to come."—Of this faith Christ says (Matth., 5: 16): "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your father which is in heaven."

While the bridegroom tarried they all slumbered and slept. In that hour of tribulation which shall come over the whole universe, both wise and foolish slumber and sleep; that is, in such an hour of tribulation and the Lord's tarrying, they can not feel their first love through which they formed steadfastness of faith.

"And at midnight there was a cry made: behold the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him!" This midnight is whne the hour of darkness is in the highest, that is, when the people are in real midnight with their evil deeds.

"Go ye out to meet him." This is for all,—the foolish, as well as, the wise. "Then all those virgins arose and trimmed their lamps." They were all in earnest to enter the marriage chamber—the kingdom of Christ.

"And the foolish said unto the wise, give us of your oil, (after they learned that they lacked the oil of the Spirit)," for our lamps are gone out;"—for now we see what we lack, and that our "well-meaning faith," and works are not sufficient to enter the marriage chamber.

"But the wise answered, saying, not so, lest there be not enough for us and you." This they answered not through envy, but through the prudence of the righteous, who wished to show them that the shortness of the time, will not allow it, since it says, "be ye ready;" also, if they gave them some, all would lack of having enough. "But go ye to those that sell, and buy for yourselves." At that time each one that sells shall need his own merchandise; for they can no more make use of their trusted talent, while the time has come when the Lord cometh to reckon with them.

And while they went to buy the bridegroom came; and they that were ready went in with them to the marriage. and the door was shut."—These are dreadful words to those, who, after spending their time of grace in vain, shall stand outside and call like the foolish virgins, but call in vain.

"Afterwards came also the other virgins, saying, Lord, Lord, open to us," after having come back, having received neither oil, nor met those that sell, since they themselves gave their trusted talent to their true Lord again, or like the slothful servant, Matth., 25: 3d. "But he answered and said, verily I say unto you, I know you not" He did not say, "Go from me ye accursed into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels;" but merely showed that they did not belong to the first born, and could not enter the marriage of the Lamb,—they must stand outside of the door from where they were not driven, until, waiting in agony, they, through faith In Christ and his precious blood, be cleansed and (Matth., 5: 26,) have paid the uttermost farthing. This I believe to be the difference between the foolish virgins, or "mouth Christians," and the wise virgins or those that worship God in spirit and in truth.

Yours in Love,

CYRUS BUCHER.

Tulpenhocken, Lebanon Co., Pa.

The Way She Cured Him.

"What brings you here, Mary?" said Truesdall to his wife, as she entered the liquor store.

"It is very lonesome at home, and your business seldom allows you to be there," replied the meek but resolute wife. "Te me there is no company like yours, and as you cannot come home to me, I come here to you. I have a right to share your pleasures as well as your sorrows."

"But to come to such a place as this!" expostulated Tom.

"No place can be improper where my husband is," said poor Mary. "Whom God has joined together, let no man put asunder."

"Surely you are not going to drink that stuff," cried Tom, as she was taking up the glass of liquor.

"Why not? You say that you drink to forget sorrow, and I have sorrow to forget."

"Woman! Woman! you are not going to give that stuff to the children!" cried Tom, as she was passing the glass of liquor to them.

"Why not, can children have a better example set them than their father's? Is not what is good for him good for them also? It will put them to sleep and they will forget that they are cold and hungry. Drink; see how much good it does your father."

With much reluctance Mary suffered her husband to lead her home, and that night he prayed long and earnestly that God would help him to break off an evil habit, and keep a new formed but firm resolution

His reformation was thorough. Mrs. Truesdall is now one of the happiest of women, and remembers with a melancholy pleasure her first and last visit to the dram-shop.

As frost to the bud and blight to the blossom, even such is self interest to friendship; for confidence cannot dwell where selfishness is porter at gate.

Christian Family Companion

Tyrone City, Pa., Sept., 26, 1871.

The Lord's Supper. No. 7.

We come now to treat more particularly of the design of the Lord's Supper. As in the cases already noticed, so, much of the design of this ordinance is to be deduced from the nature of the ordinance itself. In our remarks upon the practice of the Corinthian church, it was shown that their disorder so completely frustrated the Lord's design in this ordinance, that Paul could not recognize their eating as being the Lord's Supper. In order that the Lord's design in his institutions may be accomplished, it is requisite that they be observed in harmony with his appointment; which is sufficient evidence that the design is in strict accordance with the ordinance. This being the case, it is clear that the intent, meaning, or purpose of an ordinance, may, by correct exegesis, be deduced from its essential form and character. In this we also see the necessity of adhering strictly to the established form of the ordinances of the Lord's house. If they were merely matters of form, loyalty to God would demand their observance; but when the established form is in harmony with the design of infinite Wisdom, there is a two-fold obligation to render strict obedience.

The term "supper" means a full evening meal. Supper, like all other meals, is designed to satisfy the wants of our physical nature, and to afford nourishment to strengthen us for coming duties. The Lord's Supper is a full evening meal, instituted by the Lord, and prepared and eaten by his people. As supper satisfies and nourishes the physical man, so the Lord's Supper, as a symbolic meal, represents the satisfying of our spiritual wants, and the renewing of our spiritual strength. The Lord's Supper should be observed in harmony with its appointment, to signify the receiving of spiritual nourishment according to the Lord's own wisely arranged order; and, consequently, to assume the liberty to depart from the essential form of the ordinance, asserts a willingness to change, or subvert, that which it represents; and to reject the Lord's Supper altogether, is a symbolic refusal to receive the food of the soul. These are important facts, and they must not be lightly passed by. Our Savior said: "Blessed are they that do hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they shall be filled." This same fact was declared by the prophet Isaiah more than seven hundred years before, saying: "Behold, my servants shall eat, but ye shall be hungry; behold, my servants shall drink, but ye shall by thirsty." The Lord has prepared food for the hungry soul. He has given us "the true bread from heaven." Christ said: "I am the living bread which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live forever." That which satisfies the want of the soul, is represented as food; and so the receiving of this food for the soul is denominated eating. As it is represented as food, food will fitly represent it; and as the reception of this spiritual food is called eating, eating properly represents this reception. This being the case, a refusal to eat aptly coincides with a refusal to receive this food; and therefore we need not be surprised, if those, who do not observe the Lord's Supper, should also reject the food of the soul. Food, in order to subserve the wants of the physical man, must be received according to God's own arrangement: it must pass through the processes of mastication and digestion; and equally so must the spiritual food, in order to meet our spiritual demands, be received according to God's divine arrangement. If the "true bread" is legally received, the soul is satisfied; and the symbol of this satisfaction, consists in the satisfying of the physical in eating this symbolical meal.

It will be in place here to notice the preparation of the Lord's Supper. It will not be doubted that the expenses of the supper which Christ and his disciples ate on the night of his betrayal, were defrayed by their common fund. So the Lord's people, his body, ought to have a common interest in preparing the Lord's Supper. By common interest, we do not mean equal pecuniary shares, but justly proportioned shares; "for unto whom much is given, of him will much be required;"—and, of course, if a member has nothing, he can give nothing. When the Supper is thus prepared,—all having contributed according to their comparative ability,—all have an equal interest in the Lord's Supper, and the poor, "who have nothing," are not "put to shame." We may revert to this again. This unity in the preparation of the Supper, represents the unity in the preparation of the feast for the soul. Paul asks, "Is Christ divided?" We answer,—Nay, verily, he is one; and not only so, he said, "I and the Father are one." In the preparation of the food for the soul there was unity indeed.

It may be a point of inquiry as to what kind of food should be used in the preparation of the Lord's Supper. We before remarked that it can not be shown that there was animal food used in the last supper; and we now add, neither can it be shown that there was not; and certainly we are far from saying that it is unlawful to use animal food in the preparation of this meal. We also stated that there was nothing in the law that enjoined the use of unleavened bread at that time: neither was there anything to forbid its use. Where the word of God is silent, we do not wish to speak; but we do want to say something upon this point. The Scriptures teach that God is a God of order, and that he is not "the author of confusion." It is also required, that everything connected with his worship be done "decently and in order." We therefore insist upon it that the Lord's Supper should be observed "decently," and not only "decently," but "in order." The same order, so far as practicable, should be observed in all "the churches of God." Farther than this,—the meal should be composed of the most wholesome food, so that none of the participants be required to eat what is at variance with the laws of health; for only that which is wholesome to the physical man, properly represents the food for the soul, which is certainly suited to the health of the spiritual man.—As to the use of unleavened bread we will say this: it is highly probable that Christ used the same kind of bread in the institution of the Eucharist that was used in the Supper; and it would seem reasonable, that, if one kind of bread was sufficient for the institution and first observance of these ordinances, one sort would be sufficient for the after observance of the same ordinances. If we were asked what kind of bread we think most suitable, we would say, unleavened bread. Leaven is used as a representative of the erroneous doctrines, vain traditions, and corrupt practices of the Pharisees, Sadducees, and Herodians, (Matth. 16: 6—21); of scandal and scandalous persons, such as would pollute the church; and of malice and wickedness, (1 Cor. 5: 6—8). As leaven represents these evil things, its opposite represents their opposites. Paul says: "Purge out therefore the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump, even as ye are unleavened.—For even Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us. Therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness; but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth." As the Lord's people are said to be unleavened, and as "sincerity and truth" are represented by "unleavened bread",—and that in connection with "the feast,"—we think, that unleavened bread is the most appropriate symbol of "the true bread from heaven," which satisfies the soul and nourishes the spiritual man. It is not assumed that other bread will not answer, nor that only one sort must be used; but we insist on it, that wholesome food be used, and that decency and order be maintained.

The quantity of provision demands our attention. It was before observed, that the Corinthians brought an abundance of food; that Paul did not object to the quantity, and that this was right. The word "supper," or feast, as the term is frequently translated, implies the idea of abundance, as before shown. We do not plead for a great variety to please the palate, but we do ask for a sufficient quantity to meet the demand. This abundance fitly represents the all-sufficient provision that God has made, to satisfy and nourish every hungry, thirsting soul. "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." "Go ye therefore into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." "Behold I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and sup with him, and he with me." "A certain man made a great supper, and bade many; and he sent his servant at supper time, to say to them that were bidden, Come, for all things are now ready. * * * Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither the poor, and the maimed, and the halt, and the blind. And the servant said, Lord, it is done as thou hath said, and yet there is room. And the Lord said unto the servant, Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled."—These, and many other Scriptures, teach, that the Lord has indeed prepared a great feast, and that the whole world is invited to come and partake to the satisfying of their longing souls. How appropriate and true are these beautiful stanzes—

Come, sinners, to the gospel feast
Let ev'ry soul be Jesus' guest;
Ye need not one be left behind,
For God has bidden all mankind.

Since our dear Lord to you doth call,
The invitation is to all;
Come, all the world, come sinner, thou,
All things in Christ are ready now.

Come, all ye souls by sin oppress,
Ye restless wand'rers after rest!
Ye poor and maimed, and halt and blind,
In Christ a hearty welcome find.

The Corinthian brethren were disorderly in not tarrying one for another, and eating at the same time. For this Paul reproves them; and after his reproof instructs them how to do, saying: "Wherefore my brethren, when ye come together to eat, tarry one for another." This feature in the Lord's Supper we regard as being very significant. They were divided into schisms; and in harmony with their schismatical state, they ate in parties: their manner of eating was a true index to their spiritual condition. Their eating in parties—not tarrying for one another—was a true exponent of their divided state,—"I am of Paul, and I of Apollos, and I of Cephas, and I of Christ."—They ate after a carnal manner, even to gluttony; which betrayed their want of spirituality, so that Paul said: "And I, brethren, could not speak unto you as unto spiritual, but as unto carnal, even as unto babes in Christ. I have fed you with milk and not with meat; for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able. For ye are yet carnal; for whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and divisions, are ye not carnal, and walk as men?—For while one saith, I am of Paul; and another, I am of Apollos, are ye not carnal?" 1 Cor. 3: 1–4. What a lesson this should be for a disruptured and distracted state of Christendom! Oh! For a thousand Pauls, to reprove and correct carnal, schismatical, and heretical professors of the religion of Jesus Christ!

"Well may thy servants mourn, my God,
The church's desolation!
The state of Zion calls aloud
For grief and lamentation.
Once she was all alive to thee,
And thousands were converted;
But now a sad reverse we see—
Her glory is departed."

This harmonious, united eating of the Lord's supper, represents the union of the Lord's people, which is so frequently referred to in the New Testament scriptures. Christ, in the same night in which he instituted this ordinance, in His prayer said, "Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are one. * * * Neither pray I for these alone; but for them also which shall believe on me through their word: that they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me. And the glory which thou gavest me, I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one. I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them as thou hast loved me." With what touching, heavenly pathos, did our loving Savior pour out his ardent soul to his Father, for the union, the oneness, of those who believe on him! The union of the Lord's people is here presented as the potent argument that should convince the world that Jesus is the Sent of God. Paul taught the Roman brethren, that, "as we have many members in one body," "so we, being many, are one body in Christ." "Let love be without dissimulation." "Be of the same mind one toward another." Rom. 12: 3—16. "Now the God of patience and consolation grant you to be like-minded one toward another according to Christ Jesus: that ye may, with one mind and one mouth glorify God;" Rom. 15: 5, 6. In his first letter to the church at Corinth, he says: "I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind, and in the same judgment;" 1 Cor. 1: 10. To the Philippians he says; "Fulfil ye my joy, that ye be like-minded, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind;" Phil. 2: 2.

These are but a few of the many texts of scripture that bear upon this subject; but they are quite sufficient to indicate the importance that the Lord attaches to the union of his people. Love,—the Love of God, the love of the brotherhood, the love that knows no dissimulation, that banishes strife, ill-will, variance, emulation, and whatever opposes God and exalts itself against the welfare of our fellow mortals,—is the bond that binds the children of God together in this delightful, desirable union. Brethren that thus love, and are thus united, will go forward, shoulder to shoulder, in fighting the battles of the Lord.—They will sympathize with each other in their sorrows and sufferings; minister to each others wants; labor for each others welfare; build one another up, and share each others joys when they sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. When they, as God's children, surround the Lord's Supper, their harmonious eating together represents this love, this fellowship and union: it declares with telling force: "We are all members of 'one body;' animated and led by 'one Spirit,' even as we have all 'one hope' in our calling; we acknowledge and serve but 'one Lord;' all adhere to 'one faith,' and have all received 'one baptism;' and we are all children of one God, who is the Father of all, above all, through all, and in all." With this view before us, we may be able to see the propriety of calling this significant meal 'agape,'—Lovefeast, or feast of charity.

The Lord's Supper was instituted by Christ, and observed by his disciples, in the evening. This forcibly represents the feasting of the soul upon "the true bread from heaven," under the gospel dispensation. Feasting in the morning might point back to the patriarchal age or the ante-diluvian world; a meal at noon might point to the middle ages, or the Mosaic dispensation; but a supper, an evening meal, represents the feast of the soul under the gospel dispensation—"in the last time." John, the beloved disciple, says: "Little children, it is the last time; and as ye have heard that antichrist shall come, even now are there many antichrists; whereby we know that it is the last time;" 1st John 2: 18. This evening meal, the Lord's Supper, represents the satisfaction of the soul, its feasting upon Christ "the true bread from heaven," in the evening of the world—in "THE LAST TIME."

Now "if any man hath ears to hear let him hear:" all our enjoyment here; all our consolation in Christ; all our feasting upon "the true bread, and all the comfort of the Holy Spirit, that we can enjoy here, is but a foretaste of the great feast of the soul that is yet in the future. Paul says: "He who hath wrought us for the self-same thing is God, who also hath given unto us the earnest of the Spirit;" 2 Cor., 5: 5. "In whom (Christ) ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation: in whom also, after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise; which is the earnest of our inheritance, until the redemption of the purchased possession, into the praise of his glory;" Eph., 1: 14. Now, as the feasting of the soul here, is a foretaste, "an earnest," of the feast to be enjoyed, the satisfaction to be realized, in the world to come; so the Lord's Supper, which symbolizes our feasting here, is a type of the rich feast that the Lord's people shall enjoy, when they shall all be gathered home in their Father's house of many mansions. Jesus said to his disciples in the night in which he instituted this ordinance: "Ye are they which continued with me in my temptations. And I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me: that ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom;" Luke 22: 28—30. The Revelator says: "Let us be glad and rejoice; for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready. And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white; for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints. And he saith unto me, Write, blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb. And he saith unto me, these are the true sayings of God;" Rev., 19: 7—9. On another occasion Jesus said: "Let your loins be girded about, and your light burning; and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord, when he will return from the wedding; that, when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately." "Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord, when he cometh, shall find watching: verily I say unto you, that he shall gird himself and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them;" Luke 12: 35—37. These prophecies point forward to a great occasion; to an abundant and soul-satisfying feast that is yet in the future. We shall not attempt to portray the grandeur of the scene, the felicity of the occasion, the richness of the viands of heaven; but we will ask our readers to draw the picture in their own minds. Behold the blood washed throng of many millions, clothed in the linen-white righteousness of the saints; they represent every age and every nation; they have come from the east and west, from the north and south, and have set down with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of God. They are seated around the Lord's table, which is richly spread with all the sweet, refreshing, delicious, cheering, and invigorating products of heaven; it has been served by the bountiful and loving hands of Jesus. Their bosoms swell with gratitude and with their newly uttered voices they unitedly sing an anthem of thanksgiving and praise to him who prepared the feast, spread the table, and made them guests. Now they are feasting; now they are partaking of the Lord's Supper:—"the marriage supper of the Lamb." Pure delight, unalloyed peace, unspeakable bliss, and inconceivable enjoyment pervade every soul. Ah! they are one family, and they fully participate in each others pleasures. "Behold! how they love each other!" Surely this is the great Agape,—feast of charity, or lovefeast

We shall not introduce the controversy here as to whether this great feast shall be literal or spiritual. This question has nothing to do with our subject. If it shall be a spiritual feast, it will be such as is best exhibited to our minds under the figure of a great supper; and in either case, the Lord's Supper, which is a type of that feast, meets that which it typifies. But we assure our readers that you can not make your picture of that feast too rich, too glowing.—Your highest flight of imagination must stop below the reality; for it is written: "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things that God hath prepared for them that love him;" 1 Cor. 2: 9.

Dear brethren and sisters, in conclusion we will say: let us continue to observe this sacred meal; and let us ever enjoy the feast of the soul which it represents; then shall we be permitted to participate in that great supper, that love-feast, of which we have now but the foretaste and type. AMEN.

J. W. BEER.

The Editor.

In the last number we failed to say anything in regard to the health of the senior editor. He had regained his health sufficiently to go to Dale City,—the anticipated future home of the Companion family,—on the 12th inst. We had information from him once since; and were glad to learn that he was still improving. We expected his return home last night, but were disappointed. This morning (Thursday, 21st) we still find his sanctum chair empty; but we hope all is well, and that, in the next number, he will be able to speak for himself.

Visits.

As the brethren at a number of places have invited us (editors of the C. F. C.) to attend their Fall Lovefeasts, we take this method of saying to all, that, much as we desire to accept your invitations and enjoy your society, we must, at this time, deny ourselves of the pleasure it would afford us to be with you. The time for our removal is fast approaching: then the Almanac for 1872 must now be published, and various other matters that must be attended to. We thank the brethren for their kindness but must ask to be excused at this time.

Early Issue.

This number will reach most of our readers a few days earlier than usual. We have hastened it in order to gain a little time for other necessary duties. It is hoped, however, that none will feel annoyed by its early visit.

Answers to Correspondents.

P. H. BEAVER. Would be pleased to hear from you in that line, though rather late for this year.

J. S. KAUFFMAN:—A. P. sent $2 50. We are square.

H. F LONG:—The difference was in not computing the percentage.

JOHN FISHER: Dale City is in Somerset county, Pa., it was formerly called Myers' Mills.

CORRESPONDENTS.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Why Are we Born?

Brother Henry:—If you please let these lines find room in the Companion. I will try to give you a short history of my life. As this is my birthday, it brought solemn thoughts to my mind, to think over the past time of my life. I am forty years old to-day. For some years I did not expect to come to this age; but it has pleased the Lord to spare my life so long, and my health is better than it was for a great many years.

In the year 1845 a series of misfortunes fell upon me. The mighty, afflicting hand of Disease fell upon me, and destroyed my eye-sight entirely. Twenty-six years have I not seen the face of any human being.

In the year 1850 another very serious misfortune befell me, which made my burden heavier than before. My father and mother both died in one year, and left me an orphan without a home. What to do I did not know. My heart was broken, and my mind almost wrecked. I had a dream one night, that my mother appeared to me in the night, and put her cold, icy hands under me to brace me up in bed. The next I knew I thought we were sitting together by the fireplace, talking with each other. She said to me: "Hannah, if I had the power, I would come and take you out of your trouble; but there is a greater power over me." She rose up with uplifted eyes. I wanted her to stay with me. She said: "No, I must go." I asked,—"Mamma, is it so far you are going?" She said,—"No, but up so high." It brought many serious thoughts to my mind; and to reflect on the words that she taught me in her lifetime, and also the good advice she gave me when on her death bed. This brought me to the sense of my duty. I desired to prepare myself to meet my parents in heaven.

I made my desire known to an old sister. She said to me; "you never did anything wrong; I would not be afraid, if I were in your place." Then I did not know what to do. I had no mother to tell my troubles to then.

Then my guardian took me to Indianapolis to a school for the blind.—There I learned to read the raised print. Thanks be to God, I learned to read the Bible by feeling.

After being there two years, I went on a visit to Delaware county. I made my desire known to my cousin there. I read in my Testament: "He that knows to do good, and does it not, unto him it is sin." She soon made the necessary preparation; and in a few days I was led by the hand of brother G. W. Studebaker into the Mississinawa River; there my desire was fulfilled, which I had for three long years waited for. I never will forget the feeling I had when I was in the water; and also when the hymn was sung.

"Oh! for a closer walk with God."

This verse bore on my mind most:

'What peaceful hours I then enjoyed!
How sweet their memory still!
But they have left an aching void,
The world can never fill."

I find many kind brethren, and sisters, and friends; but still not a home. I can enjoy myself very well for a short time; but soon the thought comes to me: "You are not at home—you cannot stay here your life time." Again I remember that Jesus said: The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head." This is also my present condition: I have not of my own where to lay my head; but I trust in the Lord for better days to come.

My brethren and sisters, I want you all to pray for me, that the Lord may grant me grace to do his will, and to hold out faithful to the end.—I send greetings to all the brethren and sisters, in Christ. This is from your weak and humble sister.

HANNAH M. BURKETT.

Brother Editor:—Permit me to say through your valuable paper, that I am not able to fill any of the many urgent calls, and some that I had already given my assent, affirmatively, an account of the sickness of my wife, who, at this date, is not able to be up any longer when while her bed is made. Brethren and sisters, assist her in bearing her severe afflictions, with your prayers at the throne of grace. I am truly sorry that I cannot meet with the brethren as I had contemplated; but such are the ways of Providence. Brethren of Virginia, of Indiana, of Armstrong and of Cambria, bear with me in the disappointment. To the brethren in the Conemaugh Branch, if it is in my power, and prudence, on my wife's account, will allow, I will be with you to fill the committee.

From your brother in the Lord.

C. G. LINT.

Dale City, Pa., Sept., 15th.

Dear Companion:—Inasmuch as some of our dear brethren and sisters wished to see something written by us, for your columns, after we arrived at our new home, I will try at least, to be obedient to their wishes.

We came here last spring, and have all enjoyed the best of health ever since. The brethren here are kind hearted. We were received with joy. The society here is good. The people are mostly professors. Methodists and Campbellites are the leading churches here; but since the brethren have been preaching here, some few came over to the true church, and have their names enrolled in the Lamb's book of life. There have been some nine or ten added to the church this summer, by baptism, and some by letter; so, dear brethen and sisters, you can see that your Lord is our Lord, and that his good work is going on slowly here in the West.—But we are deprived of many privileges here, as this is but a new place. We have no meeting-houses yet.—When the weather is fair, we sometimes meet in God's first temple (the grove), and worship and adore his holy Name there; at other times in school-houses.

We often think of our dear brethren and sisters at Silver Creek; and of our elder and ministering brethren, who labored hard for Zion's sake, to lead their flock in the paths of the Lord. How often have we seen their eyes bathed in tears, when troubles were near! How often have we heard their good instructions! Therefore, dear brethren and sisters, bear them up; help them to bear their burden; for we know not the trouble of mind, the anxiety of heart, the sleepless hours, and perhaps, nights, they have to pass, when the members are not in order.

Elders feed your flock with good and wholesome food. Cry aloud, and spare not; for behold the wolf is nigh; and oh! what a pity, if he should take one lamb! There are many lambs in your flock. Watch the enemy ; he is trying to call them away, by telling them it is no use to be so particular about this thing, or that thing—only so the heart is right that is all that is required. But it is a solemn fact, here as well as there, or elsewhere, that pride has got into the church, to such a pitch that it is hard to tell the members from the world. The sisters will go to meeting without the proper covering on their heads, and perhaps, rings upon their fingers, and all the simple pride about their dress that the world has ; and the brethren will have their hair roached in style, and their garments all in the hight of fashion. The older sisters have their innocent little children fixed up in all the pride of the world ; such as, hats, and flowers, feathers, and ribbons, and ruffles, and laces, and all that the world has.—Dear brethren and sisters, what does the Savior mean where he invites us to come out from among the world, and be a separate people ? Is this being separate from the world ? I fear not. The time is fast coming when we will have to render an account for the deeds done in the body, whether they be good or bad. What an awful time is approaching, when time will be swallowed up in eternity! We desire the sincere prayers of our dear brethren in our behalf.

From your sister in Christ.

REBECCA J. MOATS.

Altoona, Polk Co., Iowa.

From the Manor Congregation, Pa.

Brother Henry ; As church news is always interesting to me, the following items may, at least, be to some of the many readers of your valuable paper. According to previous arrangements, the above named arm of the church, met in one of their meeting-houses for public worship, on the 3d. inst. ; and also to transact some important business in the church. In compliance with a special request, brethren Elder's Samuel Brallier and Solomon Benshoff from Conemaugh, came to our assistance. The important matters to be attended to, were, to ordain a brother, and advance another to second degree. The result was, brother David Over was ordained, and brother Joseph Holsople advanced to the second degree in the ministry. The church is in a prosperous condition at present, under the supervision of our much esteemed Elder, Samuel Lydy. We have now two Elders, two speakers in the second degree, and one in the first ; making, in all, five speakers. We have six deacons, and a goodly number of lay members. We have had a good many additions, during the past year, and a good prospect for more. Fearing that I am not interesting, I will close abruptly.

Yours Fraternally,

G. W. BURKHART.

Nolo, Pa.

Letter from D. M. Holsinger. No. 6.

Dear brethren and sistters :—My 5th report was written at Dr. J. Buechley's, Waterloo, Iowa. We had three meetings more, afterwards, in said branch of the church.

On Tuesday the 5th, at 7 A. M., we arrived at Lena, Stephenson Co., Ill. Were met by elder Daniel Fry, at the depot, and kindly entertained. In the evening brother Allen Boyer conveyed us to the Waddams' Grove meeting-house, where the brethren had appointments that, and the following evening.

On the 7th, came on to Ogle Co., where we visited among the friends, and attended one more meeting in the West Branch church. On Sunday A. M. attended the funeral of sister Heller, and in the evening an appointment at Salem meeting-house, in the Silver Creek church.

On Tuesday, the 12th, were kindly conveyed by Eld. D. E. Price, to Oregon city, where we took the cars and arrived at Chicago, at 10 A. M. Were met by Dr. P. Fahrney at the depot, and kindly entertained by him and family, and next morning again escorted to the depot, at 6 A M. Then we took the cars for Bangor, Van Buren county, Mich., where we arrived about 11 A. M. We found our way to brother Joseph D. Mast's, where we met a kind and warm reception, and now feel like at home for the time. So we are now in our new field of labor ; and this evening expect to meet for the first time in public worship. We found the friends, and members generally, well, in Ills., our last visit through that state ; but there is more sickness now, than there was before harvest. We enjoyed good health since my last, for which we still try to be thankful to our kind, heavenly Father. Remember us still in our prayers. Hereafter, until otherwise directed my address will be.

DANIEL M. HOLSINGER.

Blooming Dale, Mich.

Change of Address.

The address of J. B. Allensworth, which was Parkersburg, Richland Co., Ill., will from this on be Box 30, Vincennes, Ind.

Enigma.

I am composed of 11 words.

My 1st is in Jer., 38 : 5, 20th word.
My 2nd is in Jonah 3 : 3, 6th word.
My 3rd is in Matth. 16: 14 15th word
My 4th is in 1st Kings 14: 6, 13th word
My 5th is in Deut., 29 : 5, 5th word.
My 6th is in 2d Cor., 11 : 1, 1st word.
My 7th is in Psalms 73 : 7, 13th word.
My 8th is in Heb., 3 : 2, 4th word.
My 9th is in Joel 2 : 31, 4th word.
My 10th is in Isa., 24 : 13, 34th word.
My 11th is in Ex., 29 : 32, 21st word.

My whole is an old adage, that we all should observe.

ISAAC SECRIST.

Home, Indiana Co., Pa.

Announcements.

DISTRICT MEETING.

Of the Southren District of Ill., will be in the Panther Creek church Woodford Co., Ill. on the 30th of October. Brethren coming from the South will come to El Passo, thence west to Secor. Brethren will try and be at Secor on Friday, the 27th. If any further information is wanted, address to the undersigned at Secor Ill.

GEORGE W. GISH

LOVEFEASTS.

No interfering providence, the brethren composing the Elklick Branch, Somerset Co., Pa. will hold their fall Lovefeast, on the 21th of October, commencing at 4 o'clock ; continue over Sunday. The usual invitation extended. Eld. C. G. LINT.

The Lord willing, we intend holding our Lovefeast on Saturday, the 28th day of October, next, in the Panther Creek Church Woodford Co., Ill., services to commence at 10 o'clock A. M. a general invitation.

There will be a Lovefeast in the Coal Creek (formerly the Fulton Co.,) congregation, Ill., on the 30th of September. PETER OAKS.

The Brethren of Hatfield, Montgomery county, Pa., expect to hold a Lovefeast, the Lord willing, on the 21st of October, at their meeting-house. We extend a hearty invitation to the brethren and sisters generally, and especially ministering brethren. Those coming from a distance will stop off at "Hatfield Station," (Via., Phila., or Bethlehem), and inquire for the residence of Samuel Y. Souder, or Tobias Rosenberger, who live near the station In behalf of the church. J. H. PRICE.

The brethren in the Bachelor Run church, Carroll county, Ind., have appointed a communion meeting on the 24th day of October, to commence at 4 o'clock in the evening; also meeting next day. The usual invitation is extended to all.

JACOB B. LANDIS.

The brethren in the Brush Creek congregation, intend, the Lord willing, to hold a communion meeting on the 10th of October next. A hearty invitation is extended to all, and especially do we desire ministering brethren to be with us.

CHRISTIAN CRIPE.

If the Lord permits, we will have a Lovefeast in the Mississinawa church, Delaware Co., Ind., commencing Oct. the 20th. The usual invitation. Those coming by rail will stop off at Eaton, on Fort Wayne Muncie and Cin R. R., which is one half mile from place of meeting.

W. R. DEETER.

We intend to hold our Lovefeast in the Lost Creek congregation at the Free Spring meeting-house, on the 6th and 7th of Oct, commencing at 1 P.M. The usual invitation is extended. Any coming from the west by railroad will inform by letter, either Dan'l Sieber, David Beshoar, or Michael Beshoar, at Mifflintown, Pa, and those coming from the east, Solomon Sieber, Thompsontown, Pa There will be conveyance at Mifflintown on the morning of the 6th.

M. Beshoar.

The Lord willing there will be a Lovefeast in the Aughwick congregation Huntingdon Co., Pa., on the 16th and 17th of Oct., commencing at 1 o'clock P. M.

A. L. Funk.

Warrior's Mark (Tyrone, Pa.,)Oct, 7th

Four Mile, Fayette Co. 1nd Oct, 4th.

Grundy County, Mo., Oct, 7th and 8th.

Beaver Creek, Wash., Co., Md., Oct, 12th.

Four Mile, Connersville Fayette Co, Ind, October 4th.

Conemaugh Cambria county, Pa, Oct, 5th. 3 o'clock

Clover Creek, Blair county, Pa, Oct, 20th, 4, P. M.

Mineral Creek, Johnson county, Mo, Oct, 14th.

Schuyler county, Mo, Sept, 29th and Oct, 1st.

Antioch Church, Huntington county, Ind Oct, 4th, 5 P, M.

Pipe Creek, Md, Sept, 20th 1 P, M.

Indian Creek, Westmorland county, Pa, Sept, 26th.

Mohican Church, Wayne county, Ohio, Oct, 25th.

Buffalo Valley, Oct, 20th 1 P, M.

Dry Valley, Oct, 11, 1 P, M.

Antietam Washington county, Md, Oct, 24, 10 A, M.

Dunning's Creek, Oct 21th, 4 P, M.

Palestine, Wayne county, Ind, Sept, 23 and 24th.

Yellow Creek, Stephenson Co., Ill., Sept 26, 27.

Dry Creek, Lynn county, Iowa, Sept, 29th.

East Nimishillin, Canton, Ohio, Sept, 27th,

Augwich, Huntingdon county, Pa, Oct, 16th, and 17th,

Mill Creek, Adams county, Ills, Sept, 30th,

Mill Creek, Pike county, near Barry, Oct 3rd,

Cowanshannoc congregation, Armstrong county, Pa., Sept. 29th, 2 o'clock, P. M.

Wabash congregation, Ind., Sept. 28th, and Somerset congregation, Ind., Sept, 30th. Stop at Wabash City.

Raccoon Creek congregation, Montgomery county, Ind., Oct. 26th. Stop at Ladoga.

Columbiana church, Ohio, Sept. 21st.

East Nimshillin, Ohio, Sept. 26th.

Bristolville, Ohio, Sept. 30th.

Monticello, White county, Ind., Oct. 20, 21; 2 o'clock, P. M.

Wayne county, miles N. Ohio, 12 W. of Wooster, Oct. 25th, 10 o'clock, A. M.

Antietam congregation, Welty's meeting-house, Washington county, Md., Oct, 24th, 10 o'clock, A. M.

Buffalo Valley, Pa., Oct. 20th, 1 o'clock P. M.

Dry Valley, Pa., Oct. 11th, 1 o'clock P. M.

Clover Creek, Blair county, Pa. Oct 20th 4 o'clock, P. M.

Schuyler county, Mo., 1 mile east of Green Top Station, Oct. 1st.

Meadow Branch, M. H. Pipe Creek, Md. Sept. 30th.

Mineral Creek, Johnson county, Mo. Oct. 14th.

Antioch, Huntington county Ind., Oct. 4th.

Logan church, Logan county, Ohio, Sept. 29th.

Walnut Level, Wells county, Ind., Oct. 27st.

Yellow Creek, Claar's meeting-house, Bedford county, Pa. Sept. 27th, 4 P. M.

Somerset arm, Mercer co., Mo., Sept. 23d and 24th.

Buck's Creek church, Henry county, Ind., Sept. 28th.

Lick Creek congregation, Owen county, Ind, Sept. 29th.

Spring Creek, Rockingham county, Va., Sept. 23, 23.

South Keokuk, Keokuk Co., Iowa, Sept. 30th, and Oct. 1st.

Yellow Creek, New Enterprise, Bedford County, Pa., Oct. 24th, 4 o'clock P. M.

Eeast meeting-house, Pine Creek congregation, St. Joseph county, Mich., Oct 19th, 4 o'clock P. M.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with obituary notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In the Hamilton branch, Sept. 5th, our beloved sister, ELIZABETH SELL, wife of Jacob B. Sell, aged 67 years 5 months, and 19 days. She was a mother in Israel, beloved and respected by all who were acquainted with her. She was feeble and afflicted for years; but she bore her afflictions with patience and Christian resignation. She loved the church, and enjoyed the society of the people of God. Some considerable time previous to her death, she called for the elders of the church, and was anointed in the name of the Lord; James 5: 14. Shortly before her departure, she said, "They will soon come; when they come, I will go—they are coming?" We thought of Lazarus, who "was carried by angels into Abraham's bosom." Funeral services by the writer, from Rev. 14. 13.

George Witwer.

In Fayette county, Wt. Va., August the 28th, brother GEORGE MASTERS, aged near 72 years. He bore his last illness, of over five weeks, with true Christian fortitude and resignation. Truly, will he be missed in the circle in which he for so many years moved. As a citizen, he was much respected: as a husband and father, greatly loved; and, as a brother in the Lord Jesus Christ, the Church feels she has lost one that was much loved. In the close of his earthly career, we have another bright evidence of the worth of true religion in a dying hour. His calm and peaceful departure speaks volumes in favor of the glorious religion of Jesus Christ. Having arranged all his temporal affairs, and set his "house in order," he expressed a willingness and desire to depart and be with the Lord. Not a murmer escaped his lips. To the writer of this, he said his sufferings were nothing to those of Job's; and what were Job's to the sufferings of Jesus? then why should he not bear all in patience. To his beloved companion, children, grand-children, and friends, that stood around his dying couch, he spake in tender words, desiring them not to mourn after him; for it was good for him to depart and go to Jesus, who was now standing ready to welcome him. And just as his spirit was about to plume its pinions to wing its way to heaven, he said with joyful countenance,—"I see Jesus! Oh! don't you all see him? Oh! how sweet he looks!" And thus, with heaven open before his eyes, he calmly fell asleep in the Lord; and now is resting from his labors. Oh! why should we weep for such that have only gone before? Let us follow on, that we may meet them in the Elysian fields of endless bliss. Amen.

J. S. Flory.

In the Tuscarawas branch, Stark Co., Ohio, sister ELIZABETH DOLL, aged 71 years, 5 months, and 2 days. Funeral discourse by the brethren, from 2nd Tim. 4: 6—8.

N. Longanecker.

In the Bachelor Run church, Carroll Co., Ind., September 5th, sister SUSANNAH OVERHOLSER, (wife of brother Samuel Overholser deceased, who died some three years ago), aged 66 years 8 months and a few days. Funeral services by the Brethren.

"Visitor," please coby.

Jacob B. Landis.

Of Diptheria, in the Waterloo congregation, Iowa, September 7th, EUGENE, son of brother William and sister Abigail, MILLER, aged 4 years 3 months and 3 days. Occasion improved by the brethren.

Elias K. Buechley.

In New Windsor, Carroll Co., Md., Oct. 30th, 1869. LAURA, consort of William HOFFMAN, aged 19 years 2 months and 24 days. On July 6th, 1870. JOHN SAMUEL, only child of the aforesaid parents; aged 8 months and 8 days. And on the morning of August 18th, 1871, of Typhoid Fever, WILLIAM HOFFMAN, aged 24 years 4 months and 22 days. He was the survivor of two only children of our brother, Samuel and sister Mary Hoffman,—their little son, Joseph E., having died on the 22nd day of February 1859. Our brother and sister have now witnessed the last of their dear offspring consigned to the silent grave; and through these afflictions have been brought to realize that which the Patriarch expressed, "If I be bereaved of my children, I am bereaved." But the time is coming, in which they, like the Patriarch, will comprehend more fully why God in his providence has permitted it to be so. May he grant unto them the grace and resignation which we all so much need under circumstances of affliction. May he also sanctify this dispensation as another, and a loud call to the many associates and friends of the deceased.

On the 19th his remains were followed to, and interred in, the grave-yard attached to the Brethren's meeting-hous at Pipe Creek, in the presence of a very large concourse of friends and neighbors. Funeral services by the ministering brethren present.

"Visitor," please copy.

Philip Boyle.

On the 4th day of August, in the Green Spring church, Seneca county, Ohio, sister SARAH SNAVELY, daughter of brother Joseph and sister Sarah Snively, aged 18 years, 10 months and 22 days. The deceased was lingering under Consumption for some time. About four weeks previous to her death, she expressed a willingness to follow Jesus, and seemed truly penitent, when she was received into the church by baptism, and farther instructed in the doctrine of Jesus. She desired also to engage in the exercises of feet-washing, the Lord's supper, and the Communion of bread and wine, and to be annointed with oil in the name of the Lord. About three days after, she fell asleep. And we have every reason to believe in Jesus. She could not lie in her bed for some time; but had to spend her time by sitting in a chair. When, on the night of the 13th of August, she was prevailed on, to down, she said, she could not now, but that she had a bed prepared where she could rest. On the morning of the 14th, her spirit left her body a lifeless corpse, to go to dwell in yonder world of light. Funeral occasion improved by brethren George Elliott, John Shontz, and S. Loose, from the 1 Cor. 15: 53.

Joseph B. Light.

In Spring Run congregation, near Mc Veytown, Mifflin county, Pa., IRA, only son and youngest child of brother John S. and sister Nancy HANAWALT, and grand-son of elder Daniel Snowberger, of Yellow creek congregation, Bedford Co., Pa., aged 1 year, 10 months, and 8 days. Funeral discourse by elder Peter S. Myers from Gen. 3: 19, (which read, and also, opening and closing hymns, 591, 579.) The particulars connected with his death, as far as known, are as follows:

He and his father were at the barn, and the father let out the horses and colts, and with the latter some sheep ran out which he wanted to keep stabled; and while he turned them in again, Ira fell into the barn cistern, through an opening 8 by 9 inches, out of which the wooden spout, for receiving the water, was thrown by the horses or some other way. When the boy was missed, search was made, and he was soon found in the cistern, by the father. He was lying on his face on the surface of the water. He fell about 12 feet to the water, and it was about 4 feet deep. The cistern was covered with boards, which were firmly nailed.

We may recall to memory here, as somewhat of a coincidence, the fact that about 15 months ago, within 10 feet of the cistern, a little son of brother Henry W. & sister Harriet Hanawalt, was killed, likewise on a Sabbath evening, by being crushed under a rolling log which was started unknowingly to any one. Thus two angel spirits winged their way to God from very near the same spot.

Solomon W. Bollinger.

LIST OF MONEYS received for subscription, books, &c.,

S. Z. Sharp,	2.25	S. Oblinger,	9.00
H. F. Long,	1.65	W. H. Miller,	4.50
C. R. Paige,	.75	J. M. Cassel,	1.50
Jacob Miller.	1.50	S. C. Bashor,	.50
D. Beck,	1.50	J. Schmucker,	7.50
John Altick,	.75	[J. M. Wolf,	5.25
I. D. Armstrong,	.50	August, 29]
James A. Sell,	1.25	H. F. Neikirk,	8.50
A. M. Zug,	1.50	L. West,	.50
John Barnhart,	.50	J. S. Kauffman,	1.50
J. Lasure,	1.50	E. Mishler,	1.50

Advertisements.

WE will admit a limited number of selec advertisements at the following rates
One insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.
No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be nserted on any considerations

Universal Guide for Cutting Garments.

By which every family may cut its own garments for men and boys, of twelfty six different sizes; for Coats, Pants, Vests, and Shirts, and Ladies' Dress Bodies. Agents wanted to sell State, County, and Family Rights. For Particulars address MILLER & QUINN, Tyrone, Blair Co., Pa.

BOOKS FOR ALL GOOD BOOKS

For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price, $4.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol., $2.25. Indispensable.

Life at Home; or the Family and its MEMBERS.—Including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed. The Altar in the House, etc. By Wm. Aikman, $1.50;

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. THOMPSON, Fancy Cloth. $1.00.

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand-book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners, with a Chart for recording the sizes of the different Organs of the Brain, in the Delineation of Character, with upwards of 170 Engravings. Muslin, $1.25.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50;

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By W. PITTINGER. $1.50.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Beautifully Illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth, gilt, beveled boards. Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75 cents.

Any of the above sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

The Phrenological Journal, An Illustrated, First-Class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50, or with the Pious Youth, for $3.00. We commend the JOURNAL to all who want a good Family Magazine, and who does not?

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post office, county and state written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to H. R. HOLSINGER, Tyrone, Pa.

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen	10.50

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG

One copy, post paid.	1.25
Per dozen " "	10.50

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN

One copy, post paid,	50
Per dozen, " "	5.50

Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

TYRONE BANK.

TYRONE, PA.

This Bank, intending to do a general banking business, solicits accounts from Banks' Bankers and others. Collections made on all points. Interest allowed on DEPOSITS left on time. Paper discounted on liberal terms.

Wm. P. Orbison,	D. P. Gwin,
John Scott,	H. G. Fisher,
Thomas Fisher,	J. H. Glazier,
Wm. Dorris,	G. C. Wilkins,
G. W. Garretson,	and others.

ENGLISH ROOFING FELT.

Is found to stand well in all climates, being extensively used for Roofing Houses, Out Buildings and Sheds; for Laying Flat Roofs, Gutters, Lining Granaries, Storehouses, or Walls, (either outside or inside), and for placing under Slates or Tiles. It is also a cheap and effective Ceiling on the underneath side of rafters of a Slated or Tiled Roof, and as a Ceiling to Iron Roofs, counteracting Heat, Frost, and Condensation of Moisture.

The English Felt is put up in rolls of 25 yards in length, by 32 inches in width, and containing a surface of 500 square feet.

THREE-PLY FELT,

FOR ROOFING.

In Rolls, 26 inches wide, by 50 feet in length; each roll will cover a surface 10 feet square, or 100 square feet.

It is to be laid across the roof, shingle fashion, with a lap of two inches, and secured by nailing the edges with 3d nails and tin caps.

When laid, the Felt is to be painted with Mastic Roof Coating, and Sanded. The Mastic Roof Coating is mixed, ready for use, and is applied with a brush.

TARRED ROOFING FELT.

Used extensively for Sheating Houses, and for Tar and Gravel Roofing, also for placing under Slate, Tin and Shingle Roofing.

It is used in packing Woolens and Furs to protect them from moths.

Put up in rolls weighing 45 pounds each.

15 pounds Felt will cover a surface of 100 square feet.

TWO-PLY FELT,

For Sheathing Houses, Roofing Temporary Buildings, making Water Tight Floors, and for placing under Slate and Shingles.

In rolls, 26 inches wide by 50 feet in length. Each roll will cover a surface 10 feet square or 100 square feet.

For Sheathing it can be nailed upon the studding, making perfectly air tight sheathing, and sure protection from dampness.—Rats mice or vermin will not go near it.

MICA CANVAS ROOFING,

In rolls containing 250 square feet. Is to be laid across the roof, and lapped shingle fashion with a lay of two inches, and secured by nailing the edges with 20 oz tacks.

This is the only Composition Roofing that does not require a finishing coat of paint or cement.

UNTARRED SHEATHING FELT.

For Carpet Lining, Deafening Floors, and for putting under Slate, Tin and Shingle Roofing.

Put up in rolls weighing 100 pounds.

10 pounds Felt will cover a surface 10 feet square, or 100 square feet.

MANUFACTURED BY THE

PENN ROOFING COMPANY,

105 South Second St., Phil'a.

FARM FOR SALE.

In Kosciusco county, Indiana, one mile north of Millwood, on the road between Bremen and Etna, containg 200 acres, 50 acres improved, some marshy, and the balance in timber.

JOHN MOW.

7—34-3ts.

1780 1871

ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK?

Use Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

CLEANSE YOUR BLOOD!!

An Alterative and Catharic, or Tonic and Purge combined, for diseases arising from bad blood; such as Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Erysipelas, Worms, Chills and Fever, Scrofula, Pimples, Tetter, &c. TRY IT.

Established 1780 in package form. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form which was brought to its present state of preservation and perfection some years later, by Dr. P. Fahrney, Chicago, Ill's, who conducts the trade west of Ohio. Great reputation! Many Testimonials! Ask for that prepared at Waynesboro, Pa., and Chicago, Ill's. Beware of imitations. Genuine retails at $1.25 per bottle. Druggists and Medicine dealers sell it.

Dr. P. Fahrney's "Health Messenger" gives the history and uses of the BLOOD CLEANSER testimonials, and other information, sent free of charge. Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.

WAYNESBORO, PA.

Beers' Expanding Scroll Water-wheel.

[Patented 1868] This wheel is now running with the overshot, in a Flouring Mill, and is using less water than the overshot. Inventor being a Millwright, and having seen and used all the new waterwheels, does not hesitate to say it is the first iron wheel that can compete with the overshot, and is one half cheaper, simpler and better. For farther information address J. L. Beers and Sons, Millwrights and Manufacturer's of wheel shafting and mill gearing of all kinds, continued Sawmill feed and Sawmill irons.

J. L. Beers & Sons

Coeolamus, Juniata Co. Pa.

A Card.

Drs. D. Fahrney & Son, Uroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.

7-10- 1 yr. pd.

Wm. M. Lloyd,	D. T. Caldwell,
Altoona, Pa.	Tyrone Pa.

LLOYD, CALDWELL & CO.,

BANKERS,

Receive monies on deposit, and pay interest if left 6 months, at 4 per cent per annum, or 5 per cent. if left one year.

Special contracts made with parties acting as administrators, executors, guardians, and persons holding monies in trust. Dealers in every description of Stocks and Bonds.—Government Securities made a speciality.

Gold and Silver bought and sold, and a general Banking business transacted.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine, with Drop Feed, new Take-up, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted FIRST CLASS, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted traveling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $200 per month. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. Co.

33 East Union Square, 17th St., New York

SHORT HAND WRITING.—Students of Phonography and all others who are interested in the art can obtain instruction books Send stamp for price list and tracts.

"AMERICAN PHONETIC DEPOT.

TYRONE, PA.

J. S. THOMAS, &CO.

WHOLESALE GROCERS

and

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

No 305 RACE St. ABOVE 3RD, PHILADELPHIA,

N. B. Country Produce taken in exchange for goods or sold on commission.

CABINET MAKING & UNDERTAKING

The undersigned keeps on hand and manufactures to order all kinds of Furniture. He is also neatly fitted out for conveying the dead to their last resting place.

Manufacturer of the Common Sense Dasher Washing Machine. Shop at the Cross Roads, near Warrior's Mark, Pa.

JAMES S. COX.

A Washing Machine may be seen and purchased at this office. v6n48tf.

BURLINGTON.

Leaving the East and arriving at Chicago or Indianapolis, how shall we reach the West? The best Line is acknowledged to be the C. B. and Q., joined together with the B. & M. Railroad by the Iron Bridge at Burlington, and called the Burlington Route.

The main line of the Route running to Omaha, connects with the great Pacific Roads, and forms to-day the leading route to California. The Middle Branch, entering Nebraska at Plattsmouth, passes through Lincoln, the State Capital, and will this year be finished to Fort Kearney, forming the shortest route across the Continent by over 100 miles.

Another branch of the B. M., diverging at Red Oak, falls into a line running down the Missouri through St. Joe to Kansas City, and all Kansas. Passengers by this route to Kansas. see Illinois, Southern Iowa, and Missouri, and, by a slight divergence, can see Nebraska also.

Lovers of fine views should remember the Burlington Route, for its towns "high-gleaming from afar"—its tree-fringed streams—its rough bluffs and quarries—its corn-ocean stretching over the prairies further nthan eye can reach.

Land-buyers will be sure to remember it, for they have friends among the two thousand who have already bought farms from Geo. S. Harris, the Land Commissioner of the B. & M. R. R. at Burlington, Iowa, or among the four thousand home-steaders and pre-emptors who last year filed claims in the Lincoln Land Office, where "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm."

Christian Family Companion

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—JESUS. At $1.50 Per Annum

VOLUME VII. TYRONE, PA. TUESDAY, OCT. 3, 1871. NUMBER 40.

For the Companion.

What I Know about Preaching. No. 1.

HOW NOT TO HAVE A GOOD MEETING.

When there are several ministers present at one meeting, it wont do to determine beforehand which one is to preach and conduct the meeting. But let them all sit silently in the pulpit until the people have all assembled, and are anxiously waiting for the exercises of the meeting to begin; then let the ministers begin to urge one another to commence the meeting. Five minutes can be spent very unprofitably in this way.

After this, let one rise, and commmence by saying: "I would rather have kept my seat and listened to my brethren; but as they urged me to open the meeting, I thought I would try and be obedient." Then you can proceed to tell your hearers, that we have now come together at the place appointed for public worship, and that the hour for commencing our meeting has now arrived, and that you will now read a hymn, and that we will then try and sing it together.

You will then select a hymn and read it; but you need not be particular about reading it correctly, and in a proper style; but pronounce some of the words wrong, and utter them indistinctly; and above all things, read in a drawling sing-song tone.

After the hymn has been sung, you can go on to say, that we have now sung a hymn; and that in singing this hymn we have sung many beautiful rhymes; and you hope we have sung it "with the spirit and with the understanding also." Still go on, and tell what we have sung in the first verse; what in the second, &c.

You can also tell the congregation that you do not intend to make any unnecessary preliminary remarks; that you are afraid you'll take up too much time from your brethren; and that you had not intended to say anything at all this morning, but as you have been requested to commence the meeting, you will now try and say a little in order to prepare the minds of your hearers to approach God properly in prayer. Thus you can proceed with this desultory verbiage for fifteen or twenty minutes: it will have a tendency to weary your congregation and make the meeting disinteresting and not good.

Finally, when you get through with your "exhortations," tell your hearers that you now want to go to prayer,—and, of course, you want make a very long prayer, and use many vain repetitions, it will help wonderfully to make the meeting not good.

After prayer, five minutes may be consumed again in urging one another to read a text and "make a start." Finally, however, you will rise again,—but don't forget to say that you would rather have kept your seat and listened to your brethren, who, you think, are more able to address the congregation than you are; but that you have now risen, in obedience to your brethren, to read a portion of scripture, and, perhaps, make a few remarks about it; and that you desire their undivided attention.

You will then proceed to read your text in a drawling tone.

After you are done reading, you can tell your hearers that you have now read the text; and that you now intend to make a few remarks; but that you will try and be as brief as you possibly can; for you do not wish to consume the time from your brethren, and you would much rather hear them speak than speak yourself. Tell them that you feel your weakness; and that you know that you can say nothing about this text yourself, but if the Lord will say anything to this dying congregation, you are willing to permit yourself to be used as an instrument in his hand.

You can now read your text another time, and proceed to give your opinion about some portions of it. But remind your hearers frequently of the fact that you want to be brief, and that you would rather hear your brethren speak. You can go on in this way for at least, one hour, and say anything and everything that occurs to your mind, no matter whether it has any bearing on the text, or any relevancy to the Bible at all, or not.

You must, of course, speak in an excited, passionate, boisterous tone; for if you don't, some, even of the unthinking, might think that it is after all only you that is speaking, and not the Lord speaking through you. The serious, reflecting, and intelligent part of your congregation, of course, know better: they know that your early education has been sadly neglected; and that, although you have been chosen to the ministry, you have not heeded the admonition of Paul,—"Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that need not be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth;" nor the admonition,—"Be ye wise as serpents, and harmless as doves."

After you have said all that you can think of, you will tell your hearers that you now want to come to a conclusion and give it over to the brethren, who, you think, will develop the subject more fully.

Now let a second brother rise, and begin somewhat as follows: "A portion of scripture has been read in our hearing, and many very appropriate remarks made about the same; and I would not deem it necessary to say anything more; but as the brethren thought I should offer some further remarks, I will try and do so. I think we have heard a very interesting sermon to-day; and we should now try and do what the brother has told us; and not be forgetful hearers, but doers of the word."

He can then go on and tell the congregation that the first brother has told us this, and he has told us that, &c. Thus tell them what the first brother told them; but frequently tell them that you do not deem it necessary to say much more.

Finally, you can tell them, that "we have now been together for some time; and the wise man says, 'there is a time for everything,' so there is also a time to close a meeting; and the time is now pretty well spent, so, I think, before we will break up and separate, we will again feel it our duty to thank God for the privilege of sitting under the sound of the gospel; and we will also pray him to bless his word which has been spoken to-day." Then close the meeting by a long prayer.

Preachers who fall into the habit of conducting their meetings somewhat similar to the advice now given, will frequently lead their hearers to the conclusion that the meeting was not a good meeting. OCCASIONAL.

For the Companion.

Christ our Example in His Intercourse with the World.

Jesus was a holy being, dwelling for a short time among sinful creatures. He could have withdrawn himself from all contact with creatures of a character so unlike his own. He could have spared himself their insults and reproaches, the sight of their sufferings, and the disgust of their sins, by living secluded till the hour of expiation came. This he did not; he could not thus have accomplished his Father's will, or fulfilled the purposes of his existence here.

The Christian's position in this world, is the same as his Savior's was. And they are deluded who try to follow Christ by a life of solitude and abstraction. Christ never fled from difficulties, never shunned obloquy, nor hid himself from opposition.

When the newly awakened spirit feels the ties of natural connexion become onerous by reason of uncongeniality of sentiment, much is to be considered before those ties are severed. We must leave all for Christ; but then we must be sure it is for Christ; we must be sure it is not to lighten our own cross, by flying from the influence we might have resisted, and escaping the opposition we might have borne. No earthly ties or earthly duties can be pleaded in excuse for sin; because God never places any man in such an opposition of claims, that one or the other of his laws must needs be broken. There is a first commandment, and the second is like unto it: they can never stand in competition. Perhaps the temptation to sin arising from our near connections, does not so much proceed from without as from within: we fear their censures or desire their approbation; thus it is our feelings, rather than our connections, that require to be changed.

We must not break the ties of nature where we should only loosen them. We must not cease to love, where we should only love differently; and in all cases we must be sure it is the fear of sinning, not the fear of disgrace and difficulty in maintaining our principles, that induces us to abandon our position in life, and hide ourselves from the legitimate intercourse of society.

On the other hand, we must not wilfully expose ourselves to temptation. Predisposed as we are to sin; incapable of resisting it, as we know ourselves to be, we must not go boldly, and without necessity, where Satan keeps his courts and spreads his blandishments; where we know we must meet him, and either defeat his wiles or be seduced by them. We should not venture to say, that if our own principles are good, there is no risk to us in any company, in any place. We cannot walk side by side with the enemies of God, and sit in the councils of sinners, without danger of being seduced from our allegiance to God. Jesus was not thus bold though he might have been. Pure and sinless as he was, and all-powerful to resist temptation as he knew himself to be, Jesus did not go of his own accord into the wilderness, to try his strength against the tempter, and listen to the language of seduction. It is distinctly said,—"He was led of the Spirit into the wilderness." God took him there, that he might in all things be more than conqueror. God may take us there; and if he does, it will be to conquer too. But if we set one step into the wilderness of temptation without the leading of the Spirit, we follow not in the footsteps of our Lord.

N. J. GILLISS.

Madisonburg, Pa.

For the Companion.

The Christian's Home in Glory.

All human beings are created by the Lord their God, and that for the grand purpose of serving and obeying the Lord our God, and of being saved in God's eternal kingdom. But alas! at a certain time it repented the Lord that he had made man. Let us not thus grieve the Lord, that it repent him that he made us, after he has given his Son to redeem the world, and we have full access to the throne of grace, and have the privilege to qualify ourselves to enter in through the gates into the city, to inherit the things prepared for us from the foundation of the world. O, brethren and sisters, let us obey the gospel of God, which is according to his will, and "prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God, and obtain that eternal rest that remaineth for the people of God,—a city of pure gold which John saw coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. There "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away. And he that sat upon the throne said. Behold I make all things new;" and, "these words are true and faithful." "He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son;" and he shall dwell with me in that holy city, which has the glory of God, and is pure gold: the streets are pure gold: in the city is a river of pure water; and on either side the tree of life, that bears twelve manner of the most delicious fruit, "and yields her fruit every month; and the leaves of the tree are for the healing of the nations." And the city has no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it; for the glory of God lightens the city; "and the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it." If we stand, let us take heed that we fall not, that no man take our crown laid up in that city. There the gates shall not be shut at all by day,—for there will be no night there,—and they which are written in the Lamb's book of life shall walk in the light of the golden and glorious city; and they shall see the face of God, and his name will be written in their foreheads; and the Lord God will give them light; and they shall reign with Christ forever and ever, (Rev. 21). O brethren and sisters, let us live pious and devout lives in order to enjoy that rest. Eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard, what God has prepared for those that love him. They will have crowns upon their heads and palms in their heads; they will sing and make melody, yea, even shout for joy; and the Lamb will lead them to living fountains of water, and feed them with immortal food. Yes, it will make their joys still greater when they shall see the Lord Jesus in his great glory and majesty, with his many myriads of angels and saints surrounding the throne of God, and singing with great joy—"Hallelujah forever and ever. Amen."

JACOB I. GOOD.

North Liberty, Ind.

When I behold the passion for ornamentation and the corresponding power, I feel as if women had so far shown what they are bad for, rather than what they are good for.

For the COMPANION.

Restoration of the Jews.—

REPLY TO SISTER DEARDORF.

I acknowledge, after reading your reply, I felt myself completely nonplussed; not for lack of argument, but with astonishment in seeing how adroitly you have handled the subject to suit your own purpose.

And being at the same time well aware that you are writing, at least to a considerable degree, the sentiments of, at least, one half, and perhaps two-thirds, of the members of our fraternity; so that, if a vote be taken whether we would have a worldly "kingdom of Israel," or a spiritual one, I would be found in the minority. The kingdom of heaven is not divided into majorities and minorities. But since the majority differs from me, it is therefore the more worthy of the most serious consideration, for me to weigh well this matter, that we may not be nourishing erroneous doctrines.

But let us see. The disciples of Jesus Christ had been brought up to believe that Christ would raise up a worldly kingdom; they had read the prophets, and heard their teachers explain them—they understood them literally; they had nourished their ideas, and they expected his kingdom would be of this world. But near the end of his earthly career, he told them all, saying, "My kingdom is not of this world." But so deep had their ideas been implanted, that even then they would not surrender their former opinions. They still believed he would establish a worldly kingdom. It was then very much like nowadays, —they disputed with each other, and, may I say, quarrelled, as to who should be the greatest, the most esteemed, and perhaps the highest in office. But you will see, all this was the work of the flesh and not of the Spirit; because they were still lacking of that Holy Spirit which guideth into all truth. They looked for a worldly kingdom; and when they walked with him as with a stranger to Emmaus after this resurrection one of them, among other things in speaking to him of his death, told him, "But we trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel." After that, when they were assembled with him, "They asked him saying, Lord wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" But after they had received the Holy Ghost, it seems all their former ideas of that worldly kingdom died away. Seeing this was the case when they had the mouth of Perfect Wisdom among them, we need not wonder that people should be still looking for the same kind of worldly "kingdom of Israel."

As for your reply, Sister Margaret, it seems to me as not being well seasoned, and greatly in want of salt.—By reference to Companion, Volume VI, page 742, it will be seen that, after summing up the whole matter, my position was, that all the prophecies relative to the restoration of the Jews, which were not fulfilled in their return from Babylon, were fully accomplished in their return to Christ. This position I still hold and will not surrender.

I thought my last explanation was so plain that it could not be misunderstood; but it seems you will still hold on to the thirtieth and thirty-first chapters of Jeremiah for a literal fulfillment according to your views, and then quote part of the tenth verse, saying, "Jacob shall return, and shall be in rest," &c. You say, This means the whole house of Israel."—Well, suppose it does. It does not say so. It says Jacob; and if you want the letter, you ought to keep it, and read the ninth verse also, which reads, "But they shall serve the Lord their God, and David their King, whom I will raise up unto them."—Now, in accordance with your views, the Lord will raise up David from the dead at the beginning of the millenium, to be a king over a people who refuse to accept the terms of the gospel during the time of grace, but to accommodate that "stiffnecked and rebellious people," distinguished from all others by a cut or rite in the flesh, which has long ago been made null and void; who claim to be Jews, but are none; "for he is, not a Jew who is one outwardly; neither is that circumcision, which is in the flesh:"—to accommodate them, when "the grace of God has appeared to all men," the Lord will usher in a special dispensation, and, instead of coming nigher to perfection, turn back the dial plate of time three thousand or more years, to shadows and burnt-offering. God forbid! I can not conceive how any person with reason can have such views.

But if your views and renderings of scripture are correct, the Apostle to the Hebrews in trying to reconcile, the law and the prophets with the gospel, in the eighth, ninth, and tenth chapters, has made an entire failure, or he is speaking to the people of a dispensation yet in the future. But this certainly is not the case, for he wrote to his Hebrew brethren, the believing Jews. What is the difference between the so-called, unbelieving Jews and other people? Nothing more than a cut or mark in the flesh. But what is the difference between Jewish women and others? There certainly is none. Then, if a so-called Jew turns to God, he becomes a true Jew. What difference is there then between a converted Jew and a converted Gentile? Certainly none. They both have the same spirit and the same faith. Then why make so much distinction? Simply, because the spiritual meaning of the prophets is not discerned.

Turning back again to David, it will not be consistent for you to reject a literal fulfillment of the ninth verse, referred to above, and to say that David will never be king again; because that is the letter, and in other passages that suit your purpose, you hold on to that. Now be consistent and do not say the prophet in saying "David" means Christ: else you will have to admit when he says "Israel" he means all the faithful, Jews and Gentiles.

It is remarkable with what a degree of accuracy you seem to know what has been fulfilled, and what has not. The fact that it is not recorded, is no evidence at all that a thing has not been fulfilled. And then your assertions of how they will be literally fulfilled in future, amount to nothing at all; from the fact that you are not willing to reconcile them, or have them reconciled, with the Gospel, when it can so easily be done by those who are spiritually minded.—You say "The fifteenth verse of the thirty-first chapter (of Jeremiah) was partly fulfilled," &c. Only partly? And it reads thus, "Thus saith the Lord. A voice was heard in Ramah, lamentation, and bitter weeping; Rachel weeping for her children refused to be comforted for her children, because they were not." Then Matth., 2: 17, 18, says: "Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremiah the prophet, saying, In Rama was there a voice heard, lamentation, and weeping, and great mourning, Rachael weeping for her children, and would not be comforted, because they are not." Now what is lacking fulfillment? Certainly nothing. But it is a wonder you admit even a partial fulfillment; since the prophet says this voice of weeping was heard in Rama, when it literally was not in Rama, but in Bethlehem. If you want the letter, you ought to keep it.

But I think I understand your motive in making the above objection: You think a verse or two further is in your favor; but I think not. You quote, "There is hope in thy end saith the Lord, that thy children shall come again to their own borders." I know that my hope is in my end, and so is the hope of all Israel, "if we hold fast the confidence, and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end;" Heb., 3: 6. But the hope was, "that thy children shall come again to their own borders." It appears, they had been in their own borders before that time, even when they believed the promise of God; but through unbelief and disobedience they came out of their borders, both literally and spiritually, and through unbelief they never entered the promised land, though many of their children did. They that believed and the innocent ones entered the land, both literally and spiritually in hope of the promise. Those who, through unbelief entered not literally entered not spiritually: and even those who did believe, "through fear of death, were all their lifetime subject unto bondage," and fell asleep in the land of the enemy,—outside of the promise, though in hope of it.—But when the promise was fulfilled, they were made "free from the law of sin and death;" and all Israel returned to their own border through obedience unto Christ.

Again, you say, "The nineteenth and twentieth verse of the second chapter of Acts did not go into fulfilment on that day." How do you know it did not? Neither did it need to. It could have been a year, ten years, or a hundred years before; and it might have been afterward, or may be fulfilled yet.

Then you make objection again, saying, "They certainly could not look upon him, whom they pierced, at the time when they returned from Babylon." Certainly not. But they could and did when they returned to Christ. When the Evangelist tells us "These things were done that the Scriptures might be fulfilled," I am willing to believe it without scrupling.

Concerning that city.—I believe the city and its foundation is holy.—You say, "But it evidently is the city that shall not be plucked up nor thrown down any more." I agree to that, for so says the prophet. But then further on you say. "But the city that Jeremiah speaks of, must give way at its time, which will not be until the universal conflagration, when all earthly things must give way" You will see that your own words contradict each other, and disagree with the prophet. If the city is ever to be destroyed, the prophet would not say it should not be. According to the German translation, it shall never be plucked up nor thrown down. Both English and German versions say enough to show that it will endure in eternity. And if it has the twelve apostles for its foundation, the ground must be holy.

I can not find anything in the eleventh chapter of Romans to sustain your views, Neither can I find that there ever was a covenant made with Jews and Gentiles. Christ, in his ministry, said he was sent only "to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." The covenant by Moses, and the one by Christ, were both made with the house of Israel. The disobedient and unbelieving had no part in either covenant. Paul, in the eleventh chapter of Romans, by way of consolation, in substance tells us and them, that because of unbelief they were broken off, that the Gentiles who believed might be grafted in; and they, if they continue not to believe, shall be broken or cut off; and they of the circumcision, "if they abide not still in unbelief, shall be grafted in again." But this is understood, as all being under the same covenant; and it is not at all improbable that numbers of the so-called Jews may yet embrace the gospel.

I think I can show you that you have made quite a failure; and that your views in regard to another covenant are quite erroneous. (Pardon my expression). Now, if, as you think, another covenant should be made, turning back to shadows and burnt-offerings, carnal ordinances and a worldly kingdom, it would necessitate changes in the divine law; or would set aside the law of grace, and other laws would have to be made.—Other laws and a worldly sanctuary would necessitate a change in the priesthood. But since there is no more change to be made in the priesthood, it is reasonable that there will be no more change in the law, and, consequently, no other covenant; because the present priesthood is unchangable, and continueth forever.—Heb. 7: 24. If it could be proven that another covenant would be made, and another priesthood be established, then your views would seem plausible; but since it can not be proven, I can not do otherwise than look upon your whole theory as being a misunderstanding of Scripture.

Passing over a great part of your reply without touching it, and after a number of quotations which I will not take time to refute nor reconcile with the gospel, you say, "Now we know that none of these promises have as yet been fulfilled. They never had a king of their own after their return from Babylon," &c. Let us see. What did Pilate write on the superscription? "JESUS OF NAZARETH THE KING OF THE JEWS." They say, "We have no king but Cesar."—But what have we to do with the unbelieving Jews? What saith the prophet? "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy king cometh unto thee; he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and sitting upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass." Zech. 9: 9. But what say his disciples? "Hosanna: blessed is the King of Israel that cometh in the name of the Lord." John 12: 13. Will you yet say,—"they never had a king of their own after their return from Babylon?" The fact that the unbelieving rejected him, does not prove that he was not their king.

The time when the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters that cover the sea, will certainly not be until all that is sinful has been purged out of this earth by fire, and a new firmament and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness shall appear.

Again, in the same manner as it was typified in the Mosaic dispensation, what would be the consummation of that system, it is now typified, in the Christian dispensation, what will finish the present order of things. As under the first covenant lambs were sacrificed as types, pointing toward the Lamb of God slain on Calvary, so now, under the second covenant, we have ordinances pointing forward toward that which will be perfect. Since baptism is a burial, and rising out of the water,—a resurrection,—it follows that baptism is a type of the resurrection of the just; for as the old man is buried in the water to rise no more, but a new man is to rise out of the water to walk in newness of life, so shall we then arise out of the grave with new bodies, having immortal life. The resurrection of the just, and the coming of Christ in the clouds of heaven, will, no doubt, be the next movements toward the consummation of all things. But to rebuild Jerusalem, and turn back the institutions of God to sacrifices and burnt-offerings under the first covenent, it is utterly impossible for me to see what it should typify, since the Lamb has been slain. Here I will leave this matter for the present. When I wrote my last reply I thought I would not answer again. But finding so much sympathy for your side, I have resolved to hold my position until you or some one else convinces me of error.

J. Y. Heckler.

Harleysville, Pa.

For the Companion.

Choosing Ministers.

The choosing of ministers, teachers, or preachers, or whatever you may chose to call them, is a subject that is agitated by some of the brethren to a considerable degree; so much so, as to confound many of the brethren and sisters in regard to this matter, and thereby bring into disrepute a custom which, in my estimation, should be held very sacred, and should not be lightly spoken of. The choosing or electing or setting apart persons for this important office is either in the hands of God alone, or else delegated to some other person or body. I take the position, that God, independently of the means appointed by him, does, at this time, bring no one into that position; yea, and has never done it since we have a knowledge of the plan of salvation. Where is the passage of scripture by which we may assuredly know, that God has said to A. B. and C., You must preach?" Those who say that God has chosen them to preach, can give us no precedence precept, nor example, that God has ever called any one in this way. Neither can we find any intimation in all God's arrangement of spreading his gospel, that ever any started out upon this mission just because he felt as though God called him. Where is it? "Echo answers, where?"

But let us go to the law and the testimony. Brethren, hear me patiently.

The first preacher we have is John the Baptist; and even this preacher was not brought before the world without God first making the matter known to the people, and that through his father Zacharias. Read the history Luke gives of this matter: read from the 5th to the 25th verse of the first chapter, and you have a full history of what God intends to do. And by reading from the 67th verse to end of chapter, you have the office or the object of John's work defined. Can we for a moment suppose that John preached just because he felt so? I presume not, but because he was set apart by God unto this work,—and that through the instrumentality of an other agent, and not independent of an agent. John's mission being fully made known, as well as his personality, God now works no more through his father, but through John, himself.

Notice, when the time came that Jesus Christ was to be made known to the world in his official relation, God the Father did this through John the baptist. In this case were God, the Spirit, and John united, working together. After Jesus Christ was thus pointed out, and after he commenced preaching, all men began to flock to him; and John declaring to the people that he would increase; and in a short time he (Jesus) had a multitude following him, and necessarily had to have more help. From this on, God, the Son, and the Church worked in harmony with one another. Here is where some of the brethren, to my understanding of things, run into error; and that by saying Jesus Christ chose his teachers from among the disciples independent of them, that is, to say, did not give them any privilege or say so in the matter. I think he did. Let me open before you Matthew 9: 37, 38: "Then saith he, (Jesus) unto his disciples, The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few: Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest." Does this not prove to a demonstration that the disciples, the Lord of the harvest, and Jesus were laboring in harmony, or with one another, not independently of one another. Notice, "pray ye" (disciples).

The next are the seventy chosen. By a reference to Luke 1: 2, we find that he again calls them to prayer.—Now with the Savior continues his work, and he establishes a church that the gates of hell were not to prevail against. And why? For the grand and only reason. That God, the Son, and the church stand united in everything, the devil can make no inroads upon their oneness. After the death and ascension of the Lord of glory, the disciples and apostles labored together by the authority of him who said: "All power is given." Matth., 28: 18, We meet with them in Jerusalem, (together in number about an hundred and twenty) engaged in prayer and supplication, and while thus engaged, Peter arose in the midst of them, and showed by prophecy, that some one would have to fill the place of Judas, who by transgression fell. They again undertook this work in prayer, asking God which of the two they had set apart should be the one; and in casting their lots, the lot fell upon Matthias, and he was numbered with the eleven apostles. There are some in this nineteenth century that say the proceedings of the apostles were out of order; yet at the same time the election was never called in question by any of the apostles, either by word or epistle.

The last case we shall notice is Paul. It is said that he was called of God. And so is every one that is legally called, but the church has its say so in it God calls through the church and labors (if I may use the expression) with the church. This Saul was called to be an apostle of the Gentiles. Now the question comes up, did he preach to these people before he was authorized by the church to do so? I think not. "Yes, but he preached straightway, that is, he argued that he was the Christ." And so should every baptized believer. But when the sending came, or the commissioning, as we now call it, the church, with the Holy Ghost and prayer, had to do it. Open at the 13th chapter of Acts 1st and 4th verses. The first verse gives us to understand that they were in a church capacity; the second, that the Holy Ghost asked a separation for the work for which the Lord had intended them. (See Acts 9: 15); the third, that fasting and prayer were leading elements in this number, and that they were sent by them; and the fourth, gives us to understand that they were sent, and that they went," being fully commissioned.

In looking up these scriptures, I think it is preposterous for any man to say, that the church has nothing to say in this matter, and doubly so, for a man to say that he has a perfect right to preach regardless of the church's approval or not. If a man can be in a wrong, he certainly is in this. A brother that persists in a thing of this kind, should be strictly dealt with by the church,—not as a preacher, for he is none,—but as a bastard.

It is sometimes said that our system is not a good one; and as a proof of this assertion they say, "why so many that don't preach?" and again, "if you let those preach who feel like it, they would all preach."—In reply to the first I would say: the not preaching of some that are called to this work, is no evidence against the system; but it certainly shows that there is something wrong, and that the wrong is undoubtedly in the church. There is not enough prayer and fasting. Brethren and sisters, how many of us go before the Lord and ask him to point out to us the one he wants? I am fearful this is too much neglected. I have with sorrowful eyes looked on, when we heard the expressions of the church. I have been driven to the conclusion that the house-keepers have the thing not enough at heart, or else they would warmly exhort the brethren to prayer and fasting. Brethren, it is a solemn matter, and yet I have seen members make light of it; and just as long and often as we do this we will have among us such as will not preach. Here God and the church do not work together, but only the church.

And as to the system, let them preach that say God called them, and that give us the assurance that it is so, by the strong evidence—their feeling. brethren, I have known, (and must I say) brethren, that gave us strong hints that God caused them to feel as though they had to preach, and I have seen them placed there, and what was the fruit? Never very much that I could see. You may remember such cases. Again, it is sometimes said, "How does it come that some of our ablest men called to the ministry will turn out bad?—if our system were a good one these ought not to be amongst us." If this is an argument at all, it will condemn the whole christian religion. Behold how many sinners there are that are called and drawn to the Son by the Father, and with all this but few will be chosen; or in other words, how many go back again to the beggarly elments of this world! And yet we think the system of religion is a good one.

Lastly, just as soon as I can be made to believe that a sinner can be made a Christian irrespective of God, the Holy Ghost, and the church, (which is representing Christ), I will believe that a brother has a right to preach, without the church setting him apart for the work.

C. G. Lint.

Dale City, Pa.

What is Methodism?

In the present volume of the Companion No. 29 we find an article headed, "Is Methodism of Christ?" in which the writer passes some strictures on the doctrines held by Methodists, which we fear are too strong and sweeping. He seems to take the position that Methodism is not of Christ, but does not fully define what he means by the term. If he takes the usual definition, "A system of faith and worship maintained by John Wesley and his followers," then the above writer is wrong; for really there is much, such as repentance, prayer, &c., that is found in their system of worship that was taught by Christ. But if he only calls that Methodism which originated with the Methodists and not with Christ, then he should have expressed himself more clearly. The safest and most reasonable plan is to give an opponent credit for everything he deserves, then you may reprove his error in the strongest manner and it will have the greater effect. We believe there is some good in the doctrines of every religious society.—They are like the various kinds of water on the face of the earth; some flowing down the mountain side with seeming purity; others partake so strongly of the substances through which they pass that they are even destructive to life; while still others are standing by the roadside, and so much combined with earth as scarcely seems to be water at all; yet, when analyzed, much of the same elements is found as in the purest water that flows. So it is with the various forms of religion. Some are so much combined with the things of this world that we scarcely detect any true elements of the Christian religion, yet when analyzed by the all-discerning eye of God, there may be something acceptable to him.

In the second place we should remember that "to err is human," and we might ourselves not be entirely free from human prejudice; and as careful as the church has ever been, it might be possible that we have yet errors clinging to us that have hitherto remained unobserved. I find no safer plan for the brethren to pursue than "to preach the word both in season and out of season." If the word of God condemns any, they cannot blame us, and when the word of God does not condemn, neither should we.

S. Z. Sharp.

Marysville, Tenn.

Good Nature at Home.—No trait of character is more valuable in a wife than the possession of a sweet temper. Home can never be made happy without it. It is like the flowers that spring up in our pathway, reviving and cheering us. Let a man go home at night, wearied and worn-out by the toils of the day, and how soothing is a word dictated by a sweet disposition! It is sunshine shining on his heart. He is happy, and the cares of life are forgotten. A sweet temper has a soothing influence over the mind of the whole family. When it is found in the wife and mother, you find kindness and love predominating over the natural feelings of a bad heart. Smiles, kind words and looks characterize the children, and peace and love have their dwelling there.—Study, then, to acquire and retain a sweet temper.

There is born within every man the germ of both virtue and vice.—The developement of one or the other is contingent upon circumstances.—Hosea Ballou.

Doctrine, Reproof, Correction.

The world will not believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God, until the Church, the body of Christ, is purified from, and rid of Apostasy.

We of "this reformation" have been, and still are, very properly insisting that the Lord's prayer, recorded in the seventeenth chapter of John, must be answered, that is, what the Lord prayed for in that prayer must be brought about, and must exist, in order that the world be converted to Christianity; that it is necessary that those who believe in the Lord through the apostles' word be one, to convince the world that Jesus was sent by the Father. This is true.—The saints must be one before the world will be convinced that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God.

Some of our sectarian friends who see the force of our plea, and also quite a number among us, too (to our shame be it spoken), contemplate and look to a oneness of body, a oneness of ecclesiastical "organization," a oneness in sectarian tenets and peculiarities, as the oneness required, and the oneness for which the Lord prayed. This is quite an error. And I propose, in this number, to try and "correct" this error, and show "the way of God more perfectly."

The Lord prays; yes, prays; for the word of the Lord liveth and abideth forever, hence this prayer liveth and is still sounding in the Father's auditorium. Hence, brethren, let us consider it just as it is, that the Lord is now praying the Father, "that they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me." Verse 21. And, "that they may be one, even as we are one: I in them and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them as thou hast loved me." Verses 22, 23.

Now, in the word of the Lord, there are no expletives. Every word has a meaning and a force, and is to be regarded in coming to, and acquiring "the knowledge of the Lord" communicated by the Lord in the particular passage under consideration, in this as well as in all other cases.

1. They for whom he prays are to be one; as the Father is in the Son, and the Son in the Father, they are also to be one in them: that the world may believe that the Father has sent the Son.

2. They are to be one, even as the Father and the Son are one. How is that to be brought about? "I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that thou hast sent me," etc.

Now we must next ascertain how the Father is in the Lord, and the Lord in the Father; for the saints must also be in them as they are in each other.

"If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love." John xv. 10. The saints abide in the Lord by keeping his commandments; and he abides in the Father by keeping his commandments.

"If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him. He that loveth me not, keepeth not my sayings;" but seeks out "inventions" and "plans" of his own. John xiv. 23, 24.

"He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same shall bring forth much fruit; for without me ye can do nothing. If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered." John xv; 5, 6.

"Let that, therefore, abide in you, which ye have heard from the beginning. If that which ye have heard from the beginning shall remain in you, ye shall continue in the Son, and in the Father." 1 John ii. 24.

"Whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, hath both the Father and the Son." 2 John 9.

Hence we find that we abide in the Lord by keeping his commandments, as he abides in the Father by keeping his commandments; if we love him we will keep his words, and the Father will love us, and they will come unto us and make their abode with us; if we do not keep his sayings, we do not love him, and they will not abide with us; if we abide in him and he in us, we shall bring forth much fruit, for without him we can do nothing, let our "inventions" and "plans" be ever so wise; and if we abide not in him, but pursue them, we are cast forth as a branch and withered. Therefore we are commanded by him, through the beloved John, near the close of the revelation of his will to us, to "let that therefore abide in us which we have heard from the beginning," on the day of Pentecost to the time the Lord gave this command through John; and we are assured that if what we have thus heard remain in us, and we govern our conduct by it, we shall continue in the Son and in the Father; and that whosoever transgresseth [violates this law] and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God; but he that abideth in this doctrine of Christ, hath both the Father and the Son.

Notice, that getting into and abiding in the Son and in the Father is an individual work; "he that abideth in me;" "if a man love me," and "if a man abide not in me," etc. Hence it is not collective nor congregational, but individual abiding in him that is taught. And hence to labor to bring about the thing prayed for by the Lord, is not to labor to unite ecclesiasticisms, but to unite the saints individually, not in an ecclesiastical body, but in the Lord Jesus Christ; for God's "plan" is to "gather together in one all things in Christ," Eph. i. 10; to "gather together in one the children of God that were scattered abroad." John xi. 52. And that one is Christ, not an ecclesiasticism. When in Christ they are in one body, he being the Head, and his commandments are paramount and govern the action of the whole body and of every member of it. All the members are in him and in the Father. This is what the Lord prays for, and this is the oneness that must be brought about to convince the world that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God. All the saints that believe in the Lord through the apostles' word, must thus be one in the Father and in the Son, and thus "made perfect in one," that the world "may know" that the Father has sent the Son.

Can the saints thus be one in Christ and in God, and be in apostasy, too? Can they keep the Lord's commandments, while doing "their own works," and following "their own inventions?" Ps. cvi. 29, 39. Certainly not.—Hence the Church, the body of Christ, must be purified from apostasy, and abandon all apostate practices, before it can be one in the sense of the Lord's prayer; and it is necessary that it be so before the world can be converted. To effect this is the work the Lord commands us all to be engaged in. We all earnestly desire the Universal spread of the Lord's kingdom over the human race. We are all satisfied that the saints must be one to effect that object. But how many, or how few of us are willing to drop all human "inventions," go to work in good faith, and labor to have the saints "made perfect in one," as the Lord prays for them to be? Who is willing to go to work honestly, to bring about the answer to the Lord's prayer? "The time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God."—1 Pet. iv. 17. The Lord's "fan is in his hand, and he will thoroughly purge his floor." Matt. iii. 12; Luke iii. 17. We of "this reformation," who claim, par excellence, to keep the Lord's commandments, and them alone, ought actually to do what we propose to do, and drop everything not commanded by the Lord, and thus aid the Lord in this thorough purgation, honestly and in good faith, and not be seduced either to set up any "inventions" of our own, or to adopt and fall back upon and practice any of the many apostate practices that are rife in our day and generation among professed Christians.—Many of us profess to have great zeal for missionary work, and to have the gospel over the whole world; a very desirable thing with all who love the Lord. Well, here we are taught that the first thing to do to effect that object is, to purge the saints of apostasy, and thus unite them all in one, in the Father and in the Son, as the Lord prays that they should be one. Until that is done, it is folly to attempt to convert the world by any of our 'inventions,' devices, or 'plans.' The Lord informs us that without him we can do nothing. Then, let us go to work in good faith to make them one, as the Father and Son are one. To do so, we must induce them to let that abide in them which we have heard from the beginning of the gospel, as called in the Scripture; or, as stated by bro. Campbell forty years ago, we must go back to the ancient gospel and ancient order of things. He labored faithfully, thirty or forty years, to get the saints back to them, and to make great progress in that direction, but did not get half way back to them before he was called away. His labors were a great benefit to the cause of the Lord, and to me individually, for which I am thankful to the God and Father of us all. Shall not we travel on back to the ancient gospel and ancient order of things? or shall we stop (if not retrograde) and build us a booth in the border of the great city, and thus add another to the number of her children? This question is addressed by the Lord to each of his saints, and each must answer for himself, as he will have to give account of himself to God.—Jer. Smith, in the A. C. Review.

Remarks. When friend S. Says:" "We of this reformation, have been, and still are very properly insisting" &c., he means the body generally known as Campbellites. We are glad that they do insist so strongly on that point? But we must wonder whether it ever occurred to J. S. that the Brethren have done, and still are doing, the same thing. Does he know that we insisted on the essentuality of the same union long before "this reformation" was founded? Is he aware that we, long before "this reformation," insisted, and do yet insist, that to be one, according to our Savior's words, we must abide in his doctrine—keep his commands?—These are the facts; and consequently this reformation" is no reformation at all upon these points.

But friend J. S. says, the command —"Let that therefore abide in us which we have heard from the beginning," means, "on the day of Pentecost," &c. Certainly; but it means more. Our friend, who is in favor of traveling "back to the ancient gospel and ancient order of things," does not go back quite far enough. A. Campbell got back in some things to the day of Pentecost; but J. S. rightly admits, that he "did not get half way back there (to the ancient gospel and order) before he was called away."—With this we fully agree; and we will add that his [illegible] have not gone back one step farther since: they follow closely in his steps ever since; and so they will continue to do, unless they go with those who before "this reformation," got back farther, even into the life and teachings of him who revealed "the ancient gospel and ancient order of things." Truly those who get back only to the day of Pentecost, do build their "booth in the border of the great city."

J. W. B.

An Affecting Scene.

A scene occurred at Calvary Cemetery on Thursday afternoon, the occasion being the burial of the father and mother of four children residing in Henry street in New York. The weather was so inclement that the friends who accompanied the remains decided to let the children remain in the carriages, but their earnest pleadings, with tearful eyes, to see their mothers grave, and their wish was granted. Both coffins were carried to the grave and the youngest little girl, who seemed unconscious of what was transpiring, carressed the coffin of the mother with childish simplicity, uttering the most endearing terms of, "Poor mama," "Nice mama," "Will mama come home." &c. The older sister took the little prattler by the hand, and brought her to the other side of the grave. As the grave digger lowered the coffin to its final resting-place and threw the first shovel of clay, the children simultaneously let one piercing cry, which echoed over the grave-yard, bringing tears to eyes of all present. Many of the men, unable to gaze on the sad scene, turned and walked away. It was with difficulty the children were persuaded to leave the grave; and as they were about to depart, the little ones, following the example of the oldest, knelt down on the new-made grave, and offered up prayers to their Creator, for the spiritual welfare of their father and mother whom death had deprived them of in one day.

It is not required that a man shall always be perfect in order to be a true Christian. But it is required that he should be a sincere seeker after perfection. It is required that he [illegible] forward, and [illegible] up the straight and narrow way of life.

Christian Family Companion

Tyrone City, Pa., Oct 3, 1871.

About Ourself.

For some time past we have been so quiet in these columns, that it appears to us to be necessary to "give an account of ourself," in order to assure our readers that we are still connected with the editorial corps of the C. F. C.

The last public act we remember prior to our late reticence, was a visit to Stone Valley, Huntingdon county, in company with brethren Joseph W. Beer, and Wm. H. Quinn, where we attended a lovefeast at the house of brother Wm. Miller. Brother Bud Harshberger met us at Petersburg, entertained us over night, and returned us thither again. Brother Joseph R. Hanawalt, presiding elder, was in attendance at the meeting. We had a pleasant, and we trust a profitable season. The Brethren of Stone Valley are without a minister in their midst at this time; but that matter can easily be remedied. All they need do is to hold an election. They have been praying long enough for the Lord to send them one; we propose that they now give the Lord a chance to answer their prayers by making choice of a servant through his agent, the Church.

Upon our return from said visit, and before we had time to write out a report, we were taken down with Dysentery and Intermittent Fever, from which there were some fears we might not recover. However, the Lord blessed the means used, and in about ten days we were up again.—About that time we received urgent appeals from our guardians at Dale City, to pay them a visit to give some farther instructions regarding our office building, now in course of construction. Accordingly, though rather weak, we started on the 12th and arrived on the 13th, and by the invigorating air, and excitement of travel, we were soon in usual health and spirits. We had intended to return in a few days, but found our presence to be required until the 22nd, when we returned, and now once more occupy the editorial chair, for the first time in good order for a month.

Our new office is rapidly approaching completion, and will be a model of convenience and comfort. We are already indebted to our Brethren of Somerset county for their assistance, and especially to brethren C. G. Lint and Dr. Beachly for their indefatigable labors in advancing our interests. It is now quite certain, unless some unforeseen circumstance will interfere, that our office will be completed at the expected time, and we shall be able to occupy it by the 16th instant. Our present arrangements are to leave Tyrone on the morning of the 13th inst., and leave Pittsburg on the morning of the 14th, and arrive at Dale City at noon. After the 10th instant, therefore, we should be addressed at Dale City, Somerset county, Pa.

We returned home on the 22nd ultimo, at midnight, and found all well, but very uneasy on account of our delay beyond the time appointed for return. We did not meet with the Brethren in public worship, having been at Pittsburg on business, and were delayed until noon on Sunday.

Grapes.

"When thou comest into thy neighbor's vineyard, then thou mayest eat grapes thy fill, at thine own pleasure; but thou shalt not put any into thy vessel." Deut. 23: 24.

The above is the law of Moses upon the subject alluded to. And we presume it would be submitted to, at the present time, though perhaps not always without some uneasiness. We do not understand the text that we are allowed to step over into our neighbors vineyard for the purpose of feasting upon his fruits; but that if business or occasion should call us there, we may satisfy the appetite freshly sharpened by the sight of the luscious clusters around us. But we are to bear none away with us. This however will not prevent the master of the vineyard from having them gathered and sending them to whomsoever he will. Brother Peter L. Swine, of Shirleysburg Pa., has used this privilege and has sent us from his fertile garden, a box of the most delicious grapes we have had the pleasure of tasting for many days. There is an advantage in receiving them in this way, as it affords us an opportunity of sharing with the family. Brother Swine and all who participated in forwarding the favor, have the thanks of the entire Companion family. May his vines enlarge commensurately with his generosity.

The Almanac.

The Almanac will not be ready for mailing until the first day of November. We are delaying it until after our removal, in order to save extra expense in transferring, and also to perfect our list of ministers. In the meanwhile we have opened a book for entering orders, and those who come first shall be first served. We shall issue but one edition, and that edition will be regulated by the number of orders on hand at the time of going to press. Price:

Single copies, post-paid,		10
Half dozen,	"	40
Per dozen,	"	75
Per hundred, by express,		6 00

Remember that after the 10th instant all orders must be addressed to H. R. Holsinger, Dale City, Somerset County, Penn'a. The cash should accompany the order.

Expected Visit.

We have the promise of, and are consequently expecting a visit by our brother Jesse P. Hetrick, of Armstrong Co. He will be with us at Tyrone on Friday eve., Oct. 6th, when we expect to have our last meeting in our hired room in Tyrone. Other brethren and sisters we hope will be with us, both here and at our Love-feast at Warrior's Mark, on the 7th instant.

Brother Hetrick, by divine permission, will attend the rotation of Love-feasts as follows: Lewistown, 11th; McVeytown, 13th; Aughwick, 16th; Clover Creek, 20th; Yellow Creek, 24th, and Duncansville, 26th. We recommend him to the brethren of middle Pennsylvania as an earnest, intelligent worker for good.

THE Illustrated Christian Weekly for September 30, is an unusually good number of this excellent weekly. "Asking a Blessing" from a painting by Prof. Jordan, is a sweet picture of lowly life, exquisite in its design and execution. Illustrations are given of "Woodward's Gardens," the Central Park of San Francisco. A biographical sketch with portrait is given of "Dr. H. L. Mansel," the famous author. Prof. Baird contributes an illustrated article on "Count Raymond and the Bishop of Toulouse."

The children's wants are attended to in the illustrated article "The Two Umbrella Houses," and other sketches. The leading editorial, "Sowing and Reaping," should be carefully read by every parent throughout the land.

Answers to Correspondents.

JOSEPH ZOOK. Thank you for the explanation. It relieves us of all fears.

DAVID J. MILLER. David Esbleman is an elder in the church. Know nothing of his remedy for Dyspepsia. We have inserted his advertisement on the strength of his reputation in the church. Thank you for your encouragements.

C. S. DR. You are charged with the subscription of Jeremiah Long.—If upon examination the articles referred to, are found worthy, they may appear in the manner you specify; but they must first be examined.

MISCELLANEOUS

I'm Growing Old.

BY JOHN G. SAXE.

My days pass pleasantly away,
My nights are blessed with sweetest sleep,
I feel no symptoms of decay,
I have no cause to mourn or weep;
My foes are impotent and shy,
My friends are neither false nor cold;
And yet of late I often sigh—
I'm growing old!

My growing talk of olden times,
My growing thirst for early news,
My growing apathy to rhymes,
My growing love of easy shoes,
My growing hate of crows and noise,
My growing fear of catching cold,
All tell me, in the plainest voice—
I'm growing old!

I'm growing fonder of my staff,
I'm growing dimmer in the eyes,
I'm growing fainter in my laugh,
I'm growing deeper in my sighs,
I'm growing careless in my dress,
I'm growing frugal of my gold,
I'm growing wise, I'm growing—yes—
I'm growing old!

I feel it in my changing taste,
I see it in my changing hair,
I see it in my growing waist,
I see it in my growing heir;
A thousand hints proclaim the truth,
As plain as truth was ever told,
That even in my wanted youth—
I'm growing old!

Ah me! my very laurels breathe
The tale in my reluctant ears;
And every boon the hours bequeath
But makes me debtor to the years;
Even flattery's honeyed words declare
The secret she would fain withhold,
And tell me in "How young you are!"
I'm growing old!

Thanks for the years whose rapid flight
My sombre muse too gladly sings;
Thanks for the gleams of golden light
That tint the darkness of their wings;
The light that beams from out the sky,
Those heavenly mansions to unfold,
There all are blest, and none shall sigh
I'm growing old!

Abandoning French Fashions

A charming way to wring out an old fashion and ring in a new was that adopted by some ladies of Berlin with reference to the chignon. The national spirit now at white heat in Germany is, if anything, more ardent among the women than the men, as indeed it always has been and will be the world over. So the fair patriots resolved to reflect more of the German nationality in their dress, and abandon and henceforth ignore French fashions, but more especially the really odious chignon. Accordingly, the sixty young ladies, daughters of the wealthiest citizens, who were selected to welcome the returning army at Brandenburg Gate, had a meeting, in which the question of their attire was settled. It was that of Margaret in Gaulbach's sketch of her first meeting with Faush, which has been thoroughly identified with the German maiden in all art, and especially familiarized of late by the "Margueritas" of the stage. Two plaits of their own hair, hanging down the back, was to be indispensable, and they were pledged mutually, and to the municipal authorities, on no account to use false hair. These sixty wealthy young ladies ought certainly to be more than a match for one empress, as she is not so much of an empress as she was, and they will receive the congratulations of the entire world if they carry the day against false hair.

LIFE WITHOUT TRIALS.—Would you wish to live without a trial?—Then you would wish to die but half a man. Without trial you cannot guess at your own strength. Men do not learn to swim on a table; they must go into deep water, and buffet the surges. If you wish to understand their true character—if you would know their whole strength—of what they are capable—throw them overboard! Over with them—and if they are worth saving, they will swim ashore themselves.

Shaking Hands.

I maintain that the shaking of hands, rightly administered, is a means of grace. You, my dear sir, are established, and every one knows you to be a solid man. There is man beside you just fighting his battle, and making his way. You know him, and nod to him. Take him by the hand, my dear sir. It will do him good, and if he be cast down a little, as men will sometimes be, it may encourage him. "Our minister shook hands with me." What made that hulking fellow, too big to be a boy, too raw to be a man, assume that fair and godly [illegible] went [illegible] The truth [illegible] him that it was more than a sermon.

CORRESPONDENTS.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Dear Brother:—As I was starting for West Virginia, I passed the post-office and received a letter from you in answer to one written to you. I feel thankful for your information to me on the subject

I will give you a brief sketch of our trip to West Virginia. I started on the first day of September; got in company with brother Jacob Zeigler, and a deacon brother, at the foot of Shenandoah mountain, about fifteen miles from home. We went together to brother Jacob Hoover's, in Highland county; stayed over night, distance from home, 34 miles.

Sept. 2nd we started to Hightown, Highland county; got in company with brother Joseph Miller (minister) and brother John Sanger, deacon at Montirey, the county east of Highland. We got to Hightown by 12 o'clock; our appointment was at 3 o'clock at this place. Traveled one night after preaching, to friend Jacob Hevner's, where we staid over night.

Sept. 3d we started for the top of Allegany Mountain; arrived in due time for an appointment at 11 o'clock. The church is a Methodist church, somewhat dilapidated by the ravages of the late war, but nevertheless a large congregation came together.—We were requested to preach two sermons, which we did, with an intermission of half an hour. After preaching we made arrangements for a Lovefeast. The people seemed to be very attentive to the hearing of the word. Stayed with bother John Varner over night; here I found a a very old family relic,—a German Bible, that, from the date or its commencement, 1522, was 349 years old, was finished in 1534, twelve years in printing and binding. From the time it was finished it was 337 years old. The day and month it was commenced and finished is not given.

Sept. 4th —This morning, in company with brother Varner, we left the Parker's long pike, on top of Allegany Mountain, going westward to back Allegany, to brother Adam Hevner's, in Pocahantis county, by one o'clock. Here we met with brother Robert Carry, minister in the second degree. Had preaching at brother Hevner's at four o'clock. There was a tolerable congregation at the place. In the evening we had a Lovefeast, which was attended with much interest by the spectators. There were about twenty-one members at the table, and was a very interesting meeting to all present.

Sept. 5th —On Tuesday we had preaching at the school house near brother Hevner's. The people turned out very well; two members received by baptism, after preaching. The next day the brethren gave us a rest from our labor. We, not feeling much wearied in the service of the Lord, proposed to have preaching at the same place, at ten o'clock. The appointment was made at once. We staid with friend James Gum over night, who has had the kingdom to come very near him, though he has not accepted it yet.

Sept 6th.—This morning we went to the school house to fill an appointment; met with a good congregation. Two applicants before preaching, and after preaching, three more. We then went to Greenbriar River (distance two miles) where baptism was administered, which, to me, was one of those heavenly places. Here the son set an example for the father and the mother; it was one of those joyful meetings, the father coming up from his new birth out of the water, and the son meeting him at the water's edge, with tears in his eyes, praising God, and saying he thanked the Lord that his prayers were heard in behalf of his father, that he might be a new creature in Christ. Very few of the concourse who witnessed the scene did not shed tears. We left the point on the river at 3 o'clock; traveled about twelve miles in a southern direction to brother Carry's; staid with him over night.

Sept. 7th.—We started to Clover Creek appointment (at 11 o'clock) which we reached in time The meeting was held in a vacant dwelling house, where a large congregation assembled. After preaching two were added to the church by baptism. After the services we went to brother Peter Shinnyberger's, a short distance from where we had meeting. Here we enjoyed some of brother Peter's fine, large peaches, after which we returned to the vacant dwelling, prepared the tables, went to the examination, and had a Lovefeast. A very large congregation for that mountainous county, and good behavior by the spectators.

Sept. 8th.—We left Clover Creek this morning, traveled north-east (distance 22 miles) to Mrt. Riley's. After dinner resumed our journey to the Sulphur Spring school house to fill an appointment at three o'clock. Had a very small congregation, though they gave us their attention. From there we started in company with brother Wilfony, who met us at this point, for his house; it was after dark when we reached his house, and here we put up for the night.

Sept. 9th.—This moning we left brother Wilfong's for the church on the top of the Allegany. Here we found the brethren making tables, and preparing for the Lovefeast. Brother Miller and self went to brother John Varner's house, got dinner and our beasts cared for, then got down the old German Bible, leafed through it, gazing upon its illustrations. As I cannot read German, brother Miller read a little for us untill it was time to go to meeting to fill the appointment at four o'clock, where a very large congregation assembled. After preaching we went to the examination, closed by prayer, had intermission half an hour, then took up, commenced the ordinances of the house about sundown. This was the first one ever held within twenty miles, and it was quite a new practice to the greater part of the congregation.—The people gathered from far and near. We had good order by the spectators, except a very few who were drunk with spirits, (not spiritually drunk), and the meeting broke up about half past eight o'clock; appointment for to-morrow at ten o'clock; stayed with brother Varner over night.

Sept. 10th.—Had preaching at the place at ten o'clock (Sunday) to the largest congregation, it is said, that was ever seen at that church. We broke up at twelve o'clock and started back on the Parkersburg road to Hightown; had preaching there at half past three o'clock; left at five o'clock, rode twelve miles to brother Jacob Hoover's, put up with him for the night.

Sept 11th.—This morning we started for home. Four of us rode together four miles to McDowel, Highland county, where brother Miller and Sanger left us, brother Zeigler and myself journeying together until in the afternoon, where we parted at the foot of Shenandoah mountain for our homes. I arried at home about sunset, finding my family enjoying good health. I felt thankful to God for his protecting hand over us during my little mission of love with the brethren.

My dear brethren, we would suggest a few thoughts to our ministers. The time of our lovefeasts is coming on. We all like to be there, as they are heavenly places when we meet together. But let me call your attention to one thing: Ought we not to labor where we can do the most good? You will all answer "yes." How is it here in the valley? We go to our Lovefeasts; we see from twelve to fifteen, and sometimes more than twenty ministering brethren behind the table, where it only requires two or three to conduct the services. Two or three will do all the preaching, and the rest are idle, while hungry souls are calling you to come to them and preach the gospel, while you are listening to what you have often heard. If we were somewhere preaching, we might win a soul to Christ, and in the end bring a bright jewel home to God. "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore the lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest."—Matthew 27: 38.

SAMUEL DRIVER,

Swoop's Depot, Va.

Election of Speakers.

In the present volume No. 30, appeared the above, from a brother, I suppose, stating that a certain young brother says that God wants him to preach, but the church don't elect him; and if I understand the writer he is rather in favor that he should preach, without the consent of the Church.

As a proof he refers to Paul, that he preached and was not sent by the church. But the way I look at the matter, I think Paul was as legally sent as the rest of the Apostles; for we read in the 13th verse of the chapter referred to, that the Lord told Annias that he "is a chosen vessel unto me." And we read in Eph., 3: 7, "Whereof I was made a minister."—And in 1 Tim. 2, 7, "Whereunto I am ordained a preacher," and in 2 Tim., 1, 11: "Whereunto I am appointed a preacher &c." From the foregoing passages we must conclude that he was sent to preach, and he did not commence to preach against the will of him who is the head of the church, for we learn in the word of truth, that Christ sent the twelve Apostles, and afterwards the Seventy. And farther we learn that when Judas fell that the church or Apostles elected one in his place. Now we know that Christ is the head of the church, and so I claim that as Christ had the right to choose his ministers among his followers, so the church has the right to choose whom she sees fit for the office. And if the Church is right, I presume she will elect the persons that are designed for the purpose. And farther I think if a brother preaches against the will of the church he may have a wrong Spirit that tells him that God wants him to preach.

NOAH B. BLOUGH.

In Companion No. 35 Current Volume, J. E. Bouser says; "Christ sent out at one time seventy disciples to preach," &c. As we read in Luke 10th Chap. It was told them to "Carry neither purse, nor Scrip, nor Shoes: and salute no man by the way: and into whatsoever house he enter first say peace be to this house." Brother Bowser wishes to know why it is that this is not practised among the Brethren now. In regard to the Carrying of purse, Scrip, and Shoes, I would say, Simply because Christ told his disciples afterwards "but now he that has a purse let him take it, and likewise his Scrip, and he that has no sword let him sell his garment and buy one.

And as for not saying "peace be to this house,"—

Christ told his disciples: "think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but the Sword." Now a sword is not a token of peace, and Christ says farther: "I am come to set a man at variance against his father, &c.—and and a man's foes shall be they of his own household."

Now when Christ says: "he that has no sword let him sell his garment and buy one," this must be understood spiritually, for he says; "the words I speak unto you they are spirit, and they are life." We must exchange our garment of self righteousness, of our own conceit, and of our own make, for the sword of the spirit, which is the word of God.

The Apostle will have us to be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might. Put on the whole armor of God, that we may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil, for we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities—against spiritual wickedness in high places; then again he recommends the whole armor of God, that we may be able to withstand in the evil day. Paul did not seem to have much rest or peace while in this world. When the time of his departure was at hand he said:" I have fought a good fight I have finished my course, I have kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up a crown of righteousnes for me, and not to me only.

JOSEPH MYERS.

East Berlin, Pa.

Brother Holsinger:—Yesterday I returned from Alexandria, Va., where I had been called to preach, and Baptized a believer, in the Potomac.—Had good attention to the word preached. Found a son there of a brother and sister, who manifested love for the Brethren.

Enclosed you will find seventy-five cents, for which you will please send the Companion,—commencing at the time of our last A. M., including the minutes, to the address of our brother Richard Sheckells, box 8, Alexandria, Va; who wishes our ministering brethren when convenient or when traveling that way, to write to him before hand, and make it a point to stop and give them meetings; for he is confident that good can be accomplished there. My health has improved, thank the Lord.

J. D. TROSTLE.

Dear Companion:—By the kindness of God I am still among his spared objects, and my health so far restored that I am able to visit my neighbors, and go to the near places of meeting; but am not able to perform ministerial duty, owing to weakness in my breast.

I thank God for his remembrance of me, and ask the prayers of my brethren, everywhere in my behalf

A. L FUNCK

Shirleysburg, Pa.

For the Companion.

Lovefeast at Middlecreek.

The long looked for time came at last, and the feast at Middlecreek is one of the things that have been.

The preparatory arrangements were consummated in a rich display of fine horses, buggies, and well burnished harness, with their silvered trimmings, on the one part, while on the other you could notice what the busy hands of mantua-makers, and tailors effected, for many of the young and fastidious of our present generation. Of the above we had a good Supply; and in truth it suits a certain class of religious people very well.—They seem to be in the very height of their glory, when they can show themselves in style as being of the first Christians ornamentally. However, with this we could bear, and all this would not make the humble followers of Christ any the worse, by seeing these things, nor does it disturb him in his religious meditations; but when these characters form themselves into small companies for the sole purpose of disturbing the meetings of the more humble it is very distressing. Of this the Middlecreek brethren, I presume had more than a desirable quantity, and I have no doubt but what these things are a preconceived and prearranged thing. Our pedo baptists and others have said that meetings of this kind are worse than gambling houses; nothing but confusion and noise. We acknowledge this in part, but let me ask the question, who is it or who are they that make this confussion? Are the brethren doing it? Certainly not; but the very ones that say our children are not receiving proper instruction, because they are not catechised, and hence are brought up in ignorance and superstition, are among the number. Persons that claim membership of the body of Christ, and who have been brought up in the strictest sense catechumens and that after all the disturbance they make in the way of talking loud, not taking their hats off in time of preaching, standing up when there are plenty of seats vacant, swearing, getting intoxicated, fighting, &c, and by the first opportunity stand around the altar looking very sanctimonious, the officiating clergyman knowing all about their conduct at such places, distributes among them the broken emblems, as though this made no difference. Oh, how I wish and pray that something like the following would be inserted in the catechism: Question,—what becomes every baptized, catechised and confirmed member of our religious society? Answer,—That he behaves himself as it becometh a civilized Christian, and that he act not as do the heathen. If something like this were carried out among such, there would certainly be a great change manifest in s ome localities.

Notwithstanding all the noise in and about the house, the brethren and sisters had a refreshing meeting, and a pleasant waiting before the Lord; the meeting was well represented by communicants; much love and zeal are certainly prominent features among the brethren there; and the Ministers are wide awake to the interest of the church, and have as an encouragement to their labors occasional additions to their number, by baptism, I think upon the whole, the Middle Creek branch, has of late years revived a great deal.

The laboring brethren present, from other branches of our fraternity, were Eld. Jacob M. Thomas and Jacob Beeghly from Sandy Creek, West Va. John Johnson from George's Creek, Pa., D. D. Horner. ——— Murray, and Jeremiah Foust, from Indian Creek; Eld. Jacob Blough and George Schrock, Berlin; W. M. Horner and the writer, from the Elklick branch, and Jacob Speicher, Quemahoning.

C. G. Lint.

Correction.

I wish to inform you that our Germantown, Pa., Lovefeast will take place on Thursday evening, the 26th of October, and not on the 16th, which was a misunderstanding.

James S. Kirk.

Announcements.

We have appointed our communion meeting in the Duncansville branch, Blair county, Pa., on the 26th and 27th of Oct., commencing at 4 o'clock The usual invitation is given. As this immediately follows the Yellow Creek lovefeast, the brethren there will please direct the strange ministering brethren, who may be with them, this way on their homeward journey.

J. A. Sell.

We have appointed a Lovefeast in the Howard congregation, in Howard county, Ind., 12 miles west of Kokomo, on the 20th of October next, to commence at 10 o'clock A. M. The usual invitation is extended.—Kokomo is the stopping point.

In behalf of the church,

Geo. Brubaker.

The Brethren in the Thorn Apple branch, Mich., will hold their semi-annual lovefeast at their meeting-house, on the 7th and 8th of October. All are invited to be with us, and especially ministers. Hastings, on the Grand River Valley R. R., is the place to stop off. J. G. Wiley,

Campbell Mich.

Walnut Level, Wells county, Ind., Oct. 27st.

Dry Valley, Pa., Oct. 11th, 1 o'clock P. M.

Clover Creek, Blair county, Pa. Oct 20th 4 o'clock, P. M.

Raccoon Creek congregation, Montgomery county, Ind., Oct. 26th. Stop at Ladoga.

Aughwich, Huntingdon county, Pa, Oct, 16th, and 17th.

Mohican Church, Wayne county, Ohio, Oct, 25th.

Buffalo Valley, Oct, 20th 1 P, M.

Dry Valley, Oct, 11, 1 P. M.

Antietam. Washington county, Md, Oct, 24, 10 A. M.

Dunning's Creek, Oct. 21th, 4 P. M.

Yellow Creek, New Enterprise, Bedford County, Pa., Oct. 24th, 4 o'clock P. M.

East meeting-house, Pine Creek congregation, St. Joseph county, Mich., Oct 19th, 4 o'clock P. M.

Warrior's Mark (Tyrone, Pa.,) Oct, 7th.

Four Mile, Fayette Co. Ind Oct, 4th.

Grundy County, Mo., Oct, 7th and 8th.

Beaver Creek, Wash., Co., Md., Oct, 12th.

Conemaugh Cambria county, Pa, Oct, 5th, 3 o'clock.

Mineral Creek, Johnson county, Mo, Oct, 14th.

Brush Creek, Ind., Oct., 1th.

Elklick, Somerset Co., Pa., Oct., 21st.

Mississinawa, Delaware Co., Ind., Oct., 20th.

Bachelor Run, Carrol Co., Ind., Oct., 24th.

Ozaukie, Jefferson Co., Kansas, Oct., 21 and 22.

Pine Creek, Saint Joseph Co., Ind., Oct 19th.

Waterloo, Iowa, Oct., 7th.

Panther Creek, Woodford Co., Ill., Oct., 28th. District meeting at the same place, Oct., 30th.

Hatfield, Mont. Co., Pa., Oct., 21st.

Lost Creek, (Mifflintown) Pa., Oct., 7, 8,

Mineral Creek, Johnson county, Mo. Oct. 14th.

Monticello, White county, Ind., Oct. 20 21; 2 o'clock P. M.

Wayne county, miles N. Ohio, 12 W. of Wooster, Oct. 25th, 10 o'clock, A. M.

Antietam congregation, Welty's meeting-house, Washington county, Md., Oct, 24th, 10 o'clock, A. M.

Buffalo Valley, Pa., Oct. 20th, 1 o'clock

MARRIED.

By the undersigned at his residence, August 27th, brother SAM'L R. FIKE and sister ANNIE PECK, both of Summit township, Somerset county, Pa.
JOEL GNAGY.

At the residence of John B. Frederick, near Woodbury, by the undersigned, Sept. 3d, Mr. JACOB CARSON, of Bedford county, Pa., and Miss SOPHIA FREDERICK, of Blair county, Pa.

At the residence of the undersigned, Sept. 15th GEO. N. BRUMBAUGH and Miss MARY GATES.

Also, at the same time, Mr. E. HAGEY and MARY N. BRUMBAUGH, all of Blair county, Pa.
S. A. MOORE.

By the undersigned, September 23rd, at the residence of the bride's father, brother NOAH M. BRUBAKER, and sister MAGDALENE FRANTZ, both of Wabash county, Indiana.
NOAH CRUMRINE.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with obituary notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In the Middle Creek congregation, Somerset county, Pa., March 30th, JOSEPH, son of brother H. J., and sister Catharine WEIMER, aged 1 month and 19 days. Funeral services by brother Tobias Meyers.

In the same congregation, Sept. 2nd, sister ELIZABETH WEIMER, wife of brother Joseph Weimer, aged 64 years, 5 months and 18 days. She was an examplary christian, one whose loss we deeply feel; yet we sorrow not as those who have no hope

During her brief illness she remembered the words of her Savior, by the apostle, when he says, "Is any sick among you, let him call for the elders of the church, and let them annoint him with oil in the name of the Lord." After this was done she expressed herself resigned to the will of the Lord, and died in the hope of a blessed immortality. The occasion was improved by brother J. D. Miller and Tobias Meyers, to a large concourse of friends and relatives.
J. T. MEYERS.

In the Aughwick Branch, Huntingdon co., Pa., July 3d, of Congestion of the Brain, brother HENRY WICKS, aged 59 years and 8 months, less 1 day. Funeral services conducted by the Brethren, from 1 Thess. 4th chapter.

In the Dry Creek congregation, Linn Co., Iowa, September 30th, of Typhoid Fever, sister ELIZABETH HORN; aged 25 years and 10 months. The deceased was formerly from Franklin Co., Pa. She leaves a husband and five small children to mourn her loss. Funeral services by the brethren.
Thomas G. Snyder.

In the Irvin Creek congregation, Dunn county, Wis., on the 4th day of May, son of brother Peter and sister Hannah STOCKMAN, aged 15 years, 2 months and 23 days. Disease, Consumption. Funeral occasion improved by brother John Pippinger and the writer.
JOSEPH BRUNK.

September 15th, in Shirley township, Huntingdon county, Pa., ISAAC LUTZ, youngest son of brother Jocob and sister Elizabeth Lutz, aged 23 years, 11 months and 13 days. The funeral services were held in the Brethren's meeting house, in Germany Valley, where we tried to improve the occasion by speaking to a large congregation from Eccl. xii. 13, 14.
JOHN SPANGLER.

In the Bachelor Run church, Carroll Co. Ind., Sept. 5th, sister SUSANNAH OVER HOLSER, (wife of Samuel Overholser, deceased,) aged 66 years, 8 months and a few days. Funeral services by the brethren.
JACOB B. LANDIS.

(Visitor please copy.)

LIST OF MONEYS received for subscription, books, &c.,

George Wise,	$4 00	S A Moore	10 00
J D Trostle,	75	J A Long,	1 75
John Nicholson,	1 00	S B Replogle	10 00
Elijah Showalter	1 50	Joseph Brunk,	3 00

Advertisements.

WE will admit a limited number of select advertisements at the following rates
One insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.
No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations.

Wm. M. Lloyd, Altoona, Pa. D. T. Caldwell, Tyrone Pa.
LLOYD, CALDWELL & CO.,
BANKERS,
Receive monies on deposit, and pay interest if left 6 months, at 4 per cent per annum, or 5 per cent. if left one year.
Special contracts made with parties acting a administrators, executors, guardians, and persons holding monies in trust. Dealers in every description of Stocks and Bonds.—Government Securities made a speciality.
Gold and Silver bought and sold, and a general Banking business transacted

Univrsal Guide for Cutt ing Garments.

By which every family may cut its own garments for men and boys, of twenty six different sizes; for Coats, Pants, Vests, and Shirts, and Ladies' Dress Bodies. Agents wanted to sell State, County, and Family Rights. For Particulars address MILLER & QUINN, Tyrone, Blair Co., Pa

A Card.

Drs. D. Fahrney & Son, Uroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.
7-10-1 yr. pd.

...Harp, ... 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

TYRONE BANK,
TYRONE, PA.
This Bank, intending to do a general banking business, solicits accounts from Banks' Bankers and others. Collections made on all points. Interest allowed on DEPOSITS left on time. Paper discounted on liberal terms.

Wm. P. Orbison,	D. P Gwin,
John Scott,	H. G. Fisher,
Thomas Fisher,	J. H. Glazier,
Wm. Dorris,	G. C. Wilkins,
G W. Garretson,	and others.

A BOOK WHICH EVERY ONE SHOULD POSSESS.

JUST PUBLISHED,—265 pp. 82mo, illustrated with numerous cuts, bound in cloth, $1,50 in paper, $1.00. Free by mail on receipt of price.

FIRST HELP IN ACCIDENTS AND IN SICKNESS.

A Guide in the absence or before the arrival of Medical Assistance. Published with the recommendation of the Highest Medical Authority.

The following are some of the subjects upon which it treats:—Bad Air, Bites, Bleeding, Broken Bones, Bruises, Burns, Choking, Cholera, Cold Contusions, Dislocations, Drowning, Dysentery, Fevers, Fractures, Hanging, Nursing, Poisoning, Scalds, Smallpox, Sprains, Suffocation, Sunstroke, etc., and other Accidents and Sickness where instant aid is needful.

This volume, written by eminent Physicians, is a practical digest of scientific medical-knowledge, so far as relates to that aid which may properly be rendered in cases of Accident and Sickness in the absence of a Physician.

Prepared for the Press by Editors of GOOD HEALTH MAGAZINE.

ALEXANDER MOORE,
Publisher, BOSTON, Mass.

1780 1871
ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK?
Use Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea.
CLEANSE YOUR BLOOD!!

An Alterative and Catharic, or Tonic and Purge combined, for diseases arising from bad blood; such as Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Erysipelas, Worms, Chills and Fever, Scrofula, Pimples, Tetter, &c. TRY IT.

Established 17S in package form Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form which was brought to its present state of preservation and perfection some years later, by Dr. P Fahrney, Chicago, Ill's, who conducts the trade west of Ohio. Great reputation! Many Testimonials! Ask for that prepared at Waynesboro, Pa, and Chicago, Ill's Beware of imitations. Genuine retails at $1 25 per bottle. Druggists and Medicine dealers sell it.

Dr. P. Fahrney's "Health Messenger" gives the history and uses of the BLOOD CLEANSER testimonials, and other information, sent free of charge. Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.
WAYNESBORO, PA.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine, with Drop Feed, new Take-up, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted FIRST CLASS, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted traveling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $200 per month. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. Co.
33 East Union Square, 17th St., New York

BURLINGTON.

Leaving the East and arriving at Chicago or Indianapolis, how shall we reach the West? The best Line is acknowledged to be the C. B. and Q., joined together with the B. & M. Railroad by the Iron Bridge at Burlington, and called the Burlington Route.

The main line of the Route running to Omaha, connects with the great Pacific Roads, and forms to-day the leading route to California. The Middle Branch, entering Nebraska at Plattsmouth, passes through Lincoln, the State Capital, and will this year be finished to Fort Kearney, forming the shortest route across the Continent by over 100 miles.

Another branch of the B. M., diverging at Red Oak, falls into a line running down the Missouri through St. Joe to Kansas City, and all Kansas. Passengers by this route to Kansas, see Illinois, Southern Iowa, and Missouri, and, by a slight divergence, can see Nebraska also.

Lovers of fine views should remember the Burlington Route for its towns "high-gleaming from afar"—its tree-fringed streams—its rough bluffs and quarries—its corn-ocean stretching over the prairies further nthan eye can reach.

Land-buyers will be sure to remember it, for they have friends among the two thousand who have already bought farms from Geo. S. Harris, the Land Commissioner of the B. & M. R. R. at Burlington, Iowa, or among the four thousand home-steaders and pre-emptors who last year filed claims in the Lincoln Land Office, where "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm."

SHORT HAND WRITING.—Students of Phonography and all others who are interested in the art can obtain instruction books Send stamp for price list and tracts.
"AMERICAN PHONETIC DEPOT.
TYRONE, PA.

J. S. THOMAS, &CO.
WHOLESALE GROCERS
and
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
No 235 RACE ST. ABOVE 3RD. PHILADELPHIA.
N. B. Country Produce taken in exchange for goods or sold on commission.

CABINET MAKING & UNDERTAKING

The undersigned keeps on hand and manufactures to order all kinds of Furniture. He is also neatly fitted out for conveying the dead to their last resting place.

Manufacturer of the Common Sense Dasher Washing Machine. Shop at the Cross Roads, near Warrior's Mark, Pa.
JAMES S. COX.

A Washing Machine may be seen and purchased at this office. v6n48tf.

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price, $4.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement; comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol., $2.25. Indispensable.

Life at Home; or the Family and its MEMBERS.—Including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed. The Altar in the House, etc. By Wm. Aikman, $1.50;

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. THOMPSON. Fancy Cloth. $1.00.

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand-book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners, with a Chart for recording the sizes of the different Organs of the Brain, in the Delineation of Character, with upwards of 170 Engravings. Muslin, $1.25.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50;

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By W. PITTINGER. $1.50.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Beautifully Illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth, gilt, beveled boards. Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75 cents.

Any of the above sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

The Phrenological Journal, An Illus- TRATED, First-Class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50, or with the Pious Youth, for $3.00. We commend the JOURNAL to all who want a good Family Magazine, and who does not?

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and state written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to H. R. HOLSINGER, Tyrone, Pa.

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post pain,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	10 30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post pain,	.80
Per dozen; " "	5.50

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.7
Reserved at the office,	2.25
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder, single copy, post paid,	.75
2 copies, by Express,	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	.60
German & English Testaments,	.75

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25
32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION.	25

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 25 cents, postpaid.

Certificates &c.

Marriage Certificate, per doz., post paid, 0.3
CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP. Per doz. 0.2
TRACTS.—RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE, 12 pages five cents single copy; thirty cents a doz.
All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, postoffice county & state written in unmistakable letters.

THE PIOUS YOUTH
A MONTHLY PUBLICATION

Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.

One dollar a year in advance.

THE
Christian Family Companion
Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkers."

The design of the work is to advocate truth expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements; that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
TYRONE, PA

Christian Family Companion

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum

VOLUME VII. TYRONE, PA. TUESDAY, OCT. 01, 1871. NUMBER 41.

For the Companion

What I Know about Preaching. No. 2.

HOW TO HAVE A GOOD MEETING.

If there are several ministers in one church, they should determine among themselves who shall preach and conduct the meeting one Sunday, and who the next, &c. This minister should select his text at least one week beforehand, and study it carefully and prayerfully in all its bearings; and if there is anything in it that he does not fully understand, he should refer to commentaries, and see what the different commentators say about it, and compare their views with his own views, and also with other portions of the Bible that may, perhaps, throw light on it, and thus study and search until he fully understands everything embraced in the text. He should then frame his deliberations into a sermon, and, of course, clothe them with the most beautiful and impressive language he can command.

Thus prepared, he should proceed to the house of God; and when the time for opening the meeting has arrived, rise, announce a hymn, read it, and sing it with the congregation.

After the hymn has been sung, he should not weary the patience and insult the intelligence of his hearers, by telling them that we have come together now at the place appointed for public worship; and that we have now sung a hymn together, &c.

Every one present has seen and heard all this, and knows it just as well as the preacher.

He should not make an attempt to prove that it is necessary to open and close our meeting with prayer; because everyone who attends public worship, expects that services will commence and close by singing and prayer, and admits that it should be so; and an attempt to prove something that is admitted by everybody, is merely an insult to intelligence.

Neither will it be necessary to endeavor to say anything to prepare the minds of the hearers to approach God properly in prayer; for hymns consist in prayer, praises, and thanksgiving, and those who are in a proper state of mind to sing a hymn, will also be fit to go to prayer. Then, as a rule, the preacher should proceed to prayer as soon as singing is finished: "I exhort, therefore, that, first of all, supplication, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men."

After prayer, the congregation can sing another hymn.

Then let the minister rise, announce his text, read it, and deliver his discourse on it, in a clear, full voice, and in a proper style. After he has finished his discourse, he may in a few words appeal to his hearers to make a practical application of the truths which he has presented to them; ask sinners to forsake their ways, and invite them to come into the church. Unfold to them the beauties of religion, and, if possible, persuade them to become good men and women. He should plead with zeal and earnestness; but he should remember, that it is not necessary to be excited and boisterous, in order to be zealous and earnest. The whole sermon, on ordinary occasions, ought never to be more than thirty minutes long.

After he is done preaching he should close the meeting by singing and prayer, and dismiss the congregation at once.

If the minister will conduct his meeting somewhat in accordance with the suggestions we have given, he can rest assured that it will not be his fault if it was not a good meeting.

OCCASIONAL.

Patrick Henry left in his will the following important passage:

"I have now disposed of all my property to my family: there is one thing more I wish I could give them: and that is Christian religion. If they had that, and I had not given them one shilling, they would be rich, and if they had not that, and I had given them all the world, they would be poor.

God thinks more of the good than of the influential.

For the Companion.

Ministers of Christ.

By an examination of the so-called ministers of the gospel of our day, we can not help but divide them into four different classes.

No. 1. Preaches for a pecuniary reward: to make money is the object most desired. In other words, let those denominations who pay their preachers, withhold the money from their reach, and we fear in many of our fashionable churches preaching would soon be a thing of the past. These preachers have their reward in this world; and consequently can not be called the ministers of Christ. I would not be understood that all who are supported by their denominations belong to this class; but only those whose sole reason for preaching is the love of money.

No. 2. Preaches for honor and respect. The ministerial office is one at the present day, which not only is respected by the Christian, but also by the ungodly and the sinner. Who of us has not heard some of the most professional swearers of our day, say, "I dare not swear, while the preacher is in my presence?" And so we might go on from one to another, to show that the vilest of sinners honor and respect the preacher; and were they despised instead of honored, we would not have many of No. 2. I am glad to say that the brotherhood is free of No. 1; but whether we are free of No. 2, I cannot, and will not, answer. Every brother (minister) should examine himself, But one thing is certain, that he who preaches for honor and respect of men, has, well as those who preach for money only, his reward only in this world, and can not be called a minister of Christ. So we pass on to,

No. 3. He preaches just because the church to which he belongs wants him to preach. This, then, brings us nearer home. We often hear brethren say, and right in the beginning of their sermon, "I only arise to show obedience" —the church wants me to preach, or I would not be here. Now brethren, if you have no other reason, then certainly there is something wrong somewhere. Do not think that I only want to criticise you; God knows I love you dearly, and I wish Christ would and could call you all, and every one of you, his true and faithful servants; and if I should be successful in arousing your energies in behalf of Christ and his cause, God be blessed for it. I say, in my estimation, you do wrong in telling the congregation that you only get up to speak because the church wants you to preach. If this is your only reason, then, of course, you must look to the church for your reward; and I fear you are not as well rewarded as is No. 1; for the brotherhood does not pay her preachers well enough to live as well as some of our money preachers do. Therefore examine the matter carefully, and form No. 4. They preach, not for pecuniary reward, not for honor and respect, not only because the church wants them to preach, but because Christ wants them to persuade sinners to "flee from the wrath to come." They remember that the Lord died that sinners might live, and that one soul is worth more than the whole world. They labor for the salvation of the soul. They know, that they owe it to God and his cause to do all in their power to save souls. They strive with all their power, to be a pattern for the flock; all who come in contact with them learn to know, that they are in the service of Jesus. Oh! brethren, minister, be on your guard! you are watched more carefully yet than we. Not long ago I was told by a member of the U. B. Church, that some of his brethren had worked for a preacher, and never had heard him pray, not even ask a blessing at his table. Of course I could not, and would not, believe. Said I,—"Can it be possible, that men who admonish their brethren, Sunday after Sunday, to live Christian lives, at the same time, forget their duty so far?" What impression will it make on the world, to hear such reports about men who claim to be ambassadors in Christ's stead? The devil certainly will take advantage of it; because he is always on the lookout for such things. O dear brethren, you who have all you can desire in this world; you, who nothing, we dare say, can hinder from serving God in spirit and in truth,—if you do not come up to the requirements of the Gospel, what can be expected of us, whose hands & minds must be engaged to make an honest living for us and those whom the Lord has entrusted to our care?

But in conclusion, let ministers, and all, strive to do the will of the Lord, so that, when this life's journey is ended, we all can be, and will be, admitted, as true servants of God, into his eternal kingdom, is my earnest prayer. Amen.

M. HADY.

For the Companion.

Feetwashing.

He that rejected me, and receiveth not my word, hath one that judgeth him; the word that I have spoken the same shall judge him in the last day." John 12: 48.

This is the language of our Lord, just before he instituted three of the solemn ordinances in the house of God; to wit, Feetwashing, the Lord's Supper; and the communion. With this impressive language, sounding in our ears, and recollecting the great fact, that each one of us must bow the knee to Jesus, and give an account to God of our stewardship here in his moral vineyard, and be justified or condemned in strict accordance with our faithful obedience, or disobedience to the word spoken, how earnestly and faithfully should we search for the true intent and meaning of the word. And when we have a command of God, and it exemplified by the head of the Church, and his instruction to us telling us how we should do the same, does it not become us to take heed to the things spoken, lest there be a separation between the Head, and the other members; and instead of us following the Head, we be found in some other direction? Now, dear brethren, as there is a difference in the brotherhood, in the manner in which the ordinance of Feetwashing is performed, and the as A. M. has authorized all the testimony in regard to the first practice of the brethren in America, to be collected and presented to the next A. M., would it not be well enough for said testimonies to be printed in our periodicals, so that the entire brotherhood might have the opportunity of knowing what was the original practice? for there are many, that do not know, and are not satisfied that our primitive brethren practiced the single mode, while there are many also fully satisfied on that point, and desirous of coming back to the primitive practice, and the word of the Lord but are afraid of being censured by some of the elders, or of A. M. I am satisfied of an other fact, which is this: that neither the practice of the Brethren, nor the opinion of this elder or that great man; nor the decisions of A. M. or any other body of men, however good or faithful they may be, is to judge any man in the last day; but Jesus says, "The word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day." Then let us go to Jesus, dear brethren, and do as he has commanded and exemplified; then when we come to be judged by the word, we will be justified, rather than condemned.

Then dear Brethren, the question that should interest us in all things should be, not so much whether the brethren did so and so, and whether A. M., said so and so, as what saith the word, by which we are to be judged, and either justified or condemned?

And how did Jesus, the great head of the church, do in feetwashing?—Let us, examine, in love, what Jesus said and did. John 13: 4, 5. "He riseth from supper, and laid aside his garments: and took a towel, and girded himself. After that he poureth water into a basin, and began to wash the disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded." Here we see how the Saviour prepared himself, and how he proceeded in the great work of his Father.—Now the authority for us washing feet rests on the 14th verse, "If I, then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet, ye also ought to wash one another's feet." Then in the 15th verse he refers us back to the 4th and 5th verses for the manner in which we should prepare ourselves and perform the service. The command is to wash one another's feet, not for Peter to wash two, or more, and for John to wipe what Peter washed, but to wash one another's; and we wipe by the authority of his example, 15th verse. "For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you." How did he do to them? He washed, and he wiped.

Dear brethren, if we will follow Christ, and the order as exemplified by him, we will find as little confusion in the ordinance of feet-washing as in any other ordinance in the house of God. It will pass around the table in the same order of the binding salutation, and not only two, but every member of Christ's body will be represented. When he was engaged in the work, every member of his body was exercised in washing, and every member in wiping; so if we are members of his body, each member is exercised in washing and in wiping, as his were, thereby filling the command and the example.—Therefore let us look unto Jesus, who is the author and finisher of our faith, and leave all earthly opinions behind; then we will be justified in the sight of God, and receive in the end a crown of immortal glory.

W. G. M'Clintock,

Crescent Hill, Mo.

Tobacco.—When the excellent Dr. Boodell had come back from a foreign land, and spent some time in visiting various places in this country, he said, "I see nothing in America so alarming as the increasing use of tobacco among the young men and boys."

It is strange that it should be so, for the appetite for tobacco is not natural; it must be acquired with difficulty and tobacco is a loathesome thing. And yet love for it among juveniles is an evil and a growing evil. Chewing it weakens the gastric juice of the stomach, generates nervous maladies, and arguments the power of carnal passion; and smoking it makes dry mouths, and dry mouths make drunkards. We warn the young to let the damaging weed alone, and not put themselves under its noxious dominion.

Patient Faithfulness.—It is not by a few, fragmentary, or occasionally great and brilliant efforts that Christ's work is to be done, but by close influence, indirect as well as possitive, which distill from a life. Patient, earnest Christian labor never fails. Its results may be unostentatious, molding, reforming, vitalizing the character, unrecognized, perhaps by the dim spiritual eye of the world, but they are not unseen or unblest by Christ himself for whose dear sake it has been wrought.

The Sure Foundation.—A society built upon any man, even an apostle, as an apostle, will, in the pressure of ages, swerve and fail, however vast the pile; and the greater its dimensions, the more appalling its overthrow at last. The true church does not rest on Peter, or Paul, or Luther, or Calvin, or Wesley, but only, squarely and forever, on Jesus Christ. He is the tried and precious corner-stone on which all believers build their lives, of every age, nation, circumstance, and name.

That which must be concealed is never allied to sin.

We Reap What we Sow.

For pleasure or pain, for weal or for woe—
'Tis the law of our being—we reap what we sow.
We may try to evade them—may do what we will—
But our acts, like our shadows, will follow us still.

The world is a wonderful chemist, be sure,
And detects in a moment the base or the pure.
We may boast of our claims to genius or birth,
But the world takes a man for just what he is worth.

We start in the race for fortune or fame,
And then, when we fail, the world bears the blame;
But nine times in ten, 'tis plain to be seen,
There's a "screw somewhere loose" in the human machine.

Are you wearied and worn in this hard, earthly strife?
Do you yarn for affection to sweeten your life?
Remember, this great truth has often been proved:
We must make ourselves loveable, would we be loved.

Though life may appear as a desolate track,
Yet the bread that we cast on the waters comes back.
This law was enacted by Heaven above:
That like attracts like, and love begets love.

We make ourselves heroes and martyrs for gold,
Till health becomes broken and youth becomes old.
Ah! did we the same for a beautiful love,
Our lives might be music for angels above!

We reap what we sow. Oh, wonderful truth!—
A truth hard to learn in the days of our youth.
But it shines out at last, as "the hand on the wall,"
For the world has its "debit" and "credit" for all.

For the COMPANION.

Hope.

Hope begins with the first dawnings of reason, and ends in the grave. Before the age of the youth, Hope spreads forth her banners in the future, clothed in all the glowing forms and colors of imagination, and promises happiness to all its followers. Would he climb the steeps of science, and stand first among her votaries, Hope whispers in his ear, that nothing can be more easy. It is Hope, that imparts to youth his happiness, and to mature age a blessed assurance. Take Hope away, and we leave a blank which never can be filled. If we survey the busy tribes of earth, we see no one but what is influenced by the all pervading emotion: each one has some favorite object in view, and Hope will persuade him that he can accomplish it.

Look at the business man; and see him overwhelmed and absorbed in the pursuit of gain. With what anxious looks does he hurry to and fro! And with what eagerness does he embrace every opportunity to increase his wealth! Watch the changing scenes of his countenance; and if you could but read the thoughts harbored within his breast, you would find the subject which is ever uppermost in his mind, is the Hope of gain. Oh! "vanity of vanities, saith the preacher, all is vanity!"

We see the student who is diligently engaged over his study from morn until the midnight hour, in search of knowledge, and thus, in his ardent thirst, changes night into day. It is the Hope of one day standing first in the ranks of literature, that enables him to get through the short and rugged journey of life; storing his mind with the choicest gems that learning can afford, even while he is taught that Disease is making encroachments upon his vital organs, and will ultimately hurl him into a never ending eternity.

It is Hope that moves all to action; and without it we would be miserable creatures. Hope is the connecting link between the present and the future. It is a constant prophet, foretelling us of coming events, and presenting them to us in gaudy attire, which often fades and blackens in the end.

Were it not for the earnest of the future, desiring to realize the things hoped for, life would drag out a miserable existence. One might suppose that the aged, after having witnessed so many wishes unrealized, would no more listen to her siren-song. But the dying man will cling to her fair promises—to this eternal principle—to this blissful passion, as long as the spark of life may last; although Hope is often delusive and proves an entire failure in the transitory things of earth; but Hope reaches her hand beyond, with the least flickering ray of sunshine pouring into the caverns of the heart, and revives the drooping soul. Hope still whispers, "Persevere, thy reward is still beyond." It is as a fragrant flower that blooms in all seasons of the year; and like the evergreen, it preserves its verdure both in winter and in summer.

Fellow traveler to the Judgment, then let us take hold of the words of eternal life, render spontaneous obedience to the requirements of the Gospel, (or in other words, obey from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered us, Rom, 6: 17); then shall we have that Hope which is as an anchor to the soul both sure and steadfast and which entereth into that within the veil. Yea, it is as an anchor while sailing through the stormy blasts of persecutions, and the trials and conflicts of life.

Hope never will satisfy, in a discontented world like this, with the transitory scenes of life, but the Christian can say in the language of one of old; "I shall be satisfied, when I awake in thy likeness;" Psalm 17: 15. Oh! what a consolation, when we have that Hope, which is kept by the power of God, of that heaven of eternal felicity, where the troubles and cares of an unsatisfied world shall cease, and the soft and balmy breath of an eternal spring, shall soothe the spirit's soft repose in the midst of the paradise of God! There we shall meet with those we loved on earth,—the fairest buds of earthly love,—our children, who have been called away by the warning voice of Death; and mingle our voices with theirs in praise and admonition around the throne of God and the Lamb, throughout the dateless ages of a never ending eternity. How bright and beautiful then is that Hope which meets the shadowy future without fear! Do we not all feel the necessity, then, of that blessed Hope, which sheds its balmy influence over the loneliness of the human heart, and builds up anew the broken altars of its faith; and reviving again the drooping flowers of its desolate affections, in the hope of forgiveness, and in the promise of Jesus, who has said, "He that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live.

ANDREW STALNAKER.

For the COMPANION.

Mystery.

The definition of the above word is, a profound secret; an enigma; a trade or calling.

The reason I selected this word for a heading is this: I was in meeting last night; the minister was a stranger, of the Presbyterian persuasion; and at the close of his discourse he stated, that next day (Sabbath morning), he would preach at 10 o'clock, and after preaching they would celebrate the Lord's Supper. He invited all members of good standing in other churches to be with them on the occasion, and then he said, "It is a mystery to me, that I cannot solve, that, when Christians meet to celebrate the Lord's Supper, some can stay away and not meet the children of God at the table of the Lord."

Now, in the first place, it is also a mystery to me, that I cannot solve, that people can call the bread and wine the Lord's Supper, when it is as plain as that twice two makes four that there is a vast difference between the Communion and Supper. It is also a great mystery to me, that persons who call themselves ambassadors of Christ, and profess to be expounders of the Gospel, cannot see the difference between the Communion and Lord's Supper.

In the second place, it is also a mystery to me to hear them invite persons to meet them at the Lord's table, to partake of the Lord's Supper, when there is no table furnished with such things as would constitute a supper; for it is plain enough that the term "supper" means a full meal. And in the third place, it is still the greatest mystery to me, that intelligent people in our enlightened country cannot, or will not, see the inconsistency of eating a supper in the morning or at noon. It seems to me that people cannot be so blinded; especially such as call themselves followers of Christ. We might with the same propriety call our breakfast supper, and would have as good authority to do so as they have to call the Communion supper, and eat it in the morning. But if some of them were at our homes over night, and next morning we should prepare a meal and then invite them to come to supper, they would look at us with surprise, because we call breakfast supper! And I tell you, my friends who call bread and wine supper and take it in the morning, that we, who claim to follow our Master in his steps, look at you with surprise, because you call the Communion supper, and eat it in the morning! for we see a vast difference between the two; and therefore we cannot meet you at such places and partake with you; for by so doing we would do what we have no faith in, and consequently would commit sin.

But it is truly a great mystery to me since we have only one law, and all teach out of one book, that there is such a vast difference between the professors of Christ.

NOAH B. BLOUGH.

CORN SONG.

—o—

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

—o—

HEAP high the farmer's wintry board;
Heap high the golden corn:
No richer gift has Autumn poured
From out her lavish horn.

Let other lands, exulting, glean
The apple from the pine,
The orange from its glossy green,
The cluster from its vine.

We better love the hardy gift
Our rugged vales bestow,
To cheer us when the storm shall drift
Our harvest fields with snow.

Through vales of grass and flowers
Our plows their furrows made,
While, on the hills, the sun and showers
The changeful April played.

We dropped the seed o'er hill and plain
Beneath the sun of May,
And frightened from our sprouting grain
The robber-crows away.

All through the long bright days of June
Its leaves grew green and fair,
And waved in hot mid-summer noon
Its soft and yellow hair.

And now with Autumn's moonlit eyes,
Its harvest time is come;
We pluck away its frosty leaves,
And bear its treasures home.

For the Companion.

Religious Virtues.---No. I.

BY F. M. SNYDER.

"And he said to them all, if any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily and come follow me."—Luke ix. 23.

SELF-DENIAL.—By the assistance of the Holy Spirit, we will endeavor to give our readers a series of essays on some of the religious virtues. Our remarks in this number will be on the subject of self-denial. Before closing this first essay, we wish to prove by scripture testimony, that self-denial will afford fallen humanity the purest, highest, and most lasting source of enjoyment that this life can afford, and make us thrice happy in the world to come.

Self-denial does not make men and women miserable and unhappy as one might suppose. Such a tendency it has not. Yet, when we tell worldly minded persons that they must deny themselves and take up the cross, that they may find solid peace and comfort and enjoy true happiness, our words seem to them as an idle tale. They look upon the subject of self denial, as I fear too many so called Christians do, as a life-burden, rather than as a sure remedy to remove the mind's burden, and give it its tranquil ease. Let us notice then the advantages of self-denial.

Self-denial is what prompts us—yea, blessed thought—permits us to follow the meek and lowly Lamb whithersoever he goeth. How the last phrase in our text reminds us of what our Savior said to that rich young man, who would not deny himself that he might accept of the gracious invitation, "Come, follow me." He did not want to deny himself of what was running away with his soul. He did not feel like following Jesus at the sacrifice of such great riches. Just as many worldly men and women feel at the present day and age of the world; they do not want to follow Jesus, when it comes to so much self-denial. And why? In the name of common reason I ask, why is it that they will not sacrifice their all, if so demanded, for a walk with Jesus, a home with him in glory? Is mortal life so dear, a home in a world of sorrow so precious, that we cannot exchange for Heaven and its endless bliss? Or is a self-indulging life so sweet, that we can afford to exchange our transient stay on earth for a life in eternal woe? If not, why so little self-denial, and so much self-indulgence?

Let us look around us for a moment, and behold the state of suffering humanity in regard to self-denial.—Who are denying themselves? Few, save those who are denying themselves of some dainty or luxury for the preservation of health. Ah! the preservation of health! Is self-denial required in the retaining and preservation of good-health? Most assuredly it is. How often does the physician tell his patients to deny themselves of certain articles of food, clothing, etc., that they may regain their former health. What, then, is required of the sin-sick soul? Self-denial and a strict compliance with the requisitions of a saving gospel.—But must the sinner, after he has once had the healing art applied and been made whole, still live in daily self-denial? Yes, a good physician will tell us that what will cure a sick man ought to keep him from getting sick; as much as to say if he would live temperately he would be healthy.—Hence, if, to be a Christian, self must be denied, to retain a Christian character, we must regard self-denial as an essential Christian virtue.

It is needless for me to add that a strictly devotional and Christian character cannot be retained without self-denial. Indulge not, therefore, in what only tends to gratify lust and passion. "Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth, fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry," is the inspired language of the self-denying Paul. A strict denial of the above evils in which a sin stricken world is so prone to engage, will bring men and women the highest degree of happiness in this life, and make them thrice happy in the world to come; from the fact that the abandonment of these evil passions and the acceptance of more noble and essential Christian virtues instead, will lead the humble child of God to acquire still more of the religious virtues which will cause him or her to attain unto the highest type of Christianity.

Brother Paul's language in our last quotation does not only remind us of our duty in regard to the forsaking of those passions which have a tendency te lead us into crimes of the darkest hues and deepest dyes, but it also reminds us to be aware of one of the most prevalent sins predominating over the civilized world—covetousness. What an easy matter to lose sight of Jesus, and the real benefits of true Christianity and self-denial, when fascinated with an idolatrous spell of covetousness! And from Paul's own language we can but infer that covetousness is idolatry.

That self-denial is so essential to real enjoyment, (as is everything that tends to add gospel riches to the Christian's store), is drawn from what the Savior himself said to his blessed disciples in the following language: "Verily, I say unto you, there is no man that hath left house, or parents, or brethren, or wife, or children, for the kingdom of God's sake, who shall not receive manifold more in this present time, and in the world to come, life everlasting." Luke xvii. 29, 30. The inference here drawn is, that there is nothing lost, but much gained, by self-denial, though the sacrifice be ever so great. Come then, ye men of self-indulgence, consider where the gratification of your passion and lusts will lead you. I know it is of little use to say anything about self-denial to some people, as they will laugh at us; but let me ask you a solemn question: Can you, with any degree of pleasure, gratify the carnal appetite by indulging in sin at the expense of a precious, a never dying soul? If you can the grave has no terros that you dread or shun, so that you may suffer yourselves to be dragged down the precipice of ruin into the bottomless pit, on the easy bed of self, with the fiendish demons of despair for external comrades.

De Graff, Ohio.

For the COMPANION.

Thy Word.

"Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." Psalm, 119: 105. Man's word disappoints; God's word never. The word of the Lord is tried. It has been tried by the sinner; he neglected it and perished. It has been tried by the saint; he has believed it, and has been saved. What a precious legacy of God to our world. The volume of nature, much as it teaches, is dumb on the question of sinners acceptance. The scripture alone can solve the enigma,—How is God to deal with the guilty? That question unanswered in peace we could not live, in peace we dare not die. But glad tidings, O precious messenger from God! hast thou brought a doomed earth, God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life. Were there no more in this divine communication than that one brief entry, the Bible would still be better to us than thousands of gold and silver. But it is a vast magazine and emporium of heavenly wisdom, free to all, suited for all, intended for all, offered to all. An inexhaustible mine, the deeper you dig the richer the ore. It has a word of season for rich and poor, young and old, for the wandering, the doubting, the sorrowing, the believing, the dying, the perishing. Reader sit at the feet of Jesus in his word, and with the docility of a little child, say, "Speak Lord." Approach it ever as if it met you with the living salutation. "I have a message from God for thee." There are differences in every heart chamber; but this key fits every door. Make it a faithful mirror, in which you see a reflection of yourself. The more faithfully it is held up, the more will the scene of deficiency, and defilement drive you to the atoning blood. In all your difficulties make it the man of your council. In all your perplexities, make it your interpreter and guide; in all your sorrows make it the fountain of consolation; in all your temptations make it your ultimate court of appeal. Thy word, is precious at all times, and is especially precious in the dark and cloudy day.

Reader, does his word light you in your path? If unconverted it does not, And the great trouble is, you are not in the path in which the true light shines. Does not your path seem dark and dreary? And as you walk the path of sin and disobedience you are at enmity against God, and not subject to his laws. And if not subject to the law of Christ, you are grooping your way in darkness. The holy scriptures say: "walk while ye have light. Therefore, brethren while we have such a glorious light, namely the Gospel, let us shoulder boldly the cross of Christ, and fight manfully for the cause. Remember daylight is the time to work, and the night is hastening wherein no man can work. Dreadful thought! Should the night overtake us before we have performed all the requirements of the Gospel, I am afraid we should be cast into outer darkness.

Dear Brethren, we should be very careful of the God of this world. For he has blinded a great many minds of the human family, that the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ, should not shine unto them. Again "be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers, for what fellowship has righteousness with unrighteousness, and what communion has light with darkness." What a solemn warning to us. Oh, may we be separate from the world, and very zealous of the cause, and ever keep our light burning, that others may see our good works, and glorify their father in heaven. There is great danger of us getting entangled too much with the world, and if this light that is in us be darkness, how great is that darkness. But since we are the children of light, let us walk as if we were directed by the gospel only, and our feet ever follow the path of virtue and happiness, until we land our souls in the city that has no need of the light of the sun, neither of the moon to shine in it. "For the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof."

Walk in the light, thy path shall be,
Peaceful, serene, and bright:
For god, by grace, shall dwell in thee,
And God himself is light.

D. B. CONDRIT.

Advantages of a Plain Attire.

1. It would lessen the burdens of the many who find it hard to maintain their place in society.

2. It would lessen the force of the temptations which often lead men to barter honor and honesty.

3. If there were less strife in dress at church, people in moderate circumstances would be more inclined to attend.

4. Universal moderation in dress at church would improve the worship by the removal of many wandering thoughts.

5. It would enable all classes of people to attend church better in unfavorable weather.

6. It would lessen on the part of the rich, the temptation to vanity.

7. It would lessen on the part of the poor, the temptation to be envious and malicious.

8. It would save valuable time on the Sabbath.

9. It would relieve our minds from a serious pressure, and thus enable us to do more for good enterprises.

A BEAUTIFUL THOUGHT.—When the Summer of youth is slowly wasting away on the nightfall of age, and the shadow of the past becames deeper and deeper, and life wears to its close, it is pleasant to look through the vista of time upon the sorrows and felicities of our earthly years.—If we have a home to shelter, and hearts to rejoice with us, and friends have been gathered around our firesides, then the rough places of wayfaring will have been worn and smoothed away in the twilight of life, while the many dark spots we have passed through will grow brighter and more beautiful. Happy, indeed, are those whose intercourse with the world has not changed the tone of their holier feelings, or broken those music cords of the heart, whose vibrations are so melodious, so tender, and so touching in the evening of their life.

Christian Family Companion

Tyrone City, Pa., Oct. 10, 1871.

Self-Examination.

"Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves." 2 Cor. 13: 5.

There is, perhaps, no duty more important, and, at the same time, more neglected, or more remissly performed, than the duty of Self-examination. If the commned were to examine either enemies or friends, neighbors, kindsmen, or brethren, it would be heeded; but when we are required to narrow down to the small compass of Self, for some cause we are inclined to become inadvertent. Because of this indifference, it becomes necessary that we be frequently reminded of this duty. In this essay we shall notice, first, what Self-examination is; second, what is the object of Self-examination; and third, how the duty should be performed.

Examine means, (1) "To inspect or observe carefully; (2) to interrogate as a witness or as a student; to put questions to; to try by question: (3) to search into; to inquire about; to scrutinize; to investigate; to discuss." —Worcester.

1. What is Self-examination?—It may assist us in forming a correct answer to notice first what it is not. Self-examination does not mean, "To inspect or observe carefully" the wrong-doings of our enemies; the imperfections, the failures, the follies, the dishonesty, or the covetousness of our neighbors; the neglects, the prejudices, the weaknesses, or the short-comings of those we still hold as friends; it does not mean that we shall search into nor inquire about those things which do not concern us, but pertain exclusively to others.—But it does mean that we should carefully inspect or observe ourselves; search into, inquire about our own desires, and purposes; to scrutinize our own doings; to investigate our own condition, circumstances, and wants. Self-examination, therefore, means, brother, examine yourself—sister, examine yourself—all who claim to be members in "the church of God, all who aspire to be saints, in the language of the text," examine yourselves.

From what has now been stated, it is evident that, it is the duty of every member—the individual, personal duty of each member—to examine himself. The obligation is not transferable; the duty can not be performed by proxy. You may call on your neighbors or friends, your brethren and sisters, to examine you, —if, indeed, they tarry to be called, —but you cannot shift the obligation which lies upon yourself. If the whole church, exclusive of yourself, should examine you; if God himself should examine you, and acquaint himself with your real condition,—and this he certainly does,—yet all this examination could not exempt you from examining yourself. The command is not, to get others to examine you,—they will do it without solicitation: it is not, to ask God to search you,—he knows you altogether; but it is to you, brother, to you, sister,—"examine yourselves." You yourselves, individually, must serve as court, counsel, and jury, upon your own case. You must interrogate the witnesses for and against yourself; you must search into, inquire about, scrutinize, investigate, discuss, and conclude upon, your own emotions, purposes, doings, and standing. You, and you only, can perform this duty. You will remember, therefore, that, by Self-examination is meant, neither that you shall examine others, nor that others shall examine you, but that you,—each individual member,—shall examine yourself.

2. What is the object of Self-examination? The command is, "examine yourselves." You ask, "What for? The answer as contained in the text is, "Whether ye be in the faith." This is very explicit. You are not to examine yourselves to see whether you have a faith, any faith, some faith, but "whether ye be in THE FAITH." There was a Jewish faith, or system of religion; a sectarian faith of the Pharisees, and another of the Sadducees; and there were many systems of idolatrous worship; but they were not to examine themselves to ascertain whether they were in any of these faiths; but to see whether they were in "the faith."—This undoubtedly means, "the faith which was once delivered to the saints;" Jude 3 verse. This was all the faith they recognized; for Paul says, there is "one faith;" Eph. 4: 5.

Kind readers, there are many more sectarian faiths now than there were in the apostolic age; and the command is as imperative now as it was then. If there was danger that they might have been in some other faith, and not "in the faith," there is no less, but vastly more, danger now, that we might be in some man-made system of religion, and not in "the faith which was once delivered to the saints." This is the only faith we can recognize as true and reliable: it is the "one faith" of Paul; and it is the "great salvation, which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him;" Heb. 2: 3. We urge you therefore to "examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith."

But why did Paul urge it upon the Corinthians to ascertain whether they were in the faith? Evidently because he knew that outside of the true faith there was no safety; and he urged this examination so that, if they should find themselves outside, they might get in. On the other hand, if upon due examination they should discover that they were in the faith, it would certainly afford them great comfort and encouragement. In either case it was intended for their good, and for the glory of God. How is it now? It is the same now. There is only one true and perfect faith—the "one faith" that "was once delivered." All other systems are spurious or defective, and consequently dangerous. He that is "in the faith" is safe. "Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith." If, upon duly trying your case, you find yourself to "be in the faith," praise God and be encouraged; but if, to the contrary, you find yourself in some spurious faith, be admonished: "Escape for thy life; look not behind thee, neither stay thou in all the plain;" rest not for a moment until you find yourself in the one Zoar, the "one faith."

You are not to examine merely to learn whether you have a theoretical knowledge of the faith; not whether ye be near it; not whether ye desire to be in it, but "whether ye be in the faith." There is a difference between having knowledge of a country and being in it; there is a difference between being nigh to a house and in the house; there was a difference between Agrippa, who was almost persuaded to be a Christian, and the apostle Paul, who was altogether a Christian; Agrippa was near, but Paul was in the faith. "Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith."

3. How should the duty of Self-examination be performed? It must be performed intelligently and impartially. We have examiners to examine applicants for schools in our country. These officers must know what qualifications teachers should have, or they cannot conduct their examinations intelligently,—and if not intelligently, certainly not properly.—In the case under consideration, as has been shown, each one is his own examiner; each one, therefore, must know what "the faith" is, and what it is to "be in the faith." He who does not know what the, 'faith is" nor how he should be in the faith, is not a competent examiner. Such a one cannot conduct the examination intelligently, and consequently not properly: he must be under instructions a while longer. Examiners of teachers may be well educated, they may know all about the requisite ualifications f or teachers; but if they are partial, dishonest, they are not competent to make satisfactory examinations; and under such circumstances, our schools would probably be filled with incompetent teachers.—So must he who examines himself be honest, impartial; for if he is not, he will probably pass unrighteous judgment. Examiners know, too, that the nearer they come home, the more difficult in becomes to be strictly impartial; so that it seems hard to withhold a certificate from a kind friend, or one that is near akin. But the examiners we are speaking of must come still nearer home—altogether home to themselves. This renders the task still more difficult, and requires the highest type of integrity. The first thing to be done, therefore, in self-examination, is to be qualified for the work—to know what the faith is, how to "be in the faith, and to be impartial.

He who would examine himself, cannot rely on the judgment of others. It is possible to make a fair external display, so that friends and brethren may think you are in the faith, when you are not; and it is possible for them to speak better of you than they think, so that it would be very unsafe and unwise to attempt to determine your real condition by the judgment and say so of others.

No person should rely upon his own feelings. Feelings are both changeable and deceptional. You may feel all right to-day, whilst to-morrow it may be quite different: to-day you may feel as though you were on mount Zion worshipping in the temple of the living God; but to-morrow you may feel as though you were in the valley of dry bones without hope.—Yesterday you were joyous and hopeful, now you are doubtful and restless, and to-morrow you may be gloomy, despondent, hopeless. Thus your feelings are ever fluctuating. They are so allied with your constitutional habits, and so related to surrounding circumstances, that they are ever varying. They play as they are acted upon, and there is consequently no reliable testimony afforded by mere emotion, and feeling. You dare not say that you know you are "in the faith" because you feel so.

The same feelings may be kindled in your emotional nature, and as vividly too, by error as by truth. When Jacob looked on the blood-stained coat of his son, he felt as if Joseph were dead. He knew the coat, and said:—"An evil beast hath devoured him; Joseph is without doubt, rent in pieces. And Jacob rent his clothes, and put sack cloth upon his loins, and mourned for his son many days. And all his sons and his daughters rose up to comfort him; but he refused to be comforted; and he said, For I will go down into the grave unto my son mourning. Thus his father wept for him; Gen., 37: 33–35. But long years afterward, tidings were brought to Jacob, that his son Joseph was yet alive, and was Governor of Egypt. Jacob could not believe the message at first; but his emotions were so aroused that it is said, his "heart fainted" He might have thought, and perhaps he did,—'No, it cannot be; for long years ago I had an irresistible feeling that my son was rent in pieces by an evil beast; I have felt so and have gone mourning ever since; I yet feel so, and because I feel so it must be so: my son is dead!" But when he saw the wagons that Joseph had sent, his spirit revived, and he said: "It is enough: Joseph my son is yet alive; I will go and see him before I die." This illustrates very clearly how the emotional nature is aroused, inflamed, and carried about by surrounding circumstances; that error may produce the same feeling in every respect that truth would; that feelings may deceive, and that it would be hazardous for any person to attempt to determine by his feelings whether he is "in the faith." "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets have gone out into the world;" 1 John 4: 1. The Holy Spirit through the beloved disciple, herein teaches us that evil spirits and false doctrine may play upon the feelings and deceive their subjects; and so it becomes necessary to "try the spirits whether they are of God," before we believe them. When to these ordinary operations we add the power of animal magnetism, and psychological influences, the danger of trusting to feelings is alarmingly increased. "Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall."

But now we will show you a more excellent way—the only reliable and effectual way. To "examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith;" to "prove your own selves," you must examine, prove yourselves "by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." (1 Peter 1: 23). This is a living witness; a witness that abideth forever. This witness does not change his testimony with every changing circumstance; but bears the same unvarying testimony to every person in the same condition.—Mesmerism and spiritualism can have no influence here. Of this witness Peter says: "We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day-star arise in the hearts," 2 Peter 1: 19. "For the word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart;" Heb. 4: 12. Our Savior said, "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall never pass away;" Matth., 24: 5. He also said: "He that rejected me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken shall judge him in the last day. For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which hath sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say and what I should speak. And I know that his commandment is life everlasting; whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak;" John 12: 48—50. If there is anything clearly taught in the Scriptures it is this, that the word of God, as revealed through his Son, shall be the law by which those who live in the gospel dispensation shall be judged. By this law, then, we must examine ourselves; for just as certain as it is a living, and ever-abiding law, so certain is it that, if this law condemn us now,—unless we be converted so that it will justify us before death, it will condemn us in that great day. If If this law justifies us now, it will certainly not condemn us then; hence Paul says, "For if we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged;" 1 Cor. 11: 31.

Again the New Testament law was not only first spoken by the Lord, but it was afterward indited and brought to the remembrance of the inspired writers by the Holy Spirit; for Jesus said: "But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I say unto you;" John 14: 26. "Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he shall guide you into all truth; for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear that shall he speak; and he shall show you things to come. He shall glorify me; for he shall receive of mine, and shall show it unto you;" John 16: 13, 14.

And Paul says: "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God;" Rom. 8: 16.

The Holy Spirit glorifies the Son; he leads into all truth,—and God's word revealed through Jesus is truth; he brought to remembrance what Christ taught; he spake nothing of himself: when we take all these facts into consideration, we can come to but one conclusion; namely, the Holy Spirit justifies none whom the word condemns—the Spirit does not bear witness with any person's spirit that he is a child of God, so long as the word does not bear the same witness.—Does the word justify any one who lives in disobedience to it? Certainly not, neither does the Spirit.

The word of God, the sure word of prophecy, the word that is quick and powerful, that liveth and abideth forever, that shall stand when heaven and earth shall have passed away, that shall judge in the last day,—— this word contains the faith which was once delivered to the saints. Examine yourselves by the word. If you are obedient to the requirements of the word, you are in the word; and if you are in the word, you are in the faith. This is the way, for you to examine yourselves.

Let us now admonish you in a few words, to heed the admonition of Paul: "Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves." The word is to judge you; if you judge yourselves by it now, you will not be condemned by it in the time to come; but if you neglect it, how shall you escape?

There is a true, a saving faith,
First taught by God's dear Son;
Confirmed to us by those Who heard,
And there is only one.

If in this faith, you stand secure,
Nor earth nor hell can harm;
But if outside, on error's road,
You've cause to take alarm.

Yourself examine, whether in
This holy faith you're found:
And to assist you in the work,
May God's free grace abound.

That you may see yourself aright,
Look deep into God's word;
For there, in lines of living light,
He did the faith record.

Implore the Holy Spirit's aid ;
Receive the Shining Dove ;
And from the searching word of truth
Forbid your heart to rove.

Behold yourself just as you are :
And if outside you stand,
Flee for your life, while Christ says "Come,"
And stretches forth his hand.

J. W. Beer.

Irregularities.

Some irregularities may be expected in our issues for the next month. For several weeks we have been running ahead of time, and expect to hurry up our next week's issue at least several days more, in order to make ready for the move. Then we shall omit one number, but hope to get the following issue out in time. We will, however, be somewhat dependent upon circumstances. If our machinery and material goes through promptly, we shall not need to lose more than a week. If it delays, we shall necessarily be delayed.

Please notice change of address after the 10th inst., to Dale City, Somerset county, Pa.

Another Break Down.

In our last we expressed our delight that we were once more in our editorial chair in good order, but before said paper left the office, we were again on the wheel, and have endured four terrible nights by suffering, and lost about the same number of days from the sanctum. Cause: tooth-ache and bealed face. We are in pretty good order to-day. We know not what the morrow may bring forth.

Wearing the Beard.

Brother Henry :—I would simply ask you to give me your opinion through the C. F. C. upon the wearing of the beard. Is there any more harm for a brother to shave his cheek, leaving his moustache and chin-beard stand, than there is in shaving the moustache and part of the chin-beard? I see no difference.

H. H. Martin

Answer.—We do see some difference. In the first place, any man who cultivates a beard for conscience' sake, has no right to shave at all. 2d. Those who wear their beards because they grow, believing that fact to be a sufficient reason for wearing them, are equally restricted. 3d. Those who wear their beards for comfort, should wear them so as to afford comfort. 4th. For fashion or pride no brother should wear a beard. 4th. The brother who has no conscience either for or against wearing beards, should submit to the wishes of his brethren. The moustache in many cases becomes uncomfortable, and to very many good brethren is exceedingly offensive. To a person who would wear the moustache and chin-beard, the cheek-beard cannot become uncomfortable. It is evident, therefore, that the moustache may be shaved for comfort, but the cheek-beard never; that must be done for fashion. There is, therefore, that difference.

Book Notices.

Children's Friend : Monthly ; Esther K. Smedley, West Chester, Pa. ; $1 25 per annum.

It is a friend of the children, and the children are a friend of the paper. That accounts for its popularity.

" The Step at The Gate."

We have received Whitney's Musical Guest for October, and find among its many attractions the beautiful song and chorus under the above title, together with " Plant a few Little Flowers," " Light Will Greet Thee by and by," and " The Bible says we may ;" also a large amount of musical news, &c., combining in all, just such a musical journal as every family should have. The publisher now propose to send the Guest three months on trial, for only twenty five cents When four dollars worth of music can be obtained for so small a sum, we think no one will fail to avail themselves of this liberal offer. Price $1 00 per annum; specimen copy 10 cents. Published monthly by W. W. Whitney, Toledo, Ohio.

Woods' Household Magazine : S. S. Woods & Co., Newburg, N. Y. ; monthly ; $1 00.

It contains some very good lessons and pleasant stories. The publishers make it a special feature in their business to offer liberal premiums to each subscriber, which, to persons who just want them, are often worth the subscription money.

The Leisure Hour, for August last has been sent us. It is published in London, 56 Paternoster Row. Price 6d. Among its contents that attract the attention of the American reader, is " First Impression of America and its People." It is an able article, written by the editor.

The Manufacturer and Builder : Weston & Co , Park Row, New York; $1 50 per annum ; monthly.

This is an excellent paper, in the interest of Art and Science. We look with pleasure over its beautifully illustrated pages, and long to lay hands on the ingenious contrivances explained and advertised in its columns.

The Household ; Geo. E. Crowell & Co., publishers, Brattleboro, Vermont ; monthly ; $1 00 per annum.

We have a good word for the Household, for we believe it is really deserving of it. It furnishes an immense amount of reading, and we have lately had the pleasure of perusing a number, and find the quality of the first class kind. Send for a specimen copy, and examine for yourselves.

The Pious Youth for October has been printed. We are a little earlier than usual, and consequently some of our contributors will be too late for the October number We will have someshing to say in regard to the Youth in our next issue, of vital importance to that paper and its friends.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

By an Afflicted Sister.

It is a solemn thing to think of dying; to bring the awful reality home to ourselves; to fix the mind steadily upon it. Visions of death, dim and distant, have, perhaps, flitted before the eyes of many; but have they come very near, and clothed themselves in something like the distinctiveness of reality? To feel the fangs of a fatal disease fastened with a firm and relentless hold upon our vitals; to contemplate the grave as our speedy abode, and lie upon its verge without hope of rescue from its dark and dreary dominion; to think of leaving the kindred who have grown up by our side, who have met with us at the same table, and warmed by the same fire, who have endeared themselves to our hearts by a thousand proofs of their true and tried affection,—these will try the heart as it has never been tried before. Not all the fortifications that we can throw around the citadel of life, will keep out the destroyer: no, not for a moment; but the cold hand that has stopped the vital current so often, and peopled the grave with so many generations, will be, one day, found thrusting in its icy fingers into the fountain of life within our bosoms.

How different the lots assigned to man! While some enjoy health, strength, and the pleasures of this world, others suffer greatly. But if we have the love of God in our hearts, I sometimes think it is a matter of little consequence in what condition of life we are placed. The things of this world are a blessing; but is not the hope of a blessed immortality a greater blessing?

Dear brethren and sisters, the Lord, in his wise providence, has laid the hand of affliction upon me. I have not suffered for days, weeks, or months, but for years. My sufferings are great my privations many; nevertheless I enjoy much comfort while passing through this world of trouble and sorrow. And when I meditate upon the many blessings I have enjoyed through years of affliction, it is with gratitude that I acknowledge this severe bodily suffering a blessing; it appears to be the means which the Lord has appointed to bring me unto a knowledge of himself. Although the way has been particularly trying to my sinful nature, yet the more I reflect upon it, the more I adore him who has done it.

This is the first I have written for the COMPANION, and will, perhaps, be the last and only time, for I feel sometimes as though my days are nearly numbered, and I have felt so, at times, for several years past, but the Lord has still spared my unprofitable life, and the continuation of my affliction is the means of drawing my soul still nearer to God, who chasteneth those he loveth. I hope that all whose eyes may fall upon this will be willing to pass by all imperfections, remembering it is in great bodily weakness I write. But my faith and hope are strong in Jesus, and oh, may I retain the free use of my mental faculties in their undiminished energy to my last moment, and be able to bear an honorable testimony to the truth as it is in Jesus, on the eve of departing.—May the Lord use me as an instrument for his glory, and let me, either by doing, or suffering what he shall appoint, bring some service of praise to God and benefit to the world. I desire to be contented and happy under all circumstances; and earnestly pray the Lord to help, and I will guard against a petulant, hasty disposition, and sudden rising of passion upon any occasion, and will endeavor to gain possession of a meek and quiet spirit. May I be cleansed from all pride, self-love, and self-will, and possess humility unfeigned, the love of Christ supreme, and a sweet and child-like subjection to the will of God. My heart aspires after more holiness, greater conformity to the image of my Lord and Master; and if I am indeed a branch of the True Vine, may the Lord purge my heart, that I may bring forth fruit; and as the branch cannot bring forth fruit except it abide in the vine, may I abide in thee and thou in me, that I may bring forth much fruit, keep thy commandments, and abide in thy love, that my joy may be full

The season for our lovefeasts is at hand. I see the notices of a goodly number in the COMPANION, and how I long for the sweet union and fellowship of the children of God, of which I am denied the blessing. But thanks be to God, I still have recourse to the great Physician of souls, who is God over all. Unto him I apply. May he comfort me with his word and by his promises, and support me with his grace in this season of trial. I feel my weakness and imperfections, but am confident of this one thing, that he who hath begun a good work in me, will perform it unto the day of Jesus Christ. I give myself entirely to the Lord, to do with me as seemeth good in his sight. May he enable me to say, at all times, and under any circumstances, thy will be done and not mine. May Christ Jesus be made manifest in me, whether it be by life or death, and let me have this evidence that my path is that of the just, that it shineth brighter and brighter unto the perfect day.

I have no prospect of ever meeting or seeing my brethren and sisters in this world, except those who may come to see me. Some of them, since my lot has been cast in a strange land through kindness and love, and sense of duty have paid me several visits, which were both pleasant and profitable seasons to me. I extend a general invitation. May those friends be rewarded for their kindness to such an unworthy creature. May they receive the fulfillment of the promise, "Inasmuch as ye have done unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

The solemn thought of dying, and the contemplation of the dark and lonely grave, are not the themes upon which I now dwell; but the glorious hope of meeting all the ransomed of the Lord in the regions of immortal glory and bliss. It affords me abundant consolation that the hour of my dissolution will come. How can I be content to remain here! Jesus said, In my Father's House are many mansions. If it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go to prepare a place for you; I will come again, and receive you to myself, that where I am ye may be also. Remember your unworthy Sister in Christ.

ANNA C. BOYERS.

Leetown, Jefferson Co., W. Va.

To Hannah M. Burket.

Dear sister: your letter in the Companion has, no doubt, filled many hearts with the tenderest sympathy for you; and caused many to lift their hearts in thankfulness to God for the sense of sight, and also to beg that he will bless you, by revealing more fully the "True light that lighteneth every man that cometh into the world." Oh! how hard it must be when life is one long night! Never to see the grass and flowers you tread upon, or the leafy trees you hear rustling over your head, or to behold God's handy-work in the starry firmament. Methinks when the eyes of the blind are opened in the eternal world, their ecstasy will be more exceeding great, when they behold the glories of that bright world. You cannot behold the faces of friends here, but there you shall see Jesus — To have no permanent home—no resting that you can call your own, is sad; but perhaps God sees that it is best that it should be so. Believe that God appoints your lot in its most minute details. Think of the mansion Jesus is preparing for you.

From the question heading your letter, I imagine you feel restless, because you think you are not filling your mission in the world. You want to work—work for the Master. There is much good and useful work the blind can do. I have a friend, who was born blind, who, I am sure, is doing more good than I, who have the best of sight. She was taught to knit many useful articles, at the institution for the blind in Philadelphia; and she is always busy at something. Every Sunday, in summer, she instructs a class of little girls in Sunday School. She cannot teach them to read, but she instructs them very boldly in the things of God, She is never with little children that she does not try to teach them something, or encourage them to be good. She went every day, for a long time, to read the Bible to a poor old woman who could not read it for herself; and who liked to hear her, because she read slowly and distinctly. She is always doing something for the poor, or going around and encouraging others to some good work. She is decidedly the happiest person I ever knew. Though she walks in darkness, life seems to be, for her, on continual gleam of joy. I tell you this, dear sister, to encourage you.—Of course, I know, the blind are not all blessed with happy spirits; but as a general thing, I think, they are inclined to look on the bright side of things. Neither do all have the same opportunities for doing good that she has; still each one can do something.

Are there none around you, who are groping in darkness grosser than yours, before whom you can carry the Lamp of life; no little child whose feet you can keep from straying into the paths of sin? Though you cannot prepare the altar and slay the victim, you can stand by and keep the fowls away until God sends down the fire to consume the sacrifice. Ask God in faith to show you the work he would have you do; and if you receive no answer, be sure you are, by practical waiting, filling your mission, and glorifying him. "They also serve who stand and wait." If, as I said in the commencement, your letter in the Companion causes others to thank God for the blessing of sight, you have done good. It is no small thing to constrain others to lift their hearts to God in prayer and praise, to which, when the answer comes, you shall receive your share of the blessing.

Yours in Christ,
E. WILLIAMS.

Salem College.

Brother Holsinger: We desire to inform you, and the brethren, that our school is in a progressing condition; and is doing far better than we anticipated. The school opened this term with about seventy-five students. At present there are about ninety in attendance, with a fair prospect for a number more. We invite brethren to send their children here, and we will do the best for them that we can. We are located in a quiet, healthy village, with a goodly number of brethren and sisters living in and about the town. We have three teachers in our school, who are doing thorough work, and give entire satisfaction. The school is wholly under the control of Brethren, and is opened every morning by reading a portion of Scripture, singing a hymn, and prayer. The exercises are conducted by one of the teachers, who is a brother, and when prayer is made all are required to kneel. The entire board of trustees are members of the church; and we think, brethren, if you would come and see us, you would be very well satisfied with the school, and the manner in which it is conducted. And as it is the only institution of learning in the state, established by the brethren, we hope to make it a success.

This school was established by the Northern District of Ind., and its first term commenced Dec 14th 1870, with but seven or eight students, and closed with twenty-two. The second term commenced, March 20th, 1871, with 20, and closed with 87 students. The third term commenced, Sept. 6th, 1871, with 75 students, and with what number it may close is yet in the future; but its increase has been visible from the beginning, and we hope that, with the cooperation of the brotherhood, our labors may not be in vain.

By Order of the Board.
K. HECKMAN. Sec.
Bourbon, Ind. Sept. 27th, 1871.
Visitor please copy.

A Card from the Trustees of Salem College, at Bourbon, Ind.

Brother Holsinger: As there has been a wrong impression circulated in different parts of the brotherhood, as to the removal of Salem College from Bourbon, Ind to Warsaw, Ind., we desire to say to the brethren, that we have signed no paper or papers for the removal of our College to Warsaw, or any other point, but fully understand the liabilities we have incurred, by accepting donations to our College from citizens here, and the sale of the three year scholarships to them, in which we have agreed to give tuition free in collegiate courses at a college here. We could not remove the College from here if we desired, and would not if we could, in view of our obligations.

JACOB B. SHIVELY.
PAUL H. KURTZ.
KEYLON HECKMAN. } Trustees.
DAVID SHIVELY.
DAVID HECKMAN.

KEYLON HECKMAN, Sec.
Sept. 27th, 1871.

A Trick.

I notice you are taking the armor of right, in boldly opposing the filthy use of tobacco, and showing its effects on the human body.

Truly we are wonderfully and mysteriously made; and any foreign matter, not naturally adapted to this complete machine of ours, -the human body,—is an obstruction to it; and it matters not what the obstruction is, it causes the machine to wear out the faster. And any one must be shallow-minded indeed, to think, any way whatever, that to indulge in anything hurtful may be tolerated by our God.

But I fear the cause of all this intemperance is attributable to the ignorance of the human family. Many there are that have eyes, but see not; and many have ears, but hear not; and one may say, many have consciences, but feel not "A word to the wise is sufficient;" but the proper way to reach the foolish is a trick.

From an outsider.

D. D Stoffer.

Butler, Ohio.

Sabbath-Schools.

Brother Holsinger: Since church news is generally read with interest, and Sabbath-school news too, and as of the latter there has been nothing said lately, I thought I would say a little something in regard to our Sabbath-school. We had been holding Sabbath-school in this arm of the church, some over two years. But last Spring, from some cause or other it was not started up, and consequently we had no school until lately.—We have organized again, electing, brother John Smith, (father of brother Daniel Smith who departed this life recently) for Superintendent, brother Solomon Bowman assistant, brother Lewis W. Teeter, sect., and a good supply of teachers, who, I think, are able and willing to carry on the work so far as experience will admit.

Sunday-school is profitable when carried on right. I believe it is an auxilary to the church. Still there are some few that oppose it. Ask them upon what grounds, they will say, 'I have never been at one, but I don't approve it." Some will say, 'Show us the apostolic precedent, then we will yield the point." I will also ask for an apostolic precedent, for worshipping God, in what we call, "Brick Meeting-house," or any other meeting-house. The apostle says, "neglect not the assembling of yourselves together," &c; but he does not say where, nor when. But the church has said where, and when; consequently I claim that it is all right to go to the brick, or other meeting houses to worship God "in spirit and in truth" The same apostle says, "until I come, give attendance to reading." Now he don't say where we should go to read. But the church says go to Sabbath-school and read This authority is as good to me in the latter case, as in the former. The Savior says, "Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven," &c. I believe the church has taken Sabbath-schools prayerfully into consideration, before adopting it; hence we cannot help but believe it is an institution of heaven, when it is carried on in the proper manner. I will venture to say that we have children of ten years at our Sabbath-school, that will answer questions that would puzzle the man of 40 who has never been at a Sabbath-school.

"Study to show thyself approved." &c. Joseph Holder.

Letter from D. M. Holsinger. No. 7.

Dear brethren and sisters: My last report was dated at Bangor, this state, in the Black River branch.—Brethren Jacob Thomas and Joseph Mast are the ministers in that branch. I attended nine meetings for public worship with them, and one council meeting. On Tuesday, 17th, (Sept.) two persons were received into the church by baptism.

On Friday, the 22nd, we were conveyed by brother Joseph Maust to the Bear Lake branch, same Co. Here Elder F. P. Loehr is the housekeeper, and his assistants are Alexander Wallick and Moses Baer. We commenced a series of meetings here on Friday evening, intending to continue till the communion. So thus far we had three meetings for public worship, and one council meeting, in this branch. Last night the school-house was occupied by others, so I enjoyed a full night's rest.

We still enjoy reasonable good health, for which, as well as for all other blessings, we daily try to offer our thanks unto God the giver of all good. But we learn, since here, that there is a great deal of sickness in Mich.; so much so, that were we here on an other occasion,—such as seeing the country—or visiting friends,—I would feel to make the visit as short as possible But as it is I felt but little uneasiness; being more firmly convinced now, than before we came here, that the cause is a good one, or that such a move was necessary for the good of the church here, (whether the proper instrument has been selected is not for me to say—time will show); and having confidence that prayers are offered unto God without ceasing; by the church at large, in our behalf, we sometimes, composedly sing.

"Though destruction walk around us,
Though the arrows past us fly,
Angel guards from thee surround us;
We are safe if thou art nigh."

Owing to ill health of many, the meetings are not largely attended; but we have had some very respectable and interesting congregations—And I find that in Michigan, as well as in every other State that I passed through, where the good seed begins to grow the tares will also manifest themselves in some form or other.—The brethren here have their trials and difficulties: indeed one remarked that he found it useless to remove from one place to another, with a view to escape troubles and difficulties.

Being now in the field, to which you, my brethren and sisters, have sent me, and having obtained a knowledge, at least in part, of the labors said field requires, I feel the more ardent to call upon you to remember us in your prayers, that God may grant wisdom to direct, and ability to perform, that his good cause may prosper, souls be led to a saving knowledge of his word, and the church still become more and more purified, and shine forth as a city set upon a hill, which cannot be hid. This earnest appeal is to all who feel an interest in the prosperity and welfare of the church. D. M. Holsinger.

Blooming Dale, Mich.

Query.

Would my friend George M. Kerschner explain to me, and the many readers of the C. F. C, what Holy Ghost religion consists in, if that is what they believe in. C. G Lint.

Announcements.

DISTRICT MEETING

The Lord willing, the District Council meeting of the Southern District of Iowa will be held, commencing on Tuesday, the 17th day of October, at the Brethren's meeting-house, 2½ miles east of South English, Keokuk county, Iowa. Also a communion meeting at the same time and place. The usual invitation is extended. B. F. Flory.

LOVEFEASTS.

There will be a communion meeting in the Wakenduh church, Ray Co.,

Mo., on the 28th and 29th of October. Brethren visiting this state, will please remember our meeting.—The railroad station is Harden, on the Northern Mo. R. R.

S. B. Sherkey.

The Brethren intend, God willing, to hold a Lovefeast on the 27th of October, commencing at 11 o'clock, A. M. The usual invitation given. The meeting will be held at J. Y. Snarley's.

T. Y. Lyon.

Hudson, Ill.

If the Lord will, our communion meeting will be held in the Springfield branch, Noble county, Ind., on the 14th and 15th of October. The meeting will be held at the residence of the writer, two miles notrh-west of Brimfield Station. The usual invitation is given.

Joseph Weaver.

Our communion meetings come in the following manner, the Lord being willing:—

Brick meeting-house, near Newhope, Augusta county, Va., Oct. 4th; Barren Ridge, on the 27th; Mt. Vernon, on the 31st; commencing at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. We would be glad to have ministering brethren form a distance to be with us.

E. F. Brower.

MARRIED.

On the 14th of Sept. last, at the residence of the bride's father, by the writer, brother John P. Crumpacker and Miss Neoma K. McDonald, both of Montgomery Co., Va.

A. Crumpacker.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with obituary notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In Preston county, Va, Sept. 26th, brother SAMUEL BOYER, aged 29 years 10 months and 4 days. Funeral services by Jacob M. Thomas and the writer.

Visitor please copy.

James A. Ridenour.

In Huntington county, Ind., Sept. 10th, NANCY daughter of brother A. B. and sister Mary SNOWBERGER, aged 1 year 2 months and 5 days. Funeral services deferred for another time, in consequence of the illness of the mother.

In Cedar county, Iowa, on Sept. 25th, of Heart disease, sister ELIZABETH, wife of brother Amos DROLLINGER, aged 45 years and 3 months. Funeral discourse by Solomon Musselman, text, 2 Kings 20: 1. A large concourse of people followed her to her grave.

July 22nd, in Chester County, CATHARINE ROTHERMEL, late of Reading, Pa., aged 53 years 9 months and 17 days; having been a member of the North Coventry church for 2[illegible] years. Amiable and lovely in life, while reason remained. And though her departure was under a cloud, we doubt not, a glorious resurrection will be hers.

I. Price.

In the Elklick branch, Somerset county, Pa., Sept. 27th, of Cholera morbus, CHRISTIAN SAYLER, aged 78 years 3 months and 4 days. Deceased was a consistent member of the menonite faith; a man much respected by all who had formed an acquaintance with him. He has left behind two brothers, and one sister, wife of our esteemed brother and Eld. Jacob Blough of the Berlin branch, two sons, and three daughters,—all members of the church, two of them are serving as ministers. Thus passed away one that has left to his children and friends many pleasant reminiscence. The funeral took place on the 29th at 10 A. M., attended by a large number of his friends. The occasion was improved from Ecclesiastes 9: 10, by H. Blough (Menon.) and the writer.

C. G. Lint.

In the bounds of the Big Creek congregation, Feb. 1st ANDREW F NIESBED, infant son of friend Alex and sister Susan Neisbed. The funerrl text, selected by the sister, was Matth. 19: 14. Services conducted by the writer.

In Mo., June 5th, brother CLARK TAMSED, aged 66 years. On his death-bed he requested that I should preach his funeral discourse at his former residence, at the house of the widow; and so I attended on the first Sunday in Sept., and preached both in the forenoon and afternoon. Text, 1 Cor. latter part of the 15th chapter.

Michael Forney.

LIST OF MONEYS received for subscription, books, &c.,

J. A. Sell,	.50	J. Weaver,	9.10
J. H. Dilling,	1 00	N. P. Maust,	1.50
H. Heckman,	14 85	J. Rothermel,	1.50
J. Reiff,	.50	J. Wobbert,	1 00
Dr. F. C. Renner,	1.35	H. Machlin,	.50
Wm. K. Gillum,	.70	H. Knouff,	1.00

Advertisements.

WE will admit a limited number of select advertisements at the following rates

One Insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.

No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations.

Christ on Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

TYRONE BANK,
TYRONE, PA.

This Bank, intending to do a general banking business, solicits accounts from Banks' Bankers and others. Collections made on all points. Interest allowed on DEPOSITS left on time. Paper discounted on liberal terms

Wm. P. Orbison,	D. P. Gwin,
John Scott,	H. G. Fisher,
Thomas Fisher,	J. H. Glazier,
Wm. Dorris,	G. C. Wilhide,
G. W. Garrettson,	and others.

A Card.

Drs. D. Fahrney & Son, Uroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.

7-10- 1 yr. pd.

A BOOK WHICH EVERY ONE SHOULD POSSESS.

Just Published,—265 pp. 32mo, illustrated with numerous cuts, bound in cloth, $1.50 in paper, $1.00. Free by mail on receipt of price.

FIRST HELP IN ACCIDENTS AND IN SICKNESS.

A Guide in the absence or before the arrival of Medical Assistance. Published with the recommendation of the Highest Medical Authority.

The following are some of the subjects upon which it treats:—Bad Air, Bites, Bleeding, Broken Bones, Bruises, Burns, Choking, Cholera, Cold Contusions, Dislocations, Drowning, Dysentery, Fevers, Fractures, Hanging, Nursing, Poisoning, Scalds, Smallpox, Sprains, Suffocation, Sunstroke, etc., and other Accidents and Sickness where instant aid is needful.

This volume, written by eminent Physicians, is a practical digest of scientific medical-knowledge, so far as relates to that aid which may properly be rendered in cases of Accident and Sickness in the absence of a Physician.

Prepared for the Press by Editors of Good Health Magazine.

ALEXANDER MOORE,
Publisher, BOSTON, Mass.

BURLINGTON.

Leaving the East and arriving at Chicago or Indianapolis, how shall we reach the West? The best Line is acknowledged to be the C. B. and Q., joined together with the B. & M. Railroad by the Iron Bridge at Burlington, and called the Burlington Route.

The main line of the Route running to Omaha, connects with the great Pacific Roads, and forms to-day the leading route to California. The Middle Branch, entering Nebraska at Plattsmouth, passes through Lincoln, the State Capital, and will this year be finished to Fort Kearney, forming the shortest route across the Continent by over 100 miles.

Another branch of the B. M., diverging at Red Oak, falls into a line running down the Missouri through St. Joe to Kansas City, and all Kansas. Passengers by this route to Kansas, see Illinois, Southern Iowa, and Missouri, and, by a slight divergence, can see Nebraska also.

Lovers of fine views should remember the Burlington Route for its towns "high-gleaming from afar"—its tree-fringed streams—its rough bluffs and quarries—its corn-ocean stretching over the prairies further than eye can reach.

Land-buyers will be sure to remember it, for they have friends among the two thousand who have already bought farms from Geo. S. Harris, the Land Commissioner of the B. & M. R. R. at Burlington, Iowa, or among the four thousand home-steaders and pre-emptors who last year filed claims in the Lincoln Land Office, where "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm."

1780 1871

ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK?

Use Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

An Alterative and Cathartic, or Tonic and Purge combined, for diseases arising from bad blood; such as Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Erysipelas, Worms, Chills and Fever, Scrofula, Pimples, Tetter, &c. TRY IT.

Established 178 in package form. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form which was brought to its present state of preservation and perfection some years later, by Dr. P. Fahrney, Chicago, Ill's, who conducts the trade west of Ohio. Great reputation! Many Testimonials! Ask for that prepared at Waynesboro, Pa., and Chicago Ill's. Beware of imitations. Genuine retail's at $1 25 per bottle. Druggists and Medicine dealers sell it.

Dr. P. Fahrney's "Health Messenger" gives the history and uses of the BLOOD CLEANSER testimonials, and other information, sent free of charge. Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co
WAYNESBORO PA.

Wm. M. Lloyd, Altoona, Pa. D. T. Caldwell, Tyrone Pa.

LLOYD, CALDWELL & CO.,
BANKERS,

Receive monies on deposit, and pay interest if left 6 months, at 4 per cent per annum, or 5 per cent. if left one year.

Special contracts made with parties acting as administrators, executors, guardians, and persons holding monies in trust. Dealers in every description of Stocks and Bonds.—Government Securities made a speciality.

Gold and Silver bought and sold, and a general Banking business transacted.

Universal Guide for Cutting Garments.

By which every family may cut its own garments for men and boys, of twenty six different sizes; for Coats, Pants, Vests, and Shirts, and Ladies' Dress Bodies. Agents wanted to sell State, County, and Family Rights. For Particulars address MILLER & QUINN, Tyrone, Blair Co., Pa.

J. S. THOMAS, &CO.
WHOLESALE GROCERS
and
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

No 305 RACE St. ABOVE 3RD, PHILADELPHIA,
N. B. Country Produce taken in exchange for goods or sold on commission.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine, with Drop Feed, new Take-up, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted FIRST CLASS, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted traveling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $5 00 per month. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. Co.
38 East Union Square, 17th St., New York

BOOKS FOR SALE

For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price, $4.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol., $2.25. Indispensable.

Life at Home; or the Family and its MEMBERS.—Including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed. The Altar in the House, etc. By Wm. Aikman, $1.50;

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. THOMPSON. Fancy Cloth. $1.00.

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand-book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners, with a Chart for recording the sizes of the different Organs of the Brain, in the Delineation of Character, with upwards of 170 Engravings. Muslin, $1.25.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50;

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By W. PITTINGER, $1.50.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Beautifully Illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth, gilt, beveled boards. Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof-Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75 cents.

Any of the above sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

Phrenological Journal, An Illus- TRATED, First-Class Family Magazine, devoted to "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3 00 a By a special arrangement we are enabled to the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL and Christian mily Companion together for $3.50, or with the ous Youth, for $3.00. We commend the JOURNAL all who want a good Family Magazine, and who ...es not?

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and state written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to H. R. HOLSINGER. DALE CITY, Some. PA

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	10 30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post pain,	50
Per dozen, " "	5.50

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents $6.00 per dozen.

COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid. $2.7 Reserved at the office,	2.25
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder, ingle copy, post paid,	.75
2 copies, by Express,	7.00
Sions Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	.60
German & English Testaments,	.75

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25

32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION. 25

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Certificates &c.

MarriageCertificate, per doz., post paid, 0.30, CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP. Per doz, 0.20

FACTS.—RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE, 12 pages five cents single copy; thirty cents a doz. All orders should be accompanied with the money, and the name of person, postoffice county & state written in unmistakable letters

THE PIOUS YOUTH
A MONTHLY PUBLICATION

Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.

One dollar a year in advance.

THE
Christian Family Companio

Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements; that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
DALE CITY Somerset Co., Pa.

Christian Family Companion

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum

VOLUME VII. TYRONE, PA., TUESDAY, OCT. 17, 1871. NUMBER 42.

Indian Summer.

Just after the death of the flowers,
And before they are buried in snow,
There comes a festival season,
When nature is all aglow—
Aglow with a mystical splendor
That rivals the brightness of Spring—
Aglow with a beauty more tender
Than aught which fair summer could bring.

Some spirit akin to the rainbow,
Then borrows its magical dyes,
And mantles the far spreading landscape
In hues that bewilder the eyes.
The sun from his cloud-pillowed chamber
Smiles soft on a vision so gay,
And dreams that his favorite children,
The flowers, have not yet passed away.

There's a luminous mist on the mountain,
A light, azure haze in the air,
As if angels, while heavenward soaring,
Had left their bright robes floating there;
The breeze is so soft, so caressing,
It seems a mute token of love,
And floats to the heart like a blessing
From some happy spirit above.

These days, so serene and so charming,
Awaken a dreamy delight—
A tremulous, tearful enjoyment,
Like soft strains of music at night;
We know they're fading and fleeting,
That quickly, too quickly they'll end,
And we watch them with a yearning affection,
As at parting we watch a dear friend.

Oh! beautiful Indian Summer!
Thou favorite child of the year,
Thou darling, whom Nature enshrines
With gifts and adornments so dear!
How fain would we woo thee to linger
On mountains and meadows awhile,
For our hearts, like the sweet haunts of Nature,
Rejoice and grow young in thy smile.

Not alone to the sad field of Autumn
Dost thou a lost brightness restore,
But thou bringest a world-weary spirit
Sweet dreams of its childhood once more;
Thy loveliness fills us with memories
Of all that are brightest and best—
Thy peace and serenity offer
A foretaste of heavenly rest.

A Night Burial.

BY J. S. M'FADDEN.

"FATAL ACCIDENT.—John Early was killed on the night of Sept. 26th, by the accidental discharge of his gun. He lived but four hours."

He was a young man in the prime of life, and who, by his robust frame and hearty looking countenance, bade fair for a long life; but in the short space of four hours was dead. How sudden, and unexpected too! Two days before, I saw him, looking as well as I ever saw any one—talking, laughing, smiling, and greeting his acquaintances; but alas! how changed that form, how silent that face, his eyes closed, his body still—all from a live and strong being in the short space of two days, to a lifeless, cold corpse! How true that "in the midst of life we are in death!" The exigencies of the case demanded that the funeral take place in a short time; but the preparations were not completed till about 7 P. M.: then the space of about 8 miles had to be traversed to reach the place of interment. I waited at the "city of the dead" for the funeral cortege to arrive. We did not know that the funeral would be so late; but the sun sunk lower and lower into the hazy west; the shadows lengthened, and the evening gradually waned away into night; the birds ceased their songs of praise, folded their wings, and closed their eyes; the lowing herds returned slowly to their homes, and all nature sunk to a peaceful quiet for the silent watches of the night. The pale moon rose majestically and shed its soft, silvery light over the silent earth; and as it mounted higher and higher the heavens, light and fleecy clouds, ever and anon, flitted across its silent face, and made the shadows on the wall and from the trees deeper. Yet we kept our silent vigils; but at last they came. Then we followed "that slow paced train, who bore sadly to an open grave what was once animated and beautiful."

We all desired to see the still form before us. The coffin was opened, and there, before us, lay all that was left of John Early. His looks were like those of one in a quiet sleep: the eyes slightly open, the lips parted as though they would say, "soon, yes, very soon, you that now gaze on my still features will also lie in death's cold embrace, prepared or unprepared."

The scene was more solemn and heightened by the moon's pale beams falling on the still features of the dead; and as I looked on the face of the sleeper, I thought,

"The good, the brave, the beautiful,
How dreamless is their sleep!"

Tears flowed from many eyes; and all felt a deep but silent sorrow. We covered up the pall; we lowered him into the grave, and like Moore,

"We buried him darkly at dead of night."

How dark, how narrow was his bed! The rays of the moon cast but a dull light down the vault as we gazed into the "Prison house of clay," and knew that "The boast of heraldry, the pomp of power,

And all that beauty, all that wealth e'er gave,
Await alike the inevitable hour:
The path of glory leads but to the grave."

As the clods of the valley fell into the grave, the stillness was broken by,

"Hark! from the tombs a doleful sound;
My ears, attend the cry:
Ye living men come view the ground,
Where you must shortly lie."

Slowly but surely the sods fell and filled that narrow house; and as it neared the level,

"Princes, this clay must be your bed,
In spite of all your towers!
The tall, the wise, the rev'rend head
Must lie as low as ours," was borne on the breeze and the stillness of the night made it so much more effective; and as they made the sides of the narrow house smooth and placed the foot and head boards, the last verse,

"While pity prompts the rising sigh,
O may this truth impres'd
With awful pow'r—I too must die—
Sink deep in every breast."

was sung; and then, "We have done all we can for him" was said; the assembly turned from the last earthly resting place of John Early, and returned to their homes sadder, and it is hoped, wiser men and women.

When I die, bury me at night: it seems as though the dead only go to sleep to wake in the great morn of the last day.

How true it is, that, "in the midst of life we are in death;" and how soon and how easily is the silver cord of life severed, and man returns to his silent home; "and the mourners go about the street." There is no beauty, no comliness in man that continueth, except that never "dying soul." "Man that is born of woman, is of few days and full of trouble. He cometh forth as a flower and is cut down; he fleeth as a shadow and continueth not."

Oh! that man would be wise to-day, and prepare to meet his God! You that are yet out of the "narrow way," strive to enter it now. "Turn, oh! why will you die?

Hear now, all ye sons and daughters of men, the conclusion of the whole matter: "Fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man.

The Way of Salvation Plain.

The Bible has had innumerable commentators. Some, by their books and sermons remind us of him who lighted a candle to show the sun; and others, like the fog bank through which the sun shines shorn of his beams, "darken counsel by words," and make what is clear, obscure. By their labors, some have diluted, making their sermons or commentaries a vehicle for error, have adulterated the truth of God, the wine of life. But however this may be, more pens have been worn, more breath spent, more printing presses employed in explaining the Bible than all other books whatever; so that, were all the books collected, which have been written to throw light on the Scriptures, they would, not excepting that of Alexandria, which it took many weeks to reduce to ashes—form the largest library the world ever saw. Are we to infer from this that the way of life is obscure? By no means. All that is necessary to know, "The wayfaring men; though fools, shall not err therein," says the prophet; and without disparaging the labors of pious and able divines to explore the mysteries and shed light on the obscurities of the sacred volume, the simple Bible, blessed by God, has proved to unlettered thousands a safe a sufficient guide. Whatever genius and arduous study it may repuire to rise to a place in the temple of fame, many an human Christian, hardly able to spell his way through the Word of God, has reached one in the temple of heaven. Thousands so deficient to talent or energy as never to have been able to make their way in this world have found their way to a better one; nor are there wanting interesting and well attesed cases of imbeciles who, through destitute of capacity for ordinary, have known Him, whom to know is life eternal—so plain the way through childlike faith in Christ—so easy as well to the unsterdy gast of simpletons as to the tottering foot of childhood, as to verify the words, "The wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein." With this simple answer to the great, "What shall I do to be saved?" "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved," none need be excluded from heaven because of ignorance; as with virtue in Christ's blood to cleanse the chief of sinners, none need be excluded because of sin. It need no learning to learn this way. What has the church seen? God ordaining strength out of the mouth of babes and sucklings; gray haired men learning wisdom at the feet of childhood; the deathbeds of the humble poor, like the very gates of heaven, the child learning the way to life on his mother's knee; the thief learning it on his dying cross; the mantle of prophets falling on plowmen; heaven revealing its glories to humble shepherds; rude fisherman of Galilee called to the apostleship: grace polishing the roughest men; roaming savages tamed by the voice and sitting at the feet of Jesus, clothed and in their right mind. Simple faith in Him is all that is repuired; such confidences as the little child, lying in its mother's arms, hanging on her neck, looking up in her face, repose in the power of a mother's arm, and the tenderness of a mother's heart.—Dr. Guthrie.

A Good Beginning.—A freedmen's teacher writes of a colored woman, who, having learned her alphabet, said, 'Now I want to learn to spell Jesus, for 'pears like the rest will come easier if I learn to spell that name first.' A good many things 'come easier' if we learn that name first.

A good word is an easy obligation, but not to speak Ili requires only silence, and costs nothing.

For the Companion.

I Baptize with Water.

John the baptist was a very precise man in his declarations, relative to his teaching; and also to the practical part of his great mission. He was very careful in telling the multitude that they should bring forth fruits meet for repentance, and not begin to say: "we have Abraham to our father." Very careful was he to give them a distinguishing mark between himself and the great Personage he was about introducing to the people: saying "I baptize with water while on the other hand, the Messiah would baptize with the Holy Ghost and with fire. Representing the thing in this manner, there could not be a wrong conclusion drawn between these two parties, for John was proving and making good his assertion every day, in that he was baptizing all his subjects with water. Now from this expression of John, do our friend and advocates of pouring and sprinkling for baptism, make a strong point, for their cherished dogma, in their estimation. "That shows" say they, "that water was applied to the applicant, and as a matter of course the Jordon could not be the thing referred to. How would it read: with the Jordan, with the choir? In my humble opinion such reasoning is an utter disgrace to the profession, it certainly was but to show, or point out, the different elements which these two great and noted characters were making use of in their baptisms, but let us now try the languuge just as it stands, and we will see what conclusion it will inevitably drive us unto.

When John says with water, I understand him to mean water and nothing else but the pure, simple water, just as he found it in the Jordan. This is, I presume, admitted by Bible readers, of whatever faith. This brings our pouring and sprinkling neighbors into a pitiful dilemma. The hobby they have been driving for years, cannot be driven along side of John the baptist and claim for him and identify, for John is too emphatic in his use of language: with water. Notice how these great, colleage bred and wise Shepherds, reason, to prove that baptism with water means pouring or sprinkling. In order to do this they lay before their people, the law of purification as practiced by Moses, where they say, water was applied, either by sprinkling or pouring, and the phrase (with water) is applicable in every sense of the word, and they are astonished above measure, those baptists or immersionist, cannot see the similarity; and the Brethren preachers and members, are entirely too ignorant to know any better. Now don't be surprised if I, one of the latter, tell you successionists and all others, that I am now prepared to inform you, and that by a careful reading of the Bible, no man, woman, nor child, was ever sprinkled "with water by divine authority, under any dispensation, whether Patriarchal, Jewish, or Christian, for a purifying purpose, do not startle at this, nor cast it aside because a 'dunkard' makes this declaration, and you being taught and instructed by the college bred Apostolic ministers, do not therefore say we need not pay any attention to this. That is just the reason why the blind will lead the blind. By a careful reading of the purifying law you will discover that water and ashes, or blood were mixed together; but 'with water' alone, never since the world began. And again, I challenge the sprinkled world, to give me one instance where a man, woman, or child ever was sprinkled, or that any sprinkling was done with water, from the instruction of Christ, to the close of the New Testament, you find sprinkling about four times in the New Testament, and in every case BLOOD, &c., and not water was sprinkled.

Now, because of these plain and simple truths we immersionists will not accept, of the supposition that the phrase with water, necessarily means sprinkled or poured upon the person, notwithstanding the many instances they refer us to in the Bible where sprinkling was performed.—They must prove and that without a shadow of a doubt, that sprinkling for the purification of sinful flesh, was ever performed with water alone, before I am ready to accept of the proposition at all. I still think that John's language is strong and plain enough to convince any honest man or woman, that he had no reference to the ceremonial or purification water, when he said with water.

Again John's declaration: "I baptize with water, but he that cometh after me shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost," no doubt caused our sprinkling and pouring friends much trouble, for it makes them preach up two modes of Baptism. It will not do for them to say that sprinkling with water is the only mode of Christian Baptism, for we cannot find, (at least I am right:) that the Holy Ghost was ever sprinkled on any person, but we read of a pouring out of the Holy Ghost, or Spirit, and to take this as a case, (that is pouring) then we cannot find that water of any kind was poured on any person, for purifying purposes, hence the best they could do under these difficulties circumstances was to make them both valid. This then would be two baptisms, and the apostle Paul, positively affirms that there is but one Lord, one Faith, one BAPTISM. Now who would you suppose was right. Paul or these liberalists. Paul speaks of one, and they allow three to be right. Sprinkling Pouring, and IMMERSION.

C. G. LENT.

The Lord not Slack.

THE Lord will have his house filled His work must and will be done; and it must and will be done in time. There is no haphazard as to when it will be done. The signs are fulfilling. God will not delay the consummation. There is a fixed day and hour in which the elements shall melt with fervent heat. There is an appointed time wherein the vials of wrath will be poured upon the ungodly. There is a special period in which the mark will be given. Probation still holds out; but God's work will be finished in time. That we do not know the time is no evidence that the work is not being hurried up. A remnant shall be saved; for he will finish the work and cut it short in righteousness; because a short work will the Lord make upon the earth. Rom. 9: 27, 28.—Advent Review.

PULL AT THE OAR.—The servants of Jesus are like rowers in a boat. They sit with their backs to the bow, and cannot see what lies ahead. But the Helmsman at the stern is on the look out, and he steers the boat whithersoever he wills. So in our godly undertakings we sit with our backs to the future. It is all unknown, tried, impenetrable. We know not what the morrow may bring forth. But it is our business to pull at the oar of prayer and labor. There is a Divine Helmsman who sees the future, and who holds the rudder in His hand. We have only to commit our way to Him, and to pull at the oar of duty. This is trust. This is faith

Is This All?

BY HORATIUS BONAR.

Sometimes I catch sweet glimpses of his face,
But that is all.
Sometimes he looks on me, and seems to smile,
But that is all.
Sometimes he speaks a passing word of peace,
But that is all.
Sometimes I think I hear his loving voice,
Upon me call.

And is this all he meant when thus he spoke:
"Come unto!"
Is there no deeper, more enduring rest
In him for thee?
Is there no steadier light for thee in him?
O, come and see!

O, come and see! O, look, and look again!
All shall be right;
O, taste his love, and see that it is good,
Thou child of night!
O, trust thou, trust thou in his grace and power!
Then all is bright.

Nay, do not wrong him by thy heavy thoughts,
But love his love.
Do thou full justice to his tenderness,
His mercy prove,
Take him for what he is; O, take him all,
And look above!

Then shall thy tossing soul find anchorage
And steadfast peace;
Thy love shall rest on his; thy weary doubts
Forever cease.
Thy heart shall find in him and his grace,
Its rest and bliss.

Christ and his love shall be thy blessed all
Forevermore!
Christ and his light shall shine on all thy ways
Forevermore!
Christ and his peace shall keep thy trouble
Forevermore.

The World Our Battlefield.

A mind of wandering and melancholy thought, impatient of the grievous realities of our state, may at some moments, almost breathe the wish that we had been a different order of beings, in another dwelling place than teis, and appointed on a different service to the Almighty. In vain! Here still we are, to pass the first of our existence in a world where it is impossible to be at peace, because there has come into it a mortal enemy to all that live in it. Amidst the darkness, that veils from us the state of the universe, we would willingly be persuaded that this, our world, may be the only region (except that of penal justice) where the cause of evil is permitted to maintain a contest. Here, perhaps, may be almost its last encampment, where its prolonged power of hospitality may be suffered in order to give a protracted display of the manner of its appointed destruction. Here our lot is cast, on a ground so awfully preoccupied; a calamitous distinction! and yet a sublime one, if thus we may render to the Eternal King a service of a more arduous kind than it is possible to the inhabitants of any other world than this to render him; and if thus we may be trained, through devotion and conformity to the Celestial Chief in this warfare, to the final attainment of what he has promised in so many illustrious forms, to him that overcometh. We shall soon leave the regions where so much is in rebellion against our God. But we shall go where all that pass from our world must present themselves as from battle, or be denied to mingle in the eternal joys and triumphs of the conquerors.—John Foster.

Glory.

It is with words as it is with the stars One word differs from another word in significance, as one star differs from another star in glory. In the little word, glory, are comprised whole worlds of meaning. It is among words, what a star of the first magnitude is among stars. Few are the words that it does not outshine. We may almost say "It is a star that dwells apart."

THE WORD GLORY OFTEN MISAPPLIED.

At the same time, what word to a greater extent than this, has been misapplied. What popular error in ancient, and indeed, we must add, in modern times, in Pagan, and even in Christian lands, has been more widely prevalent than that concerning true glory. The history of the nations acquaints us with instances countless, in which men have gloried in their shame. It is amazing with what frequency they have reversed the divine order, and have put shame for glory, and glory for shame.

RESULTS OF FALSE IDEA OF GLORY.

The consequences of the misapplication of this noble word are disastrous in the extreme. A mistake in the running of railroad trains resulted in the appalling horror at Revere, a frightful disaster by which two score of our fellow beings suffered death in its most agonizing forms, and as many more it may be, were wounded mutilated and disabled for life. But, heart rending as are the consequences of this and similar mistakes, what are they in comparison with the evils, sufferings, calamities and horrors that a mistaken conception of "glory" has produced! Would we have an idea of the stupendous horrors and woes caused by a misconception of the nature of glory? we need simply to contemplate the devastation, ruin and death that have marked the course of the Cæsars, the Alexanders, the Hannibals, the Napoleons, the great military heroes and conquerors of the world. Ah! We need simply to contemplate the career and present condition of prostrate, bleeding, agonizing France. Why do we see the once fairest land of the world now a desolation? Why have we seen hunhundreds of thousands of once happy homes converted into abodes of sorrow and wretchedness? Why those sad, sad spectacles, "burnt cities and villages, and hamlets plowed by the red plowshare of war and sown with the Dead-sea salt of human tears, that fall hopeless on the desolation?"—Why the distressing cries of millions of widows and orphans, bereft by war of their natural protectors? In short, whence all the varied and astounding horrors of the Franco-Prussian war? Must we not answer, from the misapplication of this little word "glory?"—These evils and woes whose variety and magnitude, words utterly fail to set forth, have all proceeded from a misconception of the nature of glory. The false application of this one word has proved the ruin of France. Glory has been her watchword. And a more noble and inspiring watchword a nation cannot have. But how deplorable her mistage in supposing the highest glory consists of military prowess and warlike exploits. "A maddening enchantment of the glory of war" has infatuated France She has yielded to this "splendid, pestilent delusion." And we see the result.

FALSE IDEA OF GLORY PREVALENT.

But alas! this pestilent delusion in respect to the glory of war is not confined to France. Multitudes of people in all lands are under its power —

That brilliant English writer, Mr Hartpole Lecey, in his recent work, the "History of Morals," very pertinently says, "To those who reflect deeply upon moral history, few things I suppose, are more humiliating than to contrast the admiration and profound reverential attachment excited by a conqueror, who through the promptings of simple vanity, through love of fame or through greed of territory, has wantonly caused the deaths, the sufferings, or the bereavements of thousands, with the abhorrence produced by a single act of murder, or robbery committed by a poor and ignorant man, perhaps under the pressure of extreme want or intolerable wrong." He endeavors to indicate some of the things, such as the attraction of genius and power, which the vulgar measure by the material fruits, that veil "the attrocity of the conqueror's career," and shed a sacred glow around the very man whose prodigious egotism had rendered the sacrifice of the life-blood of millions necessary. Alas! how prevalent this sentiment which Mr. Leckey truly says is humiliating to the last degree. In the estimation of multitudes, only deeds of military prowess and valor, of physical might, are great and glorious. An agent of the Peace Society in the far West, writes that a clergyman expressed to him the fear that if wars should cease, men would sink into indolence, lose all ambition and enthusiasm. We trust this man, in these views has not the sympathy of another ambassador of the Prince of Peace.

But there is too much reason to think he represents a numerous class of people. Speak in their hearing of magnificent achievements, heroic exploits, splendid victories, glorious triumphs, they will say, to be sure you must mean the deeds, exploits and achievements of war and the battle field; such achievements as imply an enormous destruction of human life and happiness.

A GLORY THAT ECLIPSES THAT OF THE CONQUEROR.

How slow of heart are even Christian people to believe, that, "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city." It is to be feared Paul is too little credited in his account of person that are "more than conquerors." It is to be feared there are many who do not discover that the truest heroism is displayed in alleviating rather than creating, suffering, in saving men rather than destroying them. Oh that men might at length learn that the careers most illustrious, are those that most perfectly embody the teaching of the Sermon on the Mount, that the lives which shine with the divinest glory are those in which the charity or love, of which Paul gives an inimitable description, is most perfectly exemplified. Ambition, the stimulus of passion, the applause of multitudes, the inspiration of martial music may make even cowards brave on the battle-field. But to subject all the fierce passions of the soul to the authority of conscience and right reason, to bear the disappointments of life with a calm and submissive spirit, to stand erect when great calamities come crashing down upon one, to find your way to your enemy, the man that has injured you and offended you seven times, yea seventy times seven, and say the words, "I forgive you,"—to do these things demands the exercise of qualities intrinsically the noblest and highest.

WITH GREAT FORCE AND TRUTH.

Dr. Bushnell says, "Napoleon made the whole civilized world shake with dread. But when he came to the place where true greatness consisted only in patience, that was too great for him. Just where any Christian woman would have shone forth in the true radiance and sublimity of an all-victorious patience, he, the conqueror of empires, broke down into a peevish fretful, irritable temper, and losing thus at once, all dignity and composure of soul, died before his time. On the other hand we have in Socrates an illustrious example of the dignity and sacred grandeur of patience. No ancient character stands with him.—He is felt to be a kind of sacred man who by means of his wonderful passivity to wrong, and his gentleness towards his enemies, is set quite above his kind, revealing as it were, the gift of some higher nature."

Oh, when shall rulers and peoples all over the earth, be cured of the maddening enchantment of the glory of war! Oh! when shall they be set free from this splendid, pestilent delusion about heroes! When shall they learn that true glory is gained by living the principles and imitating the example of the Prince of Peace!

Getting What is Thought.

When a man can say, "I am going to the house of God this morning, and, O, may God meet me there!" he will not long go there in vain. When a hearer can declare, "As soon as I take my seat in the congregation my one thought is, Lord, bless my soul this day!" he cannot for long be disappointed. Usually, in going up to God's house, we get what we go for. Some came because it is the custom, some to meet a friend, some—they scarcely know why; but when you know what you come for, the Lord, who gave you this desire, will gratify it. I was pleased with the word of a dear sister this morning when I came in at the back gate; she said to me, "my dear sir, my soul is very hungry this morning. May the Lord give you bread for me." I believe that food convenient will be given.—When a sinner is very hungry after Christ, Christ is very near to him.—The worst of it is, many of you do not come to find Jesus; it is not he you are seeking for; if you were seeking him, he would soon appear to you. A young woman who was asked during a revival, "How is it you have not found Christ?" "Sir," said she, "I think it is because I have not sought him." It is so. None shall be able to say, at the last, "I sought him, but I found him not." In all cases at the last, if Jesus Christ be not found, it must be because he has not been devoutly, earnestly, importunately sought, for his promise is, "Seek, and ye shall find."—Spurgeon.

Temper at Home.

A handful of snow is a beautiful thing, soft or sparkling, as the case may be, outside, but very damp and disagreeable by the fireside And there are domestic snow-balls—soft as wool, or sparkling as gems outside—"pleasant spoken, nice men," who leave all that aside as they wipe their feet (if they do that(at their own door, and who become cheerless, cold, and depressing the moment their shadow falls on their own hearth. The poor mother instantly goes "on her good behavior;" the children cease to be natural, and put on their humble looks; the dog and cat retire to the corner farthest from him with an expression which, rightly interpreted, says plainly, "It's all up now!"—Surely this is the way to unmake happy homes. Come now, my dear friend, let me talk to you. If there is a pleasant word in your mouth in the twenty-four hours, do say it to that hard-working woman whom you vowed to "cherish"—to cherish, mind not only to provide for and all that, but to CHERISH. And these little boys and girls that are hungry for "petting" and affection from you, can not you make out any little manly pleasantry for them? They are not culprits, of whom you are the jailor. Why, they are your own children, with young hearts in their bosoms, to whom HOME ought to be the dearest place, and father the best man in the whole world—"father," the name and the object by which their child's heart ought to climb up to the notion of our Father in heaven! If you had trouble and toil outside—as who has not?—which gathered your brows and set your lips during the day, lay off the load when you lay off your coat, and let your presence make a little holiday in the dwelling. You are the strongest, most commanding person there—the husband or house-band knitting all together. Well, bind them together not with the cold hard grip of iron, but with the silken cords of human love. Brighten up, and speak cheerily; very lean wit will be applauded in a good-humored circle; and your kindly speech will awaken kindly echoes all through the dwelling. Then the house will miss you when you are out, and every living thing in it will welcome your return. You will give a happy, healthy lively tone to the whole circle, and save tears, time, and medical attendance.

We would not willingly convey the impression that all the good feeling is to be on the side of the Father, for much might be said to wives and others on the influence of temper and tone in making home happy. Meantime my fancy roams through dwellings into which I have peeped, into quiet "parlors" where the carpet is clean and not old, and the furniture polished and bright; into "rooms" where the chairs are dead and the floor carpetless; into "kitchens" where the family live, and the meals are cooked and eaten, and the boys and girls are as blithe as the sparrows in the thatch overhead, and I see that it is not so much wealth, nor learning, nor clothing, nor servants, nor toil, nor idleness, nor town, nor country, nor rank, nor station, as tone and temper, that makes life joyous or miserable, that renders homes happy or wretched. And I see, too, that in town or country, in Ulster or Leinster, in Europe or America, God's grace, and good sense make life what no teachers, or accomplishments, or means, or society, can make it, the opening stave of an everlasting psalm, the fair beginning of an endless existence, the goodly, modest, well-proportioned vestibule to a temple of God's building, that shall never decay, wax old, or vanish away.—John Hall.

SUNSHINE AND SLEEP.—Sleepless people—and they are many in America—should court the sun. The very worst soporific is laudanum, and the very best, sunshine. Therefore, it is very plain that the poor sleepers should pass as many hours as possible in sunshine, and as few as possible in the shade. Many women are martyrs, and yet they do not know it. They shut the sunshine out of their houses and their hearts, they wear vails, they carry parasols, they do all possible to keep off the subtlest and yet most potent influence which is intended to give them strength and beauty and cheerfulness. Is it not time to change all this and so get color and roses in our pale cheeks, strength in our weak backs, and courage in our timid souls? The women of America are pale and delicrte; they may be blooming and strong, and the sunlight will be a potent influence in this transformation.

REMEMBER GOOD WORDS AS WELL AS ILL.—Hon. Horace Greeley, in a lecture before a Press Club, said: "It is strange how close men will read the papers. We never say anything that anybody don't like, but what we soon hear of it, and everybody tells us about it. But if once in a while we happen to say a good thing, we never hear of that—nobody seems to notice that. We must pay some man a hundred compliments and give him a dozen puffs, and he takes its as a tribute to his greatness, and never thinks of it—never thinks it does him any good. But if we happen to say anything this man don't like, or something he imagines is a reflection on him or his character, see how quick he flares up and gets mad about it. All our evil is duly charged to us, but we never, apparently, get any credit for what we do." Human nature has not changed much since Horace delivered the above.

WAR CAUSED BY HAIR.—In the twelfth century, the French clergy made violent opposition to long hair and beards. Louis VII. conformed to the new edict, shaving his beard and cutting short his hair. His wife Eleanor was disgusted, and protested that she had married a prince, and he had turned monk. A divorce resulted—it is said at her instigation.—Henry of Anjou, afterward Henry II. of England, married her. But the match was unhappy. His wife fomented disputes, first with his brother, and then with his four sons; and a series of wars was commenced which lasted for centuries. An old historian soys, "Upwards of three millions of Frenchmen perished, because an archbishop was offended with long hair, a king cut his hair and shaved his beard, and a queen looked upon short hair and smooth chin as ridiculous."

DON'T FRET.—"I dare no more fret," said John Wesley, "than to curse and swear." One who knew him well said that he never saw him low-spirited or fretful in his life. He says of them:

"To have people at my ears murmuring and fretting at everything, is like tearing the flesh from my bones. By the grace of God, I am discontent at nothing. I see God sitting on his throne and ruling all things." If every one was of John Wesley's spirit, it would revolutionize the world.—Christians lose all their wayside comforts, and dishonor the Master, by their fretfulness over little troubles.—Some, who can bear the great sorrows of life with a martyr's faith and patience, are utterly overthrown by some trifling incident. The temper is an unruly steed, which must be kept in hand every moment.

To be perfectly obedient to the commandment of God, is, to be completely happy. Surely no one ought to complain of being required to persue his one greatest happiness. The angels in heaven are happy because they are holy, and always employed in holy exercises and duties.

E. MILLER.

For the Companion.

Alice and Emma Harchelroad.

BY ANNA MOORSHEAD.

Two little sisters side by side,
In solemn silence lie;
Their bodies rest within their tombs,
Their spirits up on high.

Kind Alice speaks in tones of love—
"The angels sing so sweet,
With glitt'ring crowns on harps of gold,
They play our ears to greet."

Emma responds: "Yes, Jesus smiles,
While he, with glory crowned,
In tones of gladness welcomes us
The throne of God around.

"We live to sing, and praise our king,
In anthems ever new.
Salvation's heirs, to him our songs
And praises all are due."

The parents both are left on earth—
One sister—brothers three,
Though sundered now, in blissful realms
United they shall be.

For when the resurrection morn
Will break upon the earth
United, they, to endless life
And glory shall come forth.

Waynesboro, Pa., Sept. 29.

Vicissitudes of Life.

BY G. C. LAMB.

In this world there is a mixture of light and darkness, knowledge and ignorance, holiness and sin, prosperity and adversity, happiness and affliction. Human life is full of change and variety. We sometimes experience such sudden changes that we can hardly believe them to be real.—To-day we sing of mercy, and to-morrow, perhaps, we weep under distressing judgments and circumstances. At one time we see the smiles of a smiling Providence; at another his frowns. Sometimes we are almost as an angel; and then again, "of all men the most miserable." Now we exclaim, "The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear?" and then, "O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me?" In the morning we rejoice as though entering the gate of heaven; in the evening we groan as if given over to hardness of heart and reprobacy of mind.

All these changes are common to the human family, and are the legitimate results of disobedience to the heavenly mandates. If it were not for sin this world would be filled with the presence and glory of God. Sin has corrupted the hearts of men and rendered them obnoxious in the sight of God. Take all sin and corruption out of the hearts of men, and this world would be a paradise to live in. All adversity, misery, wretchedness, and misfortune would cease, and God would be graciously pleased to take up his abode in the earth and dwell among men. Our hearts would be full of divine love, truth and holiness, and our cup of happiness would be full to overflowing. Calamity, sorrow, grief and pain would no longer afflict us, and quarrelings, strifes and contentions would not disturb the peace of home. The empty hand of poverty would not be stretched out, for the earth would yield its increase and fruits spontaneously. But this is not the case. We are in a world of temptation, sin, and wickedness, and it behooves us as rational creatures to seriously consider our condition. The vicissitudes of life should teach us

1. Our own ignorance. Our knowledge concerning all things around us is very dark and limited. We know but little of the infinite and eternal nature of God himself. We cannot understand his works and ways.—We know but little of the tenderness, love and compassion of Christ. We cannot comprehend the riches of his grace, the depth of his infinite love, and the height of his greatness. We cannot conceive the fullness of his mercy, his condescension, and his goodness. Or, what do we know of ourselves, our hearts, our inclinations, our dispositions, and our natures? There is something about ourselves which we connot understand. There are profound mysteries within our own breasts—a strangeness which we cannot explore. We have just light enough to show us the darkness of our souls, just knowledge enough to show us our own ignorance, and just wisdom enough to make us seek deliverance from this world of sin and misery. If it is our lot to be aflicted and troubled, to pass through discouraging scenes, sore trials, and bitter persecutions, we are apt to murmur and complain, yet we ought to be comforted, knowing that all things work together for good to them that love Jesus. All the vicissitudes of life are in the special providence of God, and he cares for us and supplies all our necessary wants. He desires our highest good, and will do and permit only such things as contribute to our welfare.—To show that God designs everything for the best, I need only refer to an imprisoned Joseph, to a dethroned David, to a troubled Israel, to an afflicted Job, and to a persecuted Paul. How ungrateful it is for us to complain of the providence of God!

2. Our dependence on God. The changes of life should teach us our own weakness and ignorance, and the strength and wisdom of God. Without his blessing we can accomplish nothing. But if we are prosperous we are too apt to boast of it and pride ourselves that we have accomplished it all. If the light of grace shines on our pathway we are too apt to think that we caused it to shine. We sometimes act as though we could control not only the workings of our own minds, but the events which concern us in a changing world. The Lord, therefore, in his mercy shows us our weakness and dependence on him by making our circumstances different from what we would have them.—That we may not forget him in the light, he sends us darkness. That we may not become selfish and worldly-minded by continual prosperity, he permits us to be afflicted and troubled; and then that our feet may not stumble, that our hearts may not fail us in darkness and distress, he sends light to shine into our hearts to comfort us. Yes, we are dependent upon God for all we have and are. He is with us at all times to care for us, and is inviting us to commit all to his care. And this consideration is what gave Job so much strength and comfort in one of the saddest hours. All around him was darkness and distress. His children were all taken from him, his property, and no one was left to give him any comfort but his companion, and she advised him to curse God and die. But he said to her, "Shall we receive good at the hand of the Lord and shall we not receive evil?" His friends came to see him, but for seven long days and nights they spoke not a single word to him. They saw his great affliction, his distress of body and mind, and at last they began to mock him, and told him that he was receiving all his affliction because he was a great sinner. They said he had professed to be a Christian when he was nothing but a miserable hypocrite.—

They told him that God was punishing him for his sins, and advised him to humble himself before God and ask God to forgive him. Such was the treatment which this poor man received from the world, from those whom he had good reasons to believe were his friends, and from whom he might expect much consolation. But he felt that he was not a hypocrite, and that God was not afflicting him because of his sins, and he said, "My righteousness I hold fast, and will not let it go; my heart shall not reproach me as long as I live."

The path of obedience to God, and dependence upon him, is as the shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. Every step we take in this direction makes us stronger to fight the battles of life. There may be changes and counter-changes in our lot, but what if there are?—Through the power of the Holy Ghost they are subduing our corruptions, exercising our graces, and bringing us to a more simple dependence upon God. Let us, then, be satisfied with our lot, and not regret anything that we have done or suffered for Jesus knowing that he alone can give us that peace of conscience which is worth infinitely more than all the brief and deceptive indulgences of a worldly life. If we have the hope of heaven it will make us far more rich and happy than all the possessions of earth without such hope. If we have the assurance of our heavenly Father's love and approbation it will shed light and joy on our pathway in all the dark hours of affliction and trouble. If our sins are pardoned through a living faith in Jesus Christ, it will disarm us of every fear, and take away the sting of death itself. Whether mourning or rejoicing, in sickness or in health, in trouble or in peace, this is the gracious call ever sounding in our ears, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls."—In all the adverse vicissitudes of life we ought to be comforted, knowing that they are but for a moment, and that we shall finally dwell with Jesus in glory, where afflictions never come and the storms of adversity are not known.—Religious Telescope.

Life Indefinitely Suspended.

A distinguished Swedish chemist, Professor Grusselbach, a professor of the university of Upsal, has come to the conclusion that those Egyptian mummies which are found in the ancient tombs on the Nile in a complete state, that is to say, without having been deprived of their brains and entrails, like most mummies, are not embalmed at all, but "are really the bodies of individuals whose lives have been momentarily suspended, with the intention of restoring them at some future time, only the secret of preservation was lost." Professor Grusselbach adduces many proofs in support of his idea—among others, his experiments during the last ten years, which he says have always proved successful. He took a snake and treated it in such a manner as to benumb it as though it had been carved in marble, and it was so brittle that, had he allowed it to fall, it would have broken into fragments.—In this state he kept it for several years, and then restored it to life by sprinkling it with a stimulating fluid, the composition of which is a secret. For fifteen years the snake has been undergoing an existence composed of successful deaths and resurrections, apparently without sustaining harm. The professor is reported to have sent a petition to his government, requesting that a criminal who has been condemned to death may be given to him to be treated in the same manner as the snake, promising to restore him to life again in two years. It is understood that the man undergoing this experiment is to be pardoned.—Of course, if a man can be kept in a state of suspended animation for two thousand years, and, if the professor succeeds, we may lay up a few specimens of our contempories for exhibition in the thirty-ninth century.—Appleton's Journal.

A Lesson for us All.—You remember the touching story of the daughter of Sir Robert Peel. Her father gave her, as a birth day present, a gorgeous riding habit, and went out with her on the same day for an airing in the park, his heart swelled with parental pride as he rode by her side. Shortly afterward she sickened and died of typhus fever of the most malignant type; and when inquiry was made as to how she had caught the infection, it was discovered that the habit, bought from one of the London West End tradesmen, had been made in a miserable attic, where the husband of the seamstress was lying ill of fever, and that it had been used by her to cover him in his shivering fits. Thus, whether we will believe it or not, the safety of the highest is bound up with the condition of the lowest; and, if we neglect their material, moral and spiritual interests, there will come a dreadful Nemesis to make the Divine displeasure on our conduct, and we may perceive our guilt all too late, when the vast temple of our liberties a shapeless mass of wreck and rubbish lies.

We Fade.—As the trials of life thicken, and the dreams of other days fade one by one in the deep vista of disappointed hope, the heart grows weary of the struggle, and we begin to realize our insignificance. Those who have climbed the pinnacle of fame or revel in luxury and wealth, go to the grave at last with the poor mendicant who begs by the wayside, and like him are soon forgotten. Generation after generation, says an eloquent writer, have felt as we feel, and their fellows were as active in life as ours are now. They passed away as a vapor, while nature wore the same aspect of beauty as when the Creator commanded her to be. And so it shall be when we are gone. The heavens shall be bright over our graves as they are now around our path; the world will have the same attractions for offsprings yet unborn that it had once for ourselves, and that it has now for our children.

The Day of Rest.—Never was there a more blessed institution than the Sabbath, the sacred day of rest from labor. For the soul's health and the body's health of the human race, on at least one day in seven, there should be an ever-returning intermission of daily toil. Thus, let a man attain to the period of threescore years and ten, he has gained a holiday of ten years' duration, even if his lot has been a labor for the remaining threescore years. Let childhood be taught to use, and manhood discreetly use, this blessed breathing time, as a day on which to raise the thoughts beyond the world, not less than for purposes of innocent recreation.

Christian Family Companion

Tyrone City, Pa., Oct. 17, 1871.

Migration.

The present is the last number of the Companion that will be printed at Tyrone. We have therefore a few words by way of farewell to our friends and neighbors in this community.

Over eight years ago we moved to Tyrone, and commenced the publication of a secular paper, and opened a job printing office. Everything looked gloomy then. Being in the midst of a terrible war, everybody seemed depressed, and business was dull.—Nevertheless, we commenced our work, and by the encouragement of the good and worthy part of our people, we were sustained in our enterprise for one year and six months. During that time we made the acquaintance of all the citizens of the town, men, women, and children, having in the mean time also taught several month's school. And among them we found many worthy and generous persons, some of whom it would give us pleasure to name here, if it were proper to do so; and we shall ever cherish for them the kindest regards, and hope to be remembered by them.

After commencing the publication of COMPANION, we sold out the local paper, and job office, and so had very little occasion, and on account of a constant throng of business, very little opportunity for associating with the people, except those with whom we came in contact through business transactions. Adding to this the constant and rapid increase of population; and the mutation of citizenship, we have lost much of our familiarity with the place and its inhabitants.

Although we have not been without our difficulties, yet we know of no one whom we cannot take by the hand with an affectionate farewell on our part, and as much respect on their part, as all persons have power to exercise. Tyrone, although the most civil place of its size that we have any knowledge of, is not without its bad and wicked persons. With this class we do not claim to be on very favorable terms; but there is not one of them whom we dread from motives of malice. We have reproved their vices, but endeavored to do it in a way that could not give offense.

But in our migration we also separate from the brethren and sisters of the Warrior's Mark congregation, as a member of that body, as well as resign the pastorship over them; but we shall now only refer to that relation, having spoken face to face to them almost to a person. These Christian ties are hard to sever, and would be unendurable, were it not for the assurance of their reunion.

Another class of persons with whom we regret to part, and who will as much, if not more than all others, lament our separation, is our mute friends, with whom we have formed an intimacy that was pleasant and profitable; and if this could reach them we would certainly extend the paragraph. There are none for whose welfare we more ardently pray.

Lastly; we separate also from the Brethren of the Middle District of Pennsylvania, with which we have been actively identified since its organization more than ten years ago. We have learned to love its meetings, and the pleasant associations and acquaintances formed at its sessions. From this body we first obtained permission and encouragement to publish our paper, and by it we have ever been liberally sustained. In its meetings, and in its deliberations, we feel at home, and can freely express our sentiments. We know the delegates and speakers, and they know us, and can appreciate our motives, and bear with our weaknesses. From all these we will now be separated, and shall be obliged to form new associates.

Not only will we be disconnected from the District Council Meeting, but our ministerial visits, though not necessarily severed, will be principally in new fields. All these separations, although painful, are submitted to with the hope of increasing our facilities for doing good to ourselves and others.

To those whom we shall meet no more, in this world, but who have faith in the Ressurrection, and a hope to take part in it, we say: "be of good comfort;" it will not be long until we meet again, and will be parted no more. Those who have not the hope we exhort to be up and a doing. Procrastinate no longer.—The night is coming wherein you cannot work. Set your house in order, so that when the Bridegroom comes we may all go out to meet him with gladness of heart, and enter with him unto the marriage feast.—Until then, whether we meet again or whether we do not: farewell.

Our Lovefeast.

The Autumn Lovefeast for the Warriors Mark congregation was appointed for the seventh instant. On Friday afternoon before, brethren John W. Brumbaugh, Jesse P. Hetrick, Grabill Myers and wife, and several sisters arrived, and remained with us until morning. At night we held our last meeting in our room in Tyrone. Brother Hetrick led off, and we had an interesting meeting.

On Saturday morning we all took the train on the Bald Eagle Valley R. R. to Bald Eagle station; thence two miles across the Ridge to the Cross Roads, to our meeting-house. At two o'clock the services opened. Brother Hetrick preached and brother Brumbaugh followed with an affecting exhortation. At the close of the meeting we had five applicants for membership. Four were received by baptism and one upon certificate. Thus the congregations will retain its number, it having just granted five certificates to the COMPANION family. The meeting was continued on Sunday and Sunday night, and increased in interest. The attendance on Saturday evening, Sunday and evening were quite large. The ministering brethren labored faithfully, and good impressions were left upon the people.

In the way of church business, brother Samuel Cox was ordained to the full office of ministry, and brother William H. Quinn, was advanced to the second degree.

Altogether the meeting was a good one. The members were very much refreshed and encouraged, and none enjoyed the meeting more than ourself. Indeed it seems to us we always have good communion meetings at Warriors Mark, whether we have few ministers or many. It seems to us the preaching is all directed right at us. May the good Lord help us to profit by it, and bless the dear brethren who labored so faithfully for us, not shunning to declare unto us the whole counsel of God.

To Be or Not to Be--That's the Question.

The following is from the October No. of the Pious Youth. As will be seen, it has become life or death with the Youth, and we do hope that our brethren and sisters will see to it that it shall not be the latter. Surely the church will value our rising generation too highly to leave them without a periodical in their interests that is worthy of their patronage.

Those who wish to labor for the success of the Youth, will follow the directions given below. Specimen copies will be sent liberally. Subscriptions can be taken on the same lists with the Companion.

"Ay, friendly readers of the PIOUS YOUTH, with you, and with us, that will now be made a question. For nearly two years the YOUTH has been and still is. It has gone forth upon its mission, and we trust has done good service to our readers, but to us it has been a labor, and a pecuniary loss of more than we are well able to bear: but we wished to make a fair effort, believing that such a paper should be published. But now we have expended about as much of our means as prudence will admit, and as the second year has proven no better success than the first, we have concluded to allow our patrons to decide whether the YOUTH shall continue to be, by making up such a list of subscribers as shall at least bear all expenses of publication. With that view we have prepared and shall enclose in each copy of the paper of this issue, a blank list for subscribers, and an envelope with our printed address, and hereby appoint each subscriber an agent for the PIOUS YOUTH, to solicit subscribers for it.

These shall be our conditions:

The subscription price shall be one dollar.

No money will be collected at first, but all the subscriptions must be forwarded by the first of December. If by the middle of December the number of subscribers shall reach fifteen hundred, or nearly that number, we will continue its publication. If that number cannot be attained, then we shall send forth the December number of the present volume, and close the publication. If the specified number can be reached, we will announce the fact in the December issue, which will be detained until the decision is made, whereupon the money shall be immediately collected and forwarded by those who have sent in the lists, it being understood that the agents make themselves responsible for all the names sent in.

Now, then, friends of a first class juvenile paper, one that will use only sound literature, inculcate pure morals, and advance a holy religion, we appeal to you, for your decision. Will you allow so noble an advocate of piety and virtue to starve out in your midst? when a few crumbs from your bounty would sustain him? Young friends, are you willing to losse the society of such an entertaining and instructive associate, without an effort on your part to prevent it? Parents can you endure to see a religious companion of your children, one who is joined hand in hand with you, by admonitions and instructions, in guiding their young feet upon the paths of truth and virtue—can you suffer to have such a companion driven from their society by a foe to your best interests? Do you not fear that one less pious will take his place? Something must be done. Life or death is set before us. To be or not to be, has become the question with the publisher of the PIOUS YOUTH for 1872.

Now, friends, young and old, we look to you for a response. If you wish us to continue the publication of this paper, go to work and give a day or two toward its support. It will require the effort of every one favorable to its publication to set it upon a self-sustaining basis. This it must have to assure its continuance. With a little effort, we should think every present subscriber might obtain one new name. If this can be done, we shall be sustained. Take the blanks we send you, and at once solicit your neighbors to subscribe. Tell them you want no money now, but that you will want it without fail by New Year. When you have all you can obtain, about the first of December, send us the number of names you will stand good for carefully preserving the list of names until you send the money.

Notice.

Please notice that hereafter the Companion will be printed at Dale City, Somerset county, Pa.

No Paper Next Week.

On account of moving we will not print any paper next week. Our next issue will be dated Oct. 31, and we expect it to appear on time, though our readers must not be uneasy if we are delayed.

CORRESPONDENCE

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Maine Correspondence.

Dear brother C. Bucher: Your very excellent favor came to hand Sept. 7th, and you have my heartfelt thanks; and I doubt not it will be well received by the more part of the community. I will circulate them, (meaning a lot of Christian Family Companions, which contained former letter and answer, C. B.), and do all I can to help the cause of truth, (but I have no means to remunerate you). * * * * * * *

Give us your views of Acts. 20th chapter, 7th and 11th verses. Was it communion, or a common meal?

I want one of your treatise on salutation, and a few tracts.

What is the name of your denomination? your number of churches, ministers, people &c., Sabbath-schools, contributions &c. Think me not impertinent asking these questions,

Now, dear brother we have plenty of "paper preaching and wooden singing," in many places, and the great mass of the people are, sighing for the bread of life—the old Jerusalem Gospel. * * *.

Can't your people send us a missionary this fall and winter?—I am not able to go and travel, and preach but little; but if one comes, if I am able, I will go with him, and beg and pray, and help all I can

The cars come to Skowhegan, 5 miles from this place. Hoping to hear from you soon, we close, praying that the great Head of the church may preserve us blameless; that when he appears, you and I may appear with him in glory.

JOHN DENNIS.

Skowhegan, Maine.

JOHN DENNIS, Dear friend: Sometime has elapsed since the above was received,—duties of necessity compelled me to postpone answering until now.

Our views on Acts 20: 7 and 11th verses are, that they held the Lord's Supper and the communion. Because we can draw no conclusion through the knowledge derived from the Holy Scriptures, and the historical writings of the Apostolic church, that the communion was ever held separate and apart from the Lord's Supper. And, as stated in my former answer, "the bread and wine are nowhere in the New Testament writings called the Lord's Supper," but "the communion of the blood of Christ, and the communion of the body, of Christ," hence called the communion. Paul teaches us that the communion was partaken of after they had supped. (The German translation says positively, after supper.) Therefore we hold that wherever we read of the Lord's Supper, or of the communion, or of the breaking of bread, that the other is implied, and that neither was celebrated alone.

I do not know that I can furnish you with a better treatise on salution than the New Testament. I mentioned in my former answer where it can be read in the Apostle's plain language, and we practice it to the best of our understanding, as also therein stated. Christ said to his disciples Luke 10: 4, "Salute no man by the way," this we understand to mean that we should not salute any one that we may chance to meet, not knowing him nor his character. Paul says Rom. 16: 16; 1 Cor. 16: 20; 2 Cor. 13: 12; and Peter in 1 Epis. 5: 14, "Salute one another with a holy kiss or kiss of charity;" and Paul 1 Thess. 5: 26, "greet all the brethren with a holy kiss." Therefore we understand that the brethren shall salute the brethren, and the sisters the sisters, and not any one else, with the holy kiss; we do it when we know them to be such. I stated in my former answer that we practice the salutation "whenever a seasonable opportunity presents itself." By this we mean, that we may meet, sometimes, in places where it would not be edifying to salute one another with the holy kiss; as at rail-road stations, stores, mills, post offices, and such like places, where we are all, more or less, necessitated to be sometimes. We also practice salutation at feet-washing; right bofore the communion, as stated in my former answer; and at the installation and ordination of church officers.

We as a church are not much of "paper preachers," and have no tracts of our own to distribute. There are several periodicals published by members of our church, of which the one bringing this answer is one for which I would advise you to subscribe, if your desire is to become more thoroughly acquainted with our doctrine, faith, and practice. The prospectus which you will find on the last page. The volume commences with the year—January 1st.

The only name our church ever assumed, is "THE BRETHREN." Christ said, according to St. Matth. 23: 8, "all ye are brethren;" 12: 48, "who are my brethren?" 28: 10, "go tell my brethren;" St. John 20: 17, "go to my brethren &c." By this name we always went among ourselves.—In the latter part of the last century or the beginning of the present, a sect sprang out of the United Brethren in Christ, in Lancaster county, this state, who came as near the Gospel teachings as they dared, so as not to be one with us, which they did not desire to be; who also coveted the name "Brethren," and were then called the "New Brethren" (sometimes "River Brethren,") and then for the sake of distinction we were sometimes called by others, "The Old Brethren." We are also known, sometimes, by the name of "German Baptists," in distinction from the "English, or regular Baptists," with whom I suppose you are well acquainted.—Some call us "Dunkards,"—do not know whether they do it out of ignorance or malice. As stated before, the name of our church is simply "The Brethren."

The number of churches, ministers, people, Sabbath-schools, contributions &c., no one in or out of the church is able to give. Our church holds that by keeping a strict record of these things for publication, and publish them, tends more to pride than edification. There is, however, no church of ours farther east than New Jersey; but in nearly all the states westward, including California and Oregon.

Lastly: The missionary may be sent this fall or winter; but such things take a little time with us. We like to give such moves mature deliberation. In the mean time we will try to give you all the information desired, if in our power. If you would, as stated herein before, become subscribers to the "C. F. C," you would become better acquainted with our doings, and all your inquiries could the more easily be attended to. And as you are a praying man, pray on, pray without ceasing: and with the hope that maketh not asham- ed; and we will try and do the same, and in due time, a Simon, whose surname is Peter, will come and tell thee and all those "that are sighing for the bread of life, the old Jerusalem Gospel," what thou oughtsst to do.

The grace of our Lord Jesus Chirst be with you all. Amen.

C. Bucher.

Schaefferstown, Pa.

Brother Henry; Will you allow me to give you a short report of the Lovefeast held in the Snake Spring Valley congregation, on Tuesday the 29th day of Sept. The day being very beautiful, the assembly was large; at the hour appointed for meeting, the house was filled with seemingly eager listeners. The meeting was opened in the usual order, after which brother Samuel Lidy selected as a text, the 13th verse, of the 15th chapter of Matthew, and spoke from the same, followed by Daniel Snowberger and J. W. Brumbaugh. After preaching, there were two souls added to the church, by being baptized. Next was a choice held for one minister and two deacons, which resulted as follows: David C Clapper to the ministry, and George Steel and John Clapper to the office of deacons. May the Lord strengthen the brethren in filling the offices to which they have been called. The ministers present, were brethren Samuel Lidy of Indiana county, J. W. Brumbaugh and Joseph Snowberger of Clover Creek, Jacob Miller Daniel Snowberger and J. W. Replogle, of Yellow Creek.—We much enjoyed the meeting; it was a soul-refreshing season. I hope all the children of God present felt refreshed. We pray for a speedy reform of those boys, (who had on men's clothing), that were noisy outside the house. May they remember, while they were laboring to annoy the people of God, they were committing sin of the deepest dye; and Jesus said "if you die in your sins, where I am you cannot come."

S. A. Moore.

New Enterprise, Pa.

Brother editor of the Companion: As you seem very liberal in inserting news in your worthy paper, I shall therefore make an effort, to give you some little from our arm of God's moral vineyard, which is termed the Lick Creek congregation. Our communion meeting come off, on the 29th of Sept., as was published; and I am happy to say, it was conducted in as good order as could well be expected under the circumstances. But the house was very much crowded indeed; so much so, that we could not possibly seat nearly all the spectators. Our much beloved, old brother, John Metzger from Ill. was with us during our meeting and labored very zealously, and under considerable difficulty, as he had taken a bad cold and hoarseness; notwithstanding he made many very good points in his preaching, and I am persuaded in my own mind, that some of his sermons made some deep impressions, on some of his hearers; for which I hope the Lord may reward him, in the future world. He stayed several days with us after the communion was over. I hope he may be the instrumentality to convert many souls, before the kind, heavenly Father will call him from this stage of action.

My object in writing is to learn whether the brethren editors, or any other member, can give information through the Companion, as to where "English Testaments could be obtained, that were printed by Winebrenner at Harrisburg, Pa. They have a nice, large print, references, and a Dictionary in the latter part. Many of the brethren would like to have them; and more especially aged speakers, whose eyesight fails. Perhaps some one who resides in the eastern part of Pa., can give some information in regard of those books.

I noticed in the last No. that brother Holsinger was on a visit to Dale City, to his new contemplated home, in Somerset county, Pa., near to my birth-place; where I lived to be a young man of 25 years old. I hope that he has made a good selection for his future home. It is in a good community, where there are many brethren; at least there were many at the time I resided there. But, alas! many of those dear friends and relatives are not there anymore! Where are they? Some are gone to their long homes, never to return—their bodies resting under the clods of the valley; others have emigrated to different parts of God's moral vineyard, from whence we can hear from them by the medium of the welcome Companion, which affords and circulate many wholesome admonitions for those who are still in this life. May the Lord lead us all, to live a Christian life in this world, and after death receive us to his home in heaven!

John Long.

Hagerstown, Ind.

A Query.

A young man was baptized at an early period, under circumstances somewhat exciting perhaps, After "the sober second thought," his investigations led him to the firm conviction that he was an unregenerate man. Subsequently he has been enabled to exercise "a good hope through grace" that "his sin is covered." And as believing subjects generally whose hearts are "enlarged,' he wishes to run in the way of God's commandments. Believing his former immersion, received "in ignorance and unbelief," to be invalid, he desires to be baptized. Would you baptize him?

Kiffin II.

This is a question with regard to which opinions differ. We incline to range ourselves with those who hold, 1, that the right to baptism, so far as the church and the administrator have the power to judge of it, depends on a credible profession of faith, and on that only; 2, that the original profession of faith, in such cases as the querist recites, was credible at the time of the administration of the ordinance—which makes the administration regular and valid; 3, and that the ordinance, therefore, should not be repeated, especially since the subsequent profession of faith is liable to lose its credibility in time to come, just as the former profession lost it thus opening a path toward a third, or even a fourth or fifth repetition.—This strikes us as the better view of the subject; but, in pastoral life, if the applicant demanded and the church approved a second baptism, we would not "stand out" against the judgment of the one and the wish of the other. We should seek to win them to our ground; but in event of the failure of that effort, we should treat the question as one of those which are left to be decided by inference, and with regard to which our own liability to error debars us from erecting the conclusions we reach, into a wall of separation, in action, between the church and the ministry.—A. C. Review.

Dear Companion:—Last Sunday we had the pleasure of Brothers Daniel P. Saylor and Moses Miller staying at our house over night, which gave us great satisfaction, as we are living isolated from the Brotherhood and are not often visited by the Brethren. They were on a Mission, sent by the yearly meeting, as you no doubt know, to the eastern Churches of Pennsylvania, to ascertain the mode of feetwash as practiced by the first Churches in the Country.

DAVID B. KLEIN.

Stonersville, Pa.

Brother Holsinger: We desire to acknowledge through the Companion the money received for our meeting-house

Noah Rhodes,	$5.00
J. S. Rhodes,	5.00
David Sherkey,	25.00
Nettle Creek Church Ind,	5.00
Samuel Kinsey,	1.00
Barbara Bosserman,	1.00
S. T. Bosserman,	.50
Jonas A. Lowenbach.	5.00

S. B. SHERKEY.

Brother Holsinger: The love-feas, with the Indian Creek brethren, Story county, Iowa, came off on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. the 23d and 24th. We enjoyed a very pleasant communion season together. The principal speakers present on that occasion, were brethren Christian Long of Dallas county, and Jacob S. Snyder of Brooklyn; who labored earnestly, and we think, made some very serious impressions, which will long be remembered. There were two Deaeons chosen by the church; brother Noah Flora, son of elder Henry Flora, deceased, and Washington Boytnott.—May the Lord grant them grace that they may be faithful to fulfil that office. Upon the whole, we think it was good to be there.

JOHN W. MOATS.

Record of Travel.

I left home on the 29th of September for the communion meeting in the Cowans hand branch, Armstrong Co., where I arrived safely, but so hoarse that I was not able to speak above a whisper, without the greatest effort; but as there were other ministers present I was excused from any of the ministerial labor till on Saturday afternoon when we met for prayer, and the hearts of the brethren were moved, and also sinners trembled, and we felt the power of prayer. The next day four went down into the liquid grave, and thus obeyed their Savior, while others stood by fully convinced of their duty also.

I then spent a few days in the Plum Creek congregation, and on Thursday morning in company with some Brethren took the train for the Lovefeast in the Conemaugh branch, where I met many dear brethren and friends Heard some good preaching, enjoyed a good meeting, and bade farewell to the long to be remembered ones, and on Friday evening landed safely in Tyrone, where we soon found our way to the C. F. C. office, and enjoyed the kind greetings of the families connected with it.

In the evening enjoyed the pleasure of preaching in the room which they have hired for meeting. Next day went to the communion meeting at Warriors Mark, and I can truly say we had a pleasant meeting. Four more followed our Lord in his own appointed way. The meeting closed Sunday night with the farewell addresses of the two ministers connected with the C. F. C., who this week purpose leaving for their new home at Dale City. Peace go with them and theirs, and success crown their efforts in the good work of the Lord.

This morning H. R. H. and I took a ramble to the sinking springs and limestone mountain when we gathered the last curiosities which we may even, collect from that wild district. I am now in the Companion Sanctum, well and happy, and if God permit in the morning, I anticipate going on to the meeting at Lewistown. So I leave off for the present.

J. P. HETRICK.

Tyrone, Oct. 10.

Eld. D. M. Holsinger.

By letter from our Mishigan Missionary, dated October 2nd, directs us to give notice that no more letters are to be sent to him at Blooming Dale, but that he may be addressed at New Paris, Indiana, until the fifteenth instant.

Proposed Journey.

To the Brethren in south eastern Mo., I would say the Lord willing I expect to start on the 28th of Sept., for Springfield; on the 10th of October, be at Osceola; and if there is a Communion in Vernon Co., on the 7th, I will try to be there, if the Brethren will take me there; on the 14th, in Johnson Co., where I expect to meet with brethren from north Mo., and be at the service of the different Churches till the 26th, when I want to start to Woodford Co., Ill., to District meeting.

DAVID FRANTZ.

Cero Gorda, Ill.

J. B. ALLENWORTH: The change of your address is noticed on page 625. The manuscript came to hand.

E. WILLIAMS: The money was received. We do not publish in the list anything under 50 cents. The name was entered, and we suppose the paper was sent, but we send again.

WHAT has become of David Root? We have addressed him at Burlinggame, Kansas, and our letter has been returned to us.

JONATHAN SWIHART: It is all perfectly right, and you have our thanks for your promptness.

J. S. FLORY. Have sent you of those Nos. what we had. You can allow us for them what you wish.—Bound volume of Companion and Youth, for 1870, is worth $3.15, at the office.—It is too heavy to be sent by mail.

PRACTICAL FARMER. Monthly, $1.50; Paschall Morris and Co., 18 N. 13th St. Philadelphia. It is thoroughly practical, and common sense theory. The October No. has a long sense in itscolumn of contents.

Change of Address.

Brother J. N. Crosswait has changed his addreas from Maryville, Blount Co., Tenn., to Osborn, Dekalb Co., Mo.

Answer to Enigma in No. 39.

Do unto others as you would wish to be done by.

KATE BRENIZER.

Wayne county, miles N. Ohio, 12 W. of Wooster, Oct. 25th, 10 o'clock, A. M.

Antietam congregation, Welty's meeting-house, Washington county, Md., Oct, 24th, 10 o'clock, A. M.

Buffalo Valley, Pa., Oct. 20th, 1 o'clock

Walnut Level, Wells county, Ind., Oct. 27st.

Clover Creek, Blair county, Pa. Oct 20th 4 o'clock, P. M.

Raccoon Creek congregation, Montgomery county, Ind., Oct. 26th. Stop at Ladoga.

Aughwich, Huntingdon county, Pa, Oct, 16th,and 17th.

Mohican Church, Wayne county, Ohio, Oct,25th.

Buffalo Valley, Oct, 20th 1 P, M.

Antietam, Washington county, Md, Oct, 24, 10 A. M.

Dunning's Creek, Oct, 21th, 4 P. M.

Yellow Creek, New Enterprise, Bedford County, Pa., Oct. 24th, 4 o'clock P. M.

East meeting-house, Pine Creek congregation, St. Joseph county, Mich., Oct 19th, 4 o'clock P. M.

Mineral Creek, Johnson county, Mo, Oct, 14th.

Elklick, Somerset Co., Pa., Oct., 21st.

Mississinawa, Delaware Co., Ind., Oct., 20th.

Bachelor Run, Carrol Co., Ind., Oct., 24th.

Ozaukie, Jefferson Co., Kansas, Oct. 21 and 22.

Pine Creek, Saint Joseph Co., Ind., Oct 19th.

Panther Creek, Woodford Co., Ill., Oct., 28th. District meeting at the same place Oct.,30th.

Hatfield, Mont. Co., Pa., Oct., 21st.

Mineral Creek, Johnson county, Mo. Oct. 14th.

Monticello, White county, Ind., Oct. 20 21 ; 2 o'clock, P. M.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with obituary notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In the Redbank congregation, Armstrong county, Pa., June 8th, MARY SHUMAKER, infirm daughter of our esteemed sister, Catharine Shumaker, aged 16 years 4 months 9 days.

She has crossed to the other side to meet those who have gone before, and stands waiting for loving friends to follow her, to her happy house where she will enjoy that health and that strength of body she never knew here.

Funeral services by Eld. John Wise, to a respectable audience of friends and relatives, from Job xiv. 14. J. P. HETRICK.

In Brooklyn, Poweshick county, Iowa, Sept, 29th, brother ANDREW CARNEY.—Disease, Typhoid Fever ; age about 65 years, funeral services by brother Thomas Graham and the writer. J. S. SNYDER.

In the Libertyville branch, Sept. 18th, sister MARY BYERTS, aged 63 years and 5 months. Funeral occasion improved by brother Peter Lurtz and S. H. Brown, from Rev. 22 : 14.

Visitor please copy.

On the 5th of October, our esteemed brother ALEXANDER SMITH, eged 76 years less 7 days, after an illness of about 4 weeks, which he bore with Christian fortitude. He was a deacon for a number of years. The church has lost a good counsellor ; but our loss is his great gain. Funeral services by brother Peter Lutz, from John 1 : 12, 13.

Visitor please copy.

D. H. GARBER.

LIST OF MONEYS received for subscription, books, &c.,

Sam'l M. Cox,	$1 10	John Shick,	1.50
Jonas Price,	.50	John Shoutz,	.60
Samuel Wine,	3.00	A. Bender,	1.00
Jonathan Sivhart,	6.75

Advertisements.

WE will admit a limited number of selec advertisements at the following rates

One insertion, 20 cents a line.

Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.

Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.

No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations.

FOUR MONTHS FOR 50 CTS.

GREAT SUCCESS

AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKER,

An Evangelical Undenominational Monthly, for PARENTS, TEACHERS and SCHOLARS. With Sunday School Lessons, Exposition, Illustrations, Questions Blackboard Exercises, &c., for each Sabbath.

This publication is designed to develop a greater depth and spirituality in the Sunday School work, looking beyond methods to results.

Terms for 1872—$1,50 a year in Advance. CLUBS of TEN or more (to one address) will receive 6 Lesson Papers, free with each Magazine monthly. SCHOLARS LESSON PAPER, monthly, with Lessons for every Sabbath, 13 cts. a year ; or per hundred $9 a year. Send 10 cents for Specimen copy, Lesson Paper, and your own List of Lessons for 1872, to

J. W. McINTYRE, ST., LOUIS, Mo.

BOUND COPIES for 1870 and 1871, $2 each, postpaid. Lesson Papers on Gospel of Matthew for 1870, and on Gospel of John for 1871, same price as 1872.

Oct. 15th, Nov. 14 15.

Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER.

DALE CITY, PA.

TYRONE BANK,

TYRONE, PA.

This Bank, intending to do a general banking business, solicits accounts from Banks' Bankers and others. Collections made on all points. Interest allowed on DEPOSITS left on time. Paper discounted on liberal terms.

Wm. P. Orbison,	D. P. Gwin,
John Scott,	H. G. Fisher,
Thomas Fisher,	J. H. Glazier,
Wm. Dorris,	G. C. Wilkins,
G W. Garretson,	and others.

A Card.

Drs. D. Fahrney & Son, Uroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.

7-10-1 yr. pd.

A BOOK WHICH EVERY ONE SHOULD POSSESS.

JUST PUBLISHED,—265 pp. 82mo, illustrated with numerous cuts, bound in cloth, $1,50 in paper, $1.00. Free by mail on receipt of price.

FIRST HELP IN ACCIDENTS AND IN SICKNESS.

A Guide in the absence or before the arrival of Medical Assistance. Published with the recommendation of the Highest Medical Authority.

The following are some of the subjects upon which it treats :—Bad Air, Bites, Bleeding, Broken Bones, Bruises, Burns, Choking, Cholera, Cold, Contusions, Dislocations, Drowning, Dysentery, Fevers, Fractures, Hanging, Nursing, Poisoning, Scalds, Smallpox, Sprains, Suffocation, Sunstroke, etc., and other Accidents and Sickness where instant aid is needful.

This volume, written by eminent Physicians, is a practical digest of scientific medical-knowledge, so far as relates to that aid which may properly be rendered in cases of Accident and Sickness in the absence of a Physician.

Prepared for the Press by Editors of GOOD HEALTH MAGAZINE.

ALEXANDER MOORE,
Publisher, BOSTON, Mass.

BURLINGTON.

Leaving the East and arriving at Chicago or Indianapolis, how shall we reach the West? The best Line is acknowledged to be the C. B. and Q., joined together with the B. & M. Railroad by the Iron Bridge at Burlington, and called the Burlington Route.

The main line of the Route running to Omaha, connects with the great Pacific Roads, and forms to-day the leading route to California. The Middle Branch, entering Nebraska at Plattsmouth, passes through Lincoln, the State Capital, and will this year be finished to Fort Kearney, forming the shortest route across the Continent by over 100 miles.

Another branch of the B. M., diverging at Red Oak, falls into a line running down the Missouri through St. Joe to Kansas City, and all Kansas. Passengers by this route to Kansas, see Illinois, Southern Iowa, and Missouri, and, by a slight divergence, can see Nebraska also.

Lovers of fine views should remember the Burlington Route, for its towns "high-gleaming from afar"—its tree-fringed streams—its rough bluffs and quarries—its corn-ocean stretching over the prairies further than eye can reach.

Land-buyers will be sure to remember it, for they have friends among the two thousand who have already bought farms from Geo. S. Harris, the Land Commissioner of the B. & M. R. R. at Burlington, Iowa, or among the four thousand home-steaders and pre-emptors who last year filed claims in the Lincoln Land Office, where "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm."

1780 1871

ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK?

Use Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

An Alterative and Cathartic, or Tonic and Purge combined, for diseases arising from bad blood; such as Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Erysipelas, Worms, Chills and Fever, Scrofula, Pimples, Tetter, &c. TRY IT.

Established 1780 in package form. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form which was brought to its present state of preservation and perfection some years later, by Dr. P. Fahrney, Chicago, Ill's, who conducts the trade west of Ohio. Great reputation! Many Testimonials! Ask for that prepared at Waynesboro, Pa., and Chicago, Ill's. Beware of imitations. Genuine retails at $1.25 per bottle. Druggists and Medicine dealers sell it.

Dr. P. Fahrney's "Health Messenger" gives the history and uses of the BLOOD CLEANSER testimonials, and other information, sent free of charge. Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.
WAYNESBORO. PA.

Wm. M. Lloyd, Altoona, Pa. D. T. Caldwell, Tyrone Pa.

LLOYD, CALDWELL & CO.,
BANKERS,

Receive monies on deposit, and pay interest if left 6 months, at 4 per cent per annum, or 5 per cent. if left one year.

Special contracts made with parties acting as administrators, executors, guardians, and persons holding monies in trust. Dealers in every description of Stocks and Bonds.—Government Securities made a speciality.

Gold and Silver bought and sold, and a general Banking business transacted.

Universal Guide for Cutting Garments.

By which every family may cut its own garments for men and boys, of twenty six different sizes; for Coats, Pants, Vests, and Shirts, and Ladies' Dress Bodies. Agents wanted to sell State, County, and Family Rights. For Particulars address MILLER & QUINN,
Tyrone, Blair Co., Pa.

J. S. THOMAS, &CO.
WHOLESALE GROCERS
and
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

No 305 RACE St. ABOVE 3RD, PHILADELPHIA,
N. B. Country Produce taken in exchange for goods or sold on commission.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine, with Drop Feed, new Take-up, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted FIRST CLASS, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted traveling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $200 per month. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. Co.
35 East Union Square, 17th St., New York

BOOKS

For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek text of the New Testament with Interlinear Word for word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price, $4

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol., $2.25. Indispensable.

Life at Home; or the Family and its Members—Including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed. The Altar in the House, etc. By Wm. Aikman. $1.50;

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Science the Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. THOMPSON Fancy Cloth. $1.00.

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand-book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners, with a Chart for recording the sizes of the different Organs of the Brain, in the Delineation of Character, with upwards of 170 Engravings. Muslin, $1.25.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50;

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By W. PITTINGER. $1.50

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Beautifully Illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth, gilt, beveled boards. Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75 cents.

Any of the above sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

Phrenological Journal, An Illustrated. First-Class Family Magazine, devoted to "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3 00 a

By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50, or with the Pious Youth, for $3.00. We commend the JOURNAL to all who want a good Family Magazine, and who does not.

All orders should be accompanied with the money, and the name of person, post office, county and State written in unmistakable letters, and address

DALE CITY, PA.

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post pain,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	10 30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post pain,	.50
Per dozen, " "	5.50

The Christian Harp, containing 138 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents $6.00 per dozen.

COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.7
Reserved at the office,	2.25
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder, Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express,	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	60
German & English Testaments,	.75

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25

32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION. 25

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Certificates &c.

MarriageCertificate, per doz., post paid, 0.30, CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP. Per doz, 0.20

TRACTS.—RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE, 12 pages five cents single copy; thirty cents a doz.

All orders should be accompanied with the money, and the name of person, postoffice county & state written in unmistakable letters

---

THE PIOUS YOUTH

A MONTHLY PUBLICATION

Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.

One dollar a year in advance.

THE

Christian Family Companio

Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements; that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
DALE CITY Somerset Co., PA.

Christian Family Companion

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Ann.

VOLUME VII. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, OCT. 31, 1871. NUMBER 43.

Rock Me to Sleep, Mother.

The publication of this beautiful piece happened in 1861, immediately after the breaking out of the rebellion; it was seized by the newspapers of the country as something rare. No owner appearing for the fugitive, some discussion arose as to its authorship, and five or six persons in the Northern States laid claim to it. It was originally published under the nom de plume of "Florence Percy," and was set to music by eight different composers, and thousands upon thousands were sold. It now turns out that the poetry was written in South Carolina by Mrs. Elizabeth Akers, widow of Paul Akers, the sculpture, who, until recently, has been unable to establish her claims to its authorship. Untold sums have been realized from her "talent," yet this poor widow, whose verses have and will please millions, never received a farthing for its composition. Justice should be done her:

Backward, turn backward, oh, time in your flight,
Make me a child again, just for to-night!
Mother, come back from the echoless shore,
Take me again to your arms, as of yore;
Kiss from my forehead the furrows of care,
Smooth the few silver threads out of my hair;
Over my slumbers your loving watch keep,
Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep.

Backward, flow backward, oh, tide of the years,
I am so weary of toil and of tears;
Toil without recompense—tears all in vain.
Take them—and give me my childhood again!
I have grown weary of dust and decay,
Weary of flinging my soul-wealth away,
Weary of sowing for others to reap,
Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep

Tired of the hollow, the base, the untrue,
Mother, oh mother, my heart calls for you;
Many a summer the grass has grown green,
Blossomed and faded, our faces between.
Yet, with strong yearning and passionate pain,
Long I to-night for your presence again;
Come from the silence, so long and so deep,
Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep

Over my heart in the days that are flown,
No love like mother's love ever was shown,
No other worship abides and endures,
Faithful, unselfish and patient like yours
None like a mother can charm away pain,
From the sick soul and the world weary-brain;
Slumbers, soft, calm, o'er my heavy lids creep,
Rock me to sleep, Mother, rock me to sleep.

Come, let your brown hair, just lighted with gold
Fall on your shoulders again as of old,
Let it drop over my forehead to-night,
Shading my faint eyes away from the light.
For, with its sunny-edged shadows once more,
Haply will throng the sweet visions of yore—
Lovingly, softly, its bright billows sweep!
Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep.

Mother, dear mother, the years have been long,
Since I first listened to your lullaby song;
Sing, then, and unto my soul it shall seem,
Womanhood's years have been only a dream—
Clasped to your heart, in a loving embrace,
With your light lashes just sweeping my face,
Never hereafter to wake or to weep,
Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep.

For the Companion.

Going in and Out.

Do not understand me to mean, "to find pasture," but to go in and out of church, in time of service: I mean while the preacher is preaching. This is without doubt a bad habit, and one, that no one should be guilty of; but to our sorrow we must say that our own members, do go in and out. With our elderly brethren and sisters we might bear, if they were guilty, but to the shame of the younger ones, be it said they remain at their places during services.

Next we hear from our mothers with children. They must sometimes go out with them. This we must allow to be so. This however is not so annoying as it is to have a half a dozen or more running and stamping on the floor. It is not our purpose at present to say much concerning these, but we do mean to direct our pen in the direction of our young brethren and sisters. What their object is in going from the house of God during services is not known to me, and I am doubtful as to whether they could give us a good reason, and yet they are in nine cases out of ten the guilty ones. Is it to show some new arrangement of apparel, or is it a method of their own to make it known to the congregation that they are there, or, perhaps, to show how gracefully they can walk? If the latter, they do most wofully butcher it up, by setting their feet down on the floor so heavily. However this may be one manner by which they notify the congregation and the preacher that they have the floor.

There is another peculiarity connected with this thing of going out; that is, its catching nature. Just as sure as one starts, three, four, five, six, or more, will follow and go it in a regular stampede style, or a more homely expression, "Flexer Style." I do hope that the young members will not disgrace themselves, and their profession that they have made before God and many witnesses, by such an unbecoming habit. If the world do go out of the house of God, showthem that you, as a Christian, can and will remain in the house while services last. There are, however, some that we would not class with the younger, who are guilty of this very unbecoming practice. If, however, anything happens that you must leave the house of God, tread lightly, noislesly. Don't go along stamping as though your shoes were made of wood or iron, thereby annoying the whole congregation.

C. G. LINT.

The Lesson of the Humming Bird.

"The brightest joys the soonest flee."

The Humming Bird may be justly considered the gem of animated nature. It possesses in miniature all the charms of living objects. Here we see at once sprightliness, delicacy and power of endurance. It seems to partake of the nature of the flowers from which it imbibes its food. Its color, like the flowers, is variegated. When on the wing, its downy vesture assumes various hues and a thousand dazzling charms. The motion of its wings is so rapid that they appear scarcely visible, and occasions a peculiar, musical hum from which it derives its name.

The Humming Bird makes its appearance in the latter part of May, or the first of June, when nature is wont to smile with the flowers of Spring. Along the rippling stream where grow the wild flowers and the rich-scented Honey-suckle, may be seen two or more of these diminitive specimens of the feathered tribe, passing from flower to flower extracting the sweets they contain,—ever and anon sporting in semicircles, or chasing each other in a direct line, uttering at intervals a shrill, piping note with peculiar distinctness;—all of which presents a scene of rare beauty and thrilling interest that surpasses all the gewgaw displays of royal parade and fashionable grace that art can invent, or fancy may supply.

It was in childhood when I first formed an acquaintance with the nature and habits of this little winged gem. When the warm, balmy days of Spring would grace the earth with the opening bud and flower, it would appear in the flower garden, and enliven with its presence and cheering trill the heart of every beholder. It seemed to fancy the places where loveliness and beauty had taken up their abode. By the clear stream, graced with wild flowers, it sought its mate, and sported in the early morn with the vivacity of a sunbeam.

Its stay with us, though cheerful and brilliant, is of short duration. Its visits, too, are like angel visits: "few and far between." It comes when earth is most cheerful; it leaves us when the summer flowers fade. Thus will the joys of youth leave us when the bloom of life fades on our cheek. Then we must wrestle with the autumn of old age, and prepare to lie down in the winter of death. But Heaven will be the Spring to the virtuous and the good, with joys that pass not away.

DANIEL HAYS.

"He who declares truth, in order that it should have the most powerful influence, needs to be himself a representative thereof. Abstract truth is very well in its way; but its influence over mankind is greatly increased through personal representation.

Truth needs man to make it plain and powerful as much as man needs truth to make him loving and good."

"The elect are whosoever will, and the non-elect whosoever won't."

How shall Modern Skepticism be Met?

1. We must not be afraid of it; skepticism may indicate power, but not of the highest order. It often indicates weakness. The highest form of power is in affirmation and construction, in building up, and not in pulling down. But skepticism is a negation. Its work is to deny, doubt, find fault, which is comparatively easy.

2. We are to distinguish between facts and inferences. Much of what is called science is mere inference. When Darwin observes similarities between man and the lower animals hitherto unobserved, we must admit the fact, but need not adopt his inference that our original progenitor was a monkey—probably an African monkey.

3. In dealing with skepticism we must welcome all truth, and duly respect every honest doubt. But upon this we need not enlarge.

But the most effective weapon against skepticism is the exercise of the faith we wish to produce in others. This is in accordance with the great law that like begets like. Would you produce kindness in others? Manifest kindness before them and to them. Would you produce forbearance? Be forbearing. Would you produce hostility? Manifest hostility. And so, would you produce faith in others, you must manifest before them and toward them the fruits of faith. If an intellectual result simply were aimed at, this would not be so; but, aiming at a practical result, nothing can be substituted for this. Without this there may be arrangements, expenditures, meetings, addresses, but the work will be superficial. The unleavened mass, untouched by any particle with the true leaven in it, will remain unchanged. The whole secret of the spread of Christianity over the world is in this figure of the leaven. It is fire that kindles fire; love that kindles love; Christianity manifested that spreads Christianity. Talent, learning, conviction from argument, are well in their places, but avail little. Belief is needed, but it must be in the form of trust. It must be belief on the Lord Jesus Christ. There must be in it the acceptance of him for all that for which he offers himself to us, and sympathy with him in all that he proposes to do. In such a belief there is life; and in life there is power; and in the instincts of all life there is practical guidance. Under such inspiration and such guidance which will be really that of the Spirit of God, the best forms of organization and of effort will be readily reached. Money will not be wanting. The ministry will be sustained. The great problem of lay labor, which is the problem now before the Church, will be solved. Denominational lines will be practically obliterated; and the pallid and protean form of skepticism will vanish before the combined power of light and love.—Mark Hopkins, D. D.

Items.

"Human blood is all of one color."

"It were well if all persons who seek to eradicate error were themselves perfect, because the better the example set, the more powerful the effect of the utterances made."

"Man is a finite being and, as a very terse writer has said, "very finite at that." The boundaries of his knowledge at the most are not extensive. There is so much that he does not know and that at any given time he cannot know that it is better always for him to speak of the extent of his knowledge."

"How hateful is the religion which says, "Business is business, and politics are politics, and religion is religion!" Religion is using every thing for God; but many men dedicate business to the devil, and politics to the devil, and shove religion into the cracks and crevices of time, and make it the hypocritical outcrawling of their leisure and laziness."

H. W. Beecher.

Begin! somewhere and somehow make a beginning. In everything a beginning and a good beginning, too, is necessary. The first weed pulled up in a garden, the first manly "I will" is said, the first seed put into the ground, the first dollar put into the saving bank, and the first mile traveled in a journey, are all very important things. They make a beginning, and thereby a hope, a promise, an assurance is held out that you are in earnest in what you have undertaken.

A Love-Letter.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

To a family who are all consecrated to Christ.

"Dearly loved and longed for."

As the sunbeams open the flowers, so did your love-freighted missive open my heart; and as the flowers emit their sweetest odors when most bathed in the light of heaven, so I feel constrained to pour out my love as a holy, Heaven lighted, Heaven warmed atmosphere.

In my isolation and suffering, I sometimes put to myself the mental interrogation, "Do the Saints remember me, do they bear my name on the incense of prayer to Him who sitteth between the Cherubim above the Mercy-seat?—Do they pray for the removal of this cup, or if this may not be, that I may meekly drink it to the dregs, and find every drop of wormwood transmitted into the water of Everlasting Life?" Some do, I am confident: perhaps many.

"God is Love," and "we are made partakers of the Divine Nature." If we unite these golden lines upon our chamber walls, and over the door-posts of our homes and our hearts, we will pray for each other as naturally and ardently "as the sparks fly upward." Love is the great sympathetic nerve, the hallowed, bliss-throbbing bond that binds all the joint-heirs of Christ into one blood-cemented, faith-girdled family. If we lack or lose this we have nothing left that can take us across the threshold of the 'Beautiful Golden City." Nothing can pass through the Pearly Gates which is not as full of Love as the sun is full of light.

"Love suffereth long, and is kind; love envieth not; love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. Love never faileth." It prayeth for its enemies, kisses the hand of persecution, and lays down its life for the brethren. How many of us have been sitting for the spiritual photograph drawn by the Spirit in the preceding passages?

With unfeigned sorrow must we behold the carping, the hasty judgment, the ignorant criticisms, and the envious caricatures in which so many in the church indulge. "Love suffereth long and is kind." Love waits at wisdom's door, and keeps its tongue as the telegraph of a heart and mind enshrining the Holy, Loving God. I greatly fear that many of our fellow-members have their backs to the Cross oftener than otherwise. Looking with a broken heart into the face of our crucified Redeemer, some of us would be far from speaking and writing to and of each other as we do. If we stand at the foot of the Cross, comprehending its dreadful meaning in relation to sin and holiness, and see only ourselves, we will perhaps wish many a syllable unwritten, many a word unspoken. Let us often repair to the shadow of the Olive trees in the Garden of Gethsemane and to Pilate's Judgment-hall, and to Golgotha, as an illustration of the endurance and long-suffering of love. We have been redeemed from such a woful abyss of degradation and guilt, have been bought with a price which made God Himself a bankrupt in a certain sense, that it does not become us to mount the judgment-seat, but rather to lie in the dust of humiliation at the feet of Jesus, "in love serving one another." It does not require much talent to speak fluently and flippantly about others, but it requires much grace to know when to be silent.

Love keeps its fingers in the print of Christ's nails, and its hand in His opened side, and every thing it touches must bear evidence to its benignity and forbearance. The hands that are red with the blood of atonement, washed in the blood of the Lamb, can never smite an enemy, much less a saint. The fingers that are so ready to inflict fresh wounds, and reopen old ones, are red with the blood of Calvary in a most alarming sense. It is blood shed by them, and not blood applied to them. A censorious spirit is the very antithesis of the Spirit that breathed its dying petition in the words, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." Hardness and severity towards others prove that the heart has never been truly melted in the curcible of the Gospel. When "the Love of God is shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Ghost" we inhale the air of the upper Paradise, and exhale the very breath of God in all our relations, on all we meet. We will bear about us an atmosphere in which the unfallen angels delight to move. Our closets will be the Holy of holies on earth, and thence will we come forth as from a mount of transfiguration, our faces shining with the effulgence of Divinity, and our whole lives "smelling of myrrh, and aloes, and cassia, out of the ivory palaces." Our tables will be in the ante-chamber of the "Banqueting house" in which waves the "Banner of Love." When we go to our desks we will dip our pens in the blood of Emmanuel, and not in the gall of nature. We will evermore press our lips by faith on the lips of Jesus, and carry only "milk and honey under our tongues."

God loves His Son with an affection which no angel can measure. In addressing the Father Christ said: "Thou lovedst me before the foundation of the world." The apostle of love says that the Son "is in the bosom of the Father." This is an intimacy which is never allowed save where two souls have been blended by the power of love. To be in the bosom of another is to be enshrined in the heart of hearts. Notwithstanding that the Son lay in the embrace of the Father's love through the measureless cycles of a bygone Eternity, they both so loved us as to consent to a separation for thirty three years in order to open a way for our salvation. "Behold, what manner of love hath the Father bestowed upon us." Well may the apostle exclaim, "we love Him because He first loved us." "As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you: continue ye in my love." And then follows that amazing yet logical injunction which puts to shame the Church of Christ in this nineteenth century of grace; "that ye love one another, AS I HAVE LOVED YOU."

"Looking unto Jesus." Here is the source and channel of the love that "beareth and hopeth all things." It is in "the face of Jesus Christ" that we see the light of the knowledge of the glory of God." His eyes are "like the fishpools in Heshbon, by the gate of Bath-rabbim." He is the brightness of the Father's glory, and the express image of His person." "Look unto Me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth." Looking unto Jesus makes us luminous with His light, and vital with His love. He is the object, communion is the means, and the transfer of His lineaments is the result. The complete transformation into the Divine likeness is the effect of the Beatific Vision. "We shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is." We shall gaze into the face of Uncreated Beauty and be forever beautified in the glory of the Holy Trinity—stereotyped imperishably with the features of the One "altogether lovely." We shall be ravished with the thrills of infinite Love—"filled with all the fullness of God." To be "made perfect in love" is the final and complete beatitude of "the pure in heart."

"Who is on the Lord's side?"

Who carries "the seal of God in his forehead?"

Who is imbued with the spirit that exchanged the bliss and glory of Heaven for the agonies of the Cross, for the rescue of His enemies?

Let us go hand in hand, heart knitted to heart. The true Joseph still says, "see that ye fall not out by the way." "This is the will of God concerning us," "that we should be holy and without blame before Him in LOVE."

Hygeian Home. Oct. 16th, 1871.

Love.

There is nothing on earth worthy of being compared for a moment with Love.—No other thing can give, by itself, unalloyed happiness. A loveless life is worthless, though passed in luxury; and crowned with the proudest laurels of successful ambition. A life well set about with love is blessed, though haunted by that relentless fate which seems to deny to some men and women what the world calls success. To have been without a parent's love in childhood, without a love of brothers and sisters; to have passed youth without that more romantic love which makes Heaven of earth; and to live on in maturity, neither feeling or inspiring that strong, enduring love which makes any sacrifice easy, and toil pleasant, and burden light, so that it benefits the well beloved, is to be poor indeed—so poor that even the pitying angels have nothing to give them that can do any good. And yet how many know nothing of love, or only understand the word in its coarsest sense, so that one blushes to have uttered it in their presence. How many, more pure than these, sneer at it as a delusion and absurdity, not understanding that pure love is not a thing of the senses but of the soul; not a flame flickering and flashing over the passionate time of life, but a soft, steady glow, lighting it from the cradle to the grave, and one may even hope, burning on beyond it, since Heaven itself is love.

A man must have a very bad opinion of himself, not to be willing to apper what he really is.

For the Companion.

A Reply to Brother Heckler.

My dear brother, I am sorry that I am necessitated to reply to at least part of what you have written in your last reply. I do not intend to notice all that you have written, but part of it I can not pass by; you will therefore please excuse me for replying to you again. You remember that I told you at our late Annual Meeting that my desire was to close our controversy, and you gave me to understand that you desired the same; but my second or third reply had not then appeared in the Companion, although it was sent to the office last fall. When it did appear, it seems it did not meet your approbation, not being very palatable, or seasoned with salt, according to your taste.

You tell me to be consistent and hold on to the ninth verse of the thirteenth chapter of Jeremiah That is just what I intend to do, and will still contend for a literal fulfillment of it. I do not believe that David means Christ in the verse that you refer me to; neither will I say that David will never be king again; for I believe that, when God says he will do a thing, he is going to do it, whether men will believe it or not. I do not think it would be very unreasonable for God to raise up David with the rest of the dead saints, and make him king over Israel: not any more so than for the disciples who have followed the Savior, "in the regeneration when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory," also to sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." Now we know that a generation means a people living at one period or age.—Christ had been speaking to his disciples; but he says to the unbelieving Jews, "Fill ye up, then, the measure of your fathers, that upon you may come all the righteous blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel, unto the blood of Zacharias whom ye slew between the temple and the altar." All these things will be required of that generation. And he also told them that the kingdom of God shall be taken from them and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof.—And Paul says that "blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the gentiles be come in.—Now what sense would there be in Paul's language in saying "until," if there was no time granted to them after the gentiles time is full. Paul goes on and says, "All Israel shall be saved, as it is written. There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob. Now this what Paul says is written, certainly was not fulfilled at Christ's first coming; for all Israel was not saved then; neither was ungodliness taken away from them; for they remain the same ungodly people to this day. But when Christ shall come the second time, he will put on righteousness as a breast plate, and an helmet of salvation upon his head; and he will put on the garments of vengeance for clothing, and will be clad with zeal as a cloak. and will repay fury to his adversaries, and recompense to his enemies. "Then will I make a covenant with Jacob, saith the Lord. My spirit that is upon thee, and my words which I have put in thy mouth, shall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy seed, nor out of the mouth of thy seed's seed, saith the Lord, from henceforth and forever;" Isaiah 57 chap. This is the covenent which Paul says God will make with them when he will take away their sins. And Paul makes it very plain that he considered this prophecy yet in the future, when he says to the Gentiles, "as concerning the gospel, they are enemies for your sakes; but as concerning the election they are beloved for the fathers' sakes. For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance;" that is, God will not repent of what he told the Prophets he would do for Israel in the latter days, after the Gentiles, times are full. And when God will have cleansed them from all their iniquities, then will be the time of this regeneration, when they shall again repeople the land that God gave to their fathers. Then he will also cause them to dwell in their cities, and the wastes shall be builded. Read the whole of the thirty-sixth and thirty-seventh chapters of Ezekiel. Then will be the time when the twelve apostles will sit on twelve thrones, in the regeneration, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. Now this regeneration, when the apostles will sit and judge the twelve tribes, can not be placed beyond the final judgement; when the Holy city will decsend from God out of heaven, there will be no more judging; when God shall have wiped away all tears from their eyes, there will be no more death nor sorrow, and consequently no more need of judging, for the former things have passed away—all are become new.

And concerning that city you say my words contradict each other; but I say they do not, and I think I can show you that you are mistaken. I said any one that is not dull of comprehenshion can easily understand, that the city Jeremiah speaks of will be built of such materials that could be thrown down; but the prophet says, "It shall not be plucked up nor thrown down any more for ever," Now what is the meaning of the words any more. It certainly means that it had been thrown down before. But the city that has the twelve apostles for its foundation and every believer a lively stone never was thrown down: it will stand through all eterity. I do not know what the Jerman lesson says, but the English gives us no such a thing to understand that the city Jeremiah speaks of will endure in eternity; but "it shall not be plucked up nor thrown down any more for ever." Now the word forever does not always mean endless; but the end of an age. But perhaps you will say, How do you know that? and for fear that you might have such thoughts I will cite you to a place where I think you can see for yourself that the word forever has an end, though it means for a long period.—In the 12th chapter of Exodus the word forever occurs three times, and always connected with an ordinance that has long since passed away.—They were commanded to "keep it afeast by an ordinance forever." And it said three times that they should keep this thing by an ordinance throughout their generation forever. Now we know that that feast and the sprinkling of blood pointed to the sufferings of Christ, and reached its fulfillment when Christ suffered his blood to stain the Cross.

So you can see that the law ended, and the word forever with it, when John entered upon his ministry; the law and Prophets were until John, since then the gospel is preached unto us. So you can see that my words do not contradict each other, when I said, the city must give way when all earthly things must give way. If the Jews believed as you do, can you wonder why they were so stiff-necked and hard to wean from the law?

Can it be possible, brother, that you would like to take the advantage of me? I gave you no cause to insinuate that I did not know that Jesus Christ was king of the Jews. I meant that they had no earthly king of their own after their return from Babylon. Cesar was not a king of their own people, but a Roman Governor. Christ had not came to the Jews to be their earthly king. This was a spiritual kingdom, and not of this world. They at one time wanted to take him by force and make him king; but he slipped out of their hands and went into a mountain to pray. He said to them at one time, "Who made me a Judge and divider over you?" But the Prophets say so often that God will place them in their own land that he gave to Jacob their father, and will multiply them, and David shall be king over them. Here the Prophet does not mean David to be Christ. Now brother if you are willing to close our controversy, I am sure I am; but if not, let it be so; but this I can tell you, that with all your battering, you have not shattered my foot-hold in the least.

MARGARET DEARDORFF.

Plain Talk to Plain People.

In C. F. C. Vol. 7, No. 35, our attention was drawn to the letter addressed to the Elders and Church Clerk of German Baptists, at Myerstown, Pa., signed John Dennis, Skowhegan, Maine. And whilst we were pleased with the scriptural and brief remarks of our brother C. Bucher, we nevertheless still feel a deep interest in the matter, and have been looking for more information in regard to said letter through our periodicals, especially in relation to what the Brethren are doing. Is this not a Macedonian call? Are any arrangements made to send books, papers, pamphlets, etc.? Brethren, why do we not feel concerned for those who wish to know and learn our principles, doctrines, faith and practice? We need action. We certainly have some books, papers, pamphlets, etc., that might give our Christian friends some light on some of our principles. We should like to know whether there are any efforts made to comply with the request of our Christian friends in Maine.—Brother Nead's works, A. Mock's, our periodicals, and other works of the Brethren should be sent. We would particularly suggest to send some whole volumes of the "Visitor" of former years—say within the years of 1856 to 1868—also later. We think the church at large should contribute in bearing the necessary expenses.

More than this, we should even, if thought necessary and good for the extension and promotion of the Redeemer's cause and the building up of Zion, send Brethren to teach and preach Christ and him crucified to those who are hungering and thirsting for the bread and water of life.

We sometimes fear the Brethren—yea, the churches—are looking too much westward, and forgetting the east, north and south. Wherever the call is and a door opened, let us heed the command: "Go and teach the nations." We are satisfied that we have the talent and ability, and we trust, the grace and wisdom in the church to accomplish some good, if the necessary efforts are made in labor and action. As to means we know they are in the church. But here we touch upon a tender cord; touch the purse and you touch a tender point. But let reason speak; let Scripture speak, and what is the response? Labor is worth means, time is worth means, and how can the labor be performod without devoting some time and spending some means on those frequent calls in which the minister sometimes spends two or three weeks, yes, two or three months, in endeavoring to build up the cause of Christ? Paul says: "For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach except they be sent? as it is written, how beautiful are the feet of them that preach the Gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things." Rom. x. 13-15.

We might bring up other testimonies from the scriptures of divine truth, to sustain the idea that the church unitedly is called to send the messengers of peace by and through her prayers, wisdom, grace and means. Brethren, have we zeal? Have we fortitude? Is the missionary work going on, or are we resting, sitting down at ease, or lying dormant? Let us pray the Lord to send forth laborers into the vineyard, knowing that in due time we shall reap if we faint not.

In Christian affection, I am your brother in the Lord,

GEORGE WITWER,

Hamilton, Mo.

"He That is not With Me is Against Me."

"You don't mean to call me an enemy of religion, do you?" said a farmer to a gentleman who was urging him to become a friend of Christ.

"He that is not with me is against me,' are Christ's words. Are they not decisive to the question?" replied the gentleman.

"But I am friendly to religion," replied the farmer.

"Friendly? How? You do not revile Christ, I know; but do you serve him? Do you avow yourself his disciple? Are you his disciple? Do you by your life and speech declare that faith in Christ is necessary to salvation?"

"I do not profess faith in Christ, sir," said the farmer, "and of course, I cannot consistently urge the faith on others."

"Then, you see," replied the gentleman, "that your influence is against the acceptance of Christ by others.—Its voice is, 'Personal faith in Christ is not a very important matter; if it were, I should seek it.'"

The farmer was silenced. He felt that his friend was right. He saw that not to be on Christ's side is to be against him; not to be marching with his pilgrims to heaven is to be marching with his enemies to hell—He was right. There is no middle course. Every man is fighting for Christ or against him.

Reader, where do you stand—with Christ or against him?

A promise should be given with caution and kept with care. It should be made with the heart and remembered by the head

Self-will is so ardent and active that it will break a world to pieces to make a stool to sit on.—Cecil.

For the Companion.

Sending Ministers.

"Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the Gospel should live of the Gospel."—1 Cor. ix. 14.

Brethren, what are the arguments you have against making money preach the Gospel? Some brethren are rich and they are not called upon to go in person and preach.—Some brethren are poor and they are called to the ministry. They have always been poor and had not the advantages of a good education.—They worked for poor parents, were left orphans, and then worked to maintain their poor mother, brothers and sisters. They worked honestly, faithfully, lived soberly, righteously and devotedly in the fear of God and in favor with men. After awhile there was an election, and who shall stand upon Zion's walls but these poor and faithful brethren? Yes, there they stand, and stand, and scratch their head and stand.—They don't know that Moses was meek, because they have not had the advantage of going to Sabbath-school. They have heard that the Savior was crucified, but where, when, and by whom, is not quite so clear as the noon-day sun in harvest weather.—They can count the cents in a dollar far better than tell the number of prophets the greater, and estimate the bushels of corn per acre better than tell the number and order of Job's comforters. With piles of cord wood and pyramids of oak rails they are quite familiar, but the kind of tree that Zaccheus climbed, or the wood that the Ark was built of, or the cleaving of wood to offer Isaac upon, are subjects as far removed as the Omega of the Greek language—Hard manual labor through the day, scanty fare all the time, and wearied limbs at night, and now stand upon Zion's walls and preach the Gospel. How is a man to tell that which he himself does not know? How is he to teach that which he has not learned? "O, the spirit will give him utterance." Well, just show me a scriptural promise for that and I shall be satisfied. The Savior says, "Preach the Gospel." What is the Gospel? Paul says, "Preach the word."—What is the word? "This is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you." 1 Pet. i. 25. The Spirit will give utterance but first you must learn to utter the things of the Spirit. Peter would not say add to your virtue, knowledge," if that were a gift of the Spirit. Please remember, brethren, that in the great work of man's salvation God has a part, the Savior a part, the Spirit a part, and we a part. Our part is to fill ourselves with a knowledge of the Gospel, live it out and teach it to our fellow men.

Then when a poor man is called to the work of the ministry, a new sphere of duty is added to those of his temporal and household affairs; because he not only has his office to fill, but it becomes his duty to qualify himself for the faithful discharge of the duties of that office. To the burden already being bourne another is added. Paul says, "Bear ye one another's burdens." "How shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach except they be sent?" And how shall they be sent unless we take out our pocket-books?

J. L. SWITZER.

Tracing to its Source.

Two men met for the purpose of discussing the truthfulness and Scriptural authority of their peculiar opinions—the one a Protestant, the other a Roman Catholic. After agreeing that the Bible should be their standard of appeal, the Catholic asked the Protestant:

"Pray, sir, from whence does your church derive authority for baptizing infants?"

Protestant—After having attempted in vain to adduce some passages of scriptures in support of his favorite ordinance, said, "Does not the church of Rome do likewise? Does she not derive her authority from the scriptures?"

Catholic—'No, sir. The scriptures derive their authority from her, for she alone can interpret their meaning."

Protestant—"Do you not believe that baptism was administered to infants in the days of Jesus Christ and the apostles, and that they looked upon it as essential to true obedience?"

Catholic—"We do not believe that it was taught, recognized, or administered by Jesus Christ, his apostles, or their immediate successors, or that in their day it was considered essential.

Protestant—"Where, then, do the Catholics derive their authority?"

Catholic—'Not from scripture, not from precept, or example, but from the power and authority which Jesus Christ left with the Catholic church to adopt such rules and measures as she deemed expedient to promote her interest. The Protestant church, on the other hand, believes in being guided and governed by the scriptures, and after all, relies upon our church, upon our traditions, for the justification of her fundamental principles."

In conversation once with a Methodist and Catholic priest the latter remarked, addressing himself to us:—"You lay all stress upon the Bible.—What it teaches you hold to and when it is silent, you are silent; but we," meaning himself and the Methodists, "take both scripture and tradition.—For instance, failing to find infant baptism in the Word of God, we have recourse to tradition to supply us with the authority for the infant rite." The Methodist protested that we got the rite from the Bible, from history, and tradition; to which the Catholic replied, "There is no need of words on this subject; if there is anything clearly made out, it is that infant baptism is not found in the Bible."—Western Recorder.

Reading for the Young.

In youth, while the mind is fresh and unoccupied, it is comparatively easy to give a good direction to the mental powers. Boys and girls like facts, unless they are put before them in repulsive ways. They ask, "Is it true?" When the leading points of history are presented to them in an animated and pleasant style, they find more satisfaction in such reading than a jaded novel reader can in the freshest romance. The young are also usually fond of travel and adventures. With a foundation of actual knowledge laid in in youth, readers discriminate for themselves, and intuitively, between such works of imagination as are worth reading and such as are not. A shallow pretender to authorship is intuitively detected and summarily tossed aside. If young people are induced,—led, not forced,—to begin their reading aright, the chances are largely in their favor that their critical knowledge will make them pretty good judges afterward.—Phila. Ledger.

Christian Family Companion.

DALE CITY, PA., Oct. 31, 1871.

Our New Home.

The present issue of the COMPANION is sent forth from our new office; and as we presume it will be expected, and even desired by many, we will give some description of our location, facilities, &c.

First, then, the office is located on one of the principal business streets, immediately opposite the banking house of Philson, Black & Co. It is a three story, brick building, 20x40 feet. The first floor is used for a small book store, and press room.—The front part of the second story for sanctum, and the back part for packing room, and storing papers, books, etc. The third story is in one room, and is used for setting type, and is one of the finest composing rooms in the State outside the cities. For office room and accommodations we have everything that could be reasonably desired. Any of our friends wishing to visit us, will until farther notice, stop at the only three story brick house in Dale City.

Our town. Some have also asked questions in regard to our town. For their satisfaction we will say that the town was formerly called Meyers' Mills. About a year ago the town was incorporated, and then necessarily the borough must be named.

The selection of the name was left to the majority of the citizens and resulted in the adoption of the euphonous title of DALE CITY. The station is still called "Meyers' Mills," and the post-office "Meyers' Dale." We shall use the name of the town, and hope it will not be long until there will be but one name.

Dale City has about seven hundred inhabitants. About fifty of them are members of the church. It is situated on the Pittsburg and Connellsville railroad, one hundred and twelve miles south-east of Pittsburg, and thirty-seven miles north-west of Cumberland, Maryland. Mr. Hughart, the president of the road pronounces ours one of the most important stations along the route. A branch extending to Salisbury, nine miles, connects at this place.

The Pittsburg and Connellsville railroad is one of the most important routes in the State. Its gradation is easy, and the road bed well laid. It is true the road is yet new, and its corps of operatives are not as thoroughly organized as they should be, in consequence of which the trains are not being run with railroad regularity; but all these things can be remedied. The Company have our good wishes, and shall have our assistance in making the road one of the most popular, pleasant and useful lines in the State.

The most desirable feature about the place is the large membership.—A number of live and zealous families reside in the town, and many others in the immediate vicinity, amounting to perhaps several hundred within a circle of two miles. We have also a commodious meeting-house in the village. We shall thus be enabled to have meeting every Lord's day regularly, and frequently at evenings. Add to this the Sunday-school, Bible-class, Prayer-meetings, Lectures, and the constant society of congenial spirits, with the effectual, fervent prayers of our brethren and sisters all over the country, and we think we surely have cause to thank God and take courage. We think too that our friends and patrons have occasion to be hopeful for the future of our paper. Being surrounded by such good and wholesome influences it would be remarkable if they should not afford us some restraint from wild and hasty conclusions, and aid and stimulate us to good and wholesome thought and work. For, although we do not expect to evade cares and trials, we nevertheless do hope to enjoy more Christian comfort and cheerfulness, than we have ever before experienced during our editorial career.

Ministerially we will be under the oversight of Elder Conrad G. Lint, and colleagues with brethren Jonathan Kelso, Joel Gnagy, Silas C. Keim, Jonathan Lichty and Wm. Horner. If any one thinks these are too many they will please inquire for farther particulars before they express themselves too freely.

Socially, we have received from the citizens every encouragement, and all the courtesy that could be desired; and taking the resident citizens of the place, we have every reason to hope that we shall ever be able to retain their esteem and confidence. We shall aim, by the grace of God, so to live as to deserve it.

Our migration was the occasion of much labor, annoyance and confusion; however, we sustained no serious loss. Our goods were delayed several days, thus throwing us upon the support of our friends here somewhat longer, but they submitted so readily, that we could suffer no uneasiness from that source. Our work has been somewhat delayed, but not so much as to affect the regular issue of our papers. We are now in full operation and ready to attend to the wants of our patrons in anything in our line of business.

Prospectus for Volume 8.

With this number of our paper we send forth our prospectus for volume 8, 1872; and we have a few accompanying words to our agents and friends.

We feel truly grateful for the aid rendered us, by Christian friends in introducing and circulating our work. We are fully conscious of the fact that our trifling compensation does not pay them for the labor they perform, and its accompanying annoyances. But, brethren and sisters, we think we are fellow-workers, and taking into consideration the proportionate labor that each performs, we believe we are retaining no more than our fair portion. We are giving fully one tenth of our income to our agents. And we would glad ly give more if we could afford to do so, which, for the present, we cannot do. Our offers to agents, therefore, are simple: ten per cent. on all amounts of subscriptions above five dollars, payable in papers, books, or cash, as desired. We will send eleven copies for fifteen dollars, and the agent can retain the eleventh copy for himself, or sell it to another. This plan is easily understood, and leaves no occasion for confusion. We might offer books, sewing machines, reapers, &c., and perhaps save money by the operation, but we prefer this simple system. If any of our patrons wish any of those articles we will aid them what we can in obtaining a good one at a fair price.

The COMPANION never had a better reputation than at the present time. It is popular at home and abroad. In the present year its circulation has been extended to Canada, and the New England States, and it may now truly be said that it extends from Maine to California. It has introduced the Church into many new places, where God's peculiar people had not been known before, and has brought Christian consolation to hundreds of families which had been almost desolate before. We have made many warm friends among new patrons, and have been reconciled to almost all of the old ones. We believe, therefore, that by a little extra effort, our list may be largely increased, as well as our sphere of usefulness be enlarged. And we would kindly ask every reader of our paper to lend us a helping hand. If we do not send you a prospectus, please inform us, and we will gladly furnish you with the necessary equipments. Many of the sisters have given us much assistance. Some of them set apart certain days and evenings to solicit subscribers, and have succeeded well. Persons are always more apt to subscribe when waited upon during business hours, or at their own homes.

Brethren, sisters, and friends, will you help us once more? We kindly invite you to do so, and pledge ourselves to fulfil our part of the contract to the best of our ability.

Our prospectus will be found to read about as formerly. We wish to say here, that we prefer to avoid the credit system as much as convenient. It has caused us much annoyance this year. Nevertheless we would not lose a good subscriber because he cannot pay in advance. But we do not wish the agent to take a name whose subscription he will not assume a year afterwards. All subscriptions ought (you know what we mean by "ought") to be paid by the first of August. In fact we ought to have it in advance. Nevertheless we wish also to accommodate our patrons.

For reasons which developed themselves after part of this article was made up, we have delayed the prospectus until next week, and request every reader to look out for them, so that they may not be dropped or injured.

Our Lovefeast at Elklick.

Fortunately we accomplished our removal in time to be with our Brethren here at their Autumn Lovefeast, so that our last meeting at the old home, and the first one at the new one, were communion occasions.

The meeting convened at four o'clock in the afternoon, and commenced with the examination exercises. Brother Philip J. Brown, of Ohio, was the leading minister.—Brother George Worst, also of Ohio, was present, and labored for us, though not so much as we had desired and expected. Other brethren from adjoining branches were in attendance, and assisted in the exercises; foremost among them were elders Adam Snyder, and Jacob Beaghly. The meeting was very largely attended, and the order at night, inside the house, was good, considering the number of people, and the accommodations. We believe the largest number of members communed at this meeting that we have ever witnessed, and yet a great many could not be accommodated with seats at the tables. It was soul cheering to look over so large a congregation of believers, and speakers and hearers could not but be inspired with the spirit of true devotion. The meeting was interesting and edifying, and will without doubt leave a good impression upon those who were in attendance.

Brother Brown preached for us several times at the meeting-house in town, to large and attentive audiences. He speaks with a special view to edification.

We much enjoyed the opportunity of making the acquaintances of brother Brown. We have known him for several years, by reputation, and his chirography is quite familiar in our office. We are now more familiar, and on our part, we know our love has been increased. We know, too that he took with him the love and good wishes of many christian hearts. He left for his home on Monday 23rd inst.

We have the promise of another visit by brother Worst before he returns to Ohio, and look forward to its fulfillment with pleasure.

The Chicago Fire.

We presume most of our readers are aware of the terrible destruction of life and property in Chicago, by the flames. It occurred about the time our last issue was being printed, and if we would not have had moving on hands we would have noticed it then. Now that the particulars have been received through other sources, we will only say that our friend, and formerly brother, Dr. P. Fahrney, was among the unfortunates. His losses are very heavy, in view of which he requests us to say that it would be a great accommodation to him if all who are indebted to him would make prompt payment We hope that, if any of our readers are in the number, they will respond at once. Even amounts not yet due should be paid.

The Doctor, and sister Fahrney, his wife, have our sympathy in their loss. Fortunately for them their dwelling house escaped the devouring element.

A Solemn Day.

Last Thursday we served at two funerals, one in the forenoon and the other in the afternoon, for the first time. Both subjects were young sisters, married only about one year.—Both died in Salisbury, this county, and the funerals were largely attended. It was indeed a solemn day, and the solemnity pervaded the assemblies. The cases were regarded as co-incidents. The two sisters had been raised together, had been associates, near one age, married about the same time, and now buried in one day. May the Lord bless the occasion to the good of the community.

Almanacs.

Our books are now open to receive orders for the Brethren's Almanac for 1872. In consequence of our moving it will not be ready until about the first of December. We should be pleased to learn about how many will be wanted.

Omission.

In our article headed "Our New Home," third column, near the top, in giving the names of our ministerial colleagues, that of brother Cornelius Berkly, first on the list, was omitted by the compositor.

Our Exchanges.

Will please notice our change of address, and make the necessary alteration on the books Many of them we would not like to lose.

The Phrenological Journal.—One of the very few Magazines which are published at the present day for the radical benefit of readers,—is represented on our table by its November number. The contents should interest every live member of our community. The following are particularly interesting. James McCosh, President of Princeton College; A Man among Men; Spiritaal Presence; The Educated Man in American Society; Alexr H. Stephens; Thoughts on Phrenology; The Tagals and Visayans; Healthy or Diseased Children; "Fill up the (Menal) Measure;" Pre-historic Man; The Boa Constrictor; Consumption; His Recommendations, or the Boy who got a Situation; etc. The publisher offers the last three numbers of 1871 free as a premium to subscribers for 1872.—Terms $3 a year, Single Nos. 30 cts. S. R. Wells, 389 Broadway, N. Y.

Apprentices.

Although we had a number of responses to our former notice for apprentices, we have failed in securing the number desired. We want several apprentices, to the printing business. They should be about the age of 16, good readers and spellers, industrious habits, and inclined to books and papers. Members or members children preferred. Either girls or boys or both. Immediate and constant employment.

We have also a situation for a good journeyman printer.

Youth Contributors.

Contributors to the Pious Youth will please forward their articles for the November No. as early as convenient. Continued articles especially should be concluded with the present volume. We invite and solicit contributors to the Youth.

Change of Address.

Brother C. P. L. Roberts has changed his address from Hudson, Iowa to Waterloo, Iowa.

Answers to Correspondents.

Fleming C. Barnes; Even now, so far as we know.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Brother Holsinger:—Please admit these few lines into the C. F. C., "Is the church in California their judge? If it were my case I would want a hearing before the proper tribunal." Brother Lochr's appeal, C. F. C., No. 37, page 585. Perhaps Brother Loehr will tell us what he was driving at, by that expression. If he thinks we have judged Elders Sturgis and Miller wrong and can see it, we repent and ask forgiveness. If Brother Loehr thinks we of California are not the proper Tribunal to judge of our own Local matters, we would take it as a great favor to know who is. Elder George Wolf Leathrop, California.

Announcements.

District Meeting. — The District Meeting of Northern Iowa and Minnesota will be held in the Root River congregation, on the 22d and 23d of December, being the Friday and Saturday before Christmas. We extend a hearty invitation to all that wish to come, and especially to ministers. We wish to have a series of meetings to continue a week or ten days. We think there will be good results if ministers would come in time to hold such meetings. Those coming by rail will stop off at Lime Spring station, on the Milwauke and St. Paul railroad. Please inform us by letter. Address, Joseph Ogg, Granger, Filmore county, Minn. By order of the church.

Joseph Ogg.

There will be a Communion Meeting in the Tenmile congregation, Washington county, Pa., on the 3d and 4th of November, if the Lord will. The usual invitation is extended to all. The meeting will be held in the old brick building.

John Wise.

Dear "Companion:"—Please announce that we expect to have a protracted meeting at Plum Creek meeting house Armstrong county, Pa., commencing November 10th, to continue for some time — Elder Grabill Myers and others are expected to be with us on the occasion

Lewis Kimmel.

Notice. – Brother John Eller and myself contemplated visiting the brethren in the counties of Fayette and Monroe this fall, but untoward circumstances have prevented us so we will have to postpone it until some future time

D. C. Moomaw.

Dear Brother :—Our Communion meeting came off according to previous arrangements. Although the weather for a few days before the day of meeting (Sep. 28th) seemed unfavorable, by the appointed time the clouds dispersed, and the genial rays of the glorious Sun prevailed instead. Several ministers from adjoining churches were with us, but brother Murray from Miami Co., did the principal preaching. The attendance was tolerably large, and good attention.

The brethren held a choice, and elected brother Jonathan D. Yoder to the ministery, and brother Samuel Shawver to the visit. May they be zealous in their calling, and help to push the ark with still greater rapidity.

At the close of services the communion in Darke Co.,was announced, which came off Oct., 4th. Other members and myself attended this meeting. Here we found quite a large assembly. The brethren had preaching both in and out of the house, by day, and in doors at night. Brother James Quinter preached the first sermon in the house in the morning, and brother Abram Detrick out doors. During the first day there were three added by baptism. This meeeting came off, by what I learn, with more than usual good order — Having a desire to form an acquaintance with more of the brethren, I stayed in Darke Co.,a short time after the meeting. Then those that accompanied me returned home, but the writer went to Miami Co., and stayed with the brethren until the 9th inst. On the night of the 7th, inst I had the pleasure of staying in Covington with brother James Quinter; and on Sunday accompanied him to Piqua, where he had an appointment in the town Hall. Here brother James preached a very affecting sermon on the sufferings of our Savior. Came back with Bro. James, and in the afternoon attended the Brethren's Sunday School. This was their last session for this year. The brethren here claim the Sabbath-school to be a success; but there being some sickness and other unfaverable causes, they deemed it advisible to discontinue for the present year.

On Monday morning we took the train and started for home; and owing to the misconnection of trains on this route, I was a considerable time on the road. This would not have been very pleasant, could we have had no chance to take observations of the country. We liked the country very well, but not all of its products. We saw too much of the obnoxious weed tobacco. And it did pain our very heart to think that an intelligent being would cultivate such a poison. The beasts of the field pass it by without eating it: man is about the only animal that will even chew it.

F. M. SNYDER.

De Graff, Ohio.

BALTIMORE, Md. Oct. 11, 1871.

Brother Helsinger :—I have been thinking of writing you a note for some time, but press of business caused me to defer it. The present year we have had preaching every two weeks. The Pipe Creek brethren, in whose arm this is located, preached for us every four weeks. I am dependent on brethren in other arms of the church, to fill the intermediate appointments. On last Saturday the 17th inst., we had communion here, the first for 60 years, It created considerable interest, and was a refresh-season to the membership. Bro. John Unstead was with us, and thank God, his labor was not in vain. The Lord blessed the word spoken; and a disowned member who had been for years, openly rebelling against the word of God, and the obligations he made when received and Baptized, was constrained to cry! "Men and brethren, what must I do to be saved?" The prickings of his conscience wer ecalculated to melt the stoutest heart. He thought he had sinned out his day of Grace; but on being promised to have the privilege to make a public acknowledgement and confession before the church, with the view of restoration at some future day, when his fruits shall prove the sincerity of his repentance, he seemed relieved. At night before the entire congregation, after the 18th chap of Matth, was read by his request; he confessed his grievous sins against God and the Church for his restoration to the favor of God, and the folds of the church There were many wet eyes before he concluded, and a good impression left on the congregation, by the exercises of the entire meeting. We are now preaching in "Whatcoat Chapel," lately vacated by a Methodist congregation. We propose purchasing it in the spring, if our finances can be managed to that end. We have many rich members throughout the connection, who could easily spare sufficient to procure us the house.— We have the refusal, for $7000. It is built of brick, with a good basement, on a large lot, in fence. Who will be the first to subscribe to the enterprize? Every day we hear of persons who express an anxious desire for our prosperity, and express a willingness to attend our meetings.— I know no field of labor in the length or breadth of the United States, where a minister of our church could be instrumental in doing more good than in this city. I will guarantee a brother, who will settle here, employment at almost any business, so as to support his family. The harvest truly is great, but the laborers few.

Any one having an idea of settling here, if only for a year or two; can learn all the information desired by addressing me, at No. 12 Stockton st., near the New Lafayette Market. We have one Deacon, but no speaker here Yours in the Lord,

L. J. GROVE.

The Brethren and Friends who are personally acquainted with brother D. S. Bowman, and the relatives especially, will no doubt be sorry to learn that brother David had the outside bone of his left leg broken about two inches below the knee, on the 11th inst. He was conveying a load of field-stone to be deposited on a new road, and in the descent of a hill the wagonboards, stone, and himself slid forward under the horses, they became frightened ran a short distance then struck a tree with the wagon tongue, the shock stopping the horses. At this point Bro. David was assisted by his hired man, F. Whiteleather.

The broken limb at this time is doing well. A. CLEMENT.

N. Georgetown, O

Dear Brother :—As I have left Ohio and emigrated to the West, I desire you to send my COMPANION from Defiance, Ohio, to Sioux City, Iowa, and oblige your brother in Christ. I intend to stay here until spring, and then move up into Lincoln Co., Dakota Territory, and if there are any brethren in that county I would be pleased to hear from them through the C. F. C. ALX. KINTNER.

How the Brethren Travel in Kansas.

Brother Henry:—As it is raining very beautifully I thought I could improve the time by dropping a few thoughts under the above heading.—We know something of the traveling of our Brethren in the east; but there are a great many Brethren who know nothing or very little of the traveling of the western Brethren.—Having had a little experience recently, I will give it for the benefit of all whom it may concern. Bro. John H. Myers, with myself, started on a trip South. He found the conveyance which consisted of a two-horse covered wagon. Provisions were prepared; feed and hay in the wagon; away we go. Having sent an appointment ahead, we had to travel 50 miles the first day to meet the appointment a place where the Brethren do not preach, in Linn Co. Dinnertime the horses are unhitched, turned to the wagon, fed, our dinner was taken out of the basket, cloth spread on the table which consisted of from 8000 to 10,000 acres of prairie. This may seem to some unreasonable, but if there are 640 acres in one mile square, it is not unreasonable; for we traveled over prairie that we could see 15 or 20 miles in every direction. Oh, how lonely to travel in such a country! no house to be seen. Night comes on; stop if possible where there is water; but in a dry fall like this, it is sometimes hard to find.—Stopped, unhitched, fed the horses; the Brethren lay down in their wagon for the night, being prepared with blankets and overcoats. Early in the morning rise, feed, breakfast, start as soon in the morning as possible; 50 miles to make the next appointment.

The second day we stopped to feed and eat our dinner where there was a little store, in Allen Co. In conversation with the woman who then kept store, we asked her whether she knew any people in that country that called themselves Dunkard's by profession. She said she knew one family showing us the house across the meadow, who moved there last Spring, from Illinois. I proposed to Bro. John that I would walk over while the horses eat and be hitched up. I did so; introduced myself to the sister, her husband (a Bro.) was in a field raking hay. In our conversation I asked her how they were getting along. She said, poor. In the first place they had all been sick with chills; but she said she did not mind all that if they only had the privilege of going to hear the word preached. This seemed to be their greatest lamentation. Had not been to meeting since they lived there.—She seemed to think the Brethren did not do their part by not hunting these members up. I asked her whether she had talked to any of her neighbors on the subject of religion. She said she did tell them that the Brethren believed that the Bible was their standard of faith and practice. The answer she got was they were the very people they wanted to hear preach. She said the people have quit going to meeting, and the reason they give is, because they will not preach the word in full, much less live it out. She is strongly under the impression that if the Brethren would preach there, there might be some good done. There is one with many others that are scattered through this Western country. I bade her farewell, telling her to try and bear up, to put her trust in the Lord The name I have forgotten. Her maiden name was Gish, formerly of Illinois. We had not a long time to tarry, we had 25 miles to travel, 4 miles west of Neosho Falls, on the Neosho river to Bro. Isaac Hersheys where the first communion was. We only got to a little town within three miles of Neosho called Geneva. The next morning started for the place of meeting, across the Neosho river, just below the falls. The Falls consist of a mill dam about six feet in height. The river is about as large as the Juniata river; contains about as much water; but its channel is not so large or wide, but runs deeper, a beautiful stream.

Saturday at 10 o'clock the meeting commenced. We had now traveled two days, 100 miles from home.—The meeting was in Woodson county; found a good many rethren and sisters. Communion in a barn, about 40 members communed. Ministering brethren present, Edmund Forney (Son-inlaw, of Bro. Hershey), from Illinois; Bro. Hodgden, (son-in-law of Bro. H. Davy) from Mo., myself and Bro. Myers, were the strangers; Had a very good meeting; better order we never saw. Barn was crowded on Saturday night. Meeting on Sunday at 10 A. M, and 4 P. M

Monday morning started for the meeting at Bro. Numers, in company with Bro. Numer and two daughters, 50 miles of a journey. As usual horse feed, and dinner prepared for the journey. Arrived at Bro. Numers about dark. The next morning sister Numer proposed, as she had to go to town, Fort Scott, if we wished we might go with her in their spring wagon, to which we agreed. Fort Scott situated on the bank of Marmaton creek, a lively brisk, trading town. Wednesday 7, meeting commenced at 10 o'clock, all the strange ministering brethren present, were Bro. Myers myself, and Bro. Hershey was present. The Brethren in this Western country are glad when they can have two or three brethren, and think they have a good supply. In the east there are from 15 to 20—enough and to spare. We had good meetings and very good order. This meeting was not so largely attended as the first. It was held in a shed made for that purpose, 15 by 40. weather-boarded with cornfodder and shingled with prairie hay. Humble as the building was I believe God did look down with joy and beheld his subjects partaking of the emblems of the broken body and shed blood of his Son. The building was well got up and answered the end for which it was intended. The second day of meeting found ourself very unwell. The meeting hour arrived. Bro. Myers opened the meeting with singing and prayer, when we attempted to speak from 2 Cor. 8 Chap. 9. We had spoken probably 10 minutes, when we found we had to take our seat.—We left the Brethren to carry on the meeting, and went to the house to bed, where I was kindly cared for by Bro. Numer and family. Hope the Lord will reward them We had sent an appointment before we started, by letter, but they failed to get it. So we left an appointment on our return, in Linn Co., in an old Presbyterian house. The church there is broken up. They have no preacher. They discharged their minister for bad conduct. This meeting was well attended The next morning, Saturday, 50 miles, arrived home after dark; found our families well Thanks be to the good Lord for his care over us. Ten days away; traveled 250 miles attended two communion meetings. We are now enjoying good health. We promised to write to some of our Brethren, in regard to our health let this suffice.

I promised in a former letter to the Companion that I had something to offer to the Brotherhood that I learned by observation. It is simply this: there ought to be something done in behalf of those scattered members—scattered over this Western country, like the one we referred to. God acts through the church: if the church does not take the matter into hands, I am afraid the church will be accountable for her neglect. Brethren, we are all equally interested in this matter. The scripture injunction is, "bear one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ." And that law is, "go into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," (no limit to this). Why don't the Brethren West attend to that matter? Here is the trouble. I tell you what I have seen in my little experience in this western country Brethren moving West are generally limited; their object (secondly) is to get a home.—The first thing they do is, buy a home and involve themselves so much that it takes them all the time to labour in order to get their property paid for; and by the time they get that done they are too old to travel.—To be sure some Brethren have means; for instance, Bro. Isaac Hershey travels over ten counties, or holds meeting in them; namely, Woodson, Greenwood, Wilson, Labet, Neosho, Bourbon, Anderson, Coffee, Lyon, and Dickinson counties. Bro. Hershey has too much territory: is away from 8 to 10 days. Brethren do not complain when you have to start on Saturday to attend a meeting and be away over night. Let us see whether we cant get on some plan to get the matter into operation. Let us all put our shoulders to the gospel chariot, and I think we can make the chariot run, and hunt up those vacant places. All we want is a plan.—Brethren let us throw in our propositions; out of the many we may find something that will answer. My proposition is simply this: there are Brethren in the East that would come into the Western country, but, they are too poor. With a little aid they might be very useful in this Western country. There is generally a treasury in every church, and we think there ought to be a fraternal treasury, as there is a United States treasury; Every Elder should make a demand of his church yearly; and that money taken to the District Meeting and placed in the hands of the delegates to the Annual Meeting, and then placed into the hands of the treasurer appointed by the A. M. Any brother wishing to emigrate West must apply for a certificate from the church in which he lives, and present to Annual meeeting. Let the Brethren take his case in hand if they think proper to send him, if he lacks means, aid him out of the treasury.—Send him out: if the Brethren thinks proper to do as the church at Antioch did with Barnabas and Paul Acts 13th, all right. Make the matter known to some of the Brethren that are acquainted in the Western country, let them hunt out a location for him. The Bro. of course ought to have a little say so in the selection.—We want Brethren sound in the faith, full of the Holy Ghost. By this means we will get missionaries established at very little expense. Suppose each arm sends one dollar, it would be enough to send one brother every year. No want for teritory.—"But," says one, "I know what Bro. George wants: he wants a little aid himself." If any of the Brethren thinks so, let them come on with their donation. We have made it a business of late years, to ask nothing and refuse nothing. So the way is open: any donation sent to my address will be thankfully received, and we promise you we will spend it in the good cause." We speak that which we do know, and testify to that which we have seen: Brethren I feel interested in the matter, and think something should be done. But my article is getting entirely too long. I must forbear. I have written through love. The subject is open for amendment, correction, or if you please, rejection.

Yours Fraternally,

GEORGE MYERS.

Paola, Miami Co., Kansas.

Brother Holsinger:—According to my arrangements to start on my proposed visit about the middle of Sept., I took the train at Jonesborough on the 14th inst., and went to Johnson's City same evening, where I stopped off and stayed over night with brother Bowman. Took the train again on the 15th for Bristol. Was met at Christiansburg, Va., and conveyed out to brother Peter Crumpacker's, of Montgomery county. Riding a distance of fourteen miles in the night on horseback, raining incessantly, and notwithstanding brother Crumpacker had taken every pre-caution which providence could suggest in providing me with umbrella, etc., I got considerably wet, and the result was I contracted a very violent cold which very materially affected my health, which is but poor at best, and greatly retarded my usefulness, so much so that it was with considerable difficulty that I could attend to the appointments which the brethren had made. I was able, however, to fill all my engagements at that place. I had preaching every night during the week, which I spent with the Brethren at this point, and our meetings were very well attended, and seemed to be interesting to the people generally.—Had one appointment in the daytime. Brother Peter conveyed me about from place to place during my stay with him, and his family was very kind in their attentions to me, for which they all have my sincere thanks, and kindest regards.

I was taken on horseback from Montgomery county, to Roanoak, a distance of about 20 miles, by brother George Brunk. Had no meeting on Friday. Rested over night with brother Benjamin Brubaker and family, who received me very kindly and gave me every attention. Having no appointment on Saturday in the forenoon, and hearing of the sickness of Jacob Frantz—an old acquaintance—I proposed to brother Brubaker to pay him a visit. Accordingly we drove over. I was truly sorry to find him in such a state of suffering, yet was glad of the opportunity of again meeting with him in this world, as I then felt that it would be the last—he is now dead—yet I fondly hope that having "ceased from his labors, his works do follow him," and if ye shall but give a cup of water to a disciple in the name of a disciple, ye shall receive a disciple's reward."

On Saturday night met at the Brethren's meeting house where we tried to preach to a very attentive congregation, most of whom were entire strangers to us in the flesh, but many of them known in the spirit. Continedu our meetings at this place and vicinity until Wednesday night when I was taken by Bro. John C.

Moomaw to his place, where there was an appointment at Bethel church near Bonsacks, and on Thursday night at Tagman Town, and again on Friday night at Bethel. While at this place I had the pleasure of visiting brother B. F. Moomaw's Family, and spending some time in their society which I enjoyed very much. I was the more rejoiced at this oportunity of farther prosecuting an acquaintance which I had had the pleasure of beginning at the Annual meeting of 1870.

Found the dear sister, and indeed the whole family, unremitting in their care and attention to my comfort, for which kindness they have my sincere thanks.

On Saturday morning I was taken by brother D. C. Moomaw to Botetour church, where the Brethren had arranged to hold a Lovefeast. I enjoyed the trip very well in going to the place of meeting, as the roads were good, the weather being remarkably fine, and everything conspiring to make the trip a pleasant one, as well as the interesting conversation with brother Moomaw as we whiled away the time.

On account of my cold, loss of sleep at my usual hours for two weeks in succession, and the feebleness of my constitution, it was difficult for me to speak. There was a very large concourse of people assembled at the church on Saturday, and I being a stranger to nearly all of them, almost the entire labor of the meeting devolved upon me.

On Sunday there was an unusually large congregation in attendance, so that one half of them could not get seats in the house, and as the brethren did not think it prudent to divide the congregation, there was no alternate but to stand in the door, so as to be heard by those who were outside. I was again persuaded to speak, and the result was, that, having such a constant draught of air rushing in upon me in my heated and perspiring condition, it brought on Asthma with strong symptoms of Pneumonia.—Having two appointments yet to make before I could proceed on my journey towards Pennsylvania, where I had started to go, I therefore filled the appointments under very disadvantageous circumstances. I was taken to brother George Layman's, where I stayed over night, and was then taken by brother Layman to Bonsack depot, where I expected to take the train next morning on my way to Lancaster, Pa., in which State I intended spending some three weeks, and then return by way of Maryland through Virginia and home again. But oh, how vain are our fondest hopes, and our expectations how soon are they blighted. Having stayed over night with brother David Plain and family, we, after consulting together, and I having importuned him to accompany me on my journey, as I now felt that in my present condition it would be very improper in me to attempt the journey alone.—We had therefore agreed that should I feel able to attempt to proceed on my journey on the morrow, that brother Plain would accompany me for some distance at least, but owing to some previous engagements it would hardly be possible for him to accompany me the entire trip to Pennsylvania, but that he would go with me as far as Maryland, which would be of great service to me, by relieving me from so much labor. Accordingly I went to rest at night full of hope and bright prospects for the future, but instead of enjoying a quiet sleep, and exhilerating repose, I spent a restless night in fevered dreams and wakeful tossings, and arose from my bed wearied rather than refreshed, with aching head, flushed and excited pulse, nervous debility, dull, heavy pain in the chest, tightness on the lungs, and strong and well-symptoms of defined Pneumonia.—Believing that it would be imprudent in me to attempt to proceed farther from home in this condition, and after advising with brother Plain and wife upon the subject, it was thought best at present for me to return home, as the season was now pretty well advanced, and therefore likely to be rough weather soon, and I not being in a condition to stand cold weather very well, but that if I should defer my visit until spring that then I could go on to the Annual Meeting by starting about one month in advance, which would give me ample time to stop in Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania.

Having considered the arangement for a time I finally came to the conclusion to return home and postpone my visit until the ensuing spring, at which time I shall (the Lord willing) endeavor to perform my engagement to my dear brethren and sisters in those parts. Have patience, then, my dear brethren and sisters, as I shall surely remember you then if I have life and health. I accordingly took the western train on the 4th of October, at Bonsacks, and safely arrived at home. Found all well, for which I gave thanks to the giver of all good. Hoping that this will be accepted as a sufficient reason for my not filling my engagement with the the brethren this fall, and that they will not forget me in their prayers, I remain your brother in "the one hope" of a blessed immortality,

JESSE CROSSWHITE,
Jonesboro, Tenn.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with Obituary Notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In the Aughwick branch, Huntingdon Co., Pa., Sept 28th, of Typhoid Fever, ABRAHAM RIPPLE, son of brother Jacob, and Susan Ripple, aged 18 years 5 months and 17 days. Funeral discourse from Ecclesiastes xii. 7, by the Brethren.

In the same district, Mifflin Co., Pa., October 2d, of Disease of the Brain, MARY, wife of Jacob YOUTZY, and daughter of David and Susan Hoover, aged 2[illegible] years 8 months and 23 days. Funeral sermon by brother J. G. Glock, from Matt. xxiv. 44.

In the same branch, Huntingdon Co., Pa., Oct. 4th, AMBROSE K., only child of brother Eli and sister Mary L. MESSAMORE, and grand-son of the writer, aged 3 months and 4 days. Occasion improved by the Brethren from first Peter, i. 24, 25.

A. L. FUNCK.

MARRIED.

By the undersigned, at his residence, Oct. 19th, Mr. HERMAN BOGER, of Berlin borough, and sister SUSAN BLOUGH, of the Berlin branch. All of Somerset county, Pa.

C. G. LINT.

At the house of the bride's father, on the 15th inst., by the undersigned, Mr. LEWIS STRAYER and Miss HENRIETTA GOOD. All of Cambria county, Pennsylvania.

DAVID HILDEBRAND.

On the 1st of October, by Eld. Jacob Harn, brother JOHN SHRIVER, Jr., and Miss EDNA WARNER, of Wabash county, Ind.

LIST OF MONEYS RECEIVED for SUBSCRIPTION, BOOKS, etc.

J. S. Metzger,	$ 1.50	L. N. Showalter,	2.50
D. Beebtelheimer,	75	P. J. Knavel,	75
A. L. Funck,	75	Isaac Fry,	50
Tobias Cober,	1.60	D. Gibbon,	1.00
Ester Stoner,	8.50	S. Horner,	50
Ella Williams,	1.50	C. P. L. Roberts,	1.00
Jere. Hollinger,	75	Susan Douglass,	1.50
L. J. Grove,	1.00	Gabriel Frame,	60
Sam'l Molsbee,	6.50	H. Eyler,	75
D. Studebaker	3.00	W. G. Shrock,	1.15
Geo. Witwer,	75	J. W. Bowman,	1.75

1780 1871

ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK?

Use Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

An Alterative and Cathartic, or Tonic and Purge combined, for diseases arising from bad blood; such as Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Erysipelas, Worms, Chills and Fever, Scrofula, Pimples, Tetter, &c. TRY IT.

Established 1780 in package form. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form which was brought to its present state of preservation and perfection some years later, by Dr. P. Fahrney, Chicago, Ill's, who conducts the trade west of Ohio. Great reputation! Many Testimonials! Ask for that prepared at Waynesboro, Pa., and Chicago, Ill's. Beware of imitations. Genuine retails at $1.25 per bottle. Druggists and Medicine dealers sell it.

Dr. P. Fahrney's "Health Messenger" gives the history and uses of the BLOOD CLEANSER testimonials, and other information, sent free of charge. Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.
WAYNESBORO, PA.

Wm. M. Lloyd, Altoona, Pa. D. T. Caldwell, Tyrone Pa.
LLOYD, CALDWELL & CO.,
BANKERS,

Receive monies on deposit, and pay interest if left 6 months, at 4 per cent per annum, or 5 per cent. if left one year.

Special contracts made with parties acting a administrators, executors, guardians, and persons holding monies in trust. Dealers in every description of Stocks and Bonds.—Government Securities made a speciality.

Gold and Silver bought and sold, and a general Banking business transacted.

Universal Guide for Cutting Garments.

By which every family may cut its own garments for men and boys, of twenty six different sizes; for Coats, Pants, Vests, and Shirts, and Ladies' Dress Bodice. Agents wanted to sell State, County, and Family Rights. For Particulars address MILLER & QUINN,
Tyrone, Blair Co., Pa.

J. S. THOMAS, & CO.
WHOLESALE GROCERS
and
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

No 305 RACE ST. ABOVE 3RD. PHILADELPHIA,
N. B. Country Produce taken in exchange for goods or sold on commission.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine, with Drop Feed, new Take-up, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted FIRST CLASS, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted traveling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $200 per month. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. Co.
[illegible] East Union Square, New York

BOOKS

For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the original Greek text of the New Testament, with interlinear Word for word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price, $4.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol., $2.25. Indispensable.

Life at Home; or the Family and its Members – Including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed. The Altar in the House, etc. By Wm. Aikman. $1.50.

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. THOMPSON. Fancy Cloth. $1.00.

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand-book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners, with a Chart for recording the sizes of the different Organs of the Brain, in the Delineation of Character, with upwards of 150 Engravings. Muslin. $1.25.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By W. PITTINGER. $1.50

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Beautifully Illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth, gilt, beveled boards. Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75 cents.

Any of the above sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

Phrenological Journal, An Illustrated. First-Class Family Magazine, devoted to "Science of Man." Subscription price, $2.00 a

By a special arrangement we are enabled to the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50, or with the Pious Youth, for $3.00. We commend the JOURNAL all who want a good Family Magazine, and who does not?

All orders should be accompanied with the money, and the name of person, post office, county and state written in plain letters, and address [illegible] DALE CITY, PA.

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post pain,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	10 80

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post pain,	.50
Per dozen, " "	5.50

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents $6.00 per dozen.

COMPANION Volume 8, bound post paid. $2.7
Reserved at the office, 2.2
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid, 1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid 1.40
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA. $1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moo[illegible] prepaid, .75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid, .75
12 copies, by Express, 7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid, .45
Browns Pocket Concordance, .60
German & English Testaments, .75

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.35

32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION. 25

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Certificates &c.

MarriageCertificate, per doz., post paid, 0.30, CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP. Per doz, 0.20 per hundred. RECEIPTS.—RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE, 12 pages for five cents single copy; thirty cents a doz. All orders should be accompanied with the money, and the name of person, postoffice county & state written in plain intelligible letters.

THE PIOUS YOUTH.

A MONTHLY PUBLICATION

Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.

One dollar a year in advance.

THE
Christian Family Companion

Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements; that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
DALE CITY Somerset Co., Pa.

Christian Family Companion

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At 81.50 Per Annum

VOLUME VII. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, NOV. 7, 1871. NUMBER 44.

The Lost Sheep.

There were ninety-and-nine that safely lay
In the shelter of the fold;
And one was out on the hills away,
Far off from the gates of gold;
Away on the mountains wild and bare—
Away from the tender Shepherd's care.

"Lord, thou hast here the ninety-and-nine—
Are they not enough for thee?"
But the Shepherd made answer, "This of mine
Has wandered away from me;
And, although the roads be rough and steep,
I go to the desert to find my sheep."

But none of the ransomed ever knew
How deep were the waters crossed;
Nor how dark the night that the Lord passed through
Ere he found his sheep that was lost.
Out in the desert he heard its cry,
Sick, and helpless and ready to die.

"Lord, whence are those blood-drops all the way,
That mark out the mountain track?"
"They were shed for one who had gone astray Ere the Shepherd could bring him back."
"Lord, whence are thine hands so rent and torn?"
"They were pierced to-night by many a thorn."

And all through the mountains, thunder riven
And up from the rocky steep,
There rose a cry to the gates of heaven,
Rejoice, I have found my sheep!"
And the angels echoed around the throne,
"Rejoice, for the Lord brings back His own!"

Little Sower.

Covering Heads.

I read in No. 47, Vol. 6, in brother John Brindle's article, that sisters should cover their heads, and especially minister's wives, ought to wear caps to go to meeting, and thus encourage others to do so. I agree with brother Brindle on that point. I think if it is necessary to wear caps going to meeting, it is necessary to wear caps at all times; not only when they go to meeting. Now will the Sisters do that, wear no caps at home when they sit down at the table to eat their meals, or when they have family worship? Will they pray uncovered? I believe in wearing caps always, not only when the sisters go to meeting. I think we must worship God at home; and at all times, as well as at meeting. If we are true followers, of Christ a many a prayer will enter through our thoughts when we are busily engaged in our daily labors. I think we have not much time to go without caps then. We that have enlisted under the banner of King Jesus, should be uniformed, as well as the soldiers of this world. Beloved sisters, I think plain caps will separate us from the world, about as well as anything else. The world don't want us in their society, when they have their enjoyments or parties, they would be ashamed of us. Dear young sisters, do not be ashamed to put on plain caps. I was young too, when I put my cap on, and am young yet. I followed the fashions as much as you did; it was my hearts desire to follow the fashions.—But we must come out from among the world and must follow Jesus, in his footsteps. Thanks be to God that he pressed me down, and melted my hard heart. Oh! how glad was I, when the Savior, had spoken peace unto my soul. I was then willing to do anything for Jesus sake; but since, I was oft times not so willing. I never knew why the women wore ther caps. In the neighborhood where I was raised we were surrounded with United Brethren, and they wore no caps. I thought the old women only wore caps. A little better than a day after Jesus had blessed me, I felt that I ought to have something on my head. I did not know what it meant. Then I took the Testament, as I opened the book, I opened to that very chapter of covering heads. I felt sad for a while; then, all at once, I went and put one of my night caps on. Oh! how happy I felt then, I could have shouted. When I was at the Annual Meeting in 1864, I saw sisters, in the cars, with fashionable dress-bonnets on; and had band boxes with shakers. At the meeting, they wore caps and shakers; when they went home, they put their fashionable bonnets on again. Oh! I thought the Lord sees them just as well in the cars, as at the Annual Meeting. Then again at Annual Meeting 1866, I saw sisters coming there with fashionable bonnets on, and brought their caps along in baskets. Oh! dear sisters, I think that we should wear bonnets that we can keep our caps on our heads, when we wear the bonnets. And we should take our bonnets off at meeting. Beloved sisters, we see that the worldly keep their bonnets on at meeting. We shall be a separate people, and shall be transformed. If we keep our bonnets on in meeting, we do just as the world does. Read, 1 John 2: 15, 17. I think we should dress plain, neat, and clean. I do not believe that a slovenly person can be a Christian. Probably some think I have my faith all in caps, and in clothing. No, my beloved in Christ, I think it must commence in the heart, and must be wrought until it comes outside. I believe in experimental, practical, and visible religion. I do not believe that we can go half with the world, and half with Christ. I cannot read of any halfway. At first I thought to be brief but am lengthy. This I wrote out of love, and a pure motive.

LUCINDA MELLINGER.

Columbia, Pa.

Home and its Pleasures.

What joy and pleasures are derived from the simple word home; and yet how few, comparatively speaking, ever realize the true meaning by a practical knowledge. When we look back at the past, and review the scenes of our childhood's happy days, it seems as though it were but yesterday; so vivid do they remain in the mind. What a joy if it were in our power to return once more to the happy scenes of our school days, to greet the joyous and pleasing countenances of our loved ones; but alas we trace back the few years that we have been absent from the parental roof, and behold what a change! Some are in far distant climes, battling with the busy scenes of life; others have been borne on angels wings to their heavenly home, where cares are unknown to them, while but few remain near the scenes of their youthful days. These were our happiest days. We knew of no cares or troubles, but what were easily overcome, and went tripping along with merry hearts. What a joy it would be to return to the parental roof once more, and find the same smiling faces and happy group that once were ours to enjoy; a father's kind advice, a mother's love, and a sister's affection, are true emblems of a happy home. It matters not how plain or rude the dwelling be, if the hearts within beat in unison, there is home. It is there the pleasures of life are reaped to their fullest extent. Mansions or palaces do not constitute the perfect home, without the brotherly love and affection we owe to each other are manifested; but most generally the reverse, a miserable and unhappy existence.

Our home is what we make it. We have it in our power, however poor, to make home happy, and should it prove otherwise the fault certainly lies within ourselves. There is always some cause that leads to unhappiness. Let us try to avoid every thing that tends to make us miserable, that when this life has run its course, and the sun of existence is sinking to arise no more, we may never regret the past.

DANIEL PHILLIPS.

Fairfield Center, Ind.

For the Companion

Is Methodism of Christ?

We feel very sorry that the articles we have written under the above heading have caused the withdrawel of any subscription, and will use a little more energy to have the omission supplied; and will say by way of encouragement, in the language of the Savior by Luke (12: 32), "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom." We will here say to our friendly antagonists, that we did not intend to injure the feelings of any of John Wesley's progeny, but earnestly desired to search and seek after truth, for Charity rejoices in the truth. Could we take back the articles referred to, we feel as though we should not; for the object in presenting them was, "to expose error and elucidate truth."

We did not intend to impeach the fidelity of any one individual, but were trying to treat upon the illegitimacy of the organization, and find from the writings of John Wesley, and his coadjutors, that it was something over seventeen hundred years behind the time. Much more might have been quoted from the writings of our antagonistic friends, but we withheld our pen; and if their own works insult them, they should not think hard of us for investigating them.

We do conscientiously maintain that if any has a reason to complain, or think hard, it is the unworthy writer; from the fact that it has been said to him, that "any man, or set of men, who believe in feet-washing and trine immersion, ought to be hung." It has also been told us by those whom we regard as almost the fairest buds of our earthly love, that we are all form,—no experimental religion there,—that the "Dunkards" invariably received their members without a change of heart. Have we ever complained? did we withdraw our subscription from them? & do we think hard of their inconsistent language? Nay, verily, we love them; we will do them good; we will impart to them the words of truth (Jesus),& ask God to forgive them, for they know not what they said,& insist that they come & worship at the shrine of liberty. We here say to our friend in the language of Uncle D. to a Rev. Mr.H. when complaining of some hard reports which were afloat as to his associations with some lewd characters. "Ah!" says Uncle D. "it is the truth that hurts, a lie hurts no one." So if their writings are true, they should not think hard of us, because they have issued from their progenitors; and now may the Lord help them to see light in the light, and walk in the light as it is in Christ, for in him there is no darkness at all.

A. STALNAKER.

Small Deceits.

Men at first deceive, knowing it; but by the constant use of deception they cease to even know that they are doing it. Gradually it blinds the moral sense. And it is in this direction that great lies are less harmful than little ones. Men think that a great black lie is very culpable. I suppose it is. But when an armorer wishes, by scouring, to cut the very surface of the metal down, what does he do? Take a bar of iron and rub it? No; he takes emery. Its particles are as small as a pin's point; and these he puts on; and by scouring he cuts down the surface—takes off the enamel. You think that a great lie is a great sin, and a great shame to a man; but after all, these little lies are more dangerous, because there are so many of them; and because each one of them are diamond-pointed. And these little petty untruths, which are so small that you do not notice them, and so numerous that you can not estimate them, are the ones that take off the very enamel of the moral sense—cut away its surface. And men become so accustomed to it, that they do not recognize that they are putting things in false lights, when, by word, by deed, by indirections, by exaggerations, by shifting the emphasis, by various dynamical means, they present things, not as they see them, but as they want to see them. This phantasmagoric process by which men are throwing false lights upon action and motive; upon what is happening and going to happen; the ten thousand little modes by which men are seeking to pervert things, and make them seem different from what they really are; the petty falsenesses to which men resort in order that they may realize their vain ambitious life—these are pernicious and demoralizing in the extreme. And the habit of employing them wears the character more than a great rousing lie told six times a year would do. Yet there are men who, if they are convicted of falsehood in a great transaction, would lose their character forever. Their neighbors would say of them, "We can not trust such men as they are." And those very persons who say they would not trust them, do not hesitate to indulge themselves in five million petty falsehoods, little midges of lies, in the course of a year. A lion is to be dreaded, to be sure; but deliver me from those blood-sucking insects which make me smart and suffer! A single musquito is not much; but a multitude of them, myriads of them, amount to a great deal. And it is this falseness in little things that tends to dim, to obscure, to almost obliterate, a sense of truth. There are men who have almost entirely lost their senses of proportion, their appreciation of magnitude, and their understanding of the connection between cause and effect. They look at everything in the light of what they want, so much that they think that is true which they desire to have true.—H. W. Beecher.

Do good with your money. Don't say you will wait until you get a great deal of it. The man who does that makes a bargain with the devil; and the devil outwits him. Where men are going to use their money for good when they get through with it, the Lord is apt to get through with them before they think of getting through with their money.

For the Companion.

Why do we Brethren Love to Travel by Two's ?

BY J. I. COVER.

"And he calleth unto him the twelve, and began to send them for by two and two," &c., Mark 6 : 7.

There might be several reasons offered why we send brethren forth to preach by two ; but the following is deemed sufficient. It is said that "in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established ;" and again, that "if two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my father which is in heaven;" for where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them."—The object of this mission was to do good to souls in the name of Jesus ; theme, or subject-Christ and his kingdom, or the good news respecting the kingdom,the king and his subjects, The two's (meaning preachers) went out qualified in degree to preach, what ? That men should repent. Repentance, or turning back again to the God whom they had forsaken, was the main subject of instructing which the disciples were commanded to use in exhorting the people, as connected with the approaching reign of the promised Messiah. Very frequently are the twelve apostles called in Scripture witnesses. So they were, and even their successors were called such ; and my dear brethren, we of the church who are commanded, ordained, or appointed by the authority of the church,—should we fear the sign and the seal of the righteousness of God through faith in Christ, by shunning each others company in attending upon the ministry at home or abroad ?

"Let us then not forget the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is ;" but be established to and in the Holy work. A steadfast witness is a good one in open court, or otherwise. Come let us go in search of sinners ; bear testimony for Jesus in his name, and the fruit will be his, to the praise of God.

Be polite to all, as well to those beneath as to those above you. It costs nothing, and often brings success where it is deserved. A kind word may be paid back in gold, but if it meet no return from without your own heart will give you an abundant reward

Selected by CYRUS BUCHER.

PRIDE AND HUMILITY :—I never yet found pride in a noble nature, nor humility in an unworthy mind. Of all trees, I observe that God hath chosen the vine—a low plant, that creeps helpless upon a wall ; of all beasts, the soft and patient lamb ; of all fowls, the mild and guileless dove. When God appeared to Moses, it was not in a lofty cedar, nor in the sturdy oak, nor the spreading palm,but a bush—an humble, slender, abject bush ; as if he would by these selections, check the arrogance of man. Nothing procureth love like humility ; nothing hate, like pride.

The following is said to be a translation of the epistle written by Publius Tiberius Lentulus in the days of the Emperor Tiberius Cæsar, to the Roman Senate, acquainting them with the appearance in his province of Jesus Christ :—

Conscript Fathers,—There appeared in these our days a man of great virtue, named Jesus Christ, who is yet living among us, and of the Gentiles is accepted for a Prophet of truth, but his own disciples call him the Son of God. He raiseth the dead, and cureth all manner of diseases. A man of stature, somewhat tall and comely, with a very reverend countenance, such as the beholders may both love and fear ; his hair the color of a filbert fully ripe, plain to his ears, whence downward it is more orient of color, somewhat curling and waying about his shoulders. In the midst of his head is a seam or partition of his hair, after the manner of the Nazarites ; his forehead plain and delicate ; his face without spot or wrinkle, beautiful with a comely red ; his nose and mouth exactly formed ; his beard thick, the color of his hair, not of any great length, but forked ; his eyes grey, clear, and quick ; in reproving, terrible ; in admonishing, courteous , in proportion of body well shaped. None have seen him laugh, but many have seen him weep ; a man of his singular beauty surpassed the children of men.

It is easier to fall than to rise; therefore, take good heed to thy ways.

Much creed, little faith; much ore, little gold; many words, little work.

In a calm sea, every man may be a pilot.

The balance makes no distinction between gold and lead

Selected by S. Shallenberger.

Truth and Error.

From the most remote ages, even from that unfortunate hour when our first parents lost eden, have been in the world two great powers, diametrically opposite in character, waging an incessant warfare with each other—a warfare which will only cease when the heavens shall be rolled together as a scroll, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat. These contestants are Truth and Error.—The long duration of this contest has been marked by alternations of success.

At times, even when circumstances seemed most unfavorable, truth has risen like a giant, and, victorious over its prostrate foe, unfurled its glorious banner to the breeze of heaven, proclaiming far and wide to rejoicing millions its triumph. But alas! more frequently error has obtained the ascendency, and flaunted its black flag with malignant glee in the faces of an oppressed and misguided humanity.

Civilization advances hand in hand with truth. Truth imparts vigor, earnestness and efficiency to the progress of improvement. Whatever is sound and substantial, upon which may be built a structure worthy of our respect and admiration, must have truth for its corner-stone; and unless this element be an ingredient, the whole frabric will sooner or later topple down into utter ruin.

The record of past ages, thrones, dominions, principalities, and powers now no more, bear impressive witness to the corroding, subverting influences of error. The testimony of many an ancient city, once the pride and glory of mighty nations, of the existence of which a few shattered columes are now the only silent remains, confirms our assertion. Corrupt civil institutions, intestine wars or foreign embroilments, all born in and promoted by error, led to their fall and destruction. But let us turn from these melancholy evidences of truth and error triumphant, to single out here and there some bright event which truth inspired, the beneficial results of which are still seen and cherished. Alone stood Martin Luther before the Diet at Worms, and boldly enunciated his religious convictions amid the thunders of Rome and the threatenings of legislators.—Truth, through him, then achieved a glorious success, and flashed the light of reformation from nation to nation. This reign of bigotry and superstition has ended; henceforth God's providence might be interpreted in pages of his revealed word. How great a triumph was here—a triumph which caused the very arches of heaven to reverberate with the vocal demonstrations of joy and gratitude formed forth by the angelic hosts, while the baffled legions of hell shrank back with muttered imprecations into the deeper recesses of their terrible abode.

Again in the seventeenth century truth achieved a grand success. Galileo, rejecting the false sophistry of the ancient philosophers, demonstrated conclusively the revolution of the earth and planetary bodies around the sun. Hitherto the Ptolemaic system had been taught, which fixed the earth as the centre of the universe.—And around such a system, backed up by the ingenious subtilties of speculative philosophy, clustered political and religious prejudices. To assert a different doctrine was heresy; to maintain it was to subject the teacher to inquisitorial torment and death. Science found no sympathy when she would propagate new doctrines to the overthrow of old fallacies. Galileo, in the presence of the inquisitors, bowed with age and wrung with torture, abjured his former declarations; but its light had already flashed forth, and no abjuration could check its onward progress. The truth was known, science rejoiced, the darkness which hung over creation was dispelled, and the wonderful dispositions of its Eternal Author were exhibited in a clear and exalted light. Galileo felt the power of truth within his soul, and notwithstanding his recantation, was inspired with all the fervency of his noble spirit to say, "And yet it moves"

Since then there have been oft recurring successes in science, in art, in politics, in the moral condition of the human soul, each giving a new impulse to the onward march of civilization, and inscribing new victories on the empyrean banner of truth.—The conflicts between truth and error have shaken nations, revolutionized ideas, and wrought wonderful changes in the aspects of governments. The Western Hemisphere has not been without a participation in these conflicts; and within the last few years—years of fearful struggle—truth achieved one of her greatest victories over one of the bitterest partisans of error—human slavery. Though to the devout mind, contemplating human affairs, the moral condition of mankind, may occasion a shade of sadness, yet when we raise our eyes, lit up by the coadjutor of truth, faith, and calmly await the dispensations of that being—

"Who moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform,"

it will become more and more impressed upon our convictions that at last, amid even the crash of spheres and a burning world, truth will arise like the Phoenix from its ashes, and become forever imperishable.

For the Companion.

The Carnal Mind.

Is not this one of the greatest enemies we have to do with in our Christian warfare? The apostle Paul says: "To be carnaly minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life and peace." Romans 8: 6.—What a vast difference there is between being carnally and spiritually minded. But yet how likely is our mind to run after the cares of this world, and the objects of it? If we are not careful, even when we are meditating on good spiritual things, ere we are aware of it, the adversary of the soul will steal away our thoughts, even in our most sacred devotions to God. Then Brethren and Sisters, how careful ought we to be and to guard against all evil thoughts Our Savior has declared by taking thought we can not add to our stature one cubit. Luke 12: 25. Seeing then that we cannot gain anything by evil thoughts, but "to be spiritually minded is life and peace," we may gain much by having our thoughts directed on things that pertain to our spiritual welfare; for thoughts often lead to actions—good as well as bad. Then let us be of one mind, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord.

I. F. Rairigh.

Campbell, Michigan.

The nearer we live to Jesus, and the closer our walk is with him, the less inclination we have for pursuits and pleasures in which he is not the object

Believe nothing against another, but on good authority, nor report what may hurt another, unless it be a greater hurt to another to conceal it

Sweet Thought.

I have sweet thoughts of Heaven,
That cheer me all the day,
As through the clouds and darkness
I take my toilsome way;
I think of all the dear ones,
Who saintly glory share;
And heaven I know is brighter,
For all the loved ones there!

I have sweet thoughts of heaven,
That fill my soul with joy,
When earthly trials gather,
And earthly trials annoy;
I think of that bright dwelling—
That perfect home of rest,
Where angel choirs are singing
The chorus of the blest!

I have sweet thoughts of Heaven,
That keep me from despair,
When life, with all its burdens,
Seems more than I can bear;
I think of him,—my Savior,—
Who suffered pain and loss;
Through him I gain Salvation,
For Him I'll bear the cross!

I have sweet thoughts of heaven—
Of bliss, and peace, and rest;
A loving Angel—presence,
That calms my troubled breast;
They cheer me when I'm lonely,
They comfort me when sad;
Sweet thoughts of heaven, ye only
Can make my Spirit glad!

SUSANNA BLOCHER.

Shade Mill, Md.

For the Companion.

The Second Coming.

When one sees how often the second coming of our Lord is spoken of in the New Testament scriptures, is it not surprising that so little is said of it in the pulpit and in the prayer-meeting? "Where is the promise of his coming?" is silently asked, and it is boldly asserted that "all things remain as they were even from the creation of the world."

We are commanded, "praying in the Holy Ghost, keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life," and "looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God." The great apostle, Paul, tells us that "Christ, unto them that look for him, shall appear the second time without sin unto salvation;" and he also says, "our conversation is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." "This same Jesus," said the angels to the apostles, "which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." And we are further told "the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the arch-angel and the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air; so shall we ever be with the Lord."

The scripture is full of such teachings, and the pulpits are empty of it. John, in his loving style, says to his people, "Little children, abide in Him, that when he shall appear * * * * not be ashamed before him at his coming," and "Beloved, now are we the sons of God. * * * * When he shall appear we shall be like him, &c.

If it is the duty and privilege of Christ's disciples to be "looking for that blessed hope and glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ," why is it not oftener urged by the ministers?—Really it is hard to find a duty pressed more urgently, more frequently, than the looking for and praying for his second coming. ELIA.

For the COMPANION.

A Reply to Brother John Forney Sr: The Bread and Cup in the Communion.

Brother Forney's remarks are found in C. F. C. present vol: No. 34, page 538. In the conclusion of his remarks he says that, if any one thinks the above reasons are not sufficient or scriptural, he is open for instruction or criticism. I will not write on this subject as though I need no instruction myself. But as we believe in a free, friendly, brotherly and sisterly enterchange of thought on all matters pertaining to our holy religion. I will write a few thoughts on this subject in as brief a manner as I can, and then, if I fail to produce scriptural evidence for my few remarks, I hope some brother or sister will instruct me more perfectly. This is a subject that is much neglected by our ministers. We very seldom hear our ministers say anything in regard to woman's inferiority; and as our ministers are too timid to speak on the inferiority of the sisters, I think we can reason together in order that we sisters can be edified.

In the first place I will be obliged to show brother F. where some of his reasons will not bear investigation.—He observes that "we learn only of the men breaking the bread and dividing the cup, in the scriptures, and not of one woman have I ever read that brake the bread in the communion." Well, that is very true; but we cannot accept of it as a reason why the sisters do not break the bread and divide the cup; from the fact that we cannot read that ever a sister did eat or drink of the bread and cup in the communion. But we dare not accept of that as a reason, or we will be obliged to admit that a sister should not eat of the bread or drink of the cup of the communion, just because we cannot read that they ever did partake of it. I feel satisfied in my own mind that brother F. would not say that a sister ought not to commune, merely because we cannot read of them communing in the days of the Apostles. The reason is just as good in one case as in the other; but we are not willing to accept of it in either, as a proof against our liberties; for the Savior said, "Whoso eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life:" and we sisters desire to inherit eternal life, and we are willing to receive the emblems of the body and blood of our Savior, by the hands of our Elder Brethren; from the fact that the women are commanded to keep silence in the churches, and it would be impossible for us to divide the emblems without speaking. If we had the liberty of breaking the bread and dividing the cup in the communion, we would be obliged to speak to each other, and say, "The bread which we break is the communion of the body of Christ." And also in dividing the cup we would speak and say, "This is the communion of the blood of Christ;" and thus speaking we would disobey God's holy word, and render us unworthy of communing. This is the best reason that I can assign why the sisters do not break the bread and divide the cup among themselves.

Now for the scriptural proof of this position. In the first place let us see what Paul wrote to the church at Corinth, (14th chap. of 1 Cor. commencat the 23d verse). "If therefore the whole church come together into one place" &c. And in the latter clause of the same chapter, we learn that the women are to keep silence in the churches; "for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded te be under obedience as also saith the law." It seems that Paul wished to remind them of what the law said in regard to the women speaking in the churches; and that he also wished them to observe the same law at that time. Paul positively said, "It is a shame for women to speak in the church." Well, then, if the women were not permitted to speak in the churches in the days of the Apostles, it certainly would not be prudent for them to speak at this age of the gospel; for the same instruction that Paul wrote to the church of Corinth is for our learning also; for heaven and earth shall pass away, but the word of God shall not pass away. Now I think that I have given a scriptural reason why the sisters are not permitted to divide the bread and cup in the communion, from the fact it would not be done without us speaking. But if brother Forney, or any other brother or sister can produce any other scriptural reason, I will be very thankful for their instruction Come, let us reason together; as this seems to be a disputed subject, let us investigate it thoroughly, that we may all come to one faith, and that we may all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among us, but that we be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment.—My design in replying to brother Forney's remarks is, to instruct, or if I am wrong, to be instructed.

From a weak sister,

MARIA E. SHIGLEY.

For the Companion.

Is it a Christian? with Answers Quoted from the Scriptures.

BY J. F. NEHER.

Can a Christian follow all the foolish fashions of this world? Or are they Christians that dress different from the world, yet like the world, have their yards, houses, furniture, buggies, harness, &c, fixed off with unnecessary and foolish things?

Answer.—"Love not the world, neithrethe things that are in the world If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." 1 John 2: 15, 17.

Will a Christian, after having renounced the pernicious ways of Satan, have any desire to follow the world?

Answer.—"No man having put his hand to the plow; and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God."—Luke 9: 62.

Will a Christian raise his children after the foolish fashions of this world?

Answer.—"And yefathers, provoke not your children to wrath, but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." Eph. 6: 4.

Is a wealthy man a Christian that gives very little to the church or the poor?

Answer.—"He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully, shall reap also bountifully; for God loveth a cheerful giver." 2 Cor. 9: 6, 7.

Will a Christian attend meeting only once or twice in six months without a lawful excuse?

Answer.—"Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another, and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching;" Heb. 10: 25.

Will a Christian be untrue or dishonest in his trading?

Answer.—"Provide things honest in the sight of all men." Rom. 12: 17.

Will a Christian spend a heap of money for tobacco and other unnecessary things, and not own a Testament?

Answer.—"He that hath no sword, let him sell his garment and buy one;" Luke 22: 36.

Is a Christian's time for reading the Bible, taken up by reading the Political papers, and novel reading?

Answer.—"Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life;" John 5: 39.

Will a Christian, when he is wronged by a neighbor, repay the same way?

Answer.—"See that none render evil for evil unto any man, but ever follow that which is good, both among yourselves and to all men; 1 Thess., 5: 15.

Are they Christians that tell us foolish tales, or untrue stories?

Answer.—"Neither filthiness, nor foolish talking, nor jesting, which are not convenient, but rather giving of thanks. Eph. 5: 4.

Can a Christian, able to work, be indolent?

Answer.—"This we commanded you that if any man would not work neither should he eat;" 2 Thes 3: 10.

Do we see Christians in the saloons drinking with the world?

Answer.—You cannot drink the cup of the Lord and the cup of devils;" 1 Cor. 10: 21.

Brethren and sisters, is it possible that any of the above named things would prevent us from being Christians? Let us consider them well, and if we have been guilty of any of these things, let us amend.

For the Companion.

Leaping.

I have frequently heard people say that leaping, as the lame man did when he was made whole, was something like they have when they have a revival, and one gets religion. Then he is made to leap for joy, because his sins are forgiven him But I can not see it in that light, for I think if a person is made whole and his sins all forgiven, then he would be willing to follow him which made him whole; but that is not the case with those persons who claim that they leap for joy at their revivals. I can speak from experience, for I was at the bench myself, and I expect I experienced as much as any, for I did leap too. But it did not satisfy me; for I searched the Scriptures and I saw that they did not comply with all the commands; and one night soon after, one of the preachers was at my place, and I told him that I must be baptized now. "Oh, no," said he, "you are baptized with the Holy Ghost, and you need not be baptized with water." He would have deceived me, if he could; but I believed my God more than him, and I never communed with them, and I am satisfied that the leaping which is done at such places is not according to the Gospel, or they would comply with the whole Gospel.

NOAH B. BROWN

For the Companion.

Special Lovefeast at Brother S. C. Keim's, Elklick, Pa.

The first Lovefeast ever held in the town of Salisbury took place on Sunday evening, October 8th, at the house above named, and quite a pleasant little meeting had we there. There were sixteen members present —six brethren and ten sisters. We had most excellent order during services, and the brethren participating in the feast felt much revived and built up.

Brethren, sisters, and friends, you may be inquisitive to know why this meeting. It surely had a moving cause,—and so have all meetings of this kind,—but this was caused by an unusual circumstance, and here let me present it to you.

Some five or six months previous to the above, a young lady, intelligent, and with rather refined habits, presented her first-born to her husband, from which time she slowly, but gradually, became weaker, until her disease betokened symptoms of Consumption. Its taking this form, alarmed the young husband and friends to the extent that they consulted another physician,—one, too, that is considered an able man in the line of his profession. He advised change of climate as the only alternative. She, however, had by this time become so weak that her friends despaired of venturing out with her. And no wonder, when some said, "She had better take her coffin with her, for she would certainly need it ere she could return." Thus she lingered on for some weeks longer, still gradually sinking. At last she, too, lost all hope of recovering. And looking upon the past history of her life, she saw much undone that should have been done, and things done that should not have been done. These two great evils so prevalent among us—the sins of omission and commission—caused her to shudder when she would look over yonder to where she was at this time rapidly verging. Her friends and neighbors having the same opinion as regarded her recovery, asked her to confirm the vows that were made for her in infancy, (in her baptism). But this would not satisfy her great mind: with all that her friends and others could say and do she could not be pacified; all that the preachers could say and do would not affect her in the least. This we know by their own confession,—"I know not what kind of a woman Fanny is; with all the praying and entreaties of all, it seems not to affect her in the least." The burden becoming greater, and the grave and eternity approaching, she could feed upon hu-ks no longer. She sent for our worthy brother Jonathan Kelso. He immediately repaired to the house of affliction. What does he find here but a poor, famishing soul—one whose sprinkling in infancy failed to give the blissful hope of heaven. She made the solemn fact known that she wished to be immersed, and that nothing but an immersion would satisfy her.

Now began the solemn work—a subject for immersion that was not expected to live very long any more! Sunday, October 1st, was the day she fixed in which to have her resolutions brought into actual realities.—When brother Jonathan brought me word I inquired into her case. "She is very weak, and it will require all if she can stand it; but she says she wants to be immersed and if she dies in the act." Here there was faith, brethren and sisters, that some of us should be a little more in posession of. Now then the good work was commenced, and but a few days left in which time preachers (of which there were three, her Eliphaz, Bildad and Zophar) were busy to persuade her from engaging in so dangerous a work: "It will kill you; this or that way is just as good; do not tear yourself away from your friends, and the faith of your infancy," etc.

In this young woman was a principle of faith that worked by love.—Notwithstanding all the strong arguments against her conclusions, such as, "you will die in the water, you are too weak. I don't think that Lint is so big a fool that he will take you into the water after he sees you." She replied, "If he does not I will get some one that will."

The morning of the first opened for a pleasant day. I, in company with brother Olinger, started for the house of brother Kelso. From here we went to see the sick woman.—When we first saw her our opinion as to the requisite strength was not so bad; but after I was there awhile, I began to doubt a little myself.—Brethren speakers, such cases will always to us appear solemn and weighty, almost above what we poor mortals can bear up under. By this time the husband made application for baptism along with his wife. After counseling the church we sang the 285th hymn, read the scripture usually read on such occasions, and after a few appropriate remarks, we entered into solemn prayer, and surely it was solemn. Buggies now being ready Fanny was carried upon one, and the procession started in the direction of the water. O, how solemn! To many will that scene be, ever fresh upon their minds! Slowly we wended on our way, and as we passed through the main street, the crowd increased in numbers, and many a silent "Farewell, Fanny," we noticed, went up from the anxious crowd. A perfect Babel grew out of this concourse of people. One would say one thing, another something else in regard to Fanny's case.

At last we were brought to the waters' edge. By this time the crowd had swelled to the number of several hundred; and not much wonder, for the prophets had sent out a prophecy that the "Dunkards" would certainly kill this subject, if they never did so before. Having such a stroug current before us, and some still affirming that she cannot stand it, you can probably imagine how we, poor servants, felt. Waiting a short time, we led into the water the husband, and there we buried him, and saw him arise to newness of life.

Now then we brought Fanny out of the buggy on a chair, where the sisters got her ready for the water. All being ready brother Jonathan and I raised the chair on which we carried her into the water. As we raised her she looked solemnly upon the members present, and said, "Brethren, pray for me." The solemn sentence, "Pray for me," uttered, as it was, on so solemn an occasion, and by a person so deeply interested in that prayer, was enough to melt the stoutest heart. While in the water and during the time of immersion, the deepest silence prevailed in that large congregation; every eye was fixed upon the scene, and many hearts became almost motionless, while the ears of many were ready to hear the sentence, "She is dead." We brought her out alive, yet some one of the crowd carried the news away from there that she had died; others that she died an hour and a half after being immersed. We brought her to the house of brother brother Kelso, where the sisters waited on her After she was re-dressed, I entered the room where she was, and, brethren and sisters, before me I had a face that looked heavenly and divine. At once she reached out her hand, and with a smile and countenance so pleasant, greeted me for the first time as brother. At this time and place was the lovefeast appointed. And sister Fanny and we for the first time communed together on earth (and it proved to be thelast). She enjoyed herself very much during her stay with us as a member of Christ's body. On the 24th of the same month, at about two o'clock, she breathed her last, and is now gone to her rest, and is awaiting us as we one by one step out of this world. Her remains were taken to the brick church, where it was said the largest congregation had assembled ever known before. The occasion was improved from Rev. xiv. 13, by the editor of the C. F. Companion and a few appropriate remarks by Mr. Pfahler, concluded by the writer. The last look we gave upon sister Fanny Eugenia Keim brought up the thought, "she is at rest." The number of her days was 25 years, 2 months and 11 days.

In conclusion I would say, I have by special request brought the above upon paper, and now pray that it may do some poor soul good—give warning to our young not to delay this all important thing too long. Work while it is called to-day. And to my fellow-laboring brethren I would say take fresh courage. The above circumstance has made me but the stronger in our practice.

May the God of all comfort bless us all. Amen. C. G. Lint,

Dale City, Pa.

For the Companion.

Christ's Coming.

"But of that day and hour knoweth no man; no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only. But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be."—Matt. xxvi. 36, 37.

It appears then to us that the great day of the Lord is not to be made known to the inhabitants of heaven, much less to a wicked world like ours. Although men of perverse minds will arise and deceive many by their good words and fair speeches, and if it were in their power they would deceive the flock of Chrst; but the sheep hear the Shepherd's voice. Be not deceived, for many shall arise and draw many after them; yea, "who privately shall bring in damnable heresies." We are not to give credit to those who set a day for the Master to come; but the servant is at his post watching, laboring night and day, as faithful as Noe did, and to no false teachings do they give heed, but reject it as poison. We know he will come, for he cannot lie: "I will come again," saith the Master. We know also that soon, yea, very soon, he will come for some of us, but we know not the day; and as we have the same warnings of death we know just as much about one as the other.

Kind reader, if your friend would tell you that on the forth of July next he was going to die, you at once would say, "You don't know anything about that." Just so with those false teachers who are deceiving and being deceived. Therefore we are not to give credence to their false predictions and surmisings. God is not talking to us through Prophets now, but through his Son, who hath declared unto us the last will and testament. What! shall men, in the face of all that is sacred and holy, tell us they know the day, when Christ the Lord, hath, in his own language, said, "Of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels, but my Father only." "Secret things belong unto the Lord our God, but those things which are revealed belong unto us." We do not expect to see the world christianized, as is supposed by some. We read quite different in the Gospel. For a moment reflect! What is it that is going to destroy the world? Is it the goodness of the inhabited world? Nay, verily.—Where is Sodom? The sacred pages tell the doleful tale. It is destroyed. If there had been ten righteous in all the place, it would have still remained; but alas! we learn it shall be so when the Master comes "the second time, without sin unto salvation," "taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ."—When shall this great day come?—When the world is least expecting it. We think from all the circumstances relating to that day, the world will be at its zenith in science and literature, and not until that do we expect it. God in his wisdom only knows. Look back on the science for the last century—not only a century but for the last twenty-five years. Suppose it is carried on at this rate for the next quarter of a century, what will it be? To-day we speak almost around the Globe in an instant. We learn men are flying through the aerial region, bearing the news from one point to another. We shudder to say that in all of this God is not known. "We have done it ourselves," they cry. Wickedness is found to abound all over this green earth of ours. Men have trodden the laws of God under foot, count the commandments of God non-essential. We call your attention to the days of Noe. Remember Lot. God was not known. In all the wicked world died; their sins and iniquities reached heaven; and then was the wrath of God poured out. From all the testimonies given, we have to say, "He is near, even at the door."

Sam'l Molsebe,

Rogersville, Tenn.

Light and Shade.—Vice is most revolting when seen in contrast with virtue. A profane man, belching forth oaths among those who never swear; an atheist pouring forth blasphemies in the presence of reverent and holy men; an inebriate filthy and coarse mingling with persons who never touch the debasing draught; the vulgar libertine corrupting the air with unwholesome speech to the disgust of those whose minds are pure; in every such instance vice is seen not alone as a sin, but as a horrid deformity. It not only brings death but also shame; is not only wicked but vile; is not alone wrong, but unspeakably mean. How lovely by the same contrast does virtue appear!—How sweet the lips of chastity; how pure the breath of reverent piety; how excellent the life of abstinence; how blessed the example that chides the erring, rebukes the unholy, impresses the young, guides the wanderer and strengthens the weak by its silent power.

Winter, which strips the leaves from around us, makes us see the distant regions they formerly concealed; so does old age rob us of our enjoyment only to exchange the prospect for eternity before us.

Attend well to your own business.

Christian Family Companion.

DALE CITY, PA., Nov. 7, 1871

Now for the Work.

Enclosed will be found our blank lists for subscribers, with envelopes with printed address, ready to be filled with good names, and the "needful" for another year. Some papers have sent out their prospectuses a month ago; we prefer not to send ours until it is time to use them.—That time is now fully at hand. We therefore earnestly call upon our friends to go to work with a will. Can you not give a few days specially to this work? In this way some of our brethren and sisters who are zealous for the good cause may lend a helping hand. If they cannot, or rather we might say, if they need not preach from the stand, they may aid in disseminating truth to the world, by holding up the hands of those who are proclaiming it. The COMPANION has certainly carried the Gospel into many families and neighborhoods.—It is one of the available means of spreading useful instruction, in which all may participate. Hithough in most cases our ministering brethren have been our most active agents, lay-members, brethren and sisters, have rendered us efficient aid, and in many cases our sisters have proven the most successful agents, having obtained good lists where the brethren had failed. Hope they will continue to lend us their helping hands.

We think our list should be largely increased during the present volume, and we confidently believe that we will deserve a more liberal support We expect to make our paper more interesting and lively than ever, and having better accommodations and facilities, we will certainly be enabled to give better attention to the wants of our customers. And we promise that on our part nothing shall be spared to give satisfaction.

Go to work now, friends, while the material is at hand, and the matter is upon your minds. Ask the first person you meet to subscribe for the COMPANION, and do not be put off with anything but a sufficient excuse, and that will be that he is now taking the paper. If he is too poor to pay for it, and yet would like to read it, take his name and then hold a collection to pay for it, for such people ought to have the paper by all means. If you cannot raise the money by collection send on the name and we will raise it. Do not go by the poor. They shall have our paper if they will read it.

All new subscribers will get the balance of this year free. Offer this as an inducement. Two months free is worthy of consideration.

We should by all means hear from all our agents by the middle of December. This will leave only about a month for work. Much may be done in that time if the work is undertaken in earnest.

THE PIOUS YOUTH,

you will remember is prospective.—We prefer that you should receive no money for it until it shall be announced that the desired number of subscribers has been obtained. Next we shall have something farther to say in regard to the YOUTH.

Visit to Allegheny County, Maryland.

In company with brethren Lint, Kelso, and Lichty, we made a visit to the Brethren in Alleghany county, Maryland, and attended their Love-feast, near Accident, on the 28th of October. Brethren Valentine Blough and George Schrock, and other ministers from adjoining branches were also present. At four o'clock the meeting convened, and the subject of Self-Examination was taken up. Several brethren had spoken upon it, and Elder Lint was about closing the subject, when the congregation was shocked by a terrible explosion in the kitchen. Many of the people were instantly upon their feet, and some made for the doors. It was soon ascertained that no one had been in the kitchen at the time and consequently none was hurt. The cause was the explosion of a hearth-stone. A kettle of water was thrown out upon the floor; the meat kettle unhooked and set down upon the fire. Ashes and coals were thrown over the contents, requiring it to be washed, and thus delaying the supper, but the time was occupied in speaking and singing. The meeting was continued on Sunday forenoon, and in the afternoon we returned as far as brother Jonas Lichty's—distance, 18 miles.

The brethren and sisters seemed to enjoy the meeting, and we trust good may have been done.

We visited the family of brother Jeremiah Buechly, and were glad to form their acquaintance. Several of the children are members, and all seem to enjoy that peace which the world cannot give. Also took dinner at brother Josiah Beachley's, but had scarcely time to make an acquaintance, except to witness their hospitality. On Sunday noon we parted at brother Jonas Beachly's where we received the last act of kindness from the Brethren of Bear Creek branch.—May the Lord bless them.

In the evening we attended preaching at the meeting-house near Salisbury, and listened to an interesting discourse upon the Christian Race, by brother Valentine Blough.

To our Contributors.

It seems that our removal has had an effect on those who contribute to our columns; and the consequence is, our manuscript box shows a lack of its usual variety. Come to our aid, brethren and sisters; we want no stagnation. To have a good paper, we must have a good supply of original, fresh, stirring matter to select from. The busy season is now about over; and as the evenings are long, and the state of the weather may soon be expected to be unfavorable to out-door exercise or work, thus affording more time for reading, study, and writing; it is fondly hoped that you will come to our relief at once. Let us have your best thoughts on the most important subjects. Labor to strengthen the bond of brotherhood—the bond of love. Comfort the distressed; encourage the desponding; strengthen the weak; guide the wayward; arouse the dormant; alarm the guilty; and encourage the faithful.

Writing for the press—fastening the light of the soul on paper—is an important method of improving your own minds, of cultivating your own hearts. We think there is entirely too much talent buried up; too many are preparing themselves to say, "Lo, there thou hast that is thine." We know some who are well qualified to write for the press, whose names are seldom seen in print. Why is it? Do they not know that the Lord's cause is suffering through their indifference? May such arouse, bestir themselves, and lend us a helping hand.

We have not heard for some time from some of our valued contributors. Will not they remember us now? Let them not merely say, "Let your manuscript box be filled;" but let them give those things that are needful to fill it. We solicit your help because it is a relief to us; but we urge you to the work from the consideration of duty. The Lord has need of you and of your best efforts. J. W. B.

Restored to Health.

We take pleasure in informing our readers that sister Lint, wife of Elder C. G. Lint, of this place, has quite recovered from her illness, and is enjoying better health than usual.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Silver Cup---The Resurrection Illustrated.

Dr. Brown, in his Resurrection of Life, cites from Hallet the following beautiful illustration of the resurrection:

"A gentleman of the country, upon the occasion of some signal service this man had done him, gave him a curious silver cup. David—for that was the man's name—was exceedingly fond of the present, and preserved it with the greatest care. But one day, by accident, his cup fell into a vessel of aqua fortis; he, taking it to be no other than common water, thought his cup safe enough; and, therefore, neglected it until he had dispatched an affair of importance, about which his master had employed him, imagining it would be then time enough to take out his cup. At length the fellow-servant came into the same room, when the cup was near dissolved, and looking into the aqua fortis, asked David who had thrown anything into that vessel. David said that his cup accidentally fell into the water. Upon this his fellow-servant informed him that it was not common water but aqua fortis, and that his cup was almost dissolved in it.—When David heard this and was satisfied of the truth of it with his own eyes, he heartily grieved for the loss of his cup, and at the same time he was astonished to see the liquor as clear as if nothing at all had been dissolved in it, or mixed with it. As, after a little while, he saw the small remains of it vanish, and could not now perceive the least particle of silver, he utterly despaired of seeing his cup more. Upon this he bitterly bewailed his loss with many tears, and refused to be comforted. His fellow-servant, pitying him in this condition of sorrow, told him that their master could restore him the same cup again, David disregarded this as utterly impossible. 'What do you talk of?' said he to his fellow-servant. 'Do you not know that the cup is entirely dissolved, and not he least bit of silver is to be seen? Are not all the little invisible parts of the cup mingled with the aqua fortis and become parts of the same mass? How then can my master, or any man alive, produce the silver anew, and restore my cup? It can never be; I give it over for lost; I am sure I shall never see it again?'

"His fellow-servant still insisted that their master could restore the same cup, and David as earnestly insisted that it was absolutely impossible. While they were debating this point, their master came in and asked them what they were disputing about. When they had informed him, he says to David, 'What you so positively pronounce impossible, you shall see me do with very little trouble. 'Fetch me,' said he to the servant, 'some salt water, and pour it into the vessel of aqua fortis. Now look,' says he, 'the silver will presently fall to the bottom of the vessel in a white powder.'

"When David saw this, he began to have good hopes of seeing his cup restored. Next his master ordered the servant to drain off the liquor and to take up the powdered silver and melt it. Thus it was reduced into a solid silver piece, and then, by the silversmith's hammer, formed into a cup of the same shape as before. Thus David's cup was restored with a very small loss of its weight and value.

"It is no uncommon thing for men, like David in this parable, to imagine that to be impossible which yet persons of greater skill and wisdom than themselves can perform. David was as positive that his master could not restore his cup as unbelievers are that it is incredible God should raise the dead; and he had as much appearance of reason on his side as they. If a human body, dead, crumbles into dust, and mingles with the earth, or with the water of the sea, so as to be discernible no more, so the silver cup was dissolved into parts invisible, and mingled with the mass of aqua fortis. Is it not, then, easy to be conceived, that if a man has wisdom and power enough to bring these parts of silver to be visible again, and to reduce them to a cup as before, so God, the Maker of heaven and earth, must have wisdom and power enough to bring the parts of a dissolved human body together, and to form them into a human body again! What though David could not restore his own cup, was that a reason that no man could do it? And when his master had promised to restore it, what though David could not possibly conjecture by what method his master would do it? This was no proof that his master was at a loss for a method. So, though men cannot raise the dead, yet God, who is infinitely wiser and stronger, can. And though we cannot find out the method by which he will do this, yet we are sure that he who at first took the dust of the ground and formed it into the body of man, can, with the same ease, take the dust into which my body shall be dissolved and form it into a human body again. Nay, even if a body be burnt, and consumed by fire, the parts of that body are no more really lost than the invisible particles of the dissolved cup. As David, then, was wrong in thinking that it was impossible for his master to restore his cup, it must be at least equally wrong for us to think it impossible that God should raise the dead.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Dear Brethren and Sisters, and all readers of the Companion, "Grace be to you, and peace from God the Father and from the Lord Jesus Christ, who gave himself for our sins that he might deliver us from this present evil world, according to the will of God and our Father, to whom be glory forever and ever." It is through the kind providence of God, that we are still spared this beautiful Sabbath morning, and are once more permitted to grasp our idle pen for the express purpose of communicating a few lines for your perusal. I will here give you a few items of Church news.

Our communion meeting came off on Saturday before the first Sabbath of Oct. Had quite an interesting meeting. There was the largest crowd of people that has ever been present at our Lovefeast in this part of the West; and there was very good behavior considering surrounding circumstances. The ministers from a distance were brethren Blocher from Dekalb Co, D. B. Gibson and Elder D. D. Sell, from Clinton Co., and Elder A. J. Correll, from Holt county, (formerly of our native Country, East Tenn.) and several other brethren and sisters from adjoining counties, and also others that were not members, but strong advocates of the same doctrine, and we truly hope ere long they may attend to that one thing needful, which shall not be taken away from them. O what a blessed thing it is to associate with those that can see eye to eye! If only all I love would serve the Lord, then wickedness would cease, and evil would be practiced no more Yes, often am I made to weep when I behold the brethren and sisters all seated around the communion board, and see those outside that are near and dear to us, who are so unconcerned about their soul's salvation as to think that feet-washing and the Lords Supper are not necessary. We often the young, the gay, pointing the finger of scorn at us while we are obeying the commands that are laid down plainly in the New Testament.

The Brethren labored very hard while here, but their stay was rather short. We desire for such to visit us often, for it is seldom that ministers ever visits our parts. We can see in our periodicals of brethren passing all around us; they all go on and do not come here. I will say to brother Jesse Crosswhite, if you come West do not forget our little band that is in Andrew Co., Mo. I think you can do much good by coming here. I often wonder why the ministering brethren in the east do not scatter out more than they do. I received a letter long ago from a cousin of mine (a young sister) in Tenn., who attended a common meeting where there were nine ministers present. Now dear brethren is that spreading the Gospel? "Go ye therefore and teach all nations." So brethren and sisters, I will in conclusion say with one of old, "Be perfect; be of good comfort; be of one mind; live in piece; and the God of love and peace shall be with you." "The Grace of the Lord Jesus Christ and and the love of God and the Communion of the Holy Ghost be with you all."

LOUISA J. BASHOR.
Whitesville Mo.

Letter from D. M. Holsinger. No. 8.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—My last report was dated at Bloomingdale, in the Bear Lake branch. We were there till the 2nd inst., then came to this (Black River) branch again. For certain reasons, which I do not wish to publish, our programme was disarranged; so we were among the brethren in this branch since then; had meetings every evening except the 9th and 13th when the fires raged to such an extent that all had enough to do to save their property; and on she 14th the rain prevented the people from coming. We have enjoyed ourselves very well since here. Much love and christian affection havebeen shown us by the members; and our health is still about as usual.

We still try by the ability which God giveth, to discharge those duties which our mission imposes, faithfully; but of this I can certify, preaching is but a part. So I will once more say: Remember us in your prayers, that our labor may nos be in vain; that God may have the honor, and his good cause prosper on earth. For the present I can give no direction where to address me but will do so as soon as I can.

Farewell for awhile.

DANIEL M. HOLSINGER.
Bangor, Mich, Oct. 17th.

Brother Henry;—I wish to say to you and to my friends, that after 2600 miles travel this summer, looking for a home we found none. We last week were up to Michigan and bought a farm in Ionia Co., Campbell township.

Lowell, will be our Rail Road Station, on the Detroit and Milwaukee R. R., 19 miles East of Grand rapids, There are better chances in Michigan, than any we found in the West, to buy good, comfortable homes at reasonable prices. We pay $4000, for 160 acres, half improved. The narrow, space will not admit of particulars, heavy timber, good for wheat and oats, not so good for corn as Indiana, excellent fruit country &c. Bro. Peter Garman: If you return from Oregon come to Michigan, Bro. John B. Allensworth give up your trip to Oregon and come to Michigan, for Laborers are much needed from your brethren. GEO. LONG.

Sabbath School.

As the church now seems to manifest a decided interest in the cause of the "Sabbath School," a few lines, from the pen of one of its most enthusiastic advocates, in the form of a report from the school in connection with "Pleasant Hill Church," (more generally known as Bush Creek), may not prove altogether uninteresting.

It reopened the first Lord's day in April with but few scholars, and only three or four teachers. Those who were the most zealous in the good cause of leading those dear little ones to the great Teacher, were Brother Brown (one of our ministers), sister Cronise, and the Misses Norris.—Though our number was small, (and we regret much to say, opposition great) God prospered us: we remembered—we trusted His promise; for He has said, "Where two or three are met together in my name there am I in the midst of them;" and in His fear we met Sabbath after Sabbath to worship in His temple with those of whom the Savior, the loving Master, said, "Suffer little children to come unto me;" and we feel it a Christian duty, therefore, a noble and glorious work, to bring these children to him; for the "Little lambs so white and fair

Are the Shepherd's care."

Bible, Testement, and spelling classes were organized, and taught by the most zealous workers we could procure. The interest increased, and almost every Sabbath our hearts were gladdened by the sight of new faces, and bright eyes looking at us inquiringly for the way in which the tender feet should tread. As the summer advanced, more interest seemed to be shown by others of the church, and we received aid from unexpected quarters. It filled our hearts with joy to see them answering to the Macedonian cry "Come over and help us."

And as the winter months, with their long siege of rain, snow, and winds, are fast approaching, we felt the necessity of disbanding our little body of workers in Christ until God in His infinite mercy shall again visit us with the genial sunshine of another spring; so on the afternoon of the 14th, we assembled in the church for the purpose of once more presenting our dear children to the tender Savior, and invoking His contined blessing upon them.

Brother Brown delivered the closing address, beseeching the children with words of love to cling to the precious truths which their teachers had imparted to them from the sacred volume; to remember that it was love for their priceless souls that had prompted these teachers to meet with them each recurring Sabbath to direct them to that land of never fading glory, of which the risen Savior is the continual light. Prayer was then offered, after which the children, and the many friends, who so kindly encouraged us with their presence, were treated to cakes and candy of many varieties, which made many a pair of little brown eyes grow brighter.

Our number though very small at the reopening of the school, had multiplied beyond our expectations, then at the close between fifty and sixty members. It was with heartfelt sadness we gave the parting hand; for before another season shall roll around some of us may be lying beneath the clouds of the valley. The hands now [illegible]ing the fervent "Good bye" may then be still and pulseless; the heart which thrilled with sadness as the forms of these dear ones left for their homes, may then be cold in the silent embrace of the angel Azrael.—Although we should meet no more on earth we all turn with trusting hearts to that land, where there shall be no parting, nor the night of death enters there, and from the deepest recess of our hearts comes the inaudible prayer.

"Father, perfect my trust;
Let my spirit feel in death
That her feet are firmly set
On the Rock of a living faith."

K.———

Moonovia, Md.

That Discrepancy.

On page 607, brother D. Snowberger calls our attention to a discrepancy between the minutes as published at the Gospel Visitor office and those printed at the C. F. C. office. As clerk of the Western District of Penna. I will say that I have still in my possession the original form of the query as it came from the——— congregation, to our D. M., as follows: "Is it according to the gospel for a brother to swear his life against a man for any cause?" I can only say at this time that I may have possibly committed the error in transcribing it for A. M. The clerk of the A. M. may possibly be able to tell us who made the mistake. Hope that all interested may see the propriety of the answer agreed on, both at our D. M. and the A. M. I will close.

Joseph Holsopple.

Brethren Editors]Companion.—For the satisfaction of those brethren and churches, who sent us aid to build our meeting-house, we append a list for insertion in the C. F. C.

Wolf Creek church, Ohio,	$ 5,00
Sugar Creek, Allen Co.,	10,00
Donald's Creek, Clark Co.,	30,00
Stony Creek, Logan Co.,	43,75
Oakland Creek, Darke Co.,	29,50
Upper Stillwater, Miami Co.,	68,50
Covington, Miami Co.,	340,00
Dry Valley, Mifflin Co., Pa.	20,00
David Roop, Maryland,	50,00
Total	$596,75.

Now through the liberal aid sent us, according to the foregoing statement, we of the Mineral Creek church now have been able to build us a very good meeting-house in size 44 by 54, with basement story under the entire house; and we here take the opportunity of stating that the liberality of eastern Brethren in the way of assisting us to a house, exceeded our expectation, and one and all have our sincere thanks for the generosity shown toward us. Our first Love-feast held in the meeting-house, was held on the 14th of this month. The weather on the first day of the meeting was very disagreeable, but it cleared up, and on the 2nd day we had a good attendance. Brother David Frantz from Illinois was with us, as well as brethren from adjoining churches, and through their faithful labors, our meeting closed to the general satisfaction of those present, and especially to the edification of the brethren and sisters.

We also invite the attention of members who think of emigrating to the South or West to this part of Mo. a s we think there are but few places in the southwest surpassing this section of country for good land, water, and other natural advantages.

S. S. Mohler.

Brother Holsinger:—Please send our paper to Sioux City, Iowa, instead of Eden, Lincoln Co., Dakota. We got everything we had burnt up with the prairie fire, and ourselves badly burnt also. So we had to shift our quarters. Remember us when it goes well with you.

Wm. Whetstone.

Christ Preaching to the Spirits.

Dear Brethren Editors:—I wish to write a few lines, for the Companion on the above subject. I understand from the language of the apostle Peter, in 1 Pet. 3: 18, that Christ was "put to death in the flesh," and "quickened by the Spirit." Some quote it, "quickened in the Spirit," which is not correct; for he was quickened by the Spirit: By the Spirit of God, I understand—"by which,"—I would say by the same quickening Spirit,—he went and preached unto the spirits in prison, "which sometimes were disobedient." Here we see that the spirits in prison that were preached to, were those that were at a certain time disobedient; and that certain time, the apostle Peter [illegible], was, "when once the long suffering of God, waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing" &c. From the explanation of the apostle Peter, we must conclude, that Christ preached to the "spirits in prison," by Noah: to the living, disobedient antediluvians, "while the ark was a preparing," &c. We think the apostle is plain on this point.

S. Holder.

Brother Holsinger: I will give you a short sketch of our Church, namely Duning's Creek. I suppose we number about 50 or 60 members. John S. Holsinger is the ordained Elder, and Gideon Rodgers and John B. Miller assistant speakers. According to former arrangments our love-feast came off on the 21st. of October; but meeting commenced on the evening of the 14th, conducted by Stephen Hildebrand and Samuel A. Moore. We had two meetings every night from the 13th, to the 19th, and we were made to rejoice to see some of our friends join in with the people of God; and we believe that the angels in heaven were made to rejoice too. There were six added to the Church, five by baptism and one reclaimed; and I believe some more almost persuaded to be Christians. I think we had truly a feast of fat things; and it was a meeting long to be remembered. There were seven ministers from abroad: S. Lidy, L. Furry, D. Snowberger, Stephen Hildebrand, Hiram Musselman, Jacob Blough, and Eml. Blough.

Noah B. Blough.

From Brother Hetrick.

Brother Holsinger:—When I left Tyrone on the 11th of October, I had a very pleasant ride to Lewistown, where some of us stopped for a short time, and then wound our way to Dry Valley meeting-house, where we had a very pleasant and interesting meeting on the evening of the 11th, and next morning,—after which the brethren sent us on our way to Lewistown. Here we met many strange faces. At Lewistown brother D. Hollinger and I tarried all night with brother A. J. Spanogle, who is a man of quite extensive conversational abilities, which, if properly used, may be made the source of great benefit to the church and the world at large.—We hope he will exert his influence for good, for of those to whom much is given much will be required.

Next day, after a pleasant ride and walk, we arrived safely with the brethren at the Spring Run meeting-house, and on the eve of the 13th enjoyed a very pleasant communion season, and also a pleasant meeting next day, when some of the ministering brethren took their leave to fill some appointments at other places, and brother Daniel Keller and I were left to continue the meeting over Sunday. On Sunday P. M. we parted to hold two meetings that night, I at the station near McVeytown, and brother Keller somewhere else.

Next day, after quite a pleasant carriage ride, we arrived with the brethren in the Aughwick congregation, where we enjoyed one more quite pleasant meeting on the 16th and 17th. Here an election was held, and three deacons set into office, and one bishop ordained. We went to Mt. Union and there we parted with brother Keller and his daughter, sister Sarah, who started on their homeward journey, and we to James Creek, to another meeting, quite large and pleasant, on the evenings of the 18th and 19th. Here bade farewell to brother Hollinger. The night of the 19th spent with brother Brumbaugh. Next day we started across the mountain in private conveyance, for Clover Creek. Arrived safe and had quite a large meeting on the night of the 20th, and continued till Sunday, 10 A. M. On Sunday night we filled an appointment in the new meeting-house in Martinsburg. Next day after visiting the ore mines in Leather Cracker, we had the pleasure of listening to brother J. B. Garver, at the Eshleman meeting-house. At night we had quite a pleasant meeting at Water Side. On the evening of the 24th I attended the largest communion meeting ever I was at, in the Yellow Creek congregation, and a nice, quiet meeting it was. At Water Side again, the next night; a full house and attentive audience.

On the 26th, after a carriage ride, we reached the Duncansville meeting-house, and were introduced to its young pastor, brother J. A. Sell. Here I attended the last meeting on my visit to the Middle District of Penn.

On Friday morning, the 27th, I took a seat in the cars bound for home, where I arrived in safety at 6 P. M., but to learn that one of my aunts—a sister—had been laid in the narrow house a few hours before.

I must say that I enjoyed a very pleasant visit, made many acquaintances, enjoyed much kindness from the dear brethren, and pray God to grant his blessings on the labors of his ministers.

J. P. Hetric,
Oakland, Pa.

The brethren in the Cerro Gordo church, Piatt Co., Ill., intend, the Lord willing, to hold their communion meeting on the 24th of Nov.—The usual invitation is extended.—Cerro Gordo is the R. R. station.

Joseph Henrick.

Answers to Correspondents.

Pet. Wolfe: All right; we have made the change.

I. R. Swigart: No inconvenience.

Tobias Cober: Your subscription had expired with No. 38.

MARRIED.

At the house of the bride's father, by the writer, brother DAVID D. SELL, and sister SARAH E McFARLIN, both of the Duncansville branch, Blair county Pa. J. A Sell.

Married at the residence of the bride's father, by the undersigned, October the 19th, Mr ARCHIBALD MILLER, and Miss MARY H. DILLING, both of Liberty Township, Bedford county Pa. Henry Clapper.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with Obituary Notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

September 5th at Smithville, Wayne county, Ohio, of heart disease, our old friend and neighbor DANIEL BAKER, aged 76 years 2 months and 25 days. He was the Father of 11 children, 4 dead 7 alive. Two of them are members of the Brethren. This old man could never talk nor hear; yet he was a man of considerable business. He was very honest in his dealings; but for the last four years he was very childish, and almost helpless, by times; he had to be attended to like a child. He was under the care of his son-in law A. Wipler. He is married to his only daughter, Barbara, whose mother died some five years before her father; so it became her lot to take care of her father in his old childish days; and for the satisfaction of his many friends in the East and West, I can truly say that he was well taken care of—time labor, and expenses seemed to be no trouble to the family in order to make him comfortable. He was almost a surpassable case to attend to: but the great love and regard they had for him overballanced all these troubles. Now we hope that he who knows all things, will give them a just reward. Funeral services by J. B. Shoemaker and Henry Davidson, from Luke 13: 27.

Also in the same neighborhood, near nithville, JACOB SWITZER, died Septem- r 21st 1871, aged 68 years 9 months and 25 ys. Funeral discourse from the words : Prepare to meet thy God, O Israel."

J. B. Shoemaker.

Died in Philadelphia church, August 2nd, r dearly loved sister HANNAH D. ROB- RTS. She has gone home to receive the ward or a faithful member of the church litant, an earnest laborer in the instruc- ns of the Sabbath School, and a kind and luc6 friend of many. Though lost to our ht here on earth, she still lives in our mory ; and while we sadly feel our loss know that to her it is eternal gain. Fu- ral services by the Brethren.

Mary M. Custer.

Oct., 8th, in the Sandy Branch Columbiana ., O., Sister CATHARINE SUMMER, wife Andrew Summer, Jr., and daughter of ther LEWIS and sister———GLASS ; ed 31yrs 6 months and 14 days. Funeral vices by D. Byers and the undersigned m 1 Peter, 1 : 22,-23-24. Consoling ught that from the evidence given the aved ones "need not sorrow as those t have no Lope."

(Visitor please copy.)

John A. Clement.

Near New Hope, Augusta county, Va., on 5th of October CHRISTIANA FLORY, d 64 years 7 months and 20 days. Disease ast-complaint, with Dropsy. For three nths she spent her time sitting in her arm ir or on the bed. She bore her afflictions h great fortitude, and longed for the time come that she could leave this world of ble. She was a member of the Brethren many hears, but for the last three years had attached herself to the congregation wn as Thurmanites. Funeral services friend G. W. Hollar, J. Hetrick and Bro. tin Garber, from 1 Cor. 15 : 50, 58.

K. A. Garber.

the Union city branch, in Darke county o, Oct. 17th of Rheumatism and , brother FREDERICK ROE, aged 68 s 10 months and 20 days. Deceased was nsistent member of the church for many s, and served in the Deacon office 31 s and was a member about 40 or 42 years e best of our knowledge. He leaves an ffectionate companion, and seven chil- , and a number of grand-children, to rn their loss. Funeral occasion improv- y brother Joseph Risser and the writer 2 Cor. 5th chapter.

Thomas B. Wenrick.

the Elklick Branch, Somerset county, October 24th, Sister ADALINE SMITH, 24 years 9 months and 5 days. Occa- improved by H. R. Holsinger, from 1 15 : 22. The subject of this notice was oungest daughter of David Livengood. eaves a sorrowing young husband and friends to mourn her loss. Yet they n not as those that have no hope.

ober the 10th in the Conemaugh con- tion JACOB SHAFER, Son of brother Shafer, aged 20 years and 27 days. o in the same place, October the 16th, D HORNER, aged 25 years and some David Hildebrand.

he Snake Spring Valley Congregation, er 16th, brother DANIEL BENNET, 58 years, 7 months and 5 days. Funer- vices by the writer, from Rev. 14 :

Henry Clapper,

the Otterereek congregation Macoupin ., on the 9th of Oct., of Consumption, e 43 year of his age, Elder JOHN , a beloved brother and faithful minis- the Go[illegible] was called to his long home.

He was a brother that was much loved and respected by all, and his loss is deeply felt by the church. Funeral services by the Brethren, from 2 Tim. 4 : 6 and 8, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand" &c. Text selected by himself on his death bed. He leaves a wife and five children to mourn this loss, which we hope is his gain.

Daniel Vaniman.

(Visitor please copy.)

LIST OF MONEYS RECEIVED for SUBSCRIPTION, BOOKS, etc.

F. C. Barnes,	1 90	E. Spangle,	50
Wm. Leatherman,	50	N. M. Sellers,	1 50
M. Bashoar,	5 00	A. Baum,	60
E. P. Zeigler,	1 50	M. H. Hill,	1 00
H. Clapper,	75	J. Strayer,	75
J. S. Flory,	75	C. Masters, (Per
D. R. Kline,	75	Flory),	7 50
John Shiver,	1 00	E. Blough,	5 00
J. C. Lehman,	1 50	James A. Sell,	1 50
H. Knouff,	3 00	H. E. Shifer,	8 00
Mary M. Custer,	150	D. B. Mentzer,	75
S C Showalter,	1 50	Joseph Zahn,	7 60
D H Garber,	75	P R Oaks,	3 40
S Bollinger,	85	Mark Minser,	1 50
J S Keim,	5 70	Christ Myers,	75
E L Brower,	1 10	George Long,	10 65
Daniel Ziegler,	50	A W Bowman,	2 75
A Mohler,	1 60	T B Henrick,	2,00

Pittsburg and Connellsville R. R.

TIME TABLE.

Commencing on Monday, October 10th, 1871, at 2 o'clock. P. M.

EASTWARD.			WESTWARD.
Cum Mail	Balt Exp.	STATIONS.	Cin. Exp.	Cum Mail
A. M.	P. M.		A. M.	P. M.
6 50	8 00	Pittsburg	10 15	6 10
10 21	9 57	Bradford	8 05	2 30
10 35	10 10	Connellsville	8 00	2 25
1 20	11 55	Mineral Point	5 52	11 22
1 40	12 15	Garret	5 38	11 02
157	1228	DALE CITY	526	1045
3 16	1 28	Bridgeport	4 15	9 25
4 00	3 00	Cumberland	3 40	8 40
P. M.	A. M.		P. M.	A. M.

Advertisements.

WE will admit a limited number of selec advertisements at the following rates

One insertion, 20 cents a line.

Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.

Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.

No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations.

A Card.

D. S. D. Fahrney & Son, Uroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.

7-10- 1 yr. pd.

Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

Address H. R. Holsinger,

Dale City, Pa.

FOUR MONTHS FOR 50 CTS.

GREAT SUCCESS

AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKER,

An Evangelical Undenominational Monthly, for PARENTS, TEACHERS and SCHOLARS. With Sunday School Lessons, Exposition, Illustrations, Questions Blackboard Exercises, &c., for each Sabbath.

This publication is designed to develop a greater depth and spirituality in the Sunday School work, looking beyond methods to results.

Terms for 1872—$1,50 a year in Advance. CLUBS of TEN or more (to one address) will receive 6 Lesson Papers, free with each Magazine monthly. SCHOLARS LESSON PAPER, monthly, with Lessons for every Sabbath, 13 cts. a year ; or per hundred $9 a year. Send 10 cents for Specimen copy, Lesson Paper, and your own List of Lessons for 1872, to

J. W. McINTYRE, ST., LOUIS, Mo.

BOUND COPIES for 1870 and 1871, $2 each, postpaid. Lesson Papers on Gospel of Matthew for 1870, and on Gospel of John for 1871, same price as 1872.

Oct. 15th, Nov. 14 15

TYRONE BANK,

TYRONE, PA.

This Bank, intending to do a general banking business, solicits accounts from Banks' Bankers and others. Collections made on all points. Interest allowed on DEPOSITS left on time. Paper discounted on liberal terms.

Wm. P. Orbison,	D. P. Gwin,
John Scott,	H. G. Fisher,
Thomas Fisher,	J. H. Glazier,
Wm. Dorris,	G. C. Wilkins,
G W. Garretson,	and others.

BURLINGTON.

Leaving the East and arriving at Chicago or Indianapolis, how shall we reach the West? The best Line is acknowledged to be the C. B. and Q., joined together with the B. & M. Railroad by the Iron Bridge at Burlington, and called the Burlington Route.

The main line of the Route running to Omaha, connects with the great Pacific Roads, and forms to-day the leading route to California. The Middle Branch, entering Nebraska at Plattsmouth, passes through Lincoln, the State Capital, and will this year be finished to Fort Kearney, forming the shortest route across the Continent by over 100 miles.

Another branch of the B. M., diverging at Red Oak, falls into a line running down the Missouri through St. Joe to Kansas City, and all Kansas. Passengers by this route to Kansas, see Illinois, Southern Iowa, and Missouri, and, by a slight divergence, can see Nebraska also.

Lovers of fine views should remember the Burlington Route for its towns "high-gleaming from afar"—its tree-fringed streams—its rough bluffs and quarries—its corn-ocean stretching over the prairies further than eye can reach.

Land-buyers will be sure to remember it, for they have friends among the two thousand who have already bought farms from Geo. S. Harris, the Land Commissioner of the B. & M. R. R. at Burlington, Iowa, or among the four thousand home-steaders and pre-emptors who last year filed claims in the Lincoln Land Office, where "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm."

1780 1871

ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK?

Use Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

An Alterative and Cathartic, or Tonic and Purge combined, for diseases arising from bad blood; such as Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Erysipelas, Worms, Chills and Fever, Scrofula, Pimples, Tetter, &c. TRY IT.

Established 1780 in package form. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form which was brought to its present state of preservation and perfection some years later, by Dr. P. Fahrney, Chicago, Ill's, who conducts the trade west of Ohio. Great reputation! Many Testimonials! Ask for that prepared at Waynesboro, Pa., and Chicago, Ill's. Beware of imitations. Genuine retails at $1.25 per bottle. Druggists and Medicine dealers sell it.

Dr. P. Fahrney's "Health Messenger" gives the history and uses of the BLOOD CLEANSER testimonials, and other information, sent free of charge. Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.
WAYNESBORO, PA.

Wm. M. Lloyd, Altoona, Pa. D. T. Caldwell, Tyrone Pa.

LLOYD, CALDWELL & CO.,

BANKERS,

Receive monies on deposit, and pay interest if left 6 months, at 4 per cent per annum, or 5 per cent. if left one year.

Special contracts made with parties acting as administrators, executors, guardians, and persons holding monies in trust. Dealers in every description of Stocks and Bonds.—Government Securities made a speciality.

Gold and Silver bought and sold, and a general Banking business transacted.

Universal Guide for Cutting Garments.

By which every family may cut its own garments for men and boys, of twenty six different sizes; for Coats, Pants, Vests, and Shirts, and Ladies' Dress Bodies. Agents wanted to sell State, County, and Family Rights. For Particulars address MILLER & QUINN, Tyrone, Blair Co., Pa.

J. S. THOMAS, & CO.

WHOLESALE GROCERS

and

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

No 305 RACE St. ABOVE 3RD, PHILADELPHIA,

N. B. Country Produce taken in exchange for goods or sold on commission.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine, with Drop Feed, new Take-up, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted FIRST CLASS, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted traveling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $200 per month. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. Co.
33 East Union Square, Broadway, N. York

BOOKS

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament with Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price, $4.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol., $2.25. Indispensable.

Life at Home; or the Family and its MEMBERS.—Including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed. The Altar in the House, etc. By Wm. Aikman, $1.50;

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. THOMPSON. Fancy Cloth, $1.00.

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners, with a Chart for recording the sizes of the different Organs of the Brain, in the Delineation of Character, with upwards of 170 Engravings. Muslin, $1.25.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50;

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By W. PITTINGER. $1.50

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Beautifully Illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth, gilt, beveled boards. Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75 cents.

Any of the above sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

Phrenological Journal, An Illustrated, First-Class Family Magazine, devoted to "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3 00 a

By a special arrangement we are enabled to the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL and Christian Family Companion together for $2.50, or with the Pious Youth, for $3.00. We commend the JOURNAL all who want a good Family Magazine, and who ...es not?

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and state written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to H. R. HOLSINGER DALE CITY, PA.

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post pain,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	10.30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post pain,	[illegible]
Per dozen, " "	[illegible]

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.7
Reserved at the office,	2.25
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder, Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express,	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	.60
German & English Testaments,	.75

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25
32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION.	25

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Certificates &c.

MarriageCertificate, per doz., post paid, 0.30, CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP. Per doz, 0.20

TRACTS.—RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE, 12 pages five cents single copy; thirty cents a dozen. All orders should be accompanied with the money, and the name of person, postoffice county & state written in unmistakable letters.

THE PIOUS YOUTH.

A MONTHLY PUBLICATION

Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.

One dollar a year in advance.

THE

Christian Family Companion

Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements; that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
DALE CITY Somerset Co., PA.

Christian Family Companion

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum

VOLUME VII. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, NOV. 14, 1871. NUMBER 45.

"And How Dieth the Wise Man? As the Fool."

BY C. M. C.

I said to mine heart. Go to, now, go to,
I will prove thee with mirth, I will try something new.
Now, therefore, enjoy, take pleasure, be glad,
And lo! 'twas all vanity. Laughter? 'Tis mad.
Joy is soon gone. What good doeth mirth?
What good comes from all the joys of the earth!

Next, wisdom and folly, their issues and claims
I compared, and behold the difference! NAMES!

I drank the red wine to sharpen my ken,
I sought to find out what was good for all men
To do all the days of their pilgrimage; then
I made me great works; I builded a dwelling—
How great and how fine I would weary in telling,
Oliveyards, Vineyards, and orchards I made,
And gardens with all kinds of fruit trees I had,
And lakelets I made me, and beautiful fountains,
Pure water my aqueducts brought from the mountains.
I got servants and maidens, small cattle and great—
More than king ever had in his palmiest state.
I gathered me silver; I heaped up the gold,
And jewels, and gems, of value untold.
I had musical instruments and singers five score,
And delights of all sorts. There was room for no more.

Thus was I great, rich, famous and wise,
I kept me from nothing that pleased mine eyes.
Whatever of joy I wished for, I got,
My possessions rejoiced me: and this was my lot,
MY PORTION of all the work I had wrought.
I looked on it all: what I made, what I bought,
And behold! Hearken now! Let every man hear it!
All was vanity and vexation of spirit.
There was no profit under the sun
From all that I had and from all I had done;
What good—real good—have they furnished to me?
And if none to the king, surely none can there be
To him who comes after. What can he do?
Naught but that which already hath been—nothing new.

Wisdom doth far excel folly, I know,
As light excels darkness to find how to go.
The eyes of the wise are found in his head,
But the fool walks in darkness as blind as the dead;
Yet the same events happen to fools and to wise,
Their joys and their sorrows are all of a size.
Then why am I wise? Is it wise to be wise?
To toil and to search for so doubtful a prize?
I, the preacher, am wise, Yet where is the merit?
'Tis vanity, all!—and vexation of spirit.
How dieth the wise? As the fool! And both rot
In the grave. And erelong they all are forgot.

Faugh! I'm weary of life. I hate it. To me
The work men have wrought is grievous to see.
Yea I hate all the work I have done here below,
For soon I must leave it, and who, pray, doth know
Whether my heirs shall be wise men or fools—
Right royal rulers or miserable tools?
Yet shall they rule over all that I've done,
All wherein I have showed myself wise 'neath the sun!

Woe's me! Of finding TRUE GOOD I despair.
What good is my greatness? What am I? Why care?
A man that hath wisdom and knowledge and right.
Must die and leave all to some fool of a weight.
And where is the man on the face of the earth
Who hath labored and toiled from the day of his birth,
Whose days are not sorrows, and travail, and grief.
And whose nights ever bring to his heart a relief?
Surely nothing is better than eating and drinking,
To enjoy what we can and live without thinking.
Yet, truly, all good and all ill is from God,
The sunshine of joy and the chastening rod.
He giveth to those that are good in his sight,
The sunshine of joy, wisdom, knowledge, delight,
But unto the sinner grieving to bear it,
Travail heaped up, and vexation of spirit.

Boulder Canon, Col.

For the Companion.

To Hymenus and Philetus.

Dear Sirs: In answer to your request I must say first, that I fear you are still "in the gall of bitterness and in the bond of iniquity"—that you, with Nicodemus of old, do not understand the Savior's language as couched in the gospel by John, for we see that you place the only hope of salvation in your mourner's bench. We fear that you are laboring under some wild delusion—seeking after a man-devised system, and are only born of the flesh and of the will of man, fulfilling the lust of the flesh.

In the language of one of old, let me say to you, "Come, let us reason together" from the scriptures. Let us look for a few moments, with inquiring mind and honest heart, at the Savior's instructions as to how we are to enter the Kingdom; for he is the only safe counsel. See the Gospel by John 3: 3—5, "Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God. Nicodemus saith unto him, How can a man be born when he is old? Can he enter the second time into his mother's womb, and be born? Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."

Now this water birth of which the Savior speaks, we understand to be going into the water and coming out of the water. Ask the school boy what the term born implies, and he will tell you, "Brought forth," which in this case means to go into and come out of. Any sane person knows that the meaning of the term born implies simply to emerge from and out of into a new state of existence. Hence it is that the language of the Savior can not be filled in any way save immersion.

It is an evident fact,—and admitted by the prominent leaders of your fraternity,—that immersion was the apostolic and primitive mode of administering the ordinance; but virtually they claim that sprinkling became a custom, and custom, a law.

In answer I must say, that it is a principle which no proficient in the science of Government will deny, that a law once enacted and in force, remains in force, unless abrogated by the same body, or authority, which first enacted it. Since the law of the birth of water of which the Savior speaks, has never been repealed or amended by him who is the Lord and Master, we are forced to the conclusion that you are not legitimately in the kingdom.

Suffer us here to give you some admonition. Come to Christ, and live. Take his counsel, as given to Nicodemus, enter the kingdom and be saved; for your disciplinary rules are nothing but man-devised principles.

Hearken, dear friends, the only discipline that is safe, is the Testament of the Son of God, which was originated in the celestial courts, embracing all the mandates of high heaven, and handed to us by the hands of the Babe of Bethlehem. This speaks nothing of a mourner's bench by which we are to enter his kingdom; but declares the terms of admission so plainly, that a wayfaring man, though a fool, should not err therein. And where men make a bench the central attracrion, we are forced to observe that they are blind leading the blind.

And as to the despised ordinance of feet-washing of which you make so light, there never was a more unvarnished statement and direct injunction given to man, by the great Head of the Church, than that recorded in the 13th chapter of John. If the perpetuity of the ordinance is not demonstrated by the most rigid analysis of language, no reliance can be placed in any words that fell from the lips of the Son of God. And if the circumstances connected, with which they were surrounded on the evening the ordinance was instituted, do not prove its perpetuity, we have no language to prove repentance of any utility. And again, if the words of him who condescended to be in the likeness of men, and took upon himself the form of a servant, and was obedient unto his heavenly Father, even to the death of the cross—we say, if his words are to have no weight in relation to the ordinance of feet-washing, we may as well hurl our Bibles into the streets, and trust to the puny arm of rebellious man. The very spirit of non-observance with which you are possessed, if not directly, indirectly, is bidding Christ be silent, while you amend his laws. The language which fell from the lips of the Savior while the ordinance was instituted is so explicit and unequivocal, that no honest, sane man will gainsay; and to reject,—fail to obey,—is nothing short of wilful rebellion against Israel's God: yea, we came very near saying, high treason and perfidy. If language so pointed, explicit, and emphatic, is not equivalent to a commandment, we have none couched anywhere in the gospel of Christ for the observance of anything whatever. Fearing you do not search the Scriptures to learn the duties which you owe to your God, we will here present some before you as recorded in the 13th chap. of John: "So after he had washed their feet, and had taken his garments, and was set down again, he said unto them, Know ye what I have done to you? Ye call me Master and Lord; and ye say well, for so I am. If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet, ye also ought to wash one another's feet. For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you."

The language is so plain that it demands no comment. We do not know how to arrive at language to present it more plainly than in the words of the Savior, as quoted above. It is enough to create astonishment in the dark regions of eternal perdition, to say nothing of the celestial courts of Heaven, that finite man can have the effrontery to gainsay as plain an injunction as that of feet-washing. If there is not a transparent and obvious obligation intended by the terms so unembarrassed in the quotation presented, then government is a nuisance, and duty loses all significance. As well may you deny that a likeness is a resemblance, or that two halves equal a whole, as to deny that the injunction is not obligatory upon us in this nineteenth century or under the Gospel dispensation. It is definite, unmistakable, that every follower of the meek and lowly Lamb is under obligations to observe the ordinance ; for he says, "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." The use of the plural personal pronoun ye, demonstrates clearly to the conception of any rational mind, that he was addressing his followers ; and if we in this nineteenth century are his followers, the language is addressed to us; for he said, "What I say unto you, I say unto all." And Peter said, when endowed with wisdom from on high by the influence of the Holy Ghost, on the memorable day of his preaching to the multitude in the city of Jerusalem, "For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." So we deem it unnecessary to waste time and paper to try to convince you ; for as the poet says,

"Convince a man against his will, He's of the same opinion still."

I will farther say to you in the language of the apostle to Timothy : "Now as James and Jambres withstood Moses, so do these (ye) also resist the truth : men of corrupt minds, reprobate concerning the faith."

And now, fellow-travellers, who are in the race that is set before us, "Be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might ;" for we learn in the revalation of God's word, that "evil men and seducers shall wax worse, and worse, deceiving and being deceived." "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city."

Jane Lew, W. Va. A. STALNAKER.

The Memory of a Mother.

When temptation appears, and we are almost persuaded to do wrong, how often a mother's word of warning will call to mind vows that are rarely broken. Yes, the memory of a mother has saved many a poor wretch from going astray. Tall grass may be growing over the hallowed spot where all her earthly remains repose, and dying leaves of autumn may be whirled over it, or the white mantle of winter may cover it from sight; yet the spirit of her when he walks in the right path, appears, and gently, softly and mournfully calls to him when wandering off into the ways of error.

Life's Troubles.

We may compare the troubles which we have to undergo in the course of this life to a great bundle of faggots, far too large for us to lift. But God does not require us to carry the whole at once ; he mercifully unties the bundle, and gives us first one stick, which we are to carry to-day, and then another which we are to carry to-morrow, and so on. This we might easily manage, if we would only take the burden appointed for each day ; but we choose to increase our troubles by carrying yesterday's stick over again to-day, and adding to-morrow's burdens to our load before we are required to bear it.

Better ride on an ass that carries me, than on a horse that throws me.

For the Companion,

Death.

BY J. S. M'FADDEN.

There is no other word in the whole English language, with such a significance, and which strikes such terror to the unprepared, or is such a joy to the Christian as he nears the end of life, as that one short word—death. What is it that even the mention of the word, will cause us to think ? And what feelings some have ! The mere mention, or the least allusion to it, will cause them to change the conversation and banish it from the mind. It is because there is in every man that fear and dread of something after death, that "puzzles the will." Many would take their lives and end their existence, were it not for the fear of that "bourne whence no traveller returns."

Death is only a vehicle of transition from one stage of existence to another. It also forever puts a period to man's probation with regard to his preparation for a future state of existence; "for as the true falleth so shall it remain."

Again, it is just as certain that death will pay us all a visit, sooner or later, as it is natural for "sparks to fly upward;" and that, too, without regard to whether we are prepared or unprepared. There is given to every man time, in which he is at liberty to choose the good or the bad; and not, as is argued, that "man cannot do anything, but must wait until he is called." This will do for those who never "search the scriptures" for themselves, or take the trouble to think for themselves; but for people who believe in a just and merciful God, this will not do. Like Joshua, they "will serve the Lord," and not wait till the Spirit compels them. They look forward to the mark of their high calling; have oil in their vessels, and then they are ready to cross the dark river of death, and rejoice in the God of their salvation.

Look about you and see the many changes that are constantly taking place in nature. In the spring we see the trees bud; then the leaves; the grass peeps forth; the flowers bloom; the grain grows to perfection: the harvest comes; the grass loses its verdure; the leaves of the trees grow yellow and fall to the ground; the harvest is gathered; the year wears to a close; winter comes; the old year dies and the change of the seasons is complete.—"What was once animated and beautiful," is now wrapped in that silent and inevitable slumber of death. So with man; he comes forth into the world; he runs the race of youth; he enters the summer of life; time moves him steadily but surely along, and he reaches the autumn. When he is at last brought to the final end of his existence—the "winter of life,"—his body weakens; his eye grows dim, and death closes the scene.

Persons that know of a surety that death will take them away in a few hours do not meet it alike. Some meet it as a cruel monster and pray that time may yet be given before the payment is made; others long for death to come, through great bodily suffering; while others are as composed and calm as a summer's morning.

The good man that has faithfully followed Jesus through this low ground of sorrow, will not be moved at the mention or at the approach of the "king of terrors;" but see him as he calmly awaits the messenger that releases him from this tenement of clay, and opens to him the portals of that unexplored state of existence, to the eyes of mortal man. He calls his friends around, tells them he is not afraid of death, for "Jesus" is with him to strengthen him; asks them to be faithful until death and they will then meet beyond the great "Jordan of death." No marvel that a wicked man said, "Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his;" for such an end let us devoutly strive.

But how dies the ungodly man, the unrighteous, he that sets the mercies of God at naught? He raves, he moans; his sins, as so many monuments of folly, stare him in the face; he begs for time,—"millions for a moment of time!" but time is over with him. He dies, he gives up the ghost, and the mourners mourn as those who have no hope. His is the home "where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched," and through the ages of eternity his cry will be, "Lost, lost!"

But this death, which all have to undergo, is as nothing compared with another death spoken of, which will be the portion of the unprepared. I allude to the second death. The horrors of that death cannot be described. Suffice it to say that it will be awful in the extreme; so much so, that man should not tarry by the way, but haste him to a place of safety.

The first death settles his status with regard to his suffering the second; for the second death has no effect on the righteous. Flee for your lives, you that are yet out the ark of safety! Look not back; press on; "seek the Lord while he may be found;" enter in at the "strait gate," which will lead to glory; avoid the broad road, for that leads to "where the Devil and his angels dwell;" and oh! how bitter will be your anguish should you neglect to "serve God" and sink down, down to regions of despair, and cry, "Lost, lost to hope, heaven, and happiness!" Seek now an interest in Jesus; strive that you may be one of those of which is said: "Blessed and happy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power." To all I would add in conclusion: Be ready to meet death.

Late Discoveries.

The following article, clipped from the American Christian Review, is inserted in our columns as a reminder. It is well in this fast age—this age of progress—to be admonished of the danger of departing from the true doctrine. It is certainly true, that forsaking the faith once delivered to the saints, and walking according to "doctrines, the commandments of men," is now called progress. Let us be on the alert; the enemy is yet "more subtile than any beast of the field:"

We are as ready as any man to receive improvements in sciences, arts, methods of teaching, etc., etc. In one word, in the mechanic arts, agriculture and all temporal things, we are ready for improvement where it is real improvement and not humbuggery. Still, in these matters, we do not lay hold of anything because it it is new, or because it claims to be an improvement. Before we receive it we wait till we are satisfied that it is an improvement. With us this waiting may be a little longer than with some; but it has this advantage, that we do not often get humbugged.

But when we come to improvements in matters of religion, there are certain limitations that pertain not at all to temporal things There is a sense in which improvements are not only legitimate, but demanded in matters of religion. But that sense is not that we can improve on the Bible, the appointments of God as recorded in Scripture, or anything in the kingdom of God, as it was at the beginning. The Bible proper must be received as perfect, as incapable of any improvement. The gospel of Christ must be received as perfect—not susceptible of any improvement; the teaching of Christ and the apostles must be accepted as perfect—as final—an end of all controversy on all subjects of faith, obedience and hope; as beyond the possibility of any improvement. The ordinances, the worship, and all things as set forth in Scripture, are perfect, complete, and there can be no improvement on them.

In what sense, then, can we have any improvement? In what sense can there be any religious progress? In what sense can we make any advancement, or rise any higher? In one sense only. We can improve our knowledge of the Scriptures. We can study them more closely, improve our understanding of them and increase our knowledge; we can improve in our appreciation of the Bible, comprehend it more fully and imbue our minds more perfectly with its holy principles and teaching; we can improve in rendering a more cordial, hearty and implicit obedience to the will of God as set forth in Scripture, a more perfect submission in all things to the divine authority as revealed in the Bible; we can improve in an appreciation of the exceeding great and precious promises, thus enlarging and strengthening our hope; we can improve, progress, and rise higher by a closer walk with God, living nearer to God, and following the instructions of the Scriptures more implicitly, walking more by faith and less by philosophy, by honoring the wisdom of man less, by devotion to the Creator and not to the creature, by educating the present generation up to the teaching of Scripture, and not modifying and degrading that teaching to conform it to the taste of apostasy. In this way we can have progress in the true sense, advancement and elevation. But every attempt to modify religion, to conform it to the people of any country or any age, under the name of progress, or any other deceptive name, is an attempt at apostasy. It is a fair start on the road leading from Mount Zion in Jerusalem to Rome. All engaged in this work are not progressing in any good sense, but apostatizing. They may run over the delusive twaddle about an age of culture, refinement, science, an advanced people, educated, highly enlightened and civilized, and the church must be educated up to the state of society; but we know the meaning of all this, and understand its bearing and what it is intended to blur over. The Church of God, well instructed in the law of the Lord, in the teaching of Christ and his apostles, is refined in the highest, elevated in the grandest and most sublime sense, cultivated in the purest and most refined sense. They are educated in the best sense of the term educate; they understand what relates to courtesy, kindness, urbanity, and allow no class to surpass them; they know how to treat with becoming politeness those who differ from them, even among their brethren, as well as those among sectarians; they know what gravity, sobriety and dignity mean; they aim not at something low, uncultivated and boorish, but the best refinement on earth, the finest taste and most exalted education, the greatest purity, the loftiest knowledge, the grandest and most sublime elevation known among men. Then their refinement does not consist in reveling in the dance, or teaching their children, or employing others to teach them, to dance; in wasting their time in sundry "innocent games," so called, or encouraging their children to do so; in attending theaters, shows and places of folly; in getting up "gift enterprises," church fairs, festivals, and the like; nor in extravagance and waste in building imposing temples and supplying them with organs, etc., etc. Their refinement runs not in these directions, nor does their piety and morality approve these things, not because they have not been educated up to them, but because they have not been educated down to them, and, by the help of the Lord, do not intend going back toward Rome and down to these things.

The tendency to apostasy, in practice, in the items we have specified, and many more that might be mentioned, is alarming to men who love the Savior, and are noticing with solicitude the events passing. But there is another feature now appearing, probably giving rise to this, that that is truly deplorable—it is the fact equally manifest, that there is a tendency in teaching backward, downward toward apostasy. We have been slow in believing this, and slower still in placing it in these columns. We certainly take no pleasure in speaking of it, much less in the fact that it is so. Indeed, we deplore it. We grieve that it is so. But we can not shut our eyes to what is appearing in our prints, and what is not progressive in any good sense, not going on to perfection, advancing nor rising. It looks not toward piety, devotion nor faith, but clearly toward apostasy, unbelief. Some of the most thoroughly and clearly established matters, not of a remote nature, nor of a speculative nature, but relative to the induction into the kingdom, or (which is the same) into Christ, on first principles, are now thrown open as unsettled, and the ground long mantained against all odds from without not only given up by distinguished men among us, but repudiated.—We will here instance two or three items:

1. Baptism for the remission of sins is squarely denied and repudiated, and long articles, full of the same subtleties, sophistries and misrepresentations characterizing the articles of our opponents thirty and forty years ago, are found in the support of the denial and repudiation.

2. It it squarely and stoutly maintained that the evidence of pardon is in us and not without—that is, that the evidence of pardon is in our feelings, or sensations in us, produced by the Spirit, not arising from any promise of God made by the Spirit, nor any testimony of the Spirit found in Scripture, but an impression of the Spirit produced in us in some other way than through the scriptures.—This amounts to a new revelation from God in every case of the pardon of a sinner, to make known to him his pardon.

3. It is squarely denied that the worship of God is divinely prescribed—or prescribed by divine law.

4. It is squarely denied that baptism is a positive institution, but we are to be shown, by the nature of baptism, reasons for it, and for submitting to it. These reasons, arising from the nature of it, and the fitness of things, are to be higher and better reasons, more pious and devout, than to submit to it simply because the Lord commands it!

In each of these points there is a clear repudiation of matters settled among us. We cannot now comment at length on these points, but can only make a suggestion or two:

1. Three of these items are on first principles, so-called, revealing something of the reason that some among us did not like to hear so much on first principles.

2. They are all rather of a negative nature.

3. There is not one of them that has an idea of progress in it. These items look not forward, and have not an idea of advancement in them.

4. They propose not to do anything in the future, except to undo what has been done in the past.

This is an example of the progress we are to make. This progress is backward. We have no honeyed words about the good intentions of men, nor hard words about their bad intentions. That matter we leave between them and the Lord. But of the work they are doing, no matter what their intentions, and the tendency of it, we have a right to speak.—The tendency is downward and backward. The movement is a retrograde one. It is toward apostasy, toward unbelief. It is demoralizing, disconcerting and confusing. It is weakening the hands and discouraging the hearts of the effective men in the field. It is furnishing ammunition and loading the guns of the enemy. We grieve over this. The love of many is waxing cold. The faith of many is growing weak.

It is bad reading that is doing this. The preachers that read their Bibles—know nothing but Christ crucified—that glory in nothing but the cross—that determine to preach the word, and nothing but the word—run into none of these troubles. The men who are getting us into these troubles are reading learned trash—philosophy—they talk of "eternal principles and the fitness of things," and are turning away from the simplicity of the Christ.

For the Companion.

On the Grounds of Infant Baptism, its Rise and Supposed Benefits.

In all the passages of scriptures I have not found one for infant baptism. Upon what grounds do pedo-baptists defend it? Will they admit that there is no evidence in its favor?—Here is the answer of one, Bishop Burnet:—

"There is no precept, or rule, given in the New Testament for infant baptism." Expos. of the Articles, Art. 27).

Mr. S. Palmer says: "There is nothing in the word of institution, nor any after accounts of the administration of this rite, respecting the baptism of infants. There is not a single precept for, nor example of, the practice, through the whole New Testament." (Ans to Dr. Priestly on the Lord's Supper, P. 7.)

Now we will after Luthers testimony: "It can not be proved by the sacred scriptures, that infant baptism was instituted by Christ, or begun by the first Christians after the apostles."

What then are we to make of the words of our Savior, and his subsequent conduct? (Mark 10: 14—16), "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of heaven. * * * And he took them up in his arms, put his hands upon them, and blessed them." If, when the Savior took these children in his arms, it had been added, "And he baptized them," instead of the words, "And blessed them," then this passage with propriety might be adduced, and indeed would have decided the subject forever; but as the Holy Ghost has recorded the circumstance, it no more refers to infant baptism than to infant communion or infant circumcision. It is certain Christ did not baptize these children. The above passage, by just and fair inference and implication, is strong argument against infant baptism. Here you observe parents bringing children to Jesus to have his blessing upon them, or, at least, that he would pray that the blessing of Heaven might attend them. Now let us ask, if baptism would have brought these children into the covenant of grace, or into Christ's Church, or secured to them any spiritual benefit, would the Lord Jesus have turned them away without baptism?—This is impossible. Was it ever known that spiritual benefits were craved at the hand of Jesus, and he refused to grant them? Here the spiritual good of these children was sought at his hands, and if baptism was the key, the seal, the door to all the spiritual blessings of the covenant of grace, (as pedo-baptists describe it), would the Lord Jesus Christ refuse it, or send them away without it? This is impossible; and therefore infant baptism is no part of the will of Christ. Some of most learned pedo-baptists are aware that this passage serves not their cause, but is against them.

The evidences we shall offer shall all be pedo-baptist. "We must take heed that we do not found infant baptism on the example of Christ in this text; for it is evident that he did not baptize these children. Mark only saith, 'he took them up into his arms, and laid his hands on them, and blessed them.'" Poole's Annot. on this text,

"From the action of Christ's blessing infants, to infer they are to be baptized, proves nothing so much as that there is a want of better argument; for the conclusion would with more probability be derived thus:—Christ blessed infant and so dismissed, but baptized them not; therefore infants are not to be baptized."—(Bishop Taylor, Matthew 19 : 14).

The will of Christ is the will of his Father, for he came to do his Father's will; but infant baptism is not found in the will of Christ, and therefore it is not the will of God his Father. If the New Testament does not afford any authority for infant baptism, upon what grounds do pedo-baptists practice and defend it? Mr. Edward Williams (one of its most zealous advocates) affirms: "The champions for it are by no means agreed upon this question,—on what is it founder? Thegrounds are various and contradictory. The Early fathers who practised, urged the virtue of the rite in taking away sin, and securing eternal life; adding the certain ruin of those that neglected it. The church of Rome holds, 'If any shall say that baptism is not necessary to the salvation of infants, let him be accursed.' The Greek, by Cyril, patriarch of constantinople, affirms, 'We believe that baptism is a sacrament appointed by the Lord, which except an infant receive, it has no communion with Christ.' The church of England holds both the ordinances originally as essential to the salvation of infants, the former, agreeing with Calvin and Melancthon own a sort of faith in infants affording them a right to baptism, while the church of England baptizes them because they (the infants) promise by sponsors, repentance and faith, which promise, when they come to age, themselves are bound to perform."

Here is religion by proxy—real, experimental. Did any person hear the like since the world began, that one person could repent for another? Infant baptism has no foundation within the lids of the Bible.

But my opponents want me to prove that it is forbidden in the scriptures. The absence of scriptural authority for it is sufficient proof against it. Hear the denunciation of Jesus against them that add to the prophecy of this book, Rev. 22 : 18. "For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book if any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him plagues that are written in this book. And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things that are written in this book." God have mercy on the false teachers and open their eyes before it is too late.

Our friends want us to show that females have a right to Communion, when there is no command to show that they have any right. "For ye are the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus; for as many of you as have been baptized into Jesus Christ have put on Christ: there is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus." Gal. 3 : 28—28. This is proof of their right to the communion table; and it is implied through the scriptures. But infant baptism has no foundation whatever, either by command, example, precept, or implication. 2 Cor. 6 : 17, 18, "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons, and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." Let us be aware of doing what we are not commanded to do.

We will now notice a few circumstances. Examine 2 Samuel 6th chapter: Uzzah, who was stricken dead for doing what he was not commanded to do. Examine Leviticus 10th chapter: Nadab and Abihu were stricken dead, because they did what they were not commanded to do.—God is jealous of his honor, and will not give it to another.

We will now give some of the grounds of the favorits of infant baptism. Does not the "holiness" referred to, as existing in the children of the believers (Cor. 7 : 14), afford the ground? "for the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the believing wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband; else were your children unclean, but now are they holy." If all holy things are surely proper subjects of baptism, is my answer in reply to this argument; but holiness is not required in God' sword as a prerequisite to baptism. Is there not an absurdity in the thought that baptism, which is the outward sign of washing away sin (Acts 22 : 16), should be administered to infants because they are holy? But what is the holiness intended in the above passage? The apostle says it results from an unbeliever being sanctified. Now this sanctification cannot be spiritual; for that is the work of the Holy Ghost upon the sinners heart, and in which a sinner has no part.—Acts 8 :21. If strict attention be paid to the subject upon which the apostle is speaking, his meaning can be perceived very easily. He is advising the Corinthians upon the question, whether, if a husband or wife who is converted to Christ has an unbelieving partner, either Jew or Idolator, the believer should separate from the connection: as in Ezra 10 : 1—14. The apostle advises; If the unbelieving partner be pleased to dwell with the believer, the believer should not cause the separation. Then follows the passage before us, "for the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife." The original has it, "sanctified to the wife;" Dodridge.

Now in what sense can any thing, or person, be sanctified, in which there is no moral or spiritual holiness communicated, and the sanctification is not the work of the Holy Spirit? The scriptures will give the Answer. The temple, the altars, the offerings, the official garments, under the law, were expressly said to the sanctified, when they were appointed by God's law, and set apart to certain specified purposes. Apply this to the subject before us. Marriage is an appointment of God; and when a man or woman enters into that contract, he or she, by God's Law, is set apart, or sanctified to stand in relation of husband or wife; and hence the union is lawful, becoming, and pleasing to God; and it shall continue to be so, though one of the parties is converted and the other be an unbeliever. Now for the testimony of pedo-baptists. "The children are called holy in a civil sense; that is, legitimate, and not spurious. As Paul had said, "If marriage were unlawful, your children would be illegitimate; the former is not the fact, therefore not the latter. If the holiness which is merely legitimacy of birth, is no title to baptism then this passage we have considered favors not the baptism of infants. From the view of the apostle the children of believers, are not more holy than the children of unbelievers." This undoubtedly is so. Hear the words of inspiration, Psalm 51, "Behold," saith the sun of pious Jesse, "I was shapen in iniquity and in sin did my mother conceive me." Ephesians 6 : 2, says the apostle Paul and all the primitive Christians) "were by the nature the children of wrath, even as others!" The passage above does not prove infant baptism, but is directly opposed to it, and it has no reference to the subject of infant baptism, upon any fair construction.—In all my researches, I cannot find anything to justify the practice, but tradition. Those who practise it have yielded to the unscrupled power of the Pope of Rome.

HENRY KOONTZ.

If we could get a sight of our Father's house, and that great and fair city, the New Jerusalem, which is up above the sun and moon, we would cry to be over the water, and to be carried in Christ's arms out of this borrowed prison.

For the Companion.

Rest.

In Hebrews 4th chapter and 9th verse we find this language: "There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God." From this I have selected the word rest, for the subject of my first remarks to the Companion. Oh, the beauty there is in holding sweet converse with distant friends, and even strangers, through the medium of the pen. I have learned many valuable facts from the columns of the Companion, and mostly from pieces over signatures or names of persons whose faces I have not had the privilege of beholding. I am more than ever being persuaded of the great benefits of the press. May the brethren still continue to record the great facts of the Bible, they are acquainting themselves with, and send them to us in the Companion.

I feel willing to do something to encourage the brethren and sisters generally, to contribute to our papers, to impart instruction to each other, and especially to our bright youths who will soon take our places to carry on the great work of life. But to my subject.

Rest, oh, what a comfort it brings to the weary! Its meaning is generally understood; but in this text the rest is to the people of God, and its enjoyment after life, or at least, its real enjoyment; though rest is very acceptable to the pilgrim on a journey through the wilderness of life. This brings to us the thought, or question, what is life? We must answer in short, it is a little portion of time, given us to prepare for eternity.—Eternity! what is it? Could we hold our minds out in some direction, say towards the south, and still look farther, and farther, there is no end there; and in the north is no end; neither in the east, nor in the west, nor up, nor down: there is no beginning, middle, or end. If we could draw out and hold our minds in such a way, then apply it to duration, we would have some idea of eternity?

Dear reader, let me ask, are you living to gain that rest which remaineth for the people of God, through all the ages of eternity? If you are not, let me implore you with all kindness to go to work at once, and work out the great problem for which life is given. Come, do not now say,—"Time enough yet." You are not so sure that there is time enough yet.—God may call you hence at any moment. Think what is life compared to eternity! Be assured the work must be done, if you are to gain the rest.

How pleasant the student feels when he gets his work done in good time. Why he can get some of the rest even before recitation, and how gladly he meets his teacher at the appointed time. Dear reader, draw the inference. If we get into Christ's school, and do our work well, and in time, we may enjoy much of the rest, comfort, and peace in life. But when we meet our Savior at the great recitation, what are the joys of life compared to those he has in store for his faithful pupils, through the ceaseless ages of eternity!

But the Apostle says it remains "to the people of God." Who are the people of God? We think, those who serve God, learning well and obeying his holy will. Do you ask why this is demanded, or why we should obey the scriptures? Why think what God has done for us! He so loved the world that he sent his only begotten Son to redeem us; and through his Son effected a reconciliation to bring about a rest for his people. We are all God's people by creation; and the atonement Christ made for all by his shed blood; so infants, surely, God claims. But when they cross the line of accountability, or begin to have a sufficient knowledge of right and wrong, so that their evil deeds are imputed to them for sin,—if the temptations of the enemy of souls now overcome them, they become carnally minded, and forsake the narrow road for some more flowery or enticing by-path, as they imagine, and soon, too so on we find them in the army or school of the tempter. O parents, teach your children the beautiful lines of whittier to the barefoot boys.

> "Happy if their feet be found
> Never on forbidden ground;
> Happy if they sink not in > Quick and treacherous sands of sin!"

But sad is the thought that most young folks are traveling Satan's ruinous roads. They are now described in the Bible as being carnally minded, not subject to God, neither indeed can be; and by serving the carnal mind, they become sinners, and not God's people. They are going with the current of the world, love the pride of life, and desire to gratify the carnal mind. The prince of this world is operating hard for the destruction of the Soul; but God who loves that soul and not willing that it should perish, courts it by day and by night with his heavenly drawing. The creature is operated upon by two powers, and therefore does not enjoy the rest that remaineth to the people of God.—Thousands are in this condition, and have no rest for the soul. Now God loves you, sinners, and wants you to have rest. Remember your life and your all is dependent upon God. O how he loves you! and how angels do feel for that careless soul, who is being drifted down the stream of sin to land in the mighty gulf of despair! You can easily save yourself, if you make the effort before it is everlastingly too late. No one can save you but the arms of Jesus. Look to him and live. Sinner do not you want rest for the soul? The justice of God would cut you down but his mercy says "Spare him another year." You have a friend that is above all friends namely Jesus. Are you tired of sin? Methinks you are, and you want rest. Then love Jesus, who holds out his arms of mercy and says, "Come unto me, all you that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me, * * * and you shall find rest to your souls. Now the weary sinner begins to love God; has faith, sees his sinful condition, and is tired of it, and feels sorry for his disobedience; now longs for rest and piece to his troubled soul; surrenders by a true repentence; sees the necessity of a Redeemer; believes not only in God, but also in Christ; begins to study and meditate on the truths of the Bible; learns that Christ established a church or kingdom, and enlists under the peaceable banner of King Immanuel, by the new birth in baptism, as Christ told Nicodemus "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God;" John 3: 3. By thus becoming a citizen of Christ's kingdom and a child of God, and by obeying his laws and commands, we can have a bright hope that "there remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God.

J. S. Studebaker.

Deer Creek, Indiana.

—Waiting upon God continually will abate your unnecessary cares and sweeten your necessary ones.

For the Companion.

Weep not for Me.

When our Lord was to be crucified, we find that a great company of women followed him, lamenting about him. But Jesus said: "Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me; but for yourselves and for your children."

We can understand from this language of our Saviour, that he knew he was ready to be offered, and had the assurance that he was going to heaven, there to enjoy the rich blessings of God that are awaiting all those that live holy and righteous in this present world; therefore he said, "Weep not for me."

But we may infer from this language that those women had need to weep for themselves, and their children, but not for him; because he was ready, and his time was at hand that he should go to glory; but they were yet to live a little longer, and therefore they had to battle with the enemy of souls, and might fall yet before their time should come to be called to meet their God.

We read in holy writ, "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." So, brethren and sisters, I think we have great need to weep sometimes for ourselves, for as long as we are in this world we are not safe; but we know that if we fight the battles of the Lord manfully, and do not desert the captain of our salvation, we have the promise that we shall meet him and see him as he is. But I tell you it takes watching and praying that we are not overcome by the great enemy of souls. But I just remember a passage of scripture that reads thus:—"Blessed are ye that weep now; for ye shall laugh." But the question might arise, where shall they laugh? Why I believe they shall laugh in that world above of which we can read in the scriptures, "Eye has not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered in the heart of man, what the Lord has prepared for them that love him." Yes, brethren and sisters, if we weep here, we shall laugh there.

But we shall not only weep for ourselves, but also for our children. We are living in a time when it takes weeping for our children—at least the tears are often rolling down my cheeks when I am engaged in prayer to God to keep my children from evil, although my children are young yet.—But I think that is the time that we should weep and pray for them; for if we neglect our duty when they are young, we must often see that weeping will do no good; for they must weep too, but their hearts are hardened and they cannot mourn, though Jesus knocks. We often see children weep for their parents after they are dead and gone; but it seems to me if we could hear their voices, they would say, "Weep not for us but weep for yourselves." I know that many of my brethren and sisters, as well as I, have parents that are gone the way of all flesh; and we have great reason to believe that they are now enjoying the rich blessings of God, where all their tears are wiped away from their eyes, and consequently they would say, "Weep not for us, as we are safe at home in our Father's house; but weep for yourselves, for you are yet in the world and have to battle with the enemy.—Weep now, and then when you meet us here in this bright world, you will laugh; for we cannot weep here, the tears are all dried up."

Now in conclusion I will yet say, that I have two little angels in heaven; and I know that many of my brethren and sisters have some there. You all know what it is to part with them, and we have to shed many a bitter tear when we see them taken away from us. But, dear weeping parents, did you ever reflect what they would tell us if they could, when we are weeping for them? I imagine they would say as Jesus did to the women: "Father, mother, don't weep for us, for we are safe in the arms of Jesus; yes, safe at home; but weep for yourself, then you can meet us here where you shall laugh, for we cannot meet you any more, but you can meet us if you prepare while you live."

Then, brethren and sisters, cheer up and dry your tears that you shed for your loved ones that are gone; "but weep for yourselves," and for those that are yet with you; for as long as we are in this world we are not safe; but those that are gone are in the arms of Jesus, and blessed be God that there in a way open that we can meet them again, if we prepare ourselves here in time. But those that are yet with us are not safe. Let us try and raise them for the Lord, and remember the words of our Lord, "Weep not for me, but weep for yourselves and for your children."

NOAH B. BLOUGH,
St. Clairsville, Pa.

Selected by S. W. BOLLINGER.

Pride Vs. Decency.

There is as much difference between pride and decency, as there is between light and darkness, or vice and virtue.

Decency is an exalted virtue, essential to the Christian character.

Pride is a vice of the blackest hue—a soul damning sin. Pride and decency, are about as nearly related to each other as shame and humility.

* * * * * * * *

If we make fine or costly clothes essential to decency, then shall we exclude from heaven the greater part of those to whom Christ preached the gospel; viz., the poor.

"He that is down, need fear no fall;
He that is low, no pride,
He that is humble, ever shall Have God to be his guide."

Deep Preaching.

You sometimes find a man who is denominated a "deep preacher." We heard such an one last Sabbath. We confess we did not understand him, and yet it was not because of his great profundity of thought or immense learning, but because he was metaphysical, abstract, and wrapped up his thoughts in abstruse, high-sounding jargon. The audience inclined, gaped and stared, and pronounced him "deep," and doubtless wondered "how one small head could carry all he knew;" but he reminded me of the sarcastic words of Swift in reference to such preachers in his day. "They are like dry wells; you think they are wondrous deep because they are wondrous dark; whereas, this darkness is because of their emptiness."

Guard against reading too much or too rapidly. Read rather with attention; lay the book often down; impress upon your mind what you have read; and reflect upon it.

Most of the shadows that cross over our path through life, are caused by our standing in our own light.

Christian Family Companion.

DALE CITY, PA., Nov. 14, 1871

"Do Not Stop The Publication of the Pious Youth, is the Feeling Here."

So says one of our active agents.—Very well, "it is the feeling here," too; and we think it is the general feeling wherever the PIOUS YOUTH has been read. We know of some places where this feeling has grown so strong that we are assured they will double, treble, and even quadruple their last year's subscription before it shall stop. This, we think, is an excellent way to test our feelings. In this way we can tell just how strong and sincere our feelings are. Feeling, like faith, is dead without works. Try how much they feel, by presenting a subscription paper for their names. If they feel at all they will subscribe for themselves; if they feel a warm interest in sustaining it, they will subscribe for themselves and a few of their poor neighbors; and if they feel a determination that it shall not go down, they will say put me down for twenty-five copies!

Reader, how do you feel?

For the Pious Youth.

We presume the method of getting up the list of subscribers to the PIOUS YOUTH for next year, is pretty generally understood; tautology may not be amiss. We have thought it advisable not to continue the regular monthly publication of the YOUTH longer than to the close of the present volume, unless we could increase our circulation to about fifteen hundred subscribers. In order to avoid confusion in case we should fail to secure the desired number, we prefer to receive no money until it is decided to continue the paper. Agents will therefore solicit names only for the present, preserving the lists and sending us the number of actual subscribers obtained

We hope the friends of the YOUTH everywhere are busily engaged getting up long lists of names. Now, at least is the time to do it. There are many papers published, and each one has its friends. If your neighbors are induced to subscribe for another before you present your claims, they will likely refuse you, while if you come first you will be just as likely to to succeed Every family will have some juvenile paper, and they may as well have a good one, and hundreds would thank you for introducing our paper to their homes. Try it, and try it now.

If you have no outfit, drop us a note and we will send specimens, blank lists and envelopes, free.

Agents Wanted.

We wish to secure an agent in every neighborhood to introduce our papers, and sell our books. And we do not expect them to work for nothing. We allow ten per cent on all full subscriptions. Those of our friends who are engaged in business can make it pay to introduce our papers. Ten to fifteen subscribers can be obtained at almost any business stand, mill, store, blacksmith, shoemaker, or any other kind of a shop where people go to for trade or work, and thus several dollars may be made without any investment or loss of time. Of course we do not offer it as a great money making business, but wish to show that it can be made to pay. Besides, the consciousness of having done a good work to your neighbors, is worth much. All percentage paid in cash, or books at list prices, if preferred. Send for an outfit and try us.

A liberal percentage allowed on the books we keep for sale (except the Hymn Books) when ordered by the lot, for cash.

Wanted.

A brother who is a good Tailor, to move to Dale City and open a shop. To a good mechanic employment will be guaranteed.

Not Willingly.

We may have, indeed it is almost certain that we did, in sending out our prospectus, last week, fail to supply some of our special friends and agents. But we assure them it was not willingly or purposely done, for we could not afford to do so. Therefore, we ask all who may have been missed to inform us of the oversight, and we will forward immediately, and make restitution of the extra expenses. We want, and we need the assistance of every one.

How to Send Money.

As our postoffice is not a money order office, we shall not have the same facilities for receiving money in that way. We recommend, therefore, that where it is at all convenient, our friends obtain bank checks or city drafts. This method we prefer. Where this is not convenient, obtain money orders on Somerset, Pa. The next safest way of sending money is by registered letter. Care should be taken in putting up letters containing money, that they be carefully sealed, and properly and plainly addressed.

Newspaper Extract.

The following is from our contemporary of the TYRONE BLADE, edited by Mr. J. L. Holmes, a Baptist minister. Hope what he says may be true, and in anything else we would not think of questioning his word:

LEFT TOWN.—H. R. Holsinger, the gentlemanly editor of the COMPANION and PIOUS YOUTH, left us, on Thursday of last week, with all his fixings. His head quarters for the future will be Dale City, Somerset county, Pa.

Mr. Holsinger has been a resident of this place for some years, and leaves, carrying with him the good wishes and respect of all who had formed his acquaintance, and that which is better still, the character of an honest man, which Pope says, "is the noblest work of God."

Mr. Holsinger, when locating in our midst, started the Tyrone Herald, which afterwards was supplanted by the paper which he is now successfully conducting, and, although two offices have originated in our midst since, he never manifested that low, jealous, envious spirit which so frequently characterizes men in the same business, but always rejoiced in the success of his neighbors.

May he meet with abundant success in his new field, and have plenty of stamps for his hire.

The Great Drouth.

From all parts of the country we hear remarks of the great drouth. The country is almost perishing for rain. From prairies and forests, mountains, cities and towns, the flames of destruction are ascending until the heart sickens with the tales of the losses and sufferings of our fellow beings, and one is almost led to believe that the Almighty is preparing the world for its final consummation. The history of the world knows no such a record of fires as that which the present year has written. The burning of Chicago alone was the greatest fire the world ever knew, and it is estimated that the prairie fires of the west were even more destructive in their extent.

A Good Music Book.

We have secured a general agency for the HARMONIA SACRA, published by Joseph Funks' Sons, of Singer's Glen, Va. It is published in Patent Note Characters, and is considered a good music book for church singing societies. We can sell the book at publishers lowest price, wholesale and retail, viz: single copy, post-paid, $1.25; by express, $11 per dozen; by mail, post-paid, $13,50. We have a supply on hand and can send at shortest notice.

During our visit to Maryland brother Worst preached his last sermon hear during his present visit to the east, and so we did not hear him; but we did enjoy the pleasure of a social conversation, in which we found him agreeable and interesting. On the tobacco question we agree nearly, in theory, but differ slightly in practice, though not enough to alienate us. Hope the Lord will prosper him on his homeward journey and through life.

THE MANUFACTURER AND BUILDER.—The unprecedented success of this excellent industrial monthly is rapidly placing it at the head of the periodicals of its class. The November number, which has just been received, is filled with useful and valuable articles, illustrated with a lavish profusion of finely-executed engravings.—Our readers who are not familiar with this journal would do well to examine it, not only for its merits as a literary production, but as an invaluable advertising medium for all interested in scientific or industrial pursuits. Reaching, as it does, some 150,000 readers, it needs no better recommendation as a means of disseminating information. In the issue before us, we notice articles on "Home and Mesmer," "Improvement on the Sunbeam," "Mother of Pearl and Pearl-inlaying," "Revelations concerning the Management of the American Institute Fair," "Free Institutions of Learning," "Progress in Meteorological Science," and many others. Published by Western and Co., 37 Park Row, New-York. $2 per year.

THE WESTERN RURAL.—Our contemporary in the rural interests, being located in the thickly populated parts of Chicago, became a prey to the flames, and lost all his material, books and furniture, except his subscription books. But, nothing daunted, like a brave man, as he is, he promised that the Western Rural and Young Folks Rural will be forthcoming, within one month. The Rural is a good paper of its class, and we wish it abundant success, and advise our farming patrose to subscribe for it, and thus get a good paper, and do a good work for a worthy man. Price $2 for the Western Rural, and $1 for the Young Folk's Rural. Address, H. N. F. LEWIS, Chicago, Ills

Job Printing.

We are adding facilities to our office for doing Job Printing, and can accommodate our friends with anything in that line, from a business card to a large poster. All our work will be warranted to be equal in style of execution to any other, and will be done at reasonable prices. Orders by mail promptly attended to, and sent postage prepaid. Give us a trial.

Missing Numbers.

As there is complaint from the West of a few of the late numbers of the Companion not coming to hand, we here say for all that it is quite probable that many of our western readers lost their papers through the Chicago conflagration. We had issued several numbers in close succession about that time, and fear that some were burnt, while others through disarrangement of the mails will fail to make their destination. And we are sorry again that we cannot supply missing numbers.

J. W. B.

The Almanac

Is progressing slowly, and will be ready in a week or ten days. Orders should not be delayed too long, or all may not be supplied. Unless one thousand more copies are ordered before we go to press, we shall not print more than five thousand copies. We have good reasons for believing that the present issue of the Almanac will give even better satisfaction than last year's.

GEO. P. ROWELL & Co., Advertising Agents, No. 41 Park Row, New York, receive advertisements for all American newspapers at publishers' lowest prices.

WOOD'S HOUSEHOLD MAGAZINE.—The doors of this "Household" are thrown wide open, and all are invited to enter in. As some are doubtless strangers within the gate permit us to introduce to you the "Minister's Housekeeper," the temporary hostess. She is of high birth, being one of Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stow's children of the brain. James Parton has much to say about the "Wife of Washington." He converses with such a noted manner that we think Mrs. Parton will forgive him. "The Children's Portion" is contributed by Kate Hamilton, and she has such a winning way, that we unhesitatingly pronounce her a Prize. Address S. S. Wood & Co., Newburg, N. Y., who will mail three numbers of the magazine, free, including November.

How to Break Down a Church.

To do this effectually you must

I. Discourage the Minister.

II. Discourage your fellow-members.

III. Destroy the confidence of the community.

I. To discourage the Minister:

1. Absent yourself from one service every Sabbath, or miss at least one in three; if he is not very strong, once in four times may answer. If your occasional or more frequent absence should produce no noticeable effect, you can change your course,—attend regularly, but be inattentive, or, frequently, if not invariably, get up and leave the room during service. This will seldom fail.

2. Neglect prayer-meetings.

3. Criticise your minister freely—praise him sparingly—find fault plentifully—pray for him little or none.

4. If he proposes to hold extra meetings, let him conduct them without your co-operation.

5. Give yourself no concern whether he is supported or not.

6. Never call on him socially, or allow him to think that his comfort, or that of his family, is a matter of any importance in your eyes.

7. Take occasion frequently to praise other ministers, and at the same time show that you do not appreciate his services. If a stranger preaches for you, you can take the pains of saying, in the presence of your minister, or so that he will be certain to hear it, "If we could have such preaching all the time, it would certainly do a great deal of good." This operates like a charm.

II. To discourage your fellow-members:

1. Observe the directions given above.

2. Complain about everything they do and don't do.

3. Contrive to make yourself the head of a clique, and by their assistance and your own industry keep the church in hot water generally.

4. While doing this, lose no opportunity to complain of the bad treatment you are receiving.

5. Be as much like Diotrephes and as little like Paul as you can.

6. Discard charity and candor, take distrust to your bosom, and make scheming your specialty.

III. To destroy the confidence of the community:

1. Observe the foregoing directions.

2. Tell the people that you are in the Church by force of circumstances, but have no respect for the way in which business is conducted.

3. Publish the faults of your brethren, taking care to magnify them.

4. Make no effort to induce people to attend the Church.

5. Take no part in the labors of the Sunday-school.

6. Publish it on all occasions that you have no confidence in the concern—predict that it must fall—go down—blow up—and never can succeed.

By observing these directions faithfully you may have the satisfaction, if the Church is not unusually vigorous, of witnessing the fulfillment of your predictions.

To the foregoing, compiled from the Irish Evangelist, we subjoin the following:

HOW TO BUILD A CHURCH UP.

To do this thoroughly you must

I. Encourage the Minister.

II. Encourage your fellow-members.

III. Gain and retain the confidence of the community.

I. To encourage the minister:—

1. Be regular in your attendance upon public preaching. Never be absent upon such occasions, unless when duty requires your presence elsewhere. When present, be attentive.

2. Be punctual in attending prayer, or social meetings; also, church councils. And when present on such occasions, make it a point to be faithful, active in the discharge of your religious duties.

3, Criticise your minister sparingly—praise him freely—find fault with him never—pray for him continually.

4. If the minister thinks it prudent or necessary to hold extra meetings, lend your presence and hearty co-operation.

5. Call on him socially, that he may see that his comfort and the comfort of his family is a matter of concern with you. Whenever he needs support, give it if you can; if you cannot, show at least that you feel interested in his welfare.

II. To encourage your fellow members.

1. Observe the directions already given for the encouragement of the minister.

2. Do not harass them with complaints about their shortcomings or misdoings; but if it is necessary to converse with them about these things, do it in a meek, loving way, so as to convince them that it is for their benefit.

3. Strive to preserve union, harmony, and peace.

4. Show that you love your fellow-members—that you are willing to minister to their wants—that you are anxious to render them every help you can, temporally and spiritally.

III. To gain and retain the confidence of the community:—

1. Observe the above instructions.

2. Let your walk and conversation show to your friends and neighbors that you are a willing, living, active member of the body of Christ—that you feel deeply interested in the cause you have espoused.

3. Never blaze abroad the faults of your brethren. Remember that "charity covers a multitude of sins."

4. Put forth all laudable efforts to induce others to attend public worship.

4. Manifest an interest in the welfare of the young. Labor for them in the Sunday-school. Throw into their hands good, wholesome reading matter. In all you do be in earnest, and do it for the glory of God, the spread of truth, and the good of souls.

If you follow these directions, you will assist in building the Church up, and finally will receive the reward of the faithful—the crown of life.

J. W. B.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Baptism for the Remission of sins

Dear Brother Henry :—Is baptism administered, not for the remission of sins and the reception of the Holy Spirit, evengelic and apostolic? and if not, can it be valid, any more than sprinkling, or pouring, or single immersion backwards? The River Brethren will not baptize any, except they can say that they have received the remission of sin and the Holy Ghost before Baptism. Now if we receive any of them into our church without rebaptizing them, we sanction the principal difference between us and them; and if we justify the difference, why not commune with them? Brethren, let us watch as well as pray. Baptism not administered for the remission of sins and the reception of the Holy Ghost, is contrary to the gospel. It is true that a certain thief on the cross was saved without Baptism, and certain Gentiles received the Holy Ghost before baptism. But the thief was not among them that would not be baptized, but one that could not, therefote one may be saved and the other lost. Wilful disobedience has no title to heaven. We know that Peter would not have baptized Cornelius into the Christian faith if he had not seen the Holy Spirit on him. Cornelius and the thief are exceptions. The appropriate way of salvation or pardon is, first repentence toward God: second faith in Christ; third baptism for the remission of sins. John preached "the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins," saying to his disciples," I indeed have baptized you with water; but he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost." Here we have the promises of the remission of sins, and the Holy Ghost after water baptism. Again brother Saul "arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins." But where do we read—where is the text that says, that men must experience the pardon of sin and the gift of the Holy Ghost before baptism? Some congregations have got into trouble. Will the brethren help them? Should not all those who go out of their own house and desire to go into the Lord's house, come in at the door of the house by baptism for the remission of sins, as well as we?

Dear brethren, help us to decide this question according to the gospel.

Those that by faith and repentence have made a covenant with Christ in baptism for the remission of sins, can renew their covenant again by faith or repentence for the remission of sin, without rebaptism of water; but those that are not baptized for the remission of sin, have not the same faith, and Paul says there is "one faith, one baptism. Let us be of one mind. Man "must be born of the water and of the Spirit," in order to have "the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Ghost.—"Born of water," and "the washing of regeneration," means baptism; and the water, one of the three witnesses on earth, connected with the blood and the Spirit, also means baptism, according to my humble judgment. But those ideas are denied by some who profess to have received the pardon of sins before baptism.—Brethren help us to get out of this dilemma.

DANIEL LONGENECKER.

HENRY R. HOLSINGER,

Respected Friend :—While looking over the Companion, I thought, how I would like to hear a sermon from Enoch Eby to-day. I have not heard one of the German Baptists preach since I left Illinios; and I long to hear one again. I hope the time will come that they will be in this part of Kansas. I have not been at meeting this summer, and it seems very long. I never was so long without going to meeting since I can remember. This beautiful day, how I long to go to a "Dunkard" meeting again. I love to read the Companion, and I hear of people that I knew years ago. They come fresh to my memory, and I should like to meet them again in this world; but if we never meet here on the earth, I hope to see them in the better world, where parting is no more.

SUSAN ROBERTS.

Oak Hill, Clay co., Kan.

Dear Brother :—I have now returned home from a visit to our dear brother, Adam Hollinger, who is very ill at present. His disease is, Tumor in his right side.—

His suffering is intense by times, but he bears it very patiently. It is not his desire that God would lessen one stroke of the rod; but his prayer is for grace to sustain him in his sufferings; and he asks an interest in the prayers of the church. When we sit at the bed of a sick saint, how strikingly we can see the advantage of true religion! especially if they have walked worthy of the vocation wherewith they were called. True religion, not only arms us with fortitude against the approach of evil, but when the rod of affliction and suffering is laid upon us, it lightens the stroke by many consolations to which others are strangers: we can look upon it as a gentle chastisement of a merciful God. We hope our brother will hold out faithful until his sufferings are ended, either in death or health; and if it should be the will of him who knows all things best to restore him to health again, may he go forth with boldness and redoubled energy to declare the counsel of God to a sin-stained world, and be successful in bringing many precious souls to see the advantage of true Christianity. But if it should please God to relieve him of all the troubles and trials of this world, and receive him home into the mansions of glory, his wife, and three of his children who have passed the line of accountability can take comfort and consolation that he has left them a good example, which we hope they may not delay in following.

MARGARET DEARDORF.

York Springs, Pa.

H. R. Holsinger :—Allow me to give your readers a few items of Church news, in Spring Run congregation Mifflin co., Pa.

On Friday, October 13th, we met to hold a Lovefeast, quite a goodly number of brethren, sisters, and friends, from this and adjoining branches, being present. In the afternoon the brethren handled the word of God with power and effect.

During the first intermission a choice for speaker was held, and it fell upon our Deacon brother George H. Swigart, to aid in publicly declaring the "Glad tidings of good news," and to exhort and rebuke with all long suffering, both in season and out of season.

During the second intermission a young female, a cousin to the writer, was added to the number of Christian believers through the bapismal rite.

The order during the evening exercises was good. The meeting was continued on Saturday forenoon and evening and on Sunday forenoon. On Saturday evening and Sunday there was preaching in school-houses.

The strange brethren who spoke were Daniel Keller, Jesse P. Hetrick, Peter Hollowbush and others.

SOLOMON W. BOLLINGER.

McVeytown, Pa.

Report from Stephen Hildebrand

Brother Holsinger:—By your permission I will give your readers a short account of a trip I made to Bedford county, Pa.

I left home on the morning of the 14th of October for the Dunning's Creek branch of the Church. Arrived at brother Joseph Holsinger's same evening. After supper and a short rest, we started for the place of meeting, which was at the Brethren's new meeting-house, near brother John S. Holsinger's. Here we met quite a number of brethren, sisters and friends; yet we were to some extent disappointed; first, from the fact that brother John S. Holsinger had not yet returned home from Iowa, and in the second place, we were disappointed in not meeting brother Samuel A. Moore, of Yellow Creek branch.—Notwithstanding these disappointments, we tried to lay the foundation for a series of meetings, taking for our text the 46th and 47th verses of the 24th chapter of Luke.

Next morning at 10 o'clock there were two appointments; one at the big meeting-house, the other at a school-house, a few miles away. At two P. M. we met jointly in the Lutheran meeting house in Pleasantville. There our hearts were made glad by meeting brother Moore. In the evening two meetings, one at Pleasantville, the other at the big meeting-house.

Monday evening, two meetings, one at the big meeting-house, the other at New Paris.

Tuesday 10 A. M., council meeting. In the evening meetings at the big meeting-house and at Pleasantville.

Wednesday evening at the big meeting-house and at Rock Lick school-house. This evening brethren Leonard Furry and Daniel Snowberger, of Yellow Creek, and Samuel Leidy, of Manor, Indiana county, came to our assistance.

Thursday morning brother Moore started for home. In the evening meeting at the big meeting-house and at New Paris.

Friday evening met jointly at the big meet-house. Here we were glad to see brother John S. Holsinger in his seat as usual.

Saturday at 2 P. M., met at brother John's for the purpose of attending to the ordinance of baptism. At 4 P. M. met at the big meeting-house for communion. There we met old bro. Jacob Blough, of Berlin branch, Emanuel J. Blough, of Quemahoning, and Hiram Musselman, of Shade, all of Somerset county, Pa. The communion season passed off very pleasantly indeed; although the house was crowded, yet we had the very best of order.

Sunday morning met to administer baptism again. At 10 A. M, met for public worship. In the evening met in the United Brethren's meeting-house, at Oak Shade.

Monday morning, at 10 A. M. met at the big meeting-house. This was our farewell meeting in the neighborhood; many tears were seen, which makes me hope we will meet again.—In the evening met for worship in a school-house at St. Clairsville. Thus ended our series of meetings in the Dunning's Creek church, Bedford county, a time long to be remembered. During these meetings sinners were to be seen coming out from among the world and enlisting as soldiers of Jesus, for which God be praised.

On Tuesday morning crossed the Cove mountain to Yellow Creek branch. At 4 P. M. met at the big meeting-house near brother Daniel Snowberger's, where the communion was to be held. Here we met quite a number of ministers, and as we cannot name all, we came to the conclusion to name none. Had a good meeting. We suppose that from three to four hundred members communed. Meeting next day at 9 A. M. During this meeting several persons were baptized. This afternoon recrossed the Cove Mountain, and put up at brother John S. Holsinger's for the night. Next morning resumed our journey for home; arrived safely at 3 P. M., after being absent from home about twelve days. Found our family well, for which we felt thankful to God. We then took a seat by the side of our companion to hear the news of the neighborhood. First we were surprised to hear that while we were away two of our near neighbors were suddenly summoned to cross over the narrow stream of death, another evidence that death is no respector of persons. Secondly we were informed that one or two more of our neighbors were hardly expected to live; and farther that during our absence several persons were taken into the church by baptism, and that others had become alarmed at their condition; and since that time, by the consent of the church, they also were added to the church by baptism and by being restored. But we remember just now that in the outset of these lines we said, a short account. Lengthy, as this account may seem, it is short when compared with what we observed during the time above named. STEPHEN HILDEBRAND.

Questions on Feet-Washing.

1. Where does the example, spoken of in the 13th chapter of John, 15th verse, begin?

2. Does the expression in the 14th verse,—"Ye also ought to wash one another's feet," make it binding on a single individual to do as Christ had done?

3. If so, how many should one wash and wipe to fill the example in 15th verse? JOSEPH HOLDER, Hagerstown, Md.

For Information.

In Deuteronomy, 14th chapter, 21st verse, we read: "Ye shall not eat of anything that dieth of itself; thou shalt give it unto the stranger that is in thy gates, that he may eat it; or thou mayest sell it unto an alien." The German reads: "Ihr sollt keins Aas essen. Dem Fremdling in deinem Thor magst du es geben, dass er es esse, oder verkaufe es einem Fremden." Now I ask for no opinion on the above text, but for the original. Any brother, or sister, who understands the original, and will give it through the COMPANION will oblige.

A. COST.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with Obituary Notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

Erratum.

In the first obituary notice on page 659, instead of "Samuel Boyer" read Samuel Boger.

In Spring Run congregation, Mifflin Co., Pa., October 18th, WILLIAM HOWARD, infant son of brother Henry W., and sister Harriet HANAWALT, aged three month, and 19 days. Funeral discourse by brother Samuel J. Swigart.

In the same congregation October 4th brother WILLIAM KYSER, in 71st year of his age. He not only expressed a willingness, long ago, to die, but even desired to depart and be at peace. He was afflicted all summer, and the doctor said he could not live long; but he was in bed only a few days when he got up and took an over-dose of "Cure Oil," which threw him into spasms, and this hastened his death. Funeral services by the brethren.

SOLOMON BOLLINGER.

In the Nettle Creek Church September the 6th, our much respected Bro. DANIEL SMITH, age some over 37 years. Bro. Smith was one of those zealous, energetic ministers who by hard study, and continual search had, by the grace of God, been made able to defend the doctrines of the church and contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. The church has lost an able minister, the wife a loving husband, the community a good physician, but we hope it is his gain. Funeral services by Eld's Daniel and Jacob Bowman, from the words "I have fought a good fight" to a very large congregation.

JOSEPH HOLDER.

Sept. 2nd, of Typhoid fever, sister MARY FORNEY, wife of Elder Peter Forney, of Benton Co., Iowa, aged 42 years and 9 days. She leaves a sorrowing husband, a large family of children, and a large circle of friends, to mourn her departure. On Monday the 4th her remains were taken to the Brethren's burying ground, followed by a large concourse of faiends and neighbors. The occasion was improved by the Brethren. Sister Forney was an exemplary sister. She was beloved by all, had no enemy in the world. We truly sympathize with our beloved, bereaved brother. His loss is irreparable.—May the Lord "who gave and who taketh away," sustain him in his sad bereavement.

Visitor please copy.

Elias K. Beechley.

LIST OF MONEYS RECEIVED for SUBSCRIPTION, BOOKS, etc.

Alex. Walker,	$1 50	John Hocking,	1 50
S. W. Bollinger,	7 10	Wm. Pannebaker	75
C. Hinkel,	1 50	H. Longanecker,	2 00
John Hertzler,	75	J. A. Miller,	1 00
A. H. Huber,	1 00

Pittsburg and Connellsville R. R.

TIME TABLE.

Commencing on Monday, October 16th, 1871, at 2 o'clock, P. M.

EASTWARD.			WESTWARD.
Cum Mail	Balt Exp.	STATIONS.	Cin. Exp.	Cum Mail
A. M	P. M.		A. M.	P. M
6 50	8 00	Pittsburg	10 15	6 10
10 21	9 57	Bradford	8 05	2 30
10 35	10 10	Connellsville	8 00	2 25
1 20	11 55	Mineral Point	5 53	11 22
1 40	12 15	Garret	5 38	11 02
157	1228	DALE CITY	526	1045
3 16	1 28	Bridgeport	4 15	9 25
4 00	2 00	Cumberland	3 40	8 40
P. M.	A. M.		P. M.	A. M.

Advertisements.

WE will admit a limited number of select advertisements at the following rates

One insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.

No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations.

DR. U. M. BEACHLEY'S

FAMILY MEDICAL DEPOT.

OFFICE AND DRUG STORE,

ON MAIN Street,

DALE CITY, Somerset Co., Pa.

To Advertisers.—All persons who contemplate making contracts with newspapers for the insertion of Advertisements should send to

GEORGE P. ROWELL & CO.

for a Circular, or enclose 50 cents for their One Hundred Page Pamphlet, containing Lists of 3,000 Newspapers and estimates, showing the cost of advertising, also many useful hints to advertisers, and some account of the experiences of men who are known as Successful Advertisers. This firm are proprietors of the American Newspaper Advertising Agency, and are possessed of unequaled facilities for securing the insertion of advertisements in all Newspapers and Periodicals at lowest rates.

41 PARK ROW, N. Y.

7—45—50.

BURNED OUT.

I would respectfully inform the trade that my Laboratory at 30 North Dearborn street was destroyed by the great fire. Even the contents of my iron safe which still is buried in the smouldering ruins, are doubtless lost, which under ordinary circumstances might have been saved by water. I am now located at No. 690 West-Indiana-St. Orders for Dr. Fahrney's BLOOD CLEANSER OR PANACEA can be filled in a very few days, having ordered an outfit by telegraph from Dr. P. FAHRNEY'S BROS. & CO., Waynesboro' Pa. All those knowing themselves indebted to me will please remit as soon as possible.

Respectfully,

P. FAHRNEY, M. D.,
No. 690 West Indiana St.

45—3 ins.

A Card.

Drs. D. Fahrney & Son, Uroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.

7-10-1 yr. pd.

Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 85 cents. $8.00 per dozen.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER.

DALE CITY, PA.

FOUR MONTHS FOR 50 CTS.

GREAT SUCCESS

AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKER,

An Evangelical Undenominational Monthly, for PARENTS, TEACHERS and SCHOLARS. With Sunday School Lessons, Exposition, Illustrations, Questions Blackboard Exercises, &c., for each Sabbath.

This publication is designed to develop a greater depth and spirituality in the Sunday School work, looking beyond methods to results.

Terms for 1872—$1,50 a year in Advance. CLUBS of TEN or more (to one address) will receive 6 Lesson Papers, free with each Magazine monthly. SCHOLLARS LESSON PAPER, monthly, with Lessons for every Sabbath, 13 cts. a year; or per hundred $9 a year. Send 10 cents for Specimen copy, Lesson Paper, and your own List of Lessons for 1873, to

J. W. McINTYRE, ST., LOUIS, Mo.

BOUND COPIES for 1870 and 1871, $2 each, postpaid. Lesson Papers on Gospel of Matthew for 1870, and on Gospel of John for 1871, same price as 1872.

Oct. 15th, Nov. 14 15.

TYRONE BANK,
TYRONE, PA.

This Bank, intending to do a general banking business, solicits accounts from Banks' Bankers and others. Collections made on all points. Interest allowed on DEPOSITS left on time. Paper discounted on liberal terms.

Wm. P. Orbison,	D. P. Gwin,
John Scott,	H. G. Fisher,
Thomas Fisher,	J. H. Glazier,
Wm. Dorris,	G. C. Wilkins,
G W. Garretson,	and others.

BURLINGTON.

Leaving the East and arriving at Chicago or Indianapolis, how shall we reach the West? The best Line is acknowledged to be the C. B. and Q., joined together with the B. & M. Railroad by the Iron Bridge at Burlington, and called the Burlington Route.

The main line of the Route running to Omaha, connects with the great Pacific Roads, and forms to-day the leading route to California. The Middle Branch, entering Nebraska at Plattsmouth, passes through Lincoln, the State Capital, and will this year be finished to Fort Kearney, forming the shortest route across the Continent by over 100 miles.

Another branch of the B. M., diverging at Red Oak, falls into a line running down the Missouri through St. Joe to Kansas City, and all Kansas. Passengers by this route to Kansas, see Illinois, Southern Iowa, and Missouri, and, by a slight divergence, can see Nebraska also.

Lovers of fine views should remember the Burlington Route for its towns "high-gambrel'd from afar"—its tree fringed streams—its rough bluffs and quarries—its cornfields stretching over the prairies further than eye can reach.

Land-buyers will be sure to remember it, for they have friends among the two thousand who have already bought farms from Geo. S. Harris, the Land Commissioner of the B. & M. R. R. at Burlington, Iowa, or among the four thousand home-steaders and pre-emptors who last year filed claims in the Lincoln Land Office, where "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm."

1780 1871

ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK?

Use Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

An Alterative and Cathartic, or Tonic and Purge combined, for diseases arising from bad blood; such as Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Erysipelas, Worms, Chills and Fever, Scrofula, Pimples, Tetter, &c. TRY IT.

Established 1780 in package form. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form which was brought to its present state of preservation and perfection some years later, by Dr. P. Fahrney, Chicago, Ill's, who conducts the trade west of Ohio. Great reputation! Many Testimonials! Ask for that prepared at Waynesboro, Pa., and Chicago, Ill's. Beware of imitations. Genuine retails at $1.25 per bottle. Druggists and Medicine dealers sell it.

Dr. P. Fahrney's "Health Messenger" gives the history and uses of the BLOOD CLEANSER testimonials, and other information, sent free of charge. Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.
WAYNESBORO, PA.

Wm. M. Lloyd, Altoona, Pa. D. T. Caldwell, Tyrone Pa.

LLOYD, CALDWELL & CO.,

BANKERS,

Receive monies on deposit, and pay interest if left 6 months, at 4 per cent per annum, or 5 per cent. if left one year.

Special contracts made with parties acting as administrators, executors, guardians, and persons holding monies in trust. Dealers in every description of Stocks and Bonds.—Government Securities made a speciality.

Gold and Silver bought and sold, and a general Banking business transacted.

Universal Guide for Cutting Garments.

By which every family may cut its own garments for men and boys, of twenty six different sizes; for Coats, Pants, Vests, and Shirts, and Ladies' Dress Bodies. Agents wanted to sell State, County, and Family Rights. For Particulars address MILLER & QUINN, Tyrone, Blair Co., Pa.

J. S. THOMAS, & CO.

WHOLESALE GROCERS

and

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

No 805 RACE ST. ABOVE 3RD, PHILADELPHIA,

N. B. Country Produce taken in exchange for goods or sold on commission.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine, with Drop Feed, new Take-up, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted FIRST CLASS, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted traveling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $200 per month. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. Co.
33 East Union Square, 17th St., N. York

For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with Interlinear Word-for-word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price, $4.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol., $2.25. Indispensable.

Life at Home; or the Family and its MEMBERS.—Including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed. The Altar in the House, etc. By Wm. Aikman. $1.50;

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. THOMPSON. Fancy Cloth. $1.00.

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand-book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners, with a Chart for recording the sizes of the different Organs of the Brain, in the Delineation of Character, with upwards of 170 Engravings. Muslin. $1.25.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50;

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By W. PITTINGER. $1.50

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Beautifully Illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth, gilt, beveled boards. Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75 cents.

Any of the above sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

Phrenological Journal, An Illus- TRED. First-Class Family Magazine, devoted to "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00; By a special arrangement we are enabled to the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50, or with the Pious Youth, for $3.00. We commend the Journal to all who want a good Family Magazine, and who does not?

All orders should be accompanied with the money, and the name of person, postoffice, county, and state written in unmistakable letters.

DALE CITY, PA.

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post pain,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	10.30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post pain,	.50
Per dozen, " "	5.50

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.7
Reserved at the office,	2.25
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express,	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	60
German & English Testaments,	.75

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25

32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION. 25

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Certificates &c.

MarriageCertificate, per doz., post paid, 0.30,
CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP. Per doz, 0.20
TRACTS.—RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE, 12 pages five cents single copy; thirty cents a doz.

All orders should be accompanied with the money, and the name of person, postoffice, county & state written in unmistakable letters.

THE PIOUS YOUTH.

A MONTHLY PUBLICATION

Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.

One dollar a year in advance.

THE

Christian Family Companion

Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements; that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
DALE CITY Somerset Co., PA

Christian Family Companion

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Ann m

VOLUME VII. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, NOV. 21, 1871. NUMBER 46.

Selected by KATE BRENIZER.

The Fullness of Jesus.

I LAY my sins on Jesus,	Lev. 15 : 21.
The spotless Lamb of God;	Heb. 9 : 14.
He bears them all, and frees us	Heb. 9 : 28.
From the accursed load;	Gal. 3 : 13.
I bring my guilt to Jesus,	Acts 13 : 38, 39.
To wash my crimson stains	Rev. 7 : 14.
White in his blood most precious,	1 Pet. 1 : 19.
Till not a spot remains.	Eph. 5 : 27.
I lay my wants on Jesus,	1 Pet. 5 : 7.
All fullness dwells in him;	Col. 1 : 19.
He healeth my diseases,	Psa. 103 : 3
He doth my soul redeem;	Gal. 4 : 4, 5.
I lay my griefs on Jesus,	Psa. 55 : 22.
My burdens and my cares;	1 Pet. 5 : 7.
He from them all releases,	Isa. 63 : 9.
He all my sorrows shares.	Heb. 4 : 15, 16.
I rest my soul on Jesus,	Psa. 116 : 7, 8.
This weary soul of mine;	Matt. 11 : 28.
His right hand me embraceth,	Cant. 2 : 6.
I on his breast recline;	John 13 ; 23.
I love the name of Jesus—	1 John 4 : 19.
Immanuel, Christ the Lord;	Matt. 1 : 23.
Like fragrance on the breezes,	Cant. 1 : 3.
His name is spread abroad.	Phil. 2 : 9.
I long to be like Jesus—	1 John 3 : 2.
Meek, loving, lowly, mild;	Matt. 11 : 29.
I long to be like Jesus—	1 Pet. 2 : 21.
The Father's holy child;	Acts 4 : 27.
I long to be with Jesus,	Phil. 1 : 23.
Amid the heavenly throng,	Rev. 7 : 9.
To sing with saints his praises	Rev. 5 : 13.
To learn the angels' song.	Rev. 14 : 3.

For the Companion.

Response to "A Love-Letter."

Brother C. H. Balsbaugh:—Although your condition in this life is distressing, and your suffering intense, yet in the midst of all your afflictions you enjoy the climes of a higher and holier world than this; while your body is weak, the powers of your soul become stronger, and your hope is cast within the vail. Cling to this, dear brother. God sees you, and he heard you from the beginning, as he did Daniel; though he prayed twenty and one days, yet every groan and every sigh was kept in remembrance. God knows his own time best, and will come at such an hour as we think not.

With your "love-letter" before me, I notice that some weighty thoughts have been passing through your mind: "Do the saints remember me, do they bear my name on the incense of prayer to him who sitteth between the cherubims above the mercy-seat"? Whether there be few or many that hold you up before God on the arms of prayer, I cannot tell; but this one thing I can tell, that my sympathy and prayers have been sent up to the hill of the Lord for you without number; and this night I fall before our Father who is in heaven, and beseech him to look with tender compassion on you, and give you grace and strength for your trials, and fit and prepare you for his own purpose.

Perhaps I had better stop right here, because you know more than I can tell you; but as your words of encouragement fell upon my soul like the oil that was poured on Aaron's head, I thought to encourage you with the knowledge, that, at least one remembers you before "him who sits upon the mercy-seat between the cherubims.

Yours in the hope of eternal life,

ANDREW COST.

DO GOOD with your money. Don't say you will wait until you get a great deal of it. The man who does that makes a bargain with the devil; and the devil outwits him. Where men are going to use their money for good when they get through with it, the Lord is apt to get through with them before they think of getting through with their money.

Beware of impatience or contradiction. Do not condemn or think hardly of those who cannot see just as you see, or judge it their duty to contradict you.

WINTER, in her pure white robe, is with us

For the Companion.

Prayer.

"He that saith I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him."

We believe that prayer is one of the commandments that the Lord had reference to in this scripture; and we believe it should be kept up in every family that professes to believe in the gospel of Jesus Christ; and that it will be kept up in every family that possess the religion of Jesus Christ. There is a great difference between professing religion and possessing it pure and undefiled; but we will not pause to explain the difference.

There are many times when prayer is appropriate and essential; during national calamity, war, pestilence, and famine, when we are undergoing severe temptation, when we are afflicted, —in all such cases, with many more that we might be enumerated, we should be engaged in prayer and supplication.

"Evening, and morning, and at noon will I pray and cry aloud, and he shall hear my voice;" Psalms 55: 17. This is the language of the Psalmist David, when he prayed against his enemies. We read in Matthew 5: 44, "But I say unto you, Love your enemies; bless them that curse you; do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you."

Dear readers, I think we would all get along a great deal better than some do, if we would take the advice given us in this scripture; which we believe is the duty of every Christian. There is nothing more becoming than to see the Father, before he retires, bring his family around the family altar, read a chapter, sing a hymn, and then have a season of prayer; and also in the morning we should not forget to have family prayer.

Brethren and sisters, come, let us reason together. If you could speed your way, with the swiftness of the swallow, all over the brotherhood, with what class would you find those brethren that raise the family altar for the prospering of Zion and the benefit of their own souls? would you find them with those persons that visit the grog-shop? Nay, verily. Would you find them with those bad characters who violate the holy sabbath day? I would answer, no; but you would find them with those who go to the house of the Lord, for the purpose of worshipping God, the author and finisher of faith.

When Daniel knew that the writing was signed, he went into his house, and his windows being open in his chamber towards Jerusalem, he kneeled upon his knees three times a day and prayed and gave thanks before his God.

Let us take the advice of the apostle Paul to the Corinthians: "Be ye followers of me, even as I am of Christ." Let your lights shine forth to the world, that others seeing your good works may be persuaded to come to the terms of the gospel of Jesus Christ. "And he spake a parable unto them to this end that men ought always to pray, and not to faint." Luke 18: 1. We should pray always and not faint, when we are out in our fields or in our work-shops, we should pray to our heavenly Father to give us strength to accomplish our work; and in all other employments we should have our thoughts engaged in prayer to him that rules and superrules the heavens and the earth.

We do not think we must be altogether alone before we can be engaged in secret prayer. We think that we can pray to our Father in secret, although we may be surrounded with crowds of people, or under many such circumstances that the soul longs for communion with its Maker and goes out in search of him, and goes not in vain. We can hold communion with God no matter how public the place may be. "I will therefore that men pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands without wrath and doubting." "Watch and pray; for ye know not in what hour the Bride-groom cometh." Ask, cease not to ask, and it shall be given you; "knock and it shall be opened unto you." If you ask anything in the name of Jesus it shall be given you. Dear reader, hear what the unjust Judge saith, "I will grant the request of this woman, lest by her continual coming she weary me." But let me say to you, that our heavenly Father does not get weary with our pleadings; but instead of getting weary he tells us to ask him for all things we need, and he is perfectly willing to accept our feeble petitions, and to grant unto us such blessings as we need to support us all along the journey of life. In conclusion I would say, let us pray on and be faithful in the Lord till death; and if we are faithful till death, we will receive a crown of life that fadeth not away. Let us go on to perfection; laying up for ourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust corrupt and where thieves do not break through and steal.

RUFUS W. BRANSON.

Muncie, Ind.

For the Companion.

The Great Prophet.

"For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you, of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you." Acts 3 : 22.

We remark in the first place, this passage of scripture is just as binding upon us as it was when it was first spoken. We are commanded to hearken to that great Prophet in all things, not only in part.

But again, this great Prophet emphatically declared, "If any man shall add unto the words of the prophecy of this book, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book, and if any man shall take away from the words of the prophecy of this book, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things written in this book." Oh, then, how careful should we be not to allow ourselves to add anything to God's word; because it is perfect. We cannot make any amendment to it. It is useless for poor, fallible man to undertake to frame any by-laws independent of the gospel. We maintain that there are rules and laws laid down in God's word sufficient to govern any church, if we are willing to hearken to that great Prophet, and neither add to, nor diminish from, his holy word. We claim that God's word is sufficient to keep the church together. There is nothing but love that will bring the church together; for it is plainly declared by the inspired writer, "that neither death nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus." If that pure love exists in the church, there is no danger of divisions or schisms in the body. Love is the bond of perfection, if we only are willing to hear that great Prophet, submitting to his will, laying aside all self; for it is the prerogative of God to command, and our duty to obey. It is not for us to dictate what ordinances are worthy to be observed in the church, or what are not worthy to be observed; hence we maintain that all ordinances should be observed by his followers, and that in strict obedience to his will. It is not a matter of choice to us to observe or not to observe those sacred ordinances. Christ, the chief Shepherd of the church, has given us an example in baptism, the Lord's supper, and feet-washing; after which he said, "For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you." He left no room for any change to be made; but it is as clear as the sun in the noon day splendor. I often have to wonder how ministers can stand in the pulpit and declare that some of the ordinances are not essential. When will motal man cease to dictate for God? for it is declared that "it shall come to pass, that every soul which will not hear that Prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people." This will eventually be the result with those that are not willing to hear that Prophet. We should take God at his word, no difference how simple it may seem to us, whether it is congenial to the carnal mind or not. It seems some of the commands of God have become repugnant to some professors. Christ said, "Whosoever is ashamed of me and of my words, of him will I also be ashamed before my Father and his holy angels." Then let us take God's word for the man of our counsel not men's traditions; for it is declared by the Prophet, "Cursed is he that trusteth in man, and taketh flesh for his arm." Oh, how important it is to deal with sacred things! We should not make light of it, or trifle with God's word: for there is a time in the future when we all have to be judged by that word "which is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two edged sword." How piercing is God's word! On the day of pentecost it pricked some even to the heart, and moved them to inquire, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" Such inquiries are not very frequent in this day and generation. More inquiry is made after a worldly sort: what shall I do to get rich? When viewing the movement of mankind, it seems to me it will not be long until Christ will again appear to us to Judgment; first begins at the house of God, what will be the end of those that obey not the gospel of Christ? and if the righteous scarcely be saved, where will the ungodly and sinner appear? They will cry for the rocks and the hills to fall upon them, and to hide them from the face of him that sitteth upon the throne: for the great day of his wrath is come, and who shall be able to stand? Then, dear reader, hearken to this great Prophet.

J. A. LEEDY.

West Independence, Pa.

For the COMPANION.

Visits to the Tomb—Supposed Discrepancies.

Brother Henry :—I notice in present volume of the Companion, No. 13 brother R. Arnold asks for information concerning the seeming discrepancy in the several accounts of the evangelists, with regard to the visits to the tomb of our Savior. I have in my possession the preliminary revisions of the four evangelists, by the American Bible Union, in which is contained the following, which is pertinent to the case. It is somewhat lengthy; but we hope it is worth reproducing, for the many readers of the Companion.

THOMAS D. LYON.

Some have supposed that there is considerable discrepancy between the statements of the several evangelists, in regard to the resurrection of our Lord, and its attendant circumstances. Says Alf. in loco.—"I attempt no harmony of the accounts;—I believe all such attempts to be fruitless;—and I see in their failure strong corroboration of the truth of the Evangelical Narratives." Now while I should be extremely sorry to rob the Evangelical Naratives of any legitimate source of "strong corroboration," yet, believing that their truth will be felt and acknowledged, even though it should be shown that these accounts are in perfect harmony with each other, I do not hesitate to avow the firm conviction, that, between the several naratives of the four evangelists as far as they bear upon this question, there is not even the appearance of discrepancy. Difficulties there may be, and doubtless are, in the interpretation of certain parts of these narratives; but these are no discrepancies whatever. If, in what follows, I should be charged with having abandoned the province of the translator, and invaded that of the interpreter, I reply, that the thorough discussion of this question has a most important bearing on the translation itself, not only in the passage under consideration, but in other passages supposed to be parrallel. Still, I shall not go minutely into details of this question; but simply state, in as few words as possible, certain conclusions which I have drawn from the historical records, after careful examination.

1. There were, at least, five different visits to the to my, subsequent to the resurrection. We know these visits to have been different,—first, because they are represented to have taken place at different times—second, because they were attended by different circumstances. (1) Mary Magdalene and the other Mary (most probably the mother of James), came to see the tomb, just at the close of the sabbath, (which was, according to the Jewish law between sunset and dark,) as it was beginning to shine, (spoken of the moon and stars, see Luke 23: 54,—Grotius,) towards the first [day] of the week. (See Matt. 28: 1). Neither of the other three Evangelists make any mention of this visit. Some have tried to show that opse may mean after, and that epiphoskousei is here spoken of the morning twilight; but the latter supposition is entirely gratuitous, since Luke undoubtedly uses this verb of the evening twilight, and as to the former, the quotations from the classics intended to prove it are by no means satisfactory to the point; and even if they were, no judicious critic would assign to a word an unusual meaning, on the authority of a half a dozen rare exceptions, unless actually driven to it by the contest.—(2) The next morning, the first [day] of the week, Mary Magdalene made a second visit to the tomb, before day-light, or, while it was still dark. This time she was alone, and came thus early, probably in consequence of her eagerness to ascertain the truth of the resurrection, of which she had vainly tried to persuade the other disciples the evening before.—She did not stay long this time; but ran, to tell Peter and John what she had seen. (See the passage under consideration.) No other Evangelist gives any account of this second visit. (3) Peter and John, (see John's narrative, as above,) immediately after the arrival Mary Magdalene with the news of his resurrection, started for the tomb. At what hour they arrived, we are not precisely informed; nor can we say positively whether this visit was contemporaneous with any other, or not; but the strong probability is that they did not arrive till after day-light, since they looked into the tomb, and saw what it contained, and they probably lingered about the place, till all "the disciples," except Mary Magdalene, were ready to go home again, this third visit also is recorded only by John. (4) Not long after the departure of Mary Magdalene, as mentioned above, and probably soon after the arrival of Peter and John orthrou batheos in the dusk of the morning, (Luke 24: 1,) the "Women," who had prepared spices and ointments before the precious Sabbath (Luke 23: 56,) came to the tomb, bringing those spices, for the purpose of embalming him. Who those women were, is not particularly mentioned by Luke.—The two Mary's were not with them as appears from Mark's Narrative, (see below). Luke is the only Evangelist who mentions this visit of the "Women,"—(5) A little later, at sunrise, Mary Magdalene, (who had by this time returned from delivering her message to Peter and John,) made her third visit to the tomb, being accompanied by Mary the Mother of James, and Salome. They also brought their spices and ointments, and now probably joined the other "women," mentioned by Luke. This was the last visit, of which we have any account, and is recorded only by Mark. Now as it regards these five visits I think we may safely challenge any one to point out a single discrepancy in the various Narratives.

2. The resurrection of our Lord did not, as is commonly supposed, take place on the morning of the first day of the week; but in the evening of the Sabbath, probably, (for the precise moment is nowhere stated,) at the close of the very day of rest, and just before the arrival of the two Mary's, who came to see the sepulcher, at the precise point that separated between the last and the first of the week. He was risen, when they arrived; and his resurrection was probably simultaneous with the great earthquake, which had taken place, on their arrival. The Mary's were not, as Alf. contends, "witnesses of the earthquakes;" for egeneto, there was, is indefinite past, as also apekulise, while ekathato is imperfect; showing that when the women arrived, the angel who rolled away the stone, was sitting upon it, which implies that the earthquake had already taken place, if, as is admitted, the seismos "was the sudden opening of the tomb by the descending angel." (Alf.). Matthew is the only one of the Evangelists who gives us any account of the circumstances IMMEDIATELY attending the resurrection.—No other writer mentions the earthquake; no other brings to view the very angel who rolled away the stone and the immediately subsequent act of sitting upon it. Mark, in reference to this point, says merely "and looking up, they (the women,) see that the stone (perfect) has (had) been rolled away." Luke says, "and they found the stone (perfect) having been rolled away from the tomb." "He,

(Jesus) is not here, (aorist) he has raised." John merely says, "and she (Mary Magdalene,) seeth the stone (perfect,) having been taken away." Now compare these statements with that of Matthew: "and behold there was a great earthquake; for an angel of the Lord, coming down from heaven, approaching, rolled away the stone, and was sitting (imperfect) upon it. I have already admitted that there my be difficulty in the interpretation of the various parts of these narratives. There are only two of these that I deem it necessary to notice, in this place. Why, it is asked, did Mary say to the angels, on the morning of the first day of the week." They took away my Lord, and I know not where they laid him," if she had herself seen him alive, after his resurrection the evening before, as is recorded in Acts 28: 9? I admit this is a difficulty; but, as was before remarked, there is here no discrepancy between Matth. and John. It would be easy, indeed, to magnify the difficulty by inquiring further, why did Mary Magdalene say, "They took away my Lord, and I know not where they laid him," after she had been told, "he was alive," the two men, (Luke 24: 5—7,) had said to her, and certain other women, "why are ye seeking the living with the dead? he is not here, but was raised. Remember how he spoke to you, being yet in Galilee, saying, it is necessary that the Son of man be betrayed into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified." Did she not know from the positive testimony of angels that he was alive? If I am not mistaken, the solution of this difficulty is not so difficult as might, at first, be imagined. The key is furnished by John, "For they did not yet know the scripture, that he must rise from the dead." Mary Magdalene had, indeed, seen Jesus the evening before, while returning from her first visit to the tomb; but when she told the circumstance to the other disciples, they did not believe the reality of it, and, no doubt would have persuaded her that she had merely seen a vission. In fact, according to Matthew xxviii. 18, even after the eleven disciples, subsequently, had seen and worshipped him in Galilee, some still doubted. Now, while we may find it very difficult to understand why the disciples were so slow of heart to understand why the disciples were so slow of heart to understand these things, the fact is, incontestable, and, being admitted, accounts for the singular conduct of Mary Magdalene, and, therefore, clears up the proposed difficulty.

2. The supposition that the resurrection took place in the evening of the Sabbath, it is said, renders it impossible that the Lord should have been in the tomb even part of three days. Therefore the scriptures could not have been fulfilled in his resurrection at that time. I apprehend that this difficulty is only imaginary; and will reply to it in three particulars. (1) The most definite prophecy on record, in relation to the time that he was to lie in the grave, is that uttered by himself, Matt. xii. 40, "For as Jonah was in the belly of the sea-monster three days and three nights, so shall the Son of man be in the heart of the earth three days and and three nights." Now it is generally held incontestable, that our Lord was crucified on the sixth day of the week, (Friday) and was buried in the evening of the same day. From that time till the morning of the first day, when it is admitted that he was risen, would be, at most, only one day, and a very small portion of another, with two nights; so that the common computation lacks one night and nearly two days of making the time that he was in the heart of the earth equal to three days and three nights, which it should have been, according to the prediction cited above. Now, supposing it were the legitimate object of the interpreter to reconcile history with prophecy, would it be worth while to force upon Matthew's narrative an unnatural construction, for the purpose of postponing the resurrection a few hours, when, after all, we should lack one night and nearly two days of effecting the proposed reconciliation? Or should we, by this means, succeed in satisfying the less definite predictions, such as, "after three days I will rise again," — "and the third day rise again;" would there be any real gain, while the most definite and unequivocal of all these predictions, would remain unalterably opposed to our interpretation; I take it for granted that if language is of any use at all in conveying ideas, three days and three nights include the whole of three diurnal revolution of our planet. But it is not the business of either historian or interpreter to fulfil prophecy, neither of whom has a right to misrepresent the facts of history for the sake of making them agree with any prediction whatever. I confess, that, on the supposition that the burial of our Lord took place on the evening of the sixth, and his resurrection on the morning of the first day of the week, I find it impossible to reconcile the facts with the prediction above referred to, as though it were admitted that he rose on the evening of the Sabbath, or seventh day of the week. But—(2) there is no evidence that our Lord was crucified on the sixth day of the week, All of the evangelists agree that the day that followed the crucifixion was the Sabbath: but we are nowhere informed that it was the seventh day of the week. We know from the commandment, (Lev. 23; 6, 7,) that the fifteenth day of the first month was a Sabbath of rest, being the first day of unleavened bread, and we also know that this was the fifteenth day of the first month, and, therefore, that it was the first day of unleavened bread; but what day of the week it was we know not. That Sabbath was annual, not weekly, and happened sometimes on one and sometimes on another day of the week; and there is positively no evidence that, in that year, it was coincident with the weekly Sabbath. We have, therefore, no historical data furnished by the Evangelists, from which we can determine whether the resurrection was or was not in accordance with the predictions touching that event. Since, however, the apostle informs us that he rose the third day, according to the scriptures, we may conclude that his body was literally three days and three nights in the tomb. Taking this, then, as the basis of our calculation, and applying it to Matthew's narrative, we arrive at the conclusion that the body was put into the tomb in the evening of the fourth day of the week, (Wednesday) while the following day, (Thursday,) was the paschal Sabbath, the first day of unleavened bread. This brings us to the same hour of the evening when Luke represents the burial to have taken place; for it is evident that the disciples hastened with their labor, in order that the body might be put into the tomb before the Sabbath.

T. M. D. Lucas

For the Companion.

Birth-Day Reflections.

Forty-six years have come and gone,
And now another birth-day morn,
Since first I drew this mortal breath,
And saw a world of sin and death.

What changes have I undergone,
In these long years that by have flown,
Which like a dream have passed away!
And now my hair is turning gray.

How have I spent the years now passed?
And this, perhaps, may be the last;
How much of folly, mirth and sin—
Have I been true?—or false have been?

Did I the cross too often shun,
While in this Pilgrim's path I've run?—
Did love grow cold, my prayers grow less,
And thus my daily strength decrease?

God knows the heart, it fill'd with pride,
And secret sins I cannot hide;
Then help me, Lord, to pray for grace,
And seek anew the Savior's face.

The past we know, the present, ours,
The future known to higher powers;
Then may I live each day that's passed,
As if it were my very last.

I should esteem all worldly joys,
As bubbles, trifles, childish toys;
In Heav'n above my treasure store,
And bear the cross my Savior bore.

Lord, these are solemn thoughts that pass
Now through my mind, and show alas,—
How weak I am without the aid
Of Him on whom my sins were laid!

If faithful through this vale of tears,
The few remaining days or years,
I'll say with joy, when death shall come,
Christ is my Hope, and heaven my Home.

ISAIAH G. HARLEY.

Mutual Forbearance.

If we wish to succeed in life, we must learn to take men as they are, and not as they ought to be; making them better if we can, but at the same time remembering their infirmities. We have to deal, not with the ideal man of dreaming poets, but with the real men of every-day life, men precisely like ourselves. This fact of common aims, ambitions, and infirmities ought to create constant sympathy and forbearance. While every man has his own burden to bear, he may at the same time in some way help another to bear his peculiar burden, and be himself helped in turn. God has mysteriously linked all men together by this curious fact of mutual dependence, and this wonderful possibility of mutual help. The poor may be relieved, the sick may be visited, the sorrowing may receive sympathy, the inexperienced may be counseled, the faint-hearted encouraged, and the feeble established. All these, in turn, may help the hand that gives help to them; for God has so ordered it that no man is absolutely independent of his fellows. At the very time we help others, we find by that act our own moral power strengthened, and the time may come when in a more direct way the aid we have extended may be returned.

This principle of mutual forbearance is especially applicable to those mental and moral infirmities of which every man is conscious—infirmities which make us sometimes detest ourselves, and render us a burden to our friends. Some are peevish and fretful; some have a suspicion that everything will go wrong; some are easily offended, having touchy tempers, as quick as a pistol with a hair trigger; some have a rough, blunt way of expressing themselves, imagining that they are frank, when they are simply uncivil; some are haughty and overbearing, holding their heads above the common herd; some are headstrong, never yielding a position once taken.

These disagreeable infirmities, in common with others which might be named, have their origin in different sources. They sometimes spring from constitutional peculiarities, and, indeed, are often hereditary. Some of them may be the result or the symptoms of nervous disorder. Some may be traced directly to defective education.

Whatever their origin, we must learn to bear with them. For this there are several good reasons which commend themselves to Christians, whatever others may think of them. God commands a love for our neighbor which shall equal self-love. His word directs the strong to bear the infirmities of the weak; exhorts us to bear one another's burdens, declaring that those who do this fulfill the law of Christ, which is the great law of love; and presents for our imitation the wonderful example of Christ, who pleased not himself. If we can save men by bearing with their infirmities we ought to do it.

Another reason just as powerful, though appealing more directly to our selfishness, is to be found in the fact that we expect others to bear with us. It surely is not fair to ask our fellow-men to make allowance for our infirmities while we make none for theirs. We must give and take, each yielding something to the other, like well-behaved men in a crowd.—The man who should undertake to go through a crowd by an air-line route would soon find his passage blocked. Let him yield a little to others, and others will yield to him.

It is the part of religion, as well as of good breeding, to avoid as far as possible coming in contact with the infirmities of others, and to take as little notice as we can of their manifestation. We do this in reference to physical deformity; why not in regard to mental or moral infirmities? We are careful not to tread on a tender toe, not to brush against a broken arm, not to stand in the way of the blind; we ought to be equally careful not to ruffle the temper of the irritable, not to wound the feelings of the sensitive, not to excite the fears of the timid.

There must, of course, be a limit to this, since our own rights and feelings must be respected as well as those of others; but we presume no man who sincerely desires to do right will have any difficulty in fixing the limit. No general rule can be given which shall apply to each particular case. Common sense and divine grace must be the guides. Each man ought to endeavor to lessen the burden he expects others to help him bear. If a man have a bad habit, he ought to try to break himself of it.—A man with a foul ulcer or a deformed limb is to be pitied; but he ought not to persist in thrusting the ulcer or the deformity before us on every occasion, insisting that we shall examine it. Let him keep it out of sight as much as possible, get cured it he can, but if that be impossible, say nothing about it. So men ought not to be perpetually obtruding their evil tempers and other infirmities before their friends, imposing on their Christian forbearance, and excusing themselves by saying: "It is my way." It is a very bad way, and cannot be mended a moment too soon. Less excusable are these infirmities in their continuance than those of the body, since the grace of God is promised to all who seek it, and thus the burdens may be lessened.—The Methodist.

Christian Family Companion.

DALE CITY, PA., Nov. 21, 1871

One by One.

One by one our aged brethren are passing over the river of death to the shores of eternal bliss. Elsewhere in this inside will be found a record of the departure of Elder Jacob Miller, of South Bend, Ind. Brother Miller was at the last Annual Meeting, where we last met him, and where we had a friendly interview with him. We loved his society from our first acquaintance, and had hoped that we might often meet here below. In that we have been disappointed; but we shall certainly meet brother Jacob when we, too, shall cross over to the evergreen shore.

Two elders whom we met at last Annual Meeting, apparently in good health, and not yet in old age, have already passed away.

We have also the sad intelligence of the death of Elder Isaac Brumbaugh, of the James Creek Congregation, Huntingdon county, Pa., who departed on the 14th inst. at the age of 69 years, 6 months and 9 days. Among our first recollections of ministers is that of brother Brumbaugh. Although no great orator, his style and manner gave evidence of strong faith and earnestness. Socially, he was kind and sympathetic, and the family and friends will very much miss his company. They have our sympathy in their affliction, but we think they should only mourn for their own loss, for surely the old brother is the gainer by the change, for life to him had lost most of its sweets.

THE PIOUS YOUTH for November must be delayed until the latter part of the month, for the reason that we could not get the necessary office help to print it sooner. There will, therefore, still be room for contributions in this number.

From Brother Balsbaugh.

We have frequent inquiry in regard to the welfare of brother C. H. Balsbaugh and his aged parents. It would be quite an accommodation and satisfaction to us and our readers, to have some one keep us posted by a weekly communication from them. Who will do it? We will bear the expense of the correspondence. The last intelligence from them was a note from brother Christian from the Hygeian Home, dated November 10th, stating that he was just about returning home; that his father wished to have him at his side so long as his mortal life may be protracted; but says nothing in regard to his own health, from which we infer that he is about as when before noted.

The Weather.

We do not often refer to the weather. We tried it last week, by calling attention to the great drouth, and before our paper had gone to press, we had fine showers of rain. And before we could scarcely adapt ourselves to that state of the weather, it blew up cold, with snow that covered the ground, and at present writing (Thursday) the hills are white, and it is cold enough for mid-winter.—With so fickle a subject we shall not again attempt to deal.

Thanksgiving Day.

The President of the United States has appointed the thirtieth day of the present month as a day of National thanksgiving, and the Governor of Pennsylvania has announced the same day as the annual day of thanksgiving appointed by the State Executive. It would be well if the day would be properly observed, as there is much reason for thanksgiving, as we have certainly been blessed as a State and a nation. Do the Brethren, generally observe the day. How many thanksgiving sermons will we have reported?

It is a custom among the "world's people" to present their editors and servants with "a fattened turkey, or other edibles, clean meats," previous to such or similar occasions. Would it be making too much after the world for our patrons to serve us in the same manner? We do not think that we should be conscientiously opposed to it.

The New York Observer

Enters upon its Fiftieth Year on the 1st of January next. Its career has been one of the most successful in the history of American journalism. Every department is conducted with ability. Its Foreign Correspondence is unrivalled, and its independence in commenting upon political corruptions is in the highest degree praiseworthy.

We notice that it appears in a "New Dress," and also announces that the success of its Year-Book for 1871 will result in Volume No. 2, for 1872, which will be still more complete in its statistical and other tables of information, and in its general arrangement.

Such an enterprise deserves success, and we advise our readers to send for a specimen copy of the paper. New subscribers will receive the paper free until January 1st.

Visitors.

A printing office at this place being something new, we have had quite a number of visitors. All are welcome who will conduct themselves as becomes people in a printing office. No smoking allowed in any part of the building. This is positive. We take pleasure in having persons interview our office and machinery, and will do our utmost to accommodate all who may visit us.

For the information of visitors we offer the following rules:

1. In the press room, take care of yourselves and your companions. You may talk as much and as loud as you wish, especially while the press is in motion.

2. In the sanctum tell at once what you have to say, and then, if you mean to stay longer, ask for something to read.

3. In the composing room lay your eyes on everything that can be seen without touching it. Hands off. Avoid all unnecessary talking.

Encouraging.

Some of our friends are sending us encouraging news in advance of their lists, telling us what they mean to do, and what they can do. Some assure us they can double their last year's lists, and some even more.

Answers to Correspondents.

GEORGE WISE: Corrected, the credit in our books was right—$1.50.

HENRY S. NUSBAUM: We have no knowledge nor account of it, but will send the paper.

JACOB BARE: It was by mistake. Your paper is now paid for to 8—10.

J. B ALLENSWORTH: Cannot tell if it is sent regularly.

MISCELLANEOUS.

"If We Knew."

BY MRS. HENRY WARD BEECHER.

In a recent number we copied a scrap of poetry with this significant title. It struck us very forcibly as containing a profitable lesson, and has haunted us daily ever since.

Ah! if in early youth "we knew!" If we could look along the map of life clear to the end, and see all the breakers and quicksands, which, by prudence and self-control we could have avoided, how different would be the view we now take of the "backward track!" No doubt, it is well, in many ways, that we cannot read the future; trials and sorrows that no skill or forsight could have turned aside, would have been doubled by anticipation and foreknowledge, and yet—we doubt if there are many, who, looking back from the "halfway house," would not willingly endure the double pain and sorrow, if they might have had the power to foresee the inevitable result of certain courses, and, profiting by this foreknowledge, have avoided the danger or the sin.

Brother! Sister! Would you be impatient or cross to your little playmate "if you knew those little "baby fingers" would "never trouble you again?"

Two little boys were at play—one of three years, the other but eighteen months. Both wanted a rocking-chair. Full of health and animal spirits, the dispute ran high, and, at last, the elder struck the little one.—Only a few days and the baby hands were folded in "snowy grace" upon the cold and quiet heart, and laid in the grave. A short time after, hearing bitter sobs in the garden, the mother found the lonely brother—himself but just past babyhood—lying under the peach trees, watching with eager eyes some birds flying over his head, and calling between his sobs, "Oh, birdies! little birdies! fly up! Fly higher! and tell Jesus Christ if he will only let Geordie come back to me he may have the rocking-chair all the time, and I never, never, will strike him again—never! never!"

Oh, Father! Don't be harsh with your son. He disobeyed your commands, and of course he has done wrong; but he is only a little child. It was the overflux of exuberant life, and not wilful disobedience. If you could look forward to what soon may be, how leniently would you judge—how gently would you chide; and, by your gentleness secure the obedience much more effectually.

Ah! Poor, tired mother! You are very weary, and half sick. Your eyes are heavy for want of sleep, and your head throbbing with the noise and shouts, and wild frolicks of your little ones. But it is health, and strength, and life. Be patient! If, soon, with hot and tearless eyes, you watch by the little crib where fever may conquor that life, but late so joyous and full of activity, can you endure what may be, if you have scattered "thorns, not roses, for your reaping by and by?"

"I have asked you twenty times to mend this coat, and it is not done yet. 'No time! How long would it have taken? But, well—I can go ragged, I suppose. You take little heed to my wishes or advice. You must take your own way, or you'll not be satisfied."

Husband! you love your wife; you would be indignant if a looker-on should hint that you misjudged or were over-exacting. Why do you say such ugly, biting things? Your heart, or that silent monitor, your conscience, tells you that she did not mean to disregard your wishes or advice. She was tired, or overtaxed with care and frequent interruptions; or, perhaps sickness is creeping upon her. Whatever the reason, the offence was but a little thing. Even if she was self-willed, or irritable, be patient with her. You know a certain tone of your voice or a love-look from your eye, would have brought her to your side in an instant—sorry, self-upbraiding—loving and honoring you with her whole heart. Ah! "If you knew!" These first morose, fault-finding words, perhaps are "leaving on her heart a shadow—leaving on your heart a stain" which may be the begining of coldness, mistrust and defiance—or possibly a deeper sin, where, but for them, you could have secured joy and gladness, growing sweeter and purer day by day! Deal gently. You, her husband, can make her happy, loving and good; or you can make her irritable, unloving and evil.

"John! Why do you always wait and wait, and hinder me so? You can come when I call you, just as well as to keep me waiting, if you only choose to do so. But you are always so obstinately bent on taking your own time, regardless of other people's comfort."

Wife! It is just such little, impatient, waspish words, that tempt your husband to seek quiet comfort and appreciation away from your side. No matter if he speaks "just as impatiently" to you "fifty times a day," show him a better way. Why retort, or shrink from the "little shadows" which you can, by gentleness, dispel? You have even more power in your gentleness, than your husband has in his strength. Yield a little. It is not hard, and you reap a glorious reward. Is not your husband's love and confidence worth keeping by a little patience and forbearance? But if not for present joy, to ward off future misery at least, "set a guard over the doors of your mouth that you sin not with your lips," and so tread life's pathway with him to whom you have vowed a wife's fealty, that if called to sit in the desolation of widowhood, there shall not be added to that sorrow, the anguish of self-upbraiding, for little services impatiently rendered or love requited by coldness or irritability.

When we have passed through all the labors and trials of earlier life, and in full maturity, or just on the decline, recall the friends of our youth, and the sweeter family ties, how the heart aches with the memory of > "The hasty words of action, > Strewn along our backward track,"

And vainly yearns for one more opportunity for the better performance of our whole duty in all love, fidelity and patience. But God

> "Pity us all,
> Who vainly the faults of youth recall
> For of all sad words of tongue or pen,
> The saddest are these: "It might have been."

—The Mother at Home.

LITTLE local noises deaden the loudest distant ones; so it is that this world shuts out from the ears of men as it does the voice of Almighty God.

YOU may depend upon it that the poor fellow who walks away from the postoffice with the greatest number of letters, proud of his extensive correspondence, has not heard from himself for a long time.—Thoreau.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Notes of Travel.

Left home Oct. 8th on a mission of love to the North Western part of West Va. First day had meeting at School House in the bounds of this district. All night with brother H. Comers. Next day (9th) rode 42 miles, and put up for the night at a public house in Braxton county. The 10th rode all day and at night, arrived at brother D. Bosely's, resident minister near Bull-town, little Kanawha River, Braxton county. Meeting at night and next day in the neighborhood.

On the 12th rode to the Brethren's meeting-house near Buchanan, Upshur county. Meeting at night, and next day; two meetings at said house. Night of the 12th with brother D. Miller, minister.

Night of the 13th, home with brother J. Houser, minister. Meeting at his house the evening of the 14th.—After meeting home with brother Naff.

Next day 15th meeting again at Brethren's meeting-house. All night with friend Jacob Snell, who next morning 16th kindly accompanied me some miles on my way to Barbour county. Arrived in the P, M., at brother S. Keiser's, meeting at night in school-house. Home with brother S. Gainer, minister. Here I met with our esteemed sister and correspondent Bettie A. Bowers, who, with many others, is alive to the interest of our Master's cause.

On the 17th meeting commenced at brother W. P. Wilson's, at 10 o'clock; communion exercises in the afternoon and at night. Had an excellent meeting and season of love. Had as good order and attention as I ever witnessed on such an occasion. Meeting next day at same place. As many as believed and were willing to be added to the church then were baptized. This congregation is in a prosperous condition; and is called Bealington congregation. There has been a large number of accessions to the church during the summer; and others there express an inclination to soon be members of the body of Christ. In the evening in company with dear brethren and sisters we went to Sugar Creek, and had meeting at night in a school-house. Home with brother S. Wilson. Next day went on to Corinth, and had three meetings same day. All night with brother Well's, minister. Next day two meetings at same point, and one at night further on at Liberty school-house.

On the 21st went to brother E. Awvil's, minister, near by is Shilo meeting-house, belonging to the brethren. Preaching commenced at 2 o'clock. Communion services at night. A large number of brethren and sisters was present with us, and we had a feast of love, and we felt as walking in heavenly places in Christ, and believe all felt a refreshing from the Lord, notwithstanding the disorder that prevailed in the large concourse of spectators in the house as well as in the crowd of hundreds on the outside. Next day the 22nd we had the privilege of speaking to the largest audience we ever saw upon a religious occasion in the State of West Va.; and over one third that had come to the place could not get into the house, although the house would accommodate six or eight hundred persons. This was the most distant point of my journey. Immediately after the breaking up of the meeting we prepared to start—"homeward bound." Rode thirteen miles and had meeting again at the school-house on Sugar Creek at night.—Home with sister Wilson. Next day to the Bealington congregation; preached the funeral of brother William Yager, who died a short time previous at the advanced age of 86 years, was baptized by the brethren a few days before his death. In the afternoon rode to brother J. Howsers Upshur county. Next day to brother G. Moss's Braxton county. Meeting at night and next day. Home with W. Heater, minister. Rode all next day across the mountain's lodged near Summersville, Nicholas county.

Turned my course, and rode again all day accross the mountain, expecting to meet with the brethren at Meadow Bluff Greenbrier county, at night; but did not reach the point until next morning. Met with the brotherhood in church council, and with brother A. Hutchison colaborer in the ministry from Fayette county. He filled the appointment the previous night. One member was severed from the body. Two were called to the office of deacon. The choice fell on brother F. M. Hobbs and C. Foren. Meeting at night.

Early next morning I went on to fill an appointment on Lick Creek, brother Hutchison remaining to fill the last appointment with the brethren near Meadow Bluff, and in the afternoon rejoined me at Lick Creek, and had meeting again at night.—Next day meeting at brother J. Martin's; and on the morning of the 31st I arrived at home, and found all well. Truly God has been good to me and mine, for which I thank and praise His name. My expected company failing to come and go with me, I traveled the greater part of the way alone. I felt though that God was with me; And whenever I met with those that were of the household of faith, I felt at home. As time and space will not admit of mentioning the names of all the dear brethren and sisters that were so free-hearted and kind to me, I would here say to one and all, I feel I shall long remember your kindness with a deep sense of love and thankfulness, and many prayers to God to bless you all now and forever. I enjoyed good health during the trip; with the exception of hoarseness, at times, owing to so much speaking for days in succession. Was absent 23 days, preached 26 sermons, besides attending and speaking at two communion meetings, and traveled on horseback over 400 miles. Generally the cause is in a healthy and thriving condition where I visited, and I can thank God and take courage." J. S. Flory.

Dear Editor C. F. C In No. 43, there is an article by brother Lint, headed "Going in and out" The term "Flexer Style," may not be understood by all whom it may concern. For their benefit I will venture the following explanation: The family of Flexer's, now almost extinct, half a century ago, was numerous and notorious. Their notoriety however was not favorable or worthy of emulation, but directly the opposite.

In fact their style and reputation was vulgar and boorish, a practice that Bro. Lint, myself, and all right minded people are very anxious should die out with the Flexer family. Dr. Beachly

Brother Holsinger: Perhaps it may be interesting, at least to some of the dear brethren and sisters, to have a brief sketch of our lovefeast, held in the Duncansville congregation Thursday and Friday, October 26th and 27th. It had been raining for several days previous, but on Thursday, notwithstanding the heavy clouds and rain, a goodly number of God's people assembled to hear the word preached. The ministering brethren present were Joseph R. and George Hanawalt, of McVeytown, Peter Hollowbush, of Pottstown, J. B. Garver, of Aughwick, J. P. Hetric, of Redbank congregation, Joseph Snowberger, of Clover Creek; also, G. Myers, Joseph and James A. Sell. The holy ordinances of God's house were fully and clearly explained to those who were present for edification, and truly those were present who had never been witnesses upon such an occasion. Here, dear brethren and sisters, we should be very careful to "let our light" so shine that we may prove to the world that we are "followers of God as dear children," fully obeying the holy ordinances of His house. The ordinances of feet-washing, the Lord's supper, and the holy communion were attended to by a goodly number of God's children. Quite a number of strange brethren and sisters had assembled to share in the glorious feast. We should not really call them strangers, but we have reference to those from a distance with whom we were not personally acquainted.

On Friday morning at an early hour brother Hetric had to give us the parting hand to journey homeward, having important business to attend to, therefore could remain with us no longer. Brother J. R. Hanawalt and father went about two miles to visit my sick uncle, J. H. Stiffler, who has been under a heavy weight of affliction for about two months, being confined to the house with dropsy, but he has the great consolation that he has the strong arm of Jesus for support. On September 29th he was led into the water and buried with Christ by baptism. A short time after a lovefeast was held at his house.

At 9 A. M. the congregation again assembled for divine services. The 12th chapter of Romans was read by brother G. Hanawalt, and addresses were delivered by the brethren from the words "Let love be without dissimulation." Brother Hollowbush being the last one that spoke upon the subject, very touchingly admonished those present, if he should no more meet with them that they would bear these precious words in mind, and be bound together more firmly by the tie of Christian love.

Dear brethren and sisters, I greatly fear that some of us at least, let the all-abounding love which should always dwell within us grow cold, and neglect to banish hypocricy, envy, malice, and ill-will from our minds and hearts. God surely refuses to smile upon us if we neglect to have that ever-abounding love dwelling within us that is required of us by our blessed Lord and Master. "As I have loved you ye also ought to love one another."

After services on Friday one precious soul abandoned the yoke of sin and was received into Christ's Church militant by being buried with Him in baptism. The Lord still continues to call sinners to repentance. Let us then not neglect to feed these precious "babes in Christ with the sincer milk of the word," that they may feed thereon and grow.

The time for parting came, and our hearts were made to feel sad for those to bid us adieu with whom we had formed acquaintance, and those dear brethren and sisters with whom we had formerly been acquainted. Should we no more be permitted to meet on this side eternity, let us then continue in unity and love here below, that, when we bid farewell to earth and earthly things, we may be received into yonder world of happiness, to dwell with all the sanctified and redeemed throughout eternity, is the prayer of your unworthy sister in Christ. E. R. STIFFLER.

Hollidaysburg, Pa.

Death of Elder Jacob Miller.

Died suddenly, of apoplexy, September 24th, in Portage congregation, St. Joseph county, Indiana, our beloved brother, Elder JACOB MILLER, aged fifty-nine years, six months and twenty-one days. His death has caused many tears of deep sorrow; not only our beloved sister, his widow, and nine children (all grown and several of them members of the church) mourn the loss of him so near and dear to them, but also the congregation over which he presided with so much ability for near thirty-five years, together with the many districts in Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan who had so often been made to rejoice in his labors of love now mourn also deeply, feeling our loss. Brother Jacob Miller was often called upon to visit the sick and the sorrowing for aid and council. His kind heart was ever ready to do good, his counsel was confided in as of one blessed with wisdom from on high, and all who knew him best loved him most, both in the church and out of it. The following is from the Valley Register, September 28: "Our community was startled and grieved on Monday morning at the announcement of the death of Elder Jacob Miller, which occurred at eight o'clock on Sunday evening, at his residence, in German township. Regarding his sudden death we were conversing with him only a short time ago about Mr. Colfax's recent illness, and he remarked to us then that he expected to be called away suddenly, although he was then apparently enjoying the best of health. The wishes he then expressed concerning his interment were conscientiously carried out.

Elder Jacob Miller was born in Preble county, Ohio. He was the oldest of a family of sixteen children, only four of whom are now living.—While he was yet quite young his parents who had emigrated from Virginia to Ohio, moved to Indiana, where he was raised and received his education. Early in life he became a convert to religion and joined the church, and when about twenty-two years old he was set apart to the ministry according to the usages of the church, and was soon advanced to the office of Elder, and ever after, to the day of his death, was noted as one of the most zealous and efficient among them. His name was familiar among the brethren from Maryland to California, and his extensive travels in preaching the gospel and in district and annual councils made his personal acquaintance very great, and it is worthy of note that in all with whom he came in contact he inspired the greatest respect. He was an earnest Christian, a faithful worker in the vineyard, as thoroughly versed in the teachings of the Bible as a life-long study could make him. The church has no member who will be more widely missed, nor has the neighborhood in which he lived a citizen. His influence there, as everywhere, was on the side of good. He was a preacher by practice as well as belief, and become the arbiter of many a quarrel that otherwise would have merged into an expensive law-suit and an endless feud. Years ago he and his brother James, also an elder, was instrumental in having a commodious meeting-house built in a beautiful oak grove on the grounds of the latter. His funeral took place on Tuesday forenoon, from the meeting-house near his residence, which for so many years was the scene of his labors of love for the great Master whose ardent and faithful follower he was. It was the largest funeral ever held there. The services were conducted by Elder D. B. Sturgis, of this city, assisted by Elders J. Berkey and C. Wenger. The body was interred in the graveyard near the meeting-house, and just across the road from his residence.

Visitor please copy.

C. WENGER.

Letter from D. M. Holsinger. No. 9.

Dear Brethren and Sisters :—Many of you doubtless have wondered why I kept silence so long. I do not feel at liberty now to give an explanation, but will give an account of our whereabouts, &c. On the 19th of Oct. we came to this State, Indiana and attended a communion in Eld. D. Rupel's (Pine Creek) branch St. Joseph county. We were very much refreshed and edified, when we met with such a large number of our Father's children, saw their good order, and shared their christian love and affection.

After the forenoon exercises on the 20th were conveyed to brother Joseph D. Mast (who had kindly conveyed us from Michigan there) to his brother Daniel's Marshall county. Eld. J. Naff's branch. Here we had three meetings, besides transacting some church matters. On the 23d conveyed by brothert Mast to New Paris: Solomon's Creek branch, Elkhart county. Here we visited among our friends till the 27th when we attended the communion at this place, quite a large number of communicants and others; the meeting was continued till Sunday evening. The attendance at these meetings was good, but the order none of the best. During these meetings brother Lewis Montz was advanced to second degree of the ministry; and brother Abraham Neff chosen to the ministry. On the 31st attended the funeral of old sister Weybright in this branch, who arrived to the age of 87 years 7 days.

On Sunday 5th attended meeting at 10 A. M, in the Eld. Stephen Miller's branch, 3 P. M. in Eld. D. Shiveley's: and in the evening in Eld. J. Anglemyer's. The balance of time was devoted in visiting, and making arrangements for a council or consultation meeting; the result of which may afford matter for a future report. On Tuesday 14th we purpose returning to Michigan again, and if the Lord will, spend the balance of our allotted time in that State. We have learned during this mission that "the Lord's ways are not our ways," and are ready to exclaim with the apostle: "O! the depth of the riches, both of the wisdom and knowledge of God; how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out." Our health is about as usual. Still remember us in your prayers.

DANIEL M. HOLSINGER.

Dear Brother in the Lord :—Yesterday I attended a funeral, with other brethren, at the house of our dear brother Adam Hollinger, colaborer in the Vineyard of the Lord. The deceased was a child of the afflicted family of our dear brother (MARIA ALICE HOLLINGER, aged 27 years 6 months 27 days.) The afflicted brother desired to have me write their afflictions and sufferings, for the C. F. C.

Our dear brother expected to go on a trip of love among the brethren in the valley of Virginia; but the ways of our God, are not our ways as often proposed. Therefore about the time our brethren intended to go on their mission of love. The brother and family were greatly afflicted. Six of the children had Dipthheria. The one above named is conveyed to the spirit land. The mother and other children are at present restored to favorable circumstances and reasonable health; but our dear brother is still on the bed of affliction, caused by a tumor in his right side. The Physician has lanced and probed the part affected several times, but his suffering is yet great, and his desire and prayer is to be remembered by the dear brethren and sisters in the Lord, in their prayers, knowing "the effectual, fervent prayer of the righteous availeth much. The Lord's will be done. We remain yours in the words of the Gospel.

ADAM BROWN,
ADAM HOLLINGER.

A Trip,

November 9th—Last Saturday morning, I accompanied brother Horning from Lamott Prairie, 20 miles Southwest. After driving about twelve miles, we reached brother Swingers, about noon Fed and took dinner, and then started for Sister Dedrick's who resides two and a half miles south of Oblong City. We reached sister Dedrick's at 5½ o'clock. We found the sister and her family well and in good comfort. After supper we started for church, where brother Horning addressed the attentive hearers that night. May the Lord enable him to preach to those people again.

H. H. M.

Hudsonville Illinois.

Winebrenner's Reference Testament.

Dear Brother :—A short time ago I noticed in the columns of the Companion, that a brother wishes to know where "Winebrenner's Reference Testament" could be had. I have consulted the publisher of the book, and can furnish them at the rate of nine dollars ($9,00) per dozen, by express; or one dollar per copy by mail post paid, which is the publisher's price, and is cheaper than by express when carried by different companies. If you think proper, insert this to oblige the Western brethren. Send no orders without money. Address,

C. BUCHER.

Schaefferstown, Lebanon Co., Pa.

Dear Brother:—By the request of many of the dear brethren and sisters, I submit the following for publication:

On the 2d of October brother Jacob D. Trostle, Daniel K. Sayler, Isaac Pfoutz, (deacon) and I started on a visit to the churches in the valley of Virginia. Our first appointment was at Brownsville, Frederick county, Md.

3d.—We were met by Elder David Rinehart and piloted to his daughter, Anna Cable's, at Cabletown, where we held forth in the Methodist meeting-house.

4th.—We dined with brother Strickler at Winchester. In the evening went to brother Houck's, where we had meeting. Here we were met by Elder Daniel Baker.

5th.—Went to Baker's meeting-house, about 20 miles beyond Winchester, where we had four meetings: not very large, but good attention, and I hope some good impressions were made.

7th.—Went to Elder Geo. Shaver's. Here we had three appointments—one at Copp's school-house, and two at Oak Grove meeting-house.

9th.—Went to Mt. Jackson, where we had an evening meeting at the Union meeting-house. Lodged with brother Joseph Maphers. Here we were met by brother Samuel Hyers, a ministering brother in this (Flatrock) congregation.

10th.—Meeting at Cedar Grove; dined with brother Jacob Good. In the evening met at Plain's Mills, where we had quite an interesting congregation and excellent singing.—Lodged with brother John W. Driver, deacon. Brother Trostle stayed with brother S. H. Myers. Next morning, the 11th, went to Linville's Creek, formerly under the oversight of our lamented brother and Elder John Kline, whose grave we visited with feelings of sadness mingled with pleasure. Here we met with many brethren and sisters, and tried to talk to them about the purification of the soul. We afterwards learned that the enemy had gotten a little foothold among them by his artfulness, but think they are making use of the proper means to get him out again.—Here we had two meetings. Lodged with brother Zeigler and with brother Buchalew.

Next morning, the 12th, went to Middle branch, under the care of Elder Solomon Garber. Had meeting here at 10 o'clock. After meeting baptized four. Here they have had quite an increase this summer. In the afternoon, at 3 o'clock, met at Dayton, and in the evening at Pleasant Run meeting-house.

On the morning of the 13th we went to Green Mount. Here we met old brother Benjamin Bowman who is in his 87th year, and says he is still not tired of serving the Lord, but is waiting for his change. Here we had two meetings. Dined with brother Bowman and lodged with brother Benjamin Miller.

14th.—Went to Beaver Creek. This is perhaps the largest congregation in the valley. Brother Martin Miller is the eldest minister here. He is getting feeble in body, but is alive in spirit. Here we again visited the grave of one we learned to love, Elder Daniel Thomas. Leaving the dead we tried to talk to the living to prepare for death. We met in public worship twice with the brethren here. Lodged with widow Thomas.

Leaving this we met on the 13th with the church at Pudding Spring, where we had one meeting. Stayed over night with brother Wengert.

Next morning (16th) went to Mt. Pisgah. In the evening met at a school-house near brother Garber's. Lodged with brother Abraham Garber.

Next morning, piloted by young brother Garber, son of Levi, we met with the brethren at Barren Ridge, in the care of brother Martin Garber. Dined and lodged with brother Martin. Meeting in the evening at same place.

On the morning of the 18th met with the brethren of the brick church, in the afternoon had meeting at brother Reuben Garber's, whose wife was afflicted. Lodged with brother Reuben.

19th.—Met at Pleasant Valley meeting-house, under the oversight of Elder John Miller.

20th.—Having no appointment, and being in the neighborhood of Weyer Cave, we concluded to visit it.—Brother Wampler, with whom we lodged, being formerly from our own neighborhood, accompanied us. Here we saw many wonders and beauties of Nature, also the hand of Nature's God in them all.

On the morning of the 21st we started for the house of brother Isaac Long, elder of the Mill Creek church. Here we had a communion; met about twenty of the ministering brethren—many of whom we had not seen before, they being out in the mountain hunting up the lost sheep when we passed their homes. With the brethren here we realized the truth of the apostle's expression. "As unknown yet well known:" for, although we were strangers in the flesh, yet we were made to feel that we were one in the spirit. Here we also met brother D. C. Moomaw, of Montgomery county, and although we were much crowded, yet I think all felt it was good to be there.

On the 22d we met again at the same place. Dined with brother John Hershberger. Brethren Trostle and Pfoutz stayed at Mill Creek over night, while brother Sayler and I attended a lovefeast at the house of an old sister, where we had a pleasant waiting before the Lord. Met again on the morning of the 23d, and were piloted by our beloved brother John Wine back again to Green Mount, to the house of Elder Jacob Miller, where we spent a pleasant evening and night.

On the morning of the 24th we again parted. Brothers Trostle and Pfoutz stayed at Green Mount for their lovefeast, while brother Sayler and I went to Elder Jacob Wine's for the night, in order to be present at their lovefeast at Flatrock, both on the 25th. Morning came, and with it rain, yet we had a good turnout and a very pleasant meeting, at the close of which we were led to say that the people of Virginia know how to conduct themselves in the house of God. There were two souls added to the Church by baptism.

On the morning of the 26th we left brother Wine's and went to sister Garber's for dinner, and after a season of prayer together, we parted from our aged sister, to meet perhaps, no more in this life. Elder Solomon Garber in company, we journeyed toward Timberville, where we had meeting in the evening. Next morning, the 27th, we met at New Dale at 10 o'clock, and in the evening at Plain's Mill. Lodged with brother S. Meyers. Next morning, 28th, rose early, and after "breaking the fast" we met on the banks of the Shenandoah and immersed brother Meyers' companion. Started for the lovefeast at Linville Creek, which was to commence at 10 o'clock. There we again met our travelling companions, and many brethren, sisters and friends; the largest meeting of the kind I ever was present at. There we realized what the Governor of the feast did at the marriage of Cana, "the best of the wine last." But time hurries us on; the parting moment has come, and now we must bid each other farewell. Oh, that we might all live so that we could spend eternity together in heaven, where no parting sigh is heaved, no farewell tear is shed. I should have said the meeting closed at noon on the 29th. I think there were some persuaded to open the door and have a feast with Jesus, this being what we tried to persuade them to do.

From this place we went to brother Emanuel Hoover's for dinner, and in the evening to Mt. Jackson to meeting. On the evening of the 30th we had meeting near Elder James D. Tabler's; lodged with him over night. On the evening of the 31st, we had meeting in Martinsburg; lodged with brother J. H. Hochenberry.

On the 1st of November we forded the Potomac at Williamsport, dined with brother Joseph Long, and lodged with Elder Leonard Emmert.

On the 2d we dined with brother William McDannel. In the evening reached home safe, and found all well. Many thanks due to the dispenser of all blessings.

We were absent from home one month and one day; made many acquaintances among the brethren; had many pleasant seasons, which we trust we shall remember while life lasts, and the fruits of which we shall perhaps enjoy over on the other shore. Brethren, some of your names I have forgotten, but your acts of kindness and manifestations of love I shall remember. I have written this from memory, having taken no notes of our journey; therefore I may have made some errors; I trust in the main, however, it is correct. Now may the Lord bless and save us all, is my prayer, for Jesus' sake. Amen.

EPHRAIM W. STONER.

Brother Henry:—For the benefit of those who feel an interest in Sabbath-schools, I will give a brief statement of our school, which has now come to a close. As the days are getting shorter, and anticipating bad weather, we thought it expedient to close for the ensuing winter. Then if circumstances are favorable, and the Lord willing, the brethren may resume their duties again in the Sabbath-school room.

The school was under the control of the brethren entirely, and in our estimation, it has thus far been a success. We had one Bible-class and eleven classes in the New Testament. The school was generally well attended, and very good order predominated. The school was carried on by the following programme: A chapter of Scripture was read, a hymn sung, and a prayer offered. Then the general questions were asked, i. e. the superintendent prepared one question out of the Bible for each class, and presented them each Sabbath to be answered on the following Sabbath. The chapter was then read by the scholars, and questions asked from the same by the teachers. After the reading the superintendent also asked questions from the chapter read. Then the general questions were asked, hymn sung, prayer offered, and dismissed. The interest manifested by all in the school was good, and we hope some good may result therefrom.

How pleasant it is to meet together, young and old, to read about our best and eternal interests, and to talk about Jesus. And I think the Sabbath-school a means by which we can instruct the young for the love of Jesus; a place where they can express themselves and become more acquainted in the scriptures. When people meet together, how common it is to talk about things pertaining to this world, and when the subject of religion is introduced all feel too delicate to speak; hence our best interests are too much neglected; whereas in the Sabbath-school we meet for the purpose of talking and reading about our blessed Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, and all are invited to join in this noble work, and hence it creates a lively interest in the young to peruse the scriptures and inform themselves.

Some speak unfavorably of the Sabbath-schools; but we do think if they are carried on right, and in the fear of God, that good will be the result. We look back over the past summer with joy, and can bring up many recollections of pleasant hours spent with the little children, brethren and sisters, in the Sabbath-school room, where we tried to work for Jesus, and to build one another up in the faith. And what little good we have done I hope may be the means of directing some poor soul heavenward. To this end we invoke the blessing of God to rest upon all, that when we lay down this tenement of clay we may all go to heaven, and forever be with the Lord.

S. T. BOSSERMAN.

Dunkirk, Ohio.

Brother Holsinger:—Please allow me to give your readers a short account of our Lovefeast, held in the Conemaugh branch on the 5th of October last. Our meeting commenced at 3 o'clock P. M., at which time there was a reasonable good turn out of people, though not near as many as there were sometimes in years gone by. There was also a reasonable good turn out of members at the communion. We certainly had quite a good meeting, for which we feel thankful to God the giver of all good. We had a sufficient amount of ministers for the occasion; namely, C. G. Lint, Joseph Berkley, Jacob Holsopple, Hiram Musleman of Somerset Co., John W. Brumbaugh of Clover Creek, Leonard Furrey, of Yellow creek, Bedford Co., Jesse P. Hetric, Armstrong Co., and Gideon Rogers, of Dunning's Creek, Bedford Co.—These we think were all the ministers outside of our own congregation; and with the force of preachers, no wonder Satan's kingdom had to tremble. Brethren, we in behalf of the church, thank you for your labor of love. A few words more and we close. We feel like saying to our friends who behaved themselves so well during our meeting, that you were not passed by unnoticed; you have our warmest thanks for your good behaviour; yet you lack one thing, that is, you have failed to give God your heart. Remember this.

STEPHEN HILDEBRAND.

Announcement.

The District Meeting for Kansas and Nebraska will be held in the Eight Mile congregation, Franklin county, Kansas, on the 1st Monday in May, 1872, at the house of brother Daniel Barnhard, one mile north of Centropolis and nine miles north-west of Ottawa. We desire the churches of Kansas and Nebraska all to be represented. There will be preaching on Saturday and Sunday before, in the neighborhood. Those coming by railroad will stop off at Ottawa, and conveyances will be furnished to the place of meeting, by giving timely notice to the writer. Address, Centropolis, Franklin county Kansas.

J. S. KEIM.

Proposed Visits to the Churches.

Lower-Cumberland—Duncanon, Nov. 25th.

Mechanicsburg,	Nov.	27th—ev'n.
Upper Cumberland	"	30th "
Ridge Church,	Dec.	3rd—mor'n
Spring Church,	"	6th — ev'n.
Antietum,	"	9th "
Upper Antietum (Roher's)		12th "

Thence home; prepare for East Coventry, by way of reading and Pottstown, on the 23d of Dec.; stay with the brethren at Coventry, Chester county, Pa, till the 30th.

Thence to Mingo, Montgomery county, stay till the morning of January 4th, 1872.

Then to Norristown, on the morning of the 7th, and on the 8th to Philadelphia; from there home. This will we do, God willing, and we live. I expect some one to accompany me on this eastern trip.

To save comment on those visits, I will give my reason for visiting the churches at this time. In the first place, my time of traveling will soon be over; my object is to impress the mind of my brethren and sisters, as much as I can, to take hold of the commission, to impress or teach the members, that to teach the nations is a church business. Unless we can get this impression upon the members of the church, there is no use to talk about the missionary cause; for it can't go until this is done. Now this is my reason for visiting, to strengthen the brethren in the good cause.

GRABILL MYERS.

School Meeting.

A school meeting was held at this place Nov. 9th by the Brethren, and seven trustees appointed to make arrangements for the establishment of a school, at this point, wholly conducted by brethren; and a meeting was appointed for December 7th 1871, when all the brethren interested in education are desired to be present.—And it is desired that written plans be submitted, for managing and conducting the school, that it may meet the wants of the brethren, and secure their approval and support.

By order of the meeting

O. W. MILLER.

Warsaw, Ind

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with Obnutary Notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

Father, mother, three brothers, and the neighboring little girls weeping. ANNIE MAY is gone! On Wednesday the 20th of September, the tyrant beheld her, in the form of Diptheria. When her mother saw that death was staring her little daughter in the face she thought to grasp her in her arms and run—"but no, I must yield to God?"—On Sunday morning following she was a blooming corpse. The two twin brothers being West were deprived of seeing the sad sight. The angel form in bright glory awaits for us to see. Friends, you have a voice from heaven to speak to you. The body can not see or hear; "he that has ears to hear let him hear." The subject was the only surviving daughter of friend Joseph and sister Mary SOLENBERGER, of Lower Cumberland, Pa. Aged 11 years 8 months 5 days. Religious exercises by the Brethren. Text, "If the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself to the battle?"

Twenty-two days later, by contagion, at the same place CHESTER W, TROSTLE aged 5 years 8 months and 19 days, cousin of Annie may. Doting liitle son of Susan Trostle (widow) and youngest brother of 4 sons and 5 daughters. Friends the Lord is calling you. Text, "In Rama was there a voice heard, lamentation," &c.

Adam Beelman.

Died, in the Sandy Church, Stark county, Ohio, on the 27th of September, 1871, our beloved brother MICHAEL BOWMAN, aged 85 years, 9 months and 11 days. He leaves a companion (a sister in the church) and many friends and connections to mourn their loss. Brother Bowman was a faithful member of the church for over 50 years. Shortly before he died he called the Elders of the church and was anointed. On the 20th his remains were followed to their last resting-place by a large number of relatives and friends.

Funeral occasion improved by brother David Byers, from 2d Timothy 4: 7, 8.

The text was selected by our aged brother himself as his funeral text; also, the 598 hymn.

S. B. STUCKEY.

In the Big Creek congregation, Wayne Co. Illinois, Sept. 30th, JOHN EZRA, son of brother—and sister Delilah FORNEY, aged one year five months and ten days. He has crossed to the other side, to meet those who have gone before, and stands waiting for loving friends to follow him to his happy house, where he will enjoy that health and strength of body that he never knew here. Funeral services by old Daniel Neher to a respectable audience of friends and relatives, from Mark 10; 15, 16.

WM. PULLEY.

Near Cambridge, Lancaster county, Pa. JOHN MYERS elder brother to the writer, aged 90 years 5 months 9 days.

ISAAC MYERS.

Mifflinburg, Pa.

Departed this life on the 5th day of September, MARY NICHOLSON, aged 51 years. She was the mother of seven children, two had gone before, and five are still living to mourn their loss. She lived in the faithful discharge of her duties, and was a consistent member of the church until the day of her departure.

In the St. Joseph branch, August 3d, sister MARY RHODES, wife of brother John Rhodes, in the 72d year of her age. Funeral services by Elder Jacob Miller and the writer.

C. WINGER.

In East Coventry, Chester county, Pa., on the 31st of May, from Catarrh Fever, ADA H., infant daughetr of brother John Y. and sister Mary A. Eisenberg, aged 6 months and 9 days. Ada has gone to dwell with the angels.

In East Coventry, Chester county, Pa., on the 5th of July, from the effects of Scarlet Fever, FREDDIE ISETT, only son of brother John Y. and sister Mary A. Eisenberg, aged 5 years 5 months and 16 days. Gone, but not forgotten.

Freddie was much beloved by all who knew him. In all his afflictions, he bore them very patiently for six months, still hoping to join them in their duties, (for a very manly boy he was.) But God saw fit to remove him to a better world than this, where sickness and death never enter. It seems almost impossible for us to cherish the thought that we shall see his face no more in this world. We miss him daily; but still do not sorrow as those without hope. He has gone to that world of happiness, as his last words were: "I am coming—I'll meet you (meaning his little sister) in that happy land." He leaves dear parents, a kind sister, and many friends to mourn their sad loss.

Services by brothers Isaac Price and Peter Hollowbush, from Luk 12. 40.

AN UNCLE.

Died, in the Lickcreek Congregation, Owen county, Ind., October 4th, 1871, Elder JACOB SOMMERS, aged 77 years, 6 months and 1 day,

Funeral services by Elder Hochstetler, Daniel Summer and the writer, to a large congregation of people, from 2 Timothy 4: 7, 8. The disease not known, as he died suddenly—being sick only several hours. He is supposed to have been born in Fayette county, Pa. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, and afterwards married Martha Ocherman—his only wife, who is still living. He emigrated to Tuscarawas county, Ohio, with his family, about 1831 or '32, where he became a member and a minister of Sugarcreek Congregation, where he ministered many years. In 1853 he moved to Owen county, Ind., where he was ordained as an Elder of the church, and remained faithful until death. He lived with his companion over 50 years; was the father of thirteen children—three sons and ten daughters; raising them all, and also an adopted daughter. Two of the daughters are dead. He was the grand-father of 102 children, and great grand-father of 36. Of the former, 18 are dead, and of the latter 8. His descendants number 151, of whom 23 are dead. This calculation was made three years ago; at this date, the number is much greater.

Our old deceased father and brother has not labored very much among us for the last three or four years, on account of a pain in his hip, which prevented him from getting around much, but he would still encourage us whenever an opportunity offered. And we do truly hope that he has fought the good fight.

Brethren, sisters and friends: Let us pause and think. Have we enlisted under the banner of King Jesus? are we soldiers in the army of the Saints? are we equipped with the whole armor of faith, hope and love? Those who are not, should obtain them, that we may all fight that good fight; all keep the faith; all finish our course—so that we may all obtain that crown of glory laid by for the Saints.

Written by request of the friends of the deceased.

DAVID CULLER.

In the Salamony Congregation, Huntington county, Ind., MILTON FRANKLIN, only child of brother Samuel and sister Lovina HOOVER, aged 2 years, 7 month and 19 days Funeral services by David Bare and David Krider

A. H. SNOWBERGER.

In the Sandy Creek congregation, Preston county, West Va., September 29th, in the twenty-seventh year of her age, sister LUCINDA THOMAS, daughter of John J. and Lydia Thomas. She had a lingering disease. She was sick for about one year, but only confined to her bed for six months, helpless as a child. The suffering she endured with rheumatism no tongue can tell, which at last turned to consumption. She was a beloved member of the church of the Brethren. She died in good faith, saying that she was willing to go at the Savior's call, for she had a home in heaven. If the Lord only call her home. The day she left this world she called father, mother, brothers and sisters to her bed, and reached out her hand and talked to them, bidding them farewell. Funeral servides by the writer, from Rev. 14: 13 verse.

JOHN S. HOOK.

MARRIED.

By the undersigned, on the 5th of October, Mr. JACOB ANGUS and Miss RACHEL RIPPLE, all of Cambria county, Pa.

STEPHEN HILDEBRAND.

By the undersigned, at his residence, Nov. 9th, Mr. AUSTIN C. HANN and Miss JANE MCGRAW. Both of Fredericksburg, Blair county, Pa.

S. A. MOORE.

LIST OF MONEYS RECEIVED for SUBSCRIPTION, BOOKS, etc.

John Heise,	$1.50	Jacob Babr,	3.00
M. J. Thomas,	1.00	Alex Evans,	1.00
D. W. Wingert,	1.45	T. B. Wenrick,	2.00
S. H. Swigart,	2.10	Peter Eby,	75
E. Brumbaugh,	1.35	Henry Dilling,	75
Jos. Connell,	7.00	Jacob Bare,	1.50
John Hocking	1.50	S. P. Brumbaugh,	3.00
C. Bucher,	1.50	Wm. S. Meyers,	1.50
Mrs. Lydia Bair,	1.00	Susan Eaby,	1.50

Pittsburg and Connellsville R. R.

TIME TABLE.

Commencing on Monday, October 10th, 1871, at 2 o'clock, P. M.

EASTWARD.			WESTWARD.
Cum Mail	Ex.	STATIONS.	Cin. Exp.	Cum Mail
A. M.	P. M.		A. M.	P. M.
6 50	8 00	Pittsburg	10 15	6 10
10 21	9 57	Bradford	8 05	2 30
10 35	10 10	Connellsville	8 00	2 25
1 20	11 55	Mineral Point	5 52	11 22
1 40	12 15	Garret	5 38	11 02
157	1228	DALE CITY	526	1045
3 16	1 28	Bridgeport	4 15	9 25
4 00	2 00	Cumberland	3 40	8 10
P. M.	A. M.		P. M.	A. M.

BURNED OUT.

I would respectfully inform the trade that my Laboratory at 30 North Dearborn street was destroyed by the great fire. Even the contents of my iron safe, which still is buried in the smouldering ruins, are doubtless lost, which under ordinary circumstances might have been saved by water. I am now located at No. 690 West-Indiana-St. Orders for Dr. Fahrney's BLOOD CLEANSER OR PANACEA can be filled in a very few days, having ordered an outfit by telegraph from Dr. P. FAHRNEY'S BROS. & CO., Waynesboro' Pa. All those knowing themselves indebted to me will please remit as soon as possible.

Respectfully,
P. FAHRNEY, M. D.,
No. 690 West Indiana St.

45—2 ins.

A Card.

Drs. D. Fahrney & Son, Uroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.

7-10-1 yr. pd.

Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER.
DALE CITY, PA.

Advertisements.

WE will admit a limited number of selec advertisements at the following rates
One insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.
No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be nserted on any considerations

DR. U. M. BEACHLEY'S

FAMILY MEDICAL DEPOT.

OFFICE AND DRUG STORE,

ON MAIN Street,

DALE CITY, Somerset Co., Pa.

To Advertisers—All persons who contemplate making contracts with newspapers for the insertion of Advertisements should send to

GEORGE P. ROWELL & CO.

for a Circular, or enclose 50 cents for their One Hundred Page Pamphlet, containing Lists of 3,000 Newspapers and estimates, showing the cost of advertising, also many useful hints to advertisers, and some account of the experiences of men who are known as Successful Advertisers. This firm are proprietors of the American Newspaper Advertising Agency, and are possessed of unequaled facilities for securing the insertion of advertisements in all Newspapers and Periodicals at lowest rates.

41 PARK ROW, N. Y.

7—45—50.

FOUR MONTHS FOR 50 CTS.

GREAT SUCCESS

AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKER,

An Evangelical Undenominational Monthly, for PARENTS, TEACHERS and SCHOLARS. With Sunday School Lessons, Exposition, Illustrations, Questions Blackboard Exercises, &c., for each Sabbath.

This publication is designed to develop a greater depth and spirituality in the Sunday School work, looking beyond methods to results.

Terms for 1872—$1,50 a year in Advance. CLUBS of TEN or more (to one address) will receive 6 Lesson Papers, free with each Magazine monthly. SCHOLLARS LESSON PAPER, monthly, with Lessons for every Sabbath, 12 cts. a year; or per hundred $9 a year. Send 10 cents for Specimen copy, Lesson Paper, and your own List of Lessons for 1872, to

J. W. McINTYRE, ST., LOUIS, Mo.

BOUND COPIES for 1870 and 1871, $2 each, postpaid. Lesson Papers on Gospel of Matthew for 1870, and on Gospel of John for 1871, same price as 1872.

Oct. 15th, Nov. 14 15

TYRONE BANK,

TYRONE, PA.

This Bank, intending to do a general banking business, solicits accounts from Banks' Bankers and others. Collections made on all points. Interest allowed on DEPOSITS left on time. Paper discounted on liberal terms.

Wm. P. Orbison,	D. P. Gwin,
John Scott,	H. G. Fisher,
Thomas Fisher,	J. H. Glazier,
Wm. Dorris,	G. C. Wilkins,
G W. Garretson,	and others.

BURLINGTON.

Leaving the East and arriving at Chicago or Indianapolis, how shall we reach the West? The best Line is acknowledged to be the C. B. and Q., joined together with the B. & M. Railroad by the Iron Bridge at Burlington, and called the Burlington Route.

The main line of the Route running to Omaha, connects with the great Pacific Roads, and forms to-day the leading route to California. The Middle Branch, entering Nebraska at Plattsmouth, passes through Lincoln, the State Capital, and will this year be finished to Fort Kearney, forming the shortest route across the Continent by over 100 miles.

Another branch of the B. M., diverging at Red Oak, falls into a line running down the Missouri through St. Joe to Kansas City, and all Kansas. Passengers by this route to Kansas, see Illinois, Southern Iowa, and Missouri, and, by a slight divergence, can see Nebraska also.

Lovers of fine views should remember the Burlington Route, for its towns "high-gleaming from afar"—its tree-fringed streams—its rough bluffs and quarries—its corn-ocean stretching over the prairies further than eye can reach.

Land-buyers will be sure to remember it, for they have friends among the two thousand who have already bought farms from Geo. S. Harris, the Land Commissioner of the B. & M. R. R. at Burlington, Iowa, or among the four thousand home steaders and pre-emptors who last year filed claims in the Lincoln Land Office, where "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm."

1780 1871

ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK?

Use Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

An Alterative and Cathartic, or Tonic and Purge combined, for diseases arising from bad blood; such as Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Live Complaint, Jaundice, Erysipelas, Worms, Chills and Fever, Scrofula, Pimples, Tetter, &c. Try It.

Established 1780 In package form. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form—which was brought to its present state of preservation and perfection some years later, by Dr. P. Fahrney, Chicago, Ill's, who conducts the trade west of Ohio. Great reputation! Many Testimonials! Ask for that prepared at Waynesboro, Pa., and Chicago, Ill's. Beware of imitations. Genuine retails at $1.25 per bottle. Druggists and Medicine dealers sell it.

Dr. P. Fahrney's "Health Messenger" gives the history and uses of the BLOOD CLEANSER testimonials, and other information, sent free of charge. Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.
WAYNESBORO, PA.

Wm. M. Lloyd, Altoona, Pa. D. T. Caldwell, Tyrone Pa.

LLOYD, CALDWELL & CO.,
BANKERS,

Receive monies on deposit, and pay interest if left 6 months, at 4 per cent per annum, or 5 per cent. if left one year.

Special contracts made with parties acting a administrators, executors, guardians, and persons holding monies in trust. Dealers in every description of Stocks and Bonds.—Government Securities made a speciality.

Gold and Silver bought and sold, and a general Banking business transacted.

Universal Guide for Cutting Garments.

By which every family may cut its own garments for men and boys, of twenty six different sizes; for Coats, Pants, Vests, and Shirts, and Ladies' Dress Bodies. Agents wanted to sell State, County, and Family Rights. For Particulars address MILLER & QUINN, Tyrone, Blair Co., Pa.

J. S. THOMAS, & CO.

WHOLESALE GROCERS

and

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

No 305 RACE St. ABOVE 3RD, PHILADELPHIA, N. B. Country Produce taken in exchange for goods or sold on commission.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine, with Drop Feed, new Take-up, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted FIRST CLASS, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted traveling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $200 per month. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. Co.
33 East Union Square, 17th St., N. York

BOOKS

For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price, $4

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol., $2.25. Indispensable.

Life at Home; or the Family and its Members.—Including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed. The Altar in the House, etc. By Wm. Aikman, $1.50;

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. THOMPSON. Fancy Cloth. $1.00.

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand-book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners, with a Chart for recording the sizes of the different Organs of the Brain, in the Delineation of Character, with upwards of 170 Engravings. Muslin, $1.25.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50:

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By W. PITTINGER. $1.50

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Beautifully Illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth, gilt, beveled boards. Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75 cents.

Any of the above sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

The Phrenological Journal, an Illustrated, First-class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL and CHRISTIAN FAMILY COMPANION together for $3.50, or with the PIOUS YOUTH for $3.00. We commend the JOURNAL to all who want a good Family Magazine, and who don't?

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and State written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to,

H. R. HOLSINGER,
Dale City, Somerset Co., Pa.

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING

One copy, post paid,	0 75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post pain,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid.	1.25
Per dozen " "	10.30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post pain,	.50
Per dozen, " "	5.50

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

COMPANION, Volume 3, bound post paid, $2.7
Reserved at the office, 2.25
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid, 1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid 1.40
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA. $1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid, .75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder, Single copy, post paid, .75
12 copies, by Express, 7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid, .45
Browns Pocket Concordance, .60
German & English Testaments, .75

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.35

32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION. 25

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Certificates &c.

MarriageCertificate, per doz., post paid, 0.30,
CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP. Per doz, 0.20
TRACTS.—RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE, 12 pages five cents single copy; thirty cents a doz.

All orders should be accompanied with the money, and the name of person, postoffice county & state written in unmistakable letter

THE PIOUS YOUTH.

A MONTHLY PUBLICATION

Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.

One dollar a year in advance.

THE

Christian Family Companion

Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements; that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
DALE CITY Somerset Co., Pa.

Christian Family Companion

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum

VOLUME VII. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, NOV. 28, 1871. NUMBER 47.

The Voyagers.

BY T. NIELD.

They launch their boats on the rushing tide,
And they spread their sails of snowy white
As away they start for the other side,
Where the land is bathed in golden light.
Some tiny sails are thrown to the wind,
And soon they reach the other shore,
For a narrow neck in the stream they find;
And the heavenly breezes waft them o'er.
They touch the land and their sails they reef;
The trip is short, and the labor brief.

Some launch their boats where the stream is wide.
Their oars they man, and their sails unreef,
As away they dash o'er the hurrying tide,
From a world they know to a world they seek.
Away they go—and their hearts are brave;
Away they go—and their nerves are strong.
They mount the crest of the white-capped wave,
And find the passage is hard and long.
Till the beetling crags of death are past,
When the voyage so weary ends at last.

Anchor they cast on the golden strand.
And lightly step to the sun-lit shore.
Eye looks into eye, and hand grasps hand
Of those who have made the trip before.
They parted upon the stream of time,
Amid the struggle of wind and wave;
They meet for aye in the peaceful clime
Where storm and tempest are left behind.
There the wicked shall never molest;
There the weary are ever at rest.

Some launch their boats on the sweeping tide,
Where the wavelets trip with crystal feet,
And hope to find that the stream is wide,
And long the joy that now is sweet;
But the wild winds leave their secret lair,
And the red sun finds an inky shroud,
While horror shakes the affrighted air
As thunder bursts from the low'ring cloud.
And yet, as their frail crafts pitch and creak,
No effort they make, no port they seek.

Away they drift with the restless tide:
Away they drift! and the breakers roar.
And as still they hope the stream is wide,
They founder upon an unknown shore.
Destruction lurks in the bursting surge.
As darkness mantles that unknown shore,
And the sad winds chant the dolorous dirge
Whose echoes shall moan for evermore.
The voyage was long, and yet too short
For those who shall never reach the port.

For the Companion.

Stray Thoughts.

One would suppose from the general appearance of things, that those who can make the soberest appearance, and present the longest faces, are the Christians of the present day; and any one not coming up to this rule is adjudged as no Christian.

Others suppose themselves good Christians because they appear odd, and talk odd, and do odd from all others. These, without a question of doubt, in their estimation are the Christian man and woman.

Others, again, lay claim to this high and honorable trait of character because of a long continued practice of habit, or custom, which they adopted in their early life, and, per consequence, all that do not just comport to this same practice cannot be Christians.

Again there are those that are ready to doubt every one's Christian habits and feelings, just because their houses are not shaped and finished like this or that brother's.

Here comes one dashing along with a sprightly steed or two, with silver trimmed harness and a most an excellently furnished buggy. It makes my very heart feel sad to think that he claims to be a Christian. Well, his horses I could match, and I do think mine are a little faster; my neighbor thinks so too. Just think—silver mounted harness! Why does he not use his yankee harness, or some other plain harness, as I do? Have we not reasons to doubt his or their Christian virtues?

It is no trouble to be a farmer and a Christian; but for a mechanic, merchant, or any professional man to be a good man is almost out of the question. Just think of the many chances they have to cheat the farmer! The mechanic slight's his work; the merchant shortens his measurement, &c., &c., These things the farmer cannot indulge in, and hence the temptation are not so great with the farmer. His measuring or weighing apparatus is always right. The banker is entirely out of the question. He makes himself a usurist—takes 10 or 12 per cent for his money, while he gives but five or six. Persons of this stamp cannot possibly be considered Christians. This is doubly wrong, from the fact who that there are but few capitalists and farmers can follow this bad example: those that have no money nor credit, and a very few others, do not do so.

They who are all the time talking about, and looking after, the conduct of others must be good! Just think how many sleepless nights they spend, and how many hours they set apart from their daily labor to spend at their neighbor's house to talk about the faults and mistakes of others; always taking good care not to diminish the stories! Who would say that these were not deeply interested in the welfare of others? Had not the apostle Paul made mention of "busy-bodies" we might think them excellent men and women.

Here I shall stop thinking for the present. Perhaps I may see something else to think about, and if so I will present the result before you again. At the close I am thinking about what your thoughts are, concerning my thoughts.

C. G. LINT.

For the COMPANION.

Head Covered.

I see an article in Companion No 44, written by sister Mellinger, on the subject of covering the head, or rather on that of wearing caps. I admire the zeal manifested by the sister, and also the spirit of exhortation by which she exhorts her sisters; and my desire is that she will continue to exhort, not her sisters only, but her brethren too, to be steadfast, and always abounding in the work of the Lord. Paul teaches the Christians to exhort one another, consequently it is our duty to exhort one another; and not our duty only, but also our privilege. But in order to be able to exhort one another profitably, and pleasing in the sight of God, it will be necessary for us to study the holy scriptures, and to have a knowledge of the doctrine taught by Christ and his apostles. It is not sufficient to have faith only, but we are to add to our faith virtue and knowledge. It is possible for us to have a zeal of God, and that zeal may not be according to knowledge. We may be very zealous in the cause of Christ, but if we are not in possession of the doctrine taught in the sacred volume, we will be ignorant of God's righteousness.

Our sister says, "I think a plain cap will separate us from the world, about as much as anything else." On this point of becoming a separate people from the world, I understand that we became a separate people from the world by looking unto Jesus, believing on the Lord Jesus Christ, repenting of all our sins, obeying God, and having our hearts purified by obeying the truth; but to become a separate people by the wearing of caps is an idea that I have never learned in the word of God, that anciently the good and pious women were in possession of veils, and that the woman's hair was given her for a covering, or a veil, as some translators have rendered it; but a command, or an example, for sisters to wear caps I have not found in the Gospel of Christ. Our sister said, that she felt so happy after she put on a cap, that she could have shouted. I have no objection to shouting at proper times; but would say to all my sisters, shout not because you are wearing caps, but rejoice and be exceeding glad when men "speak all manner of evil against you falsely for Christ's sake;" and again, "rejoice that your names are written in heaven." Paul says that every man praying or prophesying, having his head covered dishonoreth his head, (Christ); but every woman that prayeth, or prophesieth with her head uncovered dishonoreth her head," (her husband); 1 Cor. xi. 4, 5. The above is plain. The man is to have his head uncovered, and the woman is to have her head covered, while they are engaged in speaking to the people, or in prayer, or in exhortation; but there is nothing in the scripture quoted above, that will convey the idea that a woman should have her head covered at all times, while engaged in her domestic affairs, any more than that the man should have his head uncovered while he is engaged in cultivating the soil.

J. K. TEETER.

Pleasant Hill, Ohio

For the Companion.

Abstinence.

"Dearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul. 1 Pet. 2 : 11.

The children of God are represented as strangers and pilgrims here on earth, and as having no continuing city here; for they are born for a higher destiny than that of earth, being heirs of life and immortality beyond the tomb. And being such they should cautiously avoid the sin and evil that is prevalent in the world, and live in humble subjection to the principles of the law of life which is in Christ Jesus; for they cannot be the children of God regardless of an abstinence from the lusts and pleasures of sin, but only upon the condition that they live as strangers and pilgrims here on earth, and follow in the footsteps of the Savior, the prince of life, in all things; for they were born, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God which liveth and abideth forever; and have been brought into favor and fellowship with God through the death and suffering of the Lord Jesus; and therefore they should live as new-born creatures, and abstain from those things wherein they had pleasure when they were out of Christ, and aliens from the grace of God. For man cannot be a child of grace and an heir of life eternal while his heart is infected with the corruption of fleshly lusts and desires; neither can he possess the spirit of Christ as long as his mind is inflamed with the love of the world and worldly things. He can no more be a disciple of Christ, and a friend to the world; then light and darkness can dwell together; for fellowship with the one excludes from the fellowship of the other. The more we lust after the corruptible things of the flesh, the farther we get away from Christ, and the deeper we become involved in the mire of sin and corruption. Hence they who have been purged from their former sins and iniquities, and have been made partakers of Christ, should ever strive to live in newness of life—in subjection to the mind of the Spirit, that they may preserve their souls pure and unspotted from the world; that they may be "blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation;" among whom they shine as lights in the world. They should no more lust after the unhallowed things of the flesh, wherein they had pleasure when they were dead in trespasses and sins; but they should long after the things of the Spirit, and have nothing in view but the glory of God and their final deliverance from the wrath to come. Now are they made partakers of Christ, if they hold the beginning of their confidence steadfast unto the end; if they walk as the children of the light and of the day, and have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, which come to naught. In all things they should approve themselves as the children of God; in much patience and long-suffering, in gentleness and forbearance, in doing the will of the Lord from the heart, and in abstinence from the lusts of the flesh which war against the soul. They should strive to live holy and without blame before God in love, and manifest to the world, and to all around them, that they are the chosen people of the Lord, through obedience to his word; having their conversation honest among the Gentiles, that whereas they speak against them as evil doers, they may, by their good works which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of visitation. For they have been bought with a price; with the precious blood of Christ as of a lamb without spot or blemish; and therefore they should live as new-born creatures, and put on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provisions for the flesh to fulfil the lusts thereof, that they may retain the favors and fellowship of God in the life that now is; and eventually appear before their sovereign Judge uncondemned with the world.

S. K. Shellabergeh

Trust and Look Upward.—The Lord has died; despond not. The Lord is exalted; fear not. The Lord returneth; delay not. Believe, and that with all simplicity and all joy. Believe, and bring before Him the wants of thine own heart and daily life, the daily requirements of thy soul; trust and look upward. Believe, and bring before him the wants of the world, and still trusting, look upward. "The night cometh, and also the morning." Soon the Lord shall return, and then shalt welcome Him, and all that dwell therein. Then occupy till I come; and if before that day dawn, thou art called to rest, lie down to sleep in hope of the blessed resurrection, and the coming of the Lord with ten thousand of his saints. Even so, Lord Jesus, come quickly.—Dr. Edersheim.

For the Companion.

Our Good Shepherd.

Who of us can say with that degree of confidence with which David expressed himself in this, the 23d Psalm, —"The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want?" Happy, yes truly happy, indeed is every one who can feel under all the various circumstances of this life, such a sweet comfort within. Oh! should we not then cry out, as did one of old, with tears, and say, "Lord I believe! help thou mine unbelief! and also with the apostle say with an humble heart, "Lord, increase our faith."

Brethren, in what a delightful description does David, in this most beautiful Psalm, present the blessedness of true religion? Does he not express himself in the whole Psalm in nothing but the language of joy and hope, and of entire confidence? He felt that God, his heavenly Father, was his protector in all his difficulties, trials and troubles of whatever kind in this life. He looked back over his past life, and saw in days gone by how he had delivered him from his many troubles and trials which he was made to pass through, and he felt though he might be exposed to all the storms of life, everything might be dark around him, friends might prove untrue and deceive him, but the God in whom he trusted will never leave nor forsake him. And why? Because he had amidst all a peace within, which, as the world could not give, it could not take away. Thus could the Psalmist say in this expressive language —"The Lord is my shepherd." What an important lesson is here taught us? We are placed in the same world; our feet tread upon the same earth; we are subject to the same trials, troubles, temptations, and difficulties of every kind. And can we always say as he did, under all these vicissitudes of life, "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want."

But in examining this subject, it will be, perhaps, well for us to examine two points: First, the character which God bears to his people as a shepherd; and second, the importance of our ascertaining each for himself, whether we are a part of his flock.

First, then, to consider, God's care for his people, and life, character, and example of his Son who became our "good shepherd."

We must turn to the Bible. We there find this "good shepherd" spoken of by the prophet Ezekiel: "For thus saith the Lord God, behold I, even I, will both search my sheep and seek them out. As a shepherd seeketh out his flock in the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered, so will I seek out my sheep, and will deliver them out of all places where they have been scattered in the cloudy and dark day * * *. I will feed my flock, and I will cause them to lie down, saith the Lord God. I will seek that which was lost, and bring again that which was driven away, and will bind up that which was broken, and will strengthen that which was sick. xxxiv. 11–16. And by the prophet Isaiah, "He shall feed his flock like a shepherd, he shall gather the lambs with his arm and carry them in his bosom." xl. 11. "He shall not cry, nor lift up, nor cause his voice to be heard in the streets. A bruised reed shall he not break, and the smoking flax shall he not quench; he shall bring forth judgment unto truth. * * * To open the blind eyes, to bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness out of the prison house," lxii. 2, 3, 7.

Thus was the promised Messiah, our "good shepherd," prophesied many hundred years before his birth; and how truly did he follow all that was predicted. He is spoken of in the New Testament by the Apostle Paul as "The great shepherd;" by Peter as "The chief shepherd;" and by himself as the "Good shepherd." And he had a just right to claim this title, for he has sealed it with his own blood; for "he gave his life for his sheep." He purchased for us, through his sufferings and death, eternal life. We all are "as sheep gone astray, having no shepherd; but if we return to his fold we are called "the sheep of his pasture." Being ignorant of the right way, prone to wander, exposed to innumerable dangers, surrounded by enemies which would find us an easy prey, we much need an unerring guide and powerful protector. Such is our "good shepherd." God the Father, who is wise to direct and patient to guard, and strong to deliver. "He is called the shepherd of Israel, that neither slumbereth nor sleepeth." Should we not, then, be willing to hear the voice of this good shepherd and to follow "whithersoever he goeth, through evil as well as good report." Has he not been faithful to the charge that was given him? Did he not do his Father's will, for which he came? Has he not shown himself deserving of our fullest confidence? We cannot go astray so long as we listen to his voice, follow him in all things, obey all his commandments. We cannot be injured by Satan, (only by a sinful, wicked and gainsaying world.) He has promised to be with us in six troubles, and in the seventh he will not leave us; he has promised to meet with us when we meet together in His name; yea, he has promised through the journey of this life, if we trust in Him and obey Him, never to leave nor forsake us; and he will be with us to comfort in the solemn hour of death, and in that hour will refresh us with his heavenly consolation. This we have seen in the departure of his true and faithful followers. To use the language of the apostle, "He is made of God, unto us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption, God hath reconciled us to himself by him." Oh! then, is he not our good shepherd? Who would not desire to be one of his sheep, and to enter his fold? He is the way—the door by which we must enter into the heavenly fold; and we are saved if we enter through him and obey and follow him. We are then his sheep; and then saith the apostle, "There is, therefore, now no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit." "My sheep," says he, "hear my voice and, I know them, and (mark) they follow me; and I give unto them eternal life and they shall never perish, neither shall any pluck them out of my hands." John x. 27, 28. Such is the character which our "good shepherd" bears to all who are his sheep.

Now let us, in the second place, examine and make some little inquiry as to who are his flock and whether we are a part of his flock.

As to who belongs to his flock the answer must be,—all real, penitent, and true believers, who obediently follow his foot-steps and example, abstaining from every appearance of evil, denying themselves of all ungodliness and worldly lusts, and live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world. (Titus 2:12.) These undoubtedly are his sheep, and belong to his fold. They have entered in through the door into the fold

Now, perhaps, some may say well, brother, you have made the way very narrow. So I have, and I cannot make it any wider by the word of God, and I often feel condemned when I do not walk in it, or please or gratify the flesh—step a little aside. I make this true confession so that while I try to encourage my brother or my sister, and those that are enquiring the way to zion, I encourage myself; thus we fulfill the admonition of the apostle to "admonish one another;" for it is, I fear, a lamentable fact that a great majority of mankind do not hear the voice nor obey or follow our "good shepherd," but take delight in erring and straying from his ways; they, therefore, cannot say with the Psalmist, "The Lord is my shepherd." We must, therefore, examine our own hearts by the unerring word of God as to whether we have entered his fold.—Christ, as we have already told you, is "the door; it is through faith in him, and true obedience that we gain access to God, our heavenly Father. It is not merely by being born in a Christian country, or attaching ourselves to the church, or calling ourselves his disciples that will give us an entrance into that "City, the holy Jerusalem," which John saw "descending out of heaven from God," and which has been prepared for the saints, the people of God. We are informed in God's word that there shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie; but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life, (Rev. 21: 27.) And "he that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son hath not life;" 1 John 5: 12.

We are by nature lost sheep; we have turned every one to his own way; but God the Father hath laid on him—our good shepherd, his son—the iniquity of us all; "for he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him;" 2 Cor. 5: 21. So then, by returning to him, and entering the fold by the door we are saved; and we go in and out and find pasture to our souls.

Bear with me, dear reader, while I very briefly state who are not his flock. The backslider in heart, the proud and wordly-minded, theatre-going and pleasure seeking professing Christian "who love the uppermost seats in the synagogues and greetings in the markets;" (Luke 11:43,) whom the Savior compares to "whited sepulchres, which indeed appears beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones;" (Mat 23:27,) "wolves in sheeps clothing," bearing an outward appearance of religion, but inwardly hating it, and denying it by their walk and conversation.—On all such the Savior pronounces a "woe." We then feel to say, on the authority of God's word, woe to those parents who bring up their children merely for church honors, and not to honor Christ, and to follow in true obedience our good shepherd."

But whatever may be the variety of distinctions here between our fellow men in this life, whatever the degrees of virtue or vice, there shall, at the last day, be but two great classes, in one or the other of which we must and will be found. "When the son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats; and he shall set his sheep on his right hand, but the goats on his left. Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand: Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world * * *. Then shall he say also unto them on his left hand, depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels; Mat. xxiv. 31–41. Such will be the final issue of our present state. Let us then endeavor to walk in that narrow path which our good shepherd has marked out, and has led the way and bade us, as sheep, to follow. We shall then be able to enter in at the strait gate; for many, the Savior tells us, "shall seek to enter in and shall not be able." Let us then enter into a careful examination fo ourselves, and let that solemn and most important question be asked by each one, shall I be saved?

ISAIAH G HARLEY

Philadelphia, Pa.

The moment that is lost, is lost forever.

For the Companion.

Sabbath-schools.

I have a great desire to contribute something for the benefit of Sabbath-schools; but I feel my inability to do justice to the cause. All I know I learned, and am still learning from every essay I read on the subject.

The first Sabbath-school I knew of among the Brethren was superintended by brother Jonathan Kessler, of Bond county, Ill. It was about thirty years ago. He was then living in Miami county, Ohio—my neighbor.

My experience is only with infant classes—such as cannot read in the New Testament, so I will just say what my ideas are as to what is most useful to them, to make them good children.

They ought to be asked some questions that such little ones can answer; such as what day of the week is this? How many days are in a week, and what are their names?

They should be taught such Bible history as may be useful to them; such as the, disobedience of our first parents, the suffering, trouble and misery it entailed; and the atonement made by Jesus, so that we can again have access to the tree of life in heaven; the deeds of Jesus, where and by whom he was baptized, and the miracles he performed. They should be told of the promise to those who are obedient to their parents, "That they may live long and see good days." Teach them particularly to be merciful to all—to everything over which they have any control—so that God may be merciful to them. Tell them that God sees all they do—that not a sparrow can fall to the ground without his notice. Apprise them of the evils of pride in its various forms. Instruct them in the history of the patriarchs, Joseph, Moses, Joshua, Samuel, Daniel, the Hebrew children mocking Elisha. Select such portions as are most useful and best suited to children; and present in such a way that they can understand.

Do not tell such little children too much at one time. When you see they are tired, close.

Instruct them to be quiet at their meals, and to remember who gives them food. Teach them, "Now I lay me down to sleep," to be said on going to rest, and also the Lord's prayer. Repeat only a few words at a time, thus, "Our Father"—let all the children repeat this—then, "who art in heaven," and so on.

I hope to see many essays on Sabbath-schools, so that the best rules can be selected; for what we learn in childhood is never forgotten. No sacrifice is too great to bestow on the rising generation to make the world better than it is now.

HANNAH KNOUFF.

Clearfield, Iowa.

Infant Baptism.

The question is sometimes asked, "Did not circumcision bring those that received it into the covenant of grace?" No, in no case whatever. The covenant of grace is the covenant—the everlasting covenant.—Nothing can bring into that covenant but the grace of God in Jesus Christ: and that existed from the beginning of the world, and righteous Abel enjoyed its blessing. It has been an everflowing river, conveying its saving functions to the people of God through all ages, and all dispensations. Enoch, Noah, and thousands of others, though uncircumcised, enjoyed the blessedness of the covenant of grace before Abraham was born.—Circumcision therefore, is no part of the covenant of grace; and that it did not bring Abraham into it is undeniably clear. For he enjoyed it and all its blessedness many years before circumcision was instituted; when he was, says the apostle "not in circumcision, but in uncircumcision;" Romans 4: 10.

And that this rite did not bring children into the covenant of grace is equally evident from the preaching of the holy prophets and apostles, and of Jesus Christ himself, to those who had received that rite, and who are addressed as persons entirely destitute of the grace of God, and being by nature the children of wrath, even as others; Eph 2: 3, Acts 7: 51, 52.

In what sense, then, is circumcision. A seal of the covenant, if it had not this efficacy? It is common to denote circumcision as a seal of the covenant. It is no where so denominated in the word of God. In one place, Roman 4: 11, it is called a seal of righteousness;" but except the whole verse be cited, the sense of the apostle is lost. The words are these: "And he (that is Abraham,) received the sign of circumcision, a seal of the righteousness of the faith which he had, yet being uncircumcised." In no other place is circumcision called a seal. Let the advocates of infant baptism show it if they can. Let them look at the above passage, and work out of it infant baptism.—Circumcision is here spoken of, not in reference to its general administration to the Jewish nation; but to Abraham in particular. It is spoken of, not as it might be received by a person destitute of vital piety; for it is called "A seal of the righteousness of faith." It is not spoken of as sealing what was in the future to be bestowed or enjoyed, but a blessing long before possessed; that is, "faith which he had, yet being uncircumcised." I appeal to the serious judgment of every candid person, what a perversion of the sense of God's word it must be, to call circumcision, from this passage," a seal of the covenant, or a seal of righteousness, thereby referring to the national administration of the rite to the Jews, and as sealing to them the blessings of salvation, when the apostle so guardedly expresses himself as sealing only what a true and living faith had previously obtained. This passage can apply to none but to Abraham, and those of his posterity who, like their progenitor possessed convertingand saving faith.

ELDER H. KOONTZ.

(To be continued.)

For the Companion.

Sleepy Christians.

What a sad looking sight it is to go to church and see a number of christians slumbering while the minister is preaching to saints and to sinners of time and eternity? This we often observe; brethren slumbering in church; but seldom sisters or ministers. I fear the object of christian assemblage is often forgotten, by becoming habituated to church slumbers. We are to present our bodies a living sacrifice, not a sleepy one; holy, acceptable, which is our reasonable service. I doubt whether an individual slumbering while divine services are in session is very acceptable in the sight of God. His worship requires the listening ear, the seeing eye, and a thinking mind, with the proper understanding from the heart, practicable. Not very strange to see individuals labor six days from twilight-morn till twilight-eve; but to-morrow will be the Lord's day, and they will be seen in church, likely, with their heads resting on the back of the seats or sitting erect slumbering — pitiful, sight indeed, while the minister, who has labored all the week hard as they, and studied his discourse during the night, and on the Sabbath his field of labor is as broad as the earth, deep as the grave, high as heaven, and long as eternity, and while he is exploring eternity's field, can his brethren be at ease in church slumbers, and not be discommended by the great head of the church?

JACOB HILDERBRAND.

North Liberty, Ind.

A Conversation on the Passover between a Brother and Clergyman.

The clergyman taught his congregation that the Brethren do still keep the Jewish passover. After meeting they came to the place for night lodging, and then the brother took the Bible and said to the clergyman: "Now let us see whether the Brethren hold the Lord's supper as the Jews held the passover."

Do the Brethren take a lamb out on the 10th day of the month and keep it until the 14th day of the month?

"I cannot tell," said the clergyman.

"Do they keep the supper but once a year? Do they strike their door post with the blood, and do they roast a lamb with fire, head and legs, with the purtenance thereof? Do they burn with fire that which remains till morning?"

"I cannot tell," said the clergyman.

"Why, then, said the brother, do you teach the people that the Brethren keep the Jewish passover, if you do not know how they keep it?"

"Again, do they have shoes on their feet, and their loins girded, and staves in their hands? No, no, we say Christ's passover or supper, and the Brethren differ as much from the Jewish passover as the sun differs from the moon, or the law from the gospel.

The Jewish passover points back to Egypt; the Lord's passover, or supper, points forward to a spiritual supper in the evening of this world, with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of glory; the communion of bread and wine points back to calvary, where and when Christ's body was crucified and his blood shed.

The night before he was crucified he instituted three gospel ordinances: 1st. Feetwashing; 2d. the Lord's supper; 3d. the communion. Happy are ye if ye know these things and do them. What God has joined together let no man put assunder.

DANIEL LONGENECKER.

Pulpit Blunders.

Preachers should be very careful how they refer to the Old Testament records in their preaching. They sometimes make inexcusable mistakes. Here are two of those blunders. A prominent brother referred to the death of Absalom, and said: "Joab took his sword and cut off his head as he hung in the oak, and he died." The Bible account is that Joab took three darts and thrust him through the heart." 2 Sam. xvi: 41.

Another very much esteemed brother, referring to leprosy as a punishment for sin said: "When David brought home the ark, he laid it on a cart, drawn by two milch cows, on which had never been yoke, and as they went lowing along the way, the ark tottered, and Uzziah put forth his hand to steady it, and God smote him with leprosy," &c. This differs in three respects from the Bible record, viz: Milch cows did not draw the cart, but oxen: Uzzah was the rash man who violated God's law in putting unholy hands on the ark, not Uzziah, who was one of the kings of Judah. Kings xv: 14. Uzzah was smitten with sudden death for his rashness. 2 Sam. vi: 6-8.

THE Sunday-school cause keeps progress with civilization. Its movement westward, with the course of empire, is as rapid as the march of material improvement. During the five months previous to September 1st the American Sunday-school Union organized by its missionaries 39 new Sunday-schools in Northwestern Minnesota, along the line of the Northern Pacific railroad and its branches. Into these schools were brought 1,170 scholars, and 198 teachers were enlisted for their instruction. These missionaries are following so closely the pioneers in this newly opening empire that the young settlements are often provided with the Sunday-school before the school-house is built, but not before the Bible and its civilizing influences are needed.—Selected.

Selected by Emily Armstrong.

My Beloved.

O thou in whose presence
My soul takes delight,
On whom in affliction I call,
My comfort by day,
And my song in the night,
My hope, my salvation, my all.

Where dost thou at noon-tide
Resort with thy sheep,
To feed on the pastures of love?
Oh! why in the valley
Of death should I weep,
Or alone in the wilderness rove?

O, why should I wander,
And alien from thee,
And cry in the desert for bread?
Thy foes will rejoice,
When my sorrows they see,
And smile at the tears I have shed.

Ye daughters of Zion,
Declare, you have seen
The star that on Israel shone?
Say if in your tents
My beloved has been,
And where with his flock is he gone?

This is my beloved,
His form is divine;
His vestments shed odors around;
The locks on his head
Are as grapes on the vine,
When autumn with plenty is crowned.

The roses of Sharon,
The lillies that grow
In the vales on the banks of the streams,
On his cheeks in the beauty
Of excellence glow,
And his eyes are as quivers of beams.

His voice, as the sound
Of the dulcimer sweet,
Is heard through the shadows of death.
The cedars of Lebanon
Bow at his feet;
The air is perfumed with his breath.

His lips, as a fountain
Of righteousness, flow
To water the garden of grace,
From which their salvation
The Gentiles shall know,
And bask in the smiles of his face.

Love sits in his eyelids,
And scatters delight
Through all the bright mansions on high;
Their faces the cherubim
Vail in his sight,
And tremble with fullness of joy.

He looks and ten thousand
Of angels rejoice,
And myriads wait for his word;
He speaks, and eternity,
Filled with his voice,
Re-echoes the praise of the Lord.

We often see, at the first dawn of day, in a time of profound stillness, the flowers of the valleys motionless on their stems, and inclining in various directions toward every point of the horizon. At this very moment when all appears so tranquil, a great mystery is accomplishing. Nature conceives, and all these plants become so youthful mothers, looking toward the mysterious region from which they derive their fecundity. The sylphs have sympathies less aerial, communication less imperceptible.—The narcissus consigns her virgin progency to the stream. The violet trusts her modest posterity to the zephyrs. A bee, collecting honey from flower to flower, unconsciously fecundates a whole meadow. A butterfly bears a whole species on his wings. All the loves of the plants, however, are not equally peaceful.—Some are stormy, like the passions of men. Nothing less than a tempest is required to marry, on their inaccessible heights, the cedars of Lebanon to the cedars of Sinai; while, at the foot of the mountain, the gentlest breeze is sufficient to produce a voluptuous commerce among the flowers. Is it not thus that the rude blast of the passions agitate the kings of the earth upon their thrones, while the shepherds enjoy uninterrupted happiness at their feet.

LOVE BEST OF ALL BLESSINGS.—A woman may be surrounded by all the luxuries which money can buy, and have the fawning friendship of people whose smiles only live in prosperity; but if she feels herself unloved and alone in her heart, the crown jewel in her diadem of happiness is lost, things lose their value, and life becomes insufferably monotonous. The honest, tender love of two brave hearts who have startedout, and are struggling to gain a home for their little ones, and money enough to feed, clothe and educate them, makes life a thousand times more attractive and inspiring.

Let a man begin in earnest with, "I ought," and he will end, by God's grace, if he persevere with "I will." Let him force himself to abound in all small offices of kindliness, attention, affectionateness, and all this for God's sake. By and by they will become the habit of his soul.

Onward and Upward?

TO BROTHER NATHANIEL MERRILL.

Be wide awake, dear brother,
Move onward in the cause
Of Christ, your mighty king and head—
Go on without a pause.

Press onward, still, dear brother,
The cause of Christ maintain;
Add faith and virtue to your soul;
Christ's approbation gain.

Press forward, forward, brother,
Through love of God on high;
Be active in the work of Christ,
Let not religion die.

Move onward still, dear brother,
And grow in grace and truth;
Use all your strength, and all your power,
To bring to Christ the youth.

Fight on, fight on, dear brother,
And Christ will be your gain;
Be not a half-way follower,—
"Run, that you may obtain."

SUSANNA BLOCHER,

Shade Mill, Md.

For the COMPANION.

The Lord's Prayer.

Would it not be more appropriate in repeating the Lord's Prayer to say, thy kingdom has come, may thy will be done on earth?

Now brethren and sisters, it appears that I can hear many express themselves and say, that the writer of the above must be a very ignorant man. This I readily admit, and it is not to instruct but a desire to be instructed that prompts me to write this; and I want the more wise to help me out of my error, if it is really an error. I am prompted to believe that the kingdom has come, and was bestowed to the little flock, according to promise, over eighteen hundred years ago. But still men will pray, "Thy kingdom come," as though it were to come yet. The first account of this kingdom that I can cite you to now, is Daniel 2: 44. "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set upon a kingdom." Daniel 7: 22. "The time came that the saints possessed the kingdom;" which time, according to my understanding, has been fulfilled over eighteen hundred years, and the saints, or in other words, the christians, have been in possession of it; and still men are praying for it to come. Next we will come down to John the babtist.—Matth. 3: 2. He says, For the kingdom of heaven is at hand." When it was at hand then, it would appear strange to me that it was in the future yet.

Next Jesus himself says, in Matth. 4: 17, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand." Next he sent the twelve to preach, and told them to preach that it was at hand. Mark 1: 15, Christ's own words, "The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand." While Matthew calls it the kingdom of heaven, Mark and other's call it the kingdom of God; but I understand them to speak of the same thing. Luke 10: 9,—"Is come nigh unto you."

I might refer to many more places where the word kingdom occurs, or where the kingdom is spoken of, but let this suffice now. I do not wish to be understood as believing that in all cases where we find the word kingdom it means the church; but I do think in most of places it does mean Christ's church on earth; and inasmuch as Christ's church or kingdom was not fully established at the time the disciples desired him to teach them to pray, but, as he told them, it was near at hand, and as it was his mission here on earth to establish the kingdom, or church, it was his will that his followers should pray for it. He also told them not to fear. He calls them the little flock, because there were not many of them at that time, and said, "It is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom. Now who was the kingdom, or in other words the church, given to, or intrusted to? who received the key?

Let the above suffice for the present. If I have a wrong understanding of this matter. I hope through the assisting grace of God, some kind brother or sister will instruct me more perfect.

HENRY SPICHER.

Thoughts on Quarreling.

* * * Imagine, for a moment, the subjects there must needs be in the rubs and jars of daily life always rising up for discussion; subjects domestic, parochial, political, ecclesiastical, æsthetic, personal. Think, also to how many differing sympathies our several idiosyncrasies perforce tend. Mankind, it is said, are born into the world collectively with four temperaments, the mixtures and proportions of which in individuals are not to be numbered. Why, here is at once a basis of discord to set out with. How can a lymphatic physique meet the aspects of life as a nervous physique does? or how can a billious melancholic eye answer the frank hope of the sanguineous? And again, external nature, has not she her temperaments? Think how irritable the nerves and blood will become on a sultry noon, when we are laboriously inhaling a sirocco; how chill and ungenial, when frost is chilling our extremities. Under such circumstances, how easily does discussion ripen into dissension! how to sting and snap in words becomes almost a craving of nature! And if even the placid are apt to grow "grumpy" on these occasions, how is it with the class of the normally captious and huffy, which permeates all social space—with those of whom Cowper's lines represent the ordinary characteristics?

Some fretful tempers wince at every touch,
You always do too little or too much;
You speak with life, in hopes to entertain,
Your elevated voice goes through the brain;
You fall at once into a lower key,
That's worse,—the drone-pipe of a humble bee,
The southern sash admits too strong a light,
You rise and drop the curtain—now tis night.
He shakes with cold—you stir the fire and strive
To make a blaze—that's roasting him alive.

Very unamiable all this, the reader will say. Well, I am only referring to phases of social life which will at times occur, deplore it how we may, and which certainly conduce neither to the happiness nor to the elevation of our character while they last.—When such phases do occur, depend upon it, flight to one's own room is the best of all possible remedies.—There, in all that still seclusion, trifles unduly magnified have a chance of resuming their just proportions, possibly your adversary's arguments assume some sort of meaning to your apprehension; petulance evaporates for lack of stimulants; the coveted "last word" seems no longer worth the efforts we have made to secure it. Hear the testimony of Nehemiah Wallington, the puritan tradesman of Eastcheap, whose "Historical notices" on the times of Charles I. have recently been published, in corroboration of this philosophy.

"The outward means that I have used to overcome this hasty crabbit nature of mine," says the worthy citizen, are these. Sometimes I have gon into another roome by myself till my anger is over, and then come again. Sometime I went abroad, and then come again when my wrath is past. Sometimes I have gone to bed when I have been angred, and lay awhile till my anger is past, and then I have rose, and put on my cloes, and have bin friends again."

How deeply are not the lower orders of society to be pitied for their inability, generally speaking, to secure such a fortress for their own defence! We shrink with horror from the tales of domestic strife and bloodshed with which our newspaper annals of the poor abound; but who shall dare come the Pharisee over them, for who shall pretend to compare their resources against temptation of our own? Think of the sneers, the taunts, the blows, which might well take in our own polished drawing-rooms, often and often, were there not the remedy at hand of retirement and separation. But you forget principle, some will say. It is man's duty to school himself in self-restraint. His circumstances are his trials. He must meet them, conquer them; not fly like an anchoret to the desert, to be out of the way of temptation. Let him learn a lesson of the Chinese mandarian, of whom it is recorded, that when some emperor of the Celestials, making a progress through his dominions, came to the residence of this distinguished subject he found him with his wives, children, daughters-in-law, grand children, and servants, all living together in perfect peace and harmony; insomuch that, struck by the phenomenon, the emperor requested the head of the family to explain its secret.—The mandarin took out his pencil and wrote, "Patience, patience, patience" * * * * *

I will conclude with a few practical suggestions to "all about to quarrel." I venture not to say simply, "Don't," like the adviser to "those about to marry," in Punch. I only say, first, Defer. Postponement may be the thief of time in business arrangements; it is often the safety-belt of tempers in the acrimonious waters of repartee. Oh, defer your cause from Philip drunk to Phillip sober; from the disputant of 11 A. M. on Monday morning to the same disputant one week—ay, or, it may be, one day—later. How will the perspective of things, in all possibility, have shifted its bearings in the interval, till the "situation knows itself no more. It was the fatal mischief of duelling, formerly so common among us, that the challenge, once given and accepted, on some occasion, perhaps, as remote from the real interests of two convivial disputants, as the politics of the planet Jupiter, it seemed cowardice to back out of it, however needless the quarrel might appear in the light of morning meditation.

Secondly, cultivate varied intellectual interests. The greater variety of attractive subjects of thought you possess, in matters out of yourself, the less you will care to spend attention for petty personal provocations. Bright, sunny fancies—best nurtured in "flashes of solitude"—sweeten the mind.

Thirdly, aim at acquiring a sympathetic heart. And as, according to some metaphysicians, all sympathy is based on imagination, make it your business to picture to yourself the peculiarities and the difficulties of others, so that the next step may be to feel tolerant of them. And here we come round to the doctrine of the Book of Proverbs, that "understanding" is the great means of keeping one straight. The more dogged and stupid a mind is, the less hope of steering clear of a collision with it.

There is a touching passage in a poem by Coventry Patmore, not immediately accessible to me, which embodies the reflections of one in the first moments of bereavement, dwelling, in that strangely vivid light which no fogs of working-day existence obscure, on the thought of the friend with whom life's familiar scenes have been passed. At that moment, how does not all love, all regret, all self examination concur in the one yearning wish that no word intended for affront, no action intended for pain-giving hostility or defiance, had ever been set down in the note book which unforgiving, unforgetting conscience keeps as a witness against itself! And could we only think of that moment with reference to any friend against whom we are about to launch the bitter taunt, how would it not seem worth our while to make every effort at self-restraint, if only for the selfish aim of making our own heartache in the severance of death more tolerable!—Cornhill Magazine.

Preaching Christ Crucified.

There is a power in the cross of Jesus. In these modern days of art and scientific research, men are apt to think that the world may be saved by learned and labored discourses that appeal to the reason. But all the argument in the world, faultless with respect to its logic, and perfect with its rhetorical finish, is powerless unless accompanied by the loving, burning energy of the Holy Spirit.

A very successful minister told me, a little while since, that his best preaching had been done around the cross. These words have the apostolic ring: "For I determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ, and him crucified." He whose soul has felt the eloquence of Calvary, is ten thousand times better able to bring men to a knowledge of the truth, than he whose head is filled with the wisdom of the schools, without that soul-moving eloquence of a crucified Redeemer. There is power in Calvary. The books are good; but the cross of Jesus is infinitely more powerful.—Christian Advance.

"Did ye ask me if I had a Bible?" said a poor old widow in London, "did ye ask me if I had a Bible? Thank God, I have a Bible? It was the guide of my youth, and the staff of my age. It wounded me, and it healed me; it condemned me, and it acquitted me; it showed me I was a sinner, and it led me to the Saviour; it has given me comfort through life; and hope everlasting in death." Keep the "staff."

Good Advice.—Don't be discouraged if occasionally you slip down by the way, and others tread on you a little. In other words, don't let a failure or two dishearten you; accidents will happen, miscalculations will turn out differently to our expectations, and we may be sufferers. It is worth while to remember that fortune is like the skies in the month of April, sometimes cloudy, and sometimes clear and favorable.

The noblest independence is the government of our passions, and the most sublime dependence is in Divine Providence.

Christian Family Companion
DALE CITY, PA., Nov. 28, 1871

Don't Step There.

"We read, somewhere, a short time ago, a story of a little boy standing on the sidewalk on a Sabbath morning, and saying to passers by, as he pointed to an icy spot on the pavement, "don't step there." When asked why he did so unusual a thing, he answered that he had "stepped there" and fallen, and he was now warning others that they might be careful of their steps. Oh for more such philanthropists! Oh that every one that has stepped upon slippery places and fallen, would utter that warning cry "don't step there" to those whom he sees in the same dangerous path! What pointed, practical, effective preaching it would be! What thousands of fallen men would stand by the doors of the dram-shops and cry aloud, "don't step there" for I have stepped there, and behold the wreck! I have fallen! fallen!! fallen!!! All, all is gone, fortune, friends, health, character, manhood, even hope has forsaken me, and I am going down to a drunkard's grave.—But do they not preach it still, though unwittingly! Does not the watery eye, the unsteady step, the bloated countenance that we meet upon the street speak loudly to us all, "don't step there"? And alas! does not the raving maniac writhing in the tortures of Delirium Tremens speak in tones that chill the very blood, "don't step there"? And who will heed? Will you, young man, who have just learned the way to the dram-shop? Will you upon whom the demon drink is already riveting his chains? As you value life, health, fortune, character, "don't step there." As you value your immortal soul, heed the terrible warning, and "Don't step there."

Winter's Admonition.

Winter is at hand. Already we have felt his chilling breath and the touch of his icy fingers. We have heard his moan about our dwelling, and heard his admonition, which we will try to record for the information of those concerned—and who among us is not?

I am coming, am coming—coming to bless the world; but I shall be as I ever have been—an enemy to your present comfort. If I find a broken pane in your window, or a crevice in your wall, or an opening about your door, I will certainly enter your dwelling, and create an uncomfortable feeling of coldness among the members of your family. If you close your house to prevent my entrance, I shall chill your dwelling: I will infuse my breath through the pores in your habitation, and you shall realize to your pain that I am with you. If you have a comfortable fire I will cause you to suffer for it when you leave your room in quest of more fuel, or for food for yourself and family, or to see after the wants of your stock.

Do you say you are prepared for my visit? that you have a close house, a warm fire, plenty of provisions for yourself and family? that you have an abundance of fuel to serve you till I must leave again? and that, if you must leave your room, you are well supplied with good, warm clothing to preserve you from my pinching till you return?

Ah! It appears that you have felt quite an interest in your own comfort and have prepared yourself for my coming. Well, how is it about your neighbor? Have you loved your neighbor as yourself? "The poor you have always with you, and whenever you will you can do them good." Have you felt for them? Were you willing that they should be comfortable too? Have you done them good?

When you are safely housed, and enjoy yourself while you hear my moan about your mansion from which I am debarred, remember that my moan is but a faint echo of the groaning of the poor, if they be excluded from your charity. They are shivering in their miserable huts. "The poor ye have always with you."

While you are feasting on the rich viands of your table, feeding yourselves to the full, your less fortunate or successful neighbors would thankfully receive a few potatoes, some bread or flour—which are but as crumbs from your table." Whenever you will you can do them good."

Those garments that you have laid by and never expect to wear because they are soiled or need a small patch, are much better than your poor neighbor's best. He would accept of them. They would not only keep him comfortable, but the gift would warm his heart. In his gratefulness he would bless you. "Remember the poor."

You have a good library. You can read to profit and satisfaction.—Your brother has nothing to read; for even his Bible, through much use, has fallen to pieces. The Bible you laid away because you thought it scarcely looked respectable, would make a better appearance on his less showy table. Will you lay it there? He loves to read and hear from his brethren and sisters, but he cannot pay for a paper. Could you think of some way to help him get some good religious paper? Remember the poor, who are always with you.

The seasons are rolling around and soon will bring the rich and poor to the stream of death. They must cross the stream. How will it be when they get over yonder? Ah! there will be a change! There many who are poor may be comforted, while many who are rich and have their good things here, shall be tormented.

But with God all things are possible, and the rich may be happy there. If the rich man gives his crumbs to a poor Lazarus, anoints his sores, and clings to him, the angels will bear him along to Abraham's bosom. Remember the poor; they are always with you; whenever ye will ye can do them good. J. W. B.

Doing Good.

We are told that Jesus "went about doing good and healing all that were oppressed of the devil." The Psalmist says: "A good man showeth favors, and lendeth." P. 112: 5. In many places in the Scriptures doing good, and being good is associated with acts of charity and kindness. "For scarcely for a righteous man will one die; yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die." Rome 5: 7. In this passage goodness evidently implies kindness, love liberality. And this is the goodness the Savior taught by practice and precept.—"He that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God:" 1 John 1: 4. "He that loveth another hath fulfilled the law." But we are not to love "in word only, but in deed and in truth." The nature of love is to create a desire to do good. T. S. Arthur says: "Love is a giver—does not think of itself—desires only to bless."—So if we love any one we will wish them well and do them good, and hence it is that goodness consists of works of mercy and kindness. And let us not deceive ourselves that we can love God without doing such good acts to our fellow men. For the scriptures again teach us: "But whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowel of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him? 1 John 3: 17. If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar: for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen." 1 John 4: 20. Then reader, let us not deceive ourselves, thinking that we are good, unless we can do good to our fellow men, administering to their necessities and comfort. This is the goodness that arises from living in deed and in truth, and thereby the witness within our hearts that we love God, and have been begotten of him.

The Pious Youth

For November is coming, and should make the landing nearly simultaneously with this No. of the COMPANION. We are happy to be able to say to the friends of the YOUTH that its prospects are brightening. In several places large lists have been obtained where it had no circulation heretofore. All that is necessary is a trial. Send for specimens and agents outfit, and you may soon have a large list of subscribers.

—The Illustrated Phrenological Journal is in every respect a first-class magazine. Its articles are of the highest interest to all. It teaches what we are and how to make the most of ourselves. The information it contains on the Laws of Life and Health, is well worth the price of the magazine to every family. It is published at $3.00 a year. By special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal as a premium for twelve new subscribers to the Companion, or will furnish the Phrenological Journal and Companion together for $3.50. We commend the Journal to all who want a good magazine. Address all orders to H. R. HOLSINGER, Dale City, Pa.

Answers to Correspondents.

D. B. M. Yes, you sent the money. Did we not acknowledge it? (See page 707). Was the address not changed? (Yes). How long did you order the paper to be continued? It is still going.

MISCELLANEOUS.

TRUTHFULNESS is a corner-stone in character; and if it be not firmly laid in youth, there will ever after be a weak spot in the foundation.

SAY out the truths of God: and then what thanks do you get for bringing light to the people who love darkness? which nine hundred and ninety-nine do.

A BAD BARGAIN.—All would agree in pronouncing that young man a fool who should deliberately barter a part of his earnings every day. How much more foolish to pay money to have your brains taken away? Pay your money for a habit that, like a demon may possess you, and drive you into disgrace. Pay your money to increase the probability of your failure, both in time and eternity!

Find out in time that life means something and is not to be squandered in frivolity and dissipation. Several young men, of about the same age, prospects and attainments, start out in life together, and circumstances or inclinations bring them into each others society frequently. The freedom of their social hours is unlimited and all goes merrily for a time. After a while one of them is missing at the festive board—he begins to realize that life means something else, and he goes at it in earnest. Then another, not caring to be distanced in the race, forsakes frivolity for the sober realities of every-day duty. At last one of the original number finds himself left alone, and he, addicted to dissolute habits by this time, seeks other congenial society, until he finds the further up the ladder his old friend seem to be ascending, the lower it, is sinking in the slough. "So runs the world away."

One man when he has done a service to another, is ready to set it down to his account as a favor conferred. Another is not ready to do this, but still in his own mind he thinks of the man as his debtor, and he knows what he has done. A third in a manner does not even know what he has done, but is like a vine which has produced grapes, and seeks for nothing more, after it has once produced its proper fruit. As a horse when he has run, a dog when he has caught the game, a bee when it has made its honey, so a man when he has done a good act, does not call out for others to come and see, but he goes on to another act, as a vine goes on to produce again its grapes in season. Must a man then be one of these, who in a manner acts thus without desiring it? Yes.

CHRISTIAN assurance does not become a person who is cherishing some darling sin. The indulgence of wickedness grieves away the Holy Ghost, from whom alone assurance can come. "I would not," said John Newton, "give a straw for that assurance which sin will not damp."

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Bourbon (Ind.) Correspondence.

BOURBON, INDIANA,)
Nov. 10th, 1871.)

To the Editor of the Companion :

DEAR BROTHER :—As a very great many inquiries have been made by Brethren in regard to the College established by the Brethren in the District Meeting of Northern Indiana, in May 1870, the prospects and present condition of Salem College, located at Bourbon, Indiana, we will give a few facts and several documents that will be satisfactory for the Brethren generally, to be made acquainted with at this time.

A proposition from the citizens of Bourbon to donate to the church, college ground and building, situated in Bourbon for College purposes, if the church would establish a first-class institution of learning, and continue it in Bourbon, was accepted by the Northern Indiana District Meeting in May, 1870, by almost the unanimous vote of the delegates present, according to the terms of the proposition, and the committee for the church elected, discharged the duties as their instruction warranted and pledged their church, they were acting for in the following obligation to establish and continue a first-class college at Bourbon, Indiana.

First obligation between citizens of Bourbon and Committee, from German Baptist church, of Northern District of Indiana :

State of Indiana,) County of Marshall,)

BOURBON, May 28th, 1870.

Article of agreement made and entered into between Matthew Erwin, Howard Barnaby, Alexander Matchette, Newell Minard, David Wilkens and K. Heckman of the first part, and Jacob B. Shively, Jesse Calvert and Jacob Berkey of the second part.

The party of the first part agrees to make a good and sufficient warrantee deed, or cause the same to be made, of the college property in Bourbon, Marshall county, State of Indiana, to the said parties of the second part, subject to the following conditions, to-wit: That said college property is to be used perpetually for college purposes, after the order of the Oberlin college, in the State of Ohio, except the theological department, and if not so used by the party of the second part, to revert back to the persons of their legal representatives, who have subscribed, and do pay the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars, in a ratable proportion to the amount paid by each person so subscribing. And the party of the first part agrees to pay to the party of the second part the sum of one thousand dollars on or before the 28th day of May, 1871. The party of the second part do assign the above named subscription to the parties of the first part, for their own use upon the condition that, the party of the first part make deed as aforesaid, and become responsible for the one thousand dollars.

Signed :

M. ERWIN,
K. HECKMAN,
HOWARD BARNABY,
NEWELL E. MINARD,
A. C. MATCHETTE, } Committee. Citizens.

JACOB B. SHIVELY,
JACOB BERKLEY,
JESSE CALVERT,
} Com. Church.

The foregoing agreement was fully lived up to, and complied with by the citizens of Bourbon, and the college property worth ten thousand dollars deeded, and the the college opened with every assurance that it is to be one of the first colleges in the entire country, in point of simplicity, correctness, and thoroughness of instruction, and the inculcation of moral and religious knowledge, as understood and practiced by the Brethren.

ADDITIONAL AGREEMENT OF THE TRUSTEES.

The following articles of association were adopted by the full Board of Trustees of Salem College, and their intention to carry out its provisions, in conducting the college was duly affirmed to before a Notary Public, and placed on record in the proper offices of the State, to-wit :

BOURBON, INDIANA,)
January 6th, 1871.)

Know all men by these presents, that we, Jesse Calvert, Jacob B. Shively, David Shively, Keylon Heckman and Paul Kurtz, Trustees of Salem College, in Bourbon, Marshall county, in the State of Indiana. The purpose, for which we have established the said institution of learning, are for the diffusing of useful, religious, moral and scientific knowledge, under the control of the German Baptist Church, of the Northern District of Indiana.

The amount of endowment which we design to reach is one hundred thousand dollars; that we have connected with said college in lad, college buildings, donations and subscriptions, property to the value of twelve thousand dollars. Said trustees and their successors in office were, and are to be elected and directed by said religious body, from time to time, according to the usages of said religious society.

Signed :

JESSE CALVERT,
PAUL H. KURTZ,
KEYLON HECKMAN,
JACOB B. SHIVELY,
DAVID SHIVELY,
} Trustees of Salem College.

The above and foregoing statements were this day subscribed and affirmed to before me, this 6th day of January, A. D. 1871.

Z. D. BOULTON, (NOTORIAL SEAL)

The college was Incorporated, by the laws of the State of Indiana, on the 24th day of February, 1871, thus giving our first and only College a place among the educational institutions of the country, gained by few in so short a period of time.

Already a large number of Scholarships have been sold by the college, that promise to give tuition in their college, Bourbon Indiana, as agreed upon, on their face. By this sale a large sum of money has been realized for the College, and still the demand for scholarships in the school continues. It has been the intention of the Brethren organizing and conducting Salem College, to build an institution under the control and patronage of the church, that shall be a school where the Brethren can safely place their children, who desire to be educated, with the assurance, that they will receive that training and admonition that shall endear the church of the Brethren to their young hearts, and cause their future lives to be spent in the service of the Lord, as believed and practiced by the Brethren, in all its purity and simplicity, as taught by the scriptures, with nothing of the follies of pride, or the frivolities of the world, encouraged or tolerated in the School. Brother Gans, the superintendant of the college, and the other teachers are well satisfied that the present number of Students in attendance, are as studious and moral as any class could be, and are striving to do their entire duty in the college to themselves, their teachers and their God.

The location of the town of Bourbon is one as remarkable for health as any in the State, and the community as moral and religious as parents could secure to have their children placed in, and hospitable toward strangers, as well as kindly disposed, towards the school and the church, which makes it a desirable place to have students located, when away from home. All brethren and friends of the college are earnestly and cordially invited to visit the school when convenient, and judge of the work being accomplished, by closely investigating everything connected with the institution.

Every one can be assured of a welcome reception, if calling on the school.

K. Heckman.
Secretary of Board of Trustees.
"Visitor" please copy.

Church News.

By request I will give a statement of my travels.

On the 19th of September I left home, went as far as brother Jacob Beeghley's.

On the 20th brother Beeghly accompanied me, and went to Elder Adam Snyder's, in Somerset county, Pa. Stayed there over night.

On the 21st we went to brother Jacob L. Miller's. In the evening we had a lovefeast in the Middle Creek meeting-house near by. Had a crowded house, but not such order as we desired, which proved to us that many had not only no fear of God about them, but no respect for themselves. Next day had meeting at the same place.

In the afternoon of the 22d we crossed the mountain to Indian Creek congregation. 23d had two meetings in their meeting-house; two received by baptism.

On Sunday, the 24th, two meetings; received one by baptism. 25th, council meeting, and baptized one more. Lovefeast in the evening.—We stayed with the brethren four days, had six public meetings, one council meeting, and one lovefeast, and baptized six. All this labor was at one place; had good attention and the very best of order.

On the 27th we started for home. We went together as far as the Big Falls in the Youghiogheny River.—We both went home the same day. I had a hard day's ride, expecting to have a few day's rest; but I was called to preach brother Samuel Boger's funeral.

On the 29th I started and went as far as brother Jacob Pisel's, not far from Johnstown, Md.; stayed over night with him. On the 30th he (Pisel) accompanied me to a place I never had been; brother Pisel had preached here before. This place is 10 or 12 miles from Oakland, Md.—Had a meeting the same evening.—On the first of October (Sunday) two meetings, and baptized one. On the 2nd, we went home with brother Pisel and had meeting in the Flatwoods. Stayed over night again with brother and sister Pisel.

On the 3d, started for Deer Park, on the B. & O. railroad. Had meeting at this place in the evening; had a crowded house and good attention; went home with brother John H. Miller and stayed over night with him and the sister. 4th, had meeting in a meeting-house near Altemen, a town on the B. & O. railroad. 5th, had meeting in Glade Valley, meeting-house. This is near the road that leads from Oakland to the Northwestern Turnpike. 6th, had meeting at sister McGreby's, in her dwelling. This is about two miles from Swanton, on the railroad.

On the 7th, brother Jacob Pisel met me at Deer Parks, to help me through. Had meeting in the meeting-house near Alteman. After meeting went home with brother John H. Miller. The 8th (Sunday) had two meetings in the Glade Valley meeting-house; I think good impressions were made upon many of the hearers.

Last spring I had been called to this neighborhood to preach a funeral sermon for Mrs. Murphey, a member of the Baptist church. This was a few days previous to a District Council, which gave me a few days' time to preach for them. The last meeting I had sister McGreby made application for baptism. This was in the evening, and in the morning I had to start to the District Conference, so that I could not baptize her then, but promised to see that her case was attended to. After the council brother Jacob Beegbly and myself had a meeting at her house, and then four more made application. This was the first that the brethren had ever preached at this place. We have now seven members in this vicinity. On the 9th we started home. I went as far as brother John L. Hook's. The 10th, came home, and found all well. Thanks to God for his goodness.

Jacob M. Thomas,
Brandonville, W. Va.

Brother Henry:—Having just returned from our lovefeast held in the Brethren's meeting-house at Fairview, I wish to inform you that we had quite an interesting meeting.—There were quite a number of ministers and members from other churches, from the counties of Monroe, Marion, Wappella, Decatur and Jeffers of this State, and some from Mo. were present. Two persons were added to the church by baptism, and three a few weeks earlier; thus we see the work of the Lord is progressing, and we feel encouraged. To God be all the glory. Jacob Bahr.

Brethren Editors:—I will try and give you a brief sketch of my new home. Holt county is in the extreme North west part of the state, (Mo) the Missouri River being the bounding between it and parts of Kansas, and Nebraska. It is divided into three kinds of land; viz: river bottom, bluffs and high prairie. The bottom land is only tolerable good, contains much of what is called here "gum boa" land, which is very sticky and almost worthless except for pasture in very dry weather. Frogs and mosquitoes, the last being so numerous that there are not figures enough (I think) in the French method to begin numbering them. The sandy part is good, the muck the best of bottom land. The greater part of the timber is in the bottom, mostly of that poorest of timbers cottonwood. The bluffs are high, some places as precipitous as rocks, but in ravines of these there is some fine woodland of the various kinds of timber. After this comes the glorious part of Holt county, the high prairie land having without doubt the best and most productive land for corn, and oats, barley and vegetables, that I have ever seen. True, Illinois will raise more corn some years, but this has a tolerable crop even in dry weather; in a good season it is common to raise from 50 to 75 and not uncommon to see 100 bushels to the acre. Wheat only tolerable, but of this be assured, that whenever you hear of a good and rich country, it will invariably be a corn country. Fruit does well, but not as well as farther South. On the high lands it is just as healthy as the best of countries, but the bottom is very sickly; mostly ague. The winters are cold; fall and spring quite changeable; winds high and things generally quite lively in the weather line.

Is their room for a few more inhabitants? Yes for thousands more; land enough for good, strong and industrious men and women, who are not afraid of the sun, wind and cold, and who are willing to deny themselves the comforts of the "old man's" kitchen and barn for the sake of getting a good home for themselves and posterity. Then again land is not so high in price, but what any one can get 40, 80, or 160 acres at from $10 to $20 per acre. Come out from the hills, hollows and sand banks, you that are now toiling, and hardly more than earning a competence by the sweat of your brow" by tilling poor soil. But the fact is here, and no joke intended, that many young men will grow prematurely old, in the older states, (where they can hardly hope ever to get a good farm,) just because they think there is no place like home where "mam and dad" live. As to clothing, that is as cheap as in the East, and boarding is good, cheap, and abundant. The brethren that are living here are principally farmers, and are rather an industrious class of individuals. I am an exception to the rule, I instruct the "young idea how to shoot," or in short I belong to that indispensible class of individuals called School teachers. There are about forty members, one speaker, and one deacon; have meeting three times a month, which are generally well attended. Five have lately been added to the church, and the prospect is that many more will be added soon. One great desire of the brethren here is, that those coming West to seek homes would first take a look at this country; besides they will bid them a hearty welcome. Hope this letter may meet the eye, and gain the approbation of many seeking new homes.

J. S. McFADDEN.

Forest City, Mo.

Brother Holsinger: We now have preaching every two weeks, and hope to have it every Sunday before long. There is considerable interest manifested now, and we look forward for accessions this winter. Pray for us. Should you come this way, advise me a week or two in advance.

L. J. GROVE.

Baltimore, Md.

Peter the Rock.

"And I say also unto thee that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Matt. xvi. 18.

W. G. Lint has asked for an explanation on the above text some time ago, and I have been waiting with anxious eyes to see some one give an explanation through the COMPANION, and have, up to this date, failed to see one, so I will take the liberty of answering his querry.

I will come to the point at once, by saying that I believe that Christ meant Peter to be the rock. The next verse that follows the text reads thus: "And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven, and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven, and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." This language at once conveys the idea to all intelligent readers that Christ placed great confidence and trust in this man Peter, by giving him the keys of heaven. Perhaps he called him a rock or stone because he, Peter, was the first man that preached the doctrine of christianity to both Jews and gentiles. Keys are instruments used to unlock locks, so I believe that Peter unlocked the door of heaven by preaching the true and solid doctrine of Christ, even as solid as a rock or stone. For that reason he probably called him a rock or stone.

I am aware that there are those among us who deny that Christ called Peter a rock. We will now examine this: In the 1st chapter of John and the 42d verse, Christ says Peter shall be called cephas, which is by interpretation a stone. Those who are learned tell us the word cephas is a cyriac word, and means a rock or stone, which is the same thing. And again in speaking of the certainty of Christ's resurrection, 1 Cor. xv. 5 reads thus: "And that he was seen of cephas, then of the twelve." Here is another positive proof that Peter was singled out from the other twelve and was called a rock or stone, which is one and the same thing.

I do not want my kind readers to think that I believe as the Catholics do, that Christ built his church on Peter any farther than this which we read in Ephesians 2d chapter and 20th verse, "And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone."

Our conclusive remarks shall be these: When we build a house we need more than one rock or stone for a foundation. We need a good and sufficient corner stone in the first place; then we need other stones to be fitted on that corner stone. Now if we build our spiritual house on cephas, as he in the first place preached it to both Jews and Gentiles, and of course cephas or that rock or stone, and the other apostles and prophets, built upon Christ the chief corner stone, and we build upon the same foundation when we build upon Peter's preaching on the day of Penticost. It is possible that I may be wrong. If I am some one will please show me my error.

CHRISTIAN GOOD.

Mineral Point, Pa.

MARRIED.

Nov. 14th, at the residence of the bride's parents, by Elder Moses Miller, brother JOSIAH FAHRNEY, of the firm of Dr. P. Fahrney Bros. & Co., Waynesboro, Pa., to sister KATIE JANE MILLER, of Newville, Cumberland Co., Pa.

D. H. Fahrney.

DIED.

We admit no poetry, under any circumstances in connection with Obituary Notices. We wish to use all advice, and we could not insert verses with all.

Nov. 6th, JOHN HAVERCAMP, aged 63 years, 1 month and 20 days. He was at meeting the day before, in usual health. Let this be a warning to us all. Funeral exercises by Jeremiah Beeghly and the writer, from Matt. 24:44; "Be ye also ready."

Also, MARTIN SEMBER, Nov. 8th, aged 74 years, 11 months and 28 days. He belonged to the Lutheran faith. Funeral exercises by Mr. Brenceizer, the Lutheran minister and the writer, from Psalm 90:9, 10.

Josiah Beeghly.

In the Conemaugh congregation, October 15th, ANNA ANGUS, consort of brother John Angus, sen., deceased, aged 71 years 3 months and 18 days. We think our loss is her great gain. The funeral occasion was improved by brother Wm. Byers and the writer. DAVID HILDEBRAND.

In the Panther Creek Branch, Woodford county, Ills., on the 15th of October, DOLLEY CUMMINS, wife of brother Moses Cummins, and daughter of Philip Spitzer, of Rockingham county, Va.; aged about 70 years and 10 months. They moved from Shenandoah county, Va., to Illinois about two years and a half ago.

One more mother in Israel has passed away. She had two strokes of the Palsey in about 3 days, which proved fatal. After the first attack she selected the 7th chapter of Matthew to be read at her funeral, and also chose her speaker. She was followed to her last resting place by a large concourse of relatives and friends. Nearly all of her children and some of her grand-children have united with the church. Text, 13th and 13th verses of the chapter she had selected. Improved by the writer and others.

JOHN H. GISH.

[Visitor please copy.]

Little JENNIE E. POSEY, daughter of friend William and sister Malinda Posey, March 20th, aged three years, three months and twelve days. Funeral services Nov. 12th. Text: Matt. 24:44

J. L. Switzer.

LIST OF MONEYS RECEIVED for SUBSCRIPTION, BOOKS, etc.

Moses Miller,	3.85	J. T. Moxley,	2.50
Israel Whisler,	2.35	J. J. Fausnacht,	2.10
Henry Spicher,	.75	T. Griffith,	3.75
David Bowman,	2 00	John Neher,	.50
A.S.Montgomery,	.50	Isaac Wine,	.50
Thos. Swinehart,	2.35	Austin Hayes,	.85
James Skelly,	1.25	S. M. Minnich,	1.00

Advertisements.

WE will admit a limited number of select advertisements at the following rates

One insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.

No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations.

DR. U. M. BEACHLEY'S

FAMILY MEDICAL DEPOT.

OFFICE AND DRUG STORE,

ON MAIN Street,

DALE CITY, Somerset Co., Pa.

Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3 00 per dozen

Address H. R. HOLSINGER.

DALE CITY, PA.

FOXES POISONED.—Full instructions in a Copyright Book for 50 cents. Address, J. T. MOXLEY, Owasco, Mich. 7-47-3m.*

Pittsburg and Connellsville R. R.

TIME TABLE.

Commencing on Monday, October 16th, 1871, at 2 o'clock, P. M.

EASTWARD.			WESTWARD.
Cum Mail	at Exp.	STATIONS.	Cm. Exp.	Cum Mail
A. M.	P. M.		A. M.	P. M.
6 50	8 00	Pittsburg	10 15	6 10
10 21	9 57	Bradford	8 05	2 30
10 35	10 10	Connellsville	8 00	2 25
1 20	11 55	Mineral Point	5 52	11 22
1 40	12 15	Garret	5 38	11 02
157	1228	DALE CITY	526	1045
3 16	1 28	Bridgeport	4 15	9 25
4 00	2 00	Cumberland	3 40	8 40
P. M.	A. M.		P. M.	A. M.

BURNED OUT.

I would respectfully inform the trade that my Laboratory at 30 North Dearborn street was destroyed by the great fire. Even the contents of my iron safe, which still is buried in the smouldering ruins, are doubtless lost, which under ordinary circumstances might have been saved by water. I am now located at No. 690 West-Indiana-St. Orders for Dr. Fahrney's BLOOD CLEANSER OR PANACEA can be filled in a very few days, having ordered an outfit by telegraph from Dr. P. FAHRNEY's BROS. & CO., Waynesboro' Pa. All those knowing themselves indebted to me will please remit as soon as possible.

Respectfully,
P. FAHRNEY, M. D.,
No. 690 West Indiana St.

45—2 ins.

A Card.

Drs. D. Fahrney & Son, Uroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.

7-10-1 yr. pd.

To Advertisers—All persons who contemplate making contracts with newspapers for the insertion of Advertisements should send to

GEORGE P. ROWELL & CO.

for a Circular, or enclose 50 cents for their One Hundred Page Pamphlet, containing Lists of 3,000 Newspapers and estimates, showing the cost of advertising, also many useful hints to advertisers, and some account of the experiences of men who are known as Successful Advertisers. This firm are proprietors of the American Newspaper Advertising Agency, and are possessed of unequaled facilities for securing the insertion of advertisements in all Newspapers and Periodicals at lowest rates.

41 PARK ROW, N. Y.

7—45—50.

Universal Guide for Cutting Garments.

By which every family may cut its own garments for men and boys, of twenty six different sizes; for Coats, Pants, Vests, and Shirts, and Ladies' Dress Patterns. Agents wanted to sell State, County, and Family Rights. For Particulars address MILLER & QUINN,

Tyrone Blair Co., Pa.

GREAT EXCITEMENT!

J. W. FITCHNER,

of Berlin, Pa., has caused a great excitement in the County by bringing into our midst the very popular and far-famed WEED (F. F.) SEWING MACHINE. All who have tried it give this as their decission: "The Weed runs lighter, has less gearing, is more easily managed, and takes less time to understand it than any other machine now in the county."

The WEED has no cog-wheels, no spring or compound levers, and is sold at prices ranging from $60 to $1 50. Each machine is furnished with a tucker, quilter, baster, 3 hemmers, feller, corder, ruffler, ginger, braider, and a self-sewer, gratis.

Satisfaction GUARANTEED.

Call on or address,

J. W. FICHTNER,
7-47-3t. BERLIN, PA.

Office in Dannis' new building.

1780 1871

ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK?

Use Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

An Alterative and Cathartic, or Tonic and Purge combined, for diseases arising from bad blood; such as Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Erysipelas, Worms, Chills and Fever, Scrofula, Pimples, Tetter, &c. TRY IT.

Established 1780 in package form. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form which was brought to its present state of preservation and perfection some years later, by Dr. P. Fahrney, Chicago, Ill's, who conducts the trade west of Ohio. Great reputation! Many Testimonials! Ask for that prepared at Waynesboro, Pa, and Chicago, Ill's. Beware of imitations. Genuine retails at $1.25 per bottle. Druggists and Medicine dealers sell it.

Dr. P. Fahrney's "Health Messenger" gives the history and uses of the BLOOD CLEANSER testimonials, and other information, sent free of charge. Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.
WAYNESBORO, PA

Wm. M. Lloyd, Altoona, Pa. D. T. Caldwell, Tyrone Pa.

LLOYD, CALDWELL & CO.,

BANKERS,

Receive monies on deposit, and pay interest if left 6 months, at 4 per cent per annum, or 5 per cent. if left one year.

Special contracts made with parties acting as administrators, executors, guardians, and persons holding monies in trust. Dealers in every description of Stocks and Bonds. Government Securities made a speciality

Gold and Silver bought and sold, and a general Banking business transacted

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine, with Drop Feed, new Take-up, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted First Class, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted traveling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $200 per month. Address LYON & MUTUAL S. M. Co.

East Union

FOUR MONTHS FOR 50 CTS.

GREAT SUCCESS

AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKER,

An Evangelical Undenominational Monthly, for PARENTS, TEACHERS and SCHOLARS. With Sunday School Lessons, Exposition, Illustrations, Questions Blackboard Exercises, &c., for each Sabbath.

This publication is designed to develop a greater depth and spirituality in the Sunday School work, looking beyond methods to results.

Terms for 1872—$1.50 a year in Advance. CLUBS of TEN or more (to one address) will receive 6 Lesson Papers, free with each Magazine monthly. SCHOLARS LESSON PAPER, monthly, with Lessons for every Sabbath, 12 cts. a year; or per hundred $9 a year. Send 10 cents for Specimen copy, Lesson Paper, and your own List of Lessons for 1872, to

J. W. McINTYRE, ST., LOUIS, Mo.

BOUND COPIES for 1870 and 1871, $2 each, postpaid. Lesson Papers on Gospel of Matthew for 1870, and on Gospel of John for 1871, same price as 1872.

Oct. 15th, Nov. 14 15

TYRONE BANK.

TYRONE, PA.

This Bank, intending to do a general banking business, solicits accounts from Bankers and others. Collections made on all points. Interest allowed on DEPOSITS left on time. Paper discounted on liberal terms.

Wm. P. Orbison,	D. P. Gwin,
John Scott,	H. G. Fisher,
Thomas Fisher,	J. H. Glazier,
Wm. Dorris,	G. C. Wilkins,
G. W. Garretson,	and others.

BURLINGTON.

Leaving the East and arriving at Chicago or Indianapolis, how shall we reach the West? The best Line is acknowledged to be the C. B. and Q., joined together with the B. & M. Railroad by the Iron Bridge at Burlington, and called the Burlington Route.

The main line of the Route running to Omaha, connects with the great Pacific Roads, and forms to-day the leading route to California. The Middle Branch, entering Nebraska at Plattsmouth, passes through Lincoln, the State Capital, and will this year be finished to Fort Kearney, forming the shortest route across the Continent by over 100 miles.

Another branch of the B. M., diverging at Red Oak, falls into a line running down the Missouri through St. Joe to Kansas City, and all Kansas. Passengers by this route to Kansas, see Illinois, Southern Iowa, and Missouri, and, by a slight divergence, can see Nebraska also.

Lovers of fine views should remember the Burlington Route for its towns "high-gleaming from afar"—its tree-fringed streams—its rough bluffs and quarries—its corn-ocean stretching over the prairies further than eye can reach.

Land-buyers will be sure to remember it, for they have friends among the two thousand who have already bought farms from Geo. S. Harris, the Land Commissioner of the B. & M. R. R. at Burlington, Iowa, or among the four thousand Home-steaders and pre-emptors who last year filed claims in the Lincoln Land Office, where "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm."

BOOKS FOR ALL

For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with Interlinear Word for word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price, $4

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave" and "How to do Business," in one vol., $2.25. Indispensable.

Life at Home; or the Family and its Members—Including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed. The Altar in the House, etc. By Wm. Aikman. $1.50;

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. THOMPSON. Fancy Cloth, $1.00.

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand-book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners, with a Chart for recording the sizes of the different Organs of the Brain, in the Delineation of Character, with upwards of 170 Engravings. Muslin, $1.25.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50;

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By W. PITTENGER. $1.50

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Beautifully Illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth, gilt, beveled boards. Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof Reading, and other Useful Information. Cloth, 75 cents.

Any of the above sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

The Phrenological Journal, an Illustrated, First-class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL and CHRISTIAN FAMILY COMPANION together for $3.50, or with the PIOUS YOUTH for $3.00. We commend the JOURNAL to all who want a good Family Magazine, and who don't?

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and State written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to,

H. R. HOLSINGER,
Dale City, Somerset Co., Pa.

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post pain,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	10 30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post pain,	.50
Per dozen, " "	5.50

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.7
Reserved at the office,	2.25
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express,	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	60
German & English Testaments,	.75

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25

32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION. 25

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Certificates &c.

MarriageCertificate, per doz., post paid, 0.30, CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP. Per doz, 0.20 TRACTS.—RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE, 12 pages five cents single copy; thirty cents a doz.

All orders should be accompanied with the money, and the name of person, postoffice county & state written in unmistakable letter

THE PIOUS YOUTH.

A MONTHLY PUBLICATION

Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.

One dollar a year in advance.

THE Christian Family Companion

Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements; that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
DALE CITY Somerset Co., PA.

Christian Family Companion

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—JESUS. At $1.50 Per Annum

VOLUME VII. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, DEC. 5, 1871. NUMBER 48.

For the Companion.

"He Left Himself not without a Witness."

Man was originally holy and upright, and when God took a review of man with the rest of his creation, he pronounced them all "very good." While he continued in this holy state, he had immediate fellowship with God his Maker, and, of course, he never doubted the existence of his Maker. Yea, even after sin had caused his fall from his primeval state, none of the first race were atheists. God was acknowledged as the great Creator, and was served accordingly.

Indeed, there never was a nation existing on this earth, but what acknowledged a supreme being, or, but what worshipped a God. And while some know whom they worship, numbers worship him ignorantly. Some may become very devils, yet they believe in the existence of a God: it is an inborn principle in man; and besides, God never left himself without a witness in that he did good, and gave us rain from heaven, and fruitful seasons, filling our hearts with food and gladness; for in him we live move and have our being; yea, we are even his offspring. But since man fell from his primeval state, there is none of the race good. God alone is good, and everything that is good and right must come from him, and him alone. "Every good and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights."

It was not my object to explain the text heading this article, but merely by it to prepare our minds for "a careful perusal" of "moral law," to which we are specially referred in Companion of Sept. 26th. Under the term "moral law" the writer speaks of certain well disposed, and good men in themselves, who do things that they would do, "if there were no God nor Bible." Atheism! if not the father himself, at least some kindred relation to him. Shocking! to hear such an expression from,—as I judge,—the pen of a Christian writer. As if a man could have a being, and act independent of God! If that worthy writer will be so kind as to give the subject a careful investigation, he will discover that it is God and eternity after all, that is the cause of the well disposition and good of these men. Why is it that the heathen nations sacrifice human sacrifices? Is it because they know it to be right, although not commanded by God? But we need not go to the heathens for illustrations; we need but refer to a community where the Bible is disregarded, and those well disposed and good men are of the things that had been. It is not because there are such well disposed and good men of themselves, that we have such a blessed family institution; that we have such a glorious government; that we have such glorious institutions of learning. No, for God is the founder of all these, and of every thing else that is good. If we had time and space we could trace all good back to God as the great first cause of all good. Let us take for instance, the writer of the article referred to, and if he will not "retain God in his knowledge, God will give him over to a reprobate mind, to do those things which are not convenient;" and he, as well as all others of the same class, will be "filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity; whisperers, backbiters, haters of God, despiteful, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things, disobedient to parents, without understanding, covenant-breakers, without natural affection, implacable, unmerciful." There are so many "Herods"—who do not give God the praise,—in the world, and for fear they would feed on the "moral law" article, I have given it a brief notice. Prove all things, and hold fast that which is good.

NOAH LONGANECKER.

EVERY matter has two handles, one of which will bear taking hold of, the other not. If thy brother sin against thee, lay not hold of the matter by this, that he sins against thee, for by this handle the matter will not bear taking hold of. But rather lay hold of it by this, that he is thy brother, thy born mate; and thou wilt take hold of it by what will bear handling.—Epictetus.

How Happy I'll Be.

A little one played among the flowers,
In the blush and bloom of summer hours;
She twined the buds in a garland fair,
And bound them up in her shining hair.
"Ah me!" said she, "how happy I'll be,
When ten years more have gone over me,
And I am a maiden, with youth's bright glow
Flushing my cheek and lighting my brow!"

A maiden mused in a pleasant room,
Where the air was filled with soft perfume;
Vases were near, of antique mold,
Beautiful pictures, rare and old,
And she of all the loveliness there,
Was by far the loveliest and most fair.
"Ah!" sighed she, "how happy I'll be
When my heart's true love comes home to me!
Light of my life, my spirit's pride,
I count the days till thou reach my side."

A mother bent over a cradle-nest,
Where she soothed her babe to his smiling rest,
"Sleep well," she murmured soft and low,
And she pressed her kisses on his brow;
"O child! sweet child, how happy I'll be
If the good God let the stay with me,
Till later on in life's evening hour,
Thy strength shall be my strength and tower."

An aged one sat by the glowing hearth,
Almost ready to leave the earth;
Feeble and frail, the race she had run
Had borne her along to the setting sun.
"Ah me!" cried she, in an undertone,
"How happy I'll be when life is done!
When the world fades out with its weary strife,
And I soar away to a better life."

'Tis thus we journey from youth to age,
Longing to turn another page,
Striving to hasten the years away,
Lighting our hearts with the future's ray;
Hoping on earth till its visions fade,
Wishing and waiting, through sun and shade,
Turning, when earth's last tie is riven,
To the beautiful rest that remains in heaven.

THE following is one of Mr. Prentice's little waifs, so many of which appeared in the Louisville Journal in its palmiest days:

"Sometime.—It is a sweet, sweet song, warbled to and fro among the topmost boughs of the heart, and filling the whole air with such joy and gladness as the summer birds do when the summer morning comes out of darkness, and the day is born on the mountains. We have all our possessions in the future which we call 'sometime.' Beautiful flowers and singing birds are there, only our hands seldom grasp the one, or our ears hear the other. But, oh reader, be of cheer, for all the good there is, is a golden 'sometime;' when the hills and valleys of time are all passed; when the wear and fever, disappointment and the sorrow of life are over, then there is the place and the rest appointed of God. Oh, homestead, over whose roof fall no shadows or even clouds: and over whose threshold the voice of sorrow is never heard; built upon the eternal hills, and standing with thy spires and pinnacles of celestial beauty among the palm trees of the city on high, those who love God shall rest under thy shadows, where there is no more sorrow nor pain, nor the sound of weeping, 'sometime.'"

For the Companion.

The Restoration of the Jews.

A REPLY TO SISTER DEARDORFF.

Dear Sister:—I find it necessary for several reasons to reply to your last rejoinder; the first is that you seem to put so much stress upon that little word "until." The Apostle says: "For I would not brethren that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceit." What mystery? "That blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in." The Apostles had much trouble, and even difficulty in their time to make the believing Jews see and understand that by embracing Christ they, were made free from observing the ceremonies, and carnal ordinances, contained in the law of Moses: and whether the apostle means that those who did believe, were partly blind because they could not see and understand the law of grace, but still sought their righteousness in the law of Moses; or whether he means that a part of this generation which was once called Israel was blind, and shall remain so until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in, is not for me to say. But admitting the latter to be his meaning: we find the Savior said that "Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles; until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." "And when ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh. For these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled. For there shall be great distress in the land and wrath upon this people. And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations: and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. And then shall they see the Son of Man coming in a cloud with power and great glory." Then shall all eyes be unsealed and all blindness depart, for "every eye shall see him"; not as the darkened Saviour, but as the King eternal in his majesty and glory. And then shall all the tribe of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord."—Here we have a plain statement how things are to go when the fulness of the Gentiles shall have come in, but not a word about the Restoration of the Jews. Not a word about making another covenant with them. Neither does any one say, Then shall be fulfilled that which is written by the prophet: so and so. The law and the prophets were until John; and it seems the Lord wanted us to know what was left unfulfilled, and he sent and signified it to his servant John, on the isle of Patmos.—But you say there will be a covenant made with the Jews after the fulness of the Gentiles has come in. You also say, "And when God will have cleansed them from all their iniquities, then will be the time of this regeneration, when they shall again repeople the land that God gave to their fathers. Then he will also cause them to dwell in their cities, and the wastes shall be builded.—Then will be the time when the twelve apostles will sit on twelve thrones, in the regeneration, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." Hem! Hem! How do you know it? Or are they only your assertions? Let us hold it up to the light and look at it. Shall they again repeople the land and build up the waste places? and in the Millennium? Oh, yes! says a friend; They shall build houses and dwell in them. They shall plant vineyards and eat the fruit of them." Sure! on the Sabbath! That great day of rest—that rest which yet remaineth for the people of God! Build houses, build cities, then! Why how much better would that time be than the present time? It could not be any better; for where there is building there is heavy and hard toil, much trouble, disappointment and sorrow. You ought soon to begin to see that the prophet is only speaking of what shall come to pass after their return from Babylon, and not of what shall come to pass in the Millennium, that time of rest for the people of God. And as for that covenant being yet in the future, I am willing to let our readers be judges of what the apostle writes to the Hebrews 10: 16–20, "This is the covenant that I will make with them after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my laws into their hearts, and in their minds will I write them; and their sins and iniquities will I remember no more. Now, where remission of these is, there is no more offering for sin. Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the vail, that is to say, his flesh." If this new and living way has not yet been made, then it is future.

The Savior says, they that have followed him in the regeneration—that is in the changing of their minds, in the renewing of their hearts, and in the washing of regeneration—they shall sit on twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel. He does not in the least allude to any special time of regenerating a people or nation in the future, but they that have followed him in the regeneration, in becoming new creatures in Christ Jesus until the time when he shall sit upon the throne of his glory, they also shall sit upon twelve thrones. It is not reasonable to suppose that only twelve apostles shall sit upon those twelve thrones, but that all those who followed him in the regeneration shall stand on an equal footing. By reference to the book of Judges we find that the judges were rulers or governors of God's people, and so we presume it will be when the saints shall sit on thrones, after the Millennium; there will be an innumerable multitude of subjects, since those who lived under the law could not be made perfect by observing the law.—No doubt after the Millennium there will be an inconceivably great work to be done until the restitution of all things shall be accomplished—until all that was lost through Adam's fall shall be restored, unless the "annihilation" doctrine should then creep in, as it now does among the brethren.

Concerning that city: It seems the word "forever" does not mean for ever, but only for a period, or "an age," as you say. On this point I now feel willing to yield partly to your explanation of the word "forever," since a number of instances appear in the Bible in which the word forever is used, which litterally do not mean forever. Thus it was promised time after time to Abraham and to his descendants that they should possess the land of Canaan, which the Lord would give unto them forever. But their possessions there have ceased and the word forever with it. By comparing the description of that city by Jeremiah, with the second chapter of Nehemiah, I feel willing to believe the prophet literally means nothing more than the re-building of Jerusalem, which had been thrown down and was in ruins at the time of writing his prophecy, which was re-built after their return from Babylon, and was "not thrown down any more forever," until their possessions in that land ceased. Now after yielding so far to your explanation, I hope you will see that the words any more and forever are reconciled, and that Jerusalem will never be re-built again; though it seemed to me ere now, that the prophet is not to be understood literally. Since the Lord promised Abraham that unto him and to his seed after him he would give the land wherein he was a stranger, forever. And the apostle Stephen says, he gave him none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on. Again the apostle to the Hebrew xi. 9, 10, says, "By faith he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise: for he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." So I understood the prophet to be describing the same city, whose builder and maker is God. I hope this will satisfy you on this point.

No, sister, it is not possible; I did not wish to take the advantage of you, by any means. I only wished to show you that this Jesus is that king of Israel of whom the prophets speak, and that he was recognized as that king by those who believed. Now, if you have a desire to have this controversy closed, I have no objection.

JAS. Y. BOZARTH.

Harrisonville, Pa.

For the Companion.

Answer to Brother Holder's Questions on Feet-washing.

Question 1st: "Where does the example, spoken of in the 13th chapter of John, 15th verse, begin?"

Answer: It commences with the word "began" in the 5th verse. The manner of the performance of Christ's example, is as follows: He "began to wash the disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded." What he did to the disciples includes the whole of his "example;" because he says, "I have given you an example that ye should do as I have done to you." Girding himself with a towel, and pouring water into a basin, are therefore no part of the "example," but preparatory acts.

Question 2nd: "Does the expression in the 14th verse,—"'Ye also ought to wash one another's feet'—make it binding on a single individual to do as Christ had done?

Answer: It does, if a strict observance of the "example" of Christ is binding; or, if his command "to wash one another's feet" is a duty; because to observe his "example" is a part of that command.

Question 3rd: "If so, how many should one wash and wipe to fill the example in the 15th verse?"

Answer: Christ did not tell his disciples to wash the feet of any particular number, but "to wash one another's feet." Now the words one another can include but two individuals, the one and the other; in this case, the one whose feet are washed, and the other who washes them: hence if one brother washes and wipes another brother's feet, he not only "fills the example" of Christ, but strictly obeys his command.

SILAS THOMAS.

Philadelphia, Pa.

For the COMPANION.

From Darkness to Light.

Behold the transforming power of the Savior's word and of God's Holy Spirit! Jesus bids the sons of Abraham to follow him; but so much were they still under the influence of Satan, that Peter is called by that name, and bidden to flee from the face of the Son of man. Two others desired fire to come down from heaven upon a certain city and consume it, as Elias had done. And they all seem to have had a great deal of the spirit of pride in them when they began to walk with the Savior. He tells them one truth after another; opens to their understanding the truths he had uttered in parables, and they obtained from him examples in conquering pride and the power of Satan, until they could say, "'Lo, we have forsaken all and followed thee;' "we will go with thee and to death." And to complete the work that was began in them by the Savior's word, and by their giving heed to it, the Holy Spirit is sent upon them. They and the house where they were, are filled, with it; their lives are changed; their consciences are cleansed; their hearts are warmed; their tongues are loosened; the power of Satan is fully broken, and they are now transplanted out of the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of God's dear Son. Their way is now turned from the paths of sin and death, to walk in that road of marvellions light. Hence they could pray for their enemies when they died, and cry, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do;" "lay not this sin to their charge;" and with faithful Paul, "I have fought a good fight, I have kept the faith." Is this not growing in grace and in knowledge? Is it not to pass from death unto life? Is not this to be born again? Is not this the victory we obtain through our Lord Jesus Christ? Is it not to pass from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God? See Acts 26; 18.

LANDON WEST.

Hearing Carelessly.

We crossed and recrossed the river several times by the ferry-boat at Basle. We had no object in the world but merely amusement and curiosity, to watch the simple machinery by which the same current is made to drift the boat in opposite directions from side to side. To other passengers it was a business, to us a sport. Our hearers use our ministry in much the same manner when they come to it out of the idlest curiosity, and listen to us as a means of spending a pleasant hour. That which should ferry them across to a better state of soul, they use as a mere pleasure-boat, to sail up and down in, making no progress after years of hearing. Alas! it may be sport to them, but it is death to us, because we know it will ere long be death to them.—Spurgeon

For the Companion.

Improve Your Talents.

We learn in the parable spoken by our Lord concerning the talents, that they did not all receive the same amount, but one received "five" another "two" and another only "one." Then the "man went into a far country," however with the understanding that he would come back again, and we believe that they were to improve their "talents" whether they had received few or many.

We learn that the one which had received five talents, told his Lord when he came, that he gained other five talents. He had improved his to double the amount he had received. Well, what was the answer of the Lord? Why, he called him a faithful servant, and told him that he should enter into the joys of his Lord.

The one that had received the two did likewise: he improved his to double the amount too, and he received the same promise as the first one did.

But the one that had received the one talent did not improve his. Perhaps he thought it would not be worth while, because he could not gain much anyhow, if he would even double it. But we must believe if he had improved his to double the amount he received, he would have received the same promise. But he was not a faithful servant; at anyrate his Lord did not call him a faithful servant, but a "wicked and slothful servant," and told him the one talent should be taken from him and be given to the one that had ten talents; and he was to be cast into outer darkness for not improving his talent.

Now brethren and sisters, we can apply this parable easily to ourselves. We have a Lord too, that was here once and gave us talents; and he is gone to a far country too, with the intention of coming back again to see how we improve our "talents." But we did not all get the same amount of talents; some of us have five, others two, and some only one. But thanks be to God that we all have one; there is not one of us that has none; and blessed be God that those that have only one have the same chance as those that have five if they improve them. But suppose we that have only one talent would do as the one did in the parable, instead of improving it would hide it and not try to improve it, then we would not fare any better than he did which hid his talent in the earth. When our Lord comes, he would call us wicked and slothful servants, and would give orders that we should be cast into outer darkness. But not only so, suppose the one that has five talents would not improve them he would not fare better when the Lord doth come than the one that received the one; but from him that has much is much required, and from him that has little, little is required. So we see that we are all again on the same level. Let us, then, not lie dormant; but let us all improve our talents whether we have many or few; for if we daily try and improve, and try and double them, then when our Lord doth come we will be called faithful servants, and can then enter in the joys of our Lord and be rulers over many things.

But perhaps some will say, "We have no talent at all; we cannot write for the press, or we cannot sing, neither pray." But let me tell you, dear ones, that would be contradicting the words of our Lord; for we all have one talent at least, and can all do some good one way or other. If we cannot preach, or sing, or pray in public, we surely can in private, if we only try andt hus improve our talent; but I am afraid there are some that say they cannot pray, that are burying their talent. You may not have the talent to pray in public, or to make a long prayer, but you can surely pray like one publican did, and we learn that he was more justified then the one that made a long prayer. So let us all try and do what we can; and that is all that is required of us; but I say yet in conclusion, that we must improve our time and talents as well as we can, if we are faithful servants.

NOAH B. BLOUGH

They that deny God destroy men's nobility, for certainly man is kin to the beast by his body; and, if he be not of kin to God by his spirit, he is a base and ignoble creature.—Bacon.

An inward sincerity will of course influence the outward deportment; but where the one is wanting, there is great reason to suspect the absence of the other.—Norris.

If you love God's precepts, you endeavor to perform them: if you do not, you are a self deceiver.

For the Companion.

The True Followers of Jesus.

Since there are so many professors of religion in the world, the question may be asked: Who are the true followers of Jesus? There are professers who pretend to show, not by their walk and conduct, but by their loud profession, that they are the true followers of Jesus. Such persons will tell us that we must first go to the mourner's bench and get religion, then pray much and we will get to heaven. We have no objection to praying much, if we pray aright; but "not every one that saith Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven." Such loud professors show plainly by their actions, (for actions speak louder than words,) that they are not the true followers of Jesus.

For example: I often get to see persons that declare they feel so happy in meeting, that they must even jump and shout for joy, and the next day we may see them quarrel with their neighbors, be angry, spiteful, and envious, even with their own church members. Such persons I can name nothingelse than hypocrites. Others again will go to the mourner's bench and mourn, mourn, mourn, until they get through, (as they call it: then they feel so happy that they shout for the first time. And not many days after you may see them out among their worldly companions, even cursing and swearing.

I must believe, according to God's word, that the true follower's of Jesus are those that have come to the koowledge of the truth as it is contained in God's word, those that are willing at all times to obey the commands of Jesus, walk in his footsteps, live in peace with all men if possible, &c.

Brethren and sisters, there is a day approaching, when they will rise up in the judgment and say, "Lord, have we not cast out devils in thy name and done many wonderful works?"—But he will say, "Depart from me, ye workers of iniquity, I never knew you: "depart ye cursed into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels." Brethren, let us be on our guard; Pray much for one another; live peaceably, love one another, but love God supremely above all things; that, when we must appear before him, we can hear that welcome sentence, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Farewell. P. F. Cupp.

For the Companion.

The Lord our Lamp.

For thou art my lamp, O Lord: and the Lord will lighten my darkness, 2 Samuel 22: 29.

In looking over the history of some of the eminent divines, we find a certain man, after being delivered from the hands of all his enemies, and out of the hands of Saul, making use of the above language in thanksgiving to Almighty God: "For thou art my lamp, O Lord; and the Lord will lighten my darkness." David fought the battles of the Lord, and though he was encompassed by his enemies, he did not despair. The Philistines were round about him, men of great stature, giants who were capable of carrying spears whose weight was three hundred shekels of brass; they pressed him sore, causing him to wax faint, his enemies thinking they had him slain; yet, after all those oppressions, this darkness which surrounded him, the Lord remembered him and brought him out in triumph over his enemies.

How thankful David was unto his maker for his deliverance! Immediately he turns to his great Benefactor, exultant with joy, and pours out his heart-felt thanks in language only realized by one saved from danger,—"The Lord is my rock, and my fortress, and my deliverer, I will call on the Lord, who is worthy to be praised." He approaches the Lord in full assurance of meeting his approbation; having that cheerful confidence within himself of having done his Masters will.

How pure and holy is the character we here represent, in proof of which read his own declaration, "the Lord rewardeth me according to my righteousness; according to the cleanness of my hands hath he recompensed me. For I have kept the ways of the Lord, and have not wickedly departed from my God. For all his judgments were before me; and as for his statutes, I did not depart from them. I was also upright before him, and have kept myself from mine inlquity." Showing unto us who acquaint ourselves with his history in working for the Lord, that chastity, purity, and righteousness had not been good and yet been rewarded in accordance with the same, he would not have been so kindly protected.

Reader, let us learn from this. If the Lord reward's us also according to our righteousness, will we be able to come out of this conflict of sin unscathed? Is our righteousness of such a nature that we will be able to stand? "Lord, if thou should'st mark iniquities, O Lord, who shall stand?" Hence the importance of becoming truly righteous. "For thou art my lamp, O Lord; and the Lord will lighten my darkness." To this the christian can affirm. When we refer back to our groveling in darkness, sin and folly, when we were awakened and came to ourselves, found ourselves on the road which leads to death, we were beckoned by that light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world" to turn to God and live. Our way was dark and dreary; the "waves of death compassed us; ungodly men made us afraid." Some of us were, perhaps, to great sinners, thinking we could not obtain pardon; others, again had too much self-righteousness, thinking their present condition good enough; yet after living on the barren mountains of sin, self-will, and non-reliance in God, being sorely pressed by the arch-enemy, eager to regain us, we at last saw the lamp of faith, repentance and strict obedience to God's law, arise. by which we were led into the baptismal font, there to wash away our sins and arise to newness of life, and have a right to the church of the true and living God. Then could we exclaim in the language of our text, "For thou art my lamp, O Lord; and the Lord will lighten my darkness."

In this world we may have various things that will light our pathway and make our darkness light. That parent becomes crippled for life; his way is dark; he may come to want; yet he has a son verging on maturity, soon to become the stay of the family. This son is a lamp to the parent. He lightens his darkness and the burden is more easily borne. That widow has an only daughter; little means for their support; she works hard for honest support. A kind friend or relative volunteers to support them, by which he becomes this lamp and their darkness is made light. Thus we may have various ways to light our pathway in this world, causing our labors to be more easily borne and endured.

But have we a lamp to light our pathway to the future world? O reader pause to consider. Unconverted friends, is your pathway dark? are you grasping the flickering lamp of honor and fame? You have too many striking illustrations of these being but momentary.

Look, if you please, to Kings and Emperors who have made conquest after conquest—made the surrounding nations tremble at their approach; yet after all their honor and fame they soon fell. Look at Alexander the Great, who subdued nation after nation, trying to make the world believe he was all-powerful, yet died in the attempt. Hence we concede that it is more than honor, fame, and riches, that will secure us the "pearl of great price." "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path;" hence we see that it is something that emanates from God that produces that light which brings us to him. "In the beginning was the word, and the word was with God, and the word was God." This refers to the divinity of Christ, "who is the propitiation for our sins and not for ours only but for the sins of the whole world." Then let us approach Christ with cheerful confidence, for he has said: "He that will come unto me, him will I in no wise cast ou." In Christ there is no darkness at all, all is bright. Let us then search the scriptures for in them we have eternal life. Let us lay hold on eternal life, that we may have a right to enter through the gates into the city of eternal bliss and felicity.

S. T. BOSSERMAN.

Dunkirk, Ohio.

Elijah In Trouble.

BY. H. A. BARCLAY.

The Prophet had been very zealous for the Lord of hosts, honored by the most remarkable answer to prayer, and had been successful in all his undertakings. In answer to his prayer the famine ensued, and at his request the heavens gave rain. When he cried unto the Lord on Mount Carmel that fire would come down and consume the sacrifice, the element was sent. When he ordered the slaughter of the prophets of Baal men were found ready to execute the sentence. Yea, God had highly favored and honored him, insomuch that the heavens and earth were placed at his command. When he slept under the juniper tree the angel awaked him and showed him the cake and cruse of water which God had provided for him. There he had rested in his flight from Jezebel, and in his despondency had cried out: "O, Lord, take away my life!" Well might he have used the language of David—"Why art thou cast down, O, my soul, and why art thou disquieted in me? hope thou in God." Why should the Christian give way to fear? Why should distress annoy the soul, when the kind promises of a faithful God are given for our support? If the sparrow can not fall to the ground without our heavenly Father, shall not the child recieve his care? Yet this strange inconsistency of the Prophet is seen in the lives of many of the most prominent men in the Church. David showed this same despondency and unbelief when he uttered the words: "I shall one day perish by the hands of Saul." God had made with him an everlasting covenant, ordered in all things and sure; yet unbelief told him he would be cut off, and would leave no posterity to sit upon his throne. More than once did Abraham waver in faith, though God had promised that the earth should be blessed in him and in his seed. Once did Moses doubt, and sinned in speaking unadvisedly with his lips, though God promised that he would go before him and lead him safely on his journey. Even now, with all the advantages we enjoy—with the clearer light of Christianity—we listen to the same doleful strains of sorrow and unbelief. The majority of Christians confess that peace in the soul often gives place to trouble.

Few is the number who can say: I never have any clouds to cross my path. An aged servant of the Lord testified, on his death-bed: "For seventy years I have not had a shadow to obscure my sun." If the Christian could always say: "I know that my Redeemer liveth," he would not be annoyed by the trials of life.

"Could we but climb where Moses stood,
And view the landscape o'er,
Not Jordan's stream, nor death's cold flood,
Should fright us from the shore."

Oh, for the strong faith of Paul, who, amid danger and death itself, could joyfully say, "None of these things move me." Of what avail would have been the threatenings of Jezebel if Elijah had retained his trust in God? Where is the power of an arm of flesh when God is our strength? "Because the Lord is on my side I will not be moved." "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea." "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee." Can we not trust the promise of the eternal God, who keepeth covenant and mercy from geenration to generation—who is slow to anger and plenteous in mercy—who pitieth those that fear him, even as a father pities his children? Surely God will not forsake his children whom he loveth, and hath purchased with his own blood. "For if, when we were enemies we were reconciled to God by the death of his son; much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life." Trust in the Lord at all times, ye righteous, for nothing shall separate you from that eternal love which, for you, poured out on Calvary the precious blood of Jesus.

Character.

Many a man with the aid of dress, appears on the street to be in perfect health, and we can never tell until we have lived with him at the same table, that his hair was another's; under the same roof, and sat with him that one eye was of glass; that one limb was of cork, and that after every meal he was racked with dyspeptic pains; that for the first hour or two every morning he was racked with the cough of a chronic bronchitis, asd never knows what it is to enjoy a full night's refreshing sleep.

So it is with the characters of men. We may visit them and they may visit us; we may be in the same church for years, and transact much public business together, but it is impossible to form any true estimate of a man's principles until we have had an opportunity of trusting him and he of trusting us. The truth is no man can be assured that he is an honest man until he has had an opportunity of cheating his friend out of a thousand dollars without being found out—and did'nt do it. No wonder the Bible cautions us all to "go softly," and "let Him that standeth take heed lest he fall."—Christian Weekly.

For the COMPANION.

Education.

Much is said about this important though sadly misused element of civilization. And we can not wonder at it a great deal, when we consider the various improper uses to which it is applied. When I say misused, I mean that it is regarded, by too many merely as one of the most fashionable attainments, and upon this are based a great many familiar examples.—Then as a matter of course as such it is used by those, whenever opportunity presents, and not as a national, moral, and intellectual benefit.

But let us reason the case. Suppose A. and B. are very wealthy gentlemen. A is one of those fashionable characters: he makes himself prominent by flourishing the fullest purse, spending the most money, riding in the finest carriages, and wearing the finest clothes; while B. on the other extreme, acts the miser. Then, is it said that C. as a meek and lowly follower of Christ, could not be intrusted with the wealth of either A or B and retain his religious principles?

Fathers and mothers, can you, when you shall have ceased to breathe and the little vines of the earth are drawing their twining tendris over your graves, intrust the poor, earthly remains, the rewards of many days, hard labor toils and cares. to your children?

If you have the assurance, by your successful efforts in training them in the skill of sharp trading and close management, by a daily routine of applications and examples, it is then that you think you can place the utmost confidence in them. But why not give them something that noncean take from them, nor time erase, which by half the pains taken to instruct them how to gain and save the "almighty dollar" they will know how to use and not abuse?

But says one, "I am very much in favor of a common School education." Well, let us see whether or not you are. We will have to weigh you by your own external actions and interests manifested towards it.

You, I presume have the benefits of a District School, if nothing more: and in all probability have had for a number of years. Reflect and ascertain if you can, the number of times you have visited that School during the last scholastic year. How often have you caused the young hearts to leap and the bright eyes to sparkle with joy by your presence? Do you think that you have attended to this matter too often, or not often enough? Quite likely the latter.—And why is it? Have you not the time to spare? Each morning and evening as day after day rolls round, your horses, sheep and cattle have to be under your observation, to see whether they are properly cared for—to see whether they improve as they should; which is all very good. But alas! how are your children cared for? You know nothing of the one thousand and one bad habits your teacher may be addicted to, infusing them into the very souls of his pupils. Then if your brutes have such undivided attention, how much more should your children have? A school having the special interests of the patrons and a thorough working on the part of the teacher by a desire to do the very best that he can do, establishing good, Christian principles at every step, undoubtedly is worth more than all the rare gems that the world contains.

There are still others, who, having no children to send to school, have little or no concern about the future welfare of their fellow-beings, and think they are under no obligations. Now that is entirely wrong, because every one has his influence more or less, and they might be the means of adding a little more soil to the barren places, from which, if seed is sown and properly cultivated, fruit may spring up and yield abundantly, if it is nowhere but in a school-room.

Then we all have a work to do, and it doesn't cease by attending church regularly, holding family worship, or wearing plain clothes; but it is here and there and everywhere, which being all combined forms a beautiful golden chain, the end of which we can not trace, nor the worth estimate.

A. SAGER.

Dayton, Va.

For the COMPANION.

A Fairer Land.

What is the cause of so much migration—the inhabitants of earth moving to and fro? Are their present habitations not good enough for them? Have they become tired of, or dissatisfied with, what they have? Or do they desire to accumulate wealth, or have a view of the world? They hear of fairer lands and brighter prospects, and this is what causes emigration. They are not satisfied with what they have. They are craving more of this world's goods; and some want to see the world. What caused the migration to America after its discovery? They heard of the fair lands of America. Yes, they heard of the beautiful rivers, extensive plains and fertile valleys, and these brought them to America, and do to-day: They hear of fair lands and of many advantages. But our ancestors had many difficulties to contend with; they could not peaceably people this continent; they warred many years before they could enjoy this fair land as their successors do. And not only have they migrated to and freed America, but have peopled a new world, and planted a mighty nation, where people are now enjoying the fruits of their labors without molestation.

And so the people of the eastern States hear the fame of the far West; and then start on their journey westward to enjoy a fairer land and better advantages. But how frequently are they disappointed in their anticipations! Perhaps after leaving their beautiful and luxurious homes in the East, they plunge into poverty and starvation, (not regarding the West as unfertile, for we believe that in a few years it will be equal to any part of the East) but some people are in the habit of rather enjoying the stool of do-nothing than the plow-handle, or some other honest way to retain their present homes: and consequently they will sell their homes, go West, founding their anticipations on the reports which they have heard, and if disappointed will probably terminate in their ruin.

My brethren and sisters, we too are emigrating. But where to, and what for? Ah, we are traveling to that fair and beautiful land, whence no traveller has ever returned, there to enjoy the presence of our Maker, and dwell in everlasting bliss with the sanctified which our Savior redeemed. We, too, as the ancestors of this country must war, not with carnal weapons as did they, but with "the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God."—For the word of God "is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any two edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and morrow, and is a dis-corner of the thoughts and intents of the heart."

Our war must be with our own corrupt nature. We must subdue carnality. We must fight very hard, sometimes, to gain the victory. The lust of the eye, the lust of the flesh, and the pride of life must be brought into subjection; and to do this requires a mighty struggle, for these embrace our whole nature. But, my dear fellow travelers, let us fight bravely, and by the help of God gain every battle; for the wars of this life will not last long; then we can land, on the other shore, the shore of that fair and happy land.

But what report have we of that fair land which we expect to people? Why we have the assurance of all the good who have gone before, for they never return. Paul speaks of that blissful land which he expects to inhabit; and so does the evangelist John; we have the report of the Son and heir himself. He says, in my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you." Peter says, "blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ; which, according to his abundant mercy, hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God, through faith, unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time." And another assurance of Paul, "For we know if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." There are many evidences we could give, for the whole word is evidence itself.

As I have already intimated, we have more to do than wait till the Master is ready to remove us to that fair land. Paul says, "If ye then are risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affections on things above, and not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God." To set our affections on things above is also against our carnal nature; for as we are carnal, our natures will love the things which pertain to carnality. With God all things are possible. The Lord will not suffer us to be tempted above that which we can bear. We must labor hard and strive patiently for the rest which is reserved for us in heaven. How frequently we forget that for which we are laboring. But not so in temporal affairs: we never forget that we are laboring to procure for us and our families comfortable homes; that we may in old age enjoy this world with ease. But the persons are rare, who enjoy tranquility of mind. There is always a care to molest the mind and daggers to pierce the heart. The world, enchanting as it may be, can never afford real pleasure, except to the Christian when feasting on the rich treasures of God's word. These are among the only pleasures which never are regretted. Why, then, is it that so many stand without, and do not come and join our little band? for we are traveling to that fair and happy land where neither death nor sorrow can enter to destroy our happiness.—There will be all peace and joy, and the presence of the Lord forever.—"Eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither have entered the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him.' My dear reader, we are all invited to come and enter the joys of our Father. Since he has given his only begotten Son to redeem fallen humanity and prepared us a beautiful home, why not strive to be found worthy of acceptance and entrance into life eternal.

S. G. KELLER.

Dickinson, Pa.

Divinity of Christ.

We would invite the attention of those who advocate that our Savior is the eternal God, to the following passages of scripture, which we should be pleased to have them reconcile.

The first is found in the Psalms, where David says: "The Lord said unto my Lord, sit thou on my right hand till I make thy foes thy footstool." Peter rehearses the words of the Psalmist in his sermon on the day of Pentecost. Acts 2: 34. When Stephen was stoned, he looked steadfastly up into heaven and "saw Jesus standing on the right hand of God." Acts 7: 55. "We are children of God, and if children, then heirs, heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ;" if so, be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together. Romans 8: 17. "And ye are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone in whom (Christ) all the buildings fitly, framed together groweth into a holy temple in the Lord, in whom ye are also builded together for a habitation of God. Ephesians 32: 20–22. "And God hath both raised up the Lord and will also raise up us." 1 Cor. 6: 14. "The head of every man is Christ, and the head of the woman is the man, and the head of Christ is God." 1 Cor. 11: 13. "Who being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God.' Phil. 2: 6.

John says: "No man has seen God at any time." John 4: 12. And says in the same chapter that we have seen the Son, and do testify that God sent the Son to be the Savior of the world. John 4: 14. Now the apostle Paul argues in this way, "that ye are the temple of God, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone, in whom (Christ) all the building fitly framed together, groweth unto a holy temple in the Lord, in whom (Christ) ye are also builded together for a habitation of God." Ephesians 3: 21, 22. Brother Teeter quotes Paul's language in Colossians 2: 9. "In him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily." Now with the same propriety we might claim that we are God, for he "That dwelleth in love dwelleth in God and God in him." John 4: 16. Now I do not see how we can be heirs of God and joint heirs of the Lord Jesus, if he is the only true and eternal God.

WILLIAM H. CADWALLADER.

Piqua, Ohio.

For the Companion.

Moral Influence.

It is manifestly true that Christianity must exert a more powerful and wholesome moral influence than any other doctrine. A man who is strongly tempted to commit adultery, robbery, murder, or any other gross sin, is more likely to be deterred from such criminality by the influence of the religion of Christ, than by any or all the isms that now claim to be moral agencies, acknowledging God as the author of all things but denying the record and divinity of his Son, Jesus Christ.

God's laws, in regard to the goodly framework of the energies and activities of the material universe, are acknowledged by all to be, in a sense, inviolably fixed, yet man, being only the roof and crown of things telluric, did, may, and actually does thwart the purpose of God to his own hurt; thus violating the natural result of the divine law. But the inviolability of all God's laws that pertain to man subsists in the fact that the natural or temporal and the eternal consequences of sin cannot be changed only through the death of the author of those principles of truth.

If, then, he has not died, and thus nullified the force of that otherwise unalterable law, all are surely in their sins, and inevitably subject to the consequences of that power, and thus the would-be morally scientific man, the materialist, and all who deny the power of the gospel, with the mental capacity they must invariably have to hold such positions, find themselves tangled and eternally lost in the result of their own theory without such a Savior as Christ. In short, whatever demonstrates the being and power of God regarding mankind, also attests the necessity of redemption by the blood of Christ.

Two diverse hypotheses include all the essential suggestions of the activities and results by which man is surrounded. They are, (1) The UNBELIEVER, which affirms the existence of God, but so confounds him with the Bible, by denying part of it, as to attribute to him the fallibility and changing sentiments of men; (2) The BELIEVER, which affirms that Jesus Christ is the Son of God and that the record given of him in the Bible is true.

From the time that the little child begins to be conscious that it exists in the world, it sees, hears, feels or knows something; and the things which come in contact with these sense have the chief bearing upon the formation of its character. When the mind is fully matured, its acceptation or denial of the truth as it is in Jesus is, in a great measure, the result of those previous impressions; which are divided by the word of God into two great antagonistic, influential powers, being respectively the power of Satan and the power of God. The causes, with the existence and influence of all that is done among the children of men, are separated and distinguished by the word of God, answering to the spirit of Christ and of anti-Christ.

From the cradle to the grave mankind are invited to the consideration of laws and consequences, and their inability to accept each of these invitations soon discovers the line between God and man; yet there are many who talk so stridently of earthly development and progress as to restrict God to a very obscure corner of his creation, falling into the very error they pretend to condemn, namely, to make God the consequence instead of the cause.

It is very unsafe for the follower of Jesus to lend an attentive ear, indiscriminately, to all the bold speculations of our day, wherein a confident finger seems to be laid upon the very heart of the mysteries which confirm the attributes of Deity. Unbelief is the inevitable result of any attempt to define God more fully than he has himself done. But the believer, having the mind of Christ, and thus the advantage of the Holy Spirit, whose office is to lead him into all truth, will be temperate in receiving and proving all things, and so avoid those dangerous excesses.

The highest aim of the believer is to base all his transactions and processes upon the religion of Christ, and to ground the character he seeks to form in himself, and in those around him, upon the firm foundation of Christian faith and love. He does not by any means acknowledge godliness in a mere knowledge of tongues and sciences, but holds firmly the doctrine of the Master, that "the soul is worth more than the whole world," and consequently by far the better part of man's immaterial nature whose health and nurture are there, fore far more essential than the unfolding and training of the mind.

J. B. GARVER.

Shirleysburg, Pa.

For the COMPANION.

Stray Thoughts on Time.

We live in a progressive age; an age of improvement and learning. It is the infallible law of nature that the world moves, and as a natural consequence, we move with it. However unmindful we are of discharging our duties incumberent upon us, we are nevertheless propelled onward across the tempest-tossed ocean of life, upon the fleeting wings of time, to our final destination. Then if we have answered the design of our Creator whilst sojourning here upon this busy stage of action, all will be well with us in time and eternity. If not, our doom will be irrevocably sealed, however much we might desire to retrace our fallen steps. Let us then for a moment reflect upon the course of time. God requires at our hands certain reasonable things to accomplish, and thus puts us under obligations to him. Now if we fail to discharge said obligations during our allotted time here, be they civil or ecclesiastical, secular or spiritual, we are, according to the immutability of his counsel, held strictly accountable for the same.

Time is very precious, and when once lost is irretrievably lost, so that we should be very careful to improve it to the very best advantage possible. In the multifarious avocations of life the major part of our time is occupied in accumulating this world's goods, and preparing food and raiment for the nourishment and comfort of our frail bodies. In every pursuit of life intervals frequently occur, in which the time is not all necessarily taken up, such unemployed time or spare moments, as it is familiarly called, should be well disposed of. We should aim to improve ourselves intellectually, morally, and spiritually, whenever an opportunity is afforded to do so. If our secular affairs demand all our time, we are still in duty bound to reserve a part of it to attend to the more important and higher duties we owe to the spiritual man.

W. G. SCHROCK.

Berlin, Pa.

Would you be a gentleman? Then obey the following rules: Never smoke or chew tobacco, or drink any kind of intoxicating liquors. Never swear, lie or use profane or vulgar language, in the presence of ladies, or in the presence of gentlemen, or in the presence of anybody, or when you are alone. Avoid evil thoughts, and if they arise in your mind banish them as soon as possible. Do right at all times and under all circumstances.—Be yourself, don't try to be somebody else. Be a man. Then you are a gentleman.

D. S. M.

Contentment is a pearl of great price, and whoever procures is at the expense of ten thousand desires, makes a wise and happy purchase.

Christian Family Companion.

DALE CITY, PA., Dec. 5, 1871.

Genteel Schools.

"Every Sunday-school ought to be a mission Sunday-school. I deprecate this distinction between them. We are radically wrong when we build a genteel Sunday-school for our own children.—The church whose carpets are too nice, whose pews are too carefully covered, whose architecture is too fine to admit God's poor, ought to be torn down and thrown into the river. I do not know when I have had myself so stirred down to the very boot-heels as I was in Chicago, when I heard a member of a wealthy church of my own denomination, on Wabash avenue, say that they could not have this class of children taught in their school, but that the mission-school was the place for them. Like John, who fled from the bath when the heretic Celsus entered, saying, "I am afraid to remain, lest the bath should fall in upon us both," so would I be afraid to teach in such a Sunday-school, lest the roof should fall in judgment upon the gentility that will not admit God's poor. There will be this punishment, which will be sufficient, God knows: You will bring up children to be genteel, useless, worthless kind of children. Your children need this association with the poor and the wretched more than anything else. It is your only way of making earnest, energetic, missionay Christians of them, and I would rather send my children half a mile farther to a mission-school than to any one of these genteel schools close at hand."

Perhaps our readers may think there is no need for the above item in our columns; but we were impressed with its lesson, for the reason that we have heard it objected to having the Sunday-school in our meeting-houses because it will carry dirt into them. There is danger that we, too, are getting over nice, even with our religion. It is well to keep God's house neat and clean, but it should not be suffered to get too fine for use, like some of our modern dwelling houses, that a small one must be built aside of it to eat and live in. Let the children have a place and a share in our meeting-houses, and they will feel that there is a home in the church for them. If you are particular about the tidiness of your house, as every christian ought to be, have some one stationed at the door, during muddy weather, to see that feet are wiped.—Why we venture to say that it will even pay to have a Sunday-school in a meet-house, by saving of cleaning, in the course of time, for the young men who have been well trained in Sunday-school when boys, will never enter God's house with dirty feet, or dirty-making mouths. Cleanliness is a proper subject to be taught in Sunday-schools. And when taught it should also be practiced.

It will do our children good also to be brought together once a week; to have the rich and the poor (for it does happen from some cause that our Brethren's children have rich and poor parents) associate with each other. It helps to keep up a healthy equality, and to keep down and break up aristocracy. It makes a social society of a whole community, which otherwise would be cut up into circles, parties and families.

Volume. VIII and its Prospects.

Two more numbers will complete the present volume of the COMPANION. Already we are making preparations for volume eight, and are solicitous for its success. So far as indications are concerned, there never was a time in the history of our office, when the prospects were fairer for a successful volume. Volume seven is closing in peace. No violent discussions have occurred during the year, and scarcely any controversy of any kind. We are not sure that that fact will recommend the paper, but we shall see what virtue there is in peace. Nor do we claim any credit for it. Our readers and patrons did not see proper to spring a controversy upon us, and so we had none. They therefore deserve the praise, and must have it. It is true that some petty issues were made, and a few friendly discussions indulged in, upon important subjects, but all have been pleasantly conducted, and our declining sun, unless a violent storm descend upon us in a week, will set in peace

From all parts yet heard from, the prospects are very encouraging. Many agents say they can double their former lists, and some have already done more. Sister Jane Marquis of Wabash Indiana, sent us seventeen new subscribers, and thinks she can secure nearly all the old ones. Others have sent us a number of new names.

Then there are many new agents in the field, in places where little or no effort was made heretofore. Altogether we are quite hopeful for the future. And now is the time, brethren, sisters and friends, to make success a certainty, by active work. But we are so confident that every one is at his post, that it appears like waste of space to attempt to rally them.

Webster's Unabridged Dictionary as a Premium.

We offer Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, selling for $ 12, as a premium for 50 subscribers, with full pay by the first of February.

Or we will send the same dictionary for six dollars to any one sending us twenty-five subscribers and full pay. In each case the Express charges to be paid by the receiver. These subscribers need not all be sent at once. Names may be added until the first of February. This we regard as a good offer, being over fifteen per cent. and no investment.

Herein Fail Not.

We mean, to sign your name to your lists of subscribers, as agent.—This is highly important to us.—When it is done we annex Agent to the name in our subscription books, which enables us to send the prospectus to the proper person at the close of the year; in which we have been much perplexed. We have a line specially ruled for that purpose on our blank lists. Please do not fail to fill it.

Do not Delay.

It would be a very great favor to us if our subscribers would send in their names by the 20th to 25th of the present month. Last year the heavy part of our subscriptions came in as late as the first of January, and for near two weeks we were in a perfect dilemma.

Special Notice.

Some of our friends still address us at Tyrone. They will please notice that our address is now Dale City, Somerset county, Penn'a. Of course our mail matter is forwarded to us, but it is nevertheless subject to delay and extra risks.

Price of Brethren's Almanac.

Single Copy, post paid	.10
Half Dozen, " "	.40
One Dozen, " "	.75

The Pious Youth.

Probably most of the readers of the COMPANION have some knowledge of the PIOUS YOUTH. It is now nearly two years since its appearance before the public. During this time it has made a number of warm friends, and, we think, has been a means of doing good; yet it has not been as generally patronized by the Brethren as a periodical of its rank should be. Considerable thought and labor have been bestowed on it to make it worthy of support; but up to this time the labor, mental and mechanical, seems not to have been duly appreciated. The time has now come when the PIOUS YOUTH is placed before you for trial.—You are called upon to decide for or against it. If your decision is favorable, it will continue its monthly visits; but if you decide against it, the Youth must die, and its lessons of piety be lost. To assist our readers in making a sattsfactory decision, such as they will not repent of we offer the following thoughts.

We live in an age of reading. Our children are taught to read while quite young; and many of them acquire a taste for reading, and they do and will read.—To this we think no parent, who is solicitous for the welfare of his children, will object. Instead of opposing this inclination for reading, it should be encouraged for certain it is, if spare time be not improved in this way, it will be wasted in some of the many follies of this age of vanity. The world is flooded with books pamphlets, and papers that are full of poison. We may warn our children of the danger, and advise them not to read such stuff; we may even forbid them to read it, yet if we do not place something better into their hands, they will, at every favorable opportunity, indulge in it.—Thus through want of anything better, they will be tempted to disregard our advice, to violate our instructions, to imbibe moral poison, that will neutralize, benumb their moral sensibilities, sap their virtue, and lead them into crime and ruin.

It is the aim in publishing the Youth to encourage its young readers, your sons and daughters, to be good, industrious, temperate, obedient to their parents, kind to each other, obliging to all, and to lead them to remember their Creator in the days of their youth. Thus the Youth goes forth as a true friend in this time of need, to assist our children in the formation of their habits and characters. In short it is designed to interest, please, and instruct its readers: to encourage them in what is good, and to protect them from evil in its various enchanting forms.

Do you, brethren and sisters, think we need such a paper? If you do, it is offered to you in the Pious Youth. Will you have it? The time is short. A few weeks more will decide this question.—We beg of you to look to your interests and to the welfare of your sons and daughters. If your mind is not clearly made up against it, send your names at once and try it for one year, and then you will be qualified to decide intelligently. Be careful that you do not neglect this matter and then regret it when it is too late. It seems to us that there ought to be an immediate uprising in defence of our juvenile paper; such an uprising as would show to our children that we think of their welfare, and to all around us that we appreciate and will support what is for the good of all concerned.

We just now think of a juvenile monthly of 24 pages, including cover, at 1,00 a year, established in 1865, that boasts of a circulation of 80,000. Why is it that our juvenile of 36 pages, including cover, and with more wholesome reading, must starve to death for want of support? We are assured that it is not because the Brethren are unwilling to encourage and patronize a good enterprise, for they are: but it is because they do not clearly see the necessity of having such a paper, nor the advantages to themselves and their children. We therefore urge every reader of the Companion to think of this matter seriously, and at once. We feel assured that upon due reflection there will be but few that would be willing that the Youth should be discontinued; and it is hoped that you will come to the rescue at once, without a day's delay. Send your names, and the names of as many more as will agree to take it, between this and the 20th of December. With this appeal, and what we intend to do to extend the circulation of the Pious Youth, we hope to comfort ourself even if it must die.

J. W. B.

Have you subscribed for the COMPANION and PIOUS YOUTH for 1872? Now is the time to do so.

Affliction of Brother Keller.

We learn, with regret, that Elder Daniel Keller, of Cumberland county, Pa., is sick with small pox. It appears that several weeks ago an old man came to brother Keller's, having been sent there and told that they would send nobody away. He was then so sick that he was scarcely able to be up. They made him a bed, gave him warm teas, and treated him as you can imagine they would do if you were ever at their house. It soon became evident that the man had the small pox. The decision of the physician was that in justice to the community, the old man must be taken to the alms house. This was done, and it is said he is recovering. In this way brother Daniel caught his disease. He is, however, said not to have a very severe attack, and we hope soon to hear that he has recovered, and that the pestilence may not spread in his family or neighborhood.

When brother Keller has recovered, we wish him to report and to tell us how he feels toward those who imposed such a loathsome disease upon him, and whether he will still persist in harboring everybody who knocks at his door, and if so, how he will justify himself in such a course. We do not suppose it a very severe task to do so, but believe it would be profitable to our readers to have it done.

Answers to Correspondents.

J. FRANK ROSENBERGER:—It expires with the close of the volume.

C. SHANK:—Your communication in reply to the queries on feet-washing is at hand, but as it is the same in substance with the answers given by brother Thomas, which are already in type, it may perhaps not appear. It is seldom that two communications from different persons agree so nearly. The contribution from brother R. was received, and we still expect to publish it, but wish to choose our own time. So it should be, we think.

I. L. GLASS:—It will be satisfactory.

J. F. ROSS:—For the terms see last page of C. F. C.

J. H. SMITH:—We will order it for $1 25. We have no agreeament for 1872.

"MOVED FROM WHERE I DID LIVE."—Of course you did, naturally enough, but where did you live? This is what concerns us at present. Will Alfred Stowell or some other person please explain?

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Brother Henry :—If you please let this find room in the COMPANION. I will try to reveal to the brethren more fully why I said in my other piece what I did about my present condition. That dear sister, E. Williams, wrote me a good, encouraging letter in the COMPANION, for which I am thankful. I am always glad and ready to receive instruction from my dear brethren and sisters. I know the blind are not all happy alike; some are happier than others because they are not all in the same condition. My condition is such as sometimes causes me much trouble and sorrow. In the first place, I cannot go to meeting, as I would like to when I am out here. We are living off to one side, where there are but few members living in the neighborhood, and we have to go a good ways to get to meeting. And you know that all men have not faith. Some seem to have faith, but are of weak works. The only full enjoyment I have in this life is when I can assemble with the people of God, where the word of God is preached in its purity. But I am sometimes starving for spiritual food; greatly desiring the crumbs of the rich provision that fall from my Master's table. Sisters, remember me, you who have parents or husband to take you to meeting; and if you have not, the most have good eyes that they can start the day before and walk there. I am often made in my soul to cry mightily unto the living God for his aid, that my condition may be better, in both spiritual and temporal affairs.

And to all the brethren that have houses and homes and bread enough and to spare, I would say: Remember that Jesus said whatsoever you have done to the least of these my brethren, you have done unto me.

Secondly I will tell you about my temporal affairs. I am deprived of the use of my means, and have been for years. I used to have a piece of land and a house of my own, and was keeping house by myself. I was advised to sell it and live on the interest of my money. So it was sold; I put the money into the hands of the church for safe keeping, and to let it out to the best advantage. So two brethren were chosen as guardians to attend to these things. A man borrowed the money to make a payment on his land. He has a large family to support and his health is poor, so he is not able to raise the interest for me, much less the principal. If I rightly understand the minutes of the last A. M., I would not be allowed to close the mortgage. I have to depend mostly on my own hands to make a living with my wheel and knitting needles. I can buy all the clothing I need, but I cannot work for a home. Brethren and sisters, if you know of any business that I could get into in order to help me to a home, I would be very thankful. If I could get to a place that I could attend meeting. Brethren, sisters and friends, all to whose notice this may come, I beg of you do write a few words of comfort and consolation to me through the COMPANION. I would be very thankful for a single word of advice and encouragement. And I also look for it, as I am leaning and depending on the bosom of the church, as a little child leans and depends on the bosom and protection of its mother—on the arm and bosom of God, my heavenly Father, as a little child does on the arm of its earthly father.

HANNAH M. BURGET.

Millwood, Ind.

Sabbath-School Report — White Branch, Ind.

In the Summer of 1870, we had Sabbath School at this place; but last spring we neglected starting up until after harvest. By being so long without we were brought to see the benefit and necessity of sabbath school; and by the council of the church, the Brethren met and organized on the 20th of August, by appointing brother Daniel Bowman Superintendent, who served whenever his arrangements permitted him to be with us; brother Benjamin F. Koons assistant Superintendent; Abraham Bowman Secretary; Jacob Clapper Treasurer. Organized three male classes and two female classes.—Teachers appointed as follows:

1st. Male Class,	Jacob Clapper;
2nd	"	Henry Moore;
3rd	"	Abram. Bowman;
1st Female,	Catharine Ulrich;
2nd	"	Priscilla Harter;
Infant	"	Susan Machett.

Our school continued until the 14th of November, with which we adjourned for the winter season. We commenced reading, for our lessons, with the 19th chapter of St. Luke's gospel, and read to the 5th chapter of John. The scholars report 1840 chapters read at home, during our short term; and 231 verses memorized. The average number of scholars in attendance 28. This seems to be a small number; but all seemed to be much interested, and we hope it was profitable. We have had the experience of sabbath school and have been without. When we have none, our children have nothing of so much importance to engage the mind, and of course some are idle, while some are attending schools of other denominations where non-essentials are taught, while we brethren and sisters, believe that everything Christ enjoined is essential. Says he, "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." Then brethren and sisters, we certainly cannot find a better plan to teach our children the right ways of the Lord than to have our own sabbath-schools, as well as to teach them at home. ABRAHAM BOWMAN, Sec.

Hagerstown Ind.

Brother Holsinger :—By way of encouragement to all that are in Jesus, we will say that the ark of the Lord is moving on slowly with us, in the George's Creek congregation, Fayette Co., Pa., this season, and many hearts were made glad to see sinners turn ro the Lord. Some three weeks ago we received six by Baptism; in the course of two weeks on Saturday nine more, among whom was Elder James Quinter's daughter. On Sabbath following three more; and in the course of a week four more were received. Those were young persons. Some others desire to be with us. My hearts desire is, that they may live up to their baptismal promise before many witnesses.

I. J. COVER

Brother Holsinger :—In reading over the notice of our communion meeting, (Conemaugh) published in Companion number 4[illegible], we see that the name of brother Jacob Kelso of Plum creek, Armstrong county, Pa., is not among the list of ministers names. If our notes omitted the name of brother Kelso, we did not do it intentionly; we love him very much, hence this explanation.

STEPHEN HUNTSBERGER.

Brother Holsinger :—For your encouragement I would say that the present volume has given me great satisfaction, as I think it has to all its patrons who are interested in the "promotion of truth, and the exposition of error," and who are willing to exercise Christian charity and forbearance for mistakes and imperfections in others. Brother J. B. Shoemaker will assist in canvassing this district, and we confidently expect by uniting our efforts to enlarge your patronage this year over last year.

I hope to have the pleasure of making your personal acquaintance at next Annual Meeting, if the Lord spares us. We have commenced making arrangements for it, and if your experience at former meetings will suggest anything that would help us to perfect our arrangements for '72, it would be thankfully received. We solicit suggestions of that kind. Hoping and praying for your prosperity, both temporarily and spiritually,

I am fraternally yours,

E. L. YODER.

Brother Holsinger :—I came here with my family on the 23d of October, 1868. There were no members here then, except my wife and I. I knew there were Brethren near Vinton, but we did not get acquainted with them until the Spring following, when they had a love-feast, and we were present to share their love and form their acquaintance. The ministers there told us they would come and preach for us, if we would secure a suitable place. They have been preaching here since, once in four weeks, and the result has been that seven were added to the Church by baptism, with a prospect for others. A brother and a sister have moved here from Indiana to swell our number.

JOHN STOUFFER.

Blairstown, Iowa.

Brother Holsinger : — It seems truly that customs or habits and practice make laws. Not long since there was a child died for friend Downs, in a neighborhood northeast of us. His wife having some knowledge of me, she requested me to preach the funeral. I complied with the request. Soon after another child died in the same neighborhood for friend Sollenus, and they too sent for me. Those men having no knowledge of our orders and customs, made very strange that I wouldn't take money for my services. This paying of preachers has become so fashionable that in some parts of the world people think it must be. They say preachers and doctors have the advantage of us, because they can make their bills to suit themselves, and the people must pay. Even don't make very strange of it when the preacher takes the last corn from the widow for preaching her husband's funeral. Indeed it seems awful to me, some time ago, when I was informed that a widow in our county had her last corn taken from her by a minister for his preaching. Such news sounds hard; indeed, awful in the extreme, to us, who haven't got quite so far along yet, and I feel to say according to my understanding of the gospel of Jesus Christ, a true and faithful minister of the gospel will never stoop so low as that. Paul gives us to understand in the 12th and 13th verses of the 9th chapter of 1st Corinthians that preaching for money would be a hindrance to the gospel having its desired effect.

ELDER JOHN MURREY.

Brother Henry :—Since the season of the year has arrived in which out door work is not so pressing, and which will, therefore, afford many of our brethren a favorable opportunity to visit adjoining churches, and engage in preaching, therefore we wish to say to them, through your columns, that the church in White Co., Ind., cordially invites ministers from adjoining branches and elsewhere to come and labor among us. We have ministers among us who are diligently, and we think successfully engaged in the work of the Lord, but in consequence of the members being scattered, their field of labor is extensive, and the meetings at the several places not so frequent as would be desirable.

The necessity and duty of the ministers (especially the Elders) of one church visiting adjoining churches, we do not pretend to urge here. Suffice it to say that if Paul in his time deemed it essential to visit the churches that they might be properly established, it would materially benefit the churches of our day. That this duty is too much neglected is, or should be, apparent to all.

We say then come,—come with the "Old Jerusalem," the "Pentecostal" doctrine, and labor to edify and establish the church, and call sinners to repentance.

Eastern brethren travelling west, or western brethren travelling east, will find us a short distance west of Logansport, on the Peoria R. R., and those making this one of their passing ways will be cheerfully entertained with such as the Brethren of Western Indiana have.

Address Elders J. S. Snowberger or Adam Young, the former at Monticello, and the latter at Idaville, or brother Jos. Amich, or the undersigned, at Burnettsville, Indiana.

Fraternally yours,

J. G. ROYER

Queries.

Brother Holsinger :—Will you or some other brother please give us, through the Companion, an explanation of the following queries: does the word Kings, as in the following places imply kingdoms? In Rev. 1: 6 we read "and hath made us Kings and friends unto God and his Father;" again Rev. 5: 10 "and had made us unto our God Kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth." Again Rev. 20: 6. "But they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years." Again Rev. 2: 26. "And he that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations." If the foregoing references do imply a "Kingdom," when will it be established, and where? Who will be an object to the government of the "Saints?" A full explanation desired.

AMOS S. CHAMBERLIN.

Locktown, New Jersey.

Friend Holsinger :—Will you or some one else give an explanation on Acts

ix. 7, reading as follows:

"And the men which journeyed with him stood speechless, hearing a voice but seeing no man."

xxii. 9, reading as follows:

"And they that were with me saw indeed the light, and were afraid; but they heard not the voice of him that spake to me."

JACOB CHRISTNER.

Announcement.

We expect to hold a week's meeting at Warrior's Mark, commencing on the second Sunday of January, 1872. A general invitation to preachers. Eld. John Spangle and others are expected. GRABILL MYERS.

There will be a series of meetings at the Maple-grove meeting-house, 4 miles N. E. of Ashland, near brother John Beeghly's, commencing on the evening of the 16th of December, and continue one week, or longer. A general invitation is extended to laborers in the vineyard.

By order of the Church.

WM. SADLER.

MARRIED.

At the residence of the undersigned, on Tuesday, November the 21st, Mr. SIMON HOLLINGER to Miss ELIZABETH SMITH, both of Beaver county, Pa.

S. M. Moore.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with Obituary Notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In the Conemaugh church, Cambria Co., Pa., October 4th, after an illness of from five to seven years, sister AGNES DIMOND, aged 69 years 11 months and 17 days. Funeral services by the Brethren.

Stephen Hildebrand.

In the Buffalo branch, Lasalle county, Ill., October 28th, of Typhoid Fever, sister ANNA, wife of brother Paul DALE, aged 51 years 4 months and 3 days. Her maiden name was Heckman.

She united with the church when young, and lived a consistent member about 30 years. She leaves a husband and ten children to mourn their loss, the most of whom are members of the church, some very young.—Her illness, which lasted only about six days, she bore with Christian patience and fortitude. Funeral services by the writer, from John xi. 26.

Jonathan Swihart.

[Visitor please copy.]

Departed this life in the Mohican church Wayne county, Ohio, November 15th, sister CATHARINE SHOEMAKER, widow of Elder John Shoemaker, who preceded her in crossing the Jordan about 16 years ago.—Sister Shoemaker lived to the age of 77 years 5 months and 9 days. Her maiden name was Ringer; was brought up and catechized in the old Lutheran faith, but finally obtained better light, and embraced the faith of the Brethren, which she kept faithfully for about fifty years. On the 18th her earthly house was deposited by the side of her husband, to await the voice of the arch-angel. Funeral services preached by Elder Jacob Garver and the writer, from the 14th chapter of Revelations, a large congregation of friends and neighbors being present, all feeling that one more is added to the number of whom it is said, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

P. J. Brown.

In the Maple-Grove congregation, Nov. 4th, brother JOHN P. DEEHONG, aged 69 years, 7 months and 21 days. After a short sojourning he took his bed on Tuesday, Oct. 31st. He left an aged companion, a worthy sister, and family to mourn his departure. Funeral services by the Brethren from Isaiah 38:19. Attended by many friends and neighbors.

In the same congregation, CORA ALICE BEEGHLY, daughter of brother Samuel and (now) sister Beeghly, aged 2 years, 3 months and 18 days. Funeral services by A. M. Dickey and the writer, from the language of our Savior, "suffer little children, &c

William Sadler.

November 8th in the Berlin congregation, Somerset county, Pa., our greatly esteemed sister ELIZABETH KIMMEL, wife of brother Jonathan G. Kimmel. Truly it may be said that she was a Christian in the strict sense of the word, for her walk and conduct while enjoying health were such as are becoming the humble follower of Jesus. She leaves a loving husband, five children, father, mother, brother and sister, and a number of friends to whom she was near and dear. We feel her loss but have reason to believe that our loss is her eternal gain. She brought her life to 32 years, 1 month, and 5 days.—On the 10th her remains were taken to their last resting place, when solemn exhortations were given to a large audience by brethren D. P. Walker, George Schrock and Elder Jacob Blough, from the word of Paul recorded in the 4th chapter 1st Thess., the latter clause of 13th verse, "That ye sorrow not, even as others, which have no hope."

M. HADY.

[Visitor please copy.]

LIST OF MONEYS RECEIVED for SUBSCRIPTION, BOOKS, etc.

Alex. Mack,	$ 1.00	H. C. Tate,	1.50
Sarah Stem,	1.00	Kate Rohrer,	1.50
Wm. Reist,	75	J. Swihart,	1.00
C. Bucher,	1.00	Joseph Fitz,	1.50
P. R. Oaks,	3.40	J. Price & Son,	3.00
Samuel Philson,	1.50	M. A. Casselberry,	50
Mary J. West,	1.15	C.G. Line (for C.
Jacob P. Lerew,	75	Wegley,	1.50
S. Hildebrand,	1.00	J. J. Fike,	1.50
A. J. Sterling,	2 25	Mary E. Snyder,	1 50
Conrad Fitz,	3 00	John Arnold,	1.50
H. S. Jacobs,	1.25	Strother Hansel,	1.65
Sam'l A. Shaver,	75	Joseph Mishler,	1.00
George Gerlack,	1 00	J. B. Mowery,	75
Amos Fultz,	1.00	Wm. P. Lentz,	75
S. A. Walker,	85	Alexander Mack,	75

Pittsburg and Connellsville R. R.

TIME TABLE.

Commencing on Monday, October 10th, 1871, at 2 o'clock, P. M.

EASTWARD.			WESTWARD.
Cum Mail	Balt Exp.	STATIONS.	Cin. Exp.	Cum Mail
A. M	P. M.		A. M.	P. M
6 50	8 00	Pittsburg	10 15	6 10
10 21	9 57	Bradford	8 05	2 30
10 35	10 10	Connellsville	8 00	2 25
1 20	11 55	Mineral Point	5 52	11 22
1 40	12 15	Garret	5 28	11 02
157	1228	DALE CITY	526	1045
3 16	1 38	Bridgeport	4 15	9 35
4 00	2 00	Cumberland	3 40	8 40
P. M.	A. M.		P. M.	A. M.

BOXES POISONED.—Full Instructions in a Copyright Book, for 50 cents. Address, J. T. KOBLER, Owego, N.Y. 7-47-4t

DR. U. M. BEACHLEY'S
FAMILY MEDICAL DEPOT.
OFFICE AND DRUG STORE,
ON MAIN Street,
DALE CITY, Somerset Co., Pa.

BURLINGTON.

Leaving the East and arriving at Chicago or Indianapolis, how shall we reach the West? The best Line is acknowledged to be the C. B. and Q., joined together with the B. & M. Railroad by the Iron Bridge at Burlington, and called the Burlington Route.

The main line of the Route running to Omaha, connects with the great Pacific Roads, and forms to-day the leading route to California. The Middle Branch, entering Nebraska at Plattsmouth, passes through Lincoln, the State Capital, and will this year be finished to Fort Kearney, forming the shortest route across the Continent by over 100 miles.

Another branch of the B. M., diverging at Red Oak, falls into a line running down the Missouri through St. Joe to Kansas City, and all Kansas. Passengers by this route to Kansas, see Illinois, Southern Iowa, and Missouri, and, by a slight divergence, can see Nebraska also.

Lovers of fine views should remember the Burlington Route, for its towns "high-gleaming from afar"—its tree-fringed streams—its rough bluffs and quarries—its corn-ocean stretching over the prairies further nthan eye can reach.

Land-buyers will be sure to remember it, for they have friends among the two thousand who have already bought farms from Geo. S. Harris, the Land Commissioner of the B. & M. R. R. at Burlington, Iowa, or among the four thousand home-steaders and pre-emptors who last year filed claims in the Lincoln Land Office, where "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm."

A Card.

Drs. D. Fahrney & Son, Uroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.

7-10-1 yr. pd.

1780 1871

ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK?

GREAT EXCITEMENT!

J. N. FICHTNER,

of Berlin, Pa., has caused a great excitement in the County by bringing into our midst the very popular and far-famed WEED (F. F.) SEWING MACHINE. All who have tried it give this as their decision: "The Weed runs lighter, has less gearing, is more easily managed, and takes less time to understand it than any other machine now in the county."

The WEED has no cog-wheels, no spring or compound levers, and is sold at prices ranging from $80 to $150. Each machine is furnished with a tucker, quilter, baster, 8 bobbins, feller, corder, ruffler, fringe-braider, and a self-sewer, gratis.

Satisfaction GUARANTEED.

Call on or address,

J. N. FICHTNER,

7-47 3t* BERLIN, PA

BOOKS

For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament with Interlinear Word for word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price, $4.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol., $2.25. Indispensable.

Life at Home; or the Family and its MEMBERS—Including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed. The Altar in the House, etc. By Wm. Aikman. $1.50.

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. THOMPSON. Fancy Cloth. $1.00.

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners, with a Chart for recording the sizes of the different Organs of the Brain, in the Delineation of Character, with upwards of 170 Engravings. Muslin, $1.25.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50.

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By W. PITTINGER. $1.50.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Beautifully Illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth, gilt, beveled boards. Only $1.

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. Containing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75 cents.

Any of the above sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

The Phrenological Journal, an illustrated, First-class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal and Christian Family Companion together for $3,50 or with the Pious Youth for, $3.00. we commend the Journal to all who want a good Family Magazine, and who don't!

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen	10.80

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid.	1.35
Per dozen " "	15.30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post paid,	.50
Per dozen. " "	5.50

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 75 cents. $60 per dozen.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents $6.00 per dozen.

COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.5
Reserved at the office,	2.2
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder, Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express,	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	60
German & English Testaments,	.75

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25

32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION. 25

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Certificates &c.

MarriageCertificate, per doz., post paid, 0.30,
CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP. Per doz, 0.20

TRACTS.—RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE, 12 pages five cents single copy; thirty cents a doz. All orders should be accompanied with the money, and the name of person, postoffice county & state written in unmistakable letters.

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and State written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to,

H. R. HOLSINGER,
Dale City, Somerset Co., Pa.

Univrsal Guide for Cutting Garments.

By which every family may cut its own garments for men and boys, of twenty six different sizes; for Coats, Pants, Vests, and Shirts, and Ladies' Dress Bodies. Agents wanted to sell State, County, and Family Rights. For Particulars address MILLER & QUINN, Tyrone, Blair Co., Pa.

Use Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

An Alterative and Catharic, or Tonic and Purge combined, for diseases arising from bad blood; such as Costiveness, Dyspepsia Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Erysipelas, Worms, Chills and Fever, Scrofula, Pimples, Tetter, &c. TRY IT.

Established 1850 in package form. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form which was brought to its present state of preservation and perfection some years later, by Dr. P. Fahrney, Chicago, Ill's, who conducts the trade west of Ohio. Great reputation! Many Testimonials! Ask for that prepared at Waynesboro, Pa., and Chicago, Ill's. Beware of imitations. Genuine retails at $1.25 per bottle. Druggists and Medicine dealers sell it.

Dr. P. Fahrney's "Health Messenger" gives the history and uses of the BLOOD CLEANSER testimonials, and other information, sent free of charge. Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.
WAYNESBORO PA.

To Advertisers.—All persons who contemplate making contracts with newspapers for the insertion of Advertisements should send to

GEORGE P. ROWELL & CO.

for a Circular, or enclose 50 cents for their One Hundred Page Pamphlet, containing Lists of 3,000 Newspapers and estimates, showing the cost of advertising, also many useful hints to advertisers, and some account of the experiences of men who are known as Successful Advertisers. This firm are proprietors of the American Newspaper Advertising Agency, and are possessed of unequaled facilities for securing the insertion of advertisements in all Newspapers and Periodicals at lowest rates. 7—45—50.

41 PARK ROW, N. Y.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine, with Drop Feed, new Take-up, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted FIRST CLASS, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted traveling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $200 per month. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. Co.

Advertisements.

WE will admit a limited number of select advertisements at the following rates

One insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.

No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations

THE PIOUS YOUTH.

A MONTHLY PUBLICATION

Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.

One dollar a year in advance.

THE

Christian Family Companion

Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements; that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
DALE CITY Somerset Co., Pa.

Christian Family Companion

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum

VOLUME VII. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, DEC. 12, 1871. NUMBER 49.

For the Companion.

The Hour of Temptation.

John to the angel of the church of Brotherly Love writes: "These things saith he that is holy, he that is true, * * * * Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth." From the foregoing passage it is clear that there is a time of temptation coming to try those who dwell upon the earth. The time is future and the language prophetic. But there are some that the Spirit recognized as having "kept the word of my patience:" these constitute the true Israel, the Church of the living God. They shall walk in white, and shall receive a new name; and God will write upon them the name of his holy city, which is New Jerusalem. But there are others belonging to the school of Satan, who are liars. Of these the Spirit saith that they shall yet be humbled, because they are selfrighteous, proud and haughty, and like the lukewarm Laodiceans, say they are rich and increased with goods, and have need of nothing. They do not know that they are wretched, and miserable, and poor and blind and naked. But they shall yet be humbled, and shall come bowing, and worship before the feet of those who "kept the word of my patience." Now go to the twenty fifth chapter of Matthew's gospel, and compare the parable of the "ten virgins," with these two churches. Mark the coincidence. How the wise virgins, which constitute the church of Philadelphia, have oil in their vessels with their lamps, which came by keeping the word of his patience in their hearts. Then look at the foolish virgins; they have also gone out to meet the Bridegroom, they have also formally renounced the world, but they are liars, they have a form of godliness but deny the power thereof, they are the lukewarm and selfrighteous Laodiceans, saying they are rich, and have need of nothing.

Now the question arises, when will that "hour of temptation" be. There are seasons of trials and temptations in the life of every believer, but it seems from the text that there is a special time of temptation awaiting those who dwell upon the face of the whole earth. And when will that time be? It cannot be when they see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven, for then they shall be in great distress and fear because of him. No it cannot be then. It seems to me it cannot be until after the thousand years are expired, when Satan shall be loosed out of his prison, and shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth. It seems to me that will be a time of temptation such as never was. And those who kept the word of his patience, shall be preserved from the trials of that time. They shall then have inherited the kingdom prepared from the foundation of the world, and shall be kings and priests unto God, and shall reign with him forever.

JAMES Y. HECKLER.

Harleysville, Pa.

All Fullness in Jesus.

This arrangement of putting all the fullness into Christ pleases the Father; does it please you? Are you willing to live a life of faith upon the Son of God; a life of constant, entire dependence; a new creaturely life? Have you learned to say

"I'm a poor sinner and nothing at all
But Jesus Christ is my all in all."

Do you begin to see a beauty, sweetness, desirableness in this arrangement which makes you rejoice, and thank God for it? Do you say, "It is safe for me. I find every hour how frail and fickle I am, how soon I lose received grace; but when I am cold, and weak, and dark, I know where to go to obtain a fresh supply, and he does not upbraid; he only chides me for not coming sooner, not coming oftener!"—Gleanings from a Ministry.

When hearts are filled with holy affection and home is happy, then do the young dwell in a charmed circle, across whose boundary temptations to error shine out but feebly.

Forbid them Not.

BY JULIA GILL.

"The Master has come over Jordan,"
Said Hannah, the mohter, one day ;
'He is healing the people, who throng him,
With a touch of his finger," they say ;
And now I shall carry the children,
Little Rachel, and Samuel and John ;
I shall carry the baby, Esther,
For the Lord to look upon.

The father looked at her kindly,
But he shook his head and smiled.
Now who but a doting mother
Would think of a thing so wild ;
If the children were tortured by demons,
Or dying of fever, it were well ;
Or had the taint of the leper,
Like many in Israel.

"Nay, do not hinder me, Nathan,
I feel such a burden of care :
If I carry it to the Master,
Perhaps I shall leave it there.
If he lay his hand on the children,
My heart will be brighter, I know ;
For a blessing, for ever and ever,
Will follow them as they go."

So over the hills of Judah,
Along by the vine-rows green,
With Esther asleep on her bosom,
And Rachel, her brothers between ;
'Mong the people who hung on his teaching,
Or watch his touch, or his word ;
Through the throng of proud Pharisees hastening,
She pressed to the feet of her Lord.

"Now why should you hinder the master,"
Said Peter, "with children like these ;
Seest now, how from morning till evening
He teacheth and healeth disease."
Then Christ said, "Forbid not the children,
Permit them to come unto me :"
And he took in his arms little Esther,
And Rachel he sat on his knee.

And the heavy heart of the mother
Was lifted all earth-care above,
As he laid his hands on the brothers,
And blessed them with tenderest love ;
As he said of the babes in his bosom,
"Of such are the kingdom of Heaven ;"
And strength for all duty and trial,
That hour to her spirit was given.

For the Companion.

Happiness.

"If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." John 13 : 17.

My young friends, have we ever properly considered how full of meaning that blessed promise is ? "Happy are ye if ye do them"—the things we are commanded to do. What are we all seeking for ?—Happiness. Is there one that does not feel that it is a great blessing to be happy ? No, I venture, not one. But what do we constantly hear from our youthful friends ? They tell us that they are enjoying themselves—that they are happy. It is true, those bright young eyes sparkle with anticipation ; hope dries the transient tear, and youthful health and vigor and buoyant spirits all point forward to bright prospects in the future. It is a critical period.

I once read of two little children that chased beautiful butterflies all day until they were lost in the wilderness and perished there. And what are we doing, my dear young friends, but chasing butterfly hopes that flit along before us hither and thither, just beyond our reach ? Yes, we can turn our eyes on every side and see numbers of all ages that are spending all their lives in chasing baubles that promise a little enjoyment.

"Well, the pursuit of happiness is happiness." —What ?—"Father," said the Prodigal Son, "give me the portion of goods that falleth to me," and then he took his rich possessions and went into a far country to be happy in the enjoyment of them ; but before a great while he would fain have filled his belly with the husks that the swine did eat, but no man gave unto him. Was this happiness ?

Look yonder—a little green mound and a marble slab—what does it say ?—"DIED BY HIS OWN HAND."

Yes, thus it reads. But hold ! we'll know the utmost that that little mound unfolds. Roll back the turf ; we'll face that grinning skull, and know its history. There it is ! "Alas, poor fellow ! I knew him well—a fellow of infinite jest—of most excellent fancy. He hath borne me on his back, a thousand times, and now, how abhorred in my imagination is this skull ! My gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips that I have kissed, I know not how oft. Where are your gibes ! now—your gambols—your laugh—your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table in a roar? Not one now to mock your grinning—quite chop fallen. Now get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, if she paint an inch thick, yet to this favor will she come at last."

Pay good attention now to the story of his confession. I was young once, and I remember still the verse my mother taught me to say,—"Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them."

Then I grew up, and the portion of health and strength and talents, that my heavenly Father gave me, I spent in riotous living. Once I thought I would return, but I loved sin—it tasted sweet—I rolled it as a sweet morsel under my tongue. It looked inviting. I followed it by day, and its vain, delusive fancies filled my dreams at night. Then the evil days came and the years drew nigh when I no longer found pleasure in them. The harvest was past, the summer ended, the butterflies gone, the rose faded, the thorn only remained and I was lost in the dense wilderness of sin.

J. L. SWITZER.

Dancing.

The following upon the subject is from the pen of Dr. Eadie, one of the best biblical scholars of the age. He says in his Cyclopedia: From a collection of all the passages in Scripture that refer to dancing, it may be inferred :

1. That dancing was a religious act, both in true and idol worship.

2. That it was practiced exclusively on joyful occasions ; such as national festivals or great victories.

3. That it was performed on such occasions only by one of the sexes.

4. That it was performed usually in the daytime, in the open air, in highways, in fields and groves.

5. That men who perverted dancing from a sacred us to purposes of amusement were deemed infamous.

6. That no instances of dancing are found upon record in the Bible, in which the two sexes united in the exercises, either as an act of worship or amusement.

Lastly, That there is no instance upon record, in the Bible, of social dancing for amusement, except that of the "vain fellows" void of shame, alluded to by Michael ; of the religious families described by Job, which produced increased impiety and ended in destruction ; and of Herodias which terminated in the rash vow of Herod, and the murder of John the Baptist.

Make Home Pleasant.

"Home's not merely four square walls,
Though with pictures hung and gilded ;
Home is where affection calls,
Filled with shrines the heart has builded."

The human heart yearns for sympathy and love. Fostered by these, it expands into peace and happiness. Deprived of them, it shrivels into the darkness of discontent and misery. God gives intermingling to his children. He weaves men together in the web of society, where each acts on some other for good or ill. In this web are many bright and gladdening flowers, wrought by the blessed union and co-operation of individuals. Churches, fraternal societies, and schools are among the larger adornings ; but the little flowers that are intermingled thickly upon it, giving it supesior beauty, are the homes. They are the nation's nurseries and happy abiding places. From them issue its defenders, its workers, its life.

Are these homes all they should be? Are they as pleasant? The answer is found in the crowds of the young flocking to the cities ; the deserted country homes ; the many who follow the march of the sun. Our young men are deserting the farm, our young women the household, to the detriment of the nation's prime source of wealth.

The remedy must be found in a higher type of home life. Make home pleasant in appearance. How many unsightly homes there are—houses standing stark and stiff, like some sentinel, with scarcely any trees or shrubs or flowers to break the monotony and rigidness of the scene. Plant trees and flowers ; let order and neatness reign about your dwelling, making it look more like a home than a shelter for a night. Within, also, let beauty and neatness dwell. Pictures and ornaments, that need not be costly, may be had. Do not live in the back or darkest part of the house, reserving the sunniest for occasional company. In this sunny world let us live in heaven's free light and sunshine. Let music abound in the family. Say not, "It don't pay." Better fill the ears of the young with the sounds of instruments and singing, than for them to leave home for the noise and bustle of the busy town.

If the Church does not save the world the world will sink the Church.—T. L. Cuyler.

For the Companion.

The Safety of the Righteous.

There shall no harm nor danger befall the good and the upright in heart. For the Lord is their deliverer, their shield, and buckler, who will at all times watch over them for good; and protect them from the fiery darts of the wicked. For they are his chosen people; and partakers of his glory, which they shall eternally enjoy in the mansions above; so that it is his good pleasure to shield them from all harm and danger while here on earth; and eventually, when their race is run and their work finished, to bring them unto his kingdom and glory, where they may live and reign with him in a world without end. The Lord will, at all times, watch over them and provide a way for their escape from the snares and temptations of the enemy. He will never suffer them to be overcome by the adversary; or to be led astray from the way of life and salvation. But he will utterly destroy their enemies; and bring to a perpetual end those that seek their downfall. He will be round about them as a mighty wall of fire, and be their hiding place in time of danger and trouble; and will uphold them in the hour of pain and affliction. They shall never be confounded or brought to shame, so long as they walk in the ways of the Lord and put their trust and confidence in him. They shall be as green olive trees in the house of the Lord; and shall grow like the cedar of Lebanon. They shall flourish like the palm tree; and bring forth fruit, even in old age.

Truly a blessed state is that of the righteous, who alone have the promise of a crown of bright glory in the land of endless blessedness! They shall prosper and increase; and become stronger in the Lord and in the power of his might, who will at all times care for them and bring them out of all trouble and danger. Though the world may frown upon them, and cast their name out as evil, yet heaven will smile upon them, and befriend them in every trying hour; so that it shall be well with them at all times and in all circumstances, whether at home or abroad, whether in private or in public, whether in poverty's vale or abounding in wealth; for success will never attend those who seek the downfall of the righteous and the subversion of those who strive to do the will of him who is the giver of all good.

Satan with all his malicious host may rise up against them, and strive to sever them from God and his righteousness; yet he shall not prevail against them nor realize his hellish designs; for he who possesses all power both in heaven and in earth, is able to deliver them at all times from the mouth of the lion, and to keep them safe, under the hollow of his hands, from all surrounding evils; so that they shall not be overcome by him who is ever going about as a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour; but shall tiumph over all his crafty snares and temptations, through the strength of him who is able to save to the uttermost all that came unto him. The righteous shall never be moved or be cast down by the enemy; for the Lord Jehovah is their strength, their high tower, and the rock of their salvation; who will never suffer them to be overcome by the adversary of souls; for it is his good pleasure to shield them from all surrounding dangers, and keep them safe unto the end, when he will deliver them with an everlasting deliverance from the world and its troubles and cares.

Hence it is ever well with the righteous and the upright in heart. Whether they be favored with the riches and pleasures of the world or not, yet the Lord will care for them, and provide them all the things that they stand in need of here; for no good thing will the Lord withhold from them that put their trust in him, and that love and obey his holy word. For he hath chosen them to be his, from the foundation of the world, and hath ordained them unto life and immortality in the kingdom above; and therefore he will ever care for them and protect them from the storms of persecution. Though wicked men of the world may laugh them to scorn, and assail them with opprobrious language and slanderous reports, yet over all these evil things shall they triumph, through the strength of Israel's God and eventually rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory; for he who is omnipotent and present everywhere will remember them in mercy while here on earth, and finally bring them with himself, that where he is there they may be also.

S. K. SHELLABERGER.

For the Companion.

The Spread of the Word of God over the whole Earth, and its Effect—A Prophecy.

"1. There shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a branch shall grow out of his roots.

2. And the spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord.

3. And shall make him of quick understanding in the fear of the Lord, and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears.

4. But with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth; and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth; and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked.

5. And righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins.

6. The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid, and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together, and a little child shall lead them.

7. The cow and the bear shall feed; their young shall lie down together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ox.

8. And the suckling child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice's den.

9. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." Isaiah 11:1-9.

Remarks.

The first four verses of this prophecy delineate the character and mission of Christ in language that cannot be misunderstood, and prove that Isaiah had a perfect and complete revelation concerning him.

The latter clause of the fourth verse is a sublime figurative description of the converting power of his word. "He shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked." How strong and yet how clear is this language! It is almost precisely the same as that of the Revelator where he describes Christ as "The Word of God, out of whose mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations."

The 6th, 7th and 8th verses, including the first clause of the 9th, are a prediction in an allegory, that outrage and violence will eventually be so far eliminated from among the children of men, through the influence of the word of God and the power of his spirit, that the church shall no longer suffer persecution. We will here repeat the cause of this beneficent and glorious change from wrong and bloodshed in the prophet's own comprehensive words, as contained in the latter clause of the 9th verse: "For the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea." This is a declaration that the time will come when all the nations of the earth shall possess that practical knowledge which the scriptures always give—a "knowledge of the Lord."

The former portion of the prophecy under consideration has been literally fulfilled in the coming of Christ, and the accomplishment of his mission; hence we may assert with the utmost confidence, that the latter part—the universal spread of the word of God, and the conversion of mankind, through its influence—will also surely be fulfilled. Although not in these particulars, as yet brought into complete accomplishment, it approaches gradually but certainly its consummation.

There was a time, in the dark ages of the Church, when the scriptures existed almost exclusively in the original dead languages in which they had been written, and had to be transcribed because the art of printing had not been invented. During all that time they were found only in the dark recesses of convents and monasteries; being prohibited by papal edicts to be read by the people. If occasionally a reformer would spring up, translate them into some vernacular and teach that they alone contained the will of God, his books were placed upon a pile and burned; and the reformer himself suffered death, all by command of "the mother of harlots." "A great light, however, sprung up"—the art of printing was invented—and the whole power of "Mystery Babylon," with all her burnings and martyrdoms, could not repress its effect, because the hand of the Lord was in it to accomplish his purposes, and to maintain the honor of his word in the fulfillment of its prophecies. From the date of that great invention to the present time, "the knowledge of the Lord" has been increasing in the earth, for the scriptures have been translated into every written language, and circulated far and wide among the people.—The price is so low that the poor can purchase them, and those who do not feel able or willing to buy a copy, can have one gratis.

This great work of spreading the word of God, and thus gradually filling the earth "with the knowledge of the Lord" is not confined to the efforts of one or two sects. All Christian denominations, with but one exception, the Papish, seem to be anxious for its consummation. "It is the Lord's doing, and it is marvelous in our eyes." Soon will the sun of truth reach the zenith, and the superstitions and errors of popery be dissipated forever like the mists of the valley before the ascending luminary of day. Then will be heard the mighty cry "Babylon is fallen! is fallen!" succeeded by the triumphant pean, "Alleluia, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth." Having thus attempted to show that the words of the prophet, "The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea," are being rapidly fulfilled, let us try to examine whether the predicted effect keeps pace with the progress of the dissemination of the holy scriptures.

The time was when "the woman on the scarlet colored beast" could exterminate all who differed from her, or would not assent to her error, presumption and idolatry. She could authorize crusades, and tens of thousands of ignorant, bigoted men would rush to the standard of Peter, the hermit, or of some other fanatical leader, and march to Palestine, to wrest Jerusalem and the holy sepulchre from the infidel Turks. At a much later date, she could issue her mandate to secret emmissaries for the extermination of the protestants in France, and on St Bartholomew's day the bloody butchery was accomplished. She could not possibly now do any of these things. Undoubtedly she will not relinquish the little vestige which remains of her former power, until it is wrested from her by the Omnipotent Lord God, through the instrumentality of the light of his truth.—The result, however, of all her struggles shows that her doom is inevitable. She promulgates the infallibility dogma to strengthen her decaying hold on the minds of the people. It opens the eyes of thousands of her adherents, and they spurn the absurd and blasphemous edict. They deny her right to make any such preposterous assumption a part of their faith, because they cannot believe it. She encouraged Napoleon III to make war upon unoffending Prussia. She was jealous of the increasing prosperity and strength of that nation, because protestant, and she presumed to use the man who upheld her by his bayonets to humble her, but Napoleon went down in the struggle, and the last vestige of the temporal power of the Pope along with him.

The passage which stands at the head of this article, predicts that the effect of the universal spread of the knowledge of the Lord will be to cause violence and bloodshed to cease in the earth. History informs us that in the primitive age of the church it was universally understood that if a Christian took up arms, he in that act renounced his faith; because peace illustrated by love to all men was a cardinal principle of that faith.—Heathen Rome have even, having no regard for the consciences of the humble "Nazarences," persisted in her attempts to impress many of them into her armies. Their only plea, "I am a Christian, and therefore cannot fight," was but a prelude to the violent death of hundreds.

A change, however, came, in which many of the barbarous ceremonies and customs of heathenism, war among the rest, were introduced into the Christian church. Constantine the first emperor of Rome, foreseeing that christianity was destined to spread over the earth, and no doubt instigated by the devil, pretended he saw a cross in the sky with the inscription above it, "conquer by this sign." He proclaimed christianity the religion of the Roman Empire, was baptized, and forced his soldiers to accept the same rite. Since that time war has erroneously been accepted as not in antagonism with the teaching of Christ by the great mass of those who have professed to be his followers. The great light which has sprung up through the dissemination of the word of truth is, however, fast dissipating this error, and bringing back to christianity the conscience of its primitive professors.—There are but few at the present day who will defend war in the light of divine revelation. The only plea which is urged in its favor is that it seems to be a necessity among the nations to repel invasions and right the wrongs which one power may commit against another. Those who use this argument in favor of bloodshed perhaps do not consider that war is the cause and not the effect of those wrongs and invasions, and that when "the knowledge of the Lord" shall fill the earth, and the masses "do to others as they would have others do to them," this "necessity" will cease. Already the conscientious element in all christian nations is engaged in devising means to prevent war by adjusting international disputes by friendly arbitration, and soon the time will come when "nation will not lift up sword against nation; neither learn war any more." Isaiah 2:4.

SILAS THOMAS.

Philadelphia, Pa.

Letter of Encouragement to Brother Josiah Ringer.

My Dear Brother:—Long ere this time should I have responded to your missive of love, and must therefore necessarily ask, your indulgence. My long delay should not be construed so as to mean indifference to answer a missive so replete with matter that should not by any means go into the past unnoticed, and it being one of your first productions after you had taken Christ upon your proper. This, with the general tenro of your epistle, causes me to respond to the same at this late day.

I would suppose from the reading of the letter referred to, that you were surrounded, by gross darkness, and with men and women that are more willing to follow papal superstition and sectarian bigotry, than the plain teaching of our Master. And were it not that I know that you, are amply able to wield "the sword of the spirit, which is the word of God," I would have had some fears, that the mighty effort that was made in your vicinity to invalidate the word of the Lord might have had some effect upon you as a learner in Christ. Your mind at present is too clear, too healthy to receive such vile misrepresentations of God's eternal truth.—You say it makes you feel sad that men and women are so willing to pay to have error preached among them.

"That it is sacrilegions to immerse." This is the language of one that rubbed his skull and brain against some college pillar until he became entirely bigoted, and thereby losing sight of good reason of the Bible, he beggars himself beyond description. If a poor ignorant, dunkard-former preacher had made use of such language, we would ascribe it to his ignorance.—I would venture to say that every intelligent man or woman that has an unbeclouded mind with which to look into the Bible cannot help but see that immersion has a prominence in that sacred volume; and such a strength that the devil himself never made an attempt to speak against its validity.

How could you get over the next argument against immersion?—"ought to be crippled and throwed into the Jordan!" If you could "see the pint" in this argument you could do more than I can.

To the text: "Baptism is for purifying: but thep will take a candidate and dip him into a mud hole, and bring him up a thousand times more dirty than he was before they put him in." This argument against immersion is not a new thing; but I was of the opinion, or rather, under the impression, that none but the more ignorant and unlearned used such arguments; not men that claim to have themselves purposly sharpened up to teach and instruct the more ignorant.

Again, "It is nothing but palpable ignorance and sectarion bigotry that causes the people to immerse." The gentleman should be very thankful that it is so; for just as sure as the immersionists open the door and say, "Comeall ye that have been popeized," some of the shepherds would lose their flocks, and consequently milk and honey would cease to flow.

Next he speaks of "sea-horses snorting," &c. This is nothing more nor less than blackguardism.—No man of self respect and good breeding, would make use of such low, unmeaning language.

"Christ was not baptized in Jordan," Here is a declaration made by a follower of Jesus Christ(?) and one too that spent a long time in the studdy of the scriptures (?) and hen ce is none of your ignoramasus that must go and consult the Bible in relation to this matter; and that is all that will make the proposition strong, if strength it has any. The Bible says quite the reverse. Examine Matthew Luke and Mark, and they all testify to the fact that Jesus was baptized in Jordan.

"If John the Baptist immersed, he must have been an amphibious animal, or a sea-horse." Shame, where is thy blush! The veriest infidel, the most radical skeptic, would blush for shame if such were said to be his production. And this man is paid to make such diabolical expressions as the foregoing! No wonder a man with his eyes open and his mind enlightened shudders when he hears such unprincipled and irreligious declarations made as the foregoing. But why call him "John the Baptist?" I am utterly astonished at the man for using the phrase, (1) because it is a Biblical phrase, and (2) because the word "Baptist," according to our best Lexicographers, means an immersionist. So then we would say John the immerser; and as Jesus was baptized by John, we would say Jesus the immersed. This, then, according to the man's reasoning, makes John an amphibious animal, and per consequence Jesus must be a speious of that tribe. Whether John was a Crockerdile, Beaver or Sea-horse, the man of letters did not say. This seems to be the strongest reasoning he could give. Were it not that he was paid by a people willing to have such hash as the above preached, it would be considered an insult to intelligence, and a disgrace to civilization! It must have a marked effect? upon a mind renewed as yours evidently is, or else you could not have withstood the strong arguments he presented. How passing strange that men and women who claim to be intelligent and well read in the Bible, and who claim to be changed and to have taken upon themselves the name of Jesus Christ, can sit and listen to prevarications so utterly void of Christian principles, or religious scruples, as these evidently were!

I have no doubt left upon my mind, after reading your letter, but that you were strengthened in your present religious exercises. Let your mind ever be kept free from vague fabrications; they satisfy not. I would venture to say that the more intelligent part of the congregation, did feel inward repugnance at such a conglomeration of matter, that men of ordinary intellect could not help but recognize its connection with him who, it was positively said, is the father of lies. I have come to the coclusion that if the dullest imp from the synagogue of Satan would undertake an abnegation of plainly written truth, he would have some one to enter in with him. But be thou strong in the Lord and in the power of his might.

Farewell.

C. G. LINT.

Protracted Meetings.

I wish to offer a few suggestions on the above subject. The apostle Paul admonishes all things to be done unto edifying.

In the first place, let the members make the meeting in contemplation a subject of special prayer, that when they come together all may be united as one for the work; for our unconverted neighbors and friends, though they are good moral men and women, must be persuaded to flee the wrath to come, the ungodly and profane be invited to the gospel feast, the young drawn by the silken cords of love, and the blackslider reclaimed.

In the second place, do not leave all the work for the ministers. I would suggest that the members (and ministering brethren also, if convenient) meet a half hour earlier than the time appointed for preaching, and hold a social meeting, the hymns, prayers and exhortations to be short, thereby allowing time for a larger number to take part. When the preachers take the stand, if more than one are to speak, let the address of each be short, or if one gives a lengthy sermon let that suffice. At the close, if the ministers would again take their seats among the members, and hold a short meeting similar to that proposed to be held before the preaching, I think it will do good and all will be ready to come up to the work on the next evening, and thus Paul may plant, Apollos may water, but God alone can give the increase.

MARY A. CASSELBERRY.

HOLINESS is the royal road to Christ's kingdom, for without it no man shall see the Lord. There is a quick instructive perception in the holy soul which preserves it from the snares of the enemy.

He Sent Them Into His Vineyard.

Shall this life of mine be wasted?
Shall this vineyard lie untilled?
Shall true joy pass by untasted?
And this soul remain unfilled?

Shall the God-given hours be scattered,
Like the leaves upon the plain?
Shall the blossoms die unwatered
By the drops of heavenly rain?

Shall I see each fair sun waking,
And not feel it wakes for me?
Each glad morning brightly breaking,
And not feel it breaks for me?

Shall I see the roses blowing,
And not wish to bloom as they?
Holy fragrance round me throwing,
Luring others on the way?

Shall I hear the free bird singing
In the summer's stainless sky,
Far aloft its glad flight winging,
And not seek to soar as high?

Shall this heart still spend its treasures
On the things that fade and die?
Shall it count the hollow pleasures
Of bewildering vanity?

Shall these lips of mine be idle?
Shall I open them in vain?
Shall I not, with God's own bridle,
Their frivolities restrain?

Shall these eyes of mine still wander?
Or, no longer turned afar,
Fix a firmer gaze and fonder
On the bright and morning Star?

Shall these feet of mine, delaying,
Still in ways of sin be found?
Braving snares and madly straying
On the world's bewitching ground?

No; I was not born to trifle
Life away in dreams of sin!
No; I must not, dare not, stifle
Longings such as these within!

Swiftly moving upward, onward,
Let my soul in faith be borne;
Calmly gazing skyward, sunward,
Let my eye, unshrinking, turn!

Where the Cross, God's love revealing,
Sets the fettered spirit free,
Where it sheds its wondrous healing,
There, my soul, thy rest shall be!

Then no longer idly dreaming
Shall I fling my years away;
But each precious hour redeeming,
Wait for the eternal day!

—Home.

For the Companion.

Planting Gourds.

William Smith in his "Dictionary of the Bible," says the word in Jonah translated gourd means the castor-oil plant, which is a native of Asia, and in eastern countries grows to the size of a tree.

In reading Jonah we naturally think of our common gourd vine.—But whatever plant it may have been God prepared it for a shelter for his prophet, to protect him from the great heat, and deliver him from his grief; and also to teach him a lesson, that as he had pity on the gourd, so God has pity on those that repent. Jonah prepared himself a booth to shelter him while he rested, and waited to see what would become of Nineveh.

It is natural for us to seek for shelter, and rest. Though we like to labor, we always look to the end which we hope will be rest and peace. And as we journey through life, we are continually planting gourd vines under which we hope to find shelter from the heat that falls upon us in the battle of life. Looking back by the way we came, here and there we find places where we had planted gourds, and because they died we journeyed on to plant another.

We plant them in various soil.—The mother looking on her first born son, says within herself: "He shall be my stay, and comfort in my old age. In the decline of life I will rest me under the shadow of his love.—She is planting a gourd: and often sees it wither before it reaches maturity. Some worm preys upon its vitals. Perhaps the demon Alcohol has scorched it with his fiery breath, and the mother sees her precious plant fade and die.

One says, "I'll get me a great name in the earth. I'll achieve wondrous works, and carve my name in the temple of fame, and rest me there." He is, also, planting a gourd, and planting it in the very uncertain soil of popular favor. Another says: "I'll get me to yonder fair land, that I have heard so much about, 'a land of wheat and barley, and vines;' there I'll carry my wife and children, and we will eat bread without scarceness. I'll gather me grapes and honey, and we will comfort our souls, and forget the labor and travail of the past."—For a season the vine flourishes; but presently the heat of summer wilts it, the rains and storms of winter lay it low; but the prey element surges round, and devours it, as many a fair one has been in the far west. Another rests his hopes in a friend saying, this one shall be my companion in my pilgrimage; but soon the friend lies in the grave, and he journeys on alone.

Why do so many of our gourd vines die? We give them care and attention, and yet they wither and fade away. Perhaps it is because we do not ask for the refreshing rain, and sunshine of heaven to fall upon them. But we think most of them die because God would have us seek our rest in him. He would have us say: "Keep me as the apple of the eye; hide me under the shadow of thy wings." Not under a vine of our own planting would he have us rest; but under the shadow of the cross he would have us lie down; and in mercy he destroys our vines that he may draw us to that only sure and safe resting place. We often feel much distressed when our vines die, especially when those fade on which we have already set our affections. We can hardly say, "Thy will be done." Let us cast more seed into the soil of heaven, where no worm can destroy it. In the morning Jonah found that his gourd had withered; but in the morning of the resurrection we may find ours fresh and green, if we plant them aright: "for their works do follow them." And if we here take shelter under the shadow of the cross we may in heaven first rest under the tree of life.

There are gourds of God's own planting. He planted one, before Nineveh, for his servant Jonah to shelter him from the heat, and in the depths of the sea he planted another to save him from death. He planted many before Jonah's time and many since. When Joseph was carried into Egypt, God was planting a gourd under which Jacob and his house might find shelter, sustenance. Cyrus, king of Persia, was another of God's own planting. Under the protection of Cyrus Israel returned to their own land, and restored their temple. When Joseph was betrothed to the virgin Mary God was planting a vine for the protection of the infant Savior, and his mother and Joseph carried him down into Egypt, away from the wrath of Herod, and he brought them safely up again. The Apostle Paul, tossed and buffeted as he was found here and there a gourd that God had planted to shelter from his grief. He says of Phebe: "She has been a succourer of many, and of myself also." Priscilla and Aquila he calls, "my helpers in Christ Jesus." And of a certain Mary he says: "Greet Mary who bestowed much labor on us." Of others he says, "they refreshed my spirit." As he journeyed toward Rome, a prssoner bound with chains, when arriving near the city, he met brethren who had come out to meet him, "as far as Apii-forum and the Three Taverns," whom when he saw his spirit was refreshed, "He thanked God and took courage." God is still planting gourds for the relief of his children. Sometimes when the soul seems to be carried away captive into a strange land, where all is dark, and God seems very far away; from whence we cannot see the beauty of Zion, to admire it, and we cry out: "All thy waves, and thy billows are gone over me." When we are ready to hang our harps on the willows, saying how can we ever sing the songs of the Lord in this strange dark land;" and like Jonah we think within ourselves: "It is better for me to die than to live."—Then suddenly we find ourselves under the shadow of a gourd. How it came there, or when it grew we hardly know; but we are "exceedingly glad of the gourd." Owing to the weakness of our spiritual sight, I think, we sometimes fail to see the gourds our Father has planted for us, all along the journey of life. Like the great king of Babylon, we are apt to think we did ourselves, or our eyes are so full of tears, and our hearts with repining over our own dead vines, that we do not watch for the providences of God as we ought. If there are any of God's children who have no faith in a special, and over-ruling providence, they have surely failed to read life, and the word of God aright. Let such read the Bible, once, with the sole purpose of finding examples of God's over-ruling providence, and they can hardly help but believe, and have comfort in believing. When the Apostle designed to go to a certain place and preach, and "the spirit suffered them not," was it anything more than a providential interference? If there is only fixed and unalterable law, where is the efficacy of prayer?

R. Williams.

For the Companion.

Spreading the Gospel.

"Go ye therefore and teach all nations, &c., &c." Matt. 28 : 19.

In this part of the commission of our Lord to his disciples, we are commanded to go and teach, which I understand is preaching. Has this part of the gospel been fulfilled by the Brethren? I will answer the question by saying no. Now let us look around and see what has been done. I doubt very much if ever any of the Brethren's ministers preached a sermon in any of the New England States. Now there is a vast number of people in those parts void of the true gospel. The tide seems to be running westward. Why it is so I can give no reason, unless it is the cheapness of the land. But in doing the will of the Lord, none should look to his own interest. His sole object should be the saving of souls, or at least to preach the gospel in its purity to the people.

We have great facilities at hand for spreading the gospel—more than we had thirty years ago. Just look at the immense amount of railroad in our day, whereby traveling long distances is done easily. Now if we will only make up our minds to have the gospel farther spread, we can do it easily, for there is a goodly number of brethren and sisters in the church at this time. Now if they would open their hearts and give only one dollar each, what on immense amount of money could be raised to pay ministering brethren their traveling expenses to go to some of those eastern States to preach for the people. It seems to me as if those eastern people would like to know something about the brethren. I read sometime ago of a man that got to hear something of the brethren through the Philadelphia Press. He very soon wrote for tracts, &c., and said it was his opinion that if the Brethren would come and preach for them in the State of Maine, there could be a great deal of good done.

Money and means we have to do our duty, if only we go to work in earnest. It is no light matter to know of so many thousands dying almost daily, and that without the gospel being preached to them in its purity But if you ask some people for money to help farther the gospel, they will say they have none to spare. Should there be a fashionable dress wanted, with all the fixtures and trimmings of costly ribbons, &c., to be used on it, see how quickly it will be had, regardless of expense. Now if such a one would be contented with a good, modest dress, the dollars above mentioned could be easily spared. And if there is a fashionable buggy and fine horses, and silver mounted harness wanted, it will be soon had, but just ask them for money to help to do good with, and they will soon say "We have none to spare." I well believe people they have no money to spare when they lavish it all on their pride. Such things ought not to be, especially amongst the people of God. Now if we live within the limits of the gospel, we will have enough and to spare, for God has never forsaken the righteous. Now there is a goodly number of ministering brethren—in some congregations as high as six or seven. Several of this number could be spared to go to some place where the truth is not preached. The above is written in love. I hope no one will take offence as it is not intended to be offensive. May the Lord be with us all and keep us faithful to the end, so that we may hear the welcome plaudit, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

Your brother in Christ,

D. F. WAGNER.

Montandon, Pa.

The Lord's House.

An incident is recorded in the New Testament, and it is the only one of the kind in the book in which our gracious Lord manifested the least degree of violence, but in the matter of the money changers and of them who sold doves, the zeal of the Lord's house so fired his indignation, that he made a scourge of small chords and whipped these hucksters out of the precincts of the Temple. And yet they were only in its courts—they did not dare enter the inner sanctuary—but he drove them out, exclaiming, "It is written, My house shall be a house of prayer for all nations; but ye have made it a den of thieves." Would he be more graciously disposed to the rafflings and lotteries which have given such zest to the costomers who crowd these fairs for the purpose, not so much of buying the small ware, as for the dissipation connected with the traffic? We trow not. We are persuaded, the cords would not be quite so small as in the former case. These venders of doves might whimper and the money changers whine out their loud complaints, that they were selling their pigeons to poor people, who could not afford the costly sacrifice of a lamb, and the tables which the Master had turned over were needed, that they might give the poor folk lawful change (which is more than is done at some fairs,) and that it was very hard to be whipped out of the vestibule, when they were doing no harm, but a deal of good. And yet the fact is they were scourged out. Let the reader make the application to suit himself.

The Will of God.

Would we learn from Christ himself, in what the will of our Master consists, let us contemplate in the whole tenor of his instruction and wonderful life. Did he fulfil that will by pompous and formal displays of superior wisdom—by austere and arrogant pretensions to superior righteousness—by solicitude for ritual observances—by dogmatism upon abstruse speculations—by a supercilious contempt of ignorance, or a ferocious intolerance of error? No: but the will of God, such, at least, as was that which he exemplified, is to be found in lessons of virtue attractive from their simplicity, impressive from their earnestness, and authoritative from the miraculous evidence which accompanied them; in habits of humility without meaness, and of meekness without pusillanimity; in unwearied endeavors to console the afflicted, to soften the prejudiced, and to encourage the sincere; in unshaken firmness, to strip the mask from pharisaical hypocrites, and to quell the insolence of dictatorial and deceitful guides; in kindness to his followers, in forgiveness to his persecutors, in works of the most unfeigned and unbounded charity to man, and in a spirit of the purest and most sublime piety of his Father and his God.

Christian Family Companion.
DALE CITY, PA., Dec. 12, 1871.

Barnum's Show.

We wish to inform our Brethen that P. T. Barnum the great show man, has sent us four tickets, each good for two persons, to his exhibition at the Empire Rink, New York, or elsewhere. Now as we do not go to shows ourself, we offer them as premiums to our agents. Any one sending us five hundred new subscribers with cash for all, will be furnished with a free ticket, and have his name published without extra charges.

We have another object in view in publishing this item, viz: to inform our readers of the great advantages of our profession. Just think, four tickets to a New York show for nothing! No wonder it pays to publish a newspaper. If such offers may be considered snares, allurements, and temptations, then our friends may learn to sympatize with us.

Brother Holsinger:—We are having very cold weather here in Iowa, and we have concluded the reason is because of the two full Moons coming so close together in your Almanac.

A. MURRAY.

Waterloo, Iowa.

Well, yes, that was rather a mistake; and that must have been the cause of the slight error in our weather prognostications. That is the first mistake we have observed in that department. Of course you know we have no control of the moon.

District of Illinois.

The Brethren of the Southren District of Illinois will please pardon the delay in printing their minutes.—Brother Vaniman promptly furnished the copy but we have been obliged to delay the printing on account of having the list of ministers, for the Almanac so long in type. They have now been printed and forwarded to brother Vaniman.

Closing Up.

One more number and the present volume of the Companion will be closed. It will be dated December 19, but may not be printed until after that time, as we have resolved to do no more work in our office until the Almanac has been finished. We hope however it will not delay us more than a few days beyond our regular day of issue. Making out the index will also give occasion for delay; but we shall do our best, for dear knows we shall still have any amount of work left for the holydays.

Brethren's Almanac.

By the time this paper reaches our readers, the Brethren's almanac will be ready for delivery, and many of those ordered will be in the mail. Only a certain number of copies have been printed, and when those have been sold there will be no more to be had, as we find it a "big job" to print an almanac. Last year we had it printed in Philadelphia, but thought it had cost us too much. In consequence of doing the work ourselves we reduced the price, and now find that we have again been a little too liberal. Besides, we committed a mistake in announcing the price. The dozen price had been reckoned at one dollar, instead of which we gave it at 75 cents, and now we shall sell the whole edition at the figures announced.

We believe the almanac will give general satisfaction. We have used a good article of paper, and the print is clear and plain, the astronomical signs and characters being all new.

The list of the addresses of ministers, although not complete, has had a great number of names added to it.

Ministers whose names do not appear in our list must not reflect upon us, as we think it is no fault of ours, as we made every effort to secure all the names possible. There are now nearly one thousand names on the list.

Brother A. H. Cassel has again furnished us with several chapters of biography, which is interesting. Adam Bracfogal gives us a lesson on the signs of the Almanac, what they indicate, their importance &c.

The following is the price of the Almanac:

Single copy,	..	..	.10
½ dozen,	..	..	.40
1 "	..	..	.75

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

On the Death of Sister Elizabeth Ktmmel.

Friday the 10th of November will not soon be forgotten by the friends and relatives of our deceased sister.—This was the day appointed for her funeral. Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, a large number of people gathered together at the house of brother Jonathan to pay their last respects to sister Betty.—Ten o'clock having been the time appointed for the funeral rites to commence, and the hearse having arrived, Eld Jacob Blough spoke as follows: "As the time is now at hand for the funeral of our dear sister, those who have charge of the remains will please take them out into the yard;" and after they had been taken out Eld. Jacob, in his solemn manner, lined the beautiful and appropriate german hymn: Kounn sterbblicher, betrachta mich.—De lebst,ich lebst auf Erden." Oh solemn words! As they fell on our ear, sister Betty, who only a few weeks before enjoyed health and pleasures of this life, was calling through Eld. Jacob to us to come and behold her, as she there lays cold in death. We know, she lived as we do now; for we talked together not long ago, on the subject of religion.—She not only lived a natural life, but a religious life. Now the monster death had done his work. There she lay in her cofin, and we saw that beautiful face for the last time here on earth. After the singing of these lines, the remains were carried to the graveyard on the farm, where they were interied during the solemn singing of the congregation, and the heart piercing shrieks of the husband and five small children. Surely it was a sorrowful sight to behold those little faces, as they saw that the coffin which contained the remains of her who was dearer to them than all others, lowered into the grave. We noticed in that crowd that the eyes of the stoutest could not be kept dry.—But such is the way all flesh has to go. We could weep with those who wept; we could pray for them, but after all their mother is gone and will return no more to them here. While looking over the vast crowd of people I asked the question, who next?—Perhaps I. Would I be prepared, as was sister Betty? Surely we should consider these questions. After the remains had been interred, all repaired to the meeting house known as the Kimmel meeting house, when brother D. O. Walker read the latter part of the 4th chapter of Paul's 1st letter to the Thess., but took his text from the 13th verse, "That ye sorrow not even as others, which have no hope." Brother W. told us that, from actual observation of the life of the dead sister, he was led to believe that she had lived and died for Jesus; and consequently the bereaved could have hope to meet her again where parting is unknown. Brethren Schrock and Blough followed. All agreed with what brother W. had said. As far as known to us, our sister lived a christian life. We all respected her. A brother, while standing at her bed of affliction a few days before her death remarked to me, "I respected sister Betsy double; first she was a sister, and recently she was a warm, religious, praying sister.—Those of us, who were accustomed to meet at the Kimmel meeting house, in prayer meeting well remember the sweet voice of our sister, when she brought her wants and wishes before God in public prayer. I remember very well what feelings it created in my heart when I listened to her prayers. But now she is gone; she will not meet with us again here. Her smiling face will be seen no more.—Last winter, during the protracted meeting in the Berlin meeting-house, one evening she remarked to me that it was very good to be at such meetings. Now she is gone, we hope, to the meeting of the spirits which shall never break up. Those Brethren well may have taken the text they did at her funeral. On the 1st of October she met for the last time with us in meeting here; but if we prove faithful, we can meet her again, not for time but eternity. May God give us wisdom, will and strength to do this. It is true we sorrow; and feel our loss. At our last meeting our sister was not to be seen. Her seat was empty; her voice was not heard, though we remembered her; and could not converse with her as we did in meetings gone by. But one thing we hope, and that is to meet with her in our Father's house, where our troubles and trials all will have an end, and we all can be happy for ever and ever. M. Hady.

Brother Henry:—Please indulge us in a brief account of the Duncansville branch for the satisfaction of the church news, loving part of your readers, and also to bring us into more general notice.

This branch is a remnant of the old Frankstown congregation, which through the current of time has somewhat changed its territory. It is located in Blair county, Pa. on the line of the Hollidaysburg and Morrison Cove R. R. The meeting-house stands about one mile from the railroad in the vicinity of Duncansville. When that house was built about twenty years ago the flock was under the care of elder David Albaugh whose preaching is among the things of my earliest recollection. The branch at this time does not extend over many miles of territory, still the members do not live adjacent to each other which prevents them from enjoying each other's society to that extent which is so very desirable in children of the same family, especially to interchange views on the interests of the common cause in which they are engaged, and to admonish each other to love and good works. The aged and faithful servant who watched over the interests of the flock in my youthful days moved away, and has now ceased from his labors and gone to his reward. Others rose up to defend the cause, so that the little band was never left without some one to minister at the altar. And although it was sometimes brought to a few scattered members, the work still went on, and at the present time taking a view of the partwe have but very little to discourage, much to encourage us.

There is not as much preaching as desirable and in fact necessary to farther the best interests of the cause, on the account of the weakness of the ministerial force on the gratuitious system. Perhaps when the want is more generally felt a move will be made to have the deficiency supplied.

The accommodations for public worship are not so very good. Most of the appointments are held in school houses, and one of them has been refused us through prejudice to the cause we represent. The regular meeting-house is at too much of an out-of-the-way place to hold meetings advantageously, profitably or pleasantly. We cannot enjoy the privilege and blessing of sunday-school, series of meetings, frequent council meetings singing school and such like things. But a move has been made lately to build a new house which we think will in a measure supply the felt want.

A goodly number have been added to this branch through the past year: some by recommendation and some by baptism.

Our late loveteast was a meeting of joy and refreshment to the members,—A season long to be remembered; the memory of which is pleasant. The attendance of auditors was not so large as upon similar occasions previously. The ministerial aid was abundant and the labor well performed.

The country in which this branch is located is changeable so that a description is rather difficult. What is true of one mile is not of the next.—Part is very fertile and productive while another is poor and hilly, lying along the foot of the great Alleghany mountain whose lofty summit towers in majestic grandeur and forms the most sublime and impressive of the Creator's works on earth. People who were not able to purchase homes in more productive communities settled here and they form the principal part of the material we have to work on to build up the church. And we feel encouraged to go forth among them to preach the gospel of the blessed Son of God, from the fact that they are generally plain and unassuming in their manners, polite in their habits religiously inclined, and give good attention when the word is preached.

But sect and schism have also found their way thither, even the Mother of Harlots has many in her iron grasp; so that we have opposition too to contend with, which requires watching and a united and a protracted effort. I said in the outset that one object was to bring this branch into more general notice. And now we fondly hope that the ministering brethren who wish to make a mission of love in the course of this winter, will make this one of their "passing ways" and give us timely notice to use their labors of love to the best interests of the cause. Who will come?

All information how to come, where to stop &c. will be cheerfully given by the writer.

James A. Sell.

Newry, Blair Co. Pa.

Communicated for the Companion.

By Dr. Beachly.

For the satisfaction of the brethren and friends who had formerly lived in Somerset county, and are now living in the Great West and other remote localities, I will note a few of the changes and important improvements that have occurred in our country in the last few years ; and if time and opportunity permit, in a subsequent article I will endeavor to elucidate our reasonable prospect for the future, religious and otherwise.

Thirty years ago we first agitated the scheme of building a railroad through our mountainous country.—The effort was not successful. Many of the companion readers know why it was ot. Suffice it to say, the time had not yet arrived. The friends of this great enterprise however continued to agitate and push, until, finally, all obstacles were overcome, and this great work of internal improvement was completed ; linking the great West with the east by the shortest R. Road route yet built; crossing the Alleghany, and its neighboring mountain ranges. by easier grades and curves than any of the old roads, following the water courses east to the Potomac and West to the Ohio. Scientific and practical men express themselves astonished that this route had not been opened before. Flacherty creek running West, and Will's creek East, are the streams that break through these formidable mountain ranges. The springs giving rise to these streams are within a stone's throw of each other ; the Water from Will's Creek flowing into the Chesapeak Bay, whilst that of Flacherty mixes with that of the Mississippi, and thence into the Gulf of Mexico. Sand Patch Tunnel (nearly a mile long) helps to depress the grade at the Summit, or highest point of the Alleghany Mountain.

Subsequent to the opening—of the Pittsburg and Connellsville R. R. we were almost isolated from the outside world ; hemmed in east, west, north and south by almost insurmountable mountains : the sun of progress, education and civilization could barely reach us ! True our mountains abounded in rich ores : iron ore, fire clay. coal, and limestone were known to exist in almost boundless profusion. Our hillsides and valleys were richly covered with glorious forests. The White Pine, Chestnut, Black Walnut and Sugar Maple luxuriated here in their primitive glory. With all this, and more, we have plenty of the best, soft spring water. The mountain air redolent from the Pine Cornus Florida, Laurel and Wintergreen, malarial diseases are unknown, and epidemics scarce. Yet with all this we could not compete with our more favored neighbors beyond the mountains ; our young and most enterprising citizens would emigrate west, or to points where they could ship the products of their labor to the best markets, where they could at least have an equal chance with the balancre of mankind.

Happily for us, this spell is broken. Although our railroad is comparatively new, it has already produced quite a revolution in our business relations with the outside world.—Branch railroads, villages, and thriving towns are springing up almost as if by magic. We have already five branch roads between Cumberland and Connellsville. Coming from east the Bridgeport branch comes first.—This leads to Bedford, and near the celebrated springs in that county ; thence to Bloody Run, and through the Bsoad Top coal fields, and connects with the Pa. Central at Huntingdon.

The Salisbury branch although not entirely completed, runs in close proximity to the town of Salisbury. This thriving village is located near the terminus of this branch, surrounded with an abundance of coal and timber, and an excellent farming community. The Salisberians are noted for enterprise and hospitality. The town, now lively and growing, is destined ere long to become one of the most flourishing places in the county.—This branch connects with the main stem at Dale City.

The Berlin and Buffalo branch connects with the main stem at the town of Garrett ; and when completed will give the Berliners, and citizens along the Buffalo Valley, an outlet for their surplus products.

The Somerset branch connects with the main stem at Mineral Point, and is a great convenience to the people having business at our ancient Metropolis, and county seat.

Mount Pleasant and Broadford branch connects with the main stem at the town of Broadford. Several other branches are in contemplation. One at Ursina is already commenced. The main stem is to be extended to Chicago, and is already under process of construction ; and thence to the Pacific coast. I may in a subsequent article give our improvements in detail ; in this communication only a few of the most prominent, resulting from the completion of our road.

Our place (formerly known as Meyer's Mills, with but a Mill, store, tanneries, distillery and a few dwelling houses) was incorporated in Sept. 1870; under the uphonous and descriptive name of Dale City. Although comparatively a new town, we possess many facilities and advantages that many older towns do not possess. We are located at the confluence of Flacherty with Casselman River. The dales and hills formed by these streams have a productive soil. The landscape is wildly beautiful. Well cultivated farms, and thrifty, honest and industrious farmers and farmer's wives, with their families, produce everything that is required for food or raiment. Winter wheat, rye, oats, barley and buckwheat come to perfection here. The justly celebrated Glade Butter and Maple Sugar are manufactured here in abundance, and yield large profits to the farmers.

Various coal companies have commenced operations on the hillsides?—Coke and Fire Brick will be largely manufactured by next summer. We have thirty saw-mills within six miles of our town. We have good school-houses and church buildings, conveniently locaied, with good attendance, in every township. The The Brethren have five meeting-houses within a radius of six miles of our town. The citizens of Dale City are principally industrious mechanics, artisans,manufacturers and producers—intelligent, sociable and generous christians. The Brethren, German Reformed, Lutherans and Catholics have meeting-houses. The Episcopalians, Presbyterians, and Methodists have their meeting houses in process of construction. One of the last and most important improvements for our town and county is the Printing and Publishing establishment of H. R. Holsinger. The editor H. R. Holsinger, and his associate, J W. Beer, are young in years, but old in experience—intelligent and zealous christians,—hard workers. The advantages of this establishment to the community and the Brotherhood at large can only be realized by those friendly to the cause of a pure and enlightened christian sentiment.

They are now publishing the Christian Family Companion, the Pious Youth, and the Brethren's Almanac; will also shortly publish a local paper for general information, advertising, &c., and a Medical Gazette edited by Dr. U. M. Beachly.

(To be continued.)

From Brother Balsbaugh.

AT HOME, SUNDAY NOON, Nov. 26, 1871.

H. R. Holsinger: Dear Brother: —In No. 46 you have a brief editorial embodying the wishes of some of your readers, and no less your own, relative to my welfare and that of my dear parents.

For various reasons I withheld the desired "weekly communication."—First, my natural aversion to make myself the subject of remark, or give publicity to my physical wants and sufferings. Second, the danger to our best interests of cherishing the disposition to seek alleviation of our afflictions in the engrossment of human sympathy. In a certain degree this is proper and safe and soothing; but few watch themselves so narrowly in it as to prevent its merging into a morbid state of mind. "God was manifest in the flesh" to offer to us all the conditions that a healthy, well-directed desire for sympathy demands. Third, I want your columns filled with matter more valuable than reference to my physical condition is likely to be. Should I grow seriously worse you shall be apprised of it.—Should I materially improve, the fact will be announced in more frequent contributions of general interest.

I left "Hygeian Home" on the 11th inst. at 7 A. M., and in four hours stood beside my father's couch. A great change in his vital conditions had taken place since I had seen him a few months before. A week prior to my return his mind often wandered, and he frequently called my name, and expressed great joy in his imaginary interviews with me. When he was informed that I stood at his side, his countenance became radiant with paternal affection, but he could not open his eyes to see me. I raised the lids with my fingers, and he gazed long, tenderly and tearfully, and then we saluted in an embrace like that of the Patriarch and his son Joseph. But we could not converse, both being speechless. Oh, how my soul was wrung to witness his efforts to express his feelings and make known his wishes.

He sank gradually, almost imperceptibly, the first seven days after my arrival. On the 21st, at midday, I discovered indications that the last enemy was actually at work. I turned to my mother and remarked, "Death has been long at the door; now he is in; father is dying." His respiration was somewhat laborious, but apparently without suffering, growing feebler and shorter till fifteen before eight in the evening, when his eventful pilgrimage was exchanged for the God built city of the saints, and the sweet unbroken rest of eternity's sabbath. He expired without moving a muscle. I closed his eyes moist with the damp of death, thinking at the same moment that Jesus may be unsealing them in heaven's glory and bliss, and thrilling his emancipated soul with the first rapture of the Beatific vision.

His constitution was originally of the most powerful mould; but frequent and protracted infringements of physiological law, especially in the form of heroic allopathic medication, wrecked him early in life. Although he regained his strength, several of the more important organic functions were so impaired as to give him constant trouble for forty-five years.—This ultimated in such insensibility of the muscular system, that literal decomposition supervened long before his death. For weeks he had to lie on his bare bones.

In the Autumn of 1864 he attended a funeral and had the shaft of a carriage run against his spine, which rendered him so helpless that he could never after dress or undress, lie down or rise up. Thousands of times did mother and I lift him from his chair and bed, and hundreds of times did I help him on his knees and raise him again. Many of the ministering brethren who read this will recall some of the sad scenes to which I refer. He was never heard to complain. He wept and prayed much, but never deemed that he had one cross, or trial, or pang too many for the necessary culture of his faith, or the beautifying of his nature in the image of God. A sense of the sacredness of law was his ruling characteristic. He believed in honoring the Author of law in patiently suffering what its infringement entailed, ignorantly or necessarily, and in being lifted by such sufferings into a higher plane of being. He was a deacon fully half the term of his life, and was ever as ready to expose and spend himself for the cause of Christ, as for the advancement of his own interest. He was oftener in wet and cold and heat in filling the calls of his vocation than in places which not a few of the brethren frequent in neglect of sacred duties.

In the family he was emphatically a man of authority. He was grave deliberate, discriminating, punctual. Naturally benevolent, but allowed no dictation as to the objects of his liberality. In matters pertaining to the interests of the church, he was open-handed and sacrificing, but insisted on rigid investigation and thorough discipline. He was jealous of every object and every being that did not assume transparency in the presence of the Cross. He was born, lived, and died in the same home. His father and grandfather lived here before him. The latter settled here when my grandfather was eight years old, in 1763. Here my grandfather lived to the age of 97 years, and died of Apoplexy this day twenty years ago. He expired in my father's arms in the same room, and in the same corner, in which my father died.

"One like a night-flash passed away,
And one sank lingering day by day."

Long and faithfully they both labored in the kingdom of God. Side by side I trust they are walking the golden streets and by the river of life. Their names will long remain as ointment poured forth. The alabaster box which death has broken fills the house and community and church with heavenly fragrance. For our sakes we are sorry that the loved husband and father is gone. For his sake we are glad with joy unspeakable. His arm-chair and staff and raiment we prize as precious heir-looms, reminding us ever of his seat in "the heavenly places," his palm of victory, his robe of glory, and his crown of life.

He was born June the 4th 1793, and died Nov 21, 1871, reaching the the age of 78 years 5 months and 7 days.

Brother Christian Bucher and William Hertzler spoke at his funeral from Psalm 90 : 10. The occasion was one of solemnity, and the exhortations affectionate, pathetic, and pungent. With a sorrowful heart, yet joyful in tribulation, and more earnestly than ever "pressing towards the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

I am, in the bond of brotherly love,
Yours &c.
C. H. Balsbaugh.

To Brother D. M. Holsinger.

Dear Brother :—I often think of you since we no more hear your voice in our public assemblies ; and the kind regard in which I have ever held you, and the love I feel toward you and the cause in which you are engaged, constrain me to use my feeble effort to try to encourage you. We are so constituted that the strongest of us need encouragement ; and sometimes a word from the least of the brethren will give more cheer than the words of the eloquent. I have no doubt but what you meet with many things in your new field of labor that put your faith on trial and make you feel like Paul said on one occasion : "who is sufficient for these things ?" Your mission is the same as Paul's,—"to declare the unsearchable riches of Christ," and "to turn men from the power of Satan unto God ;" and in this you may at times seem to fail. But failure is not defeat. Failure according to feeble sense seemed to rest upon the manly brow of the Son of God when deserted by his friends, forsaken of his Father ; he heard the cries of the infuriated mob,—"Crucify him, crucify him," and had to bow his head from the cross and give up the Ghost. But from that very hour of seeming failure there followed the most glorious victory that was ever achieved in the annals of our world. The Father's purposes are accomplished. The powers of the prince of darkness are overcome. The seed of the woman has bruised the serpents head. The plan of man's redemption is finished. The life-giving word is, now to be proclaimed to a sinful and benighted world —"Preach the gospel to every creature." The work is carried on by those who were willing to leave their "nets" and follow their Savior ; and yours is a continuation of the same. Go forth then in humble boldness, in a cold and frowning world, to preach a dying Savior's love ; depending on the strength of Israel's God, and success must crown our effort ; for the cause is God's and must prevail, in spite of all his foes." You may not see the fruits of your labors now, but it will be like seed cast in the earth, and in the harvest time you may "return with joy, bearing your sheaves before you." "In the morning sow thy seed and in the evening withhold not thy hand ; for thou knowest not whether shall prosper, either this or that, or whether they both shall be alike good."

"Cast thy bread upon the waters :
Thinking not 'tis thrown away ;
God himself saith thou shalt gather
It again some future day.

Cast thy bread upon the waters ;
Tho' the waves seem dark to men ;
Sorrow shall be turned to laughter,
When thou findest it again.

Cast thy bread upon the waters ;
Why wilt thou doubting stand ?
Bounteous shall God send the harvest,
If thou sow'st with liberal hand.

Cast thy bread upon the waters ,
Duty bids thee not withhold ;
Have full faith that God will render Thee again an hundred fold."

I am in Christian love your brother.
James A. Sell.

Neary, Pa.

Dear Reader ;—I left my residence in Douglass county, Kansas, on the 9th of September, and visited my friends in Clark county, Ohio. From thence to Fayette county West Va. where I enjoyed a hapy time with my friends and brethren, for over two weeks. I was yesterday evening permitted through the mercies and blessings of God to visit my dear father and mother and kind sisters and to enjoy their associations, from whom I have been absent for nearly five years. I found all well and have been enjoying good health myself.

One more thought before I close.—Let us all direct our journey through this world that it may be well pleasing in the sight of God our heavenly Father, that when our meetings and partings are over in this world, we may be permitted to strike glad hands together in that heavenly Jerusalem, where parting will be known no more. Then through the grace and loving kindness of God we can sing praises to his name in a world without end.

Daniel B. Grisso.
Blacksburg, Va., Nov. 1 '71.

Brother Holsinger :—The Brethren and friends here are generally well. In the church we are getting along as well as may be expected.—Since the first of January last, fifty were added to the church by baptism, mostly quite young, and all females but seven. Brother Daniel Holsinger will leave us in the Spring. He has bought a farm in Iowa.

Jacob Snowberger.
Waynesbora, Pa.

Brother Holsinger :—In Companion No. 47, page 745, there are a few mistakes in my piece on Sabbath-schools. First, I mean the Hebrew children that were cast into the burning furnace for not worshiping the golden image. (Dan. 3.) Second, I mean the children that mocked Elisha and were torn by the bears. (2 Kings 2.)

Hannah Knouff.

MARRIED.

On the 18th of November by brother Moses Shuler, BENJAMIN K. HOTEL of Bucks county to sister SARAH ANN STAUFFER of Lehigh county, Pa.

By the undersigned, on the 27th of July, GEORGE T. KELLER to PHEBE L. WATERS.

Also by the same, on the 5th day of November, SYLVESTER F. MULLEN to MIRANDA F. MYERS.

A. G. Black.

On the 26th day of November, by the undersigned, at the residence of brother Henry Hartung, the bride's father, brother JOHN M. SNYDER, of Black Hawk county, to Miss CATHARINE HARTUNG, of Marshall Co., Iowa.

Also, on the 23d of September, at the house of the bride's father (Jacob Moore) Mr. B. A. SNYDER, of Lagrand, to Miss CAROLINE MOORE, of Marion township, both of Marshall county, Iowa.

Elder John Murray.

November 23d, at the residence of the bride's parents, by Elder H. Koontz, brother JOSEPH F. EMMERT to sister ELIZA BENEDICT, all of Franklin county, Pa.

D. H. Fahrney.

At the residence of the bride's father, Nov. 24th, Mr. ELI S. CARPER to Miss ELIZABETH SNIDER, both of Bedford county, Pa.

S. A. Moore.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with Obituary Notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In the Manor branch Indiana county, Pa.,

August 13th, ELIZABETH REAM aged 73 years 2 months and 10 days. Funeral discourse at Cookport October 29th from Heb., 13; 14, by Joseph Holsopple.

In the Berlin branch, Somerset county, Pa., on the 12th of September, 1870, CHARLEY SYLVESTER, son of Cyrus and sister Julia SHAVER, aged 1 year, 5 months and 26 days. Occasion improved by brother Valentine Blough and the writer from Samuel 12: 23. Michael Weyand.

In the Swan Creek congregation, Fulton county, Ohio, August 23d, of typhoid fever, sister MARY TEICHER, aged about 35 years.

The subject of this notice was married the second time. Her first husband's name was Robert Heiner, with whom she moved from Columbiana county, Ohio, to this part of the State, where she was bereft of her first husband. They were both worthy members. We hope our loss is their great gain. Funeral occasion improved by Elders A. Stutsman and Jacob Lehman.

In the same place, September 15th, of gangrene and inflamation of the lungs, SARAH JANE BERKEYBILE, aged 6 years, 2 months and a few days About three months previous to her death she inhaled a part of a cherry seed, which lodged in her lungs and remained until a few days before she died, when she coughed the seed up. Would say to the parents, comfort yourselves with these words, "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Funeral improved by brother John Brown.

Also, in the same place, October 5th, sister MARY JANE THRUSH, aged 38 years, 2 months, and 23 days. Disease typhoid fever. Deceased was a sister that was much loved and respected by all, and her loss is deeply felt by the church. Her example was worthy of imitation. She left a sorrowing husband and family, who mourn their loss, but need not weep with those who have no hope. Funeral occasion improved by Elder A. Stutsman and the writer.

Also, in the same place, September 28th, of gravel, brother HENRY DELAMATER, aged about 71 years. He bore his sickness with patience, desiring to depart and go to the Father. Funeral occasion improved by Elder Abraham Stutsman and the writer from Rev. 14: 12-13.

Aaron Berkeybile.

In the Tuscarora branch, Juniata county, Pa., February 24th, FANNIE, infant daughter of friend Samuel and sister Elizabeth W. PANNEBAKER, aged 2 weeks.

Also, November 28th, 1871, JOSIE, infant son of same parents, aged 2 months, less 1 week. Funerals improved by brother Christian Myers.

Thus sleep the two little angel forms side by side. Nothing of them is left but the little twin mounds to remind the fond parents that they have two little angels in heaven.

Mary Kohrer.

In the Tulpehocken church, Lebanon Co., Pa., on Sunday, November 12th, brother JACOB BUCHER, aged 64 years, 7 months and 18 days. The evening before, he was in meeting well. Sunday forenoon he was missing; no one knew why; many asked after meeting, "Where was old brother Bucher to-day?" Some of his children who live away from home made for his house and found him suffering somewhat from pain across his breast. When the rest were taking dinner he walked to the stable, fed and came back, and sat in his chair conversing freely with his children about half an hour, when suddenly he commenced to tremble, and in two minutes time was a corpse; leaving three sons and four daughters—all members of the church, and two of the sons laboring in the ministry. Funeral on the 15th—large concourse of relatives, neighbors and members. Occasion improved by brethren Jacob Hollinger, John Zug, and John Herr. Text, Isaiah 3: 10

[Visitor please copy.]

A sad and fatal accident occurred on the farm of brother Jacob Meyers, a little over four miles west of Carlisle, Pa. Peter McGloughlin, a native of Ireland, and Jacob Frederick, son of brother Jacob and sister Eliza Meyers, were working in an ore bank about thirty feet deep. It caved in and killed them instantly. There was another man at work but he escaped. It happened about 2 o'clock P. M. on the 11th of November. About twelve hours elapsed before Jacob was gotten out. PETER McGLOUGHLIN, aged about 49 years. Funeral services by the writer. JACOB FREDERICK MYERS, aged 19 years, 2 months and 7 days. Funeral services by Daniel Hollinger and the writer, to a solemn congregation. Little did I think the last time I saw him that he so soon and so suddenly must be called from this to the eternal world. Oh, let us all take a warning from the above; and the brothers and sisters, and all his associates, that you too, must die, and for what we know death may not be far off. This is surely a loud calling for you to become obedient to your God. John Brindle.

LIST OF MONEYS RECEIVED for SUBSCRIPTION, BOOKS, etc.

S J McKinzie,	1 00	James S Black,	1 00
Dr J Beachly,	1 50	Linda,	3 50
Jonas Hildebrand,	7 50	Levi L Landis,	1 50
Jos B Light,	7 50	S B Replogle,	1 00
Reider & Heisey,	2 25	J S Flory,	4 00
Elijah Horne,	1 50	J D Yoder,	3 00
J C Stoner,	75	Mat Frantz,	1 00
D Brower,	5 00	Thomas Gray,	2 00
Conrad Imler,	2 00	S A Moore,	1 25
John Pool,	1 00	E J Sager,	1 50
Jonas Price,	10 00	M Hady,	8 00
D Hostetler,	2 00	A Soladay,	1 65
Jos Maugans	6 10	J S Snowberger,	9 60
Christian Shafer,	65	S H Taylor,	15 00
D O Brumbaugh,	3 00	James A Sell,	1 00
Annie E Stoler,	1 50	Lucy Cobaugh,	3 75
John Eisenbise,	75	Aaron Diehl,	5 50
T A Swinehart,	50	A Berkeybile,	1 50
Henry Slingluff,	1 00	H Gotheour,	2 00
Daniel Hollinger,	1 00	M Deardorff,	14 00
Jacob Harley,	10 00	Isaac Secrist,	75
Ben F Ebey	1 50	Abel Findley,	3 10
Thos B Wenrick,	4 50	Jacob B Neff,	50
Elder Saml Lidy,	1 70	John H Miller,	1 60
Daniel Brower,	1 00

Pittsburg and Connellsville R. R.

TIME TABLE.

Commencing on Monday, October 10th, 1871, at 2 o'clock, P. M.

EASTWARD.			WESTWARD.
Com Mail	Balt Exp.	STATIONS.	Cin. Exp.	Cum Mail
A. M	P. M.		A. M.	P. M
6 50	8 00	Pittsburg	10 15	6 10
10 21	9 57	Bradford	8 05	2 30
10 35	10 10	Connellsville	8 00	2 25
1 20	11 55	Mineral Point	5 52	11 22
1 40	12 15	Garret	5 35	11 02
157	1228	DALE CITY	526	1045
3 16	1 28	Bridgeport	4 15	9 25
4 30	2 00	Cumberland	3 40	8 40
P. M.	A. M.		P. M.	A. M

Advertisements.

WE will admit a limited number of select advertisements at the following rates

One insertion, 20 cents a line.

Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.

Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.

No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations.

WANTED.—A situation as apiarian, on reasonable salary. West of the mountains preferred.

S. B. REPLOGLE,
Roaring Spring, Blair Co., Pa.

DR. U. M. BEACHLEY'S
FAMILY MEDICAL DEPOT.
OFFICE AND DRUG STORE,
ON MAIN Street,
DALE CITY, Somerset Co., Pa.

FOXES POISONED.—Full instructions in a Copyright Book for 50 cents. Address, J.T. MOXLEY, Owasso, Mich. 7-47-3m.*

GREAT EXCITEMENT!
J. N. FICHTNER,
of Berlin, Pa., has caused a great excitement in the County by bringing into our midst the very popular and far-famed WEED (F. F.) SEWING MACHINE. All who have tried it give this as their decision: "The Weed runs lighter, has less gearing, is more easily managed, and takes less time to understand it than any other machine now in the county."

The WEED has no cog-wheels, no spring or compound levers, and is sold at prices ranging from $60 to $150. Each machine is furnished with a tucker, quilter, baster, 3 hemmers, feller, corder, ruffler, fringer braider, and a self-sewer, gratis.

Satisfaction GUARANTEED.

Call on or address.

J. N. FICHTNER,
7-47-3t.* BERLIN, PA.

Office in Downer's new building.

Universal Guide for Cutting Garments.

By which every family may cut its own garments for men and boys, of twenty six different sizes; for Coats, Pants, Vests, and Shirts, and Ladies' Dress Bodies. Agents wanted to sell State, County, and Family Rights. For Particulars address MILLER & QUINN, Tyrone, Blair Co., Pa.

The Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine, with Drop Feed, new Take-up, new Hemmer, &c., is now offered to agents on more liberal terms. Also, Second-hand Machines taken in exchange, or the new improvements applied.

Every Machine is warranted FIRST CLASS, and if the purchaser does not so regard it after a fair trial, he can return it, and money refunded.

N. B. Wanted traveling agents to visit each town, distributing circulars, explaining the improvements, etc., etc., who can make $200 per month. Address LYON'S MUTUAL S. M. Co.

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 85 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

H. R. HOLSINGER.
Dale City, Somerset Co., Pa.

BURLINGTON.

Leaving the East and arriving at Chicago or Indianapolis, how shall we reach the West? The best Line is acknowledged to be the C. B. and Q., joined together with the B. & M. Railroad by the Iron Bridge at Burlington, and called the Burlington Route.

The main line of the Route running to Omaha, connects with the great Pacific Roads, and forms to-day the leading route to California. The Middle Branch, entering Nebraska at Plattsmouth, passes through Lincoln, the State Capital, and will this year be finished to Fort Kearney, forming the shortest route across the Continent by over 100 miles.

Another branch of the B. M., diverging at Red Oak, falls into a line running down the Missouri through St. Joe to Kansas City, and all Kansas. Passengers by this route to Kansas, see Illinois, Southern Iowa, and Missouri, and, by a slight divergence, can see Nebraska also.

Lovers of fine views should remember the Burlington Route, for its towns "high-gleaming from afar"—its tree-fringed streams—its rough bluffs and quarries—its corn-ocean stretching over the prairies further nthan eye can reach.

Land-buyers will be sure to remember it, for they have friends among the two thousand who have already bought farms from Geo. S. Harris, the Land Commissioner of the B. & M. R. R. at Burlington, Iowa, or among the four thousand home-steaders and pre-emptors who last year filed claims in the Lincoln Land Office, where "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm."

1780 1871

ARE YOU AFFLICTED OR SICK?

Use Dr. Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

An Alterative and Cathartic, or Tonic and Purge combined, for diseases arising from bad blood; such as Costiveness, Dyspepsia Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Erysipelas, Worms, Chills and Fever, Scrofula, Pimples, Tetter, &c. TRY IT.

Established 1780 in package form. Established nearly 20 years ago in liquid form which was brought to its present state of preservation and perfection some years later, by Dr. P. Fahrney, Chicago, Ill's, who conducts the trade west of Ohio. Great reputation! Many Testimonials! Ask for that prepared at Waynesboro, Pa., and Chicago, Ill's. Beware of imitations. Genuine retails at $1.25 per bottle. Druggists and Medicine dealers sell it.

Dr. P. Fahrney's "Health Messenger" gives the history and uses of the BLOOD CLEANSER testimonials, and other information, sent free of charge. Address

Dr. P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co.
WAYNESBORO PA.

A Card.

Drs. D. Fahrney & Son, Eroscopian Physicians, continue the practice of Medicine at the old stand, near Boonsboro, Md. They treat all forms of Chronic Diseases with marked success. Can be addressed by letter, and they can send medicine to any part of the United States, wherever there is an express office. Post office address, Boonsboro, Washington County, Md.

7-10-1 yr. pd.

BOOKS

For Sale at this Office.

The Emphatic Diaglott; Or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the Original Greek Text of the New Testament, with Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. A work for Students in Theology, and S. S. Teachers. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price, $4.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: comprising "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," in one vol., $2.25. Indispensable.

Life at Home; or the Family and its MEMBERS.—Including Husbands and Wives, Parents, Children, Brothers, Sisters, Employers and Employed. The Altar in the House, etc. By Wm. Aikman. $1.50;

Man in Genesis and in Geology; or The Biblical Account of Man's Creation tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. By J. P. THOMPSON. Fancy Cloth. $1.00.

How to Read Character. A new Illustrated Hand-book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners, with a Chart for recording the sizes of the different Organs of the Brain, in the Delineation of Character, with upwards of 170 Engravings. Muslin, $1.25.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. Disclosing the Laws of Conjugal Selection, and showing who may and who may not marry. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50:

Oratory—Sacred and Secular; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. With Chairman's Guide for conducting Public Meetings according to the best Parliamentary forms. By W. PITTINGER. $1.50

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Edition. Beautifully Illustrated with nearly Sixty Engravings. Cloth, gilt, beveled boards. Only $1

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book Embracing Synonyms, Technical Terms, Abbreviations, Foreign Phrases, Writing for the Press, Punctuation, Proof Reading, and other Valuable Information. Cloth, 75 cents.

Any of the above sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price.

The Phrenological Journal, an Illustrated, First-class Family Magazine, devoted to the 'Science of Man" Subscription price, $3,00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal and Christian Family Companion together for $3,50 or with the Pious Youth for, $3,00. we commend the Journal to all who want a good Family Magazine, and who don't!

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post pain,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid.	1.25
Per dozen " "	10 30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post pain,	.50
Per dozen, "	5.50

Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 85 cents. $8.00 per dozen.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER.
DALE CITY, PA.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.7
Reserved at the office,	2.25
NEAD'S TRILOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express,	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	.60
German & English Testaments,	.75

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25

32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION. 25

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Certificates &c.

MarriageCertificate, per doz., post paid, 0.30, CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP. Per doz, 0.20

TRACTS.—RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE, 12 pages five cents single copy; thirty cents a doz. All orders should be accompanied with the money, and the name of person, postoffice county & state written in unmistakable letter

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and State written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to,

THE PIOUS YOUTH.

A MONTHLY PUBLICATION

Designed to Promote the Welfare, and enlarge the number, of the class of persons whose name it bears.

One dollar a year in advance.

THE

Christian Family Companion

Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements; that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Non-conformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian, will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp.

Address H. R. HOLSINGER,
DALE CITY Somerset Co., Pa.

Christian Family Companion

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum

VOLUME VII. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, DEC. 19, 1871. NUMBER 50.

For the Companion.

A Life Picture—The Wicked.

A man may glide safely along down the current of a great stream while the waters are smooth and unbroken, may lie down in his boat and sleep and dream pleasant dreams, and when aroused by some one interested in his welfare and told there are dangerous falls below, he looks out and sees the waters are smooth and placid as far as he can see, so he mocks at the idea of danger. 'Tis true he knows there are falls far down near the sea, but he intends to see to that danger when he gets near the point, so he decides to have a little more feasting, a little more slumber and sleep, and resigns himself to the embrace of the goddess of pleasure and idleness, and is lulled to sleep by her fascinating smiles and lullaby songs. On, on his little bark drifts, nearer and nearer the roaring falls it approaches; the thunderings of the terrible flood pouring over the dizzy precipice reaches his ear; he starts up and wildly looks around—can scarcely comprehend at first the meaning, but at length the terrible reality stares him in the face; he feels that he is going faster and faster! oh, the horror that seizes his soul, for he is already in the swift drawing current! Now he cries for help; now he falls upon his knees and probably for the first time his lips move in prayer; now he laments his madness. The godless at whose shrine he so often knelt, now mocks at his calamity and laughs when his fear cometh. He sees the surging billows of foam far below and hears the voice as of a thousand demons that await his coming, and alas! over the awful brink he plunges as by an irresistible power—one longing look up—and one more cry of agony, and all is over; he has gone down into roaring billows never more to rise in this life.

Such, in a great measure, is the life and end of the ungodly, only a fate ten thousand times more awful awaits them. They, with all others, are drifting down the stream of time to eternity. How careless and unconcerned they are as to the dangers that are ahead. They court pleasure's smiles and are lulled to sleep in the cradle of vanity and ease. Sin is their meat and their drink. If awakened to a sense of their dangers they heed not the counsels of the good, but listen to Satan who continues to whisper into their ears time enough, time enough to prepare for death and heaven, until at last, and that too before they are aware of it, they feel the drawings of death's flood, and hear as it were the mutterings of distant rolling thunder. Then they begin to look wildly around and cry for help. Where now their vain pleasures and hopes? Where now the prospect of time enough? All, all is but hollow mockery. Feeling the chilly damps coming from the valley of death, remorse takes hold of the soul and now laments the folly of not making peace with God, and of slighting a Savior's love. The thought that if they had made friends with Christ now he would bear them up, rankles in their bosom as a sharp-pointed sword. Oh! the awful thought, too late! too late!! Nearing the awful brink of eternal woe without Christ and without hope, in terror they cry, lost! LOST!! The horrors of hell take hold of their soul! They hear, as they near the awful brink of ruin, voices as coming from legions of devils that await their coming; and thus amidst the woeful din that emanates from an awful hell, they are hurled over into the vortex of eternal ruin. Oh, turn poor sinners, "for why will you die when Christ in great mercy is coming so nigh?

J. S. FLORY.

Grace in Time of Need.

BY D. B. MENTZER.

The beloved Apostle to the Gentiles wrote the Epistle to the Hebrews, or converted Jews, and convinced them that Jesus is our Great High Priest, and has "passed into heaven" to officiate there in our behalf, and that He is not a Priest as they of old, mere man, but a Divine Priest, who can be "touched with the feelings of our infirmities," and "was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin;" and then he encouraged them together with all believers, and says: "Let us come, therefore, boldly to the throne of grace that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need."

How shall I come?

Now, my dear fellow-christian, when do we need grace? when is the time of need? why does the great apostle say "in time of need"? give these queries a few thoughts, for this subject concerns every one who names the name of Christ.

When do I need grace?
I need grace daily.
How can I find grace?
By seeking for it.
Where shall I seek?
At the "throne of grace?"
Where is the throne of grace.

Wherever I offer "fervent prayer," "in spirit and in truth," being careful not to do my righteousness before men simply to be seen and heard of them.

"Come boldly to the throne of grace," and "find grace to help in time of need"—to help in every-day life for I need it daily; yea, momentarily, for every moment I am exposed to evil either in deed, word or thought

But what is this "grace"? It is God's saving and sanctifying power, to sanctify our souls to the Lord's service here and prepare us for Heaven and its fadeless glories. O brother, sister, christian, we need it. We need it daily. We need it to subdue our sinful passions, and to sanctify our tempers. We need it to preserve us in the hour of temptation, and to sustain our hearts in time of trouble We need it to quicken our languid affections, and enlarge our religious experience. We need it to render us useful to the world, and to enable us to "endure with patience the race set before us." We need it when we must meet the grim, monster, enemy, DEATH,—to help us in that great, final hour of need. O grace, heavenly grace, "grace of God!" Be it our portion and part forever

Our God is the God of all grace. Jesus, blessed Jesus, the Son of God is full of grace. And gives us more grace. He has promised to give it, and He is faithful. But we must ask if we would receive; we must come boldly, and seek for it fervently, and find it. Without it, we must fall, or drag along a lifeless formality. Without it, we cannot be Christians. Without it we are lost, hopelessly lost.

Come let us look unto Jesus for grace to overcome our past sinfulness and pride. Let us look to Jesus for grace to sanctify us and make us useful. Heaven forbid that we should attempt anything in our own strength, but let us receive grace from the Lord, that we may live unto Him, and ascribe all the good we do, to the grace of God which is with us and in us.

Grace is always free. Is free to us, and our gracious God invites and entreats us to come and receive. Come then, boldly to the throne of grace and obtain mercy, and find grace to help you each day. Come to Him in the closet of prayer, and come to the family altar, and He will help.

Another year is being closed as a volume of history, soon to be placed in the vast library of the Past, and I wonder how many of us feel satisfied with the record that it will bear of our life during the year. May God be merciful unto us. If we have been too ungrateful, if we have too seldom come to the throne of grace, if we have been too selfish, may we humble ourselves before Him.

Fellow-christian, let us resolve upon a holier life, and may the New Year find us determined to live more consecrated to God and His Christ than heretofore. Peace to you all.

Waynesboro, Pa.

Labor not for the Things That Perish.

BY E. HERBRUCK.

To-day, as we sat by our window and watched the tide of life flow down the street, we were struck with the thought that each of that busy crowd had some object in view, that object was common—the ease and comfort of the body.

Then we said, "how foolish." And we wondered why it was that men labored and toiled until they grew pale and emaciated, for something that will never satisfy the deep, earnest longings of the soul.

We saw there the rich, the poor, the lame, the blind, — deformed beings, many in whom the tide of life must soon cease to flow, and yet all rushing on, eager to reach their place of business, that they might continue their race for wealth.

The rich man has a palace, but is not content with it. Like Nero, he must have a house "fit for a man to live." The poor man has a dwelling —there is a look of comfort about it —there is ivy on the porch—there are rose shrubs in the yard; but he is ill at ease in it, he must have one like his neighbor, and on the securing of the means for this style of living all the powers of his being are concentrated.

Thus men act. The power of mind given them to be used in search of the things that are heavenly and unseen are used only in search of the things that are seen, though they have heard the admonition, "Labor not for the things that perish."

The soul was not made for earth, and will never be satisfied with earthly things. And while man should be seeking pearls that will adorn his crown in glory, he labors only for things that will perish and drop off like the faded autumn leaf. If what the richer men amass would make their eternity happy, there might be some excuse for this unceasing toil; but we know he shall not carry it with him to the grave any more than shall the flowers at the close of day fold forever in their petals the glory of the setting sun.

Wealth has been amassed, but life has been a failure. Much gold and fame have been won, but a soul is lost. There has been much pleasure in the life that now is; but life's misdirected toil, an abused concience, these will weigh like mountains on the soul in eternity.

Man was not made to use his faculties merely in the acquisition of money; they were intended for much higher things. He should seek to know God—his own sinful condition, and how he may be saved; for these things he should labor, because they will bring peace to his soul.

Child of God, wouldst thou be happy? wouldst thou be rich? then labor for those things that shall endure when the pillars of the universe have trembled, and the great earth has passed away.

Strive to win Christ, and thou shalt be rich indeed. Thou shalt be worth more than all the stars twice told in gold.

Labor not for the things that perish, but for those things that endure unto everlasting life, so that when thine end has come, and friends have gathered round thee, they may say, "he is rich." Yes, rich in love, rich in honor, rich in everlasting glory, rich in Christ. And when thou hast come forth from the battle of life with victory written on thy brow; when thou hast exchanged thine earthly tabernacle for the house not made with hands; angels shall weave for thee a crown that shall outshine the very stars in luster, and thou shalt enjoy all those things for which thy soul did long.

The Mountains of Scripture.

Mount Ararat whereon, says Moses the Ark rested, consists of two peaks, separated by a valley. The great Ararat rises to the height of 17,210 feet from the level of the sea, and the lesser, or the little Ararat, to 13,000. The Great Ararat was ascended, after great toil, by Professor Parrot,, in 1829; probably then pressed by the foot of man for the first time since Noah.

Carmel, the scene of the trial between Elijah and the worshipers of Baal, as to whether Jehovah or Baal, was God, is the general name of a range of hills extending north west from the plain of Esdraelon, and ending in a bold promontory on the shore of the Mediterranean, forming the bay of Acre. The extent of the range is six miles, and the greatest height is 1,500 feet.

Mount Ebal and Gerizim, in Samaria, rise about 800 feet, having a valley about 250 paces wide between. On these hills was performed the grand ceremony, on the Israelites gaining possession of the land of promise, for which Moses had left directions. Six tribes were placed upon Mount Gerizim to bless the people, and six upon Mount Ebal to curse. In later times the Samaritans built a temple on Mount Gerizim, and the Samaritans still regard it as holy ground.

Mount Hor, on the summit of which Aaron died, is situated in Arabia Petrea, on the confines of Idumea, and rises to the elevation of 3,000 feet.

Men may judge us by the success of our efforts. God looks at the efforts themselves.

For the COMPANION.

Definite Time.

"But of that day and hour knoweth no man; no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only." Matth. 24: 36.

This text is used, times innumerable, to prove that no person can, or shall ever, know any thing definite of the time when Christ will come the second time into this world. But it does seem to me that there is more claimed for the above words of Jesus than he wished his disciples to understand.

Now let us remember what gave rise to this language. We learn that the Jews were looking for a King to arise among them, that would reign over the whole earth; and when Jesus entered upon his ministry, they told the miracles he did, and hence many believed that he was the Messiah foretold by Moses and the prophets. But even his disciples were over anxious to see him immediately enthroned; and he had, upon several previous occasions, told them what should be done to him; but the disciples were not careful enough of what was written of him by the prophets, and what he told them himself, so he thought he should and would immediately set up his kingdom. So they "showed him the buildings of the temple." He then tells them that there should not be one stone left upon another that should not be thrown down. This seems to have made some serious thoughts to arise in their minds, and they asked him, "When shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming and of the end of the world?" Matth. 24: 3. Then he began to answer their questions, and in doing this he refers them to what was written in the prophecy of Daniel. And after he answered them and told them what must come to pass before he would return, he tells them "Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven." Matth. 24: 29. And after telling all these things, he tells them to "learn a parable of the fig tree;" &c.

Now the question is, Have these signs come to pass? I answer they have. The sun was darkened on the 19th of May, 1780; and the night following, being only a day or two after full moon, it was so dark that even a cloth or paper could not be seen when held before the eyes. And on the night of the 13th of Nov, 1833, the stars fell. To the latter phenomonan there are thousands of living witnesses. I well remember the memorable morning; and the following day there seemed to be a general gloom depicted upon the countenances of men and women. And I well remember of hearing some of the most pious of that day say that this was a fulfilment of the Savior's predictions,—"The stars shall fall from heaven." And undoubtedly they were correct in their conclusions. These are the signs by which we are to be warned of the near approach of Christ's second coming, the same as we are aware of the near approach of Summer, when we see the fig tree and all the trees bud and put forth leaves. Then in a very short time we see men searching diligently into these things, when the cry went forth with power: "Behold, time shall be longer!" (Even then, 1843, for then all the prophetic dates run out). This no doubt was a fulfilment of the prophecy of the rainbow angel of Rev. 10th, and it would be well if we studied the Scriptures. It will greatly assist us in coming to correct conclusions in many things pertaining to the signs of the last times.

This angel was clothed with a cloud. We all know the effect of a cloud spread over or around the earth It has the effect to hide the sun from our vision. A rainbow is caused by a mist intervening between us and the sun; after the cloud has partially passed away. Now if we apply this spiritually to the time movements of 1843 and 1854, we see the cloud that obscured the light of prophecy in that day; because Ptolemy's canon was universally conceded to be correct, hence Wm. Miller was mistaken in his calculations, as he commenced certain dates at wrong dates, and of necessity must end at a corresponding wrong dates But when the "Sealed Book of Daniel opened" came out, then we had a correct chronology of the age of the world, and now to the prophetic student it must appear very evident that the end is nigh, even at the door. The more closely we read the predictions of holy writ concerning the closing scenes of the present dispensation, and compare with the present state of the nations of the whole earth,—and not only as regards the nations, but also all associations, either political religious, or otherwise,—all combine to fulfil the prophecies.

But the answer comes, "But of that day and hour knoweth no man," &c., Dear reader, I would now call your attention to this fact, that Christ spake to his disciples in the present tence; he says, "But of that day and hour knoweth no man" He does not say, no man shall ever know. This would forever seal the book of Daniel. But the angel told Daniel, "Go thy way, Daniel, for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end." It does not read until the end; but till the time of the end; and then it is said that "none of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand." Daniel 12th. Now the plain, literal understanding is, that at the time that the Savior used the language, "But of that day and hour knoweth no man," the matter was still closed and the seal upon it; hence none did know. But inasmuch as the seal was to be loosed before the end, but only in the time of the end, when the time of the end came, the seal was broken open, and then the wise were enabled to understand; but the wicked will not take heed unto the signs of the times, hence shall not understand, but the wise shall understand."

Then how beautifully does the Savior portray the condition of the saints, and the wicked in "the time of the end, when he says, "But as the days of Noe were so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." Now this was written for the benefit of the saints, and not for the wicked, just as it was told Noah "yet seven days," Gen. 7. Noah knew seven days before the rain came. If it is to be as it was then, the righteous will know something of the time when the Lord shall come.

WM HOLSINGER.

For the Companion.

Happiness. (Concluded).

Sorrow added to sorrow, and trouble crowded upon trouble. I tried to get rid of my trouble, and resorted to every expedient that suggested relief; but never once came to myself. Ah! how little could I see that the root of all my trouble was in my own poor, famishing soul! I had spent all my Father's goods in riotous living, and was now perishing with hunger. I once had an innocent heart—a clear conscience—a pious inclination—a sound mind. These were the gifts of my heavenly Father; but the tempter drew me on, and I bartered them all away. He stole my reason; he corrupted my judgment; he hardened my heart; he blinded my eyes, and he kept me from hearing the Good Shepherd's voice, by the constant din of his ridicule and mockery.

I heard there was balm in Gilead—he told me 'twas not for me. I heard there was pardon offered to the chief of sinners—he sneered, "Don't be a baby, you have no need of pardon." "But I'm weary of life and heavy laden."

"Here's the bowl," says he,

> "'Twill make a man forget his woes
> 'Twill heighten all his joy."

Oh, if I had only known that at the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder! Despair took hold upon my shattered mind and troubled soul! 'Twas like the troubled water that casteth up mire and dirt continually, and the roaring thereof drowned entirely the voice of mercy. No rest—no peace—no friends—no God, but the haunting of the evil one continually.

Found dead is the virdict and here we close the dismal scene.

J. L. SWITZER.

For the Companion.

Feet-washing and its Design.

This subject seems of late to enlist the attention of our brethren, if possible, more than ever before. The manner in which it shall be performed, seems now to be of more moment than any other part of this church ordinance. If we can properly understand the object our blessed Master had designed it to accomplish, we think that we shall also understand the manner in which to perform the rite, and have imparted to us the happiness arising from an observance of the same. Jesus says: "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." We believe that this enjoyment will belong to every member in particular, if every one engages in the work; for we know, that it is one thing to have a brother stoop down and wash our feet, but it is quite another thing, for us to stoop down and wash his feet. The act of servility is performed by the one who washes and not by the one that is washed. We all know who performed the part of a servant in the upper chamber, where the Lord's Supper was first eaten; and if we were at a neighbor's house, and he should command another to come with water and wash his feet, could we not see which was the servant? Now we think & will say this, that if we hold that feet-washing is a humiliating ordinance, which it certainly is, it should always be performed in the manner that will impart the most of that Christlike principle to those who practice it, and in no better way can we obtain that principle,—and we do obtain it, if we follow our Lord,—than for each one to act the part of a servant himself. If we wish this practice to make the church humble, let every member become an humble observer of all our Lord's commands, and then will the church be made so. If love is to make part of its character, let every one in particular so love his brethren as our Lord hath loved us and then shall the world know, that we are his disciples. It was the performance of so many acts of kindness to the poor and the afflicted, that gave to our Master the character of a friend and brother; it was by performing the acts of a servant, that gave to him that humble character, and has degraded his religion in the eyes of a wicked world. And so of all other traits of character that we see in him, as Prophet, Priest and King, and as mediator between God and man, and now as an intercessor for us in heaven; they are all given to him by the performance of that part that belongs to each in particular. If to follow our Lord imparts character, then let us follow him through the regeneration in every work and duty and try to attain to the object for which his commands were all given. Let us be willing to follow him to prison and to death.

LANDON WEST.

Sinking Springs, Ohio.

For the Companion.

The Lord's Prayer.

In the Lord's prayer are six distinct petitions, as follows:

1. Thy kingdom come.
2. Thy will be done on earth as in heaven.
3. Give us this day our daily bread.
4. Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors.
5. Lead us not into temptation.
6. Deliver us from evil.

In this essay it is my purpose to show the propriety of using these petitions in our daily prayers; but the reader will pardon me for beginning with the last.

"Deliver us from evil." So long as there is any manner of evil in the world, we have need to be delivered from the same; and as we can not deliver ourselves, we have need to pray, "Deliver us from evil."

"Lead us not into temptation." So long as sin is in the world, and so long as we are in a state of probation,—the temptation as here used meaning trial,—we have need to pray not to be led into these trials; and as we pray for exemption, we should not unnecessarily run into them, and thus, by avoiding them try to answer our own prayers.

"Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors." So long as we are in need of the blessings of heaven and receive them, we are debtors to "Our Father;" and not only so, but so long as we are subject to transgression we are likely to do so, and have need to pray, "forgive us our debts." But I would have the friendly reader to notice the subjoined clause,—"As we forgive our debtors." Are we willing to forgive other's their trespasses? If so, we may ask to be forgiven as we forgive; but so long as we are not willing to forgive, we are not prepared to use this petition.

"Give us this day our daily bread." So long as we are in need of food none will deny the propriety of this petition.

"Thy will be done on earth as in heaven." So long as there is any will contrary to that of "Our Father," we have need to pray, "Thy will be done." But notice a little farther, the petition says, "On earth as in heaven." Oh, how different will be the state of society when every one will do the Lord's will on earth! Now we have a number of empires, kingdoms, and republics, each ruled by its own rulers according to their own will, and in these empires and kingdoms there are numerous subjects, who, nevertheless, have a will of their own which they desire to be done, giving rise to numerous parties, factions, societies and sects, among whom we find contrary desires, antagonistic interests, and divers wills; each claiming his rights,—as they are pleased to term it,—and the result is continual strife, dissension, and even fighting; each party wishing to enforce the accomplishment of its own will, in which our Father's will is entirely ignored. Where is the christian who does not desire improvement in this particular? But the antagonistic kingdoms will exist until the God of heaven shall set up his kingdom even until the stone cut out without hands shall smite them and break them to pieces, and shall become a great mountain and fill the whole earth; even till the seventh angel shall have sounded his trumpet, and the kingdoms of this worle shall have become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ; and he shall reign upon the earth and the saints shall reign with him a thousand years; even until we shall realize this, let every member of the church say even so, come Lord Jesus, and continually pray, THY KINGDOM COME.

JOSEPH HOLSOPPLE.

WORDS we may control at will, but looks, tone, motion, and conduct, all of which spring from the internal character, compose a great reservoir of influence, which is ever affecting mankind.

If you wish success in life, make perseverance your bosom friend, experience your wise counselor, caution your elder brother, and hope your guardian genius.

WORK QUIETLY.—Endeavor to take your work quietly. Anxiety and over action are always the cause of sickness and restlessness. We use our judgment to control our excitement, or our bodily strength will break down. We must remember that our battle is to be won by strength not our own. It is a battle that does not depend upon the swift and the strong.

Christian Family Companion.

DALE CITY, PA., Dec. 19, 1871.

Last Words.

The time has now arrived when we shall indite our last words for the seventh volume of the COMPANION, and perhaps for the last time address some of our readers. We have been spending a very pleasant year in each others company, as editors, contributors, and readers. We have taken much pleasure in preparing and sending forth our weekly visits to your homes, and imparting our words of instruction and encouragement, and we know that many of you were often made glad by our arrival. We have now fulfilled our contract to make you fifty hebdomadal visits during the year eighteen hundred and seventy-one, and our last duty to you, is to bid you a hearty farewell, for, as we do not wish to be considered an intruder we shall not again step into your family circle, until we receive an invitation from you. We however now rap at your door, and at any time we hear you say "come in" we will gladly enter, and renew our visits. We believe you have a perfect right to choose your own companions, and you should use that right, and allow no one to force himself or his friends upon your fireside, against your wishes. Whether you renew your subscription, therefore, or whether you do not, we wish you well; for if you do you will show your approbation of our paper, and if you do not, as sensible persons, we suppose you to have a good reason for refusing to do so.

As heretofore, we shall continue to do the very best we can; striving in all things to preserve a conscience void of offence toward God, and toward man. We may have or we may not have something farther to say of our intentions in our introductory to next volume; as the spirit may dictate, and opportunity may afford.—We shall not do less than this year; we hope to do more. And so our last word to you, shall be, sincerely, farewell.

Mark this Item.

We wish every reader of our paper to take special notice of this item, although it is nothing new to most of them, viz: That WE SEND NO PAPERS AFTER THE TIME SUBSCRIBED FOR HAS EXPIRED. We have a few life subscribers, to whom we are ordered to send it perpetually. All others are expected to inform us if they wish the paper continued. This we regard the only fair and honorable way of getting up a circulation. Some papers continue sending on until notified by the subscriber to discontinue it. This we regard as a beggardly imposition, and will be resorted to only by publishers who have an inward consciousness that their papers lack that intrinsic worth necessary to command support. In speaking of a paper that has adopted this forcing method, a brother remarked having heard another brother say, he hated to notify the publishers not to send their paper, and yet he did not want it. The Brethren and the public generally, are informed that it is no part of their business, to write to publishers who adopt this method. When the time subscribed for has expired they need only refuse to lift it, and it will become the duty of the Postmaster to notify such publishers that their papers are not wanted, which he can do without expense to himself or any one else. Thus you save your time of writing, paper, and stamp.—And it is the proper way of dealing with those who attempt to impose upon you.

Should we happen to send to any who have not ordered, it will be through mistake, and we shall feel thankful for a notice, when the paper is not wished, in any way the subscriber may see proper.

Remember the poor.

Left Over.

We have a number of essays, selections, obituaries, and items of correspondence that could not be crowded into this number; some that should have appeared in this volume. Our next number will be crammed with the very best that our worthy corps of contributors can produce. Here is a list of some of the uppermost in the manuscript box:

A Crumb of Manna, Balsbaugh
To Hannah M. Burger R. Snavely
Elder Keller's Reasons for taking the Small Pox.
Honesty, M. H. Myers
Speak Gently, Flory
Closing Sunday Schools, McFadden
Design & Mode of Baptism, Stalnaker
Immortality, Samuel C. Bashor
Be Ye Ready, Lewis W. Teeter
Our Brethren—What they Believe, &c., Landon West Covering the Head, N. B. Blough

and a number of items of correspondence "too tedious to mention." Of course it is not likely that all can appear in the first No. of next year, but they will be forthcoming as rapidly as space will permit.

Postage Free in the County.

Our friends in Somerset county will notice that in this county there will be no postage on the Companion. This will be an advantage that is worth twenty cents to each subcriber. This fact should be mentioned by agents and friends when soliciting patronage for us. We think we ought to double our circulation in Somerset county, and believe it can be done, by making double efforts.

Back Numbers.

Now is the time for our subscribers to examine their files and to notify us what numbers of volume seven are missing.—We will supply as far as possible. The following numbers are now exhausted:—10. 17, 19. 20. 22. 23. 25. 27. 30. 40. 43. 44. 47. 48. It will not be necessary to order any of these. for not having we cannot send.

Out at Last.

We mean the Brethren's Almanac for 1872; and a good one it is. Everybody praises it. Those ordered have been sent, and still we are able to fill orders. Price ten cents a single copy. Seventy-five cents a dozen.

The Brethren's Tune Book.

We hope in a few weeks to be able to give our readers a little more satisfaction in regard to the above work. The whole delay is blamable upon our musical editor, and we shall have to repremand him severely for his slowness.

Late Issue.

The present number went to press about four days later than our usual time. We were delayed for want of mechanical help. There will be so much the less time between the last and first numbers. Please excuse.

The Pious Youth.

It is still a question whether the PIOUS YOUTH will be sustained. From those places yet heard from the prospects are favorable, but the greater number of places have not yet reported. Let us hear from you, friends, before the close of this month, or our monthly juvenile will be no more. Remember we must know what you have done. You need not necessarily send us all the names, but tell us for how many names you will stand good. The December YOUTH will not be issued until its final doom has been fixed. What shall it be?

We have received the announcement of the death of brother Jacob H. Stiffler, of Duncansville, Pa., who departed on the 10th inst. It will appear in our next.

Answers to Correspondents.

JOHN SCHRIVER; Out at the time: it is now sent.

J. W. BEAM: We received $4.50; it was a typographical error.

B. F. DARST: It was an oversight—all right now.

LANDON WEST: The 25 cents came to hand. We do not place on the list of "Monies Received" amounts under fifty cents, as it would consume too much space.

LEVI HOCHSTETLER. According to our books, D. K———'s subscription closes with this volume.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Errata.

In No., 46, in obituary of John Ezra Forney, read, son of brother John and sister Delila Forney; and, funeral services by Elder Daniel Neher, instead of "old Daniel Neher."

WM. PULLEN.

In same No., page 734 (735), the age of Maria Alice Hollinger deceased should have been 2 years 6 months and 27 days. Also in conclusion of the same letter read bonds of the gospel instead of "words of the gospel."

ADAM BROWN.

In No. 48, page 770, you say "Even don't make very strange of it when the preacher takes the last corn." You should have said the last Cow, not "corn." The widow alluded to, had several small children, and I thought milk was very essential in such a family, when they have not plenty of other things; therefore it sounded so hard to me to hear that they had taken the last Cow. I thought, and do yet think, it would be but poor comfort to me, for my members to try to console me by telling me it is all right, the preacher aught to have his pay, and they would let me have a little milk once in a while if I would come and fetch it, and that being from a half mile to a mile and upwards.

Elder JOHN MURRAY.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with Obituary Notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In the Nettle Creek branch, Wayne Co., Ind., March 6th, Elder ZACHARIAH ALBAUGH, aged 76 years, 1 month, and 4 days. Soon after brother Albaugh came to the church he was elected to the office of a deacon, and having filled his office to the satisfaction of the church, he was then called to the ministry, and was ordained about 12 years ago. His health had not been good for the last 20 years, and for the last five years of his life, he labored but little in the ministry. For the last two years, he was unable to attend public meeting. He was, however, confined to his bed but about eight weeks, during which time his sufferings were great, but were borne with christian resignation and fortitude. But although he could not attend the public meetings of the church nor labor in the ministry, his whole heart was with the church, and his labors and counsels were always for the promotion of the primitive order of the church. As a counsellor he stood deservedly high, consequently his counsels were much sought after. He left a widow, (a sister), who was ever in sympathy with him in all his official duties in the church; and during his long illness she was ever ready to do all that kindness could dictate to make him comfortable.

The funeral was attended by a large concourse of people, and the services were performed by the ministers of the Nettle Creek branch and brother Quinter, who was visiting the church at the time. Text, 2 Tim. 4: 7, 8.

DAVID BOWMAN.

LIST OF MONEYS RECEIVED for SUBSCRIPTION, BOOKS, etc.

Geo. Bucher,	$2.00	Levi Himes,	1.00
P. Deardorf,	1.65	R. K. Binkley,	12.75
I. Young,	5.00	A Clingenpeel	14.00
Geo. Brubaker,	3.90	J. Aldinger,	3.00
A. Chamberl'n.	5.10	Henry Keller,	50
Jos. Schuntz,	1.50	Henry Haines,	3.50
Christ. Gnagy,	1.50	M. Graeff,	1.50
John Everett,	1.65	J. M. Landes,	1.50
J. L. Myers,	3.00	H. D. Sayler,	1.50
E. M. Mohler,	1.50	Jno. Hertzler,	3.00
A. Pearsall,	1.20	Jno. Mohler,	5.10
J. F. Neher,	10.00	Wm. Kercher,	1.60
D. Aschenbach.	2.50	J. Hollinger,	2.25
M. H. Shutt,	1.00	Jacob Bowser,	5.00
Eli Horner,	6.75	J. M. Hutchison	1.00
C. F. Martin,	3.25	A. Brubaker,	1.60
Sarah Mohler,	1.50	J. W. Moats,	2.25
A. Hutchison,	2.50	D. B. Teeter,	2.25
S. H. Caylor,	1.20	F. M. Long,	75
Sarah Hoover,	7.50	Dan'l Senger,	75
J. P. Lerew,	4.50	Sam'l Book,	10.00
I. H Byerly,	5.50	D J Myers,	10.00
J. Wise,	6.00	J. H Stager	6.10
John Smith,	1.60	J. T. Myers,	10.50
Enos Crowell,	1.70	Miss S A Mack.	2.55
D. H. Garber,	4.00	J. P. Barnes,	1.10
Susanna Hess,	3.00	Jno Shick,	5.50
D. N. Wingert.	2.00	T. S Dome,	1.90
John Hornish,	60	Peter Helfer,	5.50
D. G. Hendricks	1.60	Sarah Baker,	80
D J Myers	75	A K Dehaff,	50
J. F. Ross,	1.50	I H Starkey,	2.00
Thos. Bickel.	1.50	Sam'l Blough,	1.60
C. Wenger,	15.00

Religious Newspapers and Sunday Schools.

Dear brother Henry:—I am now receiving the COMPANION regularly, and it is always a welcome visitor. I am aware that there are many of our brethren who do not patronize our papers, but both by word and deed discourage others in patronizing them. If my circumstances permitted I would take a copy of each, but I must be satisfied with the one I first patronized—the COMPANION. I feel assured that such a paper as yours in a family must be productive of good. While I am free to admit that there can be no improvement in the great plan of salvation, I am as free to admit that there may be various aids, or means, directed by the spirit of God, to lead men to a saving knowledge of the truth of God's word.

A religiously conducted family newspaper, and a Sunday-school conducted on the same principle, are two prominent means, not particularized in the word of God, which have been blessed by God's holy spirit, as helps to the gospel in bringing men and youth to see a beauty in the religion of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. I know that the opposers to both institutions assert that we have no gospel evidence that those things were extant in the apostolic days. While we admit that fact, we insist that it is the duty of every one who has been "born again" to use every lawful means to convert men from the error of their ways. The old Brethren do many things, for which they have no; "thus saith the Lord," yet who would condemn them for it, when the object is to save precious and immortal souls? An aged brother, who is an inveterate tobacco chewer, remarked to me not long since: "It is wrong and contrary to God's word to have Sunday-schools." I looked at the tobacco juice running out of the corners of his mouth, and thought, "O consistency, thou art a jewel!"

Editors of religious papers and Sunday-school superintendents and teachers can ask the Lord to bless their labors of love. Can tobacco chewers do so, and be consistent? I trow not.

Our congregation, and the interest in the cause of the Brethren, is on the increase in this city. Brother Jesse Roop and Elder Jacob D. Trostle, from Bush Creek, have promised to preach for us next Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights. Elder Daniel P. Saylor has promised to preach for us a series of sermons for at least a week. We look forward to see fruit from their labors of love. Other brethren from Frederick and Washington counties have promised to assist our Pipe Creek ministerial brethren to give us preaching frequently. Brethren who may be passing through the city and willing to preach for us should give me at least a week's notice before coming, so that I may have due notice given to the public. We should be pleased to see you here. Yours in the Lord,

L. J. GROVE.

Baltimore, Md.

Dear brother Holsinger:—As perhaps it would be interesting to your numerous readers, I will give you a short history of what the Lord, through the instrumentality of his preached word, has done here at the Grove meeting-house, in Fayette Co., Pa. About the 5th of November, brother Isaiah Custer, from Adams county, Ohio, in company with a deacon brother from Highland county, Ohio, commenced a series of meetings. Had preaching every evening, except two or three evenings, until the 21st of November, and the words spoken by our worthy brother Custer, and followed with very appropriate remarks by our young brother, John C. Johnson, and seasoned with divine grace, called forth a little band of soldiers to come out and enlist under the banner of King Emmanuel, and walk up boldly to the liquid stream and be buried with him in baptism. And what seems to make this a pleasing circumstance to brother Custer is that under the fervent preaching of our worthy brother Quinter, he became persuaded to come out on the Lord's side while yet young, and now he had the privilege of baptizing his daughter, who, in company with a number more of very interesting young folks, thirteen in number, were baptized by brother Custer, and one reclaimed. A number more have been baptized at the Fairview arm of our church by brother Cover; so we have some twenty additions to our George's Creek arm of the church.—May the choicest of blessings still follow the labors of his ministering servants. WM. MOSER.

Fayette county, Pa.

Brother Henry:—Some time back I sent an answer to a query which was published in a current volume, No. 4, page 63. The query had reference to Matthew 16:18. "And I say also unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." What rock had the Savior in view in speaking unto Peter?

If you have not received my first answer you may publish this. In Isaiah 28:16: "Thus saith the Lord God, behold I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner-stone, a sure foundation; he that beleiveth shall not make haste. 1 Peter 2:6–8. "Wherefore also it is contained in the scripture, behold I lay in Zion a chief corner-stone, elect, precious; and he that believeth on him shall not be confounded. Unto you, therefore, which believe, he is precious; but unto them which be disobedient, the stone which the builders disallowed, the same is made the head of the corner, and the stone of stumbling and a rock of offence, even to them which stumble at the word being disobedient; whereunto also they were appointed." 1 Cor. 3:11. "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." Eph. 2:20. "And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner-stone."

THOMAS GRAY.

Letter from D. M. Holsinger. Number 10.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—I occupy the same place, and use the same material for writing this as for the former report; in the house of brother Paul Kurtz. On the 13th of November, I left my companion in care of sister Kurtz, and set out for Michigan. Arrived on the morning of the 15th in time to take breakfast with brother Mast and family. Slept two hours, then went to the house of brother Mahlon Funk, where the brethren and sisters met for the purpose of choosing a Minister and a Deacon in the Black River branch,—Everything passed off harmoniously and in good order. Brother William Gephart, minister, brother Samuel Baker, deacon. The installing ceremony was attended with quite a solemnity. That evening and the next, preaching in that district. On the 17th to Bloomingdale where a council had been called in Eld. F. P. Loehr's house. Several elders from Northern Indiana, were to attend, but only brother D. Rupel came. Not expecting to accomplish much without more help, we nevertheless made an effort, and brought the case before the church; but soon learned that our force was too weak to bear up under the element there swaying, so the case was dropped for the time; and next day brother Rupel and I were conveyed to Black River again, where we attended three meetings. Monday 20th we started for Kent and Ionia counties. Arrived at Lowell 11 A. M., made some inquiry and were started in the right direction. After walking some distance, were overtaken by friend Livingston, to whom we had been directed for farther information. He got us on a neighbor's wagon that was going past his house, where he invited us to stop; and he rode on ahead. By the time we got to his house a dinner was being prepared for us, and his wagon in readiness to convey us to our destined place. So after dinner he kindly took us to the residence of Elder George Long, lately settled there from Indiana. Surely if a cup of cold water will be remembered, such acts of self-sacrificing kindness will not pass unrewarded by the "GREAT JUDGE."—Said Livingston is a member of the Mennonite church, from near Scalp-Level, Somerset county, Pa. With some of his relations I am acquainted. We found Elder Long in quite a delicate state of health; having had fever when yet in Indiana, and likely ventured out too soon, and by exposure brought on himself a kind of irregular chills. We spent the evening and next day very pleasantly with him.—Our visit seemed to have quite revived, and cheered him up. We were with the brethren in those counties (called the Thorn Apple branch) till Tuesday morning, 28th; had nine meetings; enjoyed their society very well. Brethren Josiah Winey and Jacob Smith are their ministers besides brother Long. They live considerably scattered, and do not enjoy church privileges like those dwelling in one community. At Grand Rapids brother Rupel struck for home, and I for Bangor, and had two more meetings with the brethren in Black River branch. On the 30th at 12-35 took cars at Bangor for Elkhart Via.—Grand junction, Kalamazoo, and White Pigeon. Our train being behind time, we missed connection at the junction; so getting on the accommodation, the engine run off the track which delayed quite a while; and which was the first accident of the kind that happened to a train that I was on in all my travels. Next morning about 3 arrived at Elkhart, and after daylight made my way to brother P. Kurtz's where I found my companion and brother Kurtz's family in the enjoyment of reasonable good health. "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all His benefits."

Remember us in your prayers,

DANIEL M. HOLSINGER.

Goshen, Indiana, Dec. 2nd.

Dear Brother Holsinger :—I fear I have been living in neglect of duty with regard to church news in our isolated condition here.

We were organized here near seven years ago, by Elders John Fitz, David Wolf, Jacob Negley, and David Henricks, under the name of the Bushnel arm of the church. As I had moved in here, a young speaker, and brethren John Pool and Henry Zook were already here, and authorized deacons in the church. Agreeable to the trust placed on us we have been trying to labor in our weakness ever since. Our situation is rather embarrassing, there being no other organization nearer than 35 miles making our field of labor very large; and the distance to other organizations being so great that we are left principally alone in our extensive labor. Though we had crosses and trials in connection with our own weakness, yet we have had many evidences of God's protecting arm being around us, and his blessings bestowed upon us.

Our additions have not been numerous, only about two per year, but considering our field of labor being nearly entirely where the brethren had never before preached, it might have been worse. Our labor being on the increase, we thought it expedient some two years past to call more laborers into the vineyard. The result of our choice was two speakers and two deacons, all of which have stood well to their posts, and have discharged their respective duties well. The young speakers, Jacob Bergard and John L. Myers, are both judicious, careful, promising young brethren, their labors already afford me great relief; as my health is sometimes too feeble to attend appointments.

With those that were here, those that have moved in and joined since our organization, we numbered some forty members; but some eight or ten have moved out, leaving our number some upwards of thirty.

As to our fraternal intercourse we have had some embarrassments, yet I think they principally grew out of misunderstandings. What has not, God knows the guilty hearts and will judge them righteously. But upon the whole our fraternal associations have been on the increase; and for the last year or more they have been all that could be desired; and oh, may God in his providence so enable us to live; for how beautiful and pleasant it is for brethren to agree.—But think for a moment of the awful consequences of discord in the Brotherhood. One difficulty in the church will do more harm to our spiritual growth than a half-dozen revivals can mend. I have watched their course and felt their fangs for the space of twenty five years in the church, and am constrained to say, come from where they will, or through whom they will,, they are of their father the devil, who through them strikes with his mighty, broad sword at the very vital link that connects us with our God, and upon which the vital thread of our eternal life is suspended, namely, love, of which Paul says, though a man have faith to remove mountains, power to heal the sick, raise the dead, and gives all his goods to feed the poor, he is nothing, but as sounding brass and tinkling cymbals—it profiteth him nothing—But I am digressing.

We have had three communions, all of the most fraternal character and a general interest seemed to be manifested, at near all of our places of meeting, in the plain common sense simplicity of the gospel as taught and practiced by the brethren. I feel confident that, if we could have brethren to come to our help occasionally, much good would be the result; and I hereby solicit brethren ministers who are passing through here, or otherwise can call and labor with us for the good of Zion. Our centre is near Macomb, McDonough county.

Ill. The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R., runs through said town. We also have a farming country here both for beauty and fertility that cannot be excelled anywhere; brethren would do well to call and see before buying elsewhere. Brethren wishing to stop off at Bushnell can call with Henry Zook, two & one-half miles south-east of Bushnell; and those wishing to stop off at Macomb, at brother E. Big or Wm. Gelison in the south-east ward of the town, or two miles direct east of the Courthouse, will bring them to my house, at all of which places they will be made welcome. Also at Bro. Benjamin Boyd's one &one half miles south of Tennessee,any brethren wishing to call off at that station. I write in love to the cause of Christ. Fare well. A. G. Black.

Macomb, Illinois.

Brother Holsinger :—As children sympathize with a kind parent in affection, so the sympathies of the Church at this place are aroused in behalf of its dearly beloved elder, Jacob Kurtz, who met with a sad accident on Monday the 4th inst.

He had met with us on the Sunday previous, at Beech Grove Meeting-House, where his voice was heard to ascend in prayer and praise to the majesty on high.

On Monday morning he started for his home in company with a daugh- of brother Hostetter. The distance was about fifteen miles; the roads rough, and the weather very inclement. Many brethren and sisters thought of their dear elder that day, yet doubtless few were prepared to receive the news of his misfortune when it did come.

It appears that, when within about five miles of Wooster, his beast frightened and became unmanageable.—His buggy coming in contact with the fence upset, and throwing the aged man violently on the ground broke his thigh bone. He was carried into a house by the way side and temporarily cared for. The next day he was moved to Wooster where he is now cared for at the residence of his son. He stood the removal remarkably well, and although his age makes his situation precarious, hopes are entertained of his recovery.

Brethren and sisters, let us pray for him in his affliction and learn to be more thankful to our heavenly father when it goes well with us, as we can see by this circumstance, that misfortunes may befall the most faithful and true. E. L. Yoder.

Madisonburg, Wayne Co. O.

Letter from D. M. Holsinger. Number, 11.

Dear Brethren and Sisters :—On the 11th at 4 p. m. we took passage at Milford, and at Warsaw 9; 53. Arrived at Columbiana, O. about 9 a. m. on the 12th; took dinner with old brother and sister Kurtz, with whom we had a pleasant conversation till near 2 p. m. when we took passage for Pittsburg, where we landed at dark, but as there was no through train till morning we were obliged to put up at a hotel for the night. At 6: 30 on the 13th took passage at Pittsburg for Dale City, and arrived safely about 12: 30, in reasonable good health, and found the friends mostly well here.

Elder H. Kurtz was rather delicate when we were there, owing to an attack of diarrhoea.

These few lines are intended, not as a closing report of our mission, but rather as a notice to all, that we got along safely on our homeward way.

If we will be spared to reach our home, I will then give a farther report of the closing part of our visit; so far as may be deemed prudent to do so.

Unto God we offer our heartfelt thanks for His loving kindness, and tender care over us: and unto our brethren, sisters and friends, for their liberality, sympathy and charity towards us.

Daniel M. Holsinger.

Dale City, Pa. Dec. 16th 1871.

Dear Brother:—At the request of our dear afflicted brother, Adam Hollinger, I will state that brother Henry Saylor and I, while on a visit of love and duty to the brethren in Middletown Valley, Marsh Creek and Upper Conawago, visited him and found him still suffering very much from a tumor in his side, having laid on his back for seven weeks. Very little change in his condition since noticed by brother A. Beelman, except that the tumor is now discharging. His desire is that he may not be forgotten by the brethren; that their prayers may go up to God in his behalf; not that his sufferings may be less than what the Father wills, but that he may have sustaining grace to bear patiently. Brethren, let us try to remember him before a throne of grace. Let us mentally place ourselves in his situation. May the Lord sustain him. Ephraim W. Stoner.

Michigan Mission.

I will now report to the churches composing the Middle District of Pennsylvania,in regard to the amounts of money which came into my hands from the following named congregations for the purpose of defraying the expenses of Elder D. M. Holsinger's trip to Michigan, as follows:

By J. B. Garber, for Aughwich....	$10.10
By Isaac Meyers, for Buffalo Valley.....	5.10
By Jacob Steel, for Snake Spring Valley.....	10.00
By Michael Beshoar,for Lost Creek	5.30
By Moses Miller, for Lower Cumland.....	8.50
By C. Shallenberger, for Perry.....	5.00
By Grabil Myers,for Warriorsmark,	6.00
By J. R. & D. M. Fogalsonger, for Ridge.....	14.00
By George Winand, for Upper Conawago.....	4.38
By D. H. Bonebrake, for Falling Spring.....	11.50
By G. B. Brumbaugh, for James Creek.....	6.00
By Joseph R. Hanawalt, for Spring Run.....	8. 50
By Jacob Mohler, for Dry Valley..	10. 00
By Christian Brumbaugh, for Clover Creek.....	2.50
By Christian Brumbaugh, receipt of D. M. H.....	5.35
In my hands from Upper Cumberland.....	10.00
Total.....	$123.23

To check sent H. R. Holsinger, for D. M. Holsinger.....	$60.00
To amount paid by Clover Creek..	5.35
To check sent H. R. H. for D. M. Holsinger.....	30.00
Total	$95.35

RECAPITULATION.

Amount received.....	$122.03
Amount paid out.....	95.35
Balance on hand, Dec. 11, 1871...	$26.88

Daniel Keller,
Treasurer.

Brother Holsinger: In my article on prophecy, published in No. 49 of the Companion the following error occurs. In the 29th line, from the bottom of the first column, on page 778 the words "have even", which were not in the manuscript have somehow been introduced in print. They obscure, if not altogether change, the sense intended. By "Heathen Rome" I meant that Power, which at the time our Savior lived upon the earth ruled over the land of Judea, and one of the soldiers of which pierced the the side of the bleeding Lamb of God while hanging upon the cross. That empire has long since passed away; hence the verb "persisted", the past tense, is correct in speaking of her doings. "Have persisted," the perfect tense, as printed in my communication implies that "Heathen Rome" yet exists; and still attempts to impress the humble non-resisting Nazarenes into her armies: and that, if they refuse to bear arms, she still puts them to death for that refusal.

Omit the words "have even."

SILAS THOMAS.

Philadelphia, Pa.

The manuscript had "however" (somewhat stretched) instead of have even. EDITOR.

Brother Henry: Will you or some other brother explain through the COMPANION Mark 16:17, 18, reading thus: "And these signs shall follow them that believe; in my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents, and if they drink any deadly thing it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover."

SAMUEL A. MCROBIE.

A Letter.

Dear Sister:—My first duty, as it is my highest pleasure, is to reply with your command to write you as soon as I arrived at home, and this letter will confirm to you my filial obedience. On my arrival I found our dear parents well; and they were glad to hear the details of your existence. They rejoiced to hear of you and your dear husband and children, that you are all enjoying the comforts of life; and more especially that you and your dear husband are still traveling along hand in hand in the narrow path that Jesus trod. Dear sister and brother, hold out faithful unto the end; a crown of life shall be yours forever. Before I shall close this letter, I must relate to you the saddest of all. While I was absent, elder brother Abraham Erbaugh departed this life very suddenly. He emigrated, to the county of Montgomery, State of Ohio, in the year 1835, and shortly after his emigration was elected to the Ministeaial office. He was a minister of the gospel upwards of thirty yeers; a man of solid talents, and distinguished for his piety and devotion to his Maker's work.—His labors were constant for the greater period of his long life, and eminently blessed in his conversion of his fellow-men. He was beloved by all who knew him. His soul is now gone to God who gave it. His funeral was preached by brother Peter Nead, assisted by brother Daniel Miller. He was in the 74th year of his age. Yours in love,

H. MARTIN.

New Lebanon, Ohio.

A Query.

Some years ago a young man was regularly baptized by the Brethren, while very young, and he soon became unruly, and had to be expelled from the church. Years have passed, and now he wishes to come to the church, and wishes to be baptized on the grounds that he had neither repented nor believed—had done it merely to gratify some friends. Will some kind brother or brethren tell us what to do in such a case? A Scriptural answer is required. Please answer through the C. F. Companion.

Wm. MOSER.

Fayette county, Pa.

Will you or Will you not

PUBLISH THE BRETHREN'S TUNE BOOK.

Brother Holsinger: we would be pleased to hear something definite in regard to what we have long been anxiously waiting for, and something so much needed, the Brethren's Tune Book. Answer soon.

J. F. NEHER.

Salem, Ill.

Of course we will publish it, but it is so slow coming; but it must now come more rapidly.

EDITOR C. F. C.

Brother Holsinger:—I will, if consistent with your valuable paper, give a brief sketch of the meeting today, Dec. the 3d. This morning the weather was very disagreeable, but when the hour of meeting arrived notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, the old and infirmed that could not walk, were borne by two, on a chair. Brethren and sisters, we that are young, have reasons to "thank God and take courage," when we see the old brethern and sisters come tottering through the bad weather to the house of God, when it seems their canes will hardly bear them up until they get seated, and all for the love and zeal they have for the cause of Christ.

The scripture, taken for foundation, by brother Lewis Kinsey, was Matb. vii. 7–21, and after making many appropriate remarks thereon, was followed by elder Jacob Bowman, who so earnestly and zealously showed to the people that there are praying person who claim to have done many wonderful works, and yet the Ssavior says: "I never knew you," we should be careful when we ask, that we ask in the right spirit, that we "ask not amiss." In short we had a good meeting, excellent preaching, &c. How I love to go to meeting when there are only two preachers, for then we can expect to have a good meeting. When there are five or six preachers at one place we cannot expect a very good meeting, from the fact that when the preliminary and apologizing remarks have been made there is a good portion of the time gone, and by the time they find out which one is to speak, the time is spent, and they hurry through and have hardly time to give the subject a passing notice. So I am decidedly in favor, where there are five or six preachers, for them to divide out, two by two, and thereby all have an opportunity to preach, and practice.

JOSEPH HOLDER,

Hagerstown, Ind.

Brother Henry:—Please say for us, to the traveling brethern, through the C. F. C. that we are located on the Illinois central railroad, 90 miles south of Chicago, at Buckley station. The nearest meeting we know of is 37 miles south of us. If there are any Brethern passing through here we greatly desire them to stop and see us, as we feel very lonely.

JOHN H. STAGER.

From Salem College.

Brother Holsinger:—Thinking that a few items from our school would be interesting to the readers of the Companion, we give the following accounts:

We have had quite an interesting session thus fer. The students in general seem to be well pleased with the manner in which the teachers imparted instruction. There is quite a number of our students leaving for the purpose of teaching school this winter, which, of course, makes it less interesting to those who remain.

Our present term will close December 6th, giving us a vacation of seven days, during which time the Brethren intend holding a series of meetings. We desire very much to have as many of the brethren attend the meeting as conveniently can; for we believe there can be some good accomplished. Brother P. J. Brown from Ohio will be here to help the ministering brethren to conduct the meeting.

Our next term will open December 13th. We anticipate a number of new students, and hope the number who intend to attend school this coming term will still increase, and a greater interest be promoted in the school. We hope to see more of the Brethren's children coming next term. We would be happy to see quite a number of them attend; for this school is especially designed for them. Many of our brethren's children attend other institutions of learning, where they do not enjoy any greater advantages than they will here, and besides are more likely to be led into strange paths. We request the brethren to send their children here; for we know there are many friends of education among us who intend to have their children educated. To such we express our desire that they would patronize the Brethren's school before any outside of the brotherhood. If education is essential, which no one will deny, why not fostert amongst us? SAMUEL G. KELLER.

Bourbon, Indiana.

To the North Western District of Ohio.

It having been agreed to by the brethren of the North Western and the North Eastern districts of Ohio, to hold the next Annual Meeting jointly, on the 21st day of August the place of holding said meeting was agreed to be at the house of brother Hoover on P. F. & C. R. R., near Wooster Summet, between Wooster and Orrville, about 130 miles west of Pittsburg. Arrangements for defraying the necessary expenses of said meeting were also considered, viz.—That each sub-district pay one dollar per member to meet said expense.—The undersigned having been appointed Corresponding agent, now having been notified by the clerk of the North Eastern district, that the one-half of said quota of the North Western district be raised by the first of January next; hence this notice, and we hope the different branches will be prompt to the demand required, without any additional trouble of collecting said part of our quota.—Send by Post Office Order payable to the undersigned, at Lima, Ohio.

DANIEL BROWER.

(Visitor please copy.)

INDEX FOR VOLUME VII.

EDITORIAL.

About Ourself, 638
Accident, 479
Apologetic, 39
A Leedy for, Remarks to
An Appeal, 106
Attention, 139
An Explanation, 187
Another Invitation. 321
Announcements, 323
Annual Meeting, The Approaching, 354
Report of &c, 414. 432
Minuets of, 452
Discrepancy &c. 607
A Good Plan. 431
A Solemn Day. 687
Apprentices, 687
Almanac, 782

Barnum's Show, 782
Book Notices, 235
250
Brueder Berichter, 355
Break Down a Church &c. 720

Companion and Visitor, 11
Crowded, 203
Charity Fund, 306
Clover Creek Lovefeast, 354
Correspondence, 494
Change of Addresses, 526
Clearmont Academy, 543
Convalescent, 590
Chicago fire, 686
Closing Up, 782

District Meeting Middle Pa. 323
Don't Relax, 39
Doomed to be Disappointed, 203
Do I Love Jesus, 427
Don't Step There, 750
Doing Good, 751
Editorial Correspondence, 138
Explanatary, 26
Expected Visit, 219
Fearful Riot, 463
Facts, 510
Garments Cutting, Patterns for. 307
German Periodicals. 187
Genteel Schools, 767
Grapes, 638
Harvest, 431
Holsinger H. R. 151. 154, 167
Home Wanted, 218
Introductory, 11
Important Questions. 291
Longevity, 558
Methodism of Christ, 542
Ministerial Visits, 59
Mistakes, 75
Migration. 670
Newspaper Extracts, 462, 718
No More Back, Numbers &c. 171
Now for the Work. 702
One by One. 731
Our Word. 279
Report. 434
New Home. 685, 456
Lovefeast. 670
at Elk Lick, 586
Pious Youth, for the, 718
Pious Youth, Do not Stop, 718
Prospectus for Vol, VIII, 776, 685
Public Sale, 526

Rail-road Privileges, 290
Remember the Poor. 26
Remarks. 637

Salem College, 402
Address, 74
Self Examination. 652
Suicide or Murder, 574

The Passover and the Lord's Supper, 9
24, 40, 56, 72, 89, 104, 116, 136, 151, 168, 183, 200, 217, 265, 388, 304, 320, 558.
The Gospel Visitor, 27
Independent, 27
Pious Youth, 768, 58
Great Drouth, 719
Thanks, 39
Talk, 234
The Educatton of our Youth. 574
Lord's Supper, 478
490, 508, 540, 556, 605. 620
To Be or Not to Be &c. 671
Our Contributors, 702
Thanksgiving Day, 731

Visit. 386
to Maryland, 91
Morrison's Cove, 266
our Eastern 435
Allegheny Co., Md. 702
Visitors. 731, 354

Wanted, 574, 718
Wearing the Beard. Ans. to, 655
Winter's Admonition, 755

POETRY.

Anna and Emma Harchelroad. 668
And how Dieth the Wise Man, &c, 708
A Witner thought, 76
An Impromptu, 372
Angel Watchers, 387
An Aged Saint &c. 533
Be ye Therefore Perfect, 404
Careful for Nothing, 581
Birthday Reflections, 730
Corn Song, 650
Christian Union, 177
Earth has no Pleasure for Me, 411
Encouragements, 215
Example, 522
Evening, 597
Hymn, 448
Father take My Hand 229
Feed My Lambs, 155
Forbid Them Not, 794
Give to Him That Asketh, 145
Haemwah, 6
He Gathers them Home, 297
Hymn for the Verge of Jordan, 404
Hope for Better days Again, 411
Home of the Soul, 549
How Happy I'll Be, 758
He sent them into His Vineyard, 779
In Memory of our Beloved Sister, Umstead, 97
I Need Thee, Precious Jesus, 586
I'm Growing Old, 639
Indian Summer, 661
Is this All. 665
Jesus the Voice of, 448
Fulinesss 725
Let us Speak well of our Brother, 527
Light Beyond, 441
Longing for Home, 453
Little Will, 499
Make Haste, 67
My Beloved, 747
Onward and Upward, 748
Our Home, 409
Portuguese Hymn, &c, 470
Preaching Vs. Practice, 377
Prayer and Potatoes, 361
The Hour for, 472
Rest. 150
Rock me to Sleep Mother, 677
Seek, 179
Sweet Thoughts, 698
Self Examination, 183
Something you can Do, 453
Speak no Evil, 33
Stand like an Anvil, 67
Strive for the Mastery. 775
The Christian and His Echo, 33
Last Good Night, 370
Prayer of Submission, 65
Lord's Prayer, 84
Lord will Provide, 120
Pilgrim's Wants, 257
Israelites Crossing the Red Sea, 292
Narrow Way, 374
Preacher, 378
Shore of Eternity, 393
Blind Man's Lament, 424
Christian's Partner, 456
Land Beyond, 453
Lord's Leading. 517
Too Popular Creed. 524
Creator, 587
Lost Sheep, 693
Voyagers, 741
Great Hereafter. 524
Tobacco Union, 273
Column, 576
They Going One by One. 586
There is Death in the Pot. 313
Wait and See, 411
Watching and Waiting. 612
We Reap what we Sow, 648
Welcome Adored Name, 394
Which, 120
Written Words, 262
What Then, 485
Why Should I Wait, 522

CORRESPONDENTS.

J. S. Flory, 12 464 733 258 341
D. L. Miller, 12
J. G. Winey, 13
Nancy Wise, 13 406
Adam Hollinger, 13
Landon West, 14
E. A. Boord, 14
Frank Holsinger, 15 308 464
David Garlach, 25
Jacob Lohr, 25
David Root, 25
D. S. Cripe, 25
Thomas Gray, 25 191
Catharine Frantz, 25
Joseph D. Neher, 26
Rebecca Wampler, 26
John H. Moore, 27 422 222 438
Christian Shank 28 93
F. P. Lochr, 28 356, 390 420 538 59
John S. Newcomer, 29
W. Hertzler, 30 236
B. F. Plain, 43
T. D. Lyon, 43 254
J. K. Teeter, 43
M. R. Charles, 44
Eld. Robeson Hyde, 44 306
G. R. Kistler, 45 324 428
Daniel M. Holsinger, 60 93 106 131 123 157 220 431 447 482 530 559 593 625 658 704 734
E. Cober, E. J. Myers, W. G. Shrock, 60
C. J. Showalter, 61
J. H. Starkey, 62
D. Hollinger, 77 223
R. Arnold, 77 207
H. E. Slifer, 77
A. Leedy Jr. 77 110
Enoch Eby, 78
J. Beeghly 78 389
Levi Andes, 78
George Bucher, 79
Stephen Hildebrand, 93 122 173 722 737 767
A. Stalnaker, 92
P. C. Hetrick, 93
A. J. Nixon, 93
W. W. Hoover, 93
John H. Caylor, 93 309 590
Christian C. Root, 94 121
Peter Wolf, 109
S. G. Sharp, J. W. Byrne,—Report, 109
J. J. Cover, 110 421
Jos. E. Bowser, 110
Margaret J. Burkhart, 110
D. Snowberger. 121
J. Wise, 122 2 53 327
S. J. Wilburn, 122
D. W. Dorland, 122
A. Berkbile, 123
S. W. Bollinger, 123 731
J. Crosswhite, 134 357 465 690 335
Mollie Gibbon, 135
L. Shick, 136 173
S. B. Shirkey, 140 674
Wm. N. Clemmer, 140
J. F. Oller, 140
Jacob Bahr, 140 753
J. A. Crosswait, 141
J. A. Crosswait, 174
Levi Hertzler, 141
Wm. S. Beanblossom, 142
D. Rothrock, 143
Samuel Marrs, 157
H. Hunt 157
Jacob Bovez, 158
S. A. Walker, 158
John Tricker, 158
Lewis Kimmel, 158
James L. Switzer, 172
J. Snowberger, 172
John Nicholson, 172
Isaac Billhimer, 174
George Meyers, 236 559
Nancy Crouse, 187
Phebe A. Holtz, 187
Jos. W. Elliott, 19
L. H. Miller, 190
Phillip Boyle, 190
John W. Brumbaugh, 191
C. G. Lint, 191 546 624
Grabill Myers, 203
John Hollinger, 205
Mary Rohrer, 205
A. Cost, 206 341
J. B. Shivel, 206
Jas. Y. Heckler, 207
C. Custer, 207 294
C. G. Garman, 207 259
S. A. Mooore, 214 673
Samuel Baker, 220
Stephen Holsopple, 221
P. S. Newcomer. 221
Sophia Loar, 359
Lucinda Weaver, 374
S. E Cart, 375
A. K Myers, 275
P H Beaver, 839
George S Meyers, 389
J B Allensworth, 389
George Long, 390 465 704
T S Holsinger 405
Wm W Snyder, 405
Salome Sharp, 406
J Warner, 438 546
Louisa, M Emert, 438
Rebecca Snavely, 451
J B Shoemaker 466
Moses Clapper, 479
Lewis W Teeter, 480
A young Sister, 481
Thomas Berry, 481
Isaac Dell, 495
P R Wrightoman 495
Samuel C Bashor, 495
Samuel J Burger, 495
Eli Stoner, 498
Leroy Broyles, 498
John Hammer, 512
Daniel Vaniman, 546
Sarah Baker, 546
J E Bowser, 559
Jonathan Kessler, 560
O W Miller, 560
Samuel Baker, 561
Seneca, 576
Samuel Driver, 640 578
Albert Ford, 593
S R Zug, 593
Peter S Garman, 680
Jane Marquis, 608
Samuel Marsh, 608
H Knouff, 178 609
J B Allensworth, 609
Susan Gitt. 232
C. H. Balsbaugh, 423 543 578 785
H. Workman. 256
S. M. Forney, 236
John Fisher, 236
Alex. Kintner, 237 688
Moses Frame, 238
B F Koons, 249
George Witwer, 253
A J Correll, 254
Isaac Myers, 255
Daniel Wolf, 266
H Holliday, 270
Anna M Troxel, 270
H Musselman, 270
Joseph L. Myers, 270
Annie Leopold, 280
John Everett, 280
Jesse Kauffman, 280
H Longanecker, 291
D D Sell, 293 405
C Bucher, 672 293
Lucy C Arnest, 307
J F Neher, 307
S Fink, 308
S T Bosserman, 309
Daniel Smith, 309
H G Ullery, 309
Wm H Pullen, 324
Joseph Meyers, 331 575 514
A Crumpacker, 338
Eld John Murray; 338 770
J M Wolf, 338
J. S Snowberger, 338
E L Yoder, 339 770
J C Ullery, 339
John H Stager, 339
D Smith, M D. 340
P J Brown, 357
Rebecca J Moats, 624
G W Burkhart, 625
J D Trostle, 641
A L Funk, 641
H H Martin, 655
Anna C Boyers, 656
E Williams, 656
Miller, 667
J Dennis, 672
John Long, 673
David B Klein, 673
John W. Moats, 674
J P Hetrick, 674 706
David Frantz, 674
M Deardorff, 721 682
Eld George Wolf, 687
F M Snyder, 688
L J Grove, 688
A Clement, 688
Louisa J Bashor, 704
S S Mobler, 705
S Hollinger, 706
Noah B Blough, 706
Susan Roberts. 721
Dr. Beachly, 733 784
E R Stiffler, 735
Adam Brown. 736
Adam Hollinger, 754
E W Stoner, 736
S T Bosserman, 737
K Heckman, 753
J M Thomas, 753
J S McFadden 756
L J Grove, 854
Hannah M Burket, 765
J J Cover, 769
John Stouffer, 770
J G Royer, 770
A S Chamberlain, 770
Jacob Christner, 770
M Hady, 685
James A Seil, 783
O B Grisso. 786
Jacob Snowberger, 788

ITEMS.

Tears and Laughter, 9, The Greatness of Little Things, 19, Diamond Dust, 23, The Fireside, 23, An Example, 35, Heavenly Occupations, 35, Do your children Pray, 35, The Monk in Solitude 39, Proposed Visit, 43 Be Sensible, 51, Gleanings, 61 126, Rambling Thoughts, 62, How is it, 63, To young Men, 67, The mind as a Musician, 71, The Blossom of Age, 76, No Secret Doctor, 76, Sunny Rooms, 76, Inspirations of the Scriptures, 76, Gems of Thought, 91, Brother, 100 The True Magnet, 103, The Dying Infidel's Sermon 108, Truth Exclusive, 108, Fear of Death, 108 The World without a Newspaper, 108, Moral Gems, 119, Crime in New York, 119, Charity, 119, Comfort in Privations, 120, The seed and the Fruit, 120, A History of the Popes, 131, Longevity in Man and the Lower Animals, 155, The Life Struggle, 163, Think of the Poor, 197, How to read the Bible, 197, Where the Trouble Was, 197, A Word to Stern Fathers, 199, About those Who are Asleep, 210, Beecher to His Congregation, 210, Plagiarism, 270, Eis Auf Dar Kauzel, 215, Notice, 219, The Broken Vow, 227, Little Crosses, 233, Recognition on Earth, 233, Suggestive Paragraphs, 243, Prayer. 243, Delicacy and Tenderness of Feeling, 243, Jesus Will go With Me, 247, No Matter in What Way, 249, The Bible the Word of God, 251, Saved, 257, God's Omniscience, 261, Knocking Away the Props, 268, Health of Farmers, 268, Pleasure and Piety 268, Brevity the Soul of Mercy, 268, What Farmers cannot Conceal, 268, Is it Right, 278 Remedy for Drunkenness, 278, Sincerity, 292 Asking Amiss, 301, If You Love Me Lean Hard, 303, Wise Words, 313, Good Manners, 313, Truthfulness at Home, 315, A Woman's Defence, 315, Perseverance, 315, What We Want, 319, A Sure Record, 319, Be Gentle, 335, Dying, 375 351, Scriptural Reading, 353 Humility, 353, How to Enjoy Life, 369, How a Preacher was Bothered &c. 372, Economy in a Family, 373, Eternity, 379, Despondency, 379, How Rain Drops are Formed. 379, To Whom it May Concern, 382, Punctuation, 387, Love and Passion, 387, Inherent and Imputed Righteousness, 397, Love, 401, God's Remembrance, 403, Jesting upon Scripture, 410 Irregular Teachers, 430, A Model Magistrate, 430, Female Culture, 430, Living by the Day, 445, Whose seed is in Itself, 315, Looking Upward, 449, Hold On, 461, The Footprint, 463, I am Not Afraid 463, Shavings, 491, How to Use Money, 495, Going to Law, 511, Christ is Coming, 525, The Little Tyrant, 527, Put Salt in it, 537, Religion at Home, 573, Following our Loves to Heaven, 587, Worth Celebrating, 591, Men of Fine Feelings, 591, Scrap Books, 592, Good Nature at Home, 635, Life Without Trials, 639, Patient Faithfulness, 647, The Sure Foundation, 647, A Beautiful Thought, 651, A Good Beginning, 663, The Lord Not Slack. 664, Pull at the Oar, 664, The World Our Battlefield, 665, Temper at Home. 667, Sunshine and Sleep, 667, Remember Good Words as Well, 667, War Caused by Hair, 667, Don't Fret, 667, A Lesson for us All, 669, We Fade, 669, The Day of Rest, 669, Reading for the Young, 684, Light and Shade 701, The Memory of A Mother, 711, Life's Troubles, 711. Deep Preaching, 717, Trust and Look Upwards, 743, Love, Best of All Blessings, 747, Good Advice, 749, A Bad Bargain, 751, All Fullnes in Jesus, 773.

Essays and Selections.

Abraham's Call, 147
Abstinence, 743
A Duty not Neglected, 230
A Dream Comes True, 587
Adultery, 600
Advantages of a Plain Attire, 651
A Fairer Land, 764
A Family Duty, 65
A Few Words to Sinners, 129
A Fragment, 225
Afflictions, 335
Against Tobacco, 196
A Horrible Death, 545
A Holy Spot, 539
Aid, 351
A Letter, 94
Alive without the Law, 503
A Love Letter, 680
Alphabet of Proverbs, 87
Am I my Brother's Keeper ? 499
An appeal, 498
An Alarming Evil, 586
An Affecting Scene, 637
A new Broom sweeps Clean, 314
An Incident, 456
A Night Burial, 661
Annual Meeting of 1871, 206
Announcement, 737
Anti-Christ, 49
Apostolical Succession, 569
Appeal, Lœbr's, 584
Appeal to young Brethren and and Sisters, 472
A Pagan Legend of Jesus, 494
A Query, 673
Response to 725
A Savior's Love, 165
A Sad Prayer Meeting, 183
Assisting Ministers, 190
A Terrible Picture, 513
A Touching incident, 529
A Trick, 657
A Trip, 734
A Voice from Without, 275
A Wager, 537
Baptism, Luther on, 7
N. B Blough, 7
P. S. Newcomer, 33
Remarks on, 369
Silas Hoover, 552
for the Remission of Sins, 721
Bearing One another's Burdens, 50
Behold the Lamb of God, 84
Born in Sin, Jos. L. Meyers, 97
Mattie A. Lear, 241
Again Ye must be, 302
Why are We, 624
Bible Events, 334
Brethran, Partiality of the 459
Brethren's Order, 581
Ready, are the 612
Travel in Kansas, how the 689
by Twos, why do 696
Be Kind, 461
Beautiful, Love of the 575
Illustration, 585
Boy Smokers, 586
Bible Land and the Bible, 588
Bold in Christ, 602
California and Oregon Mission, 22, 46, 158, 324, 437
California, Church in, 252
Catholic Funeral, 44
Caution, a few Words of, 560
Charity, 281
Character, 763
Chewing the Lizard, 576
Children of God by Faith, 364
Christian Duties, 19
Christ Preaching to the Dead, 21 is Precious, 214
the Mind of, 375
Christ Great Physician, 393, 426, 454
Glorious appearance of, 394
Our Example, &c., 630, 486
Accepted, 517
the Word, 534
Our Example, 536
Ministers of, 646
Preaching to the Spirits, 705
Divinity of, 765
Christ's Advent, 148, 164, 178
Coming, 701
Christian Character, 199
Duty, 227
Christians, 536
Church, Need of the 182
Government, Newcomer, 309
Jos. Holsopple, 351 and the World, &c., 603
Home in Glory, 631
College Smoking, 516
Come let us Reason Together, 187
Come to Jesus, 245
Come Unto Me, 600
Confidence in God, 575
Contributions, 338
Conversion, 50
Conversion of the Jews, 209
Covering Heads, 693
Creation, 260
Crime Succeeded by Remorse, 458
Dancing, 775
Darkness, Works of, 555
Death of Elder Jacob Miller, 735
Death, 711
Death-bed Religion, 282

Death, Sinners Talking About, 380
Discoveries, Late, 713
Dissolution, 539
Dogma Versus Fasts, 8
Dream, Interpretation of 98
"Dunkers," Annual Meeting of, &c, 382
Do Christians ever Die, 345
Dying Infidel, The Perishing, &c., 502
Doctrine, Reproof, Correction, 636
Doing Great things to God, 161

Education, 764
Educational, 544, 316
Egypt, Testimony of, 403
Elijah in Trouble, 763
Emigrant Missionaries, 554
Enigma, Kate M. Snyder, 502
Mollie S. Vandyke, 609
Isaac Secrist, 625
Epistolary, 528
Esteemed, Who are the Least, 455
Eternal Salvation, &c., 130
Everlasting Giving, 199
Evening, 377
Every-day Religion, 583
Explanation, 181

Faith, 519
and Baptism, 475
Family Prayer, 380
Fashions Abandoning French 639
Feet-washing, 262, 647
and Kissing, 473
Questions on, 722
Answer to, 760
Felix, Festus, Agrippa and Paul, 448
For Social Meetings, 39
Charity shall Cover the &c., 103
by Grace are Ye Saved, &c., 180

From a Young Sister, 281
Friend in Iowa, Letter to, 287
Freemasonry vs. Christianity, 363
Friends in Heaven, will we know our, 608
From Darkness to Light, 760

Galilee, The Sea of 519
Genius, Birth-place of 216
Gentleness, 443
German Baptists, To the Elders, 561
Gleanings, 79, 46
God's Promises, 4
Gone to Judgment, 198
Go into all the World, 247
Good Advice, 303
Friday, 314
God's design in requiring Beneficence, 345
Gog the Man of Sin 349, 370
Government, 400
Grumblers, A Hint to, 511
God is Love, 522
God's Time, 549
Godliness, A Form of, 599
Glory, 665

Going in and Out, 677
Habits, 518
Happiness, 774
Harvest Great, Laborers Few, 20
He that hath seen Me, hath seen the Father, 197 long did Noah Preach, 211
He is Knocking. 216
Hearing and Doing, 262
Hearing Carelessly, 760
Head Covered, 742
He that is not with Me is against Me, 683
He left Himself not without a Witness, 757
Help to Save Souls, 586
Holiness, 347
How to see down a Well, 511
How to Prevent a Divorce 88
How to be Happy, 19
Home and its Pleasures, 694
Home, Sweet Home, 592
Hope, 648
Humility without Knowledge, 301
Hummingbird, Lesson of, 678
Hymeneus and Philetus, To 709

I Baptize with Water, 663
If we Knew, 732
Important Questions, 261
Image and Superscription, &c., 371
Immortality, 615, 475
Improve your Talents, 761
Information, For, 722
Infant Baptism, on the Grounds, 719
Invitation, Special and Personal, 46
Information, 340
In the Chamber of Suffering, 342
Intellectual Attainments, 442
Influence of a Newspaper on Children, 507
Infant Baptism, Silas Hoover, 565
Elder H. Koontz, 746
Ingratitude, 570
Is it So? 34
Is it Well with the Child? 81
It is so, 244
I wish I had a Capital, 7
Is it a Christian? 699

Jacob's Ladder, 430
Jesus Wept, 367
Jews Restoration of, M. Deardorff, 411
J. Y. Heckler, 633, 758
Judgment, The Last, 491
Jesus, what shall I do with, 444
True Followers of, 762

Kindness, 195
Known by their Fruits, 82
Let your Light Shine, 101
Brotherly Love Continue, 200
Let us go to Church, 10[illegible]

Learn to Keep House, 592
Leaping, 699
Letter of Encouragement to, &c., 778
Little Things, 81
Life, Sick-bed, &c., 520
Life, The Way of, 601
Life Indefinitely Suspended, 669
Little by Little, 379
Light is Attractive, 424
Love Thy Neighbor, 88
Lowliness of Jesus, 372
Love and Labor, 378
Look Up, 456
Love One another, 536
Lovefeast at Middlecreek, 642
Love, 681
Lovefeast Special, at S. C. Keim's' 700

Make Home Pleasant 775
Mammon of Unrighteousness, R. Harry, 473
Henry Forny 481
Masonry, 317
Melchisedec, Elder H. Koontz, 334
John Wise, 453
Meekness, 571
Methodism of Christ, A. Stelnacker, 617, 460, 474, 486, 504, 694
G. M. Kirshner, 604
What is, 635
Ministerial Labor, 5
Minister's Nerves 494
Ministers, Chosing of 634
Missionary, on the Cause, 576
Modern Skepticism, &c., 679
Moral Influence, 765
Mutual Forebearance, Dress, 230, 70
Mystery 649

Nature and Religion, 406
New Year, A few Thoughts for, 23
Jerusalem 71
Negligence, Duty of, 94
Need of the Church, 47
Negative Kindness 603
Nothing but Leaves, 427
Obey the Whole Gospel, 533
O Death, Thou Cruel Reaper, 7
Often I am Sad, 353
One Lord, 454
Owe no Man Anything, 17
Ought, Is it Binding? 66
Our Good Shepherd, 744

Pasture Outside, &c., 215
Pasture, 336
Paradise, 300
Papal Infallibility, &c., 570
Peter the Rock, 754
Peace Principles, 204
Peace Proclamation, 277
Philip's Text, 242
Prayer, 726, 177
The Lord's, 748
Private Letter, Reply to, 180

Peace, Peace, 362
Pray. Do not say You cannot, 444
Pure Religion, 471
Popular Bible, A new Plea for, 471
Pride and its Influence, 487, 506, 524
Humanity, 696
vs. Decency, 717
Passing Away, 521
Preachers, Hints to, 584
Poor in Spirit, 567
Positive in Divine Law, 616
Preaching, What I know About, 629
645
Christ Crucified, 749
Plain Talk to Plain People, 683
Passover, Conversation on, &c., 746
Pulpit Blunders, 747
Protracted Meetings, 779
Planting Gourds 780

Quench not the Spirit, 162
Quarreling, Thoughts on, 749
Quickened, J. Thomas, 518
A. Leedy, Jr., 583

Random Thoughts 29, 157
Railroad Privileges, 340
Reply to B. F. Koons, 141
Recapitulation 173
Revival Meetings, 246
Report, Annual Meeting 1870 269
Remember Thy Creator, &c, 335
Report, Meeting W. District, Pa., 340
Religion, Experimental, 409
Recognition, Hannah Knouff, 530
John Forny, Sr., 550

Remarks, 553
Rejoice, 566
Renewed Day by Day, 575
Religion, Old Age without, 591
Religious Virtues, 650
Resurrection Illustrated, &c., 703
Rest, 716
Righteous, Safety of the 776
Sabbath Schools, 332
Organization of, 347
John B. Garver, 382
James Holder, 658
K———, 704
Hannah Knouff, 715
S. M. Minnich, 441, 400,
Report of 769
Salem College, Dedication of, 36,
53, 68, 194, 282, 450, 657,
Scriptural Passages, &c., 35
Service of the Master, 97
Self-denial, 131
Seven Spirits of God, 140
Slander, 142
Salmagundi, 145
She has outlived Her Usefulness 226
Satisfaction, 246
Salvation Near, 264

Spirit of Christ, 303
Spurgeon on War, 303
Spiritual Culture, 349
Selected Sayings, 443
Seek first the Kingdom, 443
Saints, The Faith and Practice of, 457
Suicide, 470
Speakers, Election of, Jos. Holder, 530
474
N. B. Blough, 641
Sinners Awake, 475
Sacred Scriptures, 494
Short Temperance Sermons, 494
Style, The Value of, 511
Squibs, 512
Scattered Flakes, 523
Secure a Home, 561
Sisters Praying in Public, 562
Such as I have give I unto Thee. 591
She Cured Him, The Way. 619
Shaking Hands, 639
Salvation Plain. The Way, 662
Sending Ministers, 684
Small Deceits, 695
School Meeting, 738
Stray Thoughts, 741
Sleepy Christians, 746
Sometime, 759
Spread of the Word of God, &c., 777
Spreading the Gospel, 781

Temptations, On, 567
To Whom it may Concern, &c., 183
To the alarmed, but Unconverted
&c., 132
Young Members, &c., 312
Our Sisters, 293
Two Extremes, 3
The Old Couple, 6
Church of the Brethren, 17
Sisters Work, 18
Refiner of Silver, 21
Holy Kiss, 44
The Christian's Departure, 82
Old Path, 86
Sinners Call, 100
Resurrection, C. H. Balsbaugh,
114
F. M. Snyder, 485
Barbarism of Christendom, 129
Ungodly and the Sinner, 135
Mind of Man, 149
Sight of God, 150
Anathema Maranatha, 192
Deacon and the Preacher, 195
Happy Man, 195
Faith once delivered to the Saints, 228
River of Life, 230
Narrow Way, 232
Truth will make You Free, 237
Minister's Support, 284
Dayspring, 298
Deity, 318

Poor, Our Duty to, 330
Tongue, 333
Folly of Procrastination, 334
Evidence, 339
Working-man's Home, 373
Lord Seeketh the Lost, 381
Lord's Treasury, 396
Truth in Brief, 34
Tobacco, Creation of, H. Knauff, 215
Extra Chewing, 233
Consumption. Dispepsia. &c. 273
A. Leedy, Jr., 273
274
647
Chewers to, 277
Two Eternal States. 398
This World is not Our Home. 474
They Say. 576
The Sleep of Death. 442
Danger, and the Remedy. 447
Narrow Way. 469
World our Battlefield. 491
Irish and the Priest. 494
Pope of Rome, 495
Bread and Cup in the Communion, 698. 538
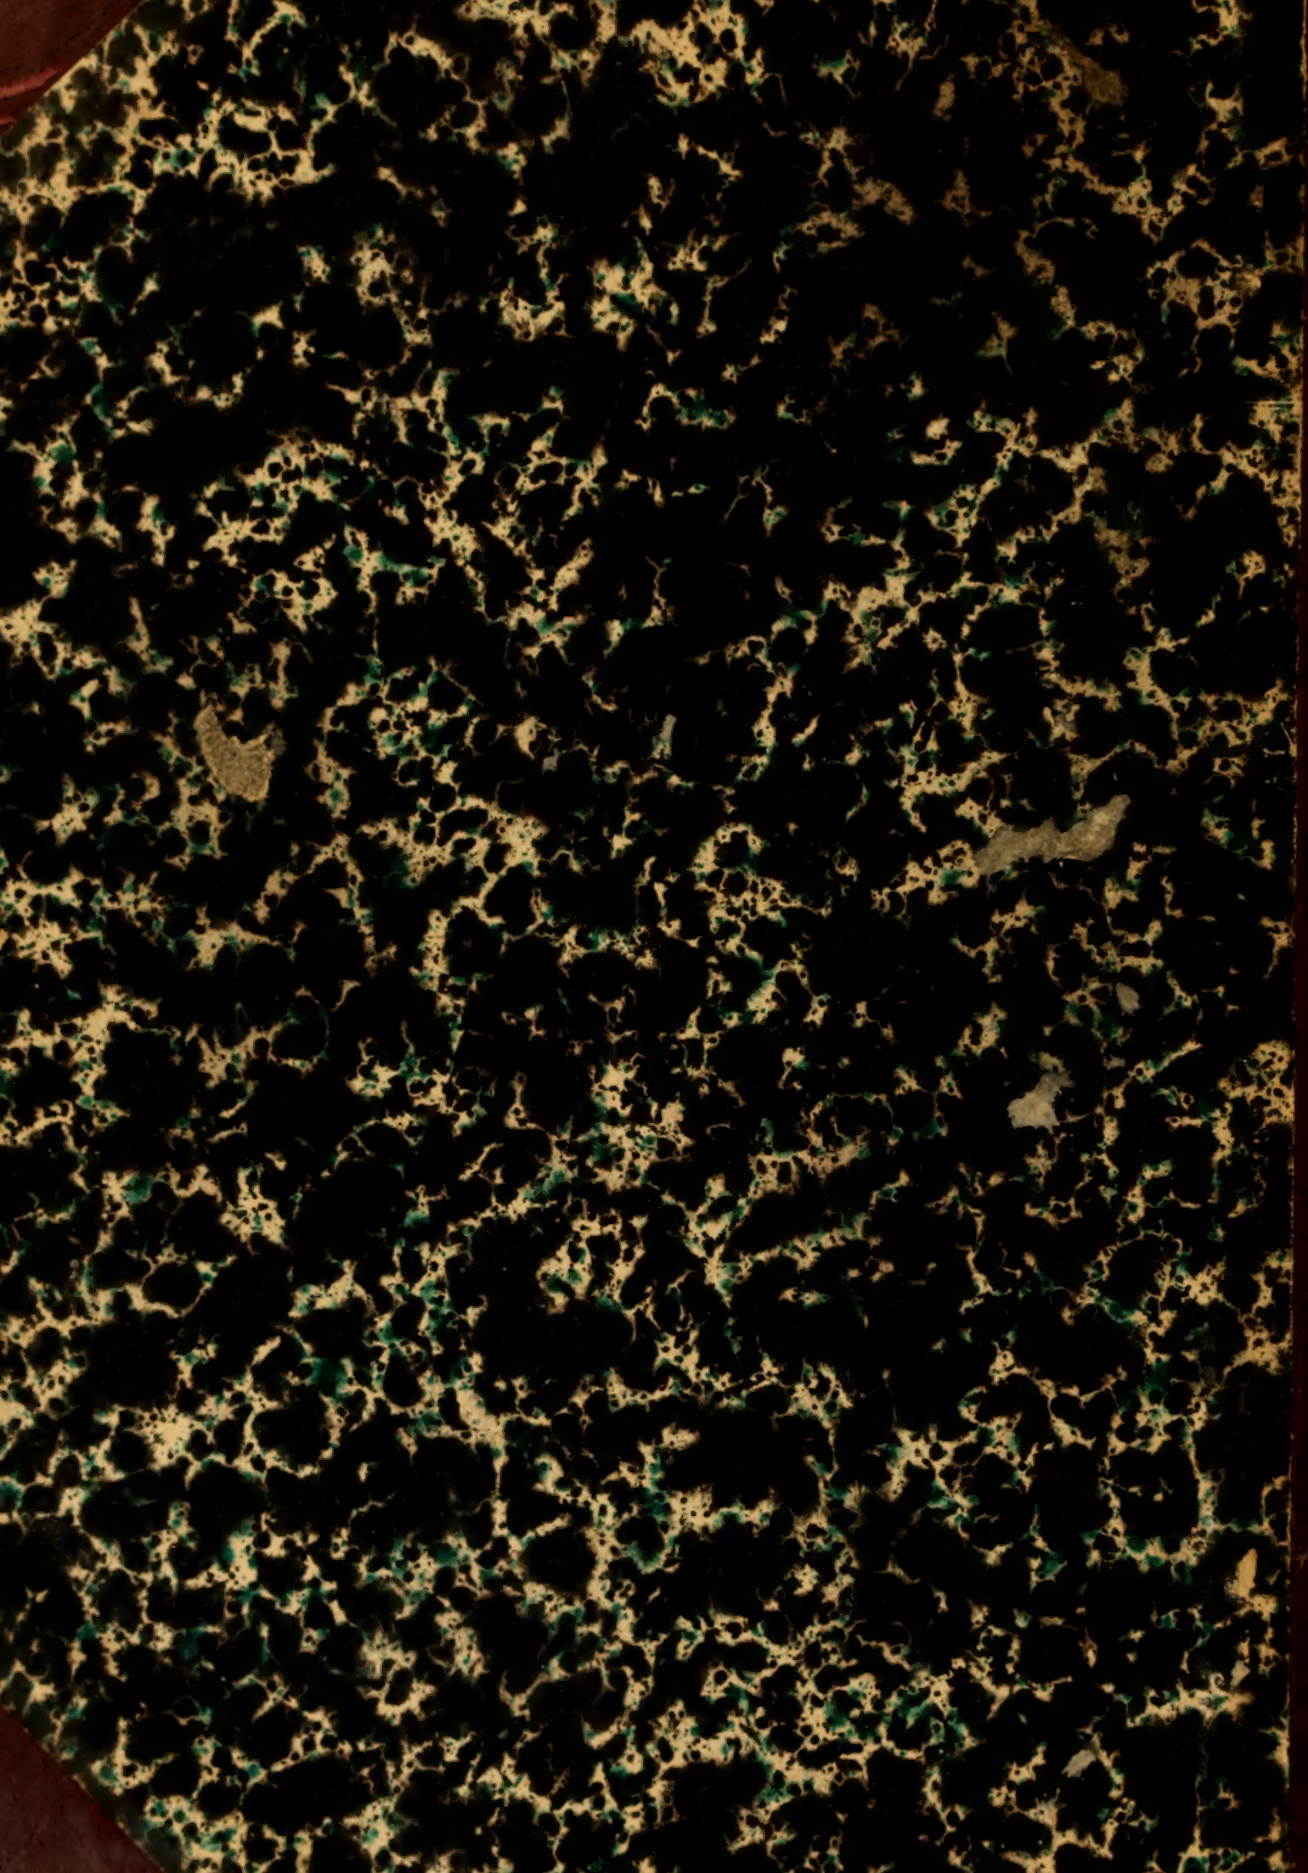
Peril and Escape. 587
Creation. 597
Guiding Eye. 598
Carnal Mind. 697
Second Coming. 698
Will of God. 781
Lord's House. 781
Lord our Lamp. 762
Great Prophet. 727
Thy Will be Done. 551
Word. 651
Tracing to its Source. 684
Truth and Error. 697
Temptation. The Hour of. 77
Time. Stray Thoughts on. 766
That Discrepancy, 705

Unconditional Prayer. 51
Unto Who Much is Given. &c., 88
Unspotted from the World. 231
Ungodly and Sinner, 352
Unity. 487
Universalism. 520

Virgins, The Ten. 618
Vicissitudes of Life, 668
Visits to the Tomb. 717


Waste Places of the Earth. 113
War in Kansas. 465
Weeds. 386
Weep Not for Me. 717
Who Shall Stand. 101
Why Stand ye Here all the day Idle. 103
Who Shall be Great. 214
Why is it, 229
What Do Ye More Than Others, 283
What Manner of Child Shall this Be. 331
Who are the Least, 400. 350
Work To-day, 379
Why do Ministers Stand, &c., 502
Which Was the Gentleman. 535
Winebrenner's Reference Testament, 734
Yoke of Christ. 84
Young Disciples.
Word of Encouragement, 52
Your Life. What is. 248